Resolver a questão é de necessidade vital. Para todos os viventes era realmente vital resolver esta questão que envolvia sua relação com a soberania de Deus. Pois, uma vez resolvida essa questão, nunca mais precisaria ser julgada. Parece evidente que Jeová desejava que o pleno conhecimento de todas as perguntas relacionadas com esta questão fossem cabalmente divulgadas e entendidas. A ação tomada por Deus cria confiança na sua imutabilidade, enaltece sua soberania e torna esta soberania ainda mais desejável e firmemente estabelecida na mente de todos os que a preferem. — Veja Mal 3:6.

Uma questão de moral. A questão, portanto, não é de poder, de força bruta; é primariamente uma questão de moral. Todavia, por causa da invisibilidade de Deus e por Satanás ter feito todos os esforços para cegar a mente dos homens, o poder de Jeová, e até mesmo sua existência, às vezes têm sido questionados. (1Jo 5:19; Re 12:9) Os homens têm confundido o motivo da paciência e benignidade de Deus, e têm-se tornado mais rebeldes. (Ec 8:11; 2Pe 3:9) Por causa disso, servir a Deus com integridade tem exigido fé, junto com sofrimentos. (He 11:6, 35-38) Não obstante, Jeová tem o propósito de fazer com que todos conheçam sua soberania e seu nome. No Egito, ele disse a Faraó: "De fato, por esta razão te deixei em existência: para mostrar-te meu poder e para que meu nome seja declarado em toda a terra." (Êx 9:16) Do mesmo modo, Deus concedeu tempo a este mundo e seu deus, Satanás, o Diabo, para existir e desenvolver sua iniquidade, e Ele fixou um tempo para a destruição deles. (2Co 4:4; 2Pe 3:7) A oração profética do salmista era: "Para que as pessoas saibam que tu, cujo nome é Jeová, somente tu és o Altíssimo sobre toda a terra." (Sal 83:18) O próprio Jeová jurou: "Diante de mim se dobrará todo joelho, jurará toda língua, dizendo: 'Seguramente há plena justiça e força em Jeová.' " — Is 45:23, 24.

A amplitude da questão. Que amplitude tinha essa questão? Visto que o homem fora induzido ao pecado, e visto que um anjo havia pecado, a questão atingiu e incluiu as criaturas celestiais de Deus, até mesmo o Filho unigênito de Deus, o mais achegado a Jeová Deus. Este Filho, que sempre fazia o que agradava ao seu Pai, estaria muito ansioso para defender a soberania de Jeová. (Jo 8:29; He 1:9) Deus escolheu-o para esta tarefa, enviando-o à Terra, onde nasceu como menino da virgem Maria. (Lu 1:35) Era perfeito, e manteve esta perfeição e imaculabilidade durante toda a sua vida, mesmo até a morte vergonhosa. (He 7:26) Antes de morrer, ele disse: "Agora há um julgamento deste mundo; agora será lançado fora o governante deste mundo." Também: "O governante do mundo está chegando. E ele não tem nenhum poder sobre mim." (Jo 12:31; 14:30) Satanás não conseguiu quebrantar a integridade de Cristo, e foi julgado como fracassado, prestes a ser lançado fora. Jesus 'venceu o mundo'. — Jo 16:33.

Jesus Cristo, Aquele que defende a soberania de Jeová. Assim, Jesus Cristo, de modo inteiramente perfeito, provou que o Diabo é mentiroso, resolvendo completamente a questão: Permanecerá algum homem fiel a Deus, não importa que prova ou provação se possa lançar contra ele? Portanto, Jesus foi designado pelo Soberano Deus como Executor dos Seus propósitos, a ser usado para eliminar do Universo a iniquidade, inclusive o Diabo. Ele exercerá esta autoridade, e então 'se dobrará todo joelho e toda língua reconhecerá abertamente que Jesus Cristo é Senhor, para a glória de Deus, o Pai'. — Fil 2:5-11; He 2:14; 1Jo 3:8.

No domínio concedido ao Filho, ele governa em nome de seu Pai, 'reduzindo a nada' todo governo, e toda autoridade e poder que se ergue contra a soberania de Jeová. O apóstolo Paulo revela que Jesus Cristo oferece então o maior tributo à soberania de Jeová, pois, "quando todas as coisas lhe tiverem sido sujeitas, então o próprio Filho também se sujeitará Àquele que lhe sujeitou todas as coisas, para que Deus seja todas as coisas para com todos". — 1Co 15:24-28.

O livro de Revelação mostra que, depois do fim do Reinado Milenar de Cristo, no qual ele reduz a nada toda autoridade que tente rivalizar com a soberania de Jeová, o Diabo será solto por um pouco. Este tentará reavivar a questão, mas não se concederá muito tempo para aquilo que já fora resolvido. Satanás e os que o seguirem serão completamente aniquilados. — Re 20:7-10.

Outros que apoiam o lado de Jeová. Embora a fidelidade de Cristo tenha provado cabalmente o lado de Deus na questão, permite-se que outros participem nisso. (Pr 27:11) Os efeitos do proceder de integridade de Cristo, inclusive sua morte sacrificial, são salientados pelo apóstolo: "Por um só ato de justificação resulta para homens de toda sorte serem declarados justos para a vida." (Ro 5:18) Cristo tem sido constituído Cabeça de um "corpo" congregacional (Col 1:18), cujos membros participam na sua morte de integridade, e ele tem prazer em que participem com ele quais co-herdeiros, quais reis associados no seu Reinado. (Lu 22:28-30; Ro 6:3-5; 8:17; Re 20:4, 6) Homens fiéis da antiguidade, aguardando a provisão de Deus, mantiveram a sua integridade, embora fossem imperfeitos no corpo. (He 11:13-16) E os muitos outros que ainda dobrarem os joelhos em reconhecimento também o farão por aceitarem de coração a soberania justa e meritória de Deus. Conforme o salmista cantou profeticamente: "Toda coisa que respira — louve ela a Jah. Louvai a Jah!" — Sal 150:6.

SOBERBA. Orgulho desdenhoso; altivez; arrogância. A soberba é o oposto da humildade. As palavras gregas e hebraicas traduzidas "soberbo" e "soberba" têm o sentido básico de alguém dar-se ares de "enaltecido", "altivo", "elevado", "eminente". O soberbo, na sua própria estima, é superior, enaltecido acima dos seus semelhantes. Em resultado, tal pessoa costuma reivindicar honra e atenção além do que lhe cabe, e trata outros com desrespeito e insolência.

Condição do Coração. A soberba é uma má qualidade ou característica, mais profunda do que uma dedução mental. Jesus Cristo mencionou-a junto com assassínios, ladroagens, blasfêmia e outras transgressões, e disse que "de dentro, dos corações dos homens", é que tais coisas procedem. (Mr 7:21, 22) A mãe terrestre de Jesus, Maria, disse a respeito de Jeová: "Ele . . . tem espalhado os que são soberbos na intenção dos seus corações." (Lu 1:51) Davi apelou para Jeová, dizendo: "Meu coração não se tem ensoberbecido." — Sal 131:1; Is 9:9; Da 5:20.

Mesmo alguém cujo coração tem sido humilde no serviço de Deus pode tornar-se soberbo ao ganhar riqueza ou poder, ou por motivo de beleza, sucesso, sabedoria ou aclamação dos outros. O Rei Uzias, de Judá, foi tal pessoa. Ele governou bem e usufruiu a bênção de Jeová por muitos anos. (2Cr 26:3-5) Mas o registro bíblico declara: "Todavia, assim que ficou forte, ensoberbeceu-se o seu coração a ponto de causar a ruína, de modo que agiu de maneira infiel contra Jeová, seu Deus, e entrou no templo de Jeová para queimar incenso sobre o altar do incenso." (2Cr 26:16) Uzias teve a presunção de realizar deveres sacerdotais, privilégio que Deus expressamente negava aos reis de Israel, separando o reinado do sacerdócio.

Em certa ocasião, o bom Rei Ezequias, por um breve período, ficou soberbo no coração, e sua soberba evidentemente influiu no povo que governava. Havia sido elevado ao governo pela bênção de Jeová, mas ele deixou de avaliar e reconhecer que todo o crédito cabia a Deus. O cronista escreve a respeito dele: "Mas Ezequias nada retribuiu de acordo com o benefício que se lhe concedeu, porque o seu coração se ensoberbeceu e veio a haver indignação contra ele e contra Judá e Jerusalém." Felizmente, ele se recuperou desta atitude perigosa. O relato prossegue: "Todavia, Ezequias humilhou-se pela soberba do seu coração, ele e os habitantes de Jerusalém, e a indignação de Jeová não veio sobre eles nos dias de Ezequias." — 2Cr 32:25, 26; compare isso com Is 3:16-24; Ez 28:2, 5, 17.

Deus Opõe-se à Soberba. Os soberbos não são apenas repugnantes a homens honestos, mas, o que é mais sério, sofrem também a oposição de Jeová Deus. (Tg 4:6; 1Pe 5:5) A soberba é tolice e pecado (Pr 14:3; 21:4), e o próprio Jeová opõe-se aos soberbos para rebaixá-los. (2Sa 22:28; Jó 10:16; 40:11; Sal 18:27; 31:18, 23; Is 2:11, 17) Se não for abandonada, a soberba certamente trará a destruição. A antiga nação de Moabe, que se enalteceu contra Deus e seu povo, foi reduzida a nada. (Is 16:6; 25:10, 11; Je 48:29) Nem mesmo o reino de dez tribos de Israel foi poupado quando se tornou altivo e insolente no coração. — Is 9:8-12.

Prevenção Contra a Soberba. Portanto, é preciso ter muito cuidado para manter a soberba afastada do coração. É preciso prevenir-se especialmente quando se obtém sucesso num empreendimento, ou quando se recebe um cargo mais elevado ou de maior responsabilidade. Deve-se ter em mente que "o orgulho vem antes da derrocada e o espírito soberbo antes do tropeço". (Pr 16:18) Quando se deixa a soberba aumentar, ela pode passar a controlar a pessoa a ponto de Jeová classificá-la com os que Ele entrega a um estado mental reprovado, e que merecem a morte. (Ro 1:28, 30, 32) Essa cautela é especialmente apropriada "nos últimos dias", quando, segundo o apóstolo advertiu, a soberba seria uma das características desses tempos críticos. — 2Ti 3:1, 2.

Além disso, quem deseja obter o favor de Deus deve evitar a lisonja, que tende a cultivar a soberba em outros. O provérbio diz: "O varão vigoroso que lisonjeia seu companheiro apenas está estendendo uma rede aos seus passos." (Pr 29:5) O lisonjeador não somente arruína seu companheiro ("a boca lisonjeira causa a derrubada", Pr 26:28), mas ele cai também no desfavor de Deus. O apóstolo Paulo teve cuidado em evitar tanto a lisonja como a soberba. — 1Te 2:5, 6.

SOBI. Súdito leal do Rei Davi. Sobi e mais dois trouxeram a Davi suprimentos muito necessários, quando a rebelião de Absalão obrigou o rei e seu grupo a fugir de Jerusalém. (2Sa 17:27-29) Sobi era "filho de Naás, de Rabá, dos filhos de Amom". — Veja NAÁS N.º 3.

SOBRIEDADE. As palavras gregas né·fo (verbo) e ne·fá·li·os (adjetivo) referem-se basicamente a estar livre da influência de inebriantes. Todavia, são usadas nas Escrituras principalmente em sentido figurado. Contêm a ideia de ser sóbrio, moderado nos hábitos, vigilante, alerta, ou de manter os sentidos. Uma palavra aparentada, e·kné·fo, que primariamente significa "ficar sóbrio", é usada na Septuaginta grega em Gênesis 9:24: "Noé recuperou-se (acordou) do vinho." Também, o termo grego é usado na mesma versão em Joel 1:5, onde o profeta clama para os "ébrios" espirituais de Israel para 'acordarem', e em Habacuque 2:19, onde se prediz um ai para os adoradores de ídolos, que dizem a pedaços de pau e de pedra: "Acorda!"

Ao enumerar as qualificações dos habilitados para ser designados superintendentes nas congregações cristãs, o apóstolo Paulo declara que o superintendente deve ser "moderado nos hábitos" (gr.: ne·fá·li·os). Isto incluiria manter-se livre de ex-cessos com vinho, visto que se declara também que ele não deve ser "brigão bêbedo". A palavra ne·fá·li·os indica que o homem teria de ter bom juízo e usar de moderação em outras coisas, tais como a fala e a conduta, além de ser habitualmente moderado no uso de bebidas alcoólicas. — 1Ti 3:2, 3.

As mulheres na congregação recebem um conselho similar, para serem "sérias, não caluniadoras, moderadas nos hábitos, fiéis em todas as coisas". (1Ti 3:11) Homens e mulheres de idade são similarmente aconselhados, as mulheres mais idosas para darem exemplo, "a fim de fazerem as mulheres jovens recobrar o bom senso", para serem boas esposas e mães, em sujeição ao marido. — Tit 2:2-5.

Ao corrigir a congregação em Corinto, que havia ficado influenciada por certos homens que advogavam doutrinas erradas, Paulo disse: "Más associações estragam hábitos úteis. Despertai para a sobriedade [forma de e·kné·fo] dum modo justo, e não pratiqueis o pecado, pois alguns estão sem conhecimento de Deus. Estou falando para induzir-vos à vergonha." (1Co 15:33, 34) Eles deviam despertar do estupor de doutrinas erradas, que desencaminhava alguns, e que causava doença e até mesmo morte espirituais. (1Co 11:30) Em sentido similar, ele escrevera anteriormente aos tessalonicenses, que haviam sido perturbados por alguns que advogavam coisas não ensinadas pelos apóstolos. Ele disse, a respeito do "dia de Jeová", que este dia viria instantaneamente, mas não sobreviria aos cristãos verdadeiros e fiéis assim como a ladrões. Por conseguinte, eles não deviam ficar adormecidos, mas certificar-se de estar atentos; deviam 'ficar despertos e manter os sentidos [literalmente: ficar sóbrios]'. — 1Te 5:2-6, 8.

Paulo advertiu também Timóteo sobre a apostasia vindoura, com o perigo para a integridade dos cristãos que desejavam permanecer fiéis. Especialmente Timóteo, como superintendente, tinha de estar atento para 'manter os sentidos [ser sóbrio] em todas as coisas', para 'sofrer o mal, fazer a obra dum evangelizador, efetuar plenamente o seu ministério'. (2Ti 4:3-5) Ao manter os sentidos, Timóteo devia dar-se conta de que Paulo não estaria presente por muito mais tempo. (2Ti 4:6-8), e o próprio Timóteo por fim não estaria mais presente, de modo que tinha de transmitir as coisas aprendidas a homens fiéis, os quais, por sua vez, estariam adequadamente habilitados para ensinar outros. (2Ti 2:2) A congregação ficaria assim edificada como baluarte contra a vindoura apostasia, sendo "coluna e amparo da verdade". — 1Ti 3:15.

Também o apóstolo Pedro, sabendo que ele e seus coapóstolos não estariam presentes por muito mais tempo (2Pe 1:14) para poder atuar como freios ao movimento apóstata instigado pelo Diabo, aconselhou os cristãos a se apegarem à sua salvação por meio de Cristo, 'mantendo inteiramente os sentidos [literalmente: estando perfeitamente sóbrios]; fixando a sua esperança na benignidade imerecida que lhes havia de ser trazida na revelação de Jesus Cristo'. (1Pe 1:13) Sabendo da seriedade dos tempos, com crescente perseguição por parte do mundo, deviam ser ajuizados, vigilantes, e não deviam negligenciar a oração séria, para obter a força de que necessitariam para perseverar. (1Pe 4:7) Advertiu-os a manterem os sentidos, porque o Diabo era como leão que ruge, procurando devorar, e eles tinham de tomar uma posição sólida contra o Diabo. Isto exigia sobriedade, seriedade e autodomínio. — 1Pe 5:8, 9.

SOCO, SOCÓ [possivelmente: Ramo, Galho [de Árvore]].

1. Cidade de Judá, na Sefelá, pelo visto chamada tanto de Soco como de Socó. (Jos 15:20, 33, 35) Os filisteus reuniram seu exército em Socó e depois se acamparam junto à vizinha Efes-Damim, antes do encontro de Golias com Davi. (1Sa 17:1) Anos mais tarde, esta Soco parece ter sido uma das cidades que Roboão fortificou. (2Cr 11:5-7; todavia, esta passagem talvez se aplique ao N.º 2.) Não obstante, Soco, junto com suas aldeias dependentes, foi capturada pelos filisteus mais de 200 anos depois, durante o governo do Rei Acaz. (2Cr 28:16-18) É identificada com as ruínas em Khirbet ʽAbbad (Horvat Sokho), na baixada de Elá, a uns 4 km ao ESE de Azeca, embora Khibet Shuweikeh, a pouca distância ao L, pareça preservar o nome bíblico.

2. Socó, cidade na região montanhosa de Judá. (Jos 15:20, 48) É frequentemente identificada com uma Khirbet Shuweikeh, a uns 17 km ao SO de Hébron. Esta é uma Khirbet Shuweikeh diferente da mencionada no N.º 1.

3. Socó, lugar sob a administração de um dos prepostos de Salomão. (1Rs 4:7, 10) A sugerida identificação dela com Khirbet Shuweiket er-Ras, a uns 15 km ao ONO de Samaria, parece ajustar-se ao relato, visto que os lugares sugeridos tanto de Arubote como de Héfer (mencionadas junto com Socó no relato de Reis) ficam próximos.

4. Na genealogia de Judá, Héber é chamado de "pai de Soco". (1Cr 4:18) Soco talvez tenha sido o nome próprio do descendente de Héber, ou o texto pode estar indicando que Héber era o fundador da cidade de Soco ou da sua população. Presumindo que se trate desta última situação, não é possível determinar se a referência é a Soco (Socó) N.º 1 ou N.º 2.

SOCORROS. Ajuda material dada àqueles que, por motivo de idade avançada, fome ou outra adversidade, não têm o suficiente das necessidades da vida.

Uma particularidade distintiva dos servos fiéis de Deus tem sido sua disposição de ajudar os necessitados. (Jó 29:16; 31:19-22; Tg 1:27) No primeiro século, a congregação de Jerusalém providenciou a distribuição de alimentos às viúvas cristãs necessitadas, e, posteriormente, foram designados sete homens habilitados para cuidar de que nenhuma viúva necessitada fosse despercebida na distribuição diária. (At 6:1-6) Anos depois, na sua carta a Timóteo, o apóstolo Paulo salientou que os socorros da congregação, dados às viúvas, deviam ficar limitados às de não menos de 60 anos de idade. Essas viúvas deviam ser pessoas que tinham antecedentes de boas obras na promoção do cristianismo. (1Ti 5:9, 10) Todavia, era obrigação primária dos filhos e dos netos, não da congregação, cuidar de pais e avós idosos. Conforme Paulo escreveu: "Se alguma viúva tiver filhos ou netos, que estes aprendam primeiro a praticar a devoção piedosa na sua própria família e a estar pagando a devida compensação aos seus pais e avós, pois isto é aceitável à vista de Deus." — 1Ti 5:4, 16.

Houve ocasiões em que as congregações cristãs participaram em medidas de socorro para seus irmãos em outros lugares. Assim, quando o profeta Ágabo predisse que haveria uma grande fome, os discípulos na congregação de Antioquia da Síria "resolveram, cada um deles segundo o que podia, prover aos irmãos que moravam na Judeia uma subministração de socorros". (At 11:28, 29) Outros socorros organizados para irmãos necessitados na Judeia também eram estritamente voluntários. — Ro 15:25-27; 1Co 16:1-3; 2Co 9:5, 7.

SODA. Veja LAVADEIRO.

SODI [duma raiz que significa "grupo íntimo"]. Zebulonita cujo filho, Gadiel, representou a sua tribo em espiar a Terra da Promessa. — Núm 13:2, 10.

SODOMA. Cidade situada ao longo da fronteira SE de Canaã. (Gên 10:19; 13:12) Frequentemente mencionada junto com Gomorra, Sodoma parece ter sido a mais destacada de cinco cidades, todas pelo visto situadas na baixada de Sidim. (Gên 14:2, 3) Muitos peritos acreditam que os lugares originais de Sodoma e das outras "cidades do Distrito" estão agora submersas nas águas do Mar Morto, embora alguns outros recentemente tenham afirmado que as ruínas das cidades podem ser identificadas com lugares ao longo dos uádis ao L e ao SE do Mar Morto. — Gên 13:12; veja MAR SALGADO.

Quando Abraão e Ló decidiram separar-se, para evitar disputas entre os seus pastores do gado, Ló foi para o L, para o bem regado Distrito do Jordão, e armou sua tenda perto de Sodoma. Verificou ali que "os homens de Sodoma eram maus e eram grandes pecadores contra Jeová", o que afligia muito a Ló. (Gên 13:5-13; 2Pe 2:7, 8) Algum tempo mais tarde, depois de estarem por 12 anos sujeitos a Quedorlaomer, rei de Elão, os habitantes de Sodoma e das outras quatro cidades se rebelaram. No ano seguinte, Quedorlaomer e seus aliados derrotaram Bera, rei de Sodoma, e seus confederados. Além de se apoderarem de bens e de alimentos, os vencedores levaram cativos a Ló e a outros. — Gên 14:1-12.

As forças de Abraão alcançaram Quedorlaomer e recuperaram os cativos e o saque, inclusive Ló e os da sua família. O rei de Sodoma insistiu em que Abraão ficasse com os bens materiais recuperados, mas Abraão os recusou, para que Bera não pudesse dizer: "Fui eu que enriqueci a Abrão." — Gên 14:13-24.

Destruição Eterna. No entanto, Sodoma persistiu num proceder em desafio a Jeová, ficando conhecida por práticas imorais, tais como o homossexualismo. "O clamor de queixa a respeito de Sodoma e Gomorra", declarou Jeová Deus, "sim, é alto, e seu pecado, sim, é muito grave". Por isso, Ele enviou seus anjos para destruírem Sodoma, dando a Abraão a garantia de que, se dez pessoas justas fossem achadas naquele lugar, toda a cidade seria poupada. — Gên 18:16, 20-33.

A cidade mostrara que merecia a destruição, porque uma turba vil de moradores de Sodoma, inclusive rapazes e homens idosos, cercaram a casa de Ló, tentando estuprar os seus hóspedes angélicos. No dia seguinte, depois de Ló, sua esposa e suas duas filhas terem deixado a cidade, Sodoma e Gomorra foram destruídas com enxofre e fogo. (Gên 19:1-29; Lu 17:28, 29) Sodoma e Gomorra tornaram-se depois figura proverbial de destruição total da parte do Deus Todo-Poderoso (De 29:23; Is 1:9; 13:19; Je 49:18; 50:40; La 4:6; Am 4:11; Sof 2:9; Ro 9:29), e de extrema iniquidade. — De 32:32; Is 1:10; 3:9; Je 23:14; Ez 16:46-56; veja GOMORRA.

Jesus disse a respeito da cidade judaica que rejeitasse as boas novas: "No Dia do Juízo será mais suportável para a terra de Sodoma e Gomorra do que para essa cidade." (Mt 10:15; 11:23, 24) Naturalmente, Judas 7 diz que Sodoma e Gomorra "são postas diante de nós como exemplo de aviso por sofrerem a punição judicial do fogo eterno". De modo que a declaração de Jesus evidentemente apenas usou uma hipérbole para salientar quão improvável era que pessoas de certas cidades judaicas do primeiro século se arrependessem, mesmo no Dia do Juízo.

"Em Sentido Espiritual." Revelação (Apocalipse) 11:3, 8, diz que os cadáveres das "duas testemunhas" de Deus jaziam na rua larga da grande cidade "que em sentido espiritual se chama Sodoma e Egito". A profecia de Isaías (1:8-10) compara Sião ou Jerusalém a Sodoma e chama seus governantes de "ditadores de Sodoma". Todavia, por volta de 96 EC, quando João recebeu a visão de Revelação sobre os eventos a ocorrer no futuro, a cidade típica de Jerusalém já tinha sido destruída muito tempo antes, em 70 EC. Portanto, a referência deve ser a uma "grande cidade" ou organização, a uma Jerusalém antitípica, retratada pela infiel Jerusalém da antiguidade.

SODOMA, VIDEIRA DE. Veja VIDEIRA.

SOFAQUE. Forma alternativa do nome Sobaque. — 1Cr 19:16, 18; veja SOBAQUE.

SOFERETE [duma raiz que significa "contar; enumerar"]. Pelo visto, era antepassado duma família ("os filhos de Soferete") dentre "os filhos dos servos de Salomão", que retornaram do exílio babilônico. (Esd 2:55; Ne 7:57) Esdras coloca o artigo definido antes de So·fé·reth, tornando-o Has·so·fé·reth, possivelmente significando "o escriba". Alguns sugerem que os filhos de Soferete eram uma equipe de escribas ou copistas. O significado de alguns dos outros nomes na lista talvez permitam a referência a uma ocupação, ao passo que outros não.

SOFONIAS [Jeová Escondeu (Entesourou)].

1. Levita na linhagem genealógica de Coate a Samuel e Hemã. — 1Cr 6:33-38.

2. Profeta de Jeová, em Judá, durante a primeira parte do reinado de Josias; escritor do livro que leva seu nome. Sofonias possivelmente era trineto do Rei Ezequias. — Sof 1:1; veja SOFONIAS, LIVRO DE.

3. Destacado sacerdote na última década do reino de Judá; filho de Maaseias. Sofonias foi duas vezes enviado por Zedequias a Jeremias, primeiro para indagar de Jeová sobre o futuro de Judá, e depois para pedir que orasse a favor deles. (Je 21:1-3; 37:3) Sofonias recebeu dum falso profeta em Babilônia uma carta exortando-o a censurar Jeremias, mas, em vez de fazer isso, Sofonias leu a carta para Jeremias, o qual escreveu então a resposta de Jeová. (Je 29:24-32) Depois da queda de Jerusalém, Sofonias, então o segundo sacerdote sob Seraías, foi levado a Nabucodonosor em Ribla e morto. — Je 52:24, 26, 27; 2Rs 25:18, 20, 21.

4. Pai de Josias, ou Hem, contribuinte pós-exílico de metais preciosos para se fazer uma coroa para o sumo sacerdote Josué. — Za 6:10, 11, 14.

SOFONIAS, LIVRO DE. Este livro das Escrituras Hebraicas contém a palavra de Jeová por meio do seu profeta Sofonias. Foi nos dias do Rei Josias, de Judá (659-629 AEC), que Sofonias realizou sua obra profética. (Sof 1:1) No 12.º ano do reinado de Josias, quando tinha uns 20 anos de idade, o rei começou uma extensa campanha contra a idolatria, e a partir do 18.º ano do seu governo até o seu término, seus súditos "não se desviaram de seguir a Jeová". (2Cr 34:3-8, 33) Portanto, visto que o livro de Sofonias menciona a presença de sacerdotes de deuses estrangeiros, e a adoração de Baal e de corpos celestes em Judá, o tempo da sua composição pode ser razoavelmente colocado antes do começo das reformas de Josias, por volta de 648 AEC. — Sof 1:4, 5.

Idolatria, violência e fraude proliferavam em Judá quando Sofonias começou a profetizar. Muitos diziam no coração: "Jeová não fará o que é bom e não fará o que é mau." (Sof 1:12) Mas a profecia de Sofonias tornou claro que Jeová executaria vingança nos transgressores impenitentes. (1:3–2:3; 3:1-5) Seus julgamentos adversos recairiam não só sobre Judá e Jerusalém, mas também sobre outros povos — os filisteus, os amonitas, os moabitas, os etíopes e os assírios. — 2:4-15.

A profecia de Sofonias deve ter sido especialmente confortante para os que se esforçavam a servir a Jeová e que se devem ter sentido muito aflitos com as práticas detestáveis dos habitantes de Jerusalém, inclusive com seus corruptos príncipes, juízes e sacerdotes. (Sof 3:1-7) Visto que pessoas de disposição justa devem ter aguardado a execução do julgamento divino nos iníquos, evidentemente dirigem-se a elas as palavras: "'Estai à espera de mim', é a pronunciação de Jeová, 'até o dia em que eu me levantar para o despojo, pois a minha decisão judicial é ajuntar nações, para que eu reúna reinos, a fim de derramar sobre elas a minha verberação, toda a minha ira ardente.'" (3:8) Por fim, Jeová daria atenção favorável ao restante do seu povo, Israel, restabelecendo-o do cativeiro, e fazendo dele um nome e um louvor entre todos os outros povos. — 3:10-20.

Autenticidade. A autenticidade do livro de Sofonias é bem confirmada. Frequentemente, as ideias expressas neste livro encontram um paralelo em outras partes da Bíblia. (Compare Sof 1:3 com Os 4:3; Sof 1:7 com Hab 2:20 e Za 2:13; Sof 1:13 com De 28:30, 39, e Am 5:11; Sof 1:14 com Jl 1:15; e Sof 3:19 com Miq 4:6, 7.) Harmoniza-se completamente com o restante das Escrituras em destacar verdades vitais. Por exemplo: Jeová é Deus de justiça. (Sof 3:5; De 32:4) Embora ele ofereça a oportunidade de arrependimento, não permite que a transgressão fique indefinidamente sem punição. (Sof 2:1-3; Je 18:7-11; 2Pe 3:9, 10) Nem a prata nem o ouro podem livrar os iníquos no dia da fúria de Jeová. (Sof 1:18; Pr 11:4; Ez 7:19) Para ser favorecido com a proteção divina, é preciso comportar-se em harmonia com os julgamentos justos de Deus. — Sof 2:3; Am 5:15.

Outra evidência notável da canonicidade do livro é o cumprimento de profecia. A predita destruição sobreveio a Nínive, capital da Assíria, em 632 AEC (Sof 2:13-15), e a Judá e Jerusalém em 607 AEC. (Sof 1:4-18; compare isso com 2Rs 25:1-10.) Os etíopes, como aliados dos egípcios, evidentemente sofreram calamidade quando Nabucodonosor conquistou o Egito. (Sof 2:12; compare isso com Ez 30:4, 5.) E os amonitas, os moabitas e os filisteus, por fim, deixaram de existir como povo. — Sof 2:4-11.

SOGRO. Nas Escrituras Hebraicas, a palavra hham refere-se ao pai do marido (Gên 38:13, 25; 1Sa 4:19, 21), e sua forma feminina, hha·móhth, à mãe do marido (a sogra da esposa). — Ru 1:14; Miq 7:6.

O verbo hebraico hha·thán significa “formar uma aliança matrimonial”. (De 7:3; 1Sa 18:20-27; 1Rs 3:1; 2Cr 18:1) O sogro do lado da noiva, o pai da esposa, é chamado pela forma participial masculina hha·thán. A forma participial feminina refere-se à sogra. — De 27:23.

Visto que o casal de noivos era considerado como já unido, embora ainda não se tivesse juntado em casamento, a mulher era chamada de esposa do homem. (Jz 14:20) Portanto, o homem era chamado de “genro” (usando-se um substantivo derivado de hha·thán) sem tomar em conta se a aliança matrimonial já tinha sido consumada plenamente (Jz 19:5; 1Sa 22:14; Ne 6:18; 13:28) ou era ainda pretendida, como no caso dos “genros” de Ló. (Gên 19:12, 14; compare isso com Jz 15:6.) As filhas de Ló eram apenas noivas; senão, elas provavelmente teriam estado com os maridos e não viveriam na casa do pai. Que os dois homens eram somente prospectivos genros, ainda não reais (noivos das filhas de Ló, mas ainda não casados com elas) é indicado pelo hebraico, que permite a tradução: “Genros [de Ló], que haviam de tomar [ou: que pretendiam tomar] suas filhas.” — Gên 19:14, NM; Al; veja BJ; BLH; IBB.

Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, pen·the·rós é traduzido “sogro” (Jo 18:13); a forma feminina, pen·the·rá, é traduzida “sogra”. — Mt 8:14; 10:35; Mr 1:30; Lu 4:38; 12:53; veja NORA.

DESTAQUES DE SOFONIAS

Mensagens de julgamento divino contra Judá e Jerusalém, bem como contra outras nações; também um anúncio do restabelecimento para Jerusalém.

Escrito por Sofonias logo cedo no reinado de Josias, antes das reformas que este iniciou por volta de 648 AEC.

Está próximo o dia de Jeová para julgar. (1:1–2:3)

Jeová acabará com tudo na face do solo.

Em Judá e em Jerusalém, todos os que praticam a idolatria, que juram por Jeová bem como por um falso deus, que retrocedem de servir a Jeová ou que não o procuraram serão decepados.

Os príncipes, os violentos, os enganadores estarão entre os que receberão atenção; todos os que acham que Jeová não agirá nem para o bem nem para mal verão sua riqueza e sua propriedade reduzidas a nada.

O dia de Jeová vem, um dia de fúria; nem a prata nem o ouro proverão escape.

Os mansos da terra devem procurar a Jeová, bem como a mansidão e a justiça; então, provavelmente, serão escondidos no dia da Sua ira.

Punição dos vizinhos de Judá, e das mais distantes Etiópia e Assíria. (2:4-15)

Os filisteus serão destruídos; Moabe ficará desolada assim como Sodoma, e Amom será como Gomorra, por vituperar o povo de Jeová.

Os etíopes cairão pela espada; a Assíria será destruída; Nínive será devastada, animais selváticos tomando posse das suas ruínas.

A rebelião e corrupção de Jerusalém. (3:1-7)

A opressiva cidade, Jerusalém, também é marcada para julgamento; ela não confiou em Jeová e não se chegou a ele; seus príncipes, juízes, profetas e sacerdotes agiram todos de modo corrupto, em vez de usar sua influência para o bem.

O povo não temeu a Jeová, nem mudou de proceder, mesmo depois de presenciar Seu julgamento contra outras nações.

O derramamento da ira de Jeová e o restabelecimento dum restante. (3:8-20)

A ira de Jeová será derramada sobre nações e reinos.

Povos receberão uma língua pura, a fim de invocar o nome de Jeová e servi-lo ombro a ombro.

Apenas os humildes e os de condição humilde remanescerão entre o povo de Deus, Israel, e usufruirão segurança sob a Sua proteção.

Todos os responsáveis por afligir Israel serão punidos; o restante reunido será feito “um louvor entre todos os povos da terra”.

SOL. O maior dos dois luzeiros celestiais da Terra; a principal fonte criada de energia para a terra, sem a qual a vida nela seria impossível. O Sol (hebr.: shé·mesh; gr.: hé·li·os), junto com a Lua, também serve para o homem como marcador de tempo, para medir estações, dias e anos. (Gên 1:14-18) O Sol é uma dádiva do "Pai das luzes celestiais", que o faz brilhar sem distinção sobre todos, os iníquos e os bons. (Tg 1:17; Je 31:35; Mt 5:45) Certamente, pode-se dizer que o Sol louva seu magnífico Criador. — Sal 148:3.

O Sol é uma estrela de uns 1.392.000 km de diâmetro, tendo mais de cem vezes o diâmetro da terra, e mais de um milhão de vezes o volume da terra. Sua distância média da terra é de mais de 149.600.000 km. Diz-se que a temperatura da superfície do Sol é de cerca de 6.000°C. Mas, por causa da sua grande distância da Terra, menos de um bilionésimo de sua energia irradiada chega à Terra, quantidade, porém, plenamente suficiente para fornecer ideais condições climáticas, que tornam possível a vida vegetal e animal na Terra. — De 33:14; 2Sa 23:4.

Jeová e Cristo São mais Brilhantes. O transcendente brilho e glória de Jeová, Criador do Sol, são indicados por seu ressuscitado Filho, numa revelação parcial a Saulo, ter apresentado uma luz "além do brilho do sol". (At 26:13) Na cidade santa, Nova Jerusalém, não haverá necessidade do Sol como luz, pois "a glória de Deus" a iluminará e "sua lâmpada" será o Cordeiro. — Re 21:2, 23; 22:5.

O Poder de Deus sobre a Luz Solar. No dia em que Jesus foi pregado numa estaca de tortura, desde a sexta hora (das 11 às 12 horas) até a nona hora (das 14 às 15 horas), caiu sobre todo o país uma escuridão. (Mt 27:45; Mr 15:33) O relato de Lucas acrescenta que a escuridão caiu "porque a luz do sol falhou". (Lu 23:44, 45) Isto não poderia ter ocorrido por causa dum eclipse solar pela Lua, conforme alguns pensam, porque a escuridão ocorreu na época da Páscoa, que sempre era a época da lua cheia. É cerca de duas semanas mais tarde que a Lua se torna nova, isto é, está na mesma direção que o Sol, vista da Terra (ocasião em que ocorrem eclipses solares).

Muito antes desta ocasião, Jeová já demonstrara sua capacidade de impedir a luz solar. Isto ocorreu quando os israelitas estavam no Egito. Durante a nona praga, densas trevas envolveram os egípcios com uma escuridão que podia ser 'apalpada'. Ela durou três dias, mais tempo do que qualquer eclipse solar causado pela Lua. Também, ao mesmo tempo, na terra vizinha de Gósen, os israelitas tinham luz. — Êx 10:21-23.

Em resposta à pergunta dos seus discípulos sobre a sua presença e a terminação do sistema de coisas, Jesus predisse um escurecimento incomum do Sol. — Mt 24:3, 29; Mr 13:24; Lu 21:25; compare isso com Is 13:10; Jl 2:10, 31; 3:15; At 2:20; veja CÉU, I (Escurecimento dos Céus).

Tempo e Localização. O tempo frequentemente era indicado pela referência à posição do Sol. (Gên 15:12, 17; 32:31; De 16:6; Jos 8:29; Jz 9:33; 1Sa 11:9) A localização era indicada de modo similar. (De 11:30; Jos 12:1) "Debaixo do sol" era usado para significar "em qualquer (ou todo) lugar na terra". (Ec 5:18; 9:11) "Sob os olhares" do Sol ou "diante do sol" significava "ao aberto, para todos verem". — 2Sa 12:11, 12.

Uso Figurado. Jeová Deus é chamado de "sol e escudo", não que ele seja deus da natureza, mas que ele é a Fonte de luz, vida e energia. (Sal 84:11) Ele é também chamado de sombra para seu povo, de modo que "o próprio sol não baterá" neles. Neste caso, aquilo que traz calamidade é comparado ao calor do Sol. (Sal 121:6, 7) Perseguição (Mt 13:5, 6, 20, 21) e ira divina são às vezes representadas pelo calor abrasador do Sol. — Re 7:16.

Jeová comparou a rebelde Jerusalém a uma mulher que dera à luz sete filhos, descrevendo o julgamento que lhe sobreviria pela expressão figurativa: "Seu sol se pôs enquanto ainda era dia", quer dizer, antes de chegar a noitinha da sua vida, ela sofreria calamidade. Isto se cumpriu quando Babilônia destruiu Jerusalém. (Je 15:9) Em sentido similar, Miqueias profetizou contra os profetas que desencaminhavam Israel: "O sol há de se pôr sobre os profetas e o dia terá de escurecer-se sobre eles." (Miq 3:6; veja Am 8:9.) O governo do Reino de Jeová é retratado como tão luminoso, que se pode dizer, em comparação: "A lua cheia ficou encabulada e o sol brilhante ficou envergonhado." (Is 24:23) Jesus disse que, na terminação do sistema de coisas, "os justos brilharão tão claramente como o sol, no reino de seu Pai". — Mt 13:39, 43; compare isso com Da 12:3; veja LUZ, I.

Adoração do Sol. Durante a obra de limpeza do Rei Josias, ele "acabou com a atividade dos sacerdotes de deuses estrangeiros, a quem os reis de Judá haviam constituído para fazerem fumaça sacrificial . . . ao sol e à lua". "Além disso, fez que os cavalos que os reis de Judá tinham entregado ao sol cessassem de entrar na casa de Jeová . . . e os carros do sol ele queimou em fogo." (2Rs 23:5, 11) Mais tarde, o profeta Ezequiel, lá em Babilônia, recebeu uma visão do templo de Jeová em Jerusalém. Ele viu ali cerca de 25 homens, entre o pórtico e o altar, que "se curvaram para o leste, para o sol". (Ez 8:16) Tais práticas repugnantes causaram a ruína de Jerusalém em 607 AEC, quando Nabucodonosor, instrumento de Jeová, destruiu a cidade e o templo. — Je 52:12-14.

A Sombra Que Retrocedeu Dez Degraus. O uso de relógios de sol remonta a antes do oitavo século AEC, tanto em Babilônia como no Egito. Todavia, a palavra hebraica ma·ʽalóhth, traduzida "relógio [de sol]" em 2 Reis 20:11 e Isaías 38:8, na versão Almeida, significa literalmente "degraus" (NM), conforme notas marginais em A Bíblia de Jerusalém e em A Bíblia na Linguagem de Hoje sobre estes versículos. Esta palavra é também usada nos cabeçalhos dos 15 'Cânticos das Subidas', os Salmos 120 a 134.

Nos textos mencionados, em 2 Reis 20:8-11 e Isaías 38:4-8, relata-se o caso do portento que Deus deu ao doente Rei Ezequias em resposta à oração de Isaías. Consistia em fazer uma sombra que aos poucos descera inverter sua direção e subir dez degraus. Isto podia referir-se aos degraus, ou graus, de um mostrador de medição de tempo, e não é impossível que o pai de Ezequias possuísse tal relógio de sol, obtendo-o até mesmo de Babilônia. Todavia, o historiador judeu, Josefo, ao considerar o relato, fala desses degraus de Acaz como estando "na casa", evidentemente indicando que faziam parte duma escadaria. (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], X, 29 [ii, 1]) Talvez houvesse junto à escadaria uma coluna que recebia a luz do Sol e fazia a sombra aos poucos descer os degraus e servir de medidor do tempo.

O milagre realizado pode ter envolvido a relação entre a Terra e o Sol, e, neste caso, pode ter sido similar ao milagre registrado em Josué 10:12-14. (Veja PODER, OBRAS PODEROSAS [O sol e a lua param].) Parece que este portento teve um efeito de amplo alcance, visto que 2 Crônicas 32:24, 31, mostra que se enviaram de Babilônia mensageiros a Jerusalém para indagar sobre isso.

SOLDADO. Alguém que serve no exército. Nas Escrituras Hebraicas, os militares são frequentemente chamados com precisão segundo a função específica que desempenhavam: cavalarianos (Êx 14:9), batedores (1Sa 22:17), fundibulários (2Rs 3:25), homens que manejavam lança e escudo (2Cr 25:5), atiradores (2Cr 35:23), arqueiros (Jó 16:13; Is 21:17). A palavra grega para "soldado" é stra·ti·ó·tes. — Veja EXÉRCITO.

No tempo do domínio romano sobre a Judeia, era comum ver soldados ali. Poder um oficial do exército em Cafarnaum dizer: "Pois eu . . . [tenho] soldados sob as minhas ordens", indica que havia soldados destacados ali sob o seu comando. (Mt 8:5-9) Havia tropas romanas destacadas na Torre de Antônia, em Jerusalém, servindo como ponto de controle sobre os judeus. O comandante militar ali, na época em que Paulo fez a sua última visita a Jerusalém, resgatou-o duma turba, e, novamente, no dia seguinte, dos alvoroçados fariseus e saduceus. (At 21:30-35; 22:23, 24; 23:10) Quando se revelou haver uma trama contra a vida de Paulo, o comandante forneceu uma escolta de 70 cavaleiros, 200 soldados e 200 lanceiros para levar Paulo até Antipátride, sendo que os cavaleiros o acompanharam dali até Cesareia. — At 23:12-33.

Soldados Judeus. Havia também soldados judeus, dos quais alguns se chegaram a João, o Batizador, com a pergunta: "Que devemos fazer?" Estes possivelmente estavam empenhados num tipo de fiscalização policial, em especial relacionada com a alfândega ou a coleta de impostos. — Lu 3:12-14.

Execução e Sepultamento de Jesus. Na execução de Jesus foram usados soldados romanos, visto que ele fora entregue ao governador romano, acusado de sedição contra Roma. Esses soldados sujeitaram-no a grandes insultos, escarnecendo dele, cuspindo e batendo nele antes de levá-lo para ser pregado numa estaca. (Mt 27:27-36; Jo 18:3, 12; 19:32-34) Repartiram entre si a roupa exterior dele e lançaram sortes sobre a sua roupa interior. Evidentemente foram quatro os soldados empregados no destacamento que pregou Jesus na estaca. (Jo 19:23, 24) O oficial do exército que supervisionou a execução, observando os fenômenos que ocorreram e as circunstâncias em que Jesus morreu, disse: "Certamente este homem era o Filho de Deus." (Mr 15:33-39) Puseram-se também soldados romanos para guardar o túmulo de Jesus. (Mt 27:62-66) Se esses guardas tivessem sido policiais judeus do templo, os judeus não teriam de perguntar a Pilatos sobre o assunto. Do mesmo modo, os principais sacerdotes prometeram cuidar do caso com o governador, se ele ficasse sabendo do desaparecimento do corpo de Jesus. — Mt 28:14.

O Primeiro Gentio Cristão. Cerca de três anos e meio mais tarde, foi um soldado romano, um centurião, que enviou dois dos seus servos domésticos e "um soldado devoto" para convidar Pedro a Cesareia. Com a pregação de Pedro, Cornélio e os da sua casa, sem dúvida incluindo o "soldado devoto" a seu serviço, receberam o derramamento do espírito santo e se tornaram os primeiros membros da congregação cristã tirados dentre os gentios. — At 10:1, 7, 44-48.

Livramento de Pedro. O apóstolo Pedro foi mais tarde preso por ordem de Herodes Agripa I e encarcerado sob a guarda de quatro turnos de quatro soldados. Em cada turno, dois soldados guardavam a porta da prisão, ao passo que dois guardavam pessoalmente a Pedro, acorrentado a eles, um de cada lado. Durante a noite apareceu um anjo, que soltou Pedro das cadeias e libertou-o da prisão. Isto criou uma comoção entre os soldados, e Herodes, depois de examinar os guardas responsáveis, mandou que "fossem levados à punição", provavelmente para serem mortos, segundo o costume romano. — At 12:4-10, 18, 19.

Bondade para com Paulo. Quando o apóstolo Paulo foi levado de navio a Roma, por causa do seu apelo para César, ele foi colocado sob a custódia de um destacamento de soldados sob o comando dum oficial do exército chamado Júlio, do destacamento de Augusto. Este homem tratou Paulo com bondade e lhe permitiu visitar seus amigos e usufruir o cuidado deles. No começo, evidentemente ele não aceitou que Paulo tivesse orientação de Deus, e por isso deu mais atenção ao dono e ao piloto do navio. Mas, depois de uma grande tempestade ter impelido o navio e o ter jogado de um lado para outro com violência por dias a fio, quando Paulo relatou a visão que teve, na qual se garantia a vida de todos no navio, o oficial e seus homens atenderam Paulo. Quando o navio começou a ser despedaçado, perto de Malta, os soldados se prepararam para matar todos os prisioneiros, mas o oficial Júlio, desejando manter Paulo a salvo, conteve-os. (At 27:1, 3, 9-11, 20-26, 30, 31, 39-44) Em Roma, permitiu-se que Paulo morasse na sua própria casa alugada, com um soldado para guardá-lo. — At 28:16, 30.

Uso Simbólico. Ao defender seu apostolado na sua carta à congregação em Corinto, Paulo escreveu: "Quem é que jamais serve como soldado às suas próprias custas?" (1Co 9:7) Embora Paulo não tivesse aceitado ajuda material dos coríntios, ele argumentou ali que, como soldado a serviço do seu Amo Cristo, ele certamente tinha autoridade para aceitá-la. Paulo considerava também como soldados de Cristo aqueles que colaboravam com ele na pregação das boas novas, chamando-os de 'soldados companheiros'. — Fil 2:25; Flm 2.

O apóstolo Paulo escreveu a Timóteo, que fora por ele encarregado duma pesada responsabilidade: "Como soldado excelente de Cristo Jesus, participa em sofrer o mal. Nenhum homem, servindo como soldado, se envolve nos negócios comerciais da vida, a fim de que possa ganhar a aprovação daquele que o alistou como soldado." (2Ti 2:3, 4) O bom soldado espera durezas, e sabe que precisa estar pronto para servir em todas as ocasiões e perseverar nas condições mais provadoras. Enquanto está na guerra, não procura confortos e aquilo que lhe agrada. Seu tempo e suas energias estão à disposição do seu superior. Além disso, o soldado renuncia a negócios, propriedade rural, ofício ou vocação, a fim de servir. Não se envolve em outras coisas que afastariam a mente e as energias da luta todo-importante em que está empenhado. Senão, provavelmente lhe custaria a vida ou a vida dos que dependem dele. Segundo historiadores, não se permitia aos soldados romanos empenhar-se em negócios, e proibia-se-lhes atuar como tutores ou curadores duma propriedade, a fim de não serem desviados do seu objetivo como soldados. Mesmo sob a Lei mosaica, o homem recém-casado, ou o homem com uma casa que ainda não dedicara ou com um vinhedo do qual ainda não colhera frutos, estava eximido do serviço militar. E um homem temeroso certamente seria mau soldado e minaria o moral dos soldados companheiros; por isso, tal homem estava eximido sob a Lei. (De 20:5-8) Portanto os cristãos, tanto judeus como gentios, podiam prontamente entender a força da ilustração de Paulo.

Numa carta aos efésios, Paulo delineou claramente que a luta do soldado cristão não é contra sangue e carne, mas contra "as forças espirituais iníquas nos lugares celestiais". Portanto, a armadura necessária para esta luta não pode ser obtida de fontes do mundo, mas tem de ser a armadura da parte de Jeová Deus, que dá a vitória sob o Comandante de seu exército, Jesus Cristo. — Ef 6:11-17.

SOLO. Veja TERRA.

SOLTEIRO, ESTADO DE. O estado de alguém não casado. No princípio, depois de criar o homem Adão, "Jeová Deus prosseguiu, dizendo: 'Não é bom que o homem continue só. Vou fazer-lhe uma ajudadora como complemento dele' ". (Gên 2:18, 21-24) Depois, o casamento era o modo normal de vida entre a humanidade, e as exceções eram raras e por motivos especiais. — Veja CASAMENTO.

Um caso especial assim foi o de Jeremias. Ele estava sob a ordem divina de permanecer solteiro e de não gerar filhos, visto que sobreviria àquela nação situações desesperadoras, em que filhos seriam impiedosamente mortos por um cruel conquistador. (Je 16:1-4) A filha de Jefté foi outra exceção. Em respeito pelo voto de seu pai, ela voluntariamente permaneceu solteira, em serviço por tempo integral, na casa de Jeová. — Jz 11:34-40.

O apóstolo Paulo considerou os benefícios do estado de solteiro, desde que a pessoa não estivesse sob excessiva pressão, que não estivesse 'inflamada de paixão' e assim em perigo de cometer fornicação. O estado de solteiro é o "melhor" proceder, por permitir à pessoa servir a Deus "sem distração". (1Co 7:1, 2, 8, 9, 29-38; 9:5) Não se declara se as quatro filhas de Filipe, o evangelizador, se casaram mais adiante na vida, mas na época em que Lucas escreveu seu relato elas foram mencionadas como "virgens, que profetizavam". — At 21:8, 9.

Cristo Jesus, igual a Jeremias, permaneceu sem se casar. Numa conversa com seus discípulos sobre a questão de o estado de solteiro ser preferível ao de casado, Jesus disse: "Nem todos os homens dão lugar a esta palavra, mas somente os a quem é dado . . . e há eunucos que se fizeram eunucos por causa do reino dos céus. Dê lugar a isso aquele que pode dar lugar a isso.” — Mt 19:10-12.

O estado de solteiro, portanto, é um dom que tem por vantagem básica dar liberdade ao que está nesta condição. Jesus usou neste texto linguagem figurada. Homens ‘dão lugar a isso’, não por uma emasculação literal, mas sim no coração, por voluntariamente resolverem manter-se fisicamente no estado de solteiro, quer por toda a vida, quer por um período mais limitado, mantendo este estado pelo exercício do autodomínio.

O ensino e a prática do celibato compulsório de certas seitas religiosas, porém, não encontra apoio nas Escrituras. Ao contrário, está escrito: “Nos períodos posteriores de tempo alguns se desviarão da fé, . . . proibindo o casar-se.” (1Ti 4:1-3) Notavelmente, muitos ou a maioria dos apóstolos eram homens casados. (1Co 9:5) O que faz com que os que têm o dom de manter o estado de solteiro não se casem não precisa ser um voto de celibato, mas sim o seu desejo e a sua aptidão de se esforçarem no serviço de Deus no estado de solteiro.

SOMBRA. Espaço não iluminado, quer pela interposição dum rochedo (Is 32:2), duma nuvem (Is 25:5), duma barraca (Is 4:6), duma árvore (Cân 2:3; Ez 17:23; Os 4:13) ou de outra planta (Jon 4:5, 6). Pode oferecer uma agradável proteção contra o sol quente. Por isso, diz-se em sentido figurado que se está na “sombra” daquilo que serve de proteção, cobertura, segurança ou refúgio, ou é procurado como tal. Neste respeito, com referência aos estranhos que Ló acolhera no seu lar, ele disse aos homens de Sodoma: “Somente não façais nada a esses homens, porque foi por isso que vieram sob a sombra do meu teto.” (Gên 19:8) E Jeová, por meio do seu profeta Isaías, proferiu um ai sobre aqueles que se refugiam “na sombra do Egito”, isto é, que recorrem ao Egito em busca de proteção. (Is 30:1-3; veja também La 4:20; Ez 31:6, 12, 17.) Especialmente Jeová é descrito como aquele que provê sombra para os do seu povo (Sal 91:1; 121:5; Is 25:4) ou que lhes dá proteção sob a sombra da sua “mão” ou das suas “asas”. (Sal 17:8; 36:7; 57:1; 63:7; Is 49:2; 51:16) Por outro lado, a “sombra tenebrosa” é associada com trevas, perigo, e até mesmo com a sepultura — “a terra de escuridão”. — Jó 10:21, 22; 24:17; 38:17; Sal 23:4.

O modo em que a sombra muda de tamanho e por fim não existe mais, em resultado da progressão do sol, é usado como símile da curta duração ou transitoriedade da vida do homem. (1Cr 29:15; Jó 8:9; 14:1, 2; Sal 102:11; 144:4; Ec 6:12; 8:13) Serem os dias da pessoa “como a sombra que declinou” significa que sua morte está próxima. (Sal 102:11; 109:23) Ao passo que as sombras lançadas pelo sol sempre mudam de tamanho e de direção com a rotação da terra, Jeová é imutável. Conforme escreveu o discípulo Tiago: “Com [Ele] não há variação da virada da sombra.” — Tg 1:17.

A sombra, ou imagem escura, que um objeto cria numa superfície não é substancial, não é a coisa real. No entanto, pode dar uma ideia da forma ou feitio geral da realidade que a lança. Neste respeito, Paulo explicou que a Lei, inclusive suas festividades, tabernáculo e sacrifícios, tinha uma sombra que representava coisas maiores a vir. Ele escreveu: “A realidade pertence ao Cristo.” — Col 2:16, 17; He 8:5; 9:23-28; 10:1.

Sobre a miraculosa reversão da sombra mencionada em 2 Reis 20:9-11 e Isaías 38:8, veja SOL.

SOMER [duma raiz que significa “guardar; vigiar”].

1. Descendente de Aser, cujos quatro filhos eram maiorais e cabeças de família. Seu nome é também grafado Semer. — 1Cr 7:30, 32, 34, 40.

2. Jeozabade, um dos assassinos do Rei Jeoás, de Judá, é identificado tanto como filho de Somer como de “Sinrite, a moabita”. (2Rs 12:21; 2Cr 24:26) Somer é uma palavra masculina no hebraico; Sinrite é feminina. Alguns encaram Somer como pai de Jeozabade e Sinrite como sua mãe. No entanto, Somer talvez fosse o pai de Sinrite. Neste caso, Jeozabade era neto de Somer, visto que o termo “filho” muitas vezes significa descendente.

SONHO. Pensamentos ou imagens mentais que a pessoa tem enquanto está dormindo. As Escrituras mencionam sonhos da parte de Deus (Núm 12:6), sonhos naturais (Jó 20:8) e sonhos falsos (Je 29:8, 9), tais como os que envolvem adivinhação. — Za 10:2.

Sonhos da Parte de Deus. Servos de Jeová e pessoas não devotadas a Ele tiveram sonhos da parte de Deus. (1Rs 3:5; Jz 7:13, 14) Alguns destes sonhos deram avisos que protegeram Seus servos, e outros lhes deram orientação. Neste respeito, Deus avisou num sonho a Abimeleque, rei de Gerar, a não tocar em Sara, com o resultado de que ela não foi maculada. (Gên 20) Os astrólogos que visitaram Jesus, acatando ‘um aviso divino que receberam em sonho’, não retornaram ao assassino Herodes. (Mt 2:11, 12) José, acatando instruções angélicas recebidas em sonhos, tomou Maria por esposa e também fugiu com Jesus e Maria para o Egito. Sonhos posteriores da parte de Deus induziram José a retornar com eles do Egito e a se fixar em Nazaré, a fim de cumprir a profecia: “Ele será chamado Nazareno.” — Mt 1:18-25; 2:13-15, 19-23.

Alguns sonhos da parte de Deus deram aos seus servos garantias de favor divino ou os ajudaram a entender como Jeová os auxiliava. Quando Deus estava para celebrar um pacto com Abrão (Abraão), sobrevieram ao patriarca um sono profundo e uma grande escuridão, e, pelo visto, Jeová lhe falou então num sonho. (Gên 15:12-16) Em Luz (Betel), Deus fez Jacó ter um sonho no qual este viu uma escada que se estendia da terra ao céu, indicando assim comunicação com o céu. Anjos subiam e desciam por ela, havendo acima dela uma representação de Jeová, e Deus proferiu uma bênção sobre Jacó. (Gên 28:10-19; compare isso com Jo 1:51.) Foi também por meio dum sonho que Deus, anos mais tarde, mostrou sua aprovação de Jacó e deu-lhe instruções angélicas para retornar à sua pátria. — Gên 31:11-13.

José, filho de Jacó, ainda jovem, teve sonhos que indicavam que ele gozava do favor divino, sendo estes sonhos também proféticos. Num sonho, ele e seus irmãos amarravam feixes no campo. O feixe de José ficou ereto, e os dos seus irmãos o rodearam e curvaram-se diante dele. Em outro sonho, o sol, a lua e 11 estrelas curvaram-se diante dele. (Gên 37:5-11) Ambos os sonhos cumpriram-se quando Jacó e sua família se mudaram para o Egito, durante uma severa fome. Para obterem alimentos, todos passaram a depender de José, que então era administrador de alimentos do Egito. — Gên 42:1-3, 5-9.

Alguns sonhos da parte de Deus, que pessoas que não o adoravam tiveram, também eram proféticos. No Egito, enquanto José estava preso junto com o chefe dos copeiros e o chefe dos padeiros, de Faraó, estes homens tiveram sonhos que Deus habilitou José a explicar como significando que em três dias o chefe dos copeiros seria restabelecido no seu cargo, ao passo que o chefe dos padeiros seria executado. Estes eventos ocorreram três dias depois, no dia do aniversário natalício de Faraó. Com o tempo, estes sonhos serviram o objetivo de trazer José à atenção de Faraó como homem que tinha o espírito de Deus. — Gên 40.

Em dois sonhos que Faraó teve numa só noite, nos dias de José, estavam conjugados aviso e elemento profético. No primeiro, ele viu sete vacas de carnes gordas ser devoradas por sete vacas de aspecto ruim e de carnes magras. No segundo sonho de Faraó, sete espigas grossas e boas subiram numa só haste, sendo tragadas por sete espigas murchas, mirradas e abrasadas pelo vento. José, atribuindo a interpretação a Deus, explicou corretamente que ambos os sonhos indicavam sete anos de fartura seguidos por sete anos de fome. (Gên 41) Foi a orientação de Deus para salvar muitos da fome e especialmente para preservar a vida dos descendentes de Abraão, a fim de cumprir Suas promessas a ele. — Gên 45:5-8.

O rei babilônio Nabucodonosor também teve dois sonhos proféticos da parte de Deus. Um era sobre uma estátua de metal, com cabeça de ouro, peito e braços de prata, ventre e coxas de cobre, pernas de ferro e pés de ferro e de argila. Uma pedra cortada sem mãos atingiu-a e esmagou-lhe os pés, e então pulverizou o restante da estátua. Daniel identificou Nabucodonosor como "a cabeça de ouro" e explicou que haveria uma sucessão de reinos humanos após o de Babilônia. Por fim, o próprio Deus estabeleceria um Reino que "jamais será arruinado". — Da 2:29-45.

Em outro sonho da parte de Deus, Nabucodonosor viu uma grande árvore ser derrubada, restringindo-se-lhe o toco remanescente com "banda de ferro e de cobre" até passarem sobre ele "sete tempos". Em harmonia com a explicação de Daniel, o jactancioso Nabucodonosor (simbolizado pela árvore derrubada) enlouqueceu, permanecendo neste estado até passarem sete tempos, ou anos. Depois, ele admitiu a supremacia de Deus, e tendo-lhe voltado a sanidade, foi restabelecido no seu reinado. — Da 4; veja TEMPOS DESIGNADOS DAS NAÇÕES.

O próprio Daniel teve um sonho da parte de Jeová, no qual observou quatro animais gigantescos subir do mar, sendo que estas criaturas representavam governos humanos. (Da 7:1, 3, 17; veja ANIMAIS SIMBÓLICOS.) Daniel viu também o Antigo de Dias, de quem "alguém semelhante a um filho de homem" recebeu "domínio, e dignidade, e um reino" duradouros. — Da 7:13, 14.

Joel predisse que o derramamento do espírito de Deus seria seguido por manifestações tais como profetizar e ter sonhos inspirados. (Jl 2:28) Foi no dia de Pentecostes do ano 33 EC que cerca de 120 discípulos de Jesus Cristo receberam o espírito santo e começaram a falar em diversas línguas "sobre as coisas magníficas de Deus". (At 2:1-18) Mais tarde, outros crentes, inclusive o ex-perseguidor Saulo (Paulo), receberam o espírito santo e foram habilitados com dons milagrosos. (At 8:17-19; 9:17; 10:44-46) Enquanto Paulo estava em Trôade, ele teve uma visão ou sonho noturno que lhe deu orientação sobre onde ele e seus associados deviam pregar "as boas novas". (At 16:9, 10) Outros discípulos, sem dúvida, também tiveram sonhos sob a influência do espírito de Deus, cumprindo as palavras da profecia de Joel.

Quando Jesus Cristo esteve em julgamento perante Pôncio Pilatos, a esposa deste governador romano mandou-lhe a seguinte mensagem a respeito de Jesus: "Não tenhas nada que ver com esse homem justo, pois eu sofri hoje muito, num sonho, por causa dele." (Mt 27:19) O sonho, evidentemente de origem divina, devia ter avisado Pilatos que o caso de Cristo era de extrema importância.

Sonhos Naturais. Sonhos naturais podem ser estimulados por certos pensamentos ou emoções, sensações ou atividades cotidianas (ansiedades, a condição física da pessoa, sua ocupação, e assim por diante). (Ec 5:3) Tais sonhos não são de grande significância. (Sal 73:20) O faminto talvez sonhe com comida e o sedento, com bebida, mas acordam não saciados. Uma delusão comparativa aguarda todas as nações "que travam guerra contra o monte Sião". — Is 29:7, 8.

Declara-se referente ao conceito pagão sobre sonhos: "Os babilônios depositavam tamanha confiança nos sonhos que, na véspera de importantes decisões, dormiam em templos, esperando conselho. Os gregos que desejavam instruções quanto à saúde dormiam em santuários de Esculápio, e os romanos, nos templos de Serápis. Os egípcios prepararam livros minuciosos para a interpretação de sonhos." (Harper's Bible Dictionary [Dicionário Bíblico de Harper], editado por M. e J. L. Miller, 1961, p. 141) Mas, tais práticas não existiam entre os hebreus e os primitivos cristãos fiéis. As Escrituras avisam contra procurar presságios, quer em sonhos naturais, quer em diversos incidentes. — De 18:10-12; veja ADIVINHAÇÃO.

Sonhos Falsos. Sonhos falsos são biblicamente condenados. Segundo a Lei, o sonhador de sonhos falsos que instigasse outros a cometer idolatria devia ser morto. (De 13:1-5) Deus talvez falasse às vezes aos seus verdadeiros profetas por meio de sonhos (Núm 12:6), mas era contra "os profetas de sonhos falsos", que desviavam seu povo da adoração verdadeira. (Je 23:25-32; 27:9, 10) Descreveu-se os praticantes da adivinhação como proferindo "sonhos fúteis". — Za 10:2.

A Bíblia fala de sonhos em sentido figurado, ao descrever os ímpios aviltadores da carne que se introduziam na congregação cristã. Judas advertiu os concrentes contra tais homens 'que se entregavam a sonhos', os que aparentemente sonhavam (imaginavam) que podiam impunemente violar a Palavra de Deus e aviltar a carne na congregação. Isto era um engano, porque inescapavelmente receberiam um julgamento adverso do Juiz Supremo, Jeová. — Ju 8; 1Co 6:9, 10, 18-20.

SONO. Período de repouso assinalado pela cessação de atividade consciente. É vital para manter a vida e a saúde dos humanos. Jesus Cristo, plenamente cônscio da importância do descanso, preocupava-se com que seus discípulos tivessem tempo para descansar um pouco. (Mr 6:31) O exemplo de Jesus mostra que, mesmo na perfeição humana, descanso e sono são necessários. — Veja Mr 4:38.

Trabalho árduo (Ec 5:12), uma consciência limpa (veja Sal 32:3-5) e manter-se livre de indevida ansiedade, bem como ter confiança em Jeová (Sal 3:5; 4:8; Pr 3:24-26), contribuem muito para tornar o sono da pessoa agradável e revigorante. Contentando-se com as necessidades da vida (veja 1Ti 6:8), o servo de Deus não precisa gastar longas horas em labuta árdua, a ponto de sacrificar o sono necessário, sem realmente tirar verdadeiro proveito do seu trabalho. — Veja Sal 127:1, 2.

Naturalmente, há ocasiões em que os servos de Deus passam noites em claro. Se não for por motivo de doença ou de outras circunstâncias adversas ou provadoras, sua insônia talvez seja causada pela preocupação com concrentes e a promoção da adoração verdadeira. (2Co 6:3-5; 11:23, 27; veja Sal 132:3-5, onde se faz referência, não ao sono propriamente dito, mas ao descanso, à cessação de atividade.) Todavia, não precisam preocupar-se desnecessariamente com os bens materiais e perder o sono por causa disso. (Ec 5:12; veja Mt 6:25-34.) Por outro lado, a transgressão contribui para dar contentamento aos iníquos. "Eles não dormem a menos que façam alguma maldade, e o sono lhes é arrebatado a menos que façam alguém tropeçar." — Pr 4:16.

Embora o sono seja importante, a pessoa não se deve tornar amante do sono. (Pr 20:13) "A preguiça causa profundo sono", tornando a pessoa inativa quando devia estar fazendo alguma coisa. (Pr 19:15) Se alguém prefere dormir ou ser inativo quando devia estar trabalhando, ele escolhe um proceder que por fim levará à pobreza. — Pr 6:9-11; 10:5; 24:33, 34.

Jeová Deus, dessemelhante dos homens, não fica sonolento, nem precisa de sono. Seus servos, portanto, podem ter a certeza de que ele sempre pode fornecer a necessária ajuda. (Sal 121:3, 4) Somente quando ele, por seus próprios bons motivos, adia tomar ação ou se refreia dela, como no caso dos que professam ser seu povo, mas que se mostram infiéis, é Jeová comparado a alguém que dorme. — Sal 44:23; 78:65.

Vigilância Espiritual. Quando o apóstolo Paulo incentivou os cristãos em Roma a não dormirem nem serem inativos e insensíveis para com suas responsabilidades, ele escreveu: "Já é hora de despertardes do sono, pois agora a nossa salvação está mais próxima do que quando nos tornamos crentes. A noite está bem avançada; o dia já se tem aproximado. Portanto, ponhamos de lado as obras pertencentes à escuridão e revistamo-nos das armas da luz. Andemos decentemente, como em pleno dia, não em festanças e em bebedeiras, nem em relações ilícitas e em conduta desenfreada, nem em rixa e ciúme." (Ro 13:11-13; compare isso com Ef 5:6-14; 1Te 5:6-8; Re 16:15.) Aqueles que se empenham em práticas erradas ou que promovem ensinos falsos estão adormecidos para com a justiça e precisam acordar, se quiserem obter a aprovação de Deus.

A Morte É Comparada ao Sono. Há evidência de que a pessoa dorme em ciclos. Cada ciclo compõe-se de um sono profundo seguido por um mais leve. Nos períodos de sono profundo é muito difícil acordar alguém. Ele está completamente desapercebido do seu ambiente e das coisas que talvez ocorram em volta dele. Não há atividade consciente. De modo similar, os mortos "não estão cônscios de absolutamente nada". (Ec 9:5, 10; Sal 146:4) Portanto, a morte, quer do homem quer do animal, é como um sono. (Sal 13:3; Jo 11:11-14; At 7:60; 1Co 7:39; 15:51; 1Te 4:13) O salmista escreveu: "Diante da tua censura, ó Deus de Jacó, adormeceram profundamente tanto o condutor de carro como o cavalo." (Sal 76:6; compare isso com Is 43:17.) Se não fosse do propósito de Deus despertar as pessoas do sono da morte, elas nunca acordariam. — Compare isso com Jó 14:10-15; Je 51:39, 57; veja RESSURREIÇÃO.

Todavia, "morte" e "sono" também podem ser contrastados. Cristo Jesus disse a respeito duma menina falecida: "A menina não morreu, mas está dormindo." (Mt 9:24; Mr 5:39; Lu 8:52) Visto que ele ia ressuscitá-la da morte, Jesus talvez quisesse dizer que a menina não deixara de existir para sempre, mas seria como alguém acordado do sono. Também, esta menina não tinha sido sepultada, nem tivera seu corpo tempo para começar a decompor-se, como se dera com o corpo de Lázaro. (Jo 11:39, 43, 44) À base da autoridade que seu Pai lhe concedeu, Jesus podia dizer isso assim como seu Pai, "que vivifica os mortos e chama as coisas que não são como se fossem". — Ro 4:17; compare isso com Mt 22:32.

Deve-se notar que o termo "adormecer" é aplicado nas Escrituras aos que morrem por causa da morte transmitida por Adão. Não se fala dos que sofrem a "segunda morte" como dormindo. Antes, mostra-se que são completamente aniquilados, deixando de existir, como que queimados por um fogo inextinguível. — Re 20:14, 15; compare isso com He 10:26-31, onde se faz um contraste entre a morte dos que violaram a Lei mosaica e a punição muito mais severa dada aos cristãos que se voltam para uma deliberada prática do pecado; He 6:4-8.

SÓPATER [provavelmente: Salva o Pai]. Cristão de Bereia, associado com Paulo na Grécia, por ocasião da terceira viagem missionária deste. Sópater era filho de Pirro e talvez seja o Sosípatro cujos cumprimentos Paulo enviou a Roma. — At 20:2-6; Ro 16:21.

SOREQUE, VALE DA TORRENTE DE. Lugar do lar de Dalila, onde Sansão foi seduzido para revelar o segredo da sua força, o que levou a ele ser capturado, cegado e encarcerado pelos filisteus. (Jz 16:4-21) É identificado com o uádi es-Sarar (Nahal Soreq), que corta a Sefelá para o oeste em direção ao mar Mediterrâneo. O nome Soreque, que significa "Videira [de Casta] Tinta Seleta", parece estar preservado em Khirbet Suriq, a uns 25 km ao O de Jerusalém, situada no lado N do uádi e defronte de Bete-Semes. Grande parte desta região, assim como hoje, provavelmente era própria para vinhedos (um possível motivo para seu nome). A carroça dos filisteus que devolveu a Arca do Pacto aos israelitas evidentemente seguiu o vale da torrente de Soreque desde Ecrom, na estrada que leva a Bete-Semes. — 1Sa 5:10; 6:10-12.

SORGO. Veja PAINÇO.

SORTE. O lançamento de sortes é um costume antigo para se decidir uma questão em debate. O método usado era lançar pedrinhas, ou lascas ou tabuinhas de madeira, ou de pedra, nas dobras ajuntadas duma veste, "no colo" ou num vaso, e depois sacudi-los. Aquele para quem caía ou era tirada a sorte era o escolhido. A sorte, igual ao juramento, subentendia uma oração acompanhante. A oração era expressa ou ficava subentendida, e procurava-se ou aguardava-se a intervenção de Jeová. O termo sorte (hebr.: goh·rál) é usado de forma literal e figurada com a ideia de "porção" ou "quinhão". — Jos 15:1; Sal 16:5; 125:3; Is 57:6; Je 13:25.

Usos. Provérbios 16:33 diz: "A sorte se lança no colo, mas toda decisão por ela é da parte de Jeová." Em Israel, o uso correto da sorte devia pôr fim a uma disputa: "A sorte lançada faz repousar até mesmo contendas e separa até os fortes um do outro." (Pr 18:18) Não era usada por esporte, brincadeira ou jogatina. Não envolvia apostas, paradas ou palpites — não havia perdas ou ganhos. Não era usada para enriquecer o templo ou os sacerdotes, nem para fins de caridade. Por outro lado, os soldados romanos visavam lucro egoísta quando, conforme predito no Salmo 22:18, lançaram sortes sobre a vestimenta de Jesus. — Mt 27:35.

A primeira menção na Bíblia a respeito de se tirarem sortes é relacionada com a escolha dos bodes para Jeová e para Azazel, no Dia da Expiação. (Le 16:7-10) No tempo de Jesus, isto era realizado no templo de Herodes, tirando o sacerdote, dum receptáculo, duas sortes que, segundo se diz, eram de madeira de buxo ou de ouro. As sortes, respectivamente marcadas "Para Jeová" e "Para Azazel", eram então colocadas na cabeça dos bodes.

Tiraram-se sortes para determinar a ordem de serviço das 24 turmas do sacerdócio no templo. (1Cr 24:5-18) Naquela ocasião, o secretário dos levitas escreveu os nomes dos cabeças das casas paternas, e estes foram evidentemente tirados em sucessão. Da mesma maneira, também consignaram-se os levitas ao serviço do templo como cantores, porteiros, tesoureiros, e assim por diante. (1Cr 24:31; caps. 25, 26; Lu 1:8, 9) Após o retorno do exílio, usavam-se sortes para providenciar o suprimento de lenha para o serviço do templo e para designar os que se deviam mudar para Jerusalém. — Ne 10:34; 11:1.

Embora não se mencionem diretamente sortes relacionadas com o Urim e o Tumim, colocados por Moisés no peitoral usado pelo sumo sacerdote (Le 8:7-9) e não se saiba exatamente o que eram o Urim e o Tumim, não obstante, eram usados para resolver problemas de maneira similar a com duas sortes. O Urim e o Tumim parecem estar relacionados com o lançamento de sortes mencionado em 1 Samuel 14:41, 42. Às vezes são chamados de sortes sagradas. Ao surgir uma questão importante para a nação, sobre a qual não se podia tomar uma decisão, o sumo sacerdote ficava em pé diante de Jeová e recebia a decisão de Jeová por meio destas sortes sagradas.

Jeová ordenou que a divisão da Terra da Promessa entre as 12 tribos fosse feita por se lançarem sortes. (Núm 26:55, 56) O livro de Josué fornece uma consideração detalhada disso, ocorrendo a palavra "sorte(s)" mais de 20 vezes nos capítulos 14 a 21. Tiravam-se sortes perante Jeová na tenda de reunião em Silo, e sob a supervisão de Josué e do sumo sacerdote Eleazar. (Jos 17:4; 18:6, 8) As cidades dos levitas também foram escolhidas por sortes. (Jos 21:8) Jeová obviamente fazia a sorte cair em harmonia com a sua anterior profecia a respeito da localização geral das tribos. — Gên 49.

Usavam-se sortes para apontar delinquentes. No caso de Jonas, os marujos lançaram sortes para descobrir por causa de quem lhes sobreviera a borrasca. (Jon 1:7, 8) Pelo uso de sortes, foi indicado Jonatã como violador do juramento tolo de Saul. — 1Sa 14:41, 42.

Os inimigos de Israel usavam sortes para repartir o despojo e os cativos de guerra. (Jl 3:3; Ob 11) Hamã mandou "lançar Pur, isto é, a Sorte", como forma de adivinhação para saber qual seria o dia auspicioso para o extermínio dos judeus em todo o Império Persa. (Est 3:7) O plural é pu·rím, de que a Festividade de Purim, também chamada de Festividades das Sortes, obteve seu nome. — Est 9:24-26.

No Tempo dos Apóstolos. Os discípulos de Jesus usaram sortes, junto com oração, para determinar quem devia preencher a vaga de Judas Iscariotes como um dos 12 que haviam presenciado as atividades e a ressurreição de Jesus; foi escolhido Matias. (At 1:21-26) A palavra grega usada aqui é klé·ros que é aparentada com a palavra kle·ro·no·mí·a, herança. A palavra klé·ros é usada em Colossenses 1:12 e 1 Pedro 5:3 com referência à herança, ou ao quinhão, que Deus dera aos cristãos.

Mas, não lemos nada a respeito do uso de sortes depois de Pentecostes de 33 EC para a escolha de superintendentes e seus ajudantes, ou para decidir assuntos de importância. A escolha de superintendentes e de seus ajudantes devia basear-se na evidência dos frutos do espírito santo na vida deles (1Ti 3; Tit 1), ao passo que outras decisões se baseavam no cumprimento de profecias, em orientação angélica, nos princípios da Palavra de Deus e nos ensinos de Jesus, e na orientação do espírito santo. (At 5:19-21; 13:2, 3; 14:23; 15:15-19, 28) O apóstolo Paulo declara: "Toda a Escritura é inspirada por Deus e proveitosa . . . para endireitar as coisas." — 2Ti 3:16; veja DEUS DA BOA SORTE, DEUS DO DESTINO.

SORTES, FESTIVIDADE DAS. Veja PURIM.

SOSÍPATRO [Salvando o Pai]. Companheiro de Paulo quando estava em Corinto, a quem o apóstolo descreveu como 'meu parente', e cujos cumprimentos são enviados de Corinto, na carta de Paulo aos romanos. (Ro 16:21) É possivelmente o Sópater mencionado em Atos 20:4, como associado com Paulo na Grécia.

SÓSTENES [de raízes que significam "salvar" e "força"]. Presidente da sinagoga coríntia durante a visita de Paulo a Corinto; possível sucessor de Crispo, que se tornou cristão. Quando o procônsul Gálio se negou a ouvir as acusações dos judeus contra o ensino religioso de Paulo, a multidão agarrou Sóstenes e o espancou. Certos manuscritos dizem que a multidão era composta de "gregos" antijudaicos; outros rezam "judeus". Ambos os casos, porém, são interpolações, visto que os três manuscritos mais antigos não nos dizem que grupo partidário atacou Sóstenes. — At 18:8, 12-17.

É possível que esta má experiência sofrida por Sóstenes tenha levado à sua conversão ao cristianismo e a uma associação posterior com Paulo em Éfeso, porque Paulo, nos cumprimentos no início da sua primeira carta aos coríntios, inclui os de certo Sóstenes (nome grego não muito comum), chamando-o de "nosso irmão". — 1Co 1:1.

SOTAI. Um dos servos de Salomão, cujos descendentes retornaram a Jerusalém junto com Zorobabel, em 537 AEC. — Esd 2:55; Ne 7:57.

SUA.

1. Pai cananeu da esposa de Judá; avô de Er, Onã e Selá. — Gên 38:2-5, 12; 1Cr 2:3.

2. Filha de Héber da tribo de Aser. — 1Cr 7:30, 32.

SUÁ.

1. Da tribo de Aser, primeiro filho alistado de Zofa. Era um dos cabeças paternos dentre uns 26.000 homens escolhidos, valentes e poderosos do exército de Israel. — 1Cr 7:30, 36, 40.

2. [Shú·ah] Sexto e último filho mencionado de Abraão com sua segunda esposa, Quetura. (1Cr 1:32) Suá e seus cinco irmãos receberam dádivas de Abraão e foram enviados para fora da sua família para o L. (Gên 25:1, 2, 5, 6) Alguns acham que os descendentes de Suá, os suítas, moravam ao longo do Eufrates, entre dois de seus tributários, o Balique e o Cabur. O único suíta mencionado na Bíblia é o companheiro de Jó, Bildade. — Jó 2:11.

3. [Shú·hah] [Cova]. Irmão de Quelube, da tribo de Judá. — 1Cr 4:11.

SUAL [Raposa].

1. Filho de Zofa; cabeça na tribo de Aser. — 1Cr 7:36, 40.

2. Região associada com Ofra, presumivelmente ao N de Micmás. Os filisteus que acampavam em Micmás faziam surtidas na direção de Sual. (1Sa 13:16, 17) Não se conhece sua localização exata.

SUÃO, SUAMITAS [De (Pertencentes a) Suão]. Único filho de Dã mencionado na Bíblia. Ele foi o antepassado dos suamitas, única família tribal alistada para Dã e que somava 64.400 pessoas no fim da peregrinação de 40 anos pelo ermo. (Núm 26:42, 43) É chamado de Husim em Gênesis 46:23.

SUAVIDADE. Veja MEIGUICE, SUAVIDADE.

SUBAEL [Deus Tomou Cativo].

1. Descendente de Levi através de Gersom, filho de Moisés. Outra forma do nome é Sebuel. — 1Cr 24:20; 26:24; veja SEBUEL N.º 1.

2. Filho de Hemã, também chamado Sebuel. — 1Cr 25:4, 20; veja SEBUEL N.º 2.

SUBIDAS. A expressão hebraica Shir ham·ma·ʽalóhth, que constitui o cabeçalho de 15 salmos (Sal 120-134), é traduzida diversamente como "Cântico de degraus" (IBB, Tr), "Cântico gradual" (So), "Cântico dos degraus" (Al, VB, NM n sobre Sal 120:cab.), "Cântico das ascensões" (Fi, MC, PIB), e "Cântico das subidas" (BJ, LEB). Quatro destes salmos são atribuídos a Davi e um a Salomão. O sentido exato do cabeçalho é assunto em debate.

Em certa época, a tradição judaica (Míxena, Middot 2:5) sustentava que estes 15 cânticos eram entoados pelos levitas na subida dos 15 degraus desde o Pátio das Mulheres para o Pátio de Israel, no templo em Jerusalém, mas esta opinião é hoje em geral descartada. Alguns sugerem que a frase se refere ao enaltecido conteúdo desses salmos, embora pareça haver pouco motivo para elevá-los deste modo acima dos outros salmos inspirados. A maioria dos comentadores acredita que o título deriva do uso destes salmos pelos adoradores israelitas na viagem ou subida à elevada cidade de Jerusalém, situada alto nas montanhas de Judá, quando assistiam ali alegremente às três grandes festas anuais. (De 12:5-7; 16:16; Sal 42:4; Is 30:29) A palavra ma·ʽaláh é usada de modo similar em Esdras 7:9, referindo-se à "subida" dos israelitas de Babilônia a Jerusalém, após o exílio. As expressões no Salmo 122:1-4 servem bem para ilustrar este conceito, ao passo que o conteúdo dos outros salmos deste grupo é de natureza tão variada, que deixa o assunto ainda na incerteza.

SUBMISSÃO. Disposição de estar em sujeição, de ceder, de submeter-se — a superiores, a leis ou a determinado arranjo de coisas. Inclui a sujeição de Jesus Cristo ao Pai (1Co 15:27, 28), da congregação cristã a Jesus (Ef 5:24) e a Deus (He 12:9; Tg 4:7), dos cristãos individuais àqueles que tomam a dianteira na congregação (1Co 16:15, 16; He 13:17 n; 1Pe 5:5), das mulheres cristãs ao arranjo prevalecente na congregação na questão do ensino (1Ti 2:11), dos escravos aos seus donos (Tit 2:9; 1Pe 2:18), das esposas ao marido (Ef 5:22; Col 3:18; Tit 2:5; 1Pe 3:1, 5), dos filhos aos pais (1Ti 3:4; compare isso com Lu 2:51; Ef 6:1) e dos governados aos governantes ou às autoridades superiores (Ro 13:1, 5; Tit 3:1; 1Pe 2:13). — Veja AUTORIDADES SUPERIORES; CABEÇA, SER; OBEDIÊNCIA.

A submissão, ou sujeição, demonstrada pelo cristão para com humanos envolve a consciência e é governada pela sua relação com Deus. Portanto, quando a submissão levaria a uma transigência ou a uma violação da lei divina, tem de se obedecer antes a Deus do que a homens. (At 5:29) Neste respeito, Paulo e Barnabé 'não cederam no sentido de se submeter' a falsos irmãos que, contrário ao propósito revelado de Deus, advogavam a circuncisão e a aderência à Lei mosaica como requisito para se obter a salvação. — Gál 2:3-5; compare isso com At 15:1, 24-29.

Em 2 Coríntios 9:13 mostra-se que as contribuições feitas a favor de concristãos necessitados eram evidência da submissão da pessoa às boas novas, por ser uma obrigação cristã ajudar concrentes necessitados. — Tg 1:26, 27; 2:14-17.

SUBORNO. Em geral, uma compensação em valores dada com o objetivo de influenciar aquele que a recebe a agir a favor de quem a dá, usualmente de modo injustificável ou corrupto. Dependendo do contexto, a palavra hebraica para suborno (shó·hhadh) pode também ser traduzida "dádiva" ou "presente". (Êx 23:8 n; 1Rs 15:19; Pr 17:8) As Escrituras indicam que a aceitação de suborno não somente levava à perversão da justiça, mas até mesmo ao derramamento de sangue. — De 16:19; 27:25; Ez 22:12.

Aceitar suborno era especificamente proibido pela lei de Deus para Israel, e Jeová, como Juiz Supremo, deu o exemplo perfeito por sempre fazer decisões imparciais e por nunca aceitar suborno. (Êx 23:8; 2Cr 19:7) Portanto, os que querem ser hóspedes na tenda de Jeová têm de imitá-lo neste respeito. — Sal 15:1, 5; veja também Is 33:15, 16.

A Bíblia contém inúmeros exemplos daqueles que não se eximiam de subornos. Dalila foi subornada para trair Sansão, pagando-lhe cada um dos senhores do eixo dos filisteus 1.100 peças de prata (US$ 2.422, se as "moedas [peças] de prata" eram siclos). (Jz 16:5) Os filhos de Samuel, o profeta e juiz, dessemelhantes de seu pai, aceitavam subornos e pervertiam o julgamento. (1Sa 8:3; 12:3) Davi fala sobre aqueles cuja mão direita, que devia ter apoiado a causa do direito, estava cheia de suborno. (Sal 26:10) Os reis Asa e Acaz subornaram respectivamente o rei da Síria e o rei da Assíria para obter ajuda militar. (1Rs 15:18, 19; 2Rs 16:8) Os cabeças, ou príncipes, da infiel Jerusalém mostraram ser amantes de subornos. (Is 1:23; 5:23; Miq 3:11) Dessemelhante da prostituta comum, que recebe uma paga, a infiel Jerusalém realmente subornava outros para vir a ela. — Ez 16:33.

No primeiro século EC, Judas Iscariotes, na realidade, aceitou um suborno para trair Jesus Cristo (Mt 26:14-16, 47-50), e o Governador Félix refreou-se de fazer justiça no caso de Paulo, na esperança de receber um suborno do apóstolo. — At 24:26, 27.

As expressões 'um suborno tomado do peito' e "o suborno no peito" podem ser entendidas melhor quando se toma em consideração que, em hebraico, a palavra "peito" pode referir-se também à dobra duma veste, acima do cinto. Portanto, essas expressões indicam que o suborno, pelo visto, era escondido na dobra superior da veste e então dado em secreto a outro que, por sua vez, também o escondia. — Pr 17:23; 21:14; veja DÁDIVAS, PRESENTES.

SUCATITAS. Família queneia de escribas que morava em Jabez. — 1Cr 2:55.

SUCOTE [Barracas].

1. Lugar em que Jacó, depois de seu encontro com Esaú, construiu para si uma casa e fez barracas, ou estábulos cobertos, para sua manada; daí o nome Sucote. (Gên 33:16, 17) A declaração de que seu próximo lugar de parada, Siquém, foi "na terra de Canaã", dá a entender que Sucote não se encontrava em Canaã propriamente dito. — Gên 33:18.

Outras referências também indicam um lugar ao L do rio Jordão, visto que provavelmente se referem ao mesmo lugar. De modo que Sucote é o nome de uma das cidades na herança da tribo de Gade, ao L do Jordão. (Jos 13:24, 25, 27) Gideão, ao perseguir o restante das forças midianitas, cruzou o Jordão e chegou a Sucote, onde os príncipes da cidade lhe negaram o pedido de comida para as suas tropas, assim como fizeram também os homens da vizinha Penuel. No seu retorno, Gideão obteve o nome de 77 príncipes e anciãos de Sucote, (indicando que era uma cidade de considerável tamanho) e puniu-os por não darem apoio à sua ação militar dirigida por Deus. (Jz 8:4-16) Quando Salomão construiu o templo, os objetos de cobre foram fundidos no Distrito do Jordão, entre Sucote e Zaretã. — 1Rs 7:46.

À base destas referências, identifica-se geralmente Sucote com um lugar em Tell Deir ʽAlla (hoje chamado Sukkot), ou perto dali, a uns 5 km ao L do rio Jordão e logo ao N do Jaboque, no ponto em que sai dos morros. O vizinho Tell el-Ekhsas talvez perpetue o nome original, pois é o equivalente árabe do Sucote hebraico. Tell Deir ʽAlla é sobranceiro à planície fértil que talvez seja "a baixada de Sucote", mencionada nos Salmos 60:6; 108:7.

2. Primeiro ponto de parada mencionado na marcha dos israelitas em direção ao Mar Vermelho. (Êx 12:37) Visto que se desconhece hoje a localização tanto do lugar de Ramessés, ponto de partida da marcha, como o de Etão, qual lugar de acampamento depois de Sucote, também é incerta a localização de Sucote. (Êx 13:20) Na melhor das hipóteses, pode-se dizer que Sucote evidentemente se encontrava à distância de um dia de viagem (32 a 48 km) do ermo de Etão, que se acredita ter-se estendido ao longo do lado noroeste da península do Sinai.

SUCOTE-BENOTE [Barracas de Benote]. Deidade adorada pelos babilônios, que o rei da Assíria levou às cidades de Samaria, depois de ter levado ao exílio os israelitas do reino de dez tribos. (2Rs 17:30) Alguns peritos sugerem que o nome "Sucote-Benote" seja uma forma hebraizada de Sarpanitu, consorte de Merodaque (Marduque). Outros são a favor da identificação com Merodaque, ou Marduque, à base de que o nome "Sucote-Benote" talvez seja Sakut (h)ban'wat (h), que significa "o Conselheiro, Criador da Terra". Entende-se que este título se aplica a Merodaque, encarado pelos babilônios como o criador do mundo.

SUFÁ. Conforme costuma ser vertido, uma região ou um vale, provavelmente na vizinhança do Árnon. (Núm 21:14) Esta palavra hebraica tem sido traduzida por termos tais como "furacão" (Ro) e "pé de vento" (Tr). Todavia, a maioria das traduções modernas indicam que se tratava duma região ou dum vale, dizendo que Vaebe ficava "junto de Sufa" (BJ) ou "em Sufá [Sufa]". — Al, ALA, CBC, IBB, MC, NM.

SUFAMITAS. Descendentes benjamitas de Sefufão, variante de grafia de Supim e de Sefufã. — Núm 26:38, 39; 1Cr 7:12; 8:5; veja SUPIM N.º 1.

SUFE [possivelmente: Canas, Juncos]. Um dos lugares mencionados para indicar onde Moisés falou aos israelitas no 40.º ano da sua peregrinação pelo ermo. (De 1:1 n) Em vez de "Sufe", a Septuaginta grega (Bagster) e a Vulgata latina rezam "Mar Vermelho", talvez porque se pensava que se tivesse omitido a palavra hebraica yam (que significa "mar"), deixando Suf como abreviação de yam·súf (Mar Vermelho). Neste caso, a referência seria àquela parte do mar chamada de golfo de ʽAqaba. Todavia, tomado o nome assim como está, o texto massorético hebraico diz que Moisés falou a Israel "nas planícies desérticas defronte de Sufe". E o versículo 5 acrescenta que foi "na região do Jordão, na terra de Moabe". Portanto, embora se desconheça o lugar exato, Sufe parece ter sido um lugar ao L do Jordão. É provisoriamente identificado com Khirbet Sufa, a uns 6 km ao SSE de Madaba.

SUÍNO. Veja PORCO.

SUÍTA [que significa "De (Pertencente a) Suá"]. Evidentemente descendente de Suá, filho de Abraão com sua esposa Quetura. (Gên 25:2; 1Cr 1:32) Bildade, companheiro de Jó, é o único suíta mencionado nas Escrituras. — Jó 2:11; 8:1; 18:1; 25:1; 42:9.

SUL. Veja NEGEBE.

SULAMITA. Apelido da bela moça camponesa que é o personagem principal de O Cântico de Salomão (6:13). É provável que este apelido a retrate como sendo da cidade de Suném (a atual Sulam). (Veja 1Rs 1:3.) Este conceito é apoiado por a Septuaginta grega (Manuscrito Vaticano N.º 1209) chamar a moça de "sunamita". Também o escritor eclesiástico Eusébio chama Suném de Sulém. — Onomasticon [Onomástico], 158, 11.

SUMATITAS. Uma das famílias de Quiriate-Jearim, provavelmente descendentes de Judá através de Calebe e de Sobal. — 1Cr 2:19, 50, 52, 53.

SUMO SACERDOTE. Principal representante do povo perante Deus. Cabia-lhe também a supervisão de todos os outros sacerdotes.

A Bíblia aplica diversos termos ao sumo sacerdote, a saber, "sumo [literalmente: grande] sacerdote" (Núm 35:25, 28; Jos 20:6, n), "o sacerdote, o ungido" (Le 4:3), "o sacerdote principal [ou: sumo; literalmente: cabeça]" (2Cr 26:20 n; 2Rs 25:18 n), "o cabeça" (2Cr 24:6), ou simplesmente "o sacerdote" (2Cr 26:17). No último caso, o contexto frequentemente esclarece que se fala do sumo sacerdote. Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, evidentemente usa-se "principais sacerdotes" para indicar os mais importantes homens do sacerdócio, que incluíam ex-sumos sacerdotes depostos, e possivelmente, os homens adultos das famílias dos sumos sacerdotes e os cabeças das 24 turmas sacerdotais. — Mt 2:4; Mr 8:31.

A designação de Arão como primeiro sumo sacerdote de Israel procedia de Deus. (He 5:4) O sumo sacerdócio de Israel foi inaugurado com Arão e transmitido de pai para o filho mais velho, a menos que este filho morresse ou ficasse desqualificado, como no caso dos dois filhos mais velhos de Arão, que pecaram contra Jeová e morreram. (Le 10:1, 2) O Rei Salomão depôs um sumo sacerdote em cumprimento de profecia divina e colocou no seu lugar outro homem qualificado da linhagem de Arão. (1Rs 2:26, 27, 35) Mais tarde, quando a nação estava sob domínio gentio, esses governantes gentios removiam e nomeavam sumos sacerdotes segundo o seu beneplácito. No entanto, parece que se aderiu bem de perto à linhagem de Arão em toda a história da nação, até a destruição de Jerusalém em 70 EC, embora possa ter havido exceções, tais como Menelau, também chamado Onias (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], XII, 238, 239 [v, 1], o qual, de acordo com 2 Macabeus 3:4, 5 e 4:23 (BJ), era benjamita.

Habilitações e Requisitos para o Cargo. Em harmonia com a dignidade do cargo, a proximidade do sumo sacerdote em relação a Jeová ao representar a nação perante Ele, e também a importância típica do cargo, os requisitos eram rígidos.

Em Levítico 21:16-23 é apresentada uma lista de defeitos físicos desqualificadores para todos os sacerdotes. Ao sumo sacerdote impunham-se restrições adicionais: ele só se podia casar com uma virgem de Israel; não se devia casar com uma viúva. (Le 21:13-15) Além disso, não se lhe permitia aviltar-se por um morto, isto é, não podia tocar num cadáver humano, nem o do seu pai ou da sua mãe, porque isso o tornaria impuro. Tampouco devia deixar o cabelo ficar desgrenhado, nem devia rasgar as vestes por causa de um morto. — Le 21:10-12.

A Bíblia não declara especificamente a idade para a elegibilidade do sumo sacerdote. Embora ela forneça para os levitas a idade de 50 anos para sua aposentadoria, não se menciona tal aposentadoria para sacerdotes, e seu registro indica que a designação do sumo sacerdote era vitalícia. (Núm 8:24, 25) Arão tinha 83 anos de idade quando compareceu com Moisés perante Faraó. Sua unção como sumo sacerdote parece ter ocorrido no ano seguinte. (Êx 7:7) Ele tinha 123 anos quando morreu. Durante todo este tempo ele serviu, sem se retirar do cargo. (Núm 20:28; 33:39) A provisão das cidades de refúgio menciona o serviço vitalício do sumo sacerdote, ao exigir que o homicida desintencional permanecesse na cidade até a morte do sumo sacerdote. — Núm 35:25.

Investidura. Alguns indícios do cargo que Jeová tinha em mente para Arão são vistos nos privilégios que recebeu logo depois do Êxodo do Egito. No ermo, em caminho para Sinai, foi a Arão que se ordenou que tomasse um jarro de maná e o depositasse diante do Testemunho como algo a ser guardado. Isto foi antes de virem à existência a tenda de reunião ou a Arca do Pacto. (Êx 16:33, 34, n) Mais tarde, Arão passou a ser o plenamente encarregado da tenda sagrada e da sua Arca. Arão e dois de seus filhos, com mais 70 anciãos de Israel, foram mencionados especificamente como privilegiados de subirem até certo ponto do monte Horebe, onde tiveram uma visão de Deus. — Êx 24:1-11.

Mas, Jeová fez a sua primeira declaração real do seu propósito de separar Arão e os filhos dele para o sacerdócio quando deu a Moisés instruções para a confecção das vestes sacerdotais. (Êx 28) Depois de dar estas instruções, Deus delineou para Moisés o procedimento para a investidura do sacerdócio e então fez saber definitivamente: "O sacerdócio tem de se tornar seu como estatuto por tempo indefinido." — Êx 29:9.

Em harmonia com a majestade e a pureza de Jeová, Arão e seus filhos só podiam cumprir com os deveres sacerdotais depois de terem sido santificados e empossados pelo serviço de investidura. (Êx 29) Moisés, como mediador do pacto da Lei, realizou a investidura. Uma cerimônia de santificação, durando os sete dias de 1.º a 7 de nisã de 1512 AEC, realizou a plena investidura do sacerdócio, enchendo-se-lhes as mãos de poder para atuar como sacerdotes. (Le 8) No dia seguinte, 8 de nisã, realizou-se o serviço inicial de expiação para a nação (bem similar aos serviços regulares do Dia da Expiação, decretado a ser celebrado anualmente em 10 de tisri; esta primeira atuação do sacerdócio é descrita em Levítico 9). Isto foi apropriado e necessário, porque o povo de Israel precisava ser purificado dos seus pecados, inclusive da sua então recente transgressão com relação ao bezerro de ouro. — Êx 32.

Ao investir o sumo sacerdote, um dos atos significativos que Moisés teve de realizar foi a unção de Arão por derramar sobre a cabeça de Arão o óleo de santa unção, de composição especial segundo orientações de Deus. (Le 8:1, 2, 12; Êx 30:22-25, 30-33; Sal 133:2) Os posteriores sumos sacerdotes, sucessores de Arão, são chamados de "ungidos". Embora a Bíblia não registre um caso de eles realmente terem sido ungidos com óleo literal, ela especifica esta lei: "E as vestes sagradas que são de Arão servirão para seus filhos após ele, para ungi-los nelas e nelas encher-lhes a mão de poder. Por sete dias as usará o sacerdote que lhe suceder dentre seus filhos e que entrar na tenda de reunião para ministrar no lugar santo." — Êx 29:29, 30.

As Vestes do Cargo. Além de usar vestes de linho similares às dos subsacerdotes nas suas atividades usuais, o sumo sacerdote usava em certas ocasiões vestes especiais de glória e de beleza. Os capítulos 28 e 39 de Êxodo descrevem tanto o feitio como a confecção destas vestes sob a direção de Moisés, conforme ordenado por Deus. A veste mais íntima (exceto os calções de linho que iam "desde os quadris até às coxas", usados por todos os sacerdotes "para cobrir a carne nua"; Êx 28:42) era a veste comprida (hebr.: kut·tó·neh) feita de linho fino (provavelmente branco) em tecido enxadrezado. Esta veste comprida parece ter tido mangas compridas e ter chegado até os tornozelos. Era provavelmente inteiriça. Uma faixa de linho fino retorcido, tecida com fios azuis, roxos e carmíneos, cingia o corpo, provavelmente à altura da cintura. — Êx 28:39; 39:29.

O turbante, evidentemente diferente da cobertura para a cabeça dos subsacerdotes, também era de linho fino. (Êx 28:39) Na dianteira do turbante estava presa uma lâmina lustrosa de ouro, tendo gravadas nela as palavras: "A santidade pertence a Jeová." (Êx 28:36) Esta lâmina era chamada de "sinal sagrado de dedicação". — Êx 29:6; 39:30.

Sobre a veste comprida de linho havia a túnica azul sem mangas (hebr.: me'íl). Provavelmente tecida inteiriça, ela tinha a abertura superior reforçada, para impedir que se rasgasse. A túnica azul sem mangas era vestida por passá-la sobre a cabeça. Esta túnica era mais curta do que a veste comprida de linho, e na sua bainha havia alternadamente campainhas de ouro e romãs feitas de fio azul, roxo e carmíneo. As campainhas eram ouvidas quando o sumo sacerdote realizava seu trabalho no santuário. — Êx 28:31-35.

O éfode, uma veste do feitio dum avental, com frente e costas, e chegando um pouco abaixo da cintura, era usado por todos os sacerdotes e às vezes por pessoas que não pertenciam ao sacerdócio. (1Sa 2:18; 2Sa 6:14) Mas o éfode da vestimenta bela do sumo sacerdote era um trabalho bordado, especial. Era de linho fino retorcido, com lã tingida de roxo, fibras carmíneas e fios de ouro, de ouro batido em folhas finas e depois recortadas em fios. (Êx 39:2, 3) As ombreiras possivelmente se estendiam para baixo, em ambos os lados, desde os ombros até o cinto. Em cima das ombreiras havia dois engastes de ouro, cada um com uma pedra de ônix tendo gravado nela seis dos nomes dos filhos de Israel (Jacó) em ordem de nascimento. Um cinto do mesmo material atava o éfode na cintura, estando o cinto "sobre ele", possivelmente preso ao éfode como parte dele. — Êx 28:6-14.

O peitoral do julgamento, sem dúvida, era a parte mais cara e mais gloriosa da vestimenta do sumo sacerdote. Era feito do mesmo material que o éfode, tinha formato retangular, sendo o comprimento dele o dobro da largura, mas era dobrado para formar um quadrado de uns 22 cm de cada lado. A dobra formava uma espécie de bolsa. (Veja PEITORAL.) O peitoral era adornado com 12 pedras preciosas engastadas em ouro, cada pedra tendo gravado nela o nome de um dos filhos de Israel. Estas pedras, rubi, topázio, esmeralda e outras gemas, ficavam dispostas em quatro fileiras. Fizeram-se no peitoral duas correntinhas de ouro, trançadas, como trabalho de cordas, e fixaram-se argolas de ouro nos cantos; as argolas de cima eram presas às ombreiras do éfode pelas correntinhas de ouro. As duas argolas de baixo eram presas com cordéis azuis às ombreiras do éfode, logo acima do cinto. — Êx 28:15-28.

O Urim e o Tumim foram colocados por Moisés "no peitoral". (Le 8:8) Não se sabe exatamente o que eram o Urim e o Tumim. Alguns peritos acham que se tratava de sortes lançadas ou tiradas do peitoral, sob a direção de Jeová, basicamente fornecendo respostas de "sim" ou "não" às perguntas. Neste caso, talvez fossem colocados na "bolsa" do peitoral. (Êx 28:30, AT; Mo) Isto talvez seja indicado no texto de 1 Samuel 14:41, 42. No entanto, outros sustentam que o Urim e o Tumim tinham algo que ver com as gemas no peitoral, mas este conceito parece menos provável. Outras referências ao Urim e ao Tumim são encontradas em Números 27:21; Deuteronômio 33:8; 1 Samuel 28:6; Esdras 2:63; e Neemias 7:65. — Veja URIM E TUMIM.

Estas belas vestes eram usadas pelo sumo sacerdote quando se dirigia a Jeová com uma indagação sobre um assunto importante. (Núm 27:21; Jz 1:1; 20:18, 27, 28) Também, no Dia da Expiação, depois de se completarem as ofertas pelo pecado, ele trocava as vestes de linho branco por suas vestes de glória e beleza. (Le 16:23, 24) Pelo que parece, usava estas últimas também em outras ocasiões.

As instruções a respeito do Dia da Expiação, no capítulo 16 de Levítico, não declaram especificamente que o sumo sacerdote, depois de trajar sua vestimenta gloriosa, devia elevar as mãos e abençoar o povo. No entanto, no registro sobre o serviço de expiação realizado no dia depois da investidura do sacerdócio, que segue de perto o procedimento no Dia da Expiação, lemos: "Arão levantou então as mãos para o povo, e ele os abençoou." (Le 9:22) Jeová mostrara qual deveria ser a bênção, ao ordenar a Moisés: "Fala a Arão e a seus filhos, dizendo: 'Assim é que deveis abençoar os filhos de Israel, dizendo-lhes: "Jeová te abençoe e te guarde. Jeová faça que sua face te ilumine e te favoreça. Jeová levante sua face para ti e te designe a paz."'" — Núm 6:23-27.

Responsabilidades e Deveres. A dignidade, a seriedade e a responsabilidade do cargo de sumo sacerdote são salientadas pelo fato de que os pecados da sua parte lançavam culpabilidade sobre o povo. (Le 4:3) Apenas o sumo sacerdote devia entrar no compartimento Santíssimo do santuário, e isso somente em um dia por ano, no Dia da Expiação. (Le 16:2) Quando entrava na tenda de reunião naquele dia, não se permitia nenhum outro sacerdote na tenda. (Le 16:17) Ele oficiava em todos os serviços do Dia da Expiação. Em ocasiões especiais, fazia expiação por sua casa e pelo povo (Le 9:7), e intercedia perante Jeová pelo povo quando a ira de Jeová se acendera contra este. (Núm 15:25, 26; 16:43-50) Ao surgirem questões de importância nacional, era ele quem se dirigia a Jeová com Urim e Tumim. (Núm 27:21) Oficiava no abate e na queima da vaca vermelha, cujas cinzas eram usadas na água da purificação. — Núm 19:1-5, 9.

Evidentemente, o sumo sacerdote podia, caso desejasse, participar em quaisquer deveres ou cerimônias sacerdotais. No tempo do Rei Davi, o sacerdócio já havia aumentado em número. A fim de que todos pudessem servir, Davi arranjou os sacerdotes em 24 turmas. (1Cr 24:1-18) Este sistema continuou durante a existência do sacerdócio. Todavia, o sumo sacerdote não ficava restrito a certos tempos para prestar serviço no santuário, assim como se dava com os subsacerdotes, mas podia participar em qualquer ocasião. (Os subsacerdotes podiam ajudar em qualquer ocasião, mas certos deveres eram reservados como privilégio dos sacerdotes da respectiva turma em serviço.) Assim como se dava com os subsacerdotes, as épocas festivas eram os períodos mais atarefados para o sumo sacerdote.

O santuário, seu serviço e o tesouro estavam sob a supervisão do sumo sacerdote. (2Rs 12:7-16; 22:4) Nesta responsabilidade, parece que havia um sacerdote secundário como seu ajudante principal. (2Rs 25:18) Em tempos posteriores, este ajudante, chamado de Sagan, oficiava em lugar do sumo sacerdote, quando este, por algum motivo, estava incapacitado. (The Temple [O Templo], de A. Edersheim, 1874, p. 75) Eleazar, filho de Arão, recebeu a incumbência duma supervisão especial. — Núm 4:16.

O sumo sacerdote também era o líder em dar instrução religiosa à nação. — Le 10:8-10; De 17:9-11.

Ele e os governantes seculares (Josué, os juízes, e, sob a monarquia, o rei) eram os supremos tribunais da nação. (De 17:9, 12; 2Cr 19:10, 11) Depois de se constituir o Sinédrio (em tempos posteriores), o sumo sacerdote presidia a este corpo. (Algumas tradições dizem que ele não presidia em cada caso — apenas conforme desejava.) (Mt 26:57; At 5:21) O sumo sacerdote Eleazar participou com Josué em repartir a terra entre as 12 tribos. — Jos 14:1; 21:1-3.

A morte do sumo sacerdote tinha de ser anunciada às cidades de refúgio em todo o país; significava a soltura de todos os confinados aos limites das cidades de refúgio por serem culpados de homicídio acidental. — Núm 35:25-29.

A Linhagem dos Sumos Sacerdotes. Queira ver a tabela acompanhante quanto à linhagem dos sumos sacerdotes e os nomes dos que realmente serviram neste cargo. A Bíblia menciona especificamente apenas uns poucos como servindo neste cargo, mas fornece-nos registros genealógicos da linhagem de Arão. Sem dúvida, um bom número dos alistados nas tabelas genealógicas serviram como sumos sacerdotes, embora a Bíblia não apresente um relato dos seus atos, nem os mencione definitivamente como ocupando este cargo. Os poucos que ela realmente menciona como tais dificilmente bastariam para preencher a lacuna no tempo, em especial entre o início do sacerdócio em 1512 AEC e a destruição de Jerusalém em 607 AEC. Também, muitas vezes há nomes passados por alto nas tabelas genealógicas, de modo que alguns daqueles cujo nome não se menciona também podem ter servido no cargo. A tabela, portanto, não pretende fornecer uma lista totalmente completa e exata, mas pode ajudar o leitor a obter uma visão melhor da linhagem dos sumos sacerdotes.

O Sacerdócio de Melquisedeque. O primeiro sacerdote mencionado na Bíblia é Melquisedeque, que era "sacerdote do Deus Altíssimo", bem como rei de Salém (Jerusalém). Abraão se encontrou com este sacerdote-rei ao retornar depois de derrotar os três reis coligados com o rei elamita Quedorlaomer. Abraão mostrou que reconhecia a origem divina da autoridade de Melquisedeque por dar-lhe um décimo dos frutos da sua vitória e por receber a bênção de Melquisedeque. A Bíblia não fornece o registro dos antepassados de Melquisedeque, nem de seu nascimento ou da sua morte. Não teve predecessores nem sucessores. — Gên 14:17-24; veja MELQUISEDEQUE.

O Sumo Sacerdócio de Jesus Cristo. O livro bíblico de Hebreus salienta que Jesus Cristo, desde a sua ressurreição e entrada no céu, é "sumo sacerdote para sempre à maneira de Melquisedeque". (He 6:20; 7:17, 21) Para descrever a grandiosidade do sacerdócio de Cristo e sua superioridade sobre o sacerdócio arônico, o escritor mostra que Melquisedeque era tanto rei como sacerdote por designação do Deus Altíssimo, e não por herança. Cristo Jesus, não sendo da tribo de Levi, mas da de Judá e da linhagem de Davi, não herdou seu cargo por descender de Arão, mas o obteve por designação direta de Deus, assim como Melquisedeque. (He 5:10) Além da promessa registrada no Salmo 110:4: "Jeová jurou (e não o deplorará): 'Tu és sacerdote por tempo indefinido à maneira de Melquisedeque!' ", designação que o torna o Rei-Sacerdote celestial, Cristo possui também a autoridade do Reino em razão da sua ascendência de Davi. Neste último caso, ele se torna o herdeiro do reinado prometido no pacto davídico. (2Sa 7:11-16) Portanto, ele ocupa os cargos conjuntos do reinado e do sacerdócio, assim como Melquisedeque.

Mostra-se de outra maneira a sobrepujante excelência do sumo sacerdócio de Cristo, a saber, por Levi, progenitor do sacerdócio judaico, na realidade ter dado dízimos a Melquisedeque, pois Levi ainda se encontrava nos lombos de Abraão quando este patriarca deu um décimo ao sacerdote-rei de Salém. Além disso, neste sentido, Levi foi também abençoado por Melquisedeque, e a regra é que o menor é abençoado pelo maior. (He 7:4-10) O apóstolo também traz à atenção que, estar Melquisedeque "sem pai, sem mãe, sem genealogia, não tendo nem princípio de dias nem fim de vida", é representativo do sacerdócio eterno de Jesus Cristo, que foi ressuscitado para uma "vida indestrutível". — He 7:3, 15-17.

Não obstante, embora Cristo não derive seu sacerdócio da descendência carnal de Arão, nem tenha predecessor ou sucessor no cargo, ele cumpre as coisas tipificadas pelo sumo sacerdote arônico. O apóstolo torna isso perfeitamente claro quando mostra que o tabernáculo em forma de tenda, construído no ermo, era modelo "da verdadeira tenda, que Jeová erigiu, e não algum homem", e que os sacerdotes levíticos prestavam "serviço sagrado numa representação típica e como sombra das coisas celestiais". (He 8:1-6; 9:11) Ele relata que Jesus Cristo, que não tinha sacrifícios de animais, mas sim seu próprio corpo para oferecer, eliminou a validade ou a necessidade de sacrifícios de animais; então Jesus "passou pelos céus", "não com o sangue de bodes e de novilhos, mas com o seu próprio sangue, de uma vez para sempre, e obteve para nós um livramento eterno". (He 4:14; 9:12; 10:5, 6, 9) Entrou no lugar santo, tipificado pelo Santíssimo em que Arão entrava, a saber, "no próprio céu, para aparecer agora por nós perante a pessoa de Deus". — He 9:24.

O sacrifício de Jesus como Sumo Sacerdote antitípico não precisava ser repetido, assim como os dos sacerdotes arônicos, porque seu sacrifício realmente removeu o pecado. (He 9:13, 14, 25, 26) Além disso, como tipo ou como sombra, nenhum sacerdote do sacerdócio arônico podia viver o suficiente para salvar completamente ou trazer plena salvação e perfeição a todos aqueles a quem ministrava, mas Cristo "é também capaz de salvar completamente os que se aproximam de Deus por intermédio dele, porque está sempre vivo para interceder por eles". — He 7:23-25.

Além de oferecer sacrifícios, o sumo sacerdote em Israel abençoava o povo e era seu principal instrutor nas leis justas de Deus. O mesmo se dá com Jesus Cristo. Ao comparecer perante seu Pai nos céus, ele "ofereceu um só sacrifício pelos pecados, perpetuamente, e se assentou à direita de Deus, daí em diante esperando até que os seus inimigos sejam postos por escabelo dos seus pés". (He 10:12, 13; 8:1) Portanto, "na segunda vez que ele aparecer, será à parte do pecado e para os que seriamente o procuram para a sua salvação". — He 9:28.

A superioridade de Jesus Cristo como Sumo Sacerdote é vista também em outro sentido. Ao se tornar homem de sangue e carne igual aos seus "irmãos" (He 2:14-17), ele foi cabalmente provado; sofreu toda espécie de oposição, perseguição, e, por fim, uma morte ignominiosa. Conforme se declara: "Embora fosse Filho, aprendeu a obediência pelas coisas que sofreu; e, depois de ter sido aperfeiçoado, tornou-se responsável pela salvação eterna de todos os que lhe obedecem." (He 5:8, 9) Paulo explica os benefícios que podemos derivar de ele ter sido assim provado: "Por ter ele mesmo sofrido, ao ser posto à prova, pode vir em auxílio daqueles que estão sendo postos à prova." (He 2:18) Os que necessitam de ajuda têm a garantia de receber consideração misericordiosa e compassiva. "Pois", diz Paulo, "temos por sumo sacerdote, não alguém que não se possa compadecer das nossas fraquezas, mas alguém que foi provado em todos os sentidos como nós mesmos, porém, sem pecado". — He 4:15, 16.

LINHAGEM DOS SUMOS SACERDOTES DE ISRAEL

As genealogias dos sumos sacerdotes são encontradas em 1 Crônicas 6:1-15, 50-53, e em Esdras 7:1-5. Elas não contêm todos os nomes; alguns elos são omitidos, conforme é comum em tabelas genealógicas hebraicas. Josefo e os rabinos judeus inserem nomes adicionais, mas a sua exatidão está sujeita a dúvidas. O ponto de interrogação após um nome em negrito indica os que talvez tenham servido no cargo de sumo sacerdote (provavelmente diversos deles), mas que são alistados somente na linhagem de sumos sacerdotes na Bíblia, sem se mencionar especificamente que tenham servido como tais.

[1Sa 4:17, 18; 6:1] A Arca retornou, ficando temporariamente em Bete-Semes, depois em Quiriate-Jearim [Baale-Judá], na casa de Abinadabe, durante muitos anos, até pouco depois de Davi capturar Sião. — 1Sa 6:14, 15; 7:2; 2Sa 6:2, 3)

AIMELEQUE (Ajudou Davi; foi morto quando 85 sacerdotes de Nobe foram mortos por ordem de Saul. — 1Sa 21:1-6; 22:9-18)

ZADOQUE (Talvez fosse o "segundo" sacerdote durante o reinado de Davi. [Veja 2Rs 25:18; Je 52:24.] Foi leal a Davi quando Adonias tentou tomar o trono. Constituído sumo sacerdote por Salomão, em lugar de Abiatar. — 2Sa 8:17; 15:24-29; 19:11; 1Rs 1:7, 8, 32-45; 2:27, 35; 1Cr 24:3)

A PARTIR DO TEMPO DE DARIO (II), O PERSA

Subsacerdotes Cristãos. Jesus Cristo é o único sacerdote "à maneira de Melquisedeque" (He 7:17), mas, igual a Arão, o sumo sacerdote de Israel, Jesus Cristo tem um grupo de subsacerdotes que seu Pai, Jeová, lhe proveu. A estes se prometeu serem co-herdeiros de Jesus Cristo nos céus, onde também participarão no seu Reino quais reis associados. (Ro 8:17) São conhecidos como "sacerdócio real". (1Pe 2:9) Na visão do livro bíblico de Revelação (Apocalipse), são mostrados cantando um novo cântico, no qual dizem que Cristo os comprou com o seu sangue e que fez "deles um reino e sacerdotes para o nosso Deus, e [que] hão de reinar sobre a terra". (Re 5:9, 10) Mais adiante na visão, mostra-se que são 144.000 em número. São também descritos como tendo sido "comprados da terra" quais seguidores do Cordeiro, "comprados dentre a humanidade como primícias para Deus e para o Cordeiro". (Re 14:1-4; compare isso com Tg 1:18.) Neste capítulo (14) de Revelação dá-se um aviso a respeito da marca da fera, mostrando-se que evitar esta marca "significa perseverança para os santos". (Re 14:9-12) Estes 144.000 comprados são os que perseveram com fidelidade, que passam a viver e a reinar com Cristo, e que "serão sacerdotes de Deus e do Cristo, e reinarão com ele durante os mil anos". (Re 20:4, 6) Os serviços de Jesus como sumo sacerdote os levam a esta posição gloriosa.

Os Beneficiados pelo Sacerdócio Celestial. A visão da Nova Jerusalém, registrada em Revelação, fornece um indício de quem receberá as ministrações do grande Sumo Sacerdote e dos associados com ele quais subsacerdotes celestiais. Arão e sua família, junto com a tribo sacerdotal de Levi, ministravam ao povo das 12 tribos na terra da Palestina. Quanto à Nova Jerusalém, "as nações andarão por meio da sua luz". — Re 21:2, 22-24.

SUNAMITA [De (Pertencente a) Suném]. Habitante de Suném. Abisague, a enfermeira de Davi na velhice dele, é chamada de "sunamita". — 1Rs 1:3, 4, 15; 2:17, 21, 22; veja ABISAGUE.

Uma mulher de destaque, de Suném, que mostrava hospitalidade para com o profeta Eliseu, oferecendo-lhe regularmente alimento e abrigo, não é mencionada por nome. Pela sua bondade, ela foi recompensada com um filho. Alguns anos depois, quando o menino morreu, esta sunamita cavalgou uns 30 km, e ao achar Eliseu no monte Carmelo, expressou seu amargo pesar, dizendo: "Pedi eu algum filho por intermédio de meu senhor? Não disse eu: 'Não me deves dar uma falsa esperança'?" Retornando com ela, o profeta orou a Jeová, e o menino reviveu. — 2Rs 4:8-37.

Acatando o aviso de Eliseu a respeito duma vindoura fome, a sunamita, evidentemente então já viúva, com os da sua casa passou a morar por sete anos entre os filisteus. Ao fim deste tempo, ela voltou, encontrando sua propriedade confiscada. Quando o rei soube dos tratos passados dela com Eliseu, foram-lhe devolvidas todas as suas propriedades. — 2Rs 8:1-6.

SUNÉM. Cidade no território de Issacar (Jos 19:17, 18), não muito longe de Jezreel e do monte Gilboa. (1Sa 28:4) Suném é identificada com a atual Sulam (Shunem), que se encontra na encosta SO do Jebel Dahi (Giv'at Ha-More) e é sobranceira ao vale de Jezreel. O lugar fica a uns 5 km ao N da abandonada aldeia de Zer'in (Tel Yizre'el) e a uns 8 km ao N da extremidade ocidental do monte Gilboa.

Foi em Suném que os filisteus acamparam antes da batalha que resultou na morte do Rei Saul. (1Sa 28:4) De Suném procedia a bela Abisague ("a sunamita") que cuidou do idoso Rei Davi (1Rs 1:3, 4), e, mais tarde, o profeta Eliseu muitas vezes se hospedou ali na casa dum casal hospitaleiro. — 2Rs 4:8.

SUNI, SUNITAS [De (Pertencentes a) Suni]. Suni era o terceiro filho mencionado por nome dos sete de Gade. Acompanhou Jacó ao Egito, em 1728 AEC, e quando seus descendentes aumentaram em número, constituíram a família tribal dos sunitas. — Gên 46:8, 16; Núm 26:15.

SUOR. Transpiração; humor aquoso do corpo excretado pelas glândulas sudoríparas (perspiratórias), que flui através dos poros da pele. Esforço (como em trabalho árduo), emoção (tal como ansiedade), calor, e assim por diante, em geral são as causas de suor.

Adão, depois de pecar, tinha de ganhar sua subsistência do solo amaldiçoado, fora do jardim do Éden, fazendo-o através de labuta suarenta no meio de espinhos e abrolhos. Jeová disse-lhe, em parte: "No suor do teu rosto comerás pão, até que voltes ao solo, pois dele foste tomado." — Gên 3:17-19.

Durante a visão que Ezequiel teve do templo, Jeová declarou que os sacerdotes que ministravam ali deviam usar vestes de linho e que 'não devia haver neles nenhuma lã'. Não deviam cingir-se de lã ou de algo que 'causasse suor'. Isto talvez fosse para evitar alguma impureza que o suor produzisse, ou porque a transpiração tornaria seu serviço desagradável, em vez de alegre, já que o suor sugere muita labuta ou estafa, como no caso de Adão. — Ez 44:15-18.

Jesus em Getsêmani. A respeito de Jesus Cristo, quando estava em Getsêmani na última noite da sua vida terrestre, Lucas 22:44 declara: "Mas, ficando em agonia, continuava a orar mais seriamente; e seu suor tornou-se como gotas de sangue caindo ao chão." O escritor não diz que o suor de Jesus estava mesmo misturado com o seu sangue. Talvez usasse apenas uma comparação para indicar que a transpiração de Cristo formava-se como gotas de sangue, ou descrevendo como o gotejar do suor de Jesus parecia o gotejamento de sangue duma ferida. Por outro lado, o sangue de Jesus pode ter exsudado através da sua pele, misturado com o seu suor. Tem-se relatado suor sanguinolento em certos casos de extrema tensão mental. Sangue, ou elementos dele, passam através das paredes intactas de vasos sanguíneos numa condição chamada diapedese, e na hematidrose há uma excreção de transpiração misturada com pigmentos de sangue ou com sangue, ou de fluido corpóreo misturado com sangue, resultando assim em se 'suar sangue'. Naturalmente, estas são apenas sugestões quanto ao que possivelmente aconteceu no caso de Jesus.

Lucas 22:43, 44, é omitido no Manuscrito Vaticano N.º 1209, no Manuscrito Alexandrino, no códice Sinaítico siríaco e no texto corrigido do Manuscrito Sinaítico. Todavia, estes versículos ocorrem no Manuscrito Sinaítico original, no Códice Bezae, na Vulgata latina, no texto siríaco curetoniano e na Pesito siríaca.

SUPERINTENDENTE. A palavra hebraica para superintendente, pa·qídh, deriva do verbo pa·qádh, que significa "voltar a atenção para" (Gên 21:1), "visitar" (Jz 15:1), "encarregar" (Gên 39:5) ou "comissionar" (Esd 1:2). De modo similar, a palavra grega para superintendente, e·pí·sko·pos, é aparentada com o verbo e·pi·sko·pé·o, que significa "vigiar cuidadosamente" (He 12:15), e com o substantivo e·pi·sko·pé, que significa "inspeção" (Lu 19:44, Int; 1Pe 2:12), "cargo de superintendente" (1Ti 3:1) ou "cargo de superintendência" (At 1:20). A Septuaginta grega verte a palavra hebraica pa·qídh quatro vezes como e·pí·sko·pos. (Jz 9:28; Ne 11:9, 14, 22) Portanto, superintendente era aquele que dava atenção a certos assuntos ou a pessoas, visitando, inspecionando, e encarregando alguém. A ideia básica inerente no termo grego é supervisão protetora.

Superintendentes nas Escrituras Hebraicas. José aconselhou Faraó a designar superintendentes sobre o país, a fim de armazenar produtos durante os anos de fartura em preparação para os vindouros anos de fome. (Gên 41:34-36) Cada linhagem familiar dos levitas, sob os seus respectivos maiorais, tinha sua responsabilidade específica para com a supervisão dos deveres no tabernáculo. (Núm 3:24-26, 30, 31, 35-37) Eleazar, filho de Arão, foi constituído "o maioral dos maiorais dos levitas" e cabia-lhe a supervisão geral da estrutura do tabernáculo e dos seus utensílios. (Núm 3:32; 4:16) Também o sumo sacerdote podia encarregar superintendentes de certos serviços no santuário. (2Rs 11:18) Primeiro Crônicas, capítulos 23 a 27, mostra os numerosos e variados cargos e arranjos de supervisão em vigor durante o reinado de Davi, com respeito tanto ao sacerdócio como à corte real, inclusive de assuntos econômicos e militares.

A profecia de Isaías (60:17) coloca "superintendentes" em paralelo com "feitores", visto que os superintendentes podem designar tarefas a outros, bem como supervisionar e vigiar os interesses das pessoas ou das coisas sob os seus cuidados. Nesta profecia, Jeová prediz o tempo em que ele iria "designar a paz como teus superintendentes e a justiça como teus feitores", profecia inicialmente cumprida no restabelecimento de Israel do exílio, porém, mais plenamente realizada na congregação cristã.

Superintendentes na Congregação Cristã. Os "superintendentes" (e·pí·sko·poi) cristãos correspondem aos reconhecidos como "anciãos"

(pre·sbý·te·roi) na congregação. Que estes dois termos se referem à mesma posição na congregação pode ser visto no caso de Paulo chamar "os anciãos da congregação" de Éfeso a Mileto para que se reunissem ali com ele. Ao exortar esses "anciãos", ele declara: "Prestai atenção a vós mesmos e a todo o rebanho, entre o qual o espírito santo vos designou superintendentes [forma de e·pí·sko·poi] para pastorear a congregação de Deus." (At 20:17, 28) O apóstolo esclarece isso adicionalmente ao escrever a Tito, considerando o assunto de fazer designações "de anciãos numa cidade após outra". Numa evidente referência a tais, ele usa o termo "superintendente" (e·pí·sko·pos). (Tit 1:5, 7) Ambos os termos, portanto, referem-se à mesma posição, pre·sbý·te·ros indicando as qualidades maduras do designado, e e·pí·sko·pos os deveres inerentes na designação. — Veja ANCIÃO.

Não havia número fixo de superintendentes numa congregação. O número de superintendentes dependia do número dos habilitados e acreditados como "anciãos" na respectiva congregação. Que havia diversos superintendentes naquela única congregação de Éfeso é evidente. Do mesmo modo, ao escrever aos cristãos filipenses, Paulo mencionou os "superintendentes" ali (Fil 1:1), indicando que serviam como corpo, que supervisionavam os assuntos daquela congregação.

A consideração das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs indica que os superintendentes, ou anciãos, em qualquer congregação, tinham autoridade igual. Nas suas cartas congregacionais, Paulo não destaca uma só pessoa como o superintendente, nem são essas cartas dirigidas a determinada pessoa como tal. A carta aos filipenses foi dirigida "a todos os santos em união com Cristo Jesus, os quais estão em Filipos, junto com superintendentes e servos ministeriais". (Fil 1:1) Neste respeito, Manuel Guerra y Gomez observou: "Certamente, episcopos no protocolo da carta aos filipenses não pressupõe uma autoridade monárquica; antes, trata-se dum termo que menciona as pessoas de evidente estrutura plural e colegial encarregadas da direção e do governo da comunidade cristã daquela cidade macedônia. Ao mesmo tempo, os diaconos, segundo o sentido geral da palavra, são os ajudantes, os ministros dos episcopos, e, da mesma forma, estão a serviço dos crentes." — Espiscopos y Presbyteros, Burgos, Espanha, 1962, p. 320.

Habilitações do superintendente ou ancião. Para obter o cargo de superintendente, é preciso ter as seguintes habilitações: "O superintendente, portanto, deve ser irrepreensível, marido de uma só esposa, moderado nos hábitos, ajuizado, ordeiro, hospitaleiro, qualificado para ensinar, não brigão bêbedo, não espancador, mas razoável, não beligerante, não amante do dinheiro, homem que presida de maneira excelente à sua própria família, tendo os filhos em sujeição com toda a seriedade; . . . não homem recém-convertido, . . . deve ter também testemunho excelente de pessoas de fora." — 1Ti 3:1-7.

Do mesmo modo, na sua carta a Tito, ao considerar o assunto de fazer designações de anciãos, Paulo disse que, para alguém se habilitar como tal, ele tinha de estar "livre de acusação, marido de uma só esposa, tendo filhos crentes, não acusados de devassidão nem indisciplinados. Porque o superintendente tem de estar livre de acusação como mordomo de Deus, não obstinado, não irascível, não brigão bêbedo, não espancador, não ávido de ganho desonesto, mas hospitaleiro, amante da bondade, ajuizado, justo, leal, dominando a si mesmo, apegando-se firmemente à palavra fiel com respeito à sua arte de ensino, para que possa tanto exortar pelo ensino que é salutar como repreender os que contradizem". (Tit 1:5-9) As diferenças nesta última lista de habilitações evidentemente tomam em consideração as necessidades especiais das congregações em Creta, onde Tito servia. — Tit 1:10-14.

O Supremo Superintendente. Primeira Pedro 2:25 evidentemente cita Isaías 53:6 referente aos que 'como ovelhas se perdiam', dizendo Pedro então: "Mas agora voltastes para o pastor e superintendente das vossas almas." Isto deve referir-se a Jeová Deus, visto que aqueles a quem Pedro escreveu não se haviam afastado de Cristo Jesus, mas, antes, por meio dele haviam sido levados de volta a Jeová Deus, que é o Grande Pastor do seu povo. (Sal 23:1; 80:1; Je 23:3; Ez 34:12) Jeová é também superintendente, aquele que faz inspeções. (Sal 17:3) A inspeção (gr.: e·pi·sko·pé) pode estar associada com sua expressão de julgamento adverso, como no primeiro século EC, no caso de Jerusalém, que não discerniu o tempo 'de ser inspecionada [gr.: e·pi·sko·pés]'. (Lu 19:44) Ou podia ter efeito favorável e benefícios, como no caso dos que glorificam a Deus no dia "da sua inspeção [gr.: e·pi·sko·pés]". — 1Pe 2:12.

"Intrometido nos Assuntos dos Outros." O apóstolo Pedro advertiu contra ser "intrometido nos assuntos dos outros". (1Pe 4:15) Esta expressão traduz a palavra grega al·lo·tri·e·pí·sko·pos, que literalmente significa "superintendente do que é de outro". Francisco Zorell define esta palavra como "alguém que presume assumir o dever de cuidar e corrigir assuntos dos outros, alguém que imprudentemente se intromete nos assuntos de outras pessoas". — Lexicon Graecum Novi Testamenti (Léxico Grego do Novo Testamento), Paris, 1961, col. 70.

SUPIM.

1. Descendente de Benjamim, talvez através de Bela e Ir(i). (1Cr 7:6, 7, 12) A introdução de Supim nas genealogias de Manassés, em 1 Crônicas 7:15, talvez indique uma incomum relação intertribal. Em Gênesis 46:21, Supim é chamado de Mupim, possivelmente por causa da similaridade das letras no antigo alfabeto hebraico, representadas em português por s e m. O nome é também grafado Sefufã(o), e identifica o homem como fundador da família tribal, benjamita, dos sufamitas. — Núm 26:39; 1Cr 8:5.

2. Porteiro designado para o lado O do santuário. (1Cr 26:16) Visto que os últimos três caracteres do seu nome em hebraico (shup·pím) são idênticos aos últimos três caracteres do termo anterior (behth ha·'asup·pím), os peritos suspeitam tratar-se de ditografia (repetição desintencional feita por escriba), e, portanto, neste versículo, não ser o nome duma pessoa. — Veja 1Cr 26:10, 11.

SUQUINS. Força integrante do exército do rei egípcio Sisaque, que invadiu Judá durante o reinado de Roboão. (2Cr 12:2, 3) Alguns peritos acreditam que os suquins sejam mencionados em certos antigos textos egípcios e que eram de origem líbia.

SUR [Muro]. Nome geográfico, que se diz, variadamente, ser uma cidade, uma série de fortes de fronteira, uma região ou uma cordilheira. É descrito como estando "defronte do Egito", isto é, na fronteira L ou ao L do Egito. O contexto situa Sur na parte NO da península do Sinai. (Gên 25:18) Depois de Israel ter cruzado o Mar Vermelho, Moisés o conduziu das margens do mar "ao ermo de Sur". — Êx 15:22.

Anteriormente, foi numa fonte "no caminho de Sur" que o anjo de Jeová falou a Agar, escrava egípcia de Abraão (que provavelmente estava fugindo de volta para o Egito). (Gên 16:7) Mais tarde, Abraão se mudou da região de Hébron (Gên 13:18) e passou a morar entre Cades (Cades-Barneia, ao S de Berseba, na região do Negebe) e Sur, embora morasse também por um tempo em Gerar, cidade filisteia bem ao N de Cades. (Gên 20:1) As andanças dos ismaelitas, habitantes do deserto, os levaram até "Havilá, perto de Sur". (Gên 25:18) O Rei Saul travou com êxito guerra contra os amalequitas até Sur, mas no tempo de Davi, os amalequitas, junto com os gesuritas e os girzitas, ainda habitavam uma área similar. — 1Sa 15:7; 27:8.

Alguns desses textos parecem indicar mais um lugar específico do que uma região em geral. Neste caso, então, a expressão "ermo de Sur", usada apenas uma vez, pode significar o ermo nas proximidades duma cidade ou dum lugar chamado Sur. — Êx 15:22; veja a referência ao "ermo de Damasco", em 1Rs 19:15, ou ao de Zife, em 1Sa 23:14.

O significado do nome (Muro) tem induzido alguns a se empenhar em identificar Sur com a antiga muralha defensiva ao longo do istmo de Suez, a qual, segundo indicam inscrições egípcias, foi construída bem cedo na história daquela nação. Outros acham que o termo se aplica a uma série de fortalezas egípcias ao longo da fronteira oriental do Egito, encarando a península do Sinai. No entanto, Êxodo 15:22 indica um lugar no lado L do Mar Vermelho, portanto, um lugar fora do Egito, em vez de dentro das suas fronteiras. Por este motivo deu-se também a sugestão de que o nome Sur (Muro) identifica a parte NO da cordilheira que cobre grande parte da península do Sinai. Vistos do lado egípcio do golfo de Suez, os penhascos brancos desta longa cordilheira têm a aparência dum muro, ou duma barreira. Pode ter havido um lugar ou cidade chamada Sur nesta cordilheira, ou ao sopé dela, talvez a última cidade árabe antes de se atravessar a fronteira egípcia. Todavia, a identificação definitiva aguarda mais evidência.

SURDEZ. Incapacidade parcial ou total de ouvir, frequentemente causada por doença, acidente ou ruído alto, quer intenso, quer repentino ou prolongado. Em alguns casos, há quem nasça surdo. Outra causa da surdez mencionada na Bíblia é possessão demoníaca. (Mr 9:25-29) A raiz do termo hebraico hhe·résh ('surdo'; Is 35:5) refere-se quer à surdez por parte do objeto, quer ao silêncio por parte do sujeito, e é traduzido diversamente 'ser [ou: ficar] surdo' e "ficar calado". — Sal 28:1; 35:22 n; 50:3 n; Miq 7:16.

Jeová, o Criador do ouvido (Pr 20:12), exigia que seu povo mostrasse consideração para com os surdos. Os israelitas não deviam zombar das pessoas surdas, nem invocar o mal sobre elas, porque os surdos não podem defender-se de declarações que não podem ouvir. — Le 19:14; compare isso com Sal 38:13, 14.

As palavras em Êxodo 4:11, onde Jeová refere a si mesmo como 'designando o surdo', não significam que ele seja responsável por todos os casos de surdez. No entanto, Jeová pode fazer com que alguém se torne literalmente surdo, mudo ou cego por um motivo ou propósito específico. O pai de João, o Batizador, foi tornado temporariamente mudo por não ter crido. (Lu 1:18-22, 62-64) Deus pode também 'designar' que pessoas se tornem espiritualmente surdas por deixá-las permanecer neste estado quando o querem assim. — Veja Is 6:9, 10.

Jesus Cristo, durante o seu ministério, demonstrou milagrosos poderes curativos por restabelecer em diversas ocasiões a audição de fisicamente surdos. (Mt 11:5; Mr 7:32-37; Lu 7:22) Isto dá a certeza de que, sob o seu domínio sobre a terra, serão eliminados todos os padecimentos, inclusive a surdez.

O salmista comparou os iníquos, que se negam a escutar a orientação, a uma naja que se faz de surda para com os encantadores. (Sal 58:3-5) De modo similar, nos dias de Isaías, os israelitas, embora tivessem ouvidos, eram como surdos por serem vagarosos em escutar e acatar a palavra de Jeová. (Is 42:18-20; 43:8) Todavia, depois do predito restabelecimento após o exílio, o povo de Deus deixaria de ser espiritualmente surdo. Ouviria a palavra de Jeová, isto é, prestaria atenção a ela. (Is 29:18; 35:5) Jesus Cristo, enquanto na terra, abriu muitos ouvidos ao entendimento, habilitando os curados a agir segundo o que ouviam. — Mt 13:16, 23.

SUSA. Veja SUSÃ.

SUSÃ. Cidade antiga, cujas ruínas se encontram entre o rio Carque e o rio Ab-i-Diz, na margem L do Sha‘ur, a uns 350 km ao L de Babilônia. Neste lugar há quatro elevações maiores de terreno. A atual aldeia Shush fica abaixo das encostas da acrópole, a elevação mais importante. Susã, ou uma parte fortificada da cidade, "Susã, o castelo", foi o lugar de uma das visões do profeta Daniel (Da 8:2), o cenário dos eventos narrados no livro de Ester (Est 1:2, 5, 6; 2:3, 5, 8, 21; 3:2, 15; 8:14; 9:12-15), e lugar onde Neemias serviu como copeiro durante o reinado de Artaxerxes (Longímano, filho de Xerxes I). — Ne 1:1; 2:1; veja CASTELO; ELÃO N.º 1; PÉRSIA, PERSAS (Capitais persas).

Há evidência de que Susã (também chamada Susa; Esd 4:9) foi a capital do antigo Elão. No sétimo século AEC, o Rei Asenapar (Assurbanipal), da Assíria, conquistou Susã e transferiu habitantes da cidade para Samaria. (Esd 4:9, 10) Susã, sob o domínio persa, era uma cidade régia. No quarto século AEC, Susã caiu diante de Alexandre, o Grande, e por fim sofreu declínio. Hoje, o lugar é ocupado apenas por um monte de ruínas.

Arqueólogos descobriram as ruínas dum palácio, que se pensa ser o iniciado pelo rei persa, Dario I, e completado por seu filho Xerxes I (que se crê ter sido Assuero, marido de Ester). Os painéis de tijolos esmaltados, coloridos, e os capitéis de pedra, fornecem alguns indícios da sua anterior glória. Uma inscrição de Dario I sobre a construção do palácio reza: 'Este é o palácio hadish que construí em Susa. Sua ornamentação foi trazida de longe. As profundezas da terra foram escavadas, até que eu atingi o leito rochoso. Quando se fazia a escavação, amontoava-se cascalho, uma parte tendo dezoito metros, e a outra nove metros de profundidade. Sobre tal cascalho eu construí um palácio. E que a terra tenha sido escavada, e o cascalho compactado e formados tijolos de barro em moldes, isso os babilônios fizeram. O cedro foi trazido dum monte chamado Líbano; os assírios o levaram para Babilônia, e de Babilônia os cários e os jônios o trouxeram para Susa. Teca foi trazida de Gandara e da Carmânia. O ouro que foi aqui utilizado foi trazido de Sardes e da Bactriana. A pedra — lápis-lazúli e cornalina — foi trazida de Sogdiana. A turquesa foi trazida da Corásmia. A prata e o cobre foram trazidos do Egito. A ornamentação com que as paredes foram adornadas foi trazida da Jônia. O marfim foi trazido da Etiópia, da Índia e da Aracósia. As colunas de pedra foram trazidas dum lugar chamado Abiraduxe, no Elão. Os artesãos que poliram as pedras eram jônios e sardianos. Os ourives que trabalharam o ouro eram medos e egípcios. Os que trabalharam as incrustações eram sardianos e egípcios. Os que trabalharam com tijolos cozidos (com gravuras) eram babilônios. Os homens que adornaram a muralha eram medos e egípcios. Aqui em Susa foi ordenado uma obra esplêndida; e resultou ser mui esplêndida mesmo.' — History of the Persian Empire (História do Império Persa), de A. T. Olmstead, 1948, p. 168, veja ARQUEOLOGIA (Pérsia).

SUSANA. Uma das muitas mulheres fiéis que, com os seus próprios recursos, cuidavam das necessidades de Jesus e dos seus 12 apóstolos durante o ministério galileu de Jesus, em 31 EC. — Lu 8:1-3.

SUSI [duma raiz que significa "cavalo"]. Pai de Gadi, que representou a tribo de Manassés quando se espiou a Terra da Promessa. — Núm 13:2, 11.

SUTELA.

1. Filho de Efraim e antepassado da família tribal dos sutelaítas. (1Cr 7:20; Núm 26:35-37) Sutela não é mencionado no texto massorético de Gênesis 46:20, mas uma forma do seu nome se encontra entre os diversos nomes acrescentados ali na Septuaginta grega.

2. Descendente efraimita do N.º 1. — 1Cr 7:20, 21.

SUTELAÍTAS [De (Pertencentes a) Sutela]. Os descendentes da família de Sutela; acham-se incluídos entre os registrados da tribo de Efraim por ocasião do segundo censo no ermo. — Núm 26:35, 37.

T

TAÃ, TAANITAS [De (Pertencentes a) Taã]. Taã foi o fundador de uma família tribal efraimita, os taanitas. (Núm 26:35) Não há certeza de que ele seja o Taã mencionado em 1 Crônicas 7:25.

TAANAQUE. Cidade-enclave de Manassés, no território de Issacar (Jos 17:11; 1Cr 7:29), que foi consignada aos levitas coatitas. (Jos 21:20, 25) Sob as ordens de Josué, os israelitas derrotaram o rei de Taanaque. (Jos 12:7, 21) Mas os manassitas deixaram de expulsar os cananeus desta e de outras cidades. Por fim, porém, esses cananeus foram submetidos a trabalhos forçados. (Jz 1:27, 28) Nos dias do juiz Baraque, as forças de Jabim, rei de Hazor, conduzidas pelo chefe de seu exército, Sísera, foram derrotadas em Taanaque. (Jz 5:19) Durante o reinado de Salomão, esta cidade achava-se no distrito atribuído a Baana, um dos 12 prepostos encarregados de suprir alimentos para a mesa real. (1Rs 4:7, 12) A evidência arqueológica obtida em Taanaque e o relevo numa parede dum templo em Carnac indicam que a cidade foi tomada pelo Faraó Sisaque quando este invadiu a Palestina, no quinto ano do reinado do filho e sucessor de Salomão, Roboão. — 2Cr 12:2-4.

Taanaque é identificada com Tel Taʽanakh, cerca de 8 km ao SEE de Megido e no extremo S da planície de Jezreel (ʽEmeq Yizreʽel). Essa localidade ocupava importante posição em pelo menos duas rotas comerciais, uma que levava à planície de Aco e a outra à planície de Sarom.

TAANATE-SILO. Uma localidade na fronteira de Efraim. (Jos 16:5, 6) É identificada com Khirbet Taʽna el-Fauqa, cerca de 10 km a ESE de Siquém.

TAÁS [Pele de Foca]. Filho de Naor, irmão de Abraão, por meio de sua concubina Reumá. — Gên 22:23, 24.

TAATE [De uma raiz que significa "inferior; debaixo"].

1. Descendente de Efraim por meio de Sutela. — 1Cr 7:20.

2. Outro efraimita, aparentado com o N.º 1. — 1Cr 7:20.

3. Levita coatita; antepassado de Samuel e Hemã. — 1Cr 6:22, 24, 33, 37, 38.

4. Lugar de acampamento de Israel, no ermo; sua localização é desconhecida. — Núm 33:26, 27.

TABAOTE [Anéis de Sinete]. Antepassado de uma família de netineus. Alguns de seus descendentes retornaram a Jerusalém com Zorobabel. — Esd 2:1, 2, 43; Ne 7:46.

TABATE. Depois de terem sido atacados pelas forças de Gideão, os inimigos midianitas fugiram "até as cercanias de Abel-Meolá, junto a Tabate". (Jz 7:12, 19-22) Tabate é hipoteticamente identificada com Ras Abu Tabat, cerca de 5 km ao L do rio Jordão e 10 km ao N de Sucote. Abel-Meolá aparentemente ficava ao O do Jordão, e é mencionada como estando "junto a ["defronte de", BJ] Tabate". — Veja ABEL-MEOLÁ.

TABEEL [Bom É Deus].

1. Pai de um homem a quem os reis de Israel e da Síria intencionavam colocar no trono em Jerusalém, se capturassem a capital de Judá. O nome do filho não é fornecido. O incidente ocorreu durante o período em que os reinados de Acaz e de Peca coincidiram (entre cerca de 762 e 759 AEC). — Is 7:5, 6.

2. Coautor de uma carta em aramaico enviada ao rei persa Artaxerxes, em oposição à obra de reconstrução dos judeus em Jerusalém, e que resultou numa paralisação da reconstrução do templo. — Esd 4:7, 24.

TABERÁ [Queima [isto é, uma conflagração; incêndio]]. Lugar de acampamento dos israelitas no ermo de Sinai, cuja localização exata é desconhecida. Por causa da queixa de Israel ocorrida ali, Deus enviou um fogo que consumiu algumas pessoas na extremidade do acampamento. Mas, quando Moisés suplicou a Jeová, o incêndio "baixou", ou apagou. Este incidente deu origem ao nome "Taberá". — Núm 11:1-3; De 9:22.

TABERNÁCULO. Tenda transportável de adoração usada por Israel; às vezes também chamada de "tenda de reunião". (Êx 39:32, 40; veja TENDA DE REUNIÃO.) Em hebraico é chamada de mish·kán (residência; morada; tabernáculo), 'ó·hel (tenda) e miq·dásh (santuário). Em grego é chamado de ske·né, que significa "tenda; barraca; residência; morada". — Veja LUGAR SANTO.

O tabernáculo era um dos instrumentos centrais do arranjo de Jeová que possibilitava aos da nação de Israel se aproximarem Dele. Consistia em dois compartimentos. (ILUSTRAÇÃO, Vol. 1, p. 538) O primeiro, o Santo, continha um candelabro de ouro, o altar de ouro do incenso, a mesa dos pães da pro-posição e utensílios de ouro; e o compartimento mais recôndito, o Santíssimo, continha a Arca do Pacto, com dois querubins de ouro em cima da tampa. — Veja ARCA DO PACTO; SANTÍSSIMO.

Quando Foi Inaugurado. O tabernáculo ou "tenda de reunião" (chamado de "templo de Jeová", em 1Sa 1:9, e "casa de Jeová", em 1Sa 1:24), foi construído no ermo, junto ao monte Sinai, em 1512 AEC. Estava completamente erguido, com toda a sua mobília e utensílios instalados, no primeiro dia do primeiro mês, abibe ou nisã. (Êx 40) Sob a direção de Jeová, o sacerdócio foi investido naquele dia, pelo mediador Moisés, e a execução de todos os serviços de investidura levou sete dias. No oitavo dia, os sacerdotes começaram a executar suas funções oficiais. — Le caps. 8, 9; veja INVESTIDURA.

Forma e Estilo. Jeová falara a Moisés no monte, fornecendo-lhe o modelo completo do tabernáculo, ordenando-lhe: "Cuida de que faças todas as coisas segundo o seu modelo que te foi mostrado no monte." Isto servia para prover uma "sombra das coisas celestiais", e, por conseguinte, tinha de ser preciso nos mínimos detalhes. (He 8:5) Jeová inspirou Bezalel e Ooliabe, de modo que o trabalho, que contou com a colaboração de outros, tanto homens como mulheres, pudesse ser efetuado com perfeição, segundo as instruções fornecidas por Moisés. O resultado foi: "Segundo tudo o que Jeová mandara a Moisés, assim fizeram os filhos de Israel todo o serviço." (Êx 39:42; 35:25, 26; 36:1, 4) Os materiais foram providos por meio de contribuições voluntárias do povo. (Êx 36:3, 6, 7) Sem dúvida o ouro, a prata e o cobre, bem como os fios, os tecidos e as peles provinham de contribuições mormente dentre aquilo que os israelitas tinham trazido do Egito. (Êx 12:34-36; veja PELE DE FOCA.) No ermo havia disponibilidade de madeira de acácia. — Veja ACÁCIA.

As medidas neste artigo baseiam-se no côvado de 44,5 cm. Contudo, talvez se tenha usado o côvado comprido, de uns 51,8 cm. — Veja 2Cr 3:3; Ez 40:5.

Coberturas e reposteiros. O inteiro esqueleto da estrutura era coberto, primeiro com uma cobertura de linho bordada de coloridas figuras de querubins. A cobertura se dividia em duas grandes seções de cinco panos cada uma, unidas por presilhas de linho azul, que eram seguradas por colchetes de ouro. Cada pano dessa cortina tinha apenas 28 côvados (12,50 m) de comprimento, o que o deixaria pelo menos um côvado (c. 44,5 cm) acima do piso, em cada lado da estrutura. — Êx 26:1-6.

Por cima da cobertura de linho era colocada uma outra cobertura de pelo de cabra, dividida em duas seções, uma de seis panos e a outra de cinco. Cada um dos 11 panos tinha 30 côvados (13,40 m) de comprimento. Sobre esta era colocada a cobertura de peles de carneiro tingidas de vermelho, e, por último, uma cobertura de peles de foca que, pelo visto, chegava até o chão, e, evidentemente, dotada de cordas para que a cobertura pudesse ser presa ao chão por meio de estacas. — Êx 26:7-14.

Outra cortina colocada na parte de dentro, entre o Santo e o Santíssimo, era bordada de querubins (Êx 36:35), e o reposteiro para a entrada ao L era de lã colorida e de linho. — Êx 36:37.

Dimensões. A Bíblia descreve o tabernáculo (evidentemente as medidas internas) como tendo 30 côvados (13,40 m) de comprimento e dez côvados (4,50 m) de altura. (Veja Êx 26:16-18.) Evidentemente tinha também 10 côvados de largura. (Veja Êx 26:22-24.) A largura pode ser calculada da seguinte maneira: a parte dos fundos, ou parede O, era construída com seis armações de painel de um côvado e meio cada uma (totalizando 9 côvados) e duas armações de painel, chamadas escoras de esquina, que evidentemente eram posicionadas de modo que cada uma acrescentasse meio côvado à dimensão interna. O perito judeu Rashi (1040-1105 EC), comentando sobre Êxodo 26:23, observou: "As oito tábuas foram dispostas em fileira, só que toda a largura dessas duas [escoras de esquina] não aparecia no interior do Tabernáculo, mas apenas meio côvado de um lado e meio côvado de outro podiam ser vistos no interior, chegando assim à largura de dez côvados. O côvado remanescente de uma tábua e o remanescente côvado da outra tábua coincidia com a largura de um côvado das tábuas do Tabernáculo nos lados norte e sul, de modo que no lado de fora não havia saliência." — Pentateuch With Targum Onkelos, Haphtaroth and Rashi's Commentary, Exodus (Pentateuco com Targum Onkelos, Haftarot e o Comentário de Rashi, Êxodo), traduzido para o inglês por M. Rosenbaum e A. M. Silbermann, p. 144; o grifo é dos tradutores.

O compartimento Santíssimo aparentemente era um cubo de 10 côvados de cada lado — assim como o Santíssimo do templo de Salomão, construído mais tarde, também era cúbico, com 20 côvados (8,90 m) em cada dimensão. (1Rs 6:20) O comprimento do Santo tinha o dobro de sua largura. Quanto ao comprimento do Santo do tabernáculo, os seguintes pontos são significativos: cada uma das duas seções da cobertura de linho tinha 20 côvados de largura. (Êx 26:1-5) Assim, uma seção (20 côvados) estendia-se da entrada até o lugar em que as presilhas a uniam à outra seção. A junção aparentemente se dava acima das colunas que sustentavam a cortina do Santíssimo. Daí, a outra metade da cobertura (20 côvados) servia para cobrir o Santíssimo (10 côvados), e também os fundos ou lado O do tabernáculo (10 côvados).

Armações de painel. As paredes eram de acácia, recobertas de ouro, evidentemente em forma de armações de painel (similares a armações de janela), em vez de tábuas maciças. (Êx 26:15-18) Este conceito parece lógico, por dois motivos: (1) Tábuas maciças de acácia do tamanho descrito seriam desnecessariamente pesadas, e (2) os querubins bordados na cobertura de linho suspensa sobre as tábuas ficariam ocultos, exceto os vistos no teto da estrutura, na parte interna. (Êx 26:1) Assim, parece que cada armação de painel foi construída de tal modo que os sacerdotes, no tabernáculo, pudessem ver os querubins bordados na cobertura de linho. Alguns peritos da atualidade também são da opinião de que se usou o estilo de armações de painel, em vez de o de tábuas maciças. Assim, embora o termo hebraico qé·resh seja traduzido por "tábuas" em versões mais antigas, várias traduções modernas usam a palavra "armação" ou "armação de painel". — Êx 26:15-29, AT, BLH, JB, Mo, NM, RS.

Havia 20 armações de painel no lado N e 20 no lado S. (Êx 26:18, 20) Cada armação tinha 10 côvados (4,50 m) de altura e um côvado e meio (67 cm) de largura, com espessura não especificada. Nos fundos, ou extremidade O, havia seis armações de painel, e nos cantos dos fundos, duas armações chamadas de "escoras de esquina". — Êx 26:22-24.

Em relação com os painéis de armação, a Bíblia menciona "argolas". As argolas sem dúvida eram afixadas nas armações para receberem as trancas, três fileiras das quais eram traspassadas pelas argolas para segurar a estrutura. Evidentemente, a fileira de cima e a de baixo consistiam de duas trancas cada uma, pois apenas a tranca do meio é descrita como "passando de uma extremidade à outra extremidade". Essas trancas eram de madeira recoberta de ouro. — Êx 26:26-29.

Colunas e alicerce. Cinco colunas recobertas de ouro eram postas na frente, ou entrada, e quatro de tais colunas sustentavam a cortina que separava o Santo do Santíssimo. (Êx 26:32, 37) O alicerce de toda a estrutura consistia em 100 pedestais com encaixes para receber espigas na base das 48 armações de painel (dois pedestais para cada armação de painel; quatro pedestais serviam para as quatro colunas que separavam o Santo do Santíssimo). Estes pedestais eram todos de prata (Êx 26:19-25, 32), cada pedestal pesando um talento (c. 34 kg). (Êx 38:27) Adicionalmente, havia cinco pedestais de cobre para as colunas na entrada. (Êx 26:37) Considerando o peso da prata, esses pedestais evidentemente não seriam muito grossos, mas seriam mais como placas pesadas.

O pátio. O pátio que cercava o tabernáculo tinha 100 por 50 côvados (44,50 x 22,20 m). A cortina, semelhante a uma cerca em sua volta, tinha 5 côvados (2,20 m) de altura. Vinte colunas de cobre constituíam os suportes para cada lado, e dez para cada extremidade da área. O reposteiro da entrada ao L era feito de linho e tecido colorido, e tinha 20 côvados (8,90 m) de lado a lado. — Êx 38:9-20.

Custo estimado. O valor do ouro e da prata usados na construção do tabernáculo estaria em torno de US$ 12.000.000, e o custo do inteiro tabernáculo possivelmente mais de US$ 13.000.000, à base dos valores atuais. — Êx 38:24-29.

Possíveis anexos. Parece que, com o tempo, foram construídas câmaras, para serem usadas pelos sacerdotes, no pátio do tabernáculo, provavelmente nas laterais da estrutura. (1Sa 3:3) Também, talvez se tenham erguido barracas no pátio, para que alguns daqueles que ofereciam sacrifícios de participação em comum pudessem comer os sacrifícios, junto com sua família.

Sua Localização no Acampamento de Israel. (DIAGRAMA, Vol. 1 p. 538) O tabernáculo era o centro do acampamento de Israel. Os que acampavam mais próximos a ele, eram as famílias da tribo de Levi, os zeladores da estrutura. Ao L ficava a família sacerdotal de Arão, ao S os coatitas (dentre os quais a família de Arão fora escolhida para o sacerdócio [Êx 6:18-20]), ao O os gersonitas, e ao N os meraritas. (Núm 3:23, 29, 35, 38) Mais distante ficavam as outras 12 tribos: Judá, Issacar e Zebulão ao L; Rubem, Simeão e Gade ao S; Efraim, Manassés e Benjamim ao O; e Dã, Aser e Naftali ao N. (Núm 2:1-31) De qualquer parte do acampamento sempre se podia localizar facilmente o tabernáculo por causa da nuvem, de dia, e do fogo, à noite, que pairavam sobre o Santíssimo, onde ficava a Arca do Pacto. — Êx 40:36-38

Como Era Transportado. Ao transportarem o tabernáculo, sua mobília e seus utensílios, os sacerdotes cobriam os utensílios do lugar santo; e daí os coatitas carregavam esses itens cobertos, ou seja, a Arca do Pacto, a mesa dos pães da proposição, o candelabro e os altares. Eles transportavam estas coisas no ombro, andando. (Núm 4:4-15; 7:9) Os gersonitas, com duas carroças, transportavam os panos da tenda (exceto a cortina do Santíssimo, que era colocada sobre a Arca [Núm 4:5]), as coberturas do tabernáculo, os cortinados do pátio, os reposteiros, as cordas relacionadas com a tenda e certos utensílios de serviço. (Núm 4:24-26; 7:7) Os meraritas, com quatro carroças, cuidavam dos itens bem pesados, incluindo as armações de painel e as colunas, os pedestais de encaixe e as respectivas estacas e cordas de tenda. — Núm 4:29-32; 7:8.

História. Depois de Israel cruzar o rio Jordão e entrar na Terra da Promessa, o tabernáculo foi erguido em Gilgal. (Jos 4:19) Foi transferido para Silo, durante a época da divisão da terra (Jos 18:1), onde permaneceu durante anos (1Sa 1:3, 24) antes de ser levado para Nobe. (1Sa 21:1-6) Mais tarde, ficou em Gibeão. (1Cr 21:29) Quando Davi levou a Arca do Pacto para Sião, ela não tinha estado no tabernáculo já por muitos anos. Mas, até que o templo fosse construído por Salomão, os sacrifícios ainda eram oferecidos no tabernáculo em Gibeão, sendo chamado de "o grande alto". (1Rs 3:4) Após a construção do templo, Salomão fez com que o tabernáculo fosse trazido a Jerusalém e, aparentemente, guardado ali. — 1Rs 8:4; 2Cr 5:5.

Uso Figurado. O apóstolo Paulo lança luz sobre o significado pictórico do tabernáculo. Num contexto que considera o modelo representado pelo tabernáculo e os ofícios ali realizados, fala de Jesus Cristo como "servidor público do lugar santo e da verdadeira tenda, que Jeová erigiu, e não algum homem". (He 8:2) Mais adiante, ele diz: "Cristo veio como sumo sacerdote das boas coisas que se realizaram por intermédio da tenda maior e mais perfeita, não feita por mãos, isto é, não desta criação." (He 9:11) A tenda no ermo era um arranjo estabelecido por ordem de Deus, para se ter acesso a Ele em verdadeira adoração, um arranjo para a remoção típica de pecados. Sendo uma ilustração (He 9:9), prefiguraria o arranjo que Deus estabeleceu, em que podia servir o grande Sumo Sacerdote, Jesus Cristo, o qual compareceria no céu perante seu Pai, com o valor de seu sacrifício, que pode realmente remover pecados. (He 9:24-26; veja TEMPLO.) Por meio deste arranjo, homens fiéis podem desfrutar de verdadeira aproximação a Deus. (He 4:16) O celestial "santuário da tenda do testemunho", ou tabernáculo, foi observado em visão pelo apóstolo João. — Re 15:5.

O apóstolo Pedro, como filho de Deus, gerado pelo espírito, e que tinha a esperança de vida celestial em associação com Cristo Jesus, referiu-se a seu corpo carnal como "tabernáculo". Era uma 'habitação', mas apenas temporária, uma vez que Pedro sabia que a sua morte era iminente e que a sua ressurreição não seria na carne, mas sim no espírito. — 2Pe 1:13-15; 1Jo 3:2; 1Co 15:35-38, 42-44.

TABOR.

1. Notável monte do território de Issacar, em sua fronteira norte. (Jos 19:17, 22) Em árabe, é chamado de Jebel et-Tur; em hebraico, Har Tavor. Fica a cerca de 20 km ao O da ponta sul do mar da Galileia, e uns 8 km ao ESE da cidade de Nazaré.

Separado de outros montes, o Tabor ascende abruptamente do vale de Jezreel a uma altitude de uns 562 m acima do nível do mar. Visto do ONO, parece-se a um cone truncado, e, do SO, ao segmento duma esfera. Seu cume, uma área elíptica um tanto plana, de uns 400 m de largura de N a S e o dobro disso de L a O, oferece uma vista magnífica em todas as direções. A impressionante preeminência deste monte provavelmente explica por que o salmista menciona o Tabor e o monte Hermom juntos como notáveis exemplos das majestosas obras do Criador. (Sal 89:12) Jeová também usou a notável imponência do Tabor — que se ergue sozinho no vale de Jezreel — para ilustrar o grande impacto que Nabucodonosor causaria quando invadisse o Egito com poderosa força militar. — Je 46:13, 18.

O monte Tabor ascende abruptamente do vale de Jezreel.

O Tabor tornou-se especialmente famoso quando Baraque, sob a direção de Deus, congregou 10.000 homens das tribos de Naftali e Zebulão contra Sísera e seu exército, que incluía 900 carros com "foices de ferro". A um dado sinal, Baraque e suas forças se precipitaram rapidamente pelas encostas do Tabor, e, depois que Jeová pôs os cananeus em confusão, os israelitas obtiveram uma decisiva vitória sobre as forças fugitivas de Sísera. — Jz 4:4-16.

Alguns anos depois, o Tabor testemunhou a matança dos irmãos de Gideão por Zeba e Zalmuna, reis de Midiã. (Jz 8:18, 19) Em meados do oitavo século AEC, as infiéis casas sacerdotal e real de Israel eram "como uma rede estendida sobre Tabor", utilizando possivelmente esse monte ao O do Jordão como centro de idolatria, a fim de enlaçar os israelitas; Mispá pode ter sido assim utilizada ao L do Jordão. — Os 5:1.

O cume do Tabor propiciava uma posição de controle e um lugar muitíssimo apropriado para uma cidade fortificada. As ruínas mostram que uma cidade desse tipo floresceu ali antes e depois do primeiro século EC. Este fato permite questionar a tradição de que Tabor foi o local da transfiguração de Jesus, pois os relatos dizem que Jesus e seus três companheiros achavam-se no monte "à parte", "a sós". O monte Hermom é, mais provavelmente, aquele "alto monte", e acha-se próximo de Cesareia de Filipe, nas cabeceiras do Jordão, onde Jesus estava pouco antes da transfiguração. — Mt 17:1, 2; Mr 8:27; 9:2.

2. Uma das cidades no território de Zebulão dadas aos filhos levíticos de Merari. A sua localização hoje é desconhecida. — 1Cr 6:1, 77.

3. "A árvore grande de Tabor" presumivelmente ficava no território de Benjamim. Era um ponto de referência ao qual Samuel apontou ao dar instruções a Saul após a unção deste, local em que Saul encontraria três homens a caminho de Betel. A sua localização é desconhecida hoje. — 1Sa 10:1-3.

TABRIMOM [Bom É Rimom [o deus assírio das tempestades]]. Pai do rei sírio Ben-Hadade I; filho de Heziom. — 1Rs 15:18.

TAÇA. Veja VASOS.

TADEU. Apóstolo de Jesus Cristo. (Mt 10:2, 3; Mr 3:18) Parece que em outros lugares ele é chamado de "Judas, filho de Tiago". — Lu 6:16; Jo 14:22; At 1:13; veja JUDAS N.º 3.

TADMOR. Lugar no ermo, onde Salomão fez obras de construção algum tempo depois de 1017 AEC. (2Cr 8:1, 4) Tadmor geralmente é identificada com a cidade conhecida pelos gregos e romanos como Palmira. Suas ruínas encontram-se num oásis na extremidade norte do deserto da Síria, a uns 210 km ao NE de Damasco. Um vilarejo próximo ainda hoje é chamado de Tudmur pelos árabes. Se for corretamente identificada com Palmira, Tadmor pode ter servido como cidade-guarnição para defender a distante fronteira norte do reino de Salomão, e também como importante parada de caravanas. — Veja TAMAR N.º 4.

TAFATE. Filha do Rei Salomão e esposa de um de seus 12 prepostos. — 1Rs 4:7, 11.

TAFNES, I. Cidade do Egito várias vezes mencionada junto com outras cidades do norte (Baixo) Egito, tais como Nofe (Mênfis), Om (Heliópolis), e Pi-Besete (Bubástis).

Nos últimos anos do reino de Judá, o profeta Jeremias coerentemente alertou seu povo a não fazer alianças políticas com o Egito nem confiar no Egito como ajuda contra o poder ascendente de Babilônia. Nofe (Mênfis), a capital egípcia, e Tafnes são mencionadas como 'se alimentando de [Judá e de Jerusalém], no alto da cabeça', em resultado da apostasia dos judeus. Qualquer apoio obtido do Egito era, sem dúvida, a um elevado custo para os líderes reais de Judá; mas, eles ficariam envergonhados do Egito, assim como se tinham envergonhado da Assíria. — Je 2:1, 2, 14-19, 36.

Um Restante Foge para Lá. Depois de Babilônia ter conquistado Judá, em 607 AEC, e o subsequente assassinato de Gedalias, o restante dos judeus desceu ao Egito, levando junto o profeta Jeremias. O primeiro local mencionado em que eles chegaram (ou se fixaram) no Egito é Tafnes. (Je 43:5-7) Isto evidentemente situaria Tafnes na região oriental do Delta, isto é, no canto NE do Baixo Egito. Alguns dos refugiados se fixaram em Tafnes. (Je 44:1, 7, 8) Ao chegar a Tafnes, Jeremias encenou um quadro profético sob a direção de Jeová, colocando pedras na argamassa do "terraço de tijolos à entrada da casa de Faraó, em Tafnes", na presença de outros judeus. Daí, procla-mou que Nabucodonosor viria e poria seu trono e estenderia sua tenda estatal diretamente por cima dessas pedras. — Je 43:8-13; compare isso com 46:13, 14.

Na distante Babilônia (no 27.º ano do primeiro exílio, isto é, em 591 AEC), o profeta Ezequiel também predisse que Nabucodonosor conquistaria o Egito e que, 'em Tafnes o dia realmente ficaria escuro', pois Jeová quebraria ali as cangas e o orgulho da força do Egito. Esta declaração e a referência de Ezequiel às "aldeias dependentes" de Tafnes, indicam que a cidade era importante e um tanto grande. — Ez 29:19; 30:1, 2, 10-18.

Suposta Origem do Nome. Alguns tradutores acreditam que o nome Tafnes significa (em egípcio) "a Fortaleza de Penhase", sendo Penhase um general da cidade sulina de Tebas, que derrotou elementos rebeldes na região do Delta no Egito, aparentemente na última parte do segundo milênio AEC.

A Septuaginta grega traduz Tafnes por Táf·nas, e crê-se em geral que esse nome seja o mesmo que o de uma importante cidade fortificada na fronteira oriental do Egito, chamada Dafnae pelos escritores gregos do período clássico. Por isso alguns geógrafos identificam Tafnes com Tell Defneh, a cerca de 50 km a SSO de Port Said e uns 45 km a OSO de Pelúsio, a suposta localização de Sim.

TAFNES, II. Esposa do faraó egípcio que era contemporâneo de Davi e Salomão. A irmã de Tafnes foi dada em casamento a Hadade, opositor de Salomão. Tafnes criou Genubate, filho deste casamento, junto com seus próprios filhos, na casa de Faraó. — 1Rs 11:19, 20.

TAGARELICE, CALÚNIA. Tagarelice é fútil conversa pessoal; rumor infundado. Calúnia é difamação, em geral maliciosa, seja oral, seja escrita.

Nem toda tagarelice é má ou prejudicial, embora possa sê-lo. Às vezes, são comentários elogiosos a respeito de uma ou mais pessoas; ou pode ser o simples relato de algo trivial ou não objetável sobre outros, por interesse humano. Mas é fácil degenerar-se em conversa prejudicial e problemática, pois a tagarelice é conversa fútil. As Escrituras desaconselham a linguagem fútil, indicando que a língua é difícil de domar e que "constitui um mundo de injustiça entre os nossos membros, pois mancha todo o corpo e incendeia a roda da vida natural". Dá-se ênfase adicional à sua qualidade destrutiva, pois o escritor bíblico prossegue: "E é incendiada pela Geena." (Tg 3:6) Muitas vezes se ressalta o perigo da conversa sem proveito e fútil. Tal linguagem é relacionada com a estupidez ou tolice (Pr 15:2); é um laço, e pode levar o tagarela à ruína. (Pr 13:3; 18:7) "Na abundância de palavras não falta transgressão", diz o provérbio, aconselhando no sentido de que manter os lábios sob controle significa ser discreto. (Pr 10:19) "Quem guarda a sua boca e a sua língua está guardando a sua alma das aflições", é um aviso contra o falar irrefletido, sem proveito e fútil. — Pr 21:23.

"É da abundância do coração que a boca fala", disse Jesus Cristo. (Mt 12:34) Assim, o costumeiro assunto de conversa duma pessoa indica em que o seu coração se fixa. As Escrituras instam-nos a salvaguardar o coração e a pensar e a falar sobre coisas verdadeiras, sérias, justas, castas, amáveis, coisas de que se fala bem, virtuosas e louváveis. (Pr 4:23; Fil 4:8) Jesus Cristo disse: "O que sai da boca é o que avilta o homem", e passou a citar "raciocínios iníquos" e "falsos testemunhos" entre as coisas que saem da boca mas que, na verdade, procedem do coração. — Mt 15:11, 19.

A tagarelice pode levar à calúnia, tornando-se desastrosa para o caluniador. A sabedoria das palavras em Eclesiastes 10:12-14 é bem evidente: "Os lábios do estúpido o engolem. O início das palavras da sua boca é estultícia, e o fim posterior da sua boca é doidice calamitosa. E o estulto fala muitas palavras."

Tagarelice é conversa que revela coisas sobre as ações e os assuntos de outras pessoas. Pode ser um rumor infundado, até mesmo uma mentira, e, ainda que o tagarela talvez não saiba que o rumor é falso, não obstante o divulga, tornando-se assim responsável de propagar uma mentira. O tagarela talvez fale a respeito das falhas e dos erros de alguém. Mas, mesmo sendo verdade o que se diz, o tagarela está errado e revela falta de amor. O provérbio diz: "Quem encobre uma transgressão está procurando amor, e aquele que continua falando sobre um assunto separa os que estão familiarizados uns com os outros." — Pr 17:9.

O apóstolo Paulo deu forte admoestação ao superintendente Timóteo quanto à conduta das viúvas jovens que não tinham família para cuidar e que não se ocupavam em ministrar a outros. Disse ele: "Aprendem também a estar desocupadas, vadiando pelas casas; sim, e não somente desocupadas, mas também tagarelas e intrometidas nos assuntos dos outros, falando de coisas de que não deviam." (1Ti 5:13) Tal ação é conduta desordeira. O mesmo apóstolo falou sobre alguns na congregação de Tessalônica que 'andavam desordeiramente entre eles, não trabalhando nada, mas intrometendo-se no que não lhes dizia respeito'. (2Te 3:11) O apóstolo Pedro coloca o "intrometido nos assuntos dos outros" em péssima companhia — junto com o assassino, o ladrão e o malfeitor. — 1Pe 4:15.

Por outro lado, não é tagarelice nem calúnia, e tampouco é errado relatar àqueles que têm a autoridade e o dever de supervisionar e corrigir as coisas as condições que influem sobre uma congregação. Vê-se isso no registro bíblico sobre a congregação cristã na antiga Corinto. Dissensões e dar indevida honra a homens estavam gerando atitudes sectárias ali, destruindo a união congregacional. Alguns membros da casa de certa Cloe, que estavam a par disso e se preocupavam com o bem-estar espiritual da congregação, relataram tais fatos ao então ausente apóstolo Paulo, que agiu prontamente, escrevendo de Éfeso conselhos corretivos à congregação. — 1Co 1:11.

Qual é a diferença entre tagarelice e calúnia?

Ao passo que a tagarelice, em alguns casos, pode ser mais ou menos inofensiva (embora possa virar calúnia ou conduzir a esta), a calúnia sempre é prejudicial e sempre causa feridas e contendas. Pode, ou não, ter motivação maldosa. Seja como for, o caluniador se coloca em má posição perante Deus, pois 'criar contendas entre irmãos' é uma das coisas que Deus odeia. (Pr 6:16-19) A palavra grega para "caluniador" ou "acusador" é di·á·bo·los. Esta palavra também é usada na Bíblia como título de Satanás, "o Diabo", o grande caluniador de Deus. (Jo 8:44; Re 12:9, 10; Gên 3:2-5) Isto indica a fonte de tal acusação difamatória.

A calúnia é uma pedra de tropeço para outros, especialmente para o caluniado. A lei de Deus a Israel ordenava: "Não deves estar andando entre o teu povo com o objetivo de caluniar. Não te deves pôr de pé contra o sangue de teu próximo." (Le 19:16) Frisa-se aqui a seriedade da calúnia, indicando que, em alguns casos, falsas acusações podiam realmente levar à execução. Em muitos casos, testemunhas falsas serviram para causar a morte de pessoas inocentes. — 1Rs 21:8-13; Mt 26:59, 60.

Há certos assuntos que são confidenciais, mas o caluniador se deleita em revelá-los a outros que não têm o direito de conhecê-los. (Pr 11:13) O caluniador se apraz em revelar coisas que provocam sensacionalismo. Quem ouve a calúnia também está errado e prejudica a si mesmo. (Pr 20:19; 26:22) Uma pessoa talvez se afaste de seus amigos por causa de algum comentário difamatório sobre eles, feito pelo caluniador, talvez resultando em inimizades e divisões. — Pr 16:28.

As Escrituras predizem que a destacada existência de caluniadores seria uma das características dos "últimos dias". (2Ti 3:1-3) Tais pessoas, homens ou mulheres, se estiverem presentes entre o povo de Deus, devem ser censuradas e corrigidas pelos responsáveis na congregação cristã. (1Ti 3:11; Tit 2:1-5; 3Jo 9, 10) A calúnia, ao provocar contendas (Pr 16:28), produz certas "obras da carne" (tais como ódio, rixas e divisões) que impedirão o caluniador, e outros a quem ele induz ao erro, de herdarem o Reino de Deus. (Gál 5:19-21) Embora o caluniador possa ser astuto e enganador, a sua maldade aflorará na congregação. (Pr 26:20-26) Jesus expôs o caluniador Judas (Jo 6:70) a seus apóstolos e, daí, mandou-o embora. O que ocorreu em seguida levou à destruição de Judas. — Mt 26:20-25; Jo 13:21-27; 17:12.

Uma forma de calúnia é a injúria, prática esta que justifica ser a pessoa cortada da congregação cristã, pois os injuriadores são condenados pelas Escrituras como indignos da vida. (1Co 5:11; 6:9, 10) A calúnia e a injúria não raro são associadas com a rebelião contra Deus ou contra aqueles a quem Ele constituiu ou designou devidamente para governar a congregação de seu povo. Um caso em pauta é o de Corá e seus associados, que utilizaram termos caluniosos contra Moisés e Arão, ao se rebelarem contra o arranjo de Deus. (Núm 16:1-3, 12-14) Judas traz à atenção estes rebeldes e o fim que tiveram, ao alertar os cristãos contra a linguagem abusiva, os resmungos e as queixas, e o falar "coisas bombásticas". — Ju 10, 11, 14-16.

TALENTO. A maior das unidades hebraicas de peso e de valor monetário. (Êx 38:29; 2Sa 12:30; 1Rs 10:10; 2Rs 23:33; 1Cr 29:7; 2Cr 36:3; Esd 8:26) Calculado à base de sua equivalência a 60 minas ou 3.000 siclos (Êx 38:25, 26; veja MINA), um talento pesava 34,2 kg. Em valores atuais, um talento de prata valeria US$ 6.606,00 e um talento de ouro, US$ 385.350,00.

Uma vez que uma mina equivalia a 100 dracmas gregas no primeiro século EC, um talento de 60 minas pesava 20,4 kg, menos que nos tempos das Escrituras Hebraicas. Concordemente, em valores atuais, um talento de prata do primeiro século valeria US$ 3.924,00, e um talento de ouro US$ 228.900,00.

Calculado segundo o padrão grego, as simbólicas pedras de saraiva que pesavam cerca de um talento (20,4 kg) cada uma, conforme mencionado em Revelação (Apocalipse) 16:21, seriam uma praga devastadora.

TALHADOR DE PEDRA. Veja PEDRA, TALHADOR DE.

TALITA CUMI. Expressão semítica usada por Jesus Cristo ao ressuscitar a filha de Jairo. Significa: "Donzela, digo-te: Levanta-te!" (Mr 5:41) As transliterações dessa expressão variam nos manuscritos gregos. Embora seja muitas vezes mencionada como sendo aramaica, pelo menos a última parte da frase ("cumi") poderia ser tanto hebraica como aramaica, segundo o Vine's Expository Dictionary of Old and New Testament Words (Dicionário Expositivo de Palavras do Velho e do Novo Testamento, de Vine; 1981, Vol. 4, p. 109). O lexicógrafo Gesenius deriva "talitha" da palavra hebraica para cordeiro (ta·léh). — A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament (Léxico Hebraico e Inglês do Velho Testamento), de Brown, Driver e Briggs, 1980, p. 378.

TALMAI.

1. Irmão de Aimã e Sesai, filhos de Anaque. (Núm 13:22; Jos 15:14; Jz 1:10; veja AIMÃ N.º 1.) Alguns eruditos pensam que o nome Tanmahu, encontrado numa inscrição hieróglifa representando um homem alto, de tez clara, é o equivalente egípcio para Talmai. Este nome cananeu ocorre também nos textos de Ras Xamra, do período dos juízes.

2. Filho de Amiúde; rei de Gesur. (2Sa 13:37) A filha de Talmai, Maacá, deu à luz a Absalão, filho de Davi. (2Sa 3:3; 1Cr 3:2) Depois de ter mandado matar Amnom, por este ter violentado sua irmã Tamar, Absalão fugiu para seu avô, Talmai. — 2Sa 13:28, 29, 37, 38.

TALMOM. Cabeça de uma família levítica de porteiros, do pós-exílio. Depois de ter retornado de Babilônia com Zorobabel, ele e seus irmãos foram escolhidos para morar em Jerusalém. — 1Cr 9:3, 17; Esd 2:42; Ne 7:45; 11:1, 19; 12:25.

TAMAR [Palmeira].

1. Nora de Judá, filho de Jacó. Tamar casou-se com Er, primeiro filho de Judá, mas Jeová fez com que Er morresse por causa de sua iniquidade, deixando Tamar viúva. Ela foi então dada a Onã, mas Jeová o entregou à morte porque deixou de realizar o casamento de cunhado, e Tamar continuou sendo uma viúva sem filhos. Judá procrastinou em dá-la ao seu terceiro filho. Tamar ocultou sua identidade e disfarçou-se de prostituta, para conseguir que o próprio Judá tivesse relações sexuais com ela, astutamente ficando com o anel de chancela, o cordão e a vara dele como garantia. Quando Judá soube que Tamar estava grávida, primeiro ordenou que ela fosse apedrejada e, depois, queimada. (Compare isso com Jos 7:15, 25.) Mas, ao saber que, por meio das manobras dela para conseguir um herdeiro ele se tornara o pai da criança, Judá exclamou: "Ela é mais justa do que eu." No difícil parto que se seguiu, Tamar teve gêmeos: Peres e Zerá. (Gên 38:6-30) A linhagem messiânica é traçada por meio de Peres, seu filho. — Ru 4:12, 18-22; 1Cr 2:4; Mt 1:3.

2. Linda filha do Rei Davi, e irmã germana de Absalão. (1Cr 3:9; 2Sa 13:1) Seu meio-irmão mais velho, Amnom, apaixonou-se por ela e, por meio de artimanha, conseguiu violentá-la, embora ela resistisse. Absalão consolou-a, manteve-a na casa dele e, dois anos depois, vingou Tamar por matar a Amnom. — 2Sa 13:1-33.

3. Filha de Absalão, provavelmente assim chamada por causa da tia (N.º 2). (2Sa 14:27) Como seu pai, ela era muito atraente. Talvez se tenha casado com Uriel, e, nesse caso, foi a mãe de Maacá, esposa preferida de Roboão. — 2Cr 11:20, 21; 13:1, 2.

4. Uma das várias cidades construídas (possivelmente reconstruídas ou fortificadas) pelo Rei Salomão. (1Rs 9:17-19) Tamar é mencionada em 1 Reis 9:18 como estando "no país", evidentemente indicando que se encontrava em território israelita. Yohanan Aharoni identifica Tamar com ʽAin Husb (ʽEn Hazeva), cerca de 30 km a SSO do Mar Morto. A base para esta identificação é uma comparação das descrições de fronteiras de Canaã, em Números 34:3-6; Josué 15:1-4; e Ezequiel 47:19; 48:28.

Embora o texto paralelo em 2 Crônicas 8:4 diga "Tadmor", evidentemente refere-se a outra cidade, comumente identificada com Palmira. — Veja TADMOR.

TÂMARA. Fruto da tamareira (Phoenix dactylifera), árvore comum na Palestina. As tâmaras são ovais, carnudas, adocicadas, e produzem uma única semente.

No relato bíblico, tâmaras são mencionadas apenas indiretamente. Por exemplo, a donzela sulamita descreve os negros cachos de cabelo de seu amado pastor como "cachos de tâmaras" ("basto", KJ; "crespos", Al; hebr.: tal·tal·lím; 'panículas de tâmara', Lexicon in Veteris Testamenti Libros [Léxico dos Livros do Velho Testamento], de L. Koehler e W. Baumgartner, Leiden, 1958, p. 1030). Salomão compara a estatura dela a uma palmeira, e seus seios a "cachos de tâmaras" ("cachos de uvas", Al) e a "ramos de tâmaras" (hebr.: san·sin·ním; veja Lexicon in Veteris Testamenti Libros, p. 662). — Cân 5:11; 7:7, 8; veja PALMEIRA.

TAMARGUEIRA [hebr.: 'é·shel]. A tamargueira cresce como árvore ou arbusto. Embora seu tronco seja retorcido, os ramos não raro são abastonados, dando à árvore uma aparência plumífera. As folhas sempre-verdes são diminutas, escamiformes, e comprimidas perto dos ramos, de modo que perdem bem pouca umidade pela transpiração, tornando possível que a árvore viceje em regiões desérticas e até mesmo em dunas de areia. Na primavera, as árvores florescem com espigas de diminutas flores rosas ou brancas, que dão agradável tom colorido a regiões mormente ermas. As tamargueiras, que gostam de sal, não raro crescem bem perto do oceano e em charcos salinos. Abundantes tamargueiras ao longo das margens do Jordão formam densos matagais, que constituem o habitat de animais selvagens, e, nos tempos bíblicos, talvez tenham ajudado a formar as "orgulhosas moitas junto ao Jordão", onde outrora se abrigavam leões. — Je 49:19; Za 11:3.

Embora a tamargueira em geral seja relativamente baixa, certo tipo de tamargueira (Tamarix aphylla) pode atingir 18 m de altura. Registra-se que Abraão plantou uma tamargueira em Berseba (Gên 21:33), que o Rei Saul sentou-se à sombra de uma tamargueira em Gibeá (1Sa 22:6), e que os seus ossos e os de seus filhos foram sepultados sob uma grande tamargueira, em Jabes-Gileade. — 1Sa 31:13; compare isso com 1Cr 10:12, onde se usa a palavra hebraica para "árvore grande" ('e·láh).

O Dr. Joseph Weitz, destacada autoridade em reflorestamento em Israel, disse: "A primeira árvore que Abraão plantou no solo de Berseba foi uma tamargueira. Seguindo seu exemplo, quatro anos atrás plantamos dois milhões delas na mesma área. Abraão estava certo. A tamargueira é uma das poucas árvores que descobrimos que vicejam no sul, onde a precipitação atmosférica anual é menor do que seis polegadas [150 milímetros]." — The Reader's Digest, março de 1954, p. 30.

As tamargueiras sobrevivem em áreas secas como Berseba, onde Abraão plantou uma dessas plantas.

Outro tipo de tamargueira (Tamarix mannifera), quando é perfurada por uma cochonilha (inseto), exsuda gotas de uma seiva semelhante ao mel, que é recolhida e, em alguns lugares, vendida a peregrinos como "maná". Isto não tem nenhuma relação, contudo, com o maná provido para Israel no ermo, visto que esse genuíno maná era suprido milagrosamente e apanhado do chão. — Êx 16:13-15.

TAMPA PROPICIATÓRIA. Tampa da Arca do Pacto, diante da qual o sumo sacerdote espargia sangue de ofertas pelos pecados no Dia da Expiação.

As traduções da Bíblia vertem o termo hebraico kap·pó·reth diversificadamente por "lugar de misericórdia" (KJ, RS, Yg), "propiciatório" (Al, BJ, CBC), "tampa" (Le), "tampa-da-arca" (JP), ou "tampa", "tampa propiciatória" (NM). O termo hebraico vem do radical de um verbo que significa "cobrir (pecado)".

Conforme Jeová instruiu a Moisés, o artífice Bezalel fez uma tampa de ouro puro para a arca sagrada, ou Arca do Pacto, de 2,5 côvados (111 cm) de comprimento e 1,5 côvado (67 cm) de largura. Era encimada por dois querubins de ouro, um em cada extremidade da tampa, as suas asas estendendo-se para cima, encobrindo a tampa. As faces dos querubins estavam voltadas para a tampa. A Arca foi colocada no Santíssimo do tabernáculo. — Êx 25:17-21; 37:1, 6-9.

No Dia da Expiação (yohm hak·kip·pu·rím, que significa "dia das coberturas ou propiciações" [Le 23:27, 28]), o sumo sacerdote entrava no Santíssimo e aspergia parte do sangue do novilho diante da tampa (na parte da frente ou lado L), e, daí, fazia o mesmo com o sangue do bode. (Le 16:14, 15) Assim, a tampa de ouro da Arca desempenhava um papel especial na propiciação (ou cobertura) típica dos pecados.

Quando Deus desejava comunicar-se com Moisés, ou com o sumo sacerdote, ele falava de entre os querubins que se achavam sobre a tampa propiciatória. (Êx 25:22; Núm 7:89; compare isso com Le 10:8-10; Núm 27:18-21.) Jeová disse que ele apareceria numa nuvem sobre a tampa da Arca. Parece que essa nuvem reluzia, ou brilhava, iluminando o Santíssimo. — Le 16:2; compare isso com Sal 80:1.

Em 1 Crônicas 28:11, faz-se menção do Santíssimo, o compartimento mais recôndito do templo, como "casa da kap·pó·reth". Neste caso, a palavra hebraica evidente-mente não é usada apenas para designar uma tampa, ou cobertura, duma arca, mas é empregada na função especial da tampa na propiciação de pecados. Concordemente, essa expressão é traduzida por "câmara para . . . expiação" (BV), "casa da propiciação" (So), e "casa da tampa propiciatória" (NM).

Simbólica. Em Hebreus 9:5, a palavra grega hi·la·sté·ri·on, "propiciatório", é usada para a tampa da Arca. No tipo, ou representação, a presença de Deus foi representada entre os dois querubins que estavam sobre a tampa propiciatória. (Le 16:2; Êx 25:22) O inspirado escritor do livro de Hebreus esclarece que essas coisas eram simbólicas. Assim como o sumo sacerdote que no Dia da Expiação entrava no Santíssimo com o sangue sacrificial, Cristo levou o valor de seu sacrifício, não perante uma tampa propiciatória literal, mas diante da própria presença de Jeová Deus, no céu. — Le 16:15; He 9:11-14, 24-28.

TAMUZ, I. Deidade por quem mulheres hebreias apóstatas foram vistas chorando, em Jerusalém, no sexto ano do exílio do profeta Ezequiel (612 AEC). — Ez 8:1, 3, 14.

Nos textos sumerianos, Tamuz é chamado de Dumúzi e é identificado como o consorte ou amante da deusa da fertilidade Nana (babilônia Istar). Tem-se sugerido que Tamuz originalmente era um rei que foi deificado após a sua morte. Textos sumerianos, que se crê serem do século 18 AEC, mostram que os reis da Suméria eram identificados com Dumúzi.

A respeito da identificação de Tamuz, D. Wolkstein e S. N. Kramer observaram: "Havia um bom número de 'deuses que morriam' na antiga Suméria, mas o mais bem-conhecido é Dumúzi, o bíblico Tamuz, por quem as mulheres de Jerusalém ainda pranteavam nos dias do profeta Ezequiel. Originalmente, o deus Dumúzi era um mortal governante sumeriano, cuja vida e morte causara profunda impressão nos pensadores e mitógrafos sumerianos." (Inanna, Queen of Heaven and Earth [Nana, Rainha do Céu e da Terra], Nova York, 1983, p. 124) Em adição, O. R. Gurney escreveu: "Dumúzi era originalmente um homem, um rei de Ereque . . . A natureza humana de Dumúzi é, além do mais, confirmada pela passagem mitológica em que ele diz a Nana: 'Vou conduzir-te à casa do meu deus.' Esta não é a maneira de um deus falar." — Journal of Semitic Studies (Revista de Estudos Semíticos), Vol. 7, 1962, pp. 150-152.

TAMUZ, II. O nome pós-exílico dado ao quarto mês lunar judaico do calendário sagrado, mas o décimo do calendário secular. Assim, no Targum de Jonatã, a expressão "o décimo mês", em Gênesis 8:5, é traduzida "o mês de tamuz". Tamuz era o nome de uma deidade babilônia. (Ez 8:14) O registro bíblico não aplica este nome ao quarto mês, mas simplesmente se refere ao mês pela sua ordem numérica. (Ez 1:1) Mas o nome deveras aparece na Míxena judaica (Ta'anit 4:6) e em outras obras pós-exílicas. O uso do nome pagão Tamuz, para referir-se ao quarto mês, bem como o uso de outros nomes pós-exílicos, talvez tenha sido apenas uma questão de conveniência entre os judeus. Convém lembrar que eles eram então um povo subjugado, obrigados a ter tratos e prestar contas a potências estrangeiras que os dominavam, e, por isso, não é de estranhar que usassem os mesmos nomes de meses que essas potências estrangeiras usavam. O calendário gregoriano em voga hoje tem meses com nomes dados em homenagem aos deuses Jano e Marte, e à deusa Juno, bem como de Júlio e Augusto César, não obstante, continua a ser usado pelos cristãos que estão sujeitos às "autoridades superiores". — Ro 13:1.

Este mês, tamuz, correspondia a partes de junho e julho, começando, pois, no crescente calor do verão setentrional. Já então as videiras começavam a dar seus primeiros frutos maduros. — Núm 13:20.

Foi no nono dia deste quarto mês (tamuz) que Nabucodonosor rompeu as muralhas de Jerusalém, em 607 AEC, depois de um sítio de 18 meses. (2Rs 25:3, 4; Je 39:2; 52:6, 7) Durante os 70 anos de exílio que se seguiram, os judeus jejuavam costumeiramente no dia nove do quarto mês, em memória daquele golpe contra Jerusalém. (Za 8:19) No entanto, depois da segunda destruição de Jerusalém, no ano 70 EC, o jejum era guardado no dia 17 do quarto mês, o dia em que os muros do templo foram rompidos pelo general romano, Tito. Não havia festividades escaladas por Jeová para este mês.

TANQUE. Veja LAGAR.

TANUMETE [de uma raiz que significa "consolar"]. O pai netofatita de Seraías, líder militar dos judeus deixados em Jerusalém após a deportação para a Babilônia. — 2Rs 25:23; Je 40:8.

TAPUA [Maçã (Macieira)].

1. Um dos quatro filhos de Hébron e descendente de Calebe. (1Cr 2:42, 43) Alguns sugerem que seu nome deve ser relacionado com Bete-Tapua, uma pequena cidade perto de Hébron. — Veja BETE-TAPUA.

2. Cidade da região da Sefelá, designada à tribo de Judá. (Jos 15:20, 33, 34) É, pois, diferente de Bete-Tapua, na área de Hébron. Horvat Bet Natif, dentro dos limites do abandonado vilarejo de Beit Nattif, a uns 20 km ao O de Belém, é supostamente o lugar.

3. Cidade na fronteira entre Efraim e Manassés. (Jos 16:8) A área circundante, "a terra de Tapua", foi consignada a Manassés, mas a cidade a Efraim. (Jos 17:8) En-Tapua (Jos 17:7) evidentemente se refere a um manancial vizinho (hebr.: 'Á·yin, ou En, que significa "fonte [manancial]", quando usado como prefixo) e talvez tenha sido um nome mais completo para a cidade de Tapua.

"O rei de Tapua" é mencionado entre os governantes derrotados por Josué na conquista de Canaã (Jos 12:17), e "Tapua" aqui provavelmente se refere a uma cidade efraimita. A Tapua efraimita é identificada com Tell Sheikh Abu Zarad (Tel 'Abu Zarad), a uns 13 km ao SSO de Siquém e pouco abaixo da cidade de Yasuf.

TAQUEMONITA. Designação de um dos poderosos de Davi, Josebe-Bassebete. (2Sa 23:8) Grafado acmonita em 1 Crônicas 11:11, indica um descendente de Acmoni.

TARA. Veja TERA N.º 2.

TARALA. Cidade benjamita, cuja localização é hoje desconhecida. É alistada, porém, junto com outras cidades situadas na montanhosa região ao N de Jerusalém. — Jos 18:25-28.

TAREIA. 'Filho de Micá' e descendente do Rei Saul por meio de Jonatã. — 1Cr 8:33-35; 9:39-41.

TÁRSIS [duma raiz que significa "despedaçar"].

1. Um dos quatro filhos de Javã, nascidos depois do Dilúvio. (Gên 10:4; 1Cr 1:7) Acha-se incluído entre os 70 cabeças de família dos quais as nações "se espalharam pela terra". (Gên 10:32) Como no caso dos demais filhos de Javã, o nome Társis veio a aplicar-se a um povo e a uma região.

2. Descendente de Benjamim e filho de Bilã. — 1Cr 7:6, 10.

3. Um dos sete conselheiros principescos do Rei Assuero, que consideraram o caso da rebelde Rainha Vasti. — Est 1:12-15.

4. Região inicialmente povoada pela prole de Társis, filho de Javã e neto de Jafé. Há alguns indícios a respeito de em que direção os descendentes de Társis migraram durante os séculos que se seguiram ao Dilúvio.

O profeta Jonas (c. 844 AEC), a quem Jeová comissionara a ir a Nínive, na Assíria, tentou escapar de sua designação indo ao porto mediterrâneo de Jope (Tel Aviv-Yafo) e comprando passagem num "navio que ia para Társis". (Jon 1:1-3; 4:2) Assim, Társis obviamente tinha de encontrar-se no Mediterrâneo ou junto dele, na direção oposta de Nínive, e, evidentemente, era mais fácil chegar lá por mar do que por terra. O "coração do alto-mar" é mencionado em relação com "os navios de Társis", em Ezequiel 27:25, 26. — Compare isso com Sal 48:7; Jon 2:3.

Uma inscrição do imperador assírio Esar-Hadom (do sétimo século AEC) jacta-se de suas vitórias sobre Tiro e o Egito, e afirma que todos os reis das ilhas, de Chipre "até Tarsisi", lhe pagaram tributo. (Ancient Near Eastern Texts [Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo], editado por J. Pritchard, 1974, p. 290) Uma vez que Chipre se encontra no Mediterrâneo oriental, esta referência também indicaria uma localidade situada no Mediterrâneo ocidental. Alguns peritos identificam Társis com Sardenha, uma ilha no Mediterrâneo ocidental.

Possivelmente Identificada com a Espanha. A maioria dos peritos associam Társis com a Espanha, com base em referências antigas a um lugar ou região da Espanha chamada de Tartessus por escritores gregos e romanos. Ao passo que o geógrafo grego Estrabão (do primeiro século AEC) situou uma cidade chamada Tartessus na região em torno do rio Guadalquivir, na Andaluzia (Geography [Geografia], 3, II, 11), o nome Tartessus parece ter sido aplicado em geral à parte sul da península Ibérica.

Muitas obras de referência dão grande destaque à colonização fenícia das regiões costeiras espanholas, e referem-se a Tartessus como colônia fenícia, mas parece não haver base sólida para essa teoria. Assim, a Encyclopædia Britannica (Enciclopédia Britânica), 1959, Vol. 21, p. 114, diz: "Nem os fenícios nem os cartagineses deixaram marcos de natureza permanente no país, ao passo que os gregos influenciaram-no profundamente. Navios de Tiro e Sídon talvez tenham realizado comércio além do estreito e em Cádiz pelo menos já no nono século AC; todavia, a moderna arqueologia, que localizou e escavou cidades gregas, ibéricas e romanas, não pôs à mostra nem um único povoado fenício, nem encontrou remanescências fenícias mais importantes do que restos de quinquilharias e joias, e artigos de permuta similares. A conclusão lógica é que, exceto talvez em Cádiz, os fenícios não construíram cidades, mas tinham meros pontos comerciais e de escala." A história mostra também que, quando os fenícios e os gregos começaram a negociar com a Espanha, esse país já estava povoado e os habitantes nativos apresentaram a prata, o ferro, o estanho e o chumbo que os mercadores procuravam.

Portanto, parece que há boa razão para se crer que os descendentes de Javã (os jônios), por meio de seu filho Társis, por fim se espalharam e se tornaram preeminentes na península Ibérica. Tal suposta localização de Társis pelo menos se harmoniza satisfatoriamente com as outras referências bíblicas.

Relações Comerciais com Salomão. O comércio fenício com Társis é claramente comprovado pelo registro da época do Rei Salomão (cerca de 13 séculos após o Dilúvio), quando a nação de Israel também começou a praticar o comércio marítimo. Salomão tinha uma frota de navios na área do Mar Vermelho, tripulados em parte por experientes marujos fornecidos pelo rei fenício Hirão, de Tiro, e que negociavam especialmente com a terra de Ofir, rica em ouro. (1Rs 9:26-28) Por conseguinte, menciona-se "uma frota de navios de Társis" que Salomão dispunha no mar, "junto com a frota de navios de Hirão", e diz-se que esses navios faziam viagens, uma vez a cada três anos, para a importação de ouro, prata, marfim, macacos e pavões. (1Rs 10:22) Crê-se, em geral, que o termo "navios de Társis", com o tempo, veio a designar um tipo de navio, como diz certo léxico: "Embarcações grandes, oceânicas, apropriadas para trafegar até Társis." (A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament [Léxico Hebraico e Inglês do Velho Testamento], de Brown, Driver e Briggs, 1980, p. 1077) De modo similar, o nome Indiamen, em inglês, se derivava originalmente do nome aplicado a grandes navios ingleses que faziam comércio com a Índia e, com o tempo, veio a aplicar-se a navios desse tipo, independentemente de sua origem ou destino. Assim, 1 Reis 22:48 mostra que o Rei Jeosafá (936-911 AEC) "fez navios de Társis para irem a Ofir em busca de ouro".

O relato de Crônicas, contudo, declara que os navios de Salomão, utilizados para as viagens trienais, "iam a Társis" (2Cr 9:21); também que os navios de Jeosafá destinavam-se 'a ir a Társis', e, quando naufragaram, "não retiveram força para ir a Társis". (2Cr 20:36, 37) Isto indicaria que Ofir não era o único porto de escala dos "navios de Társis" israelitas, mas que eles também navegavam pelas águas do Mediterrâneo. Isto, naturalmente, apresenta um problema, uma vez que se mostra que o lugar de lançamento ao mar de pelo menos alguns destes navios foi Eziom-Géber, no golfo de ʽAqaba. (1Rs 9:26) Para que os navios alcançassem o mar Mediterrâneo, eles teriam de atravessar um canal do Mar Vermelho até o rio Nilo e então passar para o Mediterrâneo, ou então circunavegar o continente africano. Ao passo que é absolutamente impossível determinar agora os pormenores das rotas de navegação (que inclui os canais) disponíveis ou utilizadas no tempo de Salomão e de Jeosafá, não há, igualmente, nenhuma necessidade de considerarmos como inviável o registro de seus projetos marítimos.

Na Profecia. Társis parece ter sido um dos principais mercados para a cidade mercantil de Tiro, talvez a fonte que lhe supria as maiores riquezas, durante parte de sua história. Desde os tempos antigos, a Espanha tem operado minas que exploram os ricos depósitos de prata, ferro, estanho e outros metais ali encontrados. (Compare isso com Je 10:9; Ez 27:3, 12.) Assim, a declaração profética de Isaías sobre a derrubada de Tiro representa os navios de Társis como 'uivando' ao atingirem Quitim (Chipre, talvez sua última escala na rota oriental) e receberem a notícia de que o rico porto de Tiro fora despojado. — Is 23:1, 10, 14.

Outras profecias predizem que Deus enviaria alguns de seu povo a Társis, para ali proclamarem Sua glória (Is 66:19) e que "navios de Társis" trariam de longe os filhos de Sião. (Is 60:9) Os "reis de Társis e das ilhas" pagariam tributo ao rei designado por Jeová. (Sal 72:10) Por outro lado, em Ezequiel 38:13, "os mercadores de Társis" são representados, junto com outros povos comerciantes, como expressando interesse egoísta no proposto saque, por Gogue de Magogue, dos reajuntados de Jeová. Sendo incluídos entre outras coisas que simbolizavam a exaltação de si, o orgulho e a altivez, os navios de Társis hão de ser rebaixados e apenas Jeová será exaltado no "dia pertencente a Jeová dos exércitos". — Is 2:11-16.

TARSO. A principal cidade e capital da província romana da Cilícia; cidade natal do apóstolo Paulo. (At 9:11; 22:3) Ruínas da antiga cidade permanecem na moderna localidade do mesmo nome, localizada a uns 16 km do estuário do rio Cidno, que desemboca no Mediterrâneo oriental a cerca de 130 km ao N da ponta L de Chipre.

Ninguém sabe quando Tarso foi pela primeira vez colonizada, nem por quem, pois é uma cidade muito antiga. Mencionada pela primeira vez na história secular como tendo sido capturada pelos assírios (nunca foi uma cidade muito fortificada), Tarso se achava depois disso sob servidão e pagou tributo durante a maior parte de sua existência às sucessivas potências mundiais da Assíria, Pérsia, Grécia, daí aos reis selêucidas e, por fim, a Roma.

Tarso ficava numa fértil região costeira onde se cultivava o linho, que, por sua vez, sustentava prósperas indústrias, como a da tecelagem de linho e a fabricação de tendas. Os tecidos feitos de pelo de cabra, chamados cilicium, eram também empregados de modo especial no fabrico de tendas. Um fator mais importante, porém, que contribuía para a fama e a opulência de Tarso, era seu excelente porto, situado estrategicamente junto a uma das principais rotas comerciais terrestres, de L ao O. Na direção leste, levava à Síria e a Babilônia; levando às regiões norte e ocidentais da Ásia Menor, esta rota passava pelas Portas Cilicianas, um desfiladeiro estreito nos montes Tauro, a uns 50 km ao N da cidade.

No decorrer de sua história, Tarso foi visitada por inúmeras personalidades famosas, incluindo Júlio César, Marco Antônio e Cleópatra, bem como diversos imperadores. Cícero foi o governador da cidade de 51 a 50 AEC. Tarso também se notabilizou como centro de erudição no primeiro século EC, e, segundo o geógrafo grego Estrabão, como tal ela superava até mesmo Atenas e Alexandria. — Geography (Geografia), 14, V, 13.

Portanto, por estes diversos motivos, Paulo podia muito bem descrever Tarso como "cidade nada obscura". Ele disse isso ao informar um comandante militar de que era cidadão de Tarso, não egípcio. — At 21:37-39.

De tempos a tempos, no decurso de seu ministério, Paulo retornava a Tarso, sua cidade natal (At 9:29, 30; 11:25, 26), e, sem dúvida, passou por ali em algumas de suas viagens missionárias. — At 15:23, 41; 18:22, 23.

TARTÃ. Escritos assírios indicam que o título Tartã aplicava-se a um funcionário de alto escalão, provavelmente secundário apenas ao rei. A respeito da ordem dos títulos nas listas epônimas assírias, James B. Pritchard, editor de Ancient Near Eastern Texts (Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo), 1974, p. 274, comenta: "Mais tarde, a posição do funcionário na hierarquia era decisiva para a sequência, o funcionário mais graduado (tartanu) vindo logo depois do rei, ao passo que importantes funcionários palacianos . . . e os governadores das mais destacadas províncias, ocupavam seu lugar, em ordem bem estabelecida." (Veja CRONOLOGIA [Listas de epônimos (limmu)].) Uma inscrição feita pelo rei assírio Assurbanipal, que se acha agora no Museu Britânico, reza, em parte: "Eu fiquei muito irado por causa destes acontecimentos, a minha alma ficou em chamas. Chamei o oficial-turtan, os governadores, e também seus assistentes, e lhes dei imediatamente a ordem." — Ancient Near Eastern Texts, p. 296.

O Rei Senaqueribe enviou o Tartã junto com outros oficiais, incluindo o Rabsaqué, o principal copeiro do rei, que atuava como porta-voz, para dar um ultimato de capitulação a Jerusalém. O Tartã é alistado em primeiro lugar, possivelmente porque a sua posição era a superior. (2Rs 18:17, 28-35) O Rei Sargão II, da Assíria, enviou um Tartã para sitiar a cidade de Asdode, nos dias do profeta Isaías. — Is 20:1.

TARTAQUE. Deidade adorada pelos avitas, a quem o rei da Assíria trasladou para o território de Samaria depois de ter levado os israelitas do reino das dez tribos ao exílio. (2Rs 17:31) Segundo o Talmude babilônico, Tartaque tinha a forma de um jumento. (Sanhedrin 63*b*) Com base na conclusão de que o nome Tartaque pode ser comparável à palavra pálavi (persa) tar-thakh (escuridão intensa, herói da escuridão), tem-se sugerido que Tartaque talvez tenha sido um demônio das regiões inferiores. À parte da breve referência a Tartaque nas Escrituras, porém, nada pode ser dito com certeza a respeito da natureza dessa deidade.

TÁRTARO. Condição semelhante à de prisão, degradada, na qual Deus lançou os anjos desobedientes nos dias de Noé.

Esta palavra ocorre uma só vez nas Escrituras inspiradas, em 2 Pedro 2:4. O apóstolo escreve: "Deus não se refreou de punir os anjos que pecaram, mas, lançando-os no Tártaro, entregou-os a covas de profunda escuridão, reservando-os para o julgamento." A expressão "lançando-os no Tártaro" é uma tradução do verbo grego tar·ta·ró·o, que inclui em si mesmo a palavra "Tártaro".

Há um texto paralelo em Judas 6: "E os anjos que não conservaram a sua posição original, mas abandonaram a sua própria moradia correta, ele reservou com laços sempiternos, em profunda escuridão, para o julgamento do grande dia." Mostrando quando foi que tais anjos "abandonaram a sua própria moradia correta", Pedro menciona os "espíritos em prisão, os quais outrora tinham sido desobedientes, quando a paciência de Deus esperava nos dias de Noé, enquanto se construía a arca". (1Pe 3:19, 20) Isto liga diretamente o assunto ao relato em Gênesis 6:1-4 a respeito dos "filhos do verdadeiro Deus" que abandonaram a sua morada celestial para coabitar com mulheres em tempos pré-diluvianos e produziram filhos por meio delas, sendo tais descendentes chamados de nefilins. — Veja FILHO(S) DE DEUS; NEFILINS.

À base destes textos, é evidente que Tártaro é uma condição em vez de um lugar específico, uma vez que Pedro, por um lado, fala desses espíritos desobedientes como estando em "covas de profunda escuridão", ao passo que Paulo os menciona como estando nos "lugares celestiais", a partir de onde eles exercem um domínio de escuridão, como forças espirituais iníquas. (2Pe 2:4; Ef 6:10-12) A densa escuridão, similarmente, não é uma falta literal de luz, mas resulta de serem cortados da iluminação proveniente de Deus, como renegados e expulsos de Sua família, tendo apenas uma perspectiva tenebrosa quanto ao seu destino eterno.

O Tártaro não é, pois, a mesma coisa que o termo hebraico Seol, ou o grego Hades, os quais se referem à sepultura terrestre comum de toda a humanidade. Isto se torna evidente do fato de que, ao passo que o apóstolo Pedro mostra que Jesus Cristo pregou a estes "espíritos em prisão", ele também indica que Jesus o fez, não durante os três dias em que se achava sepultado no Hades (Seol), mas depois de ser ressuscitado do Hades. — 1Pe 3:18-20.

Semelhantemente, a condição degradada que é representada pelo Tártaro não deve ser confundida com o "abismo" em que Satanás e seus demônios serão por fim lançados durante os mil anos do reinado de Cristo. (Re 20:1-3) Pelo visto, os anjos desobedientes foram lançados no Tártaro nos "dias de Noé" (1Pe 3:20), mas, uns 2.000 anos depois, encontramo-los suplicando a Jesus que "não lhes ordenasse que se afastassem para o abismo". — Lu 8:26-31; veja ABISMO.

A palavra "Tártaro" também é empregada nas mitologias pagãs pré-cristãs. Na Ilíada, de Homero, representa-se este mitológico Tártaro como prisão subterrânea 'tão abaixo do Hades quanto a terra é do céu'. Nele eram aprisionados os deuses inferiores, Cronos e outros espíritos titãs. Como vimos, o Tártaro da Bíblia não é um lugar, mas sim uma condição e, por conseguinte, não é o mesmo que o Tártaro da mitologia grega. Contudo, é digno de nota que o mitológico Tártaro não era apresentado como lugar para seres humanos, mas sim para criaturas sobre-humanas. Portanto, há uma similaridade neste sentido, uma vez que o Tártaro bíblico obviamente não é para a detenção de almas humanas (compare isso com Mt 11:23), mas apenas para iníquos espíritos sobre-humanos que são rebeldes contra Deus.

A condição de total degradação, representada pelo Tártaro, é precursora do abismar que Satanás e seus demônios sofrerão antes do início do Reinado Milenar de Cristo. A isso se seguirá, por sua vez, após o fim dos mil anos, a completa destruição deles na "segunda morte". — Mt 25:41; Re 20:1-3, 7-10, 14.

TATENAI. Governador da província persa "além do Rio" durante o reinado de Dario I (Histaspes). Quando os judeus mais uma vez começaram a reconstrução do templo no segundo ano de Dario (520 AEC), Tatenai e seus colegas foram a Jerusalém para realizar uma investigação. Os judeus apelaram para o decreto original de Ciro; assim, Tatenai escreveu a Dario, perguntando se tal decreto fora realmente emitido, segundo afirmavam os judeus. A resposta confirmou o decreto de Ciro e a legalidade da obra do templo, e avisou a Tatenai que não interferisse na obra mas que desse ajuda material aos judeus. Tatenai passou a fazer isto. — Esd 4:24–6:13.

TATIM-HODCHI. Veja TATIM-HODSI.

TATIM-HODSI. Esta era uma "terra" no percurso dos recenseadores enviados por Davi. (2Sa 24:4-6) A localização exata de Tatim-Hodsi não é conhecida. Contudo, ela é mencionada entre Gileade e Dã-Jaã, colocando-a na parte norte da Terra da Promessa. A edição lagardiana da Septuaginta grega diz "terra dos hititas em direção a Cades", similar ao fraseado usado em algumas traduções modernas. — BJ, BV, CBC.

TATUAGEM. Marca ou desenho permanente na pele, feita por se cortar a pele para produzir cicatrizes, ou pela inserção de uma substância corante sob a pele. Os israelitas eram proibidos de praticar este costume, comum entre outros povos antigos. (Le 19:28) Por exemplo, houve épocas em que os egípcios tatuavam o nome ou o símbolo de suas deidades no peito ou nos braços. Por obedecerem à lei de Jeová, de não desfigurar o corpo, os israelitas se diferenciariam das outras nações. (De 14:1, 2) A proibição também inculcava neles o devido respeito pelo corpo humano como criação de Deus, a ser usado em honrá-lo. — Sal 100:3; 139:13-16; Ro 12:1.

TAU [ת]. A 22.ª e última letra do alfabeto hebraico. O nome da letra significa literalmente "sinal". (Compare isso com Ez 9:4, n.) No hebraico, é a letra inicial em cada um dos oito versículos do Salmo 119:169-176.

TEATRO. Estrutura (que os gregos chamavam de thé·a·tron) em que se apresentavam representações dramáticas, tragédias, comédias, danças, apresentações musicais e espetáculos em geral. O teatro não raro era cenário de peças imorais, evitadas pelos cristãos fiéis. (Ef 5:3-5) Mas servia também como local de reuniões públicas para outros fins.

Foi ao teatro de Éfeso que os companheiros de viagem de Paulo foram levados quando Demétrio, o prateiro, provocou um motim contra esses missionários cristãos. Embora o apóstolo se dispusesse a se apresentar perante o povo congregado no teatro, os discípulos e alguns amigáveis promotores de festas e de jogos o dissuadiram disso. — At 19:23-31.

Na Grécia, construíam-se teatros já por volta do quinto século AEC, e, com o tempo, foram construídos em várias cidades principais. A maioria dos teatros gregos eram construídos de forma semicircular, numa encosta de formação côncava.

Os bancos podiam ser de madeira ou de pedra. Corredores os separavam em seções, e eram alinhados em fileiras no declive gradual da colina. No centro havia a or·khé·stra (área para dança ou coro), atrás da qual havia um palco elevado, que tinha por trás uma ske·né, ou fundo.

Foram encontradas ruínas de teatros em lugares tais como Éfeso, Atenas e Corinto. O grande teatro escavado em Éfeso tinha 66 fileiras de assentos, e comportava uma assistência de umas 25.000 pessoas. A acústica era, e ainda é, tão boa que até mesmo da fileira mais alta se pode ouvir com facilidade uma voz baixa vinda do palco.

Os romanos não raro construíam teatros em forma de estruturas que não dependiam de alguma inclinação natural do terreno. Às vezes, seus teatros tinham uma cobertura acima do palco e de parte da plateia. Outro tipo, o anfiteatro romano, era uma estrutura circular ou oval descoberta, que circundava um grande espaço central, ou arena, a partir da qual os assentos radiavam em fileiras. O parcialmente preservado Coliseu, em Roma, terminado em 80 EC, é um notável anfiteatro romano. Herodes, o Grande, construiu teatros em várias cidades, incluindo Damasco e Cesareia. Josefo disse que Herodes "construiu um teatro em Jerusalém, e, depois disso, um anfiteatro bem grande na planície". — Jewish Antiquities (Antiguidades Judaicas), XV, 268 (viii, 1).

A palavra grega thé·a·tron pode indicar um lugar onde se apresenta um espetáculo ou o próprio "espetáculo teatral". Paulo escreveu: "Pois, parece-me que Deus tem posto a nós, os apóstolos, por último em exibição, como homens designados à morte, porque nos temos tornado um espetáculo teatral [thé·a·tron] para o mundo, e para anjos e para homens." (1Co 4:9) Paulo referia-se assim ao costumeiro evento final nas lutas romanas de gladiadores, na arena do anfiteatro, quando certos participantes eram expostos, despidos e indefesos, sujeitos à carnificina e à morte certa.

Os gregos e os romanos costumeiramente conduziam pelo teatro os criminosos condenados à morte, onde eram submetidos à zombaria pelas multidões congregadas. Paulo escreveu aos cristãos hebreus, referindo-se aparentemente a esse costume. Embora não exista nenhum registro de que aqueles cristãos tenham sido submetidos a tal tratamento, eles tinham suportado sofrimentos comparáveis a isto. O apóstolo instou com eles: "Persisti em lembrar-vos dos dias anteriores, em que, depois de terdes sido esclarecidos, perseverastes em uma grande competição, debaixo de sofrimentos, às vezes enquanto expostos como que num teatro, tanto a vitupérios como a tribulações, e tornando-vos às vezes parceiros dos que estavam tendo tal experiência." — He 10:32, 33.

TEBÁ [Matança]. Primeiro filho mencionado de Naor, irmão de Abraão, por meio de sua concubina Reumá. (Gên 22:23, 24) Seus descendentes talvez tivessem ligação com a cidade de Betá (Tibate). — 2Sa 8:8; 1Cr 18:8; veja BETÁ.

TEBALIAS [possivelmente: Bom Para Jeová]. Levita merarita, o terceiro filho alistado de Hosa, e porteiro nos dias de Davi. — 1Cr 26:1, 10, 11, 16.

TEBES. Cidade que tinha uma torre forte. Quando Abimeleque tomou Tebes e investia contra a torre em que a população se refugiara, uma mulher atirou uma mó superior sobre ele de cima da muralha. Com o crânio partido pelo golpe, Abimeleque fez com que seu ajudante o matasse, para que ninguém dissesse: "Foi uma mulher que o matou." — Jz 9:50-54; 2Sa 11:21.

Conjectura-se que Tebes se relacione com a moderna Tubas, a uns 15 km a NNE de Siquém, embora não se tenham encontrado vestígios condizentes.

TEBETE. Nome pós-exílico do décimo mês lunar judaico do calendário sagrado, mas o quarto do calendário secular. (Est 2:16) Corresponde a parte de dezembro e parte de janeiro. Em geral é chamado simplesmente de "décimo mês". — 1Cr 27:13.

Acredita-se que o nome "tebete" se origine de uma raiz acadiana que significa "afundar", ou "mergulhar", referindo-se talvez às condições lamacentas que predominam neste mês do inverno setentrional, quando a precipitação atmosférica está no seu auge. As chuvas de inverno não raro são torrenciais, como aquela que acabou com a seca de três anos e meio, nos dias de Elias, ou do tipo que Jesus descreveu na sua ilustração da casa, cujo alicerce de areia foi carregado por fortes chuvas. (1Rs 18:45; Mt 7:24-27) Segundo The Geography of the Bible (A Geografia da Bíblia), de Denis Baly (1957, p. 50), na última parte de dezembro ocorrem frequentes geadas, na região colinosa, e ocasionais nevadas leves em Jerusalém. (2Sa 23:20) Embora seja incomum, houve ocasiões em que as estradas ficaram temporariamente bloqueadas por fortes nevascas. Pode ter sido durante este mês, tebete, que uma forte nevasca impediu o avanço do comandante militar sírio Trífon a caminho de Jerusalém. (Jewish Antiquities (Antiguidades Judaicas), XIII, 208 [vi, 6]; 1 Macabeus 13:22) O mês de tebete evidentemente não era um mês para viajar, tampouco um mês em que os pastores passariam a noite nos campos. Por estas e outras razões não podia ter sido o mês em que Jesus nasceu.

Foi no dia 10 de tebete de 609 AEC que Nabucodonosor iniciou o sítio contra a cidade de Jerusalém. (2Rs 25:1; Je 39:1; 52:4; Ez 24:1, 2) Possivelmente em memória desse evento os judeus observavam o "jejum do décimo mês". — Za 8:19.

TECELAGEM. Processo de entrelaçamento de fios, longitudinal e transversalmente, para fazer tecidos. A série de fios que correm longitudinalmente pelo tecido é a urdidura, ou urdume, e a série transversal é a trama, ou teia. O fio da trama é passado alternadamente por cima e por baixo dos fios da urdidura. (Le 13:59) A tecelagem não raro era feita por mulheres, mas parece que era também uma ocupação masculina. (2Rs 23:7; 1Cr 4:21) O tear que os hebreus, os egípcios e outros usavam era basicamente uma armação. — Jz 16:13, 14; Is 19:1, 9, 10.

Os teares antigos eram verticais ou horizontais. Certo tipo de tear vertical consistia em duas estacas retas, com uma barra transversal no topo. Os fios da urdidura ficavam pendurados nele com pesos na ponta, para mantê-los esticados. Em alguns teares, um cilindro inferior substituía os pesos, e, em outros, este cilindro podia ser girado para servir como tambor para o tecido já feito. Um tear horizontal comum consistia em dois cilindros paralelos, mantidos a certa distância por quatro cavilhas fincadas no solo, em suas pontas. Os fios da urdidura eram esticados entre estes cilindros. A haste de madeira da lança de Golias foi, talvez, comparada a tal cilindro pesado, ao ser assemelhada ao "cilindro dos tecelões". — 1Sa 17:4, 7.

No tear, os fios da urdidura eram, em geral, separados em duas séries, de modo que o fio da trama passasse sobre uma das séries quando traspassado pela urdidura em uma direção, e sob tal série, quando atravessasse transversalmente em sentido oposto. Para isso, eram necessárias duas "calas", ou passagens. Num tear horizontal simples, uma achatada "perchada" era colocada transversalmente à urdidura, sob alternados fios do urdume, e, virando-a, abria-se uma "cala" através da qual se passava em uma direção o fio da trama. Fios alternados da urdidura, presos por alças de fios a um "batente" situado em cima da urdidura, eram em seguida erguidos por se levantar o "batente" verticalmente, em relação à urdidura, fazendo outra "cala" através da qual a trama era passada na direção perpendicular oposta à urdidura. Depois de cada movimento perpendicular à urdidura, o fio era pressionado contra o tecido já feito por meio duma cavilha. O tecelão passava o fio da trama pela urdidura por meio duma lançadeira, que era basicamente uma vareta que levava o fio. Visto que o tecelão perito movimentava célere a lançadeira, Jó podia dizer: "Os meus próprios dias ficaram mais velozes do que a lançadeira do tecelão." — Jó 7:6.

Depois de o tecido ser fabricado na medida desejada, e ser enrolado, o tecelão o separava dos fios da urdidura. (Is 38:9, 12) Os materiais empregados comumente pelos tecelões incluíam o pelo de animais (Êx 36:14; Mt 3:4), a lã e o linho. — Compare isso com Pr 31:13.

Podiam-se fabricar tecidos de padrões variados, utilizando-se fios de diferentes cores na urdidura ou na trama, ou em ambas. Ou o fio da trama de determinada cor talvez cruzasse apenas parte da urdidura. (Gên 37:23; 2Sa 13:18; Pr 7:16) O tecelão podia tecer de forma irregular — cruzando uma série de fios da trama sobre um fio da urdidura, em seguida sob dois fios e então fazer passar a próxima série sobre dois fios da urdidura, sob dois, e, daí, sobre um fio em toda a largura da urdidura, tal como se faz ao fabricar a gabardina hoje em dia. Por variações nos métodos de tecelagem, cria-se no tecido um padrão, mesmo quando os fios da urdidura e da trama são da mesma cor. A Arão, por exemplo, forneceu-se uma veste comprida, branca, de linho fino, tecida em estilo 'enxadrezado'. — Êx 28:39.

TECIDO. Veja ALGODÃO; LINHO; PANO.

TECOA. Cidade no território de Judá, comumente identificada com Khirbet 'et-Tuqu', a uns 16 km ao S de Jerusalém e que se localiza numa elevação de cerca de 820 m. Ao L estende-se o ermo de Judá, do qual o "ermo de Tecoa" (onde os amonitas, os moabitas e as forças do monte Seir sofreram esmagadora derrota durante o reinado de Jeosafá) aparentemente fazia parte. (2Cr 20:20, 24) O Rei Roboão, neto de Davi, reconstruiu e fortificou Tecoa, e, por séculos depois disso, a cidade evidentemente servia como posto avançado no sistema defensivo de Judá. (2Cr 11:5, 6; compare isso com Je 6:1.) Era o domicílio de Iques, pai de Ira, um dos poderosos de Davi. (1Cr 11:26, 28) Era dali a sábia mulher que, sob a direção de Joabe, apelou ao Rei Davi em favor de Absalão. (2Sa 14:1-21) E ali, no nono século AEC, o profeta Amós criava ovelhas. — Am 1:1.

Alguns talvez concluam que o Tecoa mencionado nos registros genealógicos de Judá (1Cr 2:3, 24; 4:5), era um filho de Assur. No entanto, Tecoa não se acha alistado em 1 Crônicas 4:5-7 entre os sete filhos das duas esposas de Assur, sugerindo-se que Assur, em vez de ser o pai dum filho chamado Tecoa, pode ter sido o fundador desse povoado ou de sua população.

TECOÍTA [De (Pertencente a) Tecoa]. Habitante de Tecoa. (2Cr 11:6; Je 6:1) O termo é aplicado a Iques, pai do guerreiro de Davi, Ira (2Sa 23:26; 1Cr 11:28; 27:9); também a uma mulher sábia que, às ordens de Joabe, fingiu ser viúva diante de Davi num estratagema para conseguir o retorno de Absalão do banimento. (2Sa 14:2, 4, 9) Após o retorno do exílio babilônico, os tecoítas estavam entre os que participaram na restauração das muralhas de Jerusalém, embora seus "majestosos" ("nobres", BV) não participassem no trabalho. — Ne 3:5, 27.

TEÍNA [Pedido de Favor]. Descendente de Quelube nas genealogias de Judá. É também identificado como pai de Ir-Naás, o que provavelmente significa que ele era o fundador dessa comunidade. — 1Cr 4:11, 12.

TELA. Efraimita ancestral de Josué, filho de Num. — 1Cr 7:20, 25-27.

TEL-ABIBE [Monte de Espigas Verdes]. Lugar junto ao rio Quebar, na terra dos caldeus, no qual Ezequiel e outros judeus foram exilados. A sua localização exata é desconhecida. — Ez 1:1-3; 3:15; veja QUEBAR.

TELAIM. Lugar, pelo visto em Judá, onde Saul fez a contagem de suas forças antes de golpear os amalequitas. (1Sa 15:1-4) Telaim parece ser o mesmo que Telém, alistada junto com cidades sulinas de Judá. (Jos 15:21, 24) Provavelmente se relaciona também com "Telão". — 1Sa 27:8.

TELÃO. Doze manuscritos da Septuaginta grega dizem que Tela(ão) era um dos limites das moradas dos gesuritas, girzitas e amalequitas, nos dias de Davi. (1Sa 27:8) Isto aparentemente relaciona Telão com Telaim, mencionado em 1 Samuel 15:4, e com Telém, no sul de Judá. (Jos 15:21, 24) Em 1 Samuel 27:8, o texto massorético hebraico reza "desde há muito", que difere da expressão "desde Telão" em apenas duas consoantes hebraicas.

TEL-ASSAR. Lugar habitado pelos "filhos de Éden", mencionados junto com Gozã, Harã e Rezefe — localidades do norte da Mesopotâmia. (2Rs 19:12; Is 37:12) Senaqueribe se jactou, por meio de seus mensageiros, de que os deuses adorados pelos povos desses lugares haviam sido incapazes de livrá-los do poder dos antepassados dele. Por causa da menção aos "filhos de Éden", Tel-Assar é em geral associada com o pequeno reino de Bit-adini, no Alto Eufrates. Os monarcas assírios Tiglate-Pileser III e Esar-Hadom se referem a uma Til-Ashuri, mas sua localização é considerada como tendo sido perto da fronteira assíria de Elão. Assim, a identificação de Tel-Assar continua incerta.

TELÉM.

1. Porteiro dentre os que despediram suas esposas estrangeiras nos dias de Esdras. — Esd 10:16, 17, 24.

2. Cidade na parte sul de Judá. (Jos 15:21, 24) Possivelmente a mesma que Telaim.

TEL-HARSA. Localidade babilônica da qual certas pessoas, incapazes de estabelecer sua genealogia como israelitas, vieram a Judá junto com os exilados, em 537 AEC. (Esd 2:1, 59; Ne 7:6, 61) Fora disso, sua localização é desconhecida.

TEL-MELÁ [Monte de Sal]. Uma das localidades babilônicas de onde pessoas, que não sabiam dizer qual era a sua genealogia, vieram a Judá em 537 AEC. — Esd 2:1, 59; Ne 7:6, 61.

TEMA.

1. Um dos filhos de Ismael. — Gên 25:13-15; 1Cr 1:29, 30.

2. O mesmo que o atual Taima, um oásis localizado a cerca de 400 km a SE de Eziom-Géber, onde duas grandes rotas de caravana se cruzavam. (Jó 6:19) Tema, junto com a vizinha Dedã, é mencionada nas profecias de Isaías (21:13, 14) e Jeremias (25:15-23). Nesta última profecia Tema foi especificamente citada entre os lugares cujos habitantes seriam compelidos a beber do "copo do vinho de furor de Jeová". O rei babilônio Nabonido aparentemente estabeleceu uma segunda capital em Tema, deixando Belsazar em Babilônia como encarregado, durante a sua ausência.

3. Antepassado de uma família de netineus, que retornaram de Babilônia a Jerusalém junto com Zorobabel. — Esd 2:1, 2, 43, 53; Ne 7:55.

TEMÃ [Lado Direito; Sul].

1. Descendente de Esaú por meio de seu primogênito Elifaz (Gên 36:10, 11; 1Cr 1:35, 36); xeque edomita. — Gên 36:15, 16, 34, 42.

2. Lugar que alguns peritos identificam com Tawilan, a uns 5 km ao L de Petra. Era evidentemente uma cidade ou distrito edomita (a terra dos temanitas), onde residiam os descendentes de Temã. (Gên 36:34; Je 49:7, 20; Ez 25:13; Am 1:11, 12; Ob 9) Este local ficou famoso como centro de sabedoria. (Je 49:7) No livro de Habacuque, menciona-se Deus como vindo de "Temã, sim, um Santo desde o monte Parã". Isto talvez se refira a Jeová brilhar em glória, o seu esplendor se refletindo nas montanhas, à medida que conduzia a sua recém-formada nação, diante de Edom, rumo à Terra da Promessa. — Hab 3:3, 4; compare isso com De 33:2.

TEMANITA [De (Pertencente a) Temã]. Termo que, em geral, se entende referir-se a um nativo de Temã, em Edom. Um antigo rei edomita, Husão, era da "terra dos temanitas", e Elifaz, um dos três companheiros de Jó, era temanita. (Gên 36:31-34; Jó 2:11; 4:1; 42:7) Que Elifaz viera de Temã, em Edom, deduz-se do fato de que se entende que a terra de Uz, onde Jó vivia, era perto de Edom. Alguns eruditos, porém, creem que existe uma possibilidade de que o mencionado Elifaz no livro de Jó, não era de Temã, mas sim de Tema, um lugar identificado com um oásis na península Arábica a uns 400 km a SE de Eziom-Géber. — Jó 6:19.

TEMENI [duma raiz que significa "lado direito; sul"]. Filho de Assur por meio de sua esposa Naará; da tribo de Judá. — 1Cr 4:1, 5, 6.

TEMOR. No uso comum, temor significa uma expectativa de dano ou de dor, em geral uma emoção dolorosa, caracterizada por sobressalto, pavor, intranquilidade. Contudo, o temor também pode significar um calmo reconhecimento ou consideração de qualquer coisa que possa prejudicar ou causar dano, reconhecimento este que motiva a pessoa a exercer razoável cautela e previsão inteligente.

O que é o temor a Jeová que devemos ter?

A Bíblia mostra que existe um temor apropriado e um temor incorreto. Portanto, o temor pode ser salutar, levando a pessoa a agir com a devida cautela diante de perigo, evitando assim o desastre, ou pode ser mórbido, destruindo a esperança e minando a capacidade de resistência nervosa da pessoa, chegando ao ponto de causar a morte. O temor a Deus é salutar; trata-se de admiração reverente, uma profunda reverência pelo Criador, e um pavor salutar de desagradá-lo. Este temor de incorrer no desagrado de Deus resulta do apreço pela Sua benevolência e bondade, junto com a conscientização de que Ele é o Juiz Supremo e o Onipotente, com poder de infligir punição ou morte aos que lhe desobedecem. — Veja ESPANTO REVERENTE; PAVOR.

O temor correto a Jeová Deus é essencial para aqueles que desejam servi-lo. Este profundo temor a Jeová é "o princípio da sabedoria" (Sal 111:10), "o início da sabedoria". (Pr 9:10) Não é um temor mórbido, que derruba; "o temor de Jeová é puro". (Sal 19:9) Este temor é assim definido em Provérbios 8:13: "O temor de Jeová significa odiar o mal." Impedirá a pessoa de seguir um proceder errado, pois "no temor de Jeová a pessoa se desvia do mal". — Pr 16:6.

Adão e Eva deixaram de nutrir um temor correto e salutar a Deus, e, por conseguinte, desobedeceram-lhe. Isto produziu neles um doloroso temor ou terror, que fez com que se ocultassem da presença de Deus. Adão disse: "Ouvi a tua voz no jardim, mas tive medo." (Gên 3:10) Caim, filho de Adão, sentiu similar temor depois de assassinar seu irmão, Abel, e este temor pode ter contribuído para ele decidir construir uma cidade. — Gên 4:13-17.

Em Hebreus 12:28, os cristãos são instruídos a ter temor piedoso: "Continuemos a ter benignidade imerecida, por intermédio da qual podemos prestar a Deus serviço sagrado aceitável, com temor piedoso e com espanto reverente." Um anjo no meio do céu, que tinha boas novas eternas a declarar, começou a sua declaração com as palavras: "Temei a Deus e dai-lhe glória." (Re 14:6, 7) Jesus contrastou o salutar temor a Deus com o temor do homem, dizendo, conforme registrado em Mateus 10:28: "Não fiqueis temerosos dos que matam o corpo, mas não podem matar a alma; antes, temei aquele que pode destruir na Geena tanto a alma como o corpo." Em Revelação (Apocalipse) 2:10 ele também aconselha os cristãos: "Não tenhas medo das coisas que estás para sofrer." O verdadeiro amor a Jeová dissipa o temor covarde do homem, que resulta em transigência.

O temor correto, porém, inclui o devido respeito pelas autoridades seculares, pois o cristão sabe que a punição justa por um crime, infligida pela autoridade, seria uma expressão indireta da ira de Deus. — Ro 13:3-7.

Jesus predisse que na "terminação do sistema de coisas" prevaleceria na terra um clima de medo. Ele disse que haveria "vistas aterrorizantes" e que os homens 'ficariam desalentados de temor e na expectativa das coisas que vêm sobre a terra habitada'. (Lu 21:11, 26) Ao passo que as pessoas em geral seriam assim afetadas, os servos de Deus devem seguir o princípio expresso em Isaías 8:12: "Não deveis temer aquilo de que eles têm medo." O apóstolo Paulo explica: "Porque Deus não nos deu um espírito de covardia, mas de poder, e de amor, e de bom juízo." — 2Ti 1:7.

O sábio, depois de ter feito um cuidadoso estudo da humanidade, bem como das ocupações e calamitosas experiências do homem, disse: "A conclusão do assunto, tudo tendo sido ouvido, é: Teme o verdadeiro Deus e guarda os seus mandamentos. Pois esta é toda a obrigação do homem." — Ec 12:13.

Temor Que os Animais Têm dos Humanos. Em Gênesis 9:2, a palavra "medo" é usada em conexão com a criação animal. Deus disse a Noé e a seus filhos: "E o medo de vós e o terror de vós continuará sobre toda criatura vivente da terra." Durante o ano em que Noé e sua família estiveram na arca, os animais e as aves encerrados dentro dela tinham certo medo desses humanos, o que ajudava a restringi-los. Concordemente, quando saíram da arca depois do Dilúvio, Jeová garantiu a Noé que esse medo continuaria. A experiência humana confirma isto. O Dr. George G. Goodwin, Curador Adjunto [da seção] de Mamíferos, do Museu Americano de História Natural, disse: "Normalmente, o leopardo não ataca o homem. Mas, se for provocado ou ferido, o animal atacará os seres humanos e lutará." Similarmente, se lhes for dada a oportunidade, cobras venenosas conhecidas por sua agressividade, tais como a mamba e a cobra-real, preferem, via de regra, cautelosamente se afastar da presença humana em vez de atacar. Embora o homem tenha maltratado e transformado alguns animais em criaturas ferozes, é normalmente verdade que este medo restritivo ainda existe. Isto se harmoniza com a declaração de Deus em Gênesis 1:26-28, de que a criação animal estaria sujeita ao homem desde o tempo de sua criação.

TEMPLO. Habitação divina, lugar sagrado ou santuário, seja material, seja espiritual, empregado para adoração. A palavra hebraica heh·khál, traduzida por "templo", significa também "palácio". Os termos gregos hi·e·rón e na·ós são ambos traduzidos por "templo" e podem referir-se ao inteiro conjunto do templo ou ao seu edifício central; na·ós, que significa "santuário" ou "habitação (morada) divina", às vezes se refere especificamente aos sagrados recintos interiores do templo. — Veja LUGAR SANTO.

Templo de Salomão. O Rei Davi anelava construir uma casa para Jeová, que abrigasse a Arca do Pacto, que 'morava no meio de panos de tenda'. Jeová se agradou da proposta de Davi, mas disse-lhe que, uma vez que Davi tinha derramado muito sangue na guerra, seu filho (Salomão) teria o privilégio de fazer tal construção. Isto não queria dizer que Jeová não aprovava as guerras que Davi travara a favor do Seu nome e de Seu povo. Mas o templo devia ser edificado em paz, por um homem de paz. — 2Sa 7:1-16; 1Rs 5:3-5; 8:17; 1Cr 17:1-14; 22:6-10.

Custos. Mais tarde Davi comprou a eira de Ornã (Araúna), o jebuseu, no monte Moriá, para ali ser construído o templo. (2Sa 24:24, 25; 1Cr 21:24, 25) Ele juntou 100.000 talentos de ouro, 1.000.000 de talentos de prata, e cobre e ferro em grande quantidade, além de contribuir de sua fortuna pessoal 3.000 talentos de ouro e 7.000 talentos de prata. Recebeu também, como contribuições dos príncipes, ouro no valor de 5.000 talentos, 10.000 daricos e prata no valor de 10.000 talentos, bem como muito ferro e cobre. (1Cr 22:14; 29:3-7) Este total, de 108.000 talentos e 10.000 daricos de ouro e 1.017.000 talentos de prata, valeria US$ 48.337.047.000 em valores atuais. Seu filho Salomão não gastou a inteira quantia na construção do templo; o restante ele depositou no tesouro do templo. — 1Rs 7:51; 2Cr 5:1.

Trabalhadores. O Rei Salomão começou a construir o templo para Jeová no quarto ano de seu reinado (1034 AEC), no segundo mês, zive, seguindo o plano arquitetônico que Davi recebera mediante inspiração. (1Rs 6:1; 1Cr 28:11-19) O trabalho prosseguiu por sete anos. (1Rs 6:37, 38) Em troca de trigo, cevada, azeite e vinho, Hirão, o rei de Tiro, forneceu madeira do Líbano e operários especializados em madeira e em pedra, e um perito especial, também chamado Hirão, cujo pai era tírio e cuja mãe era uma israelita da tribo de Naftali. Este homem trabalhava muito bem com ouro, prata, cobre, ferro, madeira, pedras e tecidos. — 1Rs 5:8-11, 18; 7:13, 14, 40, 45; 2Cr 2:13-16.

Ao organizar o trabalho, Salomão convocou 30.000 homens de Israel, enviando-os ao Líbano em turmas de 10.000 por mês, com direito à permanência de dois meses em casa, entre as escalas. (1Rs 5:13, 14) Como carregadores, convocou 70.000 dentre os "residentes forasteiros" do país, e, como cortadores, 80.000. (1Rs 5:15; 9:20, 21; 2Cr 2:2) Como capatazes do serviço, Salomão nomeou 550 homens e, pelo visto, 3.300 como ajudantes. (1Rs 5:16; 9:22, 23) Aparentemente, dentre estes, 250 eram israelitas e 3.600 "residentes forasteiros" em Israel. — 2Cr 2:17, 18.

Dimensão do "côvado" usado. Na consideração que se segue, a respeito das medidas dos três templos — construídos respectivamente por Salomão, Zorobabel e Herodes — calcularemos essas medidas à base do côvado de 44,5 cm. No entanto, é possível que eles tenham usado o côvado mais longo, de cerca de 51,8 cm. — Veja 2Cr 3:3 (onde fala de um "comprimento em côvados, segundo a medida anterior", esta talvez sendo uma medida mais longa do que o côvado que veio a ser comumente utilizado) e Ez 40:5; veja CÔVADO.

O plano e os materiais. O templo, uma mui esplêndida estrutura, seguia o plano geral do tabernáculo. Contudo, as dimensões internas do Santo e do Santíssimo eram maiores do que as do tabernáculo. O Santo tinha 40 côvados (17,8 m) de comprimento, 20 côvados (8,9 m) de largura e, evidentemente, 30 côvados (13,4 m) de altura. (1Rs 6:2, 17) O Santíssimo era um cubo de 20 côvados de lado. (1Rs 6:20; 2Cr 3:8) Adicionalmente, havia câmaras, sobre o Santíssimo, que tinham aproximadamente 10 côvados (4,5 m) de altura. (1Cr 28:11) Havia também uma estrutura lateral, ao redor do templo, em três lados, contendo câmaras de armazenagem, e assim por diante. — 1Rs 6:4-6, 10.

Os materiais usados eram, primariamente, pedra e madeira. Os pisos desses aposentos eram revestidos de junípero; as paredes internas eram de cedro gravado com entalhes de querubins, palmeiras e flores; as paredes e o teto eram inteiramente revestidos de ouro. (1Rs 6:15, 18, 21, 22, 29) As portas do Santo (à entrada do templo) eram de junípero — esculpidas e revestidas de lâminas de ouro. (1Rs 6:34, 35) Portas de madeira de oleastro, também esculpidas e revestidas de ouro, davam entrada do Santo para o Santíssimo. Qualquer que tenha sido a sua posição exata, essas portas não substituíam plenamente o arranjo de cortinas que estava em uso no tabernáculo. (Compare isso com 2Cr 3:14.) Dois gigantescos querubins de madeira de oleastro, revestidos de ouro, ocupavam o Santíssimo. Sob estes foi colocada a Arca do Pacto. — 1Rs 6:23-28, 31-33; 8:6; veja QUERUBIM.

Todos os utensílios do Santo eram de ouro: o altar do incenso, as dez mesas dos pães da proposição e os dez candelabros, junto com seus acessórios. Ao lado da entrada do Santo (o primeiro compartimento), erguiam-se duas colunas de cobre, chamadas "Jaquim" e "Boaz". (1Rs 7:15-22, 48-50; 1Cr 28:16; 2Cr 4:8; veja BOAZ, II.) O pátio interno era construído de pedra e de cedro de excelente qualidade. (1Rs 6:36) Os acessórios que havia no pátio — o altar dos sacrifícios, o grande "mar de fundição", dez carrocins para bacias de água, e outros utensílios — eram de cobre. (1Rs 7:23-47) Havia refeitórios no perímetro dos pátios. — 1Cr 28:12.

Um notável aspecto da construção deste templo era que toda pedra havia sido cortada na pedreira, de modo a ajustar-se com perfeição no local do templo. "Quanto a martelos e machados, ou a quaisquer outros instrumentos de ferro, não eram ouvidos na casa, enquanto estava sendo construída." (1Rs 6:7) O trabalho foi concluído em sete anos e meio (da primavera setentrional de 1034 AEC ao outono setentrional [bul, o oitavo mês] de 1027 AEC). — 1Rs 6:1, 38.

Inauguração. No sétimo mês, etanim, pelo visto no 12.º ano do reinado de Salomão (1026 AEC), Salomão congregou os homens de Israel em Jerusalém para a inauguração do templo e a Festividade das Barracas. Foi trazido o tabernáculo, com seu mobiliário sagrado, e a Arca do Pacto foi colocada no Santíssimo. (Veja SANTÍSSIMO.) Nisto, a nuvem de Jeová encheu o templo. Daí Salomão bendisse a Jeová e abençoou a congregação de Israel, e, de pé numa tribuna especial diante do altar de cobre do sacrifício (veja ALTAR), proferiu uma longa oração, louvando a Jeová e suplicando sua benevolência e misericórdia a favor daqueles que se voltassem para Ele, a fim de temê-Lo e servi-Lo, fossem eles israelitas ou estrangeiros. Um grandioso sacrifício de 22.000 bovinos e 120.000 ovinos foi oferecido. A inauguração demorou 7 dias, e a Festividade das Barracas 7 dias, após o que, no dia 23 daquele mês, Salomão mandou que o povo voltasse para casa, alegre e agradecido pela bondade e liberalidade de Jeová. — 1Rs 8; 2Cr 5:1–7:10; veja SALOMÃO (Inauguração do templo).

História. Este templo durou até 607 AEC, quando foi destruído pelo exército babilônico chefiado pelo Rei Nabucodonosor. (2Rs 25:9; 2Cr 36:19; Je 52:13) Por causa do desvio de Israel para a religião falsa, Deus permitiu que as nações fustigassem Judá e Jerusalém, às vezes despojando o templo de seus tesouros. O templo sofreu também períodos de negligência. O Rei Sisaque, do Egito, roubou os tesouros do templo (993 AEC) nos dias de Roboão, filho de Salomão, apenas uns 33 anos após a inauguração. (1Rs 14:25, 26; 2Cr 12:9) O Rei Asa (977-937 AEC) respeitava a casa de Jeová, mas, para proteger Jerusalém, ele tolamente subornou o Rei Ben-Hadade I, da Síria, com prata e ouro dos tesouros do templo, para que este quebrasse seu pacto com Baasa, rei de Israel. — 1Rs 15:18, 19; 2Cr 15:17, 18; 16:2, 3.

Depois de o templo ter passado por um período de turbulência e negligência, o Rei Jeoás, de Judá (898-859 AEC), supervisionou a obra de reparos. (2Rs 12:4-12; 2Cr 24:4-14) Nos dias de seu filho Amazias, o Rei Jeoás, de Israel, saqueou o templo. (2Rs 14:13, 14) O Rei Jotão (777-762 AEC) realizou algumas obras de construção na área do templo, construindo o "portão superior". (2Rs 15:32, 35; 2Cr 27:1, 3) O Rei Acaz, de Judá (761-746 AEC) não apenas enviou os tesouros do templo a Tiglate-Pileser III, rei da Assíria, como suborno, mas também poluiu o templo por construir um altar segundo o estilo de um existente em Damasco e substituir o altar de cobre do templo por este. (2Rs 16:5-16) Por fim, fechou as portas da casa de Jeová. — 2Cr 28:24.

O filho de Acaz, Ezequias (745-717 AEC) fez o que pôde para desfazer as más obras de seu pai. Bem no início de seu reinado, ele reabriu o templo e ordenou que fosse limpo. (2Cr 29:3, 15, 16)

Contudo, mais tarde, com medo de Senaqueribe, rei da Assíria, ele arrancou as portas e ombreiras do templo, que ele mesmo mandara revestir de ouro, e enviou-as a Senaqueribe. — 2Rs 18:15, 16.

Mas, com a morte de Ezequias, o templo entrou num período de meio século de profanação e abandono. Seu filho Manassés (716-662 AEC) superou em iniquidade a todos os anteriores reis de Judá, construindo altares "a todo o exército dos céus em dois pátios da casa de Jeová". (2Rs 21:1-5; 2Cr 33:1-4) Na época do neto de Manassés, Josias (659-629 AEC), o outrora magnífico edifício estava num estado de abandono. Evidentemente achava-se numa condição desorganizada ou atravancada, pois, o fato de o sumo sacerdote Hilquias ter achado o livro da Lei (provavelmente um rolo original escrito por Moisés) foi uma descoberta emocionante. (2Rs 22:3-13; 2Cr 34:8-21) Depois dos reparos e limpeza do templo, foi celebrada a maior Páscoa desde os dias do profeta Samuel. (2Rs 23:21-23; 2Cr 35:17-19) Foi durante o ministério do profeta Jeremias. (Je 1:1-3) Daí em diante até a sua destruição, o templo permaneceu aberto e em uso pelo sacerdócio, ainda que muitos dos sacerdotes fossem corruptos.

O Templo Construído por Zorobabel. Conforme predito por Isaías, profeta de Jeová, este suscitou a Ciro, rei da Pérsia, como libertador de Israel do poderio de Babilônia. (Is 45:1) Jeová estimulou também seu próprio povo, sob a liderança de Zorobabel, da tribo de Judá, a retornar a Jerusalém. Fizeram isto em 537 AEC, depois de 70 anos de desolação, conforme Jeremias predissera, com o objetivo de reconstruir o templo. (Esd 1:1-6; 2:1, 2; Je 29:10) Esta estrutura, embora não fosse nem de longe tão gloriosa como o templo de Salomão, durou mais tempo, permanecendo por quase 500 anos, de 515 AEC até bem próximo ao fim do primeiro século AEC. (O templo construído por Salomão servira por cerca de 420 anos, de 1027 a 607 AEC.)

No seu decreto, Ciro ordenou: "Quanto a todo aquele que restou de todos os lugares onde reside como forasteiro, auxiliem-no os homens do seu lugar com prata, e com ouro, e com bens, e com animais domésticos, junto com a oferta voluntária para a casa do verdadeiro Deus, que havia em Jerusalém." (Esd 1:1-4) Ciro também devolveu 5.400 vasos de ouro e de prata que Nabucodonosor havia tomado do templo de Salomão. — Esd 1:7-11.

No sétimo mês (etanim, ou tisri) do ano 537 AEC, o altar já estava erguido; e, no ano seguinte, foi lançado o alicerce do novo templo. Como Salomão fizera, os construtores contrataram sidônios e tírios para trazer cedros do Líbano. (Esd 3:7) A oposição, principalmente da parte dos samaritanos, desencorajou os construtores, e, depois de cerca de 15 anos esses opositores até mesmo incitaram o rei da Pérsia a embargar a obra. — Esd 4.

Os judeus haviam parado a construção do templo e se voltado para outros interesses, de modo que Jeová enviou seus profetas Ageu e Zacarias para incitá-los a renovar seus esforços, no segundo ano de Dario I (520 AEC), e, depois disso, expediu-se um decreto que apoiava a ordem original de Ciro e ordenava que se fornecesse dinheiro do tesouro real, para suprir as necessidades dos construtores e dos sacerdotes. (Esd 5:1, 2; 6:1-12) A construção foi reiniciada e a casa de Jeová foi concluída no dia 3 de adar do sexto ano de Dario (provavelmente 6 de março de 515 AEC), após o que os judeus inauguraram o templo reconstruído e celebraram a Páscoa. — Esd 6:13-22.

Pouco se sabe dos pormenores do projeto arquitetônico deste segundo templo. O decreto de Ciro autorizava a construção de certa estrutura, "sendo sua altura de sessenta côvados [c. 27 m], sua largura sessenta côvados, com três camadas de pedras roladas ao lugar e uma camada de madeiramento". Não se declara o comprimento. (Esd 6:3, 4) Tinha refeitórios e salas de armazenagem (Ne 13:4, 5) e, sem dúvida, tinha câmaras no teto, e, possivelmente, havia outros prédios relacionados com ele, seguindo as mesmas linhas que o templo de Salomão.

Este segundo templo não continha a Arca do Pacto, que parece ter desaparecido antes de Nabucodonosor ter capturado e saqueado o templo de Salomão, em 607 AEC. Segundo o relato no livro apócrifo de Primeiro Macabeus (1:21-24, 57; 4:38, 44-51) havia um único candelabro nele, em vez dos dez que havia no templo de Salomão; mencionam-se o altar de ouro, a mesa dos pães da proposição e os vasos, bem como o altar da oferta queimada que, em vez de ser de cobre, como era no templo de Salomão, é descrito aqui como sendo de pedra. Este altar, depois de ser maculado pelo Rei Antíoco Epifânio (em 168 AEC), foi reconstruído com pedras novas sob a direção de Judas Macabeu.

O Templo Reconstruído por Herodes. Este templo não é descrito em pormenores nas Escrituras. A principal fonte de informações é Josefo, que viu pessoalmente a estrutura e relata a respeito de sua construção em The Jewish War (A Guerra Judaica) e Jewish Antiquities (Antiguidades Judaicas). A Míxena judaica supre alguns dados, e umas poucas informações são obtidas da arqueologia. Portanto, a descrição aqui feita provém dessas fontes, que, em alguns casos, podem estar sujeitas a dúvidas. — GRAVURA, Vol. 2, p. 543.

Em The Jewish War (I, 401 [xxi, 1]), Josefo diz que Herodes reconstruiu o templo no 15.º ano de seu reinado, mas, em Jewish Antiquities (XV, 380 [xi, 1]) ele diz que foi no 18.º ano. Esta última data é geralmente aceita pelos peritos, embora o início do reinado de Herodes, ou como Josefo o calculou, não seja confirmado com absoluta certeza. O próprio santuário levou 18 meses para ser construído, mas os pátios, e assim por diante, estavam em construção por oito anos. Quando certos judeus se dirigiram a Jesus Cristo, em 30 EC, dizendo: "Este templo foi construído em quarenta e seis anos" (Jo 2:20), esses judeus falavam, aparentemente, sobre a obra que prosseguia no complexo de pátios e de prédios até então. A obra só foi concluída uns seis anos antes da destruição do templo, em 70 EC.

Por causa de seu ódio e desconfiança contra Herodes, os judeus não lhe permitiram reconstruir o templo, como ele se propunha fazer, sem que antes tivesse tudo preparado para o novo prédio. Por este mesmo motivo, eles não consideravam este templo como o terceiro, mas apenas como um templo reconstruído, de modo que se referiam apenas a um primeiro e a um segundo templo (de Salomão e de Zorobabel).

Quanto às medidas fornecidas por Josefo, o Dictionary of the Bible (Dicionário da Bíblia), de Smith (1889, Vol. IV, p. 3203), diz: "As dimensões horizontais que ele fornece são tão minuciosamente exatas que nós quase que suspeitamos de que ele tinha diante dos olhos, ao escrever, alguma planta baixa do prédio, preparada no departamento do intendente-geral do exército de Tito. Constituem um estranho contraste com as dimensões que ele fornece da altura, as quais, com raras exceções, pode-se mostrar que são exageradas, geralmente duplicadas. Visto que todos os prédios foram derrubados durante o sítio, era impossível culpá-lo de ter errado a respeito das alturas."

Colunatas e portões. Josefo escreve que Herodes dobrou o tamanho da área do templo, ampliando as laterais do monte Moriá com grandes muralhas de pedra e nivelando uma área no topo do monte. (The Jewish War, I, 401 [xxi, 1]; Jewish Antiquities, XV, 391-402 [xi, 3]) A Míxena (Middot 2:1) diz que o monte do Templo era um quadrado de 500 côvados (223 m) de lado. Na beirada da área havia colunatas. O templo dava para o L, como os anteriores. Ao longo deste lado havia a colunata de Salomão, que consistia em dois corredores com colunas de mármore. Foi ali que, em dada ocasião, no inverno, certos judeus se aproximaram de Jesus perguntando se ele era o Cristo. (Jo 10:22-24) Ao N e ao O também havia colunatas, ananicadas pela Colunata Real ao S, que consistia em quatro fileiras de colunas coríntias, 162 ao todo, com três corredores. A circunferência das colunas era tão grande que exigia três homens de braços estendidos para abraçar uma delas, e elas eram muito mais elevadas do que as outras colunatas.

Havia evidentemente oito portões que davam para a área do templo: quatro do lado O, dois ao S, e um de cada lado, ao L e ao N. (Veja PORTÃO, PORTA [Portões do Templo].) Por causa desses portões, o primeiro pátio, o Pátio dos Gentios, também servia como passagem, sendo que os viajantes preferiam passar por ele em vez de circundar a área do templo.

Pátio dos Gentios. As colunatas cercavam a grande área chamada de Pátio dos Gentios, assim chamada porque se permitia que os gentios entrassem nele. Foi dali que Jesus, em duas ocasiões, uma delas mais para o início e a outra no fim de seu ministério terrestre, expulsou aqueles que tinham feito da casa de seu Pai uma casa de comércio. — Jo 2:13-17; Mt 21:12, 13; Mr 11:15-18.

Havia diversos pátios pelos quais se passava ao dirigir-se ao prédio central, o próprio santuário. Cada pátio sucessivo tinha maior grau de santidade. Passando pelo Pátio dos Gentios, a pessoa encontrava um muro de três côvados (1,30 m) de altura, com aberturas para passagem. No topo havia grandes pedras que traziam um aviso em grego e em latim. A inscrição grega rezava (segundo certa tradução): "Que nenhum estrangeiro ultrapasse a barreira e a cerca em torno do santuário. Quem for apanhado fazendo isso, será responsável por sua morte que virá como consequência." (The New Westminster Dictionary of the Bible [O Novo Dicionário Bíblico de Westminster], editado por H. Gehman, 1970, p. 932.) O motim que envolveu o apóstolo Paulo no templo aconteceu porque os judeus espalharam o boato de que ele trouxera um gentio para dentro da área proibida. Esse muro nos é trazido à lembrança, embora Paulo usasse o termo "muro" em sentido simbólico, quando lemos que Cristo "destruiu o muro" que separava o judeu do gentio. — Ef 2:14 n; At 21:20-32.

Pátio das Mulheres. O Pátio das Mulheres se achava a 14 degraus acima. As mulheres podiam entrar ali para praticar a adoração. Entre outras coisas, o Pátio das Mulheres continha cofres do tesouro, perto de um dos quais Jesus estava sentado quando elogiou a viúva por ter dado tudo o que possuía. (Mr 12:41-44; Lu 21:1-4) Neste pátio havia também vários prédios.

Pátio de Israel e Pátio dos Sacerdotes. Quinze grandes degraus semicirculares conduziam ao Pátio de Israel, ao qual tinham acesso os homens que estivessem cerimonialmente limpos. Junto à parede externa deste pátio havia câmaras de armazenagem.

A seguir vinha o Pátio dos Sacerdotes, que correspondia ao pátio do tabernáculo. Nele havia o altar, feito de pedras não lavradas. De acordo com a Míxena, era um quadrado de 32 côvados (14,2 m) de lado em sua base. (Middot 3:1) Josefo dá uma medida maior. (The Jewish War, V, 225 [v, 6] veja ALTAR [Altares Pós-Exílicos].) Os sacerdotes chegavam ao altar por meio dum plano inclinado. Usava-se também uma "bacia", segundo a Míxena. (Middot 3:6) Ao redor deste pátio também havia prédios.

O prédio do templo. Como o anterior, o templo em si consistia basicamente em dois compartimentos, o Santo e o Santíssimo. O piso deste prédio se situava a 12 degraus acima do Pátio dos Sacerdotes. Como no templo de Salomão, construíram-se câmaras nas laterais deste prédio e havia uma câmara superior. A entrada era fechada por portas de ouro, cada qual de 55 côvados (24,5 m) de altura e 16 côvados (7,1 m) de largura. A parte dianteira do prédio era mais larga do que a de trás, tendo asas ou "rebordos" que se estendiam por 20 côvados (8,9 m) de cada lado. O interior do Santo tinha 40 côvados (17,8 m) de comprimento e 20 côvados de largura. No Santo havia o candelabro, a mesa dos pães da proposição e o altar do incenso — todos de ouro.

A entrada do Santíssimo era uma grossa cortina, ou véu, lindamente ornamentada. Por ocasião da morte de Jesus, esta cortina se rasgou em duas partes, de alto a baixo, expondo o Santíssimo como não contendo a Arca do Pacto. Em lugar da Arca do Pacto havia uma laje de pedra em que o sumo sacerdote aspergia o sangue no Dia da Expiação. (Mt 27:51; He 6:19; 10:20) Este compartimento tinha 20 côvados de comprimento e 20 de largura.

Os judeus utilizaram a área do templo como cidadela, ou fortaleza, durante o cerco romano contra Jerusalém, em 70 EC. Eles mesmos atearam fogo nas colunatas, mas um soldado romano, contrariando a vontade do comandante romano, Tito, ateou fogo ao próprio templo, cumprindo assim as palavras de Jesus referentes aos prédios do templo: "De modo algum ficará aqui pedra sobre pedra sem ser derrubada." — Mt 24:2; The Jewish War, VI, 252-266 (iv, 5-7); VII, 3, 4 (i, 1).

O Grande Templo Espiritual de Jeová. O tabernáculo construído por Moisés e os templos edificados por Salomão, Zorobabel e Herodes eram apenas típicos ou pictóricos. O apóstolo Paulo indicou isto quando escreveu que o tabernáculo, cujos aspectos básicos foram incluídos nos templos posteriores, era 'uma representação típica e sombra das coisas celestiais'. (He 8:1-5; veja também 1Rs 8:27; Is 66:1; At 7:48; 17:24.) As Escrituras Gregas Cristãs expõem a realidade representada pelo tipo. Estas Escrituras mostram que o tabernáculo e os templos construídos por Salomão, Zorobabel e Herodes, junto com suas particularidades, representavam um templo maior e espiritual, de Jeová, a "verdadeira tenda, que Jeová erigiu, e não algum homem". (He 8:2) Conforme revelado por suas várias particularidades, esse templo espiritual é o arranjo para se chegar a Jeová em adoração à base do sacrifício propiciatório de Jesus Cristo. — He 9:2-10, 23.

A carta inspirada aos hebreus diz que, neste templo espiritual, o Santíssimo é o "próprio céu", a área em que a pessoa de Deus se encontra. (He 9:24) Visto que apenas o Santíssimo é o "próprio céu", o Santo e o pátio sacerdotal, bem como suas particularidades, têm de ser pertinentes a coisas na terra, coisas estas que têm a ver com Jesus Cristo, durante seu ministério na terra, e seus seguidores que são “participantes da chamada celestial”. — He 3:1.

Aviso no muro (soregue) do pátio do templo de Jerusalém, que alertava os gentios a não irem além desse limite.

A cortina era uma barreira que separava o Santo do Santíssimo; no caso de Jesus ela representava “sua carne”, que ele teve de depor em sacrifício, renunciando a ela para sempre, para poder entrar no céu, o antitípico Santíssimo. (He 10:20) Os cristãos ungidos também têm de ultrapassar a barreira carnal que os separa do acesso à presença de Deus no céu. Coerentemente, o Santo representa a sua condição quais filhos de Deus ungidos pelo espírito, com vida celestial em vista, e eles ganharão essa recompensa celestial quando seus corpos carnais forem deixados de lado na morte. — 1Co 15:50; He 2:10.

Enquanto ainda se encontram no antitípico Santo, esses que foram ungidos com espírito santo e que servem como subsacerdotes com Cristo podem usufruir esclarecimento espiritual, como que do candelabro; comer alimento espiritual, como que da mesa dos pães da proposição; e oferecer oração, louvor e serviço a Deus, como que apresentando incenso de doce fragrância no altar de ouro do incenso. O Santo do templo típico era velado aos de fora por meio duma cortina, e, de maneira similar, como a pessoa sabe que é um filho de Deus ungido pelo espírito e o que sente como tal, não pode ser plenamente compreendido pelos que não são assim ungidos. — Re 14:3.

No pátio do antigo templo ficava o altar para a oferta de sacrifícios. Isto prefigurava a provisão de Deus, segundo a sua vontade, para que um sacrifício humano perfeito resgatasse a prole de Adão. (He 10:1-10; 13:10-12; Sal 40:6-8) No templo espiritual, o próprio pátio tem de dizer respeito a uma condição relacionada com aquele sacrifício. No caso de Jesus, foi o fato de ele ser um humano perfeito que tornou aceitável o sacrifício de sua vida. No caso de seus seguidores ungidos, todos eles são declarados justos à base de sua fé no sacrifício de Cristo, de modo que são encarados por Deus como pessoas sem pecado, ainda na carne. — Ro 3:24-26; 5:1, 9; 8:1.

As particularidades essenciais da “verdadeira tenda”, o grande templo espiritual de Deus, já existiam no primeiro século EC. Isto é indicado pelo fato de que, com referência ao tabernáculo construído por Moisés, Paulo escreveu que era “uma ilustração para o tempo designado que agora chegou”, isto é, para algo que existia quando Paulo estava escrevendo. (He 9:9) Aquele templo certamente existia quando Jesus apresentou o valor de seu sacrifício no seu Santíssimo, no próprio céu. Deve realmente ter vindo à existência em 29 EC, quando Jesus foi ungido com espírito santo para servir como grande Sumo Sacerdote de Jeová. — He 4:14; 9:11, 12.

Jesus Cristo promete aos cristãos gerados pelo espírito que, aquele que vencer, que perseverar fielmente até o fim, será feito “coluna no templo do meu Deus, e ele, de modo algum, jamais sairá dele”. (Re 3:12) Portanto, dá-se a este um lugar permanente no “próprio céu”, o antitípico Santíssimo.

Revelação (Apocalipse) 7:9-15 revela “uma grande multidão” de outros adoradores de Jeová que participam na adoração pura no templo espiritual. Os que compõem essa “grande multidão” não são descritos em termos que os identifique como subsacerdotes. Menciona-se que os que compõem essa “grande multidão” “lavaram as suas vestes compridas e as embranqueceram no sangue do Cordeiro”. Por causa de sua fé no sacrifício de Cristo, atribui-se-lhes uma posição justa que possibilita a sua preservação através da “grande tribulação”, de modo que se diz que eles “saem” como sobreviventes.

Em Isaías 2:1-4 e Miqueias 4:1-4, menciona-se que o “monte da casa de Jeová” ficará ‘elevado’ na “parte final dos dias”, e prediz-se um ajuntamento de pessoas de “todas as nações” a essa “casa de Jeová”. Visto que não há templo literal de Jeová em Jerusalém desde 70 EC, isto tem de referir-se, não a uma estrutura material, mas a que a adoração pura ficará elevada, na vida do povo de Jeová, durante a “parte final dos dias”, e um grande ajuntamento de pessoas de todas as nações para participarem na adoração no grande templo espiritual de Jeová.

O Templo da Visão de Ezequiel. Uma detalhada descrição de um templo de Jeová encontra-se também em Ezequiel, capítulos 40-47, mas não se trata de um templo alguma vez construído no monte Moriá, em Jerusalém, tampouco caberia ali. Era um templo profético, e não o grande templo espiritual de Deus. No relato, é dada consideração especial às provisões que vêm do templo bem como às precauções tomadas para manter fora dos pátios desse templo aqueles que não são dignos de estar entre os adoradores de Jeová.

Em 593 AEC, no 14.º ano após a destruição de Jerusalém e do templo de Salomão ali existente, o sacerdote-profeta Ezequiel, transportado em visão para o cume dum alto monte, contemplou um grande templo de Jeová. (Ez 40:1, 2) Para humilhar os judeus exilados e levá-los ao arrependimento, sem dúvida também para consolar os fiéis, Ezequiel foi instruído a relatar tudo o que via à “casa de Israel”. (Ez 40:4; 43:10, 11) A visão dava cuidadosa atenção aos pormenores das medidas.

As unidades de medição usadas foram a "cana" (a cana longa, 3,11 m) e o "côvado" (o côvado longo, 51,8 cm). (Ez 40:5, n) Esta atenção às medidas tem levado alguns a crer que esse templo visionário havia de servir de modelo para o templo mais tarde construído por Zorobabel, no período pós-exílico. Não existe, contudo, nenhuma base conclusiva para essa suposição.

A inteira área do templo era evidentemente um quadrado de 500 côvados de lado. Abrangia um pátio externo, um pátio interno elevado, o templo com seu altar, vários refeitórios, e um prédio para o O, ou fundos, do templo. Dando acesso aos pátios externos e internos do templo havia seis enormes portões, três para o pátio externo e três para o pátio interno. Estavam voltados para o N, E e S, cada portão interior estando diretamente atrás (alinhado) com o correspondente portão externo. (Ez 40:6, 20, 23, 24, 27) No lado de dentro da parede exterior ficava o pavimento inferior. Tinha 50 côvados (25,9 m) de largura, o mesmo que o comprimento dos portões. (Ez 40:18, 21) Havia ali trinta refeitórios, provavelmente para as pessoas comerem seus sacrifícios de participação em comum. (Ez 40:17) Em cada um dos quatro cantos desse pátio externo havia locais em que as porções que cabiam às pessoas que apresentavam sacrifícios eram cozidas pelos sacerdotes, segundo o requisito da Lei; daí, pelo visto, eram consumidas nos refeitórios providenciados. (Ez 46:21-24) O restante do pátio externo entre o pavimento inferior e os portões que davam para o pátio interno tinham aparentemente a largura de 100 côvados. — Ez 40:19, 23, 27.

Os refeitórios dos sacerdotes eram separados dos do povo, estando situados mais próximos do templo. Dois destes, junto com dois refeitórios para os cantores do templo, ficavam no pátio interno, ao lado dos maciços portões internos. (Ez 40:38, 44-46) Os sacerdotes tinham também blocos de refeitórios, ao N e ao S do próprio santuário. (Ez 42:1-12) Estes refeitórios, além de sua finalidade mais evidente, eram locais para os sacerdotes trocarem suas vestes de linho usadas no serviço do templo, antes de entrarem no pátio externo. (Ez 42:13, 14; 44:19) Também naquela área, mais para os fundos dos blocos de refeitórios, ficavam os locais onde os sacerdotes cozinhavam e assavam, e que tinham o mesmo objetivo básico daqueles no pátio externo, mas estes eram apenas para os sacerdotes. — Ez 46:19, 20.

Atravessando o pátio externo e passando pelo portão interno, a pessoa entrava no pátio interno. A beirada do pátio interno distava 150 côvados (77,7 m) da beirada do pátio externo ao L, ao N e ao S. O pátio interno tinha 200 côvados (103,6 m) de largura. (Ezequiel 40:47 diz que o pátio interno era um quadrado de 100 côvados de lado. Isto evidentemente se refere a apenas a área em frente do templo, à qual os portões internos davam acesso.) No pátio interno se destacava o altar. — Ez 43:13-17; veja ALTAR (O Altar do Templo de Ezequiel).

A entrada do primeiro aposento do santuário, de 40 côvados (20,7 m) de comprimento por 20 côvados (10,4) de largura, dava-se através de uma porta que tinha uma peça de duas folhas em cada batente. (Ez 41:23, 24) Lá dentro havia a "mesa que está diante de Jeová", um altar de madeira. — Ez 41:21, 22.

As paredes externas do santuário tinham câmaras laterais de quatro côvados (2 m) de largura incorporadas nelas, e apoiando-se nelas. Atingindo três pavimentos, elas abrangiam as paredes O, N e S, 30 câmaras em cada pavimento. (Ez 41:5, 6) Para subir os três pavimentos, havia ao N e ao S passagens em espiral, aparentemente escadas circulares. (Ez 41:7) Para o fundo ou O, do templo, situada aparentemente na extensão N-S, havia uma estrutura chamada bin·yán, um 'edifício que dava para o oeste'. (Ez 41:12) Embora alguns peritos tenham tentado identificar esse edifício com o próprio templo ou santuário, parece que não há base para tal identificação no livro de Ezequiel; o 'edifício que dava para o oeste', em primeiro lugar, tinha formato e dimensões diferentes das do santuário. Esta estrutura sem dúvida tinha alguma finalidade relacionada com os serviços executados no santuário. É possível que houvesse um prédio ou prédios similares localizados ao O do templo de Salomão. — Veja 2Rs 23:11 e 1Cr 26:18.

O Santíssimo tinha o mesmo formato que o do templo de Salomão, sendo um quadrado de 20 côvados de lado. Na visão, Ezequiel viu a glória de Jeová provir do L, enchendo o templo. Jeová descreveu este templo como "o lugar do meu trono". — Ez 43:1-7.

Ezequiel descreve um muro de 500 canas (1.555 m) em cada lado do templo. Alguns peritos acham que isto seja um muro situado a uma distância de uns 600 m do pátio, um espaço cercado pelo muro "para fazer separação entre o que é santo e o que é profano". — Ez 42:16-20.

Ezequiel observou também uma torrente de água que fluía "de debaixo do limiar da Casa para o leste", ao sul do altar, transformando-se numa profunda e poderosa torrente à medida que descia pelo Arabá, em direção à extremidade norte do Mar Salgado. Ali ela curou as águas salgadas, de modo que ficaram cheias de peixes. — Ez 47:1-12.

Cristãos Ungidos — Templo Espiritual. Os cristãos ungidos na terra são comparados a muitas coisas, inclusive a um templo. Esta comparação é apropriada, pois o espírito de Deus habita na congregação dos ungidos. Paulo escreveu aos cristãos em Éfeso "em união com Cristo Jesus", os que estão "selados com o prometido espírito santo", dizendo: "Fostes edificados sobre o alicerce dos apóstolos e profetas, ao passo que o próprio Cristo Jesus é a pedra angular de alicerce. Em união com ele, o edifício inteiro, sendo harmoniosamente conjuntado, desenvolve-se num templo santo para Jeová. Em união com ele também vós estais sendo edificados juntamente como lugar para Deus habitar por espírito." (Ef 1:1, 13; 2:20-22) Revela-se que estes "selados", colocados sobre Cristo qual Alicerce, totalizam 144.000. (Re 7:4; 14:1) O apóstolo Pedro refere-se a estes como "pedras viventes", sendo "edificados como casa espiritual, tendo por objetivo um sacerdócio santo". — 1 Pe 2:5.

Visto que estes subsacerdotes são "edifício de Deus", ele não permitirá que esse templo espiritual sofra aviltamento. Paulo frisa a santidade desse templo espiritual, e o perigo para quem tenta aviltá-lo, quando escreve: "Não sabeis que vós sois templo de Deus e que o espírito de Deus mora em vós? Se alguém destruir o templo de Deus, Deus o destruirá; pois o templo de Deus é santo, templo esse que sois vós." — 1Co 3:9, 16, 17; veja também 2Co 6:16.

Jeová Deus e o Cordeiro 'São o Seu Templo'. Quando João vê a Nova Jerusalém descer do céu, ele observa: "E não vi templo nela, pois Jeová Deus, o Todo-Poderoso, é o seu templo, também o Cordeiro o é." (Re 21:2, 22) Visto que os membros da Nova Jerusalém terão acesso direto à face do próprio Jeová, não necessitarão de um templo através do qual se chegar a Deus. (1Jo 3:2; Re 22:3, 4) Os que compõem a Nova Jerusalém prestarão serviço sagrado a Deus diretamente, sob o sumo sacerdócio do Cordeiro, Jesus Cristo. Por esta razão o Cordeiro partilha com Jeová em ser, na realidade, o templo da Nova Jerusalém.

Um Impostor. O apóstolo Paulo, ao avisar sobre a vindoura apostasia, falou do "homem que é contra a lei" como alguém que se ergue "de modo que se assenta no templo de O Deus, exibindo-se publicamente como sendo um deus". (2Te 2:3, 4) Este "homem que é contra a lei" é um apóstata, um falso instrutor, de modo que ele realmente se assenta apenas naquilo que ele falsamente afirma ser esse templo. — Veja HOMEM QUE É CONTRA A LEI.

Uso Ilustrativo. Certa vez, quando os judeus pediram de Jesus um sinal, ele replicou: "Demoli este templo, e em três dias o levantarei." Os judeus pensavam que ele se referia ao edifício do templo, mas o apóstolo João explica: "Ele estava falando do templo do seu corpo." Quando ele foi ressuscitado por seu Pai, Jeová, no terceiro dia depois de sua morte, os discípulos lembraram-se dessa declaração, entenderam-na e creram nela. (Jo 2:18-22; Mt 27:40) Ele foi ressuscitado, mas não em seu corpo carnal, que fora dado como sacrifício de resgate; não obstante, aquele corpo carnal não sofreu corrupção, mas foi eliminado por Deus, assim como o sacrifício era consumido no altar. Jesus, ao ser ressuscitado, era a mesma pessoa, a mesma personalidade, num corpo novo feito para sua nova habitação, os céus espirituais. — Lu 24:1-7; 1Pe 3:18; Mt 20:28; At 2:31; He 13:8.

TEMPO(S). Veja CALENDÁRIO; TEMPO ACEITÁVEL; TEMPOS DESIGNADOS DAS NAÇÕES.

TEMPO ACEITÁVEL. Em 2 Coríntios 6:2, o apóstolo Paulo cita um trecho da profecia de Isaías 49:8, que diz: "Assim disse Jeová: 'Num tempo de boa vontade te respondi e num dia de salvação te ajudei; e eu te estive resguardando para te dar como pacto para o povo, para reabilitar a terra, para fazer que se reentre na posse das desoladas propriedades hereditárias.'" No contexto original, esta declaração foi evidentemente dirigida a Isaías, como se ele representasse ou personificasse a nação de Israel. (Is 49:3) Tratava-se claramente duma profecia de restauração, de modo que teve seu primeiro cumprimento quando Israel foi libertado de Babilônia, ocasião em que se fez o convite aos presos israelitas: "Saí!" Depois disto eles voltaram para sua terra e reabilitaram esta terra desolada. — Is 49:9.

No entanto, as palavras "para te dar como pacto para o povo", no versículo 8 deste capítulo, e a declaração precedente, no versículo 6 , de que esse "servo" de Jeová seria dado como "luz das nações, para que a . . . salvação [de Deus] viesse a existir até a extremidade da terra", indicam decididamente que essa profecia é messiânica e, portanto, aplica-se a Cristo Jesus como "servo" de Deus. (Compare Is 42:1-4, 6, 7 com Mt 12:18-21.) Visto que o "tempo de boa vontade" seria um tempo em que Jeová 'responderia' e 'ajudaria' seu servo, isto deve aplicar-se à vida terrestre de Jesus, quando ele "ofereceu súplicas e também petições Àquele que era capaz de salvá-lo da morte, com fortes clamores e lágrimas, e ele foi ouvido favoravelmente pelo seu temor piedoso". (He 5:7-9; compare com Jo 12:27, 28; 17:1-5; Lu 22:41-44; 23:46.) Foi, portanto, um "dia de salvação" para o próprio Filho de Deus, período de oportunidade durante o qual ele manifestou perfeição de integridade e, em resultado disto, "tornou-se responsável pela salvação eterna de todos os que lhe obedecem". — He 5:9.

Além disso, a citação que Paulo fez dessa profecia indica uma aplicação ainda mais extensa aos cristãos a quem ele insta que 'não aceitem a benignidade imerecida de Deus e desacertem o propósito dela' e a quem ele diz (após citar Is 49:8): "Eis que agora é o tempo especialmente aceitável. Eis que agora é o dia de salvação." (2Co 6:1, 2) Tais cristãos se haviam tornado o espiritual "Israel de Deus", a partir de Pentecostes de 33 EC (Gál 6:16), mas era preciso que se provassem dignos da benignidade imerecida de Deus, para que o "tempo aceitável" pudesse realmente mostrar-se para eles um "dia de salvação".

De modo similar, o fato de a profecia em sua aplicação original ser de restauração indica uma aplicação a um tempo de libertação do cativeiro espiritual e de restauração ao pleno favor de Deus. — Compare com Sal 69:13-18.

Aos judeus naturais que não reconheceram que o tempo era favorável e que tinham a oportunidade de fazer parte do 'Israel espiritual', Paulo anunciou que passava a dirigir sua atenção para as nações não judaicas, e citou Isaías 49:6 em apoio disto, dizendo: "De fato, Jeová nos tem imposto o mandamento nas seguintes palavras: 'Eu te designei como luz das nações, para que sejas uma salvação até à extremidade da terra.'" (At 13:47) Visto que indicam temporariedade, os termos "tempo" e "dia" implicam urgência e necessidade de usar sabiamente o período ou época oportuna de favor antes que chegue o fim desse período, o que resultará na retirada da misericórdia divina e da oferta de salvação. — Ro 13:11-13; 1Te 5:6-11; Ef 5:15-20.

TEMPO DO FIM. Expressão encontrada seis vezes no livro de Daniel. Refere-se a um período que marca a conclusão de um sistema de coisas e que culmina em sua destruição. Forneceu-se ao profeta Daniel uma previsão dos acontecimentos que ocorreriam no futuro distante. Depois disso, foi-lhe dito: "E quanto a ti, ó Daniel, guarda em segredo as palavras e sela o livro até o tempo do fim. Muitos o percorrerão, e o verdadeiro conhecimento se tornará abundante." — Da 12:4.

A respeito deste texto, o comentarista Thomas Scott, na primeira metade do século 19, fez a seguinte observação: "O anjo, em conclusão, deu a entender a Daniel que esta profecia permaneceria obscura e como 'um livro selado', do qual pouco se entenderia, 'até o tempo do fim' . . . Os fatos têm evidenciado que realmente sucedeu assim: sempre se reconheceram imensas dificuldades em muitas profecias de Daniel, e estas têm sido como 'palavras fechadas' até mesmo para os crentes em geral. . . . Em tempos mais recentes, muitos têm feito grandes esforços, no que concerne a investigar a história, para ilustrar as partes dessas profecias que já se realizaram e para formular, mediante a comparação delas com outros textos, algum critério do que ainda resta para se cumprir; e assim se tem fornecido muito esclarecimento sobre elas. À medida que gradualmente forem sendo cumpridas, serão mais bem entendidas; e gerações futuras ficarão bem mais surpresas e instruídas por elas do que nós." (Explanatory Notes [Notas Explanatórias], de Scott, 1832) A falta de entendimento das profecias de Daniel, em princípios do século 19, indicava que o predito "tempo do fim" ainda era futuro, visto que os "perspicazes", os verdadeiros servos de Deus, haviam de entender a profecia no "tempo do fim". — Da 12:9, 10.

A expressão "tempo do fim" também é usada no que diz respeito a acontecimentos específicos relacionados com o governo humano. Daniel 11:40 reza: "No tempo do fim, o rei do sul se empenhará com [o rei do norte] em dar empurrões, e o rei do norte arremeterá contra ele com carros, e com cavaleiros, e com muitos navios." Depois disso, a profecia considera as ações do "rei do norte" e indica que este terá um fim. (Da 11:41-45) Assim, o "tempo do fim", neste caso, deve evidentemente ser entendido como um período que culmina com a destruição do "rei do norte". O que confirma isto é que o "rei do norte" é anteriormente representado perseguindo os servos de Deus, os "perspicazes", até o "tempo do fim", isto é, até o seu tempo do fim. — Da 11:33-35.

Outro aspecto associado ao "tempo do fim" é o erguimento dum "rei de semblante feroz" que tomaria posição contra o "Príncipe dos príncipes" e por fim seria destroçado ou destruído. Este "rei" se ergueria na parte final dos reinos que surgiriam das quatro partes em que se dividiria o Império Grego. (Da 8:8-25) Uma vez que o "rei do norte" e o "rei do sul" surgiram da mesma fonte, segue-se logicamente que o "rei de semblante feroz" corresponde a um desses 'reis' no seu "tempo do fim".

A expressão "tempo do fim" não significa 'fim do tempo', mas indica um período que culmina no fim ou destruição, não de todas as coisas, mas das coisas mencionadas na profecia. As Escrituras esclarecem que o tempo em si não findará. Por exemplo, o salmista disse a respeito da terra: "Não será abalada, por tempo indefinido ou para todo o sempre." (Sal 104:5) Visto que a terra continuará a existir, conclui-se necessariamente que o tempo, como "dimensão" ou medida terrestre, não cessa-

rá. Embora seja verdade que Revelação (Apocalipse) 10:6 possa ser traduzido por "não haverá mais tempo", o contexto indica que isto significa nenhuma concessão adicional de tempo; assim, termina um período específico ou concedido de tempo. (BJ) Outras versões, portanto, rezam: "Não haveria mais demora." (Al, IBB) "Não haverá mais demora." (NM) Comentando este texto, A. T. Robertson observa: "Isto não significa que chronos (tempo) . . . deixará de existir, mas somente que não haverá mais demora no cumprimento da sétima trombeta (versículo 7), em resposta à pergunta: 'Até quando?' (6:10)." — Word Pictures in the New Testament (Quadros Verbais no Novo Testamento), 1933, Vol. VI, p. 372.

TEMPO INDEFINIDO. A palavra hebraica ʽoh·lám transmite a ideia de tempo indefinido ou incerto. O lexicógrafo Gesenius atribui-lhe o significado de "tempo oculto, i.e., obscuro e longo, cujo princípio ou fim é incerto ou indefinido". (A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament [Léxico Hebraico e Inglês do Velho Testamento], traduzido para o inglês por E. Robinson, 1836, p. 746) Concordemente, expressões como "tempo indefinido" (Sal 25:6), "de duração indefinida" (Hab 3:6), "da antiguidade" (Gên 6:4), "há muito tempo" (Jos 24:2; Pr 22:28; 23:10) e "de longa duração" (Ec 12:5) transmitem apropriadamente a ideia do termo da língua original.

A palavra ʽoh·lám às vezes é associada com o que é eterno. (1Rs 2:45 n) O profeta Isaías escreveu: "Jeová, o Criador das extremidades da terra, é Deus por tempo indefinido." (Is 40:28) Jeová é "de tempo indefinido a tempo indefinido". (Sal 90:2) Visto que Jeová é eterno e não morre, ele continuará a ser Deus por toda a eternidade. (Hab 1:12; 1Ti 1:17) No entanto, a expressão hebraica ʽoh·lám não significa, em si mesma, "para sempre". Muitas vezes se refere a coisas que têm fim, mas se pode dizer que o período de existência dessas coisas é de 'tempo indefinido', porque o tempo de seu fim não se acha então especificado. Por exemplo, o pacto da Lei, de 'duração indefinida', chegou ao fim com a morte de Jesus e com a introdução de um novo pacto. (Êx 31:16, 17; Ro 10:4; Gál 5:18; Col 2:16, 17; He 9:15) De modo similar, o sacerdócio arônico, de 'duração indefinida', também teve fim. — Êx 40:15; He 7:11-24; 10:1.

Outro termo hebraico, ʽadh, indica ilimitado tempo futuro, sempiternidade ou eternidade. (1Cr 28:9; Sal 19:9; Is 9:6; 45:17; Hab 3:6) Às vezes, como no Salmo 45:6, as palavras ʽoh·lám e ʽadh aparecem juntas e podem ser traduzidas "que dura pelas eras, e para sempre" (Yg), "que perdura pelas eras e mais além" (Ro) e "por tempo indefinido, para todo o sempre" (NM). A respeito da Terra, o salmista declarou: "Não será abalada, por tempo indefinido ou para todo o sempre." — Sal 104:5.

O termo hebraico né·tsahh pode também indicar sempiternidade. Entre as possíveis traduções acham-se "para sempre" (Jó 4:20; 14:20), "perpetuamente" (Is 57:16) e "sempre" (Sal 9:18). Às vezes, né·tsahh e ʽoh·lám ocorrem de forma paralela (Sal 49:8, 9) ou os termos né·tsahh e ʽadh aparecem juntos. (Am 1:11) Essas três palavras são encontradas no Salmo 9:5, 6: "Censuraste nações . . . Extinguiste o nome deles por tempo indefinido [leʽoh·lám], para todo o sempre [wa·ʽédh]. Ó tu, inimigo, tuas desolações chegaram ao seu fim perpétuo [la·né·tsahh]."

Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, a palavra ai·ón pode indicar um período de tempo de duração indefinida ou indeterminada, um período de tempo remoto, porém não infindável. Por exemplo, em Lucas 1:70 e em Atos 3:21, ai·ón pode ser traduzida "desde a antiguidade", "da antiguidade", "dos tempos antigos", "desde séculos", "outrora" (ALA, NM, BV). No entanto, o contexto não raro sugere que se deve entender o termo ai·ón como um período de duração indefinida, por tal período ter duração infindável. (Lu 1:55; Jo 6:50, 51; 12:34; 1Jo 2:17) Similarmente, o adjetivo ai·ó·ni·os (derivado de ai·ón) pode, como se evidencia do contexto, significar tanto "de longa duração" (Ro 16:25; 2Ti 1:9; Tit 1:2) como "eterno(a)". (Mt 18:8; 19:16, 29) Outro adjetivo grego, a·í·di·os, significa especificamente "eterno(a)" ou "sempiterno". — Ro 1:20; Ju 6, NM, Al, BV; para uma consideração adicional de ai·ón, veja IDADE, ERA; SISTEMAS DE COISAS.

TEMPOS DESIGNADOS DAS NAÇÕES. Depois de considerar a destruição que sobreviria à cidade de Jerusalém, Jesus fez a seguinte declaração: "E Jerusalém será pisada pelas nações, até se cumprirem os tempos designados das nações ["os tempos dos gentios", Al, So]." (Lu 21:24) O período indicado pela expressão "tempos designados das nações [gr.: kai·roí e·thnón]" tem suscitado consideráveis discussões sobre seu significado e implicações.

O Significado de "Tempos Designados". A expressão "tempos designados", neste caso, provém da palavra grega kai·rós (plural: kai·roí), que, de acordo com Vine's Expository Dictionary of Old and New Testament Words (Dicionário Expositivo de Palavras do Velho e do Novo Testamento, de Vine, 1981, Vol. 4, p. 138), "significava um período fixo ou definido, uma época, às vezes um tempo oportuno ou apropriado". O Greek-English Lexicon (Léxico Grego-Inglês), de Liddell e Scott (1968, p. 859), dá a adicional definição: "tempo exato ou crítico". Assim, kai·rós é usada para referir-se à "época" da colheita, à "estação" dos frutos e à "estação" dos figos (Mt 13:30; 21:34; Mr 11:13); o "tempo apropriado" para distribuir alimento (Mt 24:45; Lu 12:42); "o tempo designado" para ter início o ministério de Jesus e o período de oportunidade proporcionado por esse ministério (Mr 1:15; Mt 16:3; Lu 12:56; 19:44); e o "tempo designado" de sua morte. (Mt 26:18) Os demônios, prestes a serem expulsos de certos homens, bradaram para Jesus: "Vieste aqui atormentar-nos antes do tempo designado?" — Mt 8:29.

Kai·rós também é usado com referência a épocas ou ocasiões futuras no arranjo ou no cronograma de Deus, especialmente no que diz respeito à presença de Cristo e seu Reino. (At 1:7; 3:19; 1Te 5:1) Assim, o apóstolo Paulo fala do "segredo sagrado" revelado por Deus "para uma administração no pleno limite dos tempos designados [kai·rón], a saber, ajuntar novamente todas as coisas no Cristo, as coisas nos céus e as coisas na terra". (Ef 1:9, 10) Em vista do significado da palavra kai·rós, conforme usada no texto bíblico, pode-se esperar corretamente que a expressão "tempos designados das nações" refira-se, não a algo vago ou indefinido, mas a um "período fixo ou definido", um "tempo exato ou crítico", que tem um princípio definido e um fim definido.

As "Nações" e "Jerusalém". O significado da declaração de Jesus acha-se necessariamente interligado com sua referência a 'Jerusalém ser pisada', o que, segundo ele, perduraria até o cumprimento dos "tempos designados das nações". O termo "nações" ou "gentios" traduz a palavra grega é·thne, que significa "nações" e foi usada pelos escritores bíblicos para referir-se especificamente às nações não judaicas. À base disto, alguns acham que a profecia se aplica ao período durante o qual o local geográfico da antiga cidade de Jerusalém ficaria sob a dominação e o controle gentio.

Embora a cidade literal de Jerusalém seja obviamente mencionada na descrição de Jesus sobre a destruição, que havia de sobrevir e que realmente sobreveio a ela no ano 70 EC, quando os romanos a destruíram, a declaração a respeito dos "tempos designados das nações" situa a profecia bem além desse ponto, conforme observam muitos comentaristas. Assim, o renomado Commentary (Comentário), de F. C. Cook, diz sobre Lucas 21:24: "Serve para separar o trecho estritamente escatológico [isto é, o trecho relacionado com os últimos dias] ligado à grande profecia, da parte que pertence apropriadamente à destruição de Jerusalém." De modo que é essencial determinar que significado as Escrituras inspiradas atribuem a "Jerusalém", a fim de avaliar se os "tempos designados das nações" referem-se apenas à cidade literal de Jerusalém ou a algo adicional e maior.

Jerusalém era a capital da nação de Israel, cujos reis da linhagem de Davi, segundo se dizia, 'sentavam-se no trono de Jeová'. (1Cr 29:23) Como tal, ela representava a sede do governo divinamente constituído, ou reino típico de Deus, que operava por intermédio da casa de Davi. Com o seu monte Sião, era "a vila do grandioso Rei". (Sal 48:1, 2) Por isso, Jerusalém veio a simbolizar o reino da dinastia do Rei Davi, assim como Washington, Londres, Paris e Moscou representam os poderes governamentais de nações da atualidade e são assim mencionados nos comunicados noticiosos. Depois de Jerusalém ter sido pisada pelos babilônios, o que resultou em seu rei ser levado para o exílio e na desolação da terra, nenhum membro da dinastia davídica governou novamente na Jerusalém terrestre. Mas as Escrituras mostram que Jesus, o Messias, nascido na linhagem de Davi, governaria no monte Sião celestial, na Jerusalém celestial. — Sal 2:6, 7; He 5:5; Re 14:1, 3.

Começo do 'pisoteio'. O 'pisoteio' daquele reino da dinastia de regentes davídicos não começou com a devastação da cidade de Jerusalém pelos romanos, em 70 EC. Começou séculos antes, com a derrubada dessa dinastia pelos babilônios, em 607 AEC, quando Nabucodonosor destruiu Jerusalém e levou cativo o destronado Rei Zedequias, e a terra foi deixada desolada. (2Rs 25:1-26; veja CRONOLOGIA.) Isto concordava com as palavras proféticas dirigidas a Zedequias, em Ezequiel 21:25-27, a saber: "Remove o turbante e retira a coroa. Esta não será a mesma. . . . Uma ruína, uma ruína, uma ruína a farei. Também, quanto a esta, certamente não virá a ser de ninguém, até que venha aquele que tem o direito legal, e a ele é que terei de dá-lo." As Escrituras Gregas Cristãs revelam que aquele que tem o "direito legal" à coroa davídica, perdida por Zedequias, é Cristo Jesus, a respeito de quem o anjo, ao anunciar seu futuro nascimento, disse: "Jeová Deus lhe dará o trono de Davi, seu pai, e ele reinará sobre a casa de Jacó para sempre, e não haverá fim do seu reino." — Lu 1:32, 33.

Com a queda de Jerusalém em 607 AEC, as potências gentias passaram a exercer domínio sobre toda a terra. A dinastia e a regência davídica sofreram interrupção, de modo que Jerusalém, ou aquilo que ela representava, continuaria a ser 'pisada', enquanto o reino de Deus, conforme exercido pela casa de Davi, fosse mantido em condição rebaixada e inoperante sob as potências gentias. Notando esta ligação com governo, o Unger's Bible Dictionary (Dicionário Bíblico de Unger; 1965, p. 398) comenta: "Consequentemente, os gentios avançam na qualidade de 'as nações' para o fim de seu mordomado como governantes da terra. O término desse período será o fim dos 'tempos dos gentios' (Luc. 21:24; Dan. 2:36-44)." — Compare com Ez 17:12-21; também, a descrição da queda da Medo-Pérsia, em Da 8:7, 20.

Sua Relação com as Profecias de Daniel. Pelo menos duas vezes, nesta profecia a respeito do tempo do fim, Jesus se referiu ao conteúdo do livro do profeta Daniel. (Compare Mt 24:15, 21 com Da 11:31; 12:1.) No livro de Daniel, encontramos um quadro da dominação da terra pelas potências gentias durante seus "tempos designados". O segundo capítulo de Daniel contém a visão profética (recebida pelo Rei Nabucodonosor) da grande imagem que Daniel, por inspiração, mostrou representar a marcha das potências mundiais gentias, que termina com sua destruição por parte do Reino estabelecido pelo "Deus do céu", Reino este que a partir de então passa a governar toda a terra. (Da 2:31-45) É digno de nota que a imagem começa com o Império Babilônico, a primeira potência mundial a 'pisar Jerusalém' por derrubar a dinastia davídica e deixar vago o "trono de Jeová" em Jerusalém. Isto também confirma o início dos "tempos designados das nações", no ano da destruição de Jerusalém, 607 AEC.

Visão-sonho da árvore, em Daniel, capítulo 4. Novamente, encontramos no livro de Daniel um íntimo paralelo com o uso que Jesus fez da palavra "tempos", com referência às "nações", ou potências gentias. E, novamente, é a Nabucodonosor, o destronador de Zedequias, descendente de Davi, que foi dada outra visão, interpretada por Daniel, relacionada com a realeza divinamente nomeada. A visão simbólica era duma imensa árvore; um anjo do céu mandou derrubá-la. Seu toco foi então cingido com bandas de ferro e de cobre, e teve de continuar assim entre a relva do campo até se terem passado "sete tempos". "Mude-se-lhe o coração daquele do gênero humano e dê-se-lhe um coração de animal, e passem sobre ele sete tempos . . . para que os viventes saibam que o Altíssimo é Governante no reino da humanidade e que ele o dá a quem quiser, e estabelece nele até mesmo o mais humilde da humanidade." — Da 4:10-17; veja 4:16 n.

Relacionada com os "tempos designados das nações". A visão sem dúvida alguma teve um cumprimento no próprio Nabucodonosor. (Veja Da 4:31-35.) Portanto, alguns acham que tem aplicação profética direta somente a ele e veem nesta visão apenas a apresentação da verdade eterna da 'supremacia de Deus sobre todos os demais poderes — quer humanos, quer supostamente divinos'. Reconhecem que a aplicação dessa verdade ou princípio transcende o próprio caso de Nabucodonosor, mas não creem que se relacione com algum específico período de tempo ou cronograma divino. Todavia, um exame do inteiro livro de Daniel revela que, em toda a parte, o elemento tempo tem destaque em suas visões e profecias; e as potências e os eventos mundiais descritos em cada uma de tais visões não são independentes, nem ocorrem por acaso, com o elemento tempo ambíguo, mas se ajustam a um fundo histórico ou sequência de tempo. (Compare com Da 2:36-45; 7:3-12, 17-26; 8:3-14, 20-25; 9:2, 24-27; 11:2-45; 12:7-13.) Além disso, o livro repetidas vezes aponta para a conclusão que constitui o tema de suas profecias: o estabelecimento do Reino universal e eterno de Deus, exercido mediante a regência do "filho de homem". (Da 2:35, 44, 45; 4:17, 25, 32; 7:9-14, 18, 22, 27; 12:1) O livro também se distingue nas Escrituras Hebraicas pelas referências ao "tempo do fim". — Da 8:19; 11:35, 40; 12:4, 9.

Em vista do acima, não parece lógico avaliar a visão da "árvore" simbólica e sua referência a "sete tempos" como se não tivesse nenhuma outra aplicação, a não ser aos sete anos de loucura e subsequente recuperação e retorno ao poder de um único governante babilônico, especialmente à luz da referência profética do próprio Jesus aos "tempos designados das nações". O que segue são fortes razões para crer que a extensa visão e sua interpretação foram incluídas no livro de Daniel por revelarem a duração dos "tempos designados das nações" e o tempo para o estabelecimento do Reino de Deus, por seu Cristo — o tempo em que essa visão foi dada: num ponto crítico da história, quando Deus, o Soberano Universal, havia permitido que se derrubasse o próprio reino que Ele estabelecera entre seu povo pactuado; a pessoa a quem foi revelada a visão: o próprio governante que serviu como instrumento divino para tal derrubada e que se tornou, desta forma, o recebedor do domínio mundial por permissão divina, isto é, sem interferência de qualquer reino representativo de Jeová Deus; e o tema indiviso da visão, a saber: "para que os viventes saibam que o Altíssimo é Governante no reino da humanidade e que ele o dá a quem quiser, e estabelece nele até mesmo o mais humilde da humanidade". — Da 4:17.

O simbolismo da árvore e a soberania de Deus. Os simbolismos usados nesta visão profética de forma alguma são ímpares. Árvores são usadas em outros lugares para representar poderes governantes, incluindo o do reino típico de Deus, em Jerusalém. (Compare com Jz 9:6-15; Ez 17:1-24; 31:2-18.) Diversas vezes, um toco que brota e o símbolo dum "rebentão" ou "renovo" representam a renovação da realeza em certa família ou linhagem, especialmente nas profecias messiânicas. (Is 10:33–11:10; 53:2-7; Je 23:5; Ez 17:22-24; Za 6:12, 13; compare com Jó 14:7-9.) Jesus falou de si mesmo como "a raiz e a descendência de Davi". — Re 5:5; 22:16.

É evidente que o ponto-chave da visão é o exercício, por parte de Jeová Deus, da incontestável soberania no "reino da humanidade", e isto fornece a orientação para se entender o pleno significado da visão. Revela-se que a árvore tem aplicação a Nabucodonosor, que, nesse momento da história, era o cabeça da Potência Mundial dominante, Babilônia. Todavia, antes de Nabucodonosor conquistar Jerusalém, o reino típico de Deus, que governava a partir daquela cidade, era o meio através do qual Jeová expressava sua legítima soberania para com a terra. Constituía, assim, um bloqueio ou impedimento divino a que Nabucodonosor atingisse seu alvo da dominação mundial. Ao permitir que o reino típico em Jerusalém fosse derrubado, Jeová permitiu que fosse derrubada a sua própria expressão visível de soberania, mediante a dinastia davídica de reis. A expressão e o exercício da dominação mundial no "reino da humanidade", sem o estorvo de um reino representativo de Deus, passavam então para as mãos das nações gentias. (La 1:5; 2:2, 16, 17) À luz destes fatos, vê-se que a "árvore" representava, além de sua aplicação a Nabucodonosor, e superior a esta, a soberania ou a dominação mundial pelo arranjo de Deus.

Renovação da dominação mundial. Deus, porém, deixa claro aqui que Ele não entregou para sempre a dominação mundial às potências gentias. A visão mostra que a restrição que Deus impôs a si mesmo (representada pelas bandas de ferro e de cobre ao redor do toco da árvore) continuaria até que se 'passassem sobre ela sete tempos'. (Da 4:16, 23, 25) Daí, visto que o "Altíssimo é Governante no reino da humanidade", Deus daria a dominação mundial 'a quem quisesse'. (Da 4:17) O próprio livro profético de Daniel mostra que este é o "filho de homem", a quem se dá "domínio, e dignidade, e um reino, para que todos os povos, grupos nacionais e línguas o [sirvam]". (Da 7:13, 14) A própria profecia de Jesus, em que ocorre a referência aos "tempos designados das nações", aponta sem dúvida alguma para o exercício de tal dominação mundial por parte de Cristo Jesus, como o rei escolhido por Deus, o herdeiro da dinastia davídica. (Mt 24:30, 31; Lu 21:27-31, 36) Assim, o toco simbólico, que representa a retenção, por parte de Deus, do direito soberano de exercer a dominação mundial no "reino da humanidade", deveria brotar de novo no Reino de seu Filho. — Sal 89:27, 35-37.

Sete Tempos Simbólicos. No que se passou com Nabucodonosor em cumprimento da visão, os "sete tempos" eram, evidentemente, sete anos, durante os quais ele enlouqueceu, com sintomas semelhantes aos da licantropia, e abandonou seu trono para comer relva como um animal do campo. (Da 4:31-36) Notavelmente, a descrição bíblica do exercício da dominação mundial pelas potências gentias é apresentada sob a figura de animais que se opõem ao povo santo de Deus e a Seu "Príncipe dos príncipes". (Compare com Da 7:2-8, 12, 17-26; 8:3-12, 20-25; Re 11:7; 13:1-11; 17:7-14.) Os lexicógrafos mostram que a palavra "tempos" (do aramaico 'id·dán) é usada na profecia de Daniel com o significado de "anos". (Veja Lexicon in Veteris Testamenti Libros [Léxico dos Livros do Velho Testamento], de L. Koehler e W. Baumgartner, Leiden, 1958, p. 1106; A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament [Léxico Hebraico e Inglês do Velho Testamento], de Brown, Driver e Briggs, 1980, p. 1105; Lexicon Linguae Aramaicae Veteris Testamenti [Léxico da Língua Aramaica do Velho Testamento], editado por E. Vogt, Roma, 1971, p. 124.) Neste caso, a duração de um ano é de 360 dias, visto que Revelação (Apocalipse) 12:6, 14 mostra que três tempos e meio equivalem a "mil duzentos e sessenta dias". (Compare também com Re 11:2, 3.) Segundo esta contagem, "sete tempos" equivalem a 2.520 dias. Na leitura dos relatos de Números 14:34 e de Ezequiel 4:6, pode-se perceber que o registro bíblico às vezes usa um número específico de dias para representar profeticamente um número equivalente de anos. É só aplicando aos "sete tempos" desta profecia a fórmula expressa nesses textos, isto é, "um dia por um ano", que a visão de Daniel, capítulo 4, pode ter um cumprimento significativo, mais além dos dias de Nabucodonosor, já falecido, conforme se pode esperar em razão das evidências até aqui apresentadas. Portanto, eles representam 2.520 anos.

Um fato histórico digno de nota foi a revista Watch Tower (A Sentinela), de março de 1880, à base das informações e das evidências apresentadas acima, identificar o ano de 1914 como o tempo do encerramento dos "tempos designados das nações" (e o fim da concessão de poder aos governantes gentios). Isto ocorreu uns 34 anos antes da chegada daquele ano e dos momentosos acontecimentos que ele iniciou. Na edição de 30 de agosto de 1914, The World (O Mundo), um dos principais jornais de Nova Iorque naquela época, num artigo de destaque publicado no suplemento de domingo, comentou sobre isto nas seguintes palavras: "O horrível irrompimento da guerra na Europa cumpriu uma profecia extraordinária. No último quarto de século, por meio de pregadores e pela imprensa, os 'Estudantes Internacionais da Bíblia' . . . têm proclamado ao mundo que o Dia da Ira profetizado na Bíblia amanheceria em 1914."

Os acontecimentos de 1914 EC e a partir de então são história bem conhecida de todos, a começar com a grande guerra que irrompeu, a primeira guerra mundial da história humana e a primeira que foi travada, não pela dominação só da Europa, nem da África, nem da Ásia, mas pela dominação do mundo. — Lu 21:7-24, 29-33; Re 11:15-18; veja PRESENÇA; ÚLTIMOS DIAS.

TENDA. Abrigo desmontável, feito de tecido ou de pele, e sustentado por varas. As tendas eram um dos mais antigos tipos de habitação humana (Gên 4:20; 9:21) e eram comumente usadas por povos nômades do Oriente Médio. — Gên 9:27; Sal 83:6.

A Bíblia fornece alguns pormenores sobre o formato e o uso de tendas. Isto é suplementado pelo que se sabe sobre as tendas usadas pelos árabes em anos mais recentes, visto que estas parecem não diferir substancialmente das do período bíblico. Muitos peritos creem que as tendas primitivas eram de peles de animais. (Gên 3:21; Êx 26:14) Entre os beduínos da atualidade, é costume usar tendas de tecido escuro, feito de pelo de cabra. (Compare com Êx 36:14; Cân 1:5.) Tiras deste material são emendadas, e o tamanho geral da tenda retangular depende da riqueza do dono e do número de ocupantes. A tenda é sustentada por várias varas de cerca de 1,5 a 2 m de comprimento, e a mais alta delas fica perto do meio; para manter-se firme contra o vento, há cordas presas a estacas de tenda. (Jz 4:21) Para se ter privacidade e proteção contra o vento, penduram-se panos nas laterais da tenda, mas estes podem ser levantados ou removidos para que haja ventilação.

Parece que nos tempos bíblicos as tendas maiores eram geralmente divididas em pelo menos dois compartimentos, pendurando-se panos de tenda. A "tenda de Sara", mencionada em Gênesis 24:67, talvez se refira ao seu compartimento ou a uma tenda que ela ocupava sozinha, pois alguns homens ricos possuíam várias tendas, e as mulheres às vezes tinham sua própria tenda. (Gên 13:5; 31:33) É provável que se utilizassem esteiras para forrar o chão dentro da tenda.

As tendas eram uma característica distintiva da vida nômade, contrastando-se com as casas daqueles que tinham uma vida mais estabelecida. Assim, fala-se que Abraão "morava em tendas" enquanto "aguardava a cidade que tem verdadeiros alicerces". (He 11:9, 10) Parece que os israelitas moravam principalmente em casas, não em tendas, durante sua permanência no Egito. (Êx 12:7) Mas, ao saírem do Egito, voltaram a morar em tendas (Êx 16:16) e as utilizaram durante os 40 anos que passaram no ermo. (Le 14:8; Núm 16:26) Neste período, duas tendas específicas tinham especial importância, o "tabernáculo" e a tenda de Moisés. — Êx 25:8, 9; 26:1; 33:7; veja TABERNÁCULO; TENDA DE REUNIÃO.

Mesmo depois de os israelitas terem conquistado a Terra da Promessa, pastores e agricultores às vezes ainda usavam tendas no campo. (Cân 1:8) É provável que Zacarias 12:7 se refira a eles, visto que seriam os primeiros a ser atingidos e a precisar de proteção se uma nação inimiga investisse contra o país para atacar a cidade de Jerusalém. Além disso, comandantes militares e exércitos usavam tendas quando em expedições distantes. — 1Sa 17:54; 2Rs 7:7; compare com Da 11:45.

O longo contato dos israelitas com tendas sem dúvida deu origem ao uso poético de "tenda" para referir-se a qualquer habitação, mesmo se se tratasse duma casa normal. — Êx 12:23, 30; 1Sa 13:2; 1Rs 12:16; Sal 78:51.

Usos Figurados. Esta familiaridade com tendas reflete-se também nas muitas referências figuradas que a Bíblia faz a tendas. Com respeito à época em que se aproximava da morte, Ezequias escreveu: "Minha própria habitação foi arrancada e removida de mim qual tenda de pastores." (Is 38:12) Assim como uma tenda que ocupava certo lugar podia ser rapidamente desmontada e removida, tirando-se as varas e arrancando-se as estacas, da mesma forma o lugar de Ezequias na terra dos viventes parecia transitório e facilmente removível. Elifaz assemelhou a morte a arrancar a corda duma tenda, o que causaria o desabamento da tenda. — Jó 4:21.

De forma um tanto similar, Paulo usou uma tenda como metáfora ao falar do corpo humano dos cristãos gerados pelo espírito. Uma tenda desmontável é uma habitação mais frágil e temporária do que uma casa normal. Embora existam na terra num corpo mortal de carne, os cristãos que têm o espírito qual penhor da vindoura vida celestial aguardam "um edifício da parte de Deus", um corpo celestial, que é eterno, incorruptível. — 1Co 15:50-53; 2Co 5:1-5; compare com 2Pe 1:13, 14.

Ao representar a destruição que sobreviria aos judeus, Jeremias usou uma tenda como figura de linguagem. (Je 4:20) Assemelhou a nação desolada a uma mulher cuja tenda estava caída, com as cordas cortadas. Piorando ainda mais a situação já patética, seus filhos estavam no exílio, de modo que não restava ninguém que pudesse ajudá-la na tarefa de erguer e retesar a tenda. (Je 10:20) Quando os babilônios destruíram Jerusalém, a cidade, como anterior agrupamento de habitações, podia ser descrita como "a tenda da filha de Sião", sobre a qual Deus derramara seu furor. — La 2:4.

Em vários casos, uma "tenda" também servia em outro sentido figurado. A tenda duma pessoa era um lugar de descanso e de proteção contra as forças da natureza. (Gên 18:1) Em vista dos costumes no que tangia à hospitalidade, os visitantes tinham motivos de crer que receberiam cuidados e seriam respeitados quando acolhidos na tenda de alguém. Por conseguinte, quando Revelação (Apocalipse) 7:15 diz, sobre os da "grande multidão", que Deus "estenderá sobre eles a sua tenda", isto sugere cuidado protetor e segurança. (Sal 61:3, 4) Isaías fala dos preparativos que a esposa de Deus, Sião, deve fazer para os filhos que ela terá. Manda-se-lhe 'fazer mais espaçoso o lugar de sua tenda'. (Is 54:2) Assim, ela amplia o lugar protetor para seus filhos.

Em Revelação 21:1-3, Deus projetou a visão de João até o Reinado Milenar de Cristo e disse: "Eis que a tenda de Deus está com a humanidade, e ele residirá com eles [ou, armará sua tenda com eles]." Tal como prefigurado pela tenda, ou tabernáculo, no ermo, Deus residirá com a humanidade, não em pessoa, mas de forma representativa, ao lidar com ela por intermédio do "Cordeiro de Deus", que também é o grande Sumo Sacerdote. — Êx 25:8; 33:20; Jo 1:29; He 4:14.

TENDA DE REUNIÃO. Expressão que se aplica tanto à tenda de Moisés (Êx 33:7), como ao tabernáculo sagrado que foi erguido no ermo. (Êx 39:32, 40; 40:2, 6, 7, 22, 24, 26, 29, 30, 32, 34, 35) Por algum tempo, até ser erigido o tabernáculo, a tenda de Moisés serviu como santuário provisório. Isto se deu porque a nuvem, que representava a presença de Jeová, pairava "à" (provavelmente, em frente à) entrada desta tenda sempre que Moisés entrava nela, e Jeová se comunicava ali com Moisés. Era chamada de "tenda de reunião", evidentemente porque o povo tinha de ir lá para indagar de Jeová, de modo que, na realidade, eles se reuniam ali com Jeová. (Êx 33:7-11) Aparentemente pela mesma razão, o tabernáculo sagrado foi chamado de "tenda de reunião". — Veja TABERNÁCULO.

TENDA DO TESTEMUNHO. Veja TABERNÁCULO.

TENDÃO. Cordão branco de tecido forte que liga os músculos a ossos ou cartilagens. Diz-se que o homem é tecido de ossos e tendões. — Jó 10:11, veja também Jó 40:15-18.

Enquanto Jacó se engalfinhava com um anjo, este tocou na concavidade da articulação da coxa de Jacó, fazendo-a sair do lugar. O relato escrito posteriormente por Moisés diz: "É por isso que os filhos de Israel não costumam comer o tendão do nervo da coxa, que está na concavidade da articulação da coxa, até o dia de hoje [isto é, de Moisés], porque ele tocou na concavidade da articulação da coxa de Jacó, no tendão do nervo da coxa." (Gên 32:32) Muitos judeus ainda aderem a este costume, removendo o nervo ciático, junto com artérias e tendões, antes de comer um animal. Este preceito é considerado por alguns comentaristas judeus como um lembrete da providência de Deus para com Israel, conforme exemplificada nessa experiência do patriarca Jacó, pai das 12 tribos.

Uso Figurado. Comentava-se, em sentido figurado, que os israelitas tinham cerviz como "um tendão de ferro", o que significa que eram rígidos, teimosos, de dura cerviz. (Is 48:4; compare com Êx 32:9.) O reavivamento espiritual que Deus levaria a cabo em seu povo foi representado pelo ajuntamento de ossos e a colocação de carne e tendões sobre eles. — Ez 37:6-8.

TENDAS, FABRICANTE DE. Quem fabrica ou conserta tendas. Em Atos 18:3, a profissão de Paulo, Áquila e Priscila é chamada, em grego, de ske·no·poi·ós. Surgiram várias opiniões quanto ao tipo exato de artesão que esta palavra indica (se se trata dum fabricante de tendas, dum tecelão de tapeçarias ou dum fabricante de cordas); no entanto, numerosos peritos reconhecem que "não parece haver motivos para abandonar a tradução 'fabricantes de tendas'". — The Expositor's Greek Testament (O Testamento Grego do Expositor), editado por W. Nicoll, 1967, Vol. II, p. 385.

Ao visitar Corinto pela primeira vez, Paulo ficou hospedado na casa de Áquila e Priscila, "em razão de serem da mesma profissão". (At 18:1-3) O apóstolo Paulo era de Tarso, na Cilícia, área famosa por seu tecido de pelo de cabra, chamado cilicium, do qual se fabricavam tendas. (At 21:39) Entre os judeus do primeiro século EC, considerava-se honroso ensinar uma profissão a um jovem, mesmo que ele fosse obter instrução superior. De modo que Paulo provavelmente adquiriu experiência na fabricação de tendas quando ainda era jovem. A fabricação de tendas talvez tenha sido também o tipo de trabalho que o apóstolo realizou em Tessalônica (1Te 2:9; 2Te 3:8) e em outros lugares. (At 20:34, 35; 1Co 4:11, 12) Esse trabalho não era fácil, pois consta que o cilicium geralmente era endurecido e áspero, em razão do que era difícil de cortar e costurar.

TEÓFILO [Amado por Deus; Amigo de Deus]. A pessoa a quem Lucas dirigiu tanto seu Evangelho como Atos dos Apóstolos. (Lu 1:3, 4; At 1:1) Ser ele chamado de "excelentíssimo" talvez indique elevada posição de algum tipo, ou pode simplesmente ser uma expressão de alta estima. Pelo visto, Teófilo era cristão, e teria sido oralmente instruído a respeito de Jesus Cristo e seu ministério. A declaração escrita de Lucas serviu para assegurar-lhe da certeza do que aprendera oralmente.

TERA [possivelmente do babilônio, com o significado de "Íbex"].

1. Pai de Abraão, a oitava geração a contar de Sem. (Lu 3:34; Gên 11:10-24; 1Cr 1:24-26) Tera, por meio de seus filhos, Abraão, Naor e Harã, tornou-se antepassado de muitas tribos. (Gên 11:27; 22:20-24; 25:1-4, 13-15; 1Cr 1:28-42; 2:1, 2) Tera começou a gerar filhos aos 70 anos. Embora Abraão seja alistado em primeiro lugar, isto parece dar-se não por ser o primogênito, mas por ser o mais conhecido dos filhos de Tera. Quando Tera morreu, aos 205 anos, Abraão só tinha 75 anos, de modo que Tera devia ter 130 anos quando Abraão nasceu. (Gên 11:26, 32; 12:4) Sara era meia-irmã de Abraão, provavelmente filha de Tera com outra esposa. (Gên 20:12) É provável que o primogênito de Tera tenha sido Harã, cuja filha já tinha idade suficiente para se casar com Naor, outro filho de Tera. — Gên 11:29.

Tera vivia em Ur dos Caldeus, e ali sua família foi criada. (Gên 11:28) De acordo com Josué 24:2, houve época em que Tera adorava outros deuses, e não Jeová; talvez Sin, o deus-lua, a deidade favorita de Ur. No entanto, quando Jeová convocou Abraão a partir de Ur, Tera, como cabeça da família, acompanhou-o até Harã, onde todos moraram até depois de sua morte, por volta de 1943 AEC. — Gên 11:31, 32; At 7:2-4.

2. Tera (Tara) foi um dos locais de acampamento durante a perambulação de Israel no ermo; sua localização é desconhecida. — Núm 33:27, 28.

TERAFINS. Deuses ou ídolos da família. (Gên 31:30, 34) Embora no hebraico a palavra "terafins" seja plural, podia também aplicar-se a um único ídolo. Pelo menos alguns destes ídolos talvez tivessem o tamanho e o formato dum homem. (1Sa 19:13, 16) Outros devem ter sido muito menores, a ponto de poderem ser colocados dentro do cesto da sela duma mulher. (Gên 31:34) Às vezes, os terafins eram consultados em busca de presságios. — Ez 21:21; Za 10:2.

As descobertas de arqueólogos na Mesopotâmia e em regiões adjacentes indicam que a posse de imagens de terafins tinha a ver com quem receberia a herança da família. Segundo uma tabuinha encontrada em Nuzi, a posse dos deuses da família podia, em determinadas circunstâncias, dar ao genro o direito de recorrer a um tribunal e reivindicar os bens do sogro falecido. (Ancient Near Eastern Texts [Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo], editado por J. Pritchard, 1974, pp. 219, 220, e n 51) É possível que Raquel, com isto em mente, tenha concluído que podia legitimamente tomar os terafins, por seu pai ter agido de modo enganoso para com Jacó, seu marido. (Compare com Gên 31:14-16.) A importância dos terafins com respeito aos direitos de herança explica também por que Labão estava tão ansioso de recuperá-los, até mesmo a ponto de levar consigo seus irmãos e de perseguir Jacó numa distância de sete dias de jornada. (Gên 31:19-30) Naturalmente, Jacó não sabia de absolutamente nada do que Raquel fizera (Gên 31:32), e não há indício de que ele tenha alguma vez tentado usar os terafins para obter a herança dos filhos de Labão. Jacó não tinha nada a ver com ídolos. No mais tardar, os terafins teriam sido eliminados quando Jacó escondeu, debaixo da árvore grande que ficava perto de Siquém, todos os deuses estrangeiros que lhe foram trazidos pelos da sua família. — Gên 35:1-4.

Em Israel, o uso idólatra de terafins existia nos dias dos juízes, bem como nos dias dos reis. (Jz 17:5; 18:14, 17, 20; Os 3:4) No entanto, em vista da ordem expressa de Deus contra a fabricação de imagens, não é provável que os terafins servissem para fins de herança em Israel. (Êx 20:4) Além disso, o profeta Samuel falou dos terafins em paralelo com o poder sobrenatural, comparando o uso dessas duas coisas ao ato de avançar presunçosamente (1Sa 15:23), e os terafins achavam-se entre os acessórios da idolatria que foram expurgados de Judá e de Jerusalém pelo fiel Rei Josias. (2Rs 23:24) Assim, ter Mical, esposa de Davi, uma imagem de terafim entre seus pertences sugere que seu coração não era pleno para com Jeová e que Davi, ou não sabia que ela possuía essa imagem de terafim, ou tolerava isto, por ser ela a filha do Rei Saul. — 1Sa 19:12, 13.

TÉRCIO [do lat., que significa "Terceiro"]. Escritor ou transcritor da carta de Paulo aos romanos, e o único dos "secretários" de Paulo identificado por nome. Tércio insere seus próprios cumprimentos aos romanos. — Ro 16:22.

TERES. Um dos dois porteiros do palácio persa, que conspiraram contra o Rei Assuero. Ao ficar sabendo do complô, Mordecai informou a Rainha Ester, que, por sua vez, revelou isto ao rei. Teres e seu comparsa foram pendurados num madeiro, e o incidente foi incluído nos registros reais. — Est 2:21-23; 6:1, 2.

TERMO. A palavra hebraica gevúl significa "termo". Pode também significar o território ou terra circundada por fronteiras ou termos. Assim, Josué 13:23 diz: "E o termo [hebr.: gevúl] dos filhos de Rubem veio a ser o Jordão; e este território [u·ghevúl] como tal foi a herança."

Termos Estabelecidos por Jeová. Antes do Dilúvio global, Deus expulsou do jardim do Éden o primeiro casal humano, obrigando-o a viver fora dali (Gên 3:23, 24), baniu Caim das proximidades do "solo" de onde o sangue de Abel 'clamava' (Gên 4:10, 11), e mais tarde estabeleceu o limite de "cento e vinte anos" (Gên 6:3) dentro do qual as pessoas que viviam antes do Dilúvio podiam continuar a viver na terra até a destruição da vasta maioria. (Gên 6:13) Deus decretou que os sobreviventes do Dilúvio 'enchessem a terra', e, quando se tentou evitar a dispersão pela terra, ele frustrou essa atuação e forçou os homens a levar a cabo o que havia decretado. — Gên 9:1, 19; 11:1-9.

Séculos mais tarde, Deus prometeu a Abraão e a sua semente determinada terra com termos precisos estabelecidos. (Gên 15:18-21; Êx 23:31) Deus permitiu que os cananeus residentes continuassem a morar na Terra da Promessa por um período predito de mais "quatrocentos anos", antes de pôr em vigor um decreto de despejo, quando se tivesse completado "o erro dos amorreus". (Gên 15:13-16) Por outro lado, Jeová Deus também decretou que os israelitas não deviam invadir os termos das nações de Edom, Moabe e Amom, descendentes de parentes dos antepassados dos israelitas. (De 2:4, 5, 18, 19) As palavras do cântico de Moisés, em Deuteronômio 32:8, devem ser entendidas à luz desses fatos. Este texto diz: "Quando o Altíssimo deu às nações uma herança, quando separou uns dos outros os filhos de Adão, passou a fixar o termo dos povos com respeito ao número dos filhos de Israel."

Foi à base do direito soberano que Jeová tem de decretar tais termos que o juiz Jefté posteriormente defendeu o direito de Israel à terra que Deus havia dado a essa nação. (Jz 11:12-15, 23-27) No entanto, por Israel não ter aderido fielmente às ordens de Jeová Deus, Ele permitiu que alguns povos inimigos permanecessem dentro dos termos de Israel (Núm 33:55; Jz 2:20-23), e foi só no governo do Rei Davi, uns quatro séculos depois de a nação ter entrado em Canaã, que Israel obteve domínio sobre todo o território dentro dos termos prometidos. — 2Sa 8:1-15.

Mais tarde, em harmonia com sua anterior pronunciação de aviso, Jeová permitiu que nações pagãs invadissem os termos da Terra da Promessa e levassem Israel para o exílio, a fim de punir o povo, que apostatara. (De 28:36, 37, 49-53; Je 25:8-11) Mediante os profetas Isaías, Jeremias, Ezequiel e Daniel, Deus predisse a ascensão e a queda das potências mundiais de Babilônia em diante, bem como a ordem do seu surgimento. (Is 13:1–14:4; 44:28–45:5; Je 25:12-29; Ez 21:18-27; Da caps. 2, 7, 8, e 11:1–12:4) Embora tolerasse por 'um tempo designado' a existência e a dominação da terra pelas nações políticas, Jeová também predisse sua derradeira destruição e a eliminação dos termos de seu domínio político; isto por meio do Reino do Messias. — Da 2:44; compare com Re 11:17, 18; 19:11-16.

"Os Limites Fixos" da Morada dos Homens. Paulo disse aos que o ouviam em Atenas que Deus "decretou os tempos designados e os limites fixos [gr.: ho·ro·the·si·as, literalmente: "fixações de fronteiras"] da morada dos homens". (At 17:26) O Salmo 74:17 expressa uma ideia similar, com referência ao Criador: "Foste tu quem fixaste todos os termos da terra; verão e inverno — tu mesmo os formaste." O Altíssimo é responsável pela existência de termos naturais, como rios, lagos, mares e montanhas, os quais determinam onde as pessoas vivem. — Veja Je 5:22.

Termos Tribais de Israel. (MAPA, Vol. 1, p. 744) Na época em que Israel conquistou a Terra da Promessa, concedera-se às tribos de Rubem, de Gade e à meia tribo de Manassés o direito de receberem sua herança de terras "deste lado do Jordão em direção do nascente". (Núm 32:1-5, 19, 33-42; 34:14, 15; Jos 13:8-13, 15-32) Depois de seis anos de guerras para subjugar os cananeus, chegou o tempo para se determinar os termos tribais ao O do Jordão para as outras nove tribos e a meia tribo remanescente de Manassés. Josué, o sacerdote Eleazar e um maioral de cada tribo foram designados por Jeová para atuar como comissão encarregada de supervisionar a distribuição de terras. (Núm 34:13-29; Jos 14:1) O procedimento adotado estava em harmonia com a anterior ordem de Deus a Moisés: "Conforme for grande o número, deves aumentar a sua herança, e conforme for pouco, deves reduzir a sua herança. A herança de cada um deve ser dada proporcional aos seus registrados. Somente por sorte se deve repartir a terra." — Núm 26:52-56; 33:53, 54.

Portanto, parece que a distribuição da terra entre as tribos foi governada por dois fatores: o resultado indicado pelo lançamento das sortes e o tamanho da tribo. As sortes talvez estabelecessem apenas a localização aproximada da herança de terras que cada tribo receberia, o que designaria uma herança num setor ou noutro daquela terra, tal como ao N ou ao S, ao L ou ao O, ao longo da planície costeira, ou na região montanhosa. A decisão revelada pelas sortes procedia de Jeová, de modo que servia para impedir que surgissem ciúmes ou contendas entre as tribos. (Pr 16:33) Desta forma, Deus também dirigiria as coisas de tal modo que a situação de cada tribo se harmonizasse com a profecia inspirada, proferida pelo patriarca Jacó em seu leito de morte, registrada em Gênesis 49:1-33.

Depois de as sortes lançadas terem determinado a localização geográfica de determinada tribo, seria necessário especificar a extensão do seu território à base do segundo fator: seu tamanho proporcional. "Tendes de repartir a terra entre vós como propriedade, por sortes, segundo as vossas famílias. Ao numeroso deveis aumentar sua herança e ao escasso deveis reduzir sua herança. Onde a sorte lhe cair, ali se tornará sua." (Núm 33:54) A decisão da sorte quanto à localização geográfica básica prevaleceria, mas era possível fazer ajustes no que dizia respeito ao tamanho da herança. Assim, quando se constatou que o território de Judá era grande demais, a área da sua propriedade foi reduzida, designando-se partes dela à tribo de Simeão. — Jos 19:9.

Parece que o aumento ou a diminuição da herança não ocorria apenas à base da área da propriedade, pois a tribo de Dã, embora fosse a segunda mais populosa, recebeu uma das menores parcelas no que tange a dimensões reais. Outros fatores talvez fossem considerados, como o número de cidades, o tipo de terra e a qualidade do solo. — Veja Jos 17:14-18.

Depois de definidos os termos mais precisos das divisões tribais, puderam-se designar propriedades às respectivas famílias, e parece que isto não foi feito mediante sortes, mas segundo a orientação da comissão designada, composta de Eleazar, Josué e os maiorais. (Jos 17:3, 4) Portanto, Deuteronômio 19:14 diz que, 'quando os antecessores tivessem fixados os termos da herança', estes não deviam ser recuados. — Veja MARCO DIVISÓRIO.

O relato sobre a divisão do território ao O do Jordão mostra que primeiro se determinaram as sortes para Judá (Jos 15:1-63), José (Efraim) (Jos 16:1-10) e a meia tribo de Manassés que se estabelecera ao O do Jordão (Jos 17:1-13), com a enumeração de seus termos e cidades. Depois disto, parece que houve uma interrupção na divisão da terra, visto que há evidência de que o acampamento de Israel tinha mudado de Gilgal para Silo. (Jos 14:6; 18:1) Não se revela quanto tempo passou, mas Josué, por fim, repreendeu as outras sete tribos por sua morosidade em ocupar o restante da terra. (Jos 18:2, 3) Têm surgido várias explicações sobre a causa dessa atitude das sete tribos. Alguns comentaristas concluem que a abundância de despojos obtidos na conquista e o fato de essas tribos se acharem relativamente livres da ameaça de ataques dos cananeus talvez as tenham levado a não sentir nenhuma urgência especial em tomar posse das partes restantes do território. A relutância de encarar o problema de enfrentar os redutos de forte resistência inimiga pode ter contribuído para essa demora. (Jos 13:1-7) Além disso, o conhecimento que as tribos tinham dessa região da Terra da Promessa talvez fosse consideravelmente mais limitado do que o das regiões que já haviam sido distribuídas.

Para resolver logo essa questão, Josué enviou uma delegação de 21 homens, 3 de cada uma das 7 tribos, a fim de fazer "o levantamento do país em sete quinhões", e depois de os homens terem 'feito o levantamento por cidades', Josué tirou sortes para eles a fim de obter a decisão de Jeová. (Jos 18:4-10) Apresenta-se a distribuição das respectivas heranças em Josué 18:11–19:49.

À tribo sacerdotal de Levi não se concedeu uma região específica como quinhão, mas 48 cidades espalhadas e pastios, localizados dentro dos termos de outras tribos. — Jos 13:14, 33; 21:1-42.

Outros Termos. Por meio do pacto da Lei, Deus 'separou Israel' para ser seu povo escolhido por 1.545 anos (Le 20:26), mas, com a morte sacrificial de seu Filho, ele destruiu o figurativo "muro no meio" que separava os gentios dos judeus, abolindo a Lei de mandamentos. Em Efésios 2:12-16, Paulo aludiu à barreira, ou muro (soregue), na área do templo. Sob pena de morte, os gentios eram proibidos de ultrapassar esse termo. O apóstolo usou esse muro como ilustração apropriada para a divisão criada pelo pacto da Lei.

Sob o novo pacto, mediado por Cristo Jesus, fez-se uma demarcação espiritual, muito mais impressionante do que qualquer termo geográfico, que separa a nação espiritual, representada pela congregação cristã, do resto do mundo da humanidade. (Jo 17:6, 14-19; 1Pe 2:9-11) Muito antes, Jeová profetizara que construiria Sião com pedras preciosas e faria todos os seus termos de "pedras agradáveis", e Jesus citou parte desta profecia ao aplicar o versículo seguinte aos que se tornam seus discípulos. (Is 54:12, 13; Jo 6:45; compare com Re 21:9-11, 18-21.) Esses termos espirituais não devem ser violados, pois Deus adverte que aqueles que os invadem serão destruídos. — Compare Is 54:14, 15; 60:18 com 1Co 3:16, 17.

Por outro lado, exige-se que os componentes dessa nação espiritual permaneçam dentro dos seus limites, reconhecendo as limitações morais delineadas (1Co 5:9-13; 6:9, 10; 1Te 4:3-6) e os termos espirituais que os separa da adoração falsa e dos sistemas do mundo (2Co 6:14-18; Tg 4:4; Re 18:4), bem como as regras que governam o relacionamento correto entre os cristãos e as "autoridades superiores" dos governos existentes (Ro 13:1, 5; 1Pe 2:13-16; At 4:19, 20; 5:29), entre marido e mulher (1Co 7:39; 1Pe 3:1, 7), e em muitos outros aspectos da vida.

Paulo também mostra que havia termos para governar o território designado para a atividade ministerial. — 2Co 10:13-16.

TERRA. O quinto maior planeta do sistema solar e o terceiro pela ordem de afastamento do Sol. Trata-se dum elipsoide oblato, isto é, ligeiramente achatado nos polos. Observações feitas por satélites indicaram outras ligeiras irregularidades no formato da terra. A massa da terra está em torno de $5{,}98 \times 10^{24}$ kg. Sua área é de cerca de 510.000.000 de km². Suas medidas, no equador, são (aproximadamente): pouco mais de 40.000 km de circunferência e 12.750 km de diâmetro. Os oceanos e os mares cobrem aproximadamente 71 por cento de sua superfície, deixando uns 149.000.000 de km² de terra firme.

A terra gira em torno do seu eixo, o que resulta no dia e na noite. (Gên 1:4, 5) O dia solar ou dia aparente é um período de 24 horas, ou seja, é o tempo que leva para um observador situado em qualquer dado ponto da terra estar novamente na mesma posição em relação ao sol. Em média, a duração do ano trópico, que diz respeito ao retorno das estações, isto é, o intervalo entre dois retornos consecutivos do Sol ao equinócio vernal, é de 365 dias, 5 horas, 48 minutos e 46 segundos. Este é o dado usado no cálculo do calendário que tem como base o ano solar, e sua natureza fracionada causa muita dificuldade na elaboração dum calendário exato.

O eixo da terra inclina-se 23° 27′ em relação a uma perpendicular com sua órbita. O efeito giroscópico de rotação sustenta o eixo da terra basicamente na mesma direção em relação às estrelas, não importa sua localização em sua órbita em torno do Sol. Esta inclinação do eixo resulta nas estações.

A atmosfera da terra, composta principalmente de nitrogênio, oxigênio, vapor de água e outros gases, estende-se por mais de 960 km acima da superfície terrestre. Além deste ponto fica o que se chama de "espaço exterior".

Termos Bíblicos e Seu Significado. Nas Escrituras Hebraicas, a palavra usada para a terra, como planeta, é 'é·rets. O termo 'é·rets refere-se a (1) terra, em contraste com céu, ou firmamento (Gên 1:2); (2) terra, país, território (Gên 10:10); (3) solo, superfície do solo (Gên 1:26); (4) pessoas de todo o globo (Gên 18:25).

A palavra 'adha·máh é traduzida "terra", "solo" ou "terreno". 'Adha·máh refere-se a (1) solo cultivado para fornecer sustento (Gên 3:23); (2) terreno, propriedade fundiária (Gên 47:18); (3) terra, no sentido de substância material, solo, poeira (Je 14:4; 1Sa 4:12); (4) solo, como superfície visível da terra (Gên 1:25); (5) terra, território, país (Le 20:24); (6) todo o planeta, a terra habitada (Gên 12:3). 'Adha·máh parece estar relacionada, em sentido etimológico, com a palavra 'a·dhám, pois o primeiro homem, Adão, foi feito do pó do solo. — Gên 2:7.

Nas Escrituras Gregas, a palavra ge denota terra como terreno ou solo arável. (Mt 13:5, 8) É usada com referência à matéria da qual Adão foi feito, a terra (1Co 15:47); ao globo terrestre (Mt 5:18, 35; 6:19); à terra como habitação para as criaturas humanas e para os animais (Lu 21:35; At 1:8; 8:33; 10:12; 11:6; 17:26); à terra, país, território (Lu 4:25; Jo 3:22); ao chão ou solo (Mt 10:29; Mr 4:26); à terra seca, margem, em contraste com mares ou águas (Jo 21:8, 9, 11; Mr 4:1).

Oi·kou·mé·ne, traduzida "mundo" na versão Almeida, denota "terra habitada". — Mt 24:14; Lu 2:1; At 17:6; Re 12:9.

Em cada um dos casos em que as palavras mencionadas acima são usadas, o que determina o sentido intencionado é a forma da palavra na língua original e, em especial, o contexto.

Os hebreus dividiam a terra em quatro quadrantes ou regiões, que correspondiam aos quatro pontos cardeais. Nas Escrituras Hebraicas, as expressões "diante de" e "em frente a" referem-se ao "leste", e são assim traduzidas (Gên 12:8); "retaguarda" pode significar o "oeste" (Is 9:12); "lado direito" pode indicar "sul" (1Sa 23:24), e "esquerda" pode ser traduzida por "norte" (Jó 23:8, 9; compare com BV). Às vezes, o oriente também era chamado (em hebr.) de nascente, como, por exemplo, em Josué 4:19. O oeste (em hebr.) era o poente. (2Cr 32:30) Usavam-se também características físicas. O "Mar" (o Mediterrâneo), sendo quase a totalidade do termo ocidental da Palestina, era às vezes usado para referir-se ao oeste. — Núm 34:6.

Criação. A Bíblia explica como o planeta veio à existência com uma declaração simples: "No princípio Deus criou os céus e a terra." (Gên 1:1) A Bíblia não diz exatamente há quanto tempo foram criados os céus estrelados e a terra. Portanto, não há nenhuma base para os peritos bíblicos questionarem os cálculos científicos da idade do planeta. Os cientistas estimam que a idade de algumas rochas seja de três bilhões e meio de anos e que a da própria terra esteja em torno de quatro a quatro bilhões e meio de anos ou mais.

Quanto ao tempo, as Escrituras são mais específicas sobre os seis dias criativos do relato de Gênesis. Esses dias não têm que ver com a criação da matéria ou substância da terra, mas com sua adaptação e preparação para ser o lar do homem.

A Bíblia não revela se Deus criou vida em outros planetas do universo. No entanto, os astrônomos da atualidade não encontraram provas de que exista vida em algum desses planetas e, de fato, não sabem de nenhum outro planeta além da terra que no momento tenha condições de sustentar a vida de criaturas carnais.

Propósito. Como todas as outras coisas criadas, a terra veio a existir pela vontade ("prazer", KJ) de Jeová. (Re 4:11) Ela foi criada para permanecer para sempre. (Sal 78:69; 104:5; 119:90; Ec 1:4) Deus fala de si como Deus de propósito e diz que seus propósitos com certeza se cumprirão. (Is 46:10; 55:11) Ele deixou bem claro qual é o seu propósito para com a terra, ao dizer ao primeiro casal humano: "Sede fecundos e tornai-vos muitos, e enchei a terra, e sujeitai-a, e tende em sujeição os peixes do mar, e as criaturas voadoras dos céus, e toda criatura vivente que se move na terra." (Gên 1:28) Não havia nenhum defeito na terra nem nas coisas que nela existiam. Tendo criado todas as coisas necessárias, Jeová viu que eram 'muito boas' e "passou a repousar", isto é, parou de criar no que diz respeito à terra. — Gên 1:31–2:2.

A habitação do homem na terra também é permanente. Ao apresentar ao homem a lei a respeito da árvore do conhecimento do que é bom e do que é mau, Deus deu a entender que o homem poderia viver para sempre na terra. (Gên 2:17) As próprias palavras de Jeová nos asseguram de que "por todos os dias que a terra continuar nunca cessarão sementeira e colheita, e frio e calor, e verão e inverno, e dia e noite" (Gên 8:22) e de que ele jamais destruirá novamente toda a carne por meio dum dilúvio. (Gên 9:12-16) Jeová diz que não fez a terra para nada, mas que a deu aos homens como lar e que a morte um dia será eliminada. Portanto, o propósito de Deus é que a terra seja a habitação do homem, em perfeição, felicidade e vida eterna. — Sal 37:11; 115:16; Is 45:18; Re 21:3, 4.

A Bíblia indica que este é o propósito de Jeová Deus, que é sagrado para ele e não será frustrado, ao dizer: "E ao sétimo dia Deus havia acabado sua obra que fizera . . . E Deus passou a abençoar o sétimo dia e a fazê-lo sagrado, porque nele tem repousado de toda a sua obra que Deus criara com o objetivo de a fazer." (Gên 2:2, 3) O relato de Gênesis não mostra que o sétimo dia, ou dia de descanso, tenha terminado, como no caso dos outros seis dias. O apóstolo Paulo explicou que o dia de descanso de Deus fora contínuo, abrangendo toda a história israelita até os seus dias, e que ainda não havia terminado. (He 3:7-11; 4:3-9) Deus diz que o sétimo dia foi separado como algo sagrado para ele. Ele cumpriria seu propósito para com a terra; seu propósito seria plenamente realizado durante esse dia, sem necessidade de outras obras criativas, no que diz respeito à terra, durante esse tempo.

A Harmonia da Bíblia com Fatos Científicos. A Bíblia, em Jó 26:7, diz que Deus "suspende a terra sobre o nada". A ciência diz que a terra permanece em sua órbita no espaço primariamente devido à interação entre a gravidade e a força centrífuga. Essas forças, naturalmente, são invisíveis. Portanto, a terra, como outros corpos celestes, acha-se suspensa no espaço como se estivesse pendurada no nada. Falando do ponto de vista de Jeová, o profeta Isaías escreveu sob inspiração: "Há Um que mora acima do círculo da terra, cujos moradores são como gafanhotos." (Is 40:22) A Bíblia diz: "Ele [Deus] demarcou um círculo sobre a face das águas." (Jó 26:10) As águas ficam limitadas a seu devido lugar pelo decreto de Deus. Não sobem para inundar a terra, nem se lançam no espaço. (Jó 38:8-11) Do ponto de vista de Jeová, a face da terra, ou a superfície das águas, por certo teria um formato circular, assim como o contorno da lua parece-nos circular. Antes de surgirem as superfícies de terra seca, a superfície do inteiro globo era de uma só massa circular (esférica) de águas agitadas. — Gên 1:2.

Os escritores da Bíblia muitas vezes falam do ponto de vista do observador que está na terra, ou de sua posição geográfica específica, como não raro é comum fazermos hoje. Por exemplo, a Bíblia menciona "o nascente". (Núm 2:3; 34:15) Alguns aproveitam isto como oportunidade para desacreditar a Bíblia como se fosse cientificamente inexata, alegando que os hebreus achavam que a terra era o centro das coisas e que o Sol girava em torno dela. Mas os escritores da Bíblia em parte alguma expressaram tal crença. Estes críticos despercebem que eles mesmos usam expressões idênticas e que elas se acham em todos os seus almanaques. É comum ouvir alguém dizer: 'É o nascer do Sol', ou: 'o Sol já se pôs', ou ainda: 'o Sol percorreu o céu'. A Bíblia também menciona "a extremidade da terra" (Sal 46:9), "os confins da terra" (Sal 22:27), "as quatro extremidades da terra" (Is 11:12), "os quatro cantos da terra" e "os quatro ventos da terra" (Re 7:1). Não se pode usar estas expressões para provar que os hebreus achavam que a terra era quadrada. O número quatro muitas vezes é usado para indicar aquilo que está plenamente completo, por assim dizer, assim como temos quatro direções e, às vezes, empregamos as expressões "os confins da terra", "os quatro cantos da terra", no sentido de abranger a terra toda. — Compare com Ez 1:15-17; Lu 13:29.

Expressões Figuradas e Simbólicas. Em vários casos se fala da terra em sentido figurado. Em Jó 38:4-6, ela é assemelhada a um edifício, quando Jeová faz a Jó perguntas que obviamente ele não sabe responder, a respeito da criação da terra e o controle que Jeová exerce sobre ela. Jeová também usa uma expressão figurada para descrever o resultado da rotação da terra. Ele diz: "[A terra] se transforma como o barro debaixo dum selo." (Jó 38:14) Nos tempos bíblicos, alguns selos para "assinar" documentos tinham a forma dum rolo em que se achava gravado o emblema do escritor. O selo era passado sobre o documento de barro mole ou um envoltório de argila, deixando uma impressão na argila. De forma similar, ao amanhecer, a parte da terra que sai da escuridão da noite começa a mostrar que tem forma e cor, à medida que a luz solar avança progressivamente sobre sua superfície. Visto que os céus, onde fica o trono de Jeová, são mais elevados do que a terra, esta é, em sentido figurado, o seu escabelo. (Sal 103:11; Is 55:9; 66:1; Mt 5:35; At 7:49) Considera-se que aqueles que se acham no Seol, ou Hades, a sepultura comum da humanidade, estão debaixo da terra. — Re 5:3.

O apóstolo Pedro compara os céus e a terra literais (2Pe 3:5) com os céus e terra simbólicos (2Pe 3:7). "Os céus", no versículo 7, não significam a morada do próprio Jeová, o lugar do Seu trono nos céus. Os céus de Jeová não podem ser abalados. Nem "a terra", no mesmo versículo, é o planeta terra literal, pois Jeová diz que estabeleceu firmemente a terra. (Sal 78:69; 119:90) Todavia, Deus diz que abalará tanto os céus como a terra (Ag 2:21; He 12:26), que os céus e a terra fugirão de diante dele e que se estabelecerão novos céus e uma nova terra. (2Pe 3:13; Re 20:11; 21:1) É evidente que o termo "céus" é simbólico e que "terra", neste caso, refere-se simbolicamente a uma sociedade de pessoas que vivem na terra, assim como no Salmo 96:1. — Veja CÉU, I (Novos céus e nova terra).

A palavra terra também é empregada em sentido simbólico para indicar os elementos mais firmes e mais estáveis da humanidade. Os elementos irrequietos e instáveis da humanidade são ilustrados pela inquietação característica do mar. — Is 57:20; Tg 1:6; Ju 13; compare com Re 12:16; 20:11; 21:1.

João 3:31 tece um contraste, indicando que aquele que vem de cima é superior àquele que vem da terra (ge). A palavra grega e·pi·gei·os, "terreno", é usada com referência a coisas terrenas, físicas, especialmente em contraste com coisas celestiais, e no sentido de serem inferiores e de materiais mais grosseiros. O homem é feito de matéria da terra. (2Co 5:1; compare com 1Co 15:46-49.) No entanto, ele pode agradar a Deus, levando uma vida "espiritual", orientada pela Palavra e pelo espírito de Deus. (1Co 2:12, 15, 16; He 12:9) Devido à queda da humanidade no pecado e a sua tendência para coisas materiais, o que resulta na negligência ou na exclusão das coisas espirituais (Gên 8:21; 1Co 2:14), a palavra "terreno" pode ter uma conotação indesejável, com o significado de "corrupto", ou "em oposição ao espírito". — Fil 3:19; Tg 3:15.

TERRA DA FUGA. Terra "ao leste do Éden", na qual o condenado assassino, Caim, fixou residência. (Gên 4:16) A palavra hebraica nohdh (fuga) deriva do radical nudh, uma forma da qual é traduzida por "fugitivo" nos versículos 12 e 14. A localização dessa terra é desconhecida.

TERREMOTO. Repentino tremor ou abalo da superfície da terra em resultado de forças em operação dentro do globo. O substantivo hebraico rá·'ash não se refere só ao "tremor" da terra, ou a um "terremoto" (1Rs 19:11; Am 1:1), mas também aos "tremores" causados por um exército em marcha (Is 9:5 n), ao "retinir" de carros de guerra ou dum dardo (Je 47:3; Jó 41:29) e ao "retumbo" de cavalos (Jó 39:24). A palavra grega sei·smós (terremoto) refere-se a um tremor, um abalo ou um estremecimento. — Mt 27:54; compare com Mt 27:51; 28:4; Re 6:13.

No decurso de toda a história bíblica ocorreram abalos e estremecimentos da terra, às vezes em resultado de forças geológicas naturais (Za 14:5), noutras como atos diretos de Deus com fins judiciais ou com objetivos que envolviam os Seus servos. A geologia da área explica a história passada de atividades sísmicas de Israel, o que ainda não terminou.

A área do templo de Jerusalém está situada numa linha de fraqueza estrutural da terra. A Mesquita de el-Aqsa, localizada na área do templo (não o Zimbório da Rocha, que é um santuário), já foi várias vezes danificada por atividades sísmicas.

Um tremendo terremoto, pelo visto conjugado com ação vulcânica, forneceu um assombroso cenário para a inauguração do pacto da Lei, no Sinai. (Êx 19:18; Sal 68:8) Jeová teve atuação direta nessa demonstração de poder, pois falou do monte por meio dum anjo. — Êx 19:19; Gál 3:19; He 12:18-21.

Houve ocasiões em que a atemorizante força de terremotos foi uma evidência da mão de Jeová em operação no que diz respeito a julgar violações de sua lei. (Na 1:3-6) O método de execução usado por Jeová contra os rebeldes Datã, Abirão e a família de Corá foi um terremoto; a terra abriu a boca e os tragou vivos para o Seol. (Núm 16:27, 32, 33) Elias passou por um tremor de terra antes de Jeová falar para corrigir seu ponto de vista e o enviar de volta para mais designações de serviço. (1Rs 19:11-18) Os terremotos foram uma ajuda milagrosa para o povo de Jeová, como quando Jonatã e seu escudeiro atacaram corajosamente um posto avançado filisteu. Jeová sustentou a fé que eles tinham nele, provocando um terremoto que lançou todo o campo dos filisteus em confusão, de modo que os filisteus mataram uns aos outros e foram completamente desbaratados. — 1Sa 14:6, 10, 12, 15, 16, 20, 23.

No dia da morte de Jesus, por volta das três horas da tarde, ocorreu um terremoto; este fendeu rochas, abriu túmulos memoriais e fez com que os corpos fossem lançados para fora das sepulturas. A cortina do santuário, no templo reconstruído por Herodes, foi rasgada em duas partes, de alto a baixo. Antes disso, caíra uma escuridão sobre a terra. Alguns acham que ocorreu atividade vulcânica, porque os vulcões não raro expelem fumaça e pó que escurecem o céu. Mas não há evidências reais de que tenha ocorrido alguma atividade vulcânica relacionada com esse terremoto. (Mt 27:45, 51-54; Lu 23:44, 45) Ocorreu outro terremoto no dia da ressurreição de Jesus, quando um anjo desceu do céu e rolou a pedra da frente do túmulo. (Mt 28:1, 2) As orações e os cânticos de louvor do apóstolo Paulo e seu companheiro, Silas, quando estavam presos em Filipos, foram respondidas quando ocorreu um grande terremoto que abriu as portas da prisão e soltou os laços dos prisioneiros. Isto levou à conversão do carcereiro e de sua família. — At 16:25-34.

Jesus predisse terremotos em quantidade e intensidade significativas como um aspecto do sinal de sua presença. (Mt 24:3, 7, 8; Lu 21:11) Desde 1914 EC, tem havido um aumento na quantidade de terremotos, o que tem resultado em muita angústia. Com informações obtidas do Centro Nacional de Dados Geofísicos, em Boulder, Colorado, EUA, suplementadas por diversas obras-padrão de referência, fez-se um cômputo, em 1984, que incluía apenas terremotos que mediram 7,5 ou mais na escala Richter, ou que resultaram na destruição de propriedades no valor total de cinco milhões de dólares ou mais, ou que causaram 100 ou mais mortes. Calculou-se que aconteceram 856 de tais terremotos nos 2.000 anos antes de 1914. O mesmo cômputo mostrou que, em apenas 69 anos a partir de 1914, ocorreram 605 de tais tremores. Essas estatísticas são uma maneira de indicar as dimensões do sofrimento causado por terremotos neste período da história.

Usos Figurados e Simbólicos. As Escrituras muitas vezes usam terremotos em sentido figurado para descrever o abalo e a derrubada de nações e de reinos. A antiga Babilônia confiava em deuses falsos, como Nebo e Marduque, que, na imaginação do povo, enchiam seus céus. Também confiavam muito no poder de sua potente força militar, mas Deus disse numa declaração contra Babilônia: "Farei que o próprio céu fique agitado, e a terra sairá tremendo do seu lugar diante da fúria de Jeová dos exércitos." (Is 13:13) No que diz respeito a Babilônia, deve ter sido um grande choque quando seu império caiu e seu território deixou de pertencer-lhe como terceira potência mundial, e ela se tornou uma simples província do Império Persa. — Da 5:30, 31.

Em outros lugares das Escrituras, Davi descreve a Jeová como se este estivesse lutando por ele por meio dum terremoto. (2Sa 22:8; Sal 18:7) Jeová fala de fazer tremer os céus e a terra, o mar e o solo seco, de fazer tremer todas as nações por causa do Seu povo, o que resulta em as coisas desejáveis de todas as nações entrarem em Sua casa e em ele a encher de glória. — Ag 2:6, 7.

O apóstolo Paulo usa como ilustração a assombrosa demonstração ocorrida no Sinai, comparando-a com a maior e mais assombrosa assembleia da congregação cristã dos primogênitos, realizada no celestial monte Sião perante Deus e seu Filho, como Mediador. Paulo prossegue com a ilustração do terremoto ocorrido no Sinai e faz uma aplicação simbólica, incentivando os cristãos a continuar a servir com coragem e fé, compreendendo que o Reino e os que se apegam a ele conseguirão manter-se de pé, enquanto todas as outras coisas dos céus e da terra simbólicos serão reduzidos a pedaços. — He 12:18-29.

O maior terremoto de todos, que ainda ocorrerá, é simbólico, descrito com relação à sétima das simbólicas sete últimas pragas de Revelação (Apocalipse). Segundo a descrição, ele destroça, não uma ou duas cidades, como já fizeram alguns dos terremotos mais violentos, mas "as cidades das nações". O relato de João a respeito deste cataclismo reza: "Houve um grande terremoto, tal como nunca tinha havido desde que os homens vieram a estar na terra, tão extensivo era o terremoto, tão grande. E a grande cidade [Babilônia, a Grande] fendeu-se em três partes, e caíram as cidades das nações." — Re 16:18, 19.

TÉRTULO [do lat., diminutivo de Tércio]. Orador público que apresentou ao governador Félix, em Cesareia, a questão levantada pelos judeus contra Paulo. À base do que Lucas registrou, boa parte das declarações de Tértulo são elogios pessoais a Félix, com apenas uma acusação muito breve contra Paulo, na tentativa de comprometê-lo com as frequentes sedições contra Roma. (At 24:1-8) Nada de definido se sabe sobre a nacionalidade de Tértulo, se era judeu ou romano.

TESOURARIA. Local, em geral um prédio ou uma sala, onde se guardam, a bem da segurança, dinheiro ou outros objetos de valor. Números 31:54 indica que, num período inicial, a "tenda de reunião" servia, em certo sentido, como tesouraria sagrada para guardar o ouro contribuído. As coisas valiosas de Jericó, que 'pertenciam a Jeová', foram entregues "ao tesouro da casa de Jeová", o que sugere que se estabelecera uma tesouraria de algum tipo, relacionada com o tabernáculo. (Jos 6:17, 24) Nomearam-se levitas para cuidar dos tesouros contribuídos e dos tornados sagrados para Deus dentre os despojos. (1Cr 26:20-28) O templo construído por Salomão também possuía uma tesouraria, onde eram guardados o ouro e a prata, bem como os caros utensílios do templo. — 1Rs 7:51; 2Cr 5:1.

Sob a monarquia em Israel, havia, adicionalmente, uma tesouraria real. (2Rs 20:13; 24:13; 2Cr 32:27, 28; Je 38:11) Ao longo dos anos, os objetos de valor da tesouraria real, bem como da tesouraria da casa de Jeová, foram repetidas vezes saqueados por inimigos ou foram usados para comprar ou subornar nações pagãs. — 1Rs 14:26; 15:18; 2Rs 12:18; 14:14; 16:8; 18:15; 24:13.

A respeito da tesouraria de Babilônia, Daniel 1:2 diz que Nabucodonosor levou os utensílios valiosos da casa de Jeová para a "casa do tesouro de seu deus". Segundo certa inscrição babilônica, Nabucodonosor teria dito sobre o templo de Merodaque: "Armazenei nele prata, e ouro, e pedras preciosas . . . e estabeleci ali a casa do tesouro do meu reino." (Compare com Esd 1:8.) É possível que os babilônios tivessem tesourarias secundárias em diferentes lugares do império. (Da 3:2) Os persas tinham um sistema assim, e as tesourarias mais bem localizadas retinham parte do dinheiro de impostos coletado pelos sátrapas. (Esd 7:20, 21) Pelo menos as principais tesourarias persas também serviam como arquivos reais, visto que continham importantes registros além de ouro e outros objetos de valor. — Esd 6:1, 2; Est 3:9.

Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. Quando Jesus estava na terra, uma parte do templo em Jerusalém era chamada de "tesouraria". (Jo 8:20) Pelo visto, ela ficava na área chamada de Pátio das Mulheres. De acordo com fontes rabínicas, neste templo reconstruído por Herodes havia 13 cofres do tesouro junto ao muro deste pátio. (A Míxena, Shekalim 2:1; 6:1, 5) Estes tinham formato de trombeta, com pequenas aberturas em cima, e as pessoas depositavam neles várias contribuições e ofertas. (Mr 12:41) Os sacerdotes recusaram-se a depositar neste tesouro sagrado as moedas de prata que Judas jogou no templo, "porque", disseram eles, "são o preço de sangue". (Mt 27:6) Crê-se que este templo também continha uma grande tesouraria para onde era levado o dinheiro retirado dos cofres da tesouraria.

TESSALÔNICA. Principal porto marítimo da Macedônia, onde Paulo estabeleceu uma congregação cristã por volta do ano 50 EC; atualmente a cidade é chamada de Salônica (ou, Tessaloniki). (FOTO, Vol. 2, p. 749) Originalmente, um povoado próximo, chamado Termas, que significa "Fonte de Águas Termais", era uma das cerca de 26 cidadezinhas destruídas por Cassandro, que então construiu Tessalônica, em 316 ou 315 AEC. Ele lhe deu esse nome em homenagem à sua mulher, irmã de Alexandre, o Grande. Esta nova cidade situava-se do lado O da península Calcídica, no golfo Termaico (atualmente chamado de golfo de Salônica), na junção entre a estrada ao N, que ia para o Danúbio, e a estrada principal (a pavimentada Via Egnatia, construída pelos romanos), que se estendia por centenas de quilômetros pela Macedônia até o mar Adriático.

Antes de meados do segundo século AEC, a Macedônia estava dividida em quatro distritos, dos quais o segundo tinha sua capital em Tessalônica. Poucos anos depois, quando a Macedônia tornou-se província romana, Tessalônica passou a ser a sede administrativa de seu governo provincial. Assim, quando o apóstolo Paulo e Silas chegaram ali, a uns 120 km ao O de Filipos, verificaram que se tratava duma próspera metrópole de certa importância.

Paulo pregou por três sábados na sinagoga de Tessalônica. Em resultado disso, alguns judeus e uma grande multidão de prosélitos gregos tornaram-se crentes e associaram-se com Paulo e Silas; entre eles, achavam-se "não poucas das mulheres de destaque". (At 17:1-4) Não se revela quanto tempo Paulo permaneceu ali, embora fosse por tempo suficiente para que ele e seu companheiro arranjassem um trabalho a fim de se sustentarem. Embora Paulo, como apóstolo, tivesse autoridade de receber ajuda material daqueles a quem ministrava coisas espirituais, ele deu o exemplo de que 'a pessoa deve comer o alimento que ela própria ganha' com seu trabalho. (1Co 9:4-18; 1Te 2:9; 2Te 3:7-12) É provável que ele tenha feito isto em parte por causa da tendência que alguns ali tinham para a ociosidade. Durante sua permanência ali, Paulo, em duas ocasiões diferentes, recebeu dádivas dos irmãos de Filipos para suas necessidades. — Fil 4:16.

Com o tempo, aqueles judeus tessalonicenses que rejeitaram a mensagem de Paulo formaram uma turba de ociosos do mercado e atacaram a casa de Jasão, onde Paulo se hospedava. Mas, ao ficarem sabendo que aquele a quem procuravam não estava ali, arrastaram Jasão e outros crentes até os governantes da cidade, isto é, os "poliarcas", segundo o grego literal. (Atos 17:5-9; Int) É de interesse especial que inscrições desse período, encontradas em Tessalônica e nas proximidades, refiram-se a determinadas autoridades locais como poliarcas.

A bem da segurança, os irmãos tessalonicenses enviaram Paulo e Silas à noite para Bereia. Ali, Paulo reparou que os bereanos 'eram de mentalidade mais nobre do que os de Tessalônica, pois não só recebiam a palavra com grande anelo mental, mas também examinavam cuidadosamente as Escrituras, cada dia, quanto a se o que o apóstolo dizia era assim'. Em pouco tempo, porém, surgiram dificuldades, quando alguns judeus opositores chegaram de Tessalônica e provocaram um tumulto, tornando de novo necessário que Paulo fugisse em secreto. — At 17:10-15.

Menos de um ano depois de deixar Tessalônica, já em Corinto, Paulo escreveu sua primeira carta aos tessalonicenses. Ele enviara Timóteo para confortá-los e encorajá-los, e tinha recebido o bom relatório de Timóteo. Na carta, ele os elogiou por seu excelente exemplo "para todos os crentes na Macedônia e na Acaia" e incentivou-os a não desanimarem por causa da perseguição. (1Te 1:1-8; 3:1-13; 4:1) É bem possível que esta carta tenha sido o primeiro dos escritos canônicos de Paulo e, com a provável exceção do Evangelho de Mateus, o primeiro livro das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs a ser escrito. Pouco depois, Paulo escreveu uma segunda carta aos tessalonicenses para que não fossem desviados por instrutores falsos. — 2Te 1:1; 2:1-3.

Ao longo dos anos, sem dúvida, Paulo voltou a visitar Tessalônica nas ocasiões em que passava pela Macedônia no decorrer de suas viagens. (At 20:1-3; 1Ti 1:3) E certos tessalonicenses mencionados por nome, Aristarco e Segundo, eram companheiros de viagem de Paulo. (At 20:4; 27:2) Demas, que abandonou a Paulo em Roma, foi para Tessalônica, que possivelmente era sua cidade natal. — 2Ti 4:10.

TESSALONICENSES, CARTAS AOS. Duas cartas inspiradas das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, talvez as primeiras a serem redigidas pelo apóstolo Paulo, que se identifica como o escritor de ambas. (1Te 1:1; 2:18; 2Te 1:1; 3:17) Na época em que essas cartas foram escritas, Silvano (Silas) e Timóteo estavam com Paulo. (1Te 1:1; 2Te 1:1) Isto indica que elas foram enviadas de Corinto, visto que não há nenhum registro de que esses três homens tenham trabalhado de novo juntos, depois de sua estada em Corinto, durante a segunda viagem missionária de Paulo. (At 18:5) Visto que os 18 meses de atividade do apóstolo em Corinto parecem ter começado no outono de 50 EC, é provável que a primeira carta aos tessalonicenses tenha sido escrita por volta dessa época. (At 18:11; veja CRONOLOGIA [O posterior período apostólico].) A segunda carta deve ter sido escrita não muito tempo depois, provavelmente por volta de 51 EC.

Em todos os catálogos importantes do segundo, do terceiro e do quarto séculos EC, as duas cartas são alistadas como canônicas. Elas também se harmonizam plenamente com o restante das Escrituras ao admoestarem os servos de Deus a manter uma conduta excelente em todas as ocasiões. É digna de nota também a ênfase que se dá nestas cartas à oração. Paulo, junto com seus colaboradores, sempre se lembrava dos tessalonicenses em oração (1Te 1:2; 2:13; 2Te 1:3, 11; 2:13), e o apóstolo os encorajou: "Orai incessantemente. Dai graças em conexão com tudo." (1Te 5:17, 18) "Irmãos, continuai a orar por nós." — 1Te 5:25; 2Te 3:1.

Fundo Histórico de Primeira Tessalonicenses. A congregação à qual Primeira Tessalonicenses foi dirigida sofreu perseguição praticamente desde o início. Depois de chegar a Tessalônica, Paulo pregou na sinagoga local por três sábados. Considerável número de pessoas tornaram-se crentes, e formou-se uma congregação. Judeus fanáticos, porém, provocaram violento motim. Quando não encontraram Paulo e Silas na casa de Jasão, a turba arrastou Jasão e outros irmãos até os governantes da cidade, acusando-os de sedição. Apenas depois de pagarem "suficiente fiança" é que Jasão e os outros foram libertados. Isto moveu os irmãos a enviar Paulo e Silas para Bereia, à noite, evidentemente para o bem da congregação e para a segurança dos dois. — At 17:1-10.

Depois disso, além de contínua perseguição (1Te 2:14), a congregação pelo visto sentiu grande tristeza com a perda de um, ou mais, de seus membros na morte. (4:13) Cônscio da pressão que se exercia sobre a nova congregação, e muitíssimo preocupado com o efeito que isto teria, Paulo enviou Timóteo para confortar e fortalecer os tessalonicenses. Antes disso, o apóstolo tentara duas vezes visitá-los, mas 'Satanás se interpusera em seu caminho'. — 2:17–3:3.

Paulo regozijou-se ao receber o relatório encorajador de Timóteo sobre a fidelidade e o amor dos tessalonicenses. (1Te 3:6-10) No entanto, eles precisavam de mais encorajamento e admoestação para resistirem às fraquezas da carne. Por este motivo, além de elogiar os tessalonicenses por sua perseverança fiel (1:2-10; 2:14; 3:6-10) e de confortá-los com a esperança da ressurreição (4:13-18), Paulo exortou-os a continuar seguindo o proceder aprovado por Deus e a fazê-lo ainda mais plenamente. (4:1, 2) Entre outras coisas, o apóstolo aconselhou-os a abster-se de fornicação (4:3-8), a amar uns aos outros em medida mais plena, a trabalhar com suas próprias mãos (4:9-12), a permanecer espiritualmente despertos (5:6-10), a ter consideração pelos que trabalhavam arduamente entre eles, a 'admoestar os desordeiros, a falar consoladoramente às almas deprimidas, a amparar os fracos, a ser longânimes para com todos' e a 'abster-se de toda forma de iniquidade' (5:11-22).

Fundo Histórico de Segunda Tessalonicenses. A fé dos cristãos em Tessalônica crescia sobremaneira, seu amor mútuo aumentava, e eles continuavam a suportar fielmente perseguição e tribulação. Portanto, o apóstolo Paulo, como em sua primeira carta, elogiou-os e incentivou-os a continuar firmes. — 2Te 1:3-12; 2:13-17.

No entanto, havia na congregação alguns que diziam erroneamente que a presença de Jesus Cristo era iminente. É até possível que uma carta, erroneamente atribuída a Paulo, tenha sido interpretada como indicando que "o dia de Jeová está aqui". (2Te 2:1, 2) Pode ter sido esta a razão pela

DESTAQUES DE PRIMEIRA TESSALONICENSES

Encorajamento e conselhos para uma congregação relativamente nova.

Escrita por Paulo por volta de 50 EC, poucos meses depois de ter deixado Tessalônica por causa dum motim.

Elogios à congregação. (1:1-10)

Paulo elogia cordialmente os tessalonicenses por seu trabalho e perseverança fiéis.

Os tessalonicenses tornaram-se exemplo para outros crentes ao aceitarem a palavra sob tribulação e com a alegria que o espírito de Deus produz.

Relata-se em todo lugar que eles abandonaram a idolatria e passaram a trabalhar como escravos do Deus vivente e a aguardar Jesus.

O exemplo de Paulo quando estava entre eles. (2:1-12)

Depois de ser tratado com insolência em Filipos, Paulo derivou forças de Deus e pregou denodadamente aos tessalonicenses.

Paulo esquivava-se de lisonja, cobiça e busca de glória.

Ele evitou tornar-se um fardo para os irmãos, mas tratou-os gentilmente, como a mãe lactante faria, e exortou-os como um pai amoroso.

Encorajamento para permanecerem firmes em face de perseguição. (2:13–3:13)

Os irmãos em Tessalônica, depois de aceitarem a mensagem que lhes fora transmitida como a palavra de Deus, foram perseguidos por seus conterrâneos; as mesmas coisas aconteciam na Judeia, onde os cristãos estavam sofrendo às mãos dos judeus.

Paulo havia tido grande desejo de ver os tessalonicenses; quando não mais pôde suportar a falta de notícias deles, enviou Timóteo, e este acabava de voltar com boas novas da condição espiritual deles.

Paulo orou pedindo que continuassem a aumentar.

Admoestação sobre atitude e conduta. (4:1–5:28)

Andem mais plenamente no proceder que agrada a Deus; abstenham-se de fornicação.

Amem os irmãos num grau ainda maior; trabalhem com suas mãos para que até mesmo as pessoas de fora vejam que andam decentemente.

Confortem-se com a esperança de que na presença de Cristo os crentes gerados pelo espírito, que tiverem morrido, serão ressuscitados primeiro e unidos a Cristo; depois, os que ainda estiverem vivos se juntarão a ele e aos já ressuscitados.

O dia de Jeová vem como ladrão — quando estiverem dizendo: "Paz e segurança!", virá a repentina destruição; em vista disto, permaneçam espiritualmente despertos, protegidos pela fé e pelo amor como couraça, e pela esperança da salvação como capacete.

Tenham profunda consideração por aqueles que presidem na congregação; sejam pacíficos, empenhem-se pelo que é bom, alegrem-se sempre, deem graças, certifiquem-se de todas as coisas, apeguem-se ao que é excelente e abstenham-se da iniquidade.

DESTAQUES DE SEGUNDA TESSALONICENSES

Carta para corrigir um conceito errado a respeito da presença de Cristo e para dar conselhos sobre como tratar pessoas desordeiras.

Escrita por Paulo pouco depois de sua primeira carta aos tessalonicenses.

O alívio virá na revelação de Cristo. (1:1-12)

Os tessalonicenses são elogiados por sua perseverança e fé ao sofrerem perseguições e angústia.

O alívio virá na revelação de Cristo; nesta ocasião, Jesus Cristo, acompanhado por poderosos anjos, destruirá os que não obedecem às boas novas e será glorificado com relação aos seus santos.

Paulo ora pedindo que os tessalonicenses sejam achados dignos para que o nome do Senhor Jesus seja glorificado neles.

O homem que é contra a lei será revelado antes da presença de Cristo. (2:1-17)

Os tessalonicenses são admoestados a não ser demovidos ou provocados por uma mensagem que sugira que o dia de Jeová já tenha chegado.

A apostasia tem de ocorrer primeiro, e o homem que é contra a lei tem de ser revelado; ele se erguerá acima de todo objeto de reverência e se apresentará como deus.

Quando aquele que age como restrição for removido, o que é contra a lei será revelado, ou seja, aquele cuja presença é marcada por sinais mentirosos e todo engano injusto a fim de enganar os que estão perecendo.

Jesus Cristo o reduzirá a nada na manifestação de sua presença.

Como lidar com pessoas desordeiras. (3:1-18)

Retirem-se dos desordeiros, os que se intrometem no que não lhes diz respeito, os que desprezam a ordem: "Se alguém não quiser trabalhar, tampouco coma."

Tomem nota deles como pessoas com quem não deve haver confraternização, mas, admoestem-nos como irmãos para que mudem de proceder.

qual o apóstolo frisou a genuinidade da sua segunda carta, ao dizer: "Aqui está o meu cumprimento, o de Paulo, pela minha própria mão, que é sinal em cada carta; é assim que eu escrevo." (3:17) Não desejando que os irmãos fossem seduzidos a aceitar um ensino errôneo, Paulo mostrou que outros eventos tinham de preceder à vinda do dia de Jeová. Ele escreveu: "Não virá a menos que venha primeiro a apostasia e seja revelado o homem que é contra a lei." — 2:3.

Um problema que já existia antes na congregação ainda precisava de atenção. Em sua primeira carta aos tessalonicenses, Paulo lhes dissera: "Exortamo-vos, . . . irmãos, . . . que tomeis por vosso alvo viver sossegadamente, e que cuideis de vossos próprios negócios e trabalheis com as vossas mãos, assim como vos ordenamos, a fim de que andeis decentemente para com os de fora e não necessiteis de nada." (1Te 4:10-12) Havia alguns na congregação que não levaram a peito essa admoestação. Por isto, Paulo ordenou que essas pessoas trabalhassem sossegadamente e comessem o alimento que elas próprias ganhassem, acrescentando: "Mas, se alguém não for obediente à nossa palavra por intermédio desta carta, tomai nota de tal, parai de associar-vos com ele, para que fique envergonhado. Contudo, não o considereis como inimigo, mas continuai a admoestá-lo como irmão." — 2Te 3:10-15.

TESTA. A parte do rosto que fica acima dos olhos. Certa expressão hebraica traduzida 'testa' (De 14:1) e a palavra grega para "testa" (mé·to·pon) significam, literalmente, "entre os olhos". Por ser um traço bem destacado e muito visível da pessoa, a testa, nos tempos antigos, era o lugar em que se marcavam os escravos, de modo que todos pudessem ver a que amo pertenciam. Além disso, os devotos de determinados deuses pagãos eram marcados dessa maneira. Mesmo hoje em dia alguns seguem o costume de colocar marcas religiosas na testa, de modo que todos possam ver que são devotados às suas respectivas crenças religiosas.

Sinal na Testa. Similarmente, na Bíblia, ter alguém um sinal na "testa" indica, em sentido figurado, que ele é escravo do verdadeiro Deus ou de outro deus. Em Revelação (Apocalipse) 7:2-4, faz-se referência à selagem angélica na testa de 144.000 pessoas. (Veja SELO.) Em outra parte da visão de Revelação, apresenta-se os 144.000 com o nome do Cordeiro, Jesus Cristo, e o nome do seu Pai escritos na testa. Por serem a noiva do Cordeiro, eles apropriadamente recebem seu nome. (Re 14:1; 22:3, 4) Visto que a língua hebraica é mencionada duas vezes no livro de Revelação (9:11; 16:16) e que o apóstolo João era hebreu, é possível que o que estava escrito na testa dos 144.000 era o Tetragrama sagrado, o que os identificaria como servos e testemunhas de Jeová.

Segundo descrito em Ezequiel 9:3-6, marca-se na testa uma classe de pessoas, para serem protegidas da destruição pelas forças executoras de Deus. Neste caso, elas não são marcadas por anjos, nem com um "selo", mas por um homem que tem um "tinteiro de secretário". Estas pessoas, que na descrição "suspiram e gemem por causa de todas as coisas detestáveis que se fazem", quando

'marcadas', mostram ser escravos e adoradores de Jeová; suas ações, costumes e personalidade dão evidência disto a todos, como se estivesse escrito 'em sua testa'.

Ao se marcar os escravos da "fera" política mundial (veja ANIMAIS SIMBÓLICOS [A fera de sete cabeças que ascende do mar]), coloca-se, mesmo que à força, uma marca simbólica na testa ou na mão direita de algumas pessoas, conforme descrito em Revelação 13:16, 17. Os que recebem essa marca identificam-se como opositores de Deus e hão de receber a Sua ira não diluída. — Re 14:9-11; veja MARCA.

O Sumo Sacerdote de Israel. Em Israel, o turbante do sumo sacerdote tinha na frente, sobre a testa do sacerdote, uma lâmina de ouro, "o sinal sagrado de dedicação", na qual havia a inscrição, "em gravuras de sinete": "A santidade pertence a Jeová." (Êx 28:36-38; 39:30) Visto que o sumo sacerdote era o principal representante da adoração de Jeová em Israel, era apropriado que ele mantivesse santo o seu cargo, e esta inscrição também servia de lembrete para todo o Israel da necessidade de constante santidade no serviço de Jeová. Servia também de representação adequada do grande Sumo Sacerdote, Jesus Cristo, dedicado por Jeová Deus a este serviço sacerdotal que defende a Sua santidade. — He 7:26.

Babilônia, a Grande. Por outro lado, a simbólica grande meretriz tem na testa o nome "Babilônia, a Grande". A antiga Babilônia por muito tempo representou o que é profano e está em oposição a Deus. — Re 17:1-6; veja BABILÔNIA, A GRANDE.

Outros Usos Desse Termo. Outro uso figurado da palavra "testa" encontra-se em Isaías 48:4, onde Jeová declarou que a testa de Israel era de cobre, evidentemente por serem tão grandes sua teimosia e rebeldia. Em Jeremias 3:3, a descarada e vergonhosa apostasia da infiel Jerusalém é metaforicamente descrita como "testa de uma esposa que comete prostituição". Além disso, em Ezequiel 3:7-9, Deus disse a Ezequiel, que profetizava aos israelitas de cabeça dura (literalmente: "de testa forte") e de coração duro, que Ele tornara a testa do profeta "igual ao diamante", no sentido de que lhe dera a resolução, a determinação e a intrepidez necessárias para apresentar-lhes a mensagem de Deus.

Quando o Rei Uzias usurpou, presunçosa e ilegalmente, os deveres de sacerdote, ao tentar oferecer incenso no altar de incenso, no templo de Jeová, seu pecado e o julgamento procedente de Jeová foram clara e imediatamente manifestados pela lepra que lhe apareceu de súbito na testa. — 2Cr 26:16, 19, 20.

TESTEMUNHA. Veja CAUSA JURÍDICA.

TESTÍCULOS. Glândulas genitais masculinas. A lei de Deus para Israel impedia o ingresso no sacerdócio a homens que tivessem testículos quebrados, como um dentre diversos defeitos físicos desqualificadores. (Le 21:17-21, 23) Este elevado padrão para o sacerdócio harmonizava-se com a santidade do cargo que os sacerdotes ocupavam como representantes da santidade de Jeová perante Israel. Isto está igualmente de acordo com o fato de que o sacerdócio de Israel simbolizava o sacerdócio celestial de Cristo e de sua congregação de subsacerdotes, entre os quais não há mácula. (He 7:26; Ef 5:27; Re 14:1, 5; 20:6) Ademais, Deus queria sacerdotes que pudessem ter filhos para sucedê-los. No entanto, a Lei estipulava que pessoas com tal defeito podiam comer das coisas sagradas supridas para o sustento do sacerdócio. — Le 21:21, 22.

Por motivos similares, animais com testículos machucados, esmagados, cortados ou arrancados não podiam ser oferecidos como sacrifício. (Le 22:24; compare isso com Mal 1:6-8; 1Pe 1:19.) Em função disto, os israelitas não castravam os animais, pois a Lei exigia que todos os animais domésticos que fossem mortos para consumo deviam ser levados ao santuário para serem abatidos e comidos como oferta de participação em comum. A mesma lei aplicava-se na Terra da Promessa no caso daqueles que não moravam longe de Jerusalém. — Le 17:3-5; De 12:20-25.

A Lei ainda dizia: "Nenhum homem castrado, a quem se esmagaram os testículos ou se cortou o membro viril, pode entrar na congregação de Jeová." (De 23:1) Essa 'castração' não se refere a defeitos congênitos ou a uma condição causada por um acidente. (Compare com Le 21:17-21; De 25:11, 12.) É evidente, portanto, que isto tinha que ver com a emasculação deliberada, para objetivos imorais, tais como o homossexualismo. Essa pessoa devia ser mantida fora da congregação, sem permissão de associar-se com ela. Isto protegia a pureza da congregação.

A Lei frisava o respeito que Jeová tem pelo direito do homem de ter filhos com sua esposa e pelas faculdades reprodutivas de que Ele dotou o homem e a mulher. O casamento de cunhado tornava possível a continuidade da linhagem familiar, do nome e da herança de um homem. (De 25:5-10) Logo em seguida à exposição desse arranjo, a Lei dizia que, se dois homens estivessem brigando e a esposa de um deles agarrasse o outro homem por suas partes íntimas a fim de ajudar o marido (ato que poderia destruir as faculdades reprodutivas do homem), a mão dela devia ser amputada. (De 25:11, 12) De modo que a lei de talião não se aplicava neste caso. (De 19:21) Deus não requeria a destruição dos órgãos reprodutivos dela ou do marido. Desta forma, o casamento ainda podia ser frutífero, com o prosseguimento da linhagem familiar do marido.

No caso da congregação cristã, não se impede o ingresso nela de pessoas castradas, pois a Lei foi posta de lado à base do sacrifício de Cristo. (Col 2:13, 14) Todavia, as leis citadas acima ilustram a consideração de Deus pelos órgãos reprodutivos e indicam fortemente que seria errado submeter-se a uma cirurgia que destruísse as faculdades de procriação simplesmente por falta de apreço por esta dádiva de Deus.

O Órgão Genital. A palavra hebraica para "carne" (ba·sár) é usada nas Escrituras em Levítico 15:2, 3 com referência ao órgão genital do homem, o pênis, à parte dos testículos. — Veja LIMPO, LIMPEZA; compare isso com Is 57:8 n.

O órgão genital masculino foi objeto da adoração do sexo praticada por pagãos em tempos antigos, assim como se dá hoje em alguns países. Ezequiel 8:17 (NM n) talvez indique que tal adoração infectava os israelitas apóstatas nos dias de Ezequiel.

TETE [ט]. (tehth). Nona letra do alfabeto hebraico. O som representado por esta letra corresponde ao "t" do português, produzido pelo posicionamento da ponta da língua nos dentes incisivos superiores. Seu som difere do da letra tau [ת] primariamente por não haver aspiração depois do som "t". No hebraico original, ela aparece no começo de cada verso do Salmo 119:65-72.

TEUDAS. Rebelde que iniciou uma insurreição com cerca de 400 seguidores algum tempo antes de 6 EC. Usando este Teudas como seu primeiro exemplo de um movimento que não mais causou problemas depois de seu líder ser morto, o fariseu Gamaliel persuadiu o Sinédrio a não incomodar a jovem congregação cristã tão pouco tempo depois da morte de Jesus. — At 5:34-40.

TIA. Irmã da mãe ou do pai de alguém; esposa do tio de alguém. Este parentesco só é mencionado nas Escrituras Hebraicas. Nelas, as relações sexuais com um parente tão próximo como uma tia são classificadas como incesto e estritamente proibidas sob a Lei mosaica. — Le 18:12-14; 20:19, 20.

A respeito dos pais de Moisés, o texto massorético reza: "Ora, Anrão tomou Joquebede, irmã de seu pai, por sua esposa." (Êx 6:20; Núm 26:59) Naquela época permitia-se o casamento desse tipo, visto que isto aconteceu mais de 80 anos antes de a Lei ser formulada. — Veja JOQUEBEDE.

TIAGO [Derivado de "Iago", "Jacó": "Agarrador do Calcanhar; Suplantador"].

1. Pai do apóstolo Judas (não Judas Iscariotes). — Lu 6:16; At 1:13.

2. Filho de Zebedeu; irmão de João e um dos 12 apóstolos de Jesus Cristo. (Mt 10:2) Parece que sua mãe era Salomé, como se pode notar da comparação de dois relatos sobre o mesmo acontecimento. Um menciona "a mãe dos filhos de Zebedeu", o outro a chama de "Salomé". (Mt 27:55, 56; Mr 15:40, 41; veja SALOMÉ N.º 1.) Uma comparação adicional com João 19:25 parece indicar que Salomé era irmã carnal de Maria, a mãe de Jesus. Neste caso, Tiago seria primo em primeiro grau de Jesus.

No ano 30 EC, Tiago e seu irmão trabalhavam com o pai no ramo da pesca quando Jesus os chamou, bem como os colegas pescadores, Pedro e André, para serem seus discípulos e "pescadores de homens". Ao aceitarem a convocação de Jesus, Tiago e João deixaram seu negócio na pesca, que era uma sociedade com Pedro e André, suficientemente grande para empregar homens assalariados. — Mt 4:18-22; Mr 1:19, 20; Lu 5:7-10.

No ano seguinte, 31 EC, quando Jesus nomeou 12 de seus discípulos como apóstolos, Tiago foi um dos que se achavam no grupo escolhido. — Mr 3:13-19; Lu 6:12-16.

Pedro, Tiago e João muitas vezes são mencionados juntos e em íntima associação com Cristo. Por exemplo, os três foram os únicos que estiveram com Cristo no monte da transfiguração (Mt 17:1, 2), os únicos apóstolos convidados a entrar na casa para testemunhar a ressurreição da filha de Jairo (Lu 8:51) e os que ficaram mais perto de Jesus no Getsêmani, enquanto ele orava naquela última noite (Mr 14:32-34). Pedro, Tiago e João, junto com André, foram os que perguntaram a Jesus quando ocorreria a predita destruição do templo de Jerusalém e qual seria o sinal da sua presença e da terminação do sistema de coisas. (Mr 13:3, 4) Tiago é sempre mencionado junto com seu irmão, João, e na maioria dos casos seu nome é mencionado primeiro. Isto talvez indique que era o mais velho dos dois. — Mt 4:21; 10:2; 17:1; Mr 1:19, 29; 3:17; 5:37; 9:2; 10:35, 41; 13:3; 14:33; Lu 5:10; 6:14; 8:51; 9:28, 54; At 1:13.

Jesus deu a Tiago e a seu irmão o sobrenome Boanerges, termo semítico que significa "Filhos do Trovão". (Mr 3:17) Isto talvez fosse devido à natureza dinâmica, impetuosa e entusiástica destes homens. Em certa ocasião, por exemplo, quando certos samaritanos não foram hospitaleiros com Jesus, Tiago e João quiseram mandar descer fogo do céu para aniquilá-los. Embora tenham sido repreendidos por Jesus por sugerirem tal vingança, essa atitude indicava sua indignação justa e também sua fé. (Lu 9:51-55) Eles também nutriam a ambição de ocupar as posições mais destacadas no Reino, à direita e à esquerda de Jesus, e pelo visto fizeram com que sua mãe (possivelmente tia de Jesus) lhe pedisse esse favor. Depois de explicar que tais decisões eram feitas por seu Pai, Jesus aproveitou o ensejo para salientar que 'quem quisesse ser o primeiro entre eles tinha de ser seu escravo'. — Mt 20:20-28.

Tiago evidentemente morreu em 44 EC. Herodes Agripa I mandou executá-lo pela espada. Ele foi o primeiro dos 12 apóstolos a morrer martirizado. — At 12:1-3.

3. Outro apóstolo de Jesus Cristo e filho de Alfeu. (Mt 10:2, 3; Mr 3:18; Lu 6:15; At 1:13) Crê-se em geral, e é bem provável, que Alfeu era o mesmo que Clopas, caso em que a mãe de Tiago era Maria, a mesma Maria que era "a mãe de Tiago, o Menor, e de Josés". (Jo 19:25; Mr 15:40; Mt 27:56) É possível que tenha sido chamado de Tiago, o Menor, quer por ter sido menor em estatura física, quer mais moço do que o outro apóstolo Tiago, filho de Zebedeu.

4. Filho de José e Maria, e meio-irmão de Jesus. (Mr 6:3; Gál 1:19) Embora não fosse apóstolo, é evidente que este Tiago é que era superintendente da congregação cristã de Jerusalém (At 12:17) e que foi ele quem escreveu o livro bíblico que leva seu nome. (Tg 1:1) Talvez fosse o mais velho, logo depois de Jesus, já que é o primeiro mencionado dentre os quatro filhos de Maria com José: Tiago, José, Simão e Judas. (Mt 13:55; veja IRMÃO.) Paulo dá a entender, em sua carta aos coríntios, escrita por volta do ano 55 EC, que Tiago era casado. — 1Co 9:5.

Parece que Tiago, durante o ministério de Jesus, estava bem a par das atividades de seu irmão (Lu 8:19; Jo 2:12), mas, embora aparentemente não fosse opositor, não era discípulo e seguidor de Cristo. (Mt 12:46-50; Jo 7:5) É provável que estivesse com seus irmãos descrentes quando estes incentivaram Jesus a ir corajosamente à Festividade das Tendas, ocasião em que os governantes dos judeus procuravam matá-lo. (Jo 7:1-10) Pode ser que Tiago também estivesse entre os parentes que disseram a respeito de Jesus: "Ele perdeu o juízo." — Mr 3:21.

No entanto, depois da morte de Jesus, e antes de Pentecostes de 33 EC, Tiago se reuniu para orar junto com sua mãe, seus irmãos e os apóstolos num quarto de andar superior em Jerusalém. (At 1:13, 14) É evidente que foi a este Tiago que o ressuscitado Jesus apareceu pessoalmente, segundo relata 1 Coríntios 15:7. Desta forma, Jesus convenceu Tiago, que outrora era descrente, de que realmente era o Messias. Isto nos faz lembrar a aparição pessoal de Jesus a Paulo. — At 9:3-5.

Depois disso, Tiago tornou-se um membro destacado e, pelo visto, um "apóstolo" da congregação de Jerusalém. (Veja APÓSTOLO [Apostolados Congregacionais].) Assim, na primeira visita que fez aos irmãos em Jerusalém (por volta de 36 EC), Paulo diz que passou 15 dias com Pedro, mas que 'não viu nenhum outro dos apóstolos, a não ser Tiago, o irmão do Senhor'. (Gál 1:18, 19) Pedro, depois de ter sido milagrosamente libertado da prisão, instruiu os irmãos que estavam na casa de João Marcos: "Relatai estas coisas a Tiago e aos irmãos", indicando com isto a posição de destaque que Tiago ocupava. (At 12:12, 17) Por volta de 49 EC, apresentou-se a questão da circuncisão aos 'apóstolos e aos anciãos' em Jerusalém. Depois do testemunho pessoal de Pedro, de Barnabé e de Paulo, Tiago falou, propondo uma decisão que foi aprovada e adotada pela assembleia. (At 15:6-29; compare com At 16:4.) Referindo-se a essa ocasião, Paulo diz que Tiago, Cefas e João "pareciam ser colunas" entre os que estavam em Jerusalém. (Gál 2:1-9) No fim duma viagem missionária posterior, Paulo, estando em Jerusalém, relatou seu ministério a Tiago e a "todos os anciãos", e estes então lhe deram certos conselhos a seguir. — At 21:15-26; veja também Gál 2:11-14.

Que foi este 'irmão de Jesus' quem escreveu a carta de Tiago, e não um dos apóstolos que tinham o mesmo nome (quer o filho de Zebedeu, quer o filho de Alfeu), parece indicado no início da carta. O escritor identifica-se ali como "escravo de Deus e do Senhor Jesus Cristo", em vez de como apóstolo. De maneira similar, seu irmão, Judas, também se identificou como "escravo de Jesus Cristo, mas irmão de Tiago". (Tg 1:1; Ju 1) Os dois irmãos evitaram humildemente identificar-se como irmãos carnais do Senhor Jesus Cristo.

Ser ele chamado de "Tiago, o Justo", baseia-se em tradições que dizem que ele recebeu este título por causa de seu modo de vida. Não há registro nas Escrituras sobre a morte de Tiago. O historiador secular Josefo, porém, diz que no período entre a morte do governador Festo, por volta de 62 EC, e a chegada de seu sucessor, Albino, o sumo sacerdote, Ananus (Ananias) "convocou os juízes do Sinédrio e levou perante eles um homem chamado Tiago, irmão de Jesus, que era chamado o Cristo, e alguns outros. Ele os acusou de terem transgredido a lei e os entregou para serem apedrejados". — Jewish Antiquities (Antiguidades Judaicas), XX, 200 (ix, 1).

TIAGO, CARTA DE. Carta inspirada das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. É uma das chamadas cartas gerais, porque, como a Primeira e a Segunda de Pedro, a Primeira de João, e Judas (mas diferente da maioria das cartas do apóstolo Paulo), não foi dirigida a nenhuma congregação ou pessoa específica. Esta carta é dirigida às "doze tribos que estão espalhadas". — Tg 1:1.

Escritor. O escritor identifica-se simplesmente como "Tiago, escravo de Deus e do Senhor Jesus Cristo". (Tg 1:1) Jesus teve dois apóstolos de nome Tiago (Mt 10:2, 3), mas é improvável que um deles tenha escrito essa carta. Um dos apóstolos, Tiago, filho de Zebedeu, foi martirizado por volta de 44 EC. (At 12:1, 2) Como o próprio conteúdo da carta mostra, é muito improvável que pudesse ter sido escrita logo depois de a congregação cristã ter sido formada. (Tg 1:1) O outro apóstolo Tiago, filho de Alfeu, não recebe destaque no registro bíblico, e muito pouco se sabe sobre ele. A natureza franca da carta de Tiago parece pesar contra a possibilidade de Tiago, filho de Alfeu, ter sido o escritor, pois este provavelmente se teria identificado como um dos 12 apóstolos, a fim de respaldar suas fortes palavras com autoridade apostólica.

A evidência, porém, aponta para Tiago, meio-irmão de Jesus Cristo, para quem o ressuscitado Cristo evidentemente aparecera de modo especial, e que tinha destaque entre os discípulos. (Mt 13:55; At 21:15-25; 1Co 15:7; Gál 2:9) O escritor da carta de Tiago identifica-se como "escravo de Deus e do Senhor Jesus Cristo", dum modo bem parecido a como fizera Judas, que iniciou a carta de Judas chamando a si mesmo de "escravo de Jesus Cristo, mas irmão de Tiago". (Tg 1:1; Ju 1) Ademais, as saudações da carta de Tiago incluem a palavra "Cumprimentos!", do mesmo modo que a carta acerca da circuncisão, que fora enviada às congregações. Neste último caso, pelo visto foi Tiago, meio-irmão de Jesus, que falou de forma destacada na assembleia dos 'apóstolos e dos anciãos' em Jerusalém. — At 15:13, 22, 23.

Canonicidade. A carta de Tiago consta do Manuscrito Vaticano N.º 1209, bem como dos Manuscritos Sinaítico e Alexandrino, do quarto e do quinto séculos EC. Está incluída na versão Pesito, siríaca, e encontra-se em pelo menos dez catálogos antigos, anteriores ao Concílio de Cartago, realizado em 397 EC. Antigos escritores religiosos fizeram citações dela, e Orígenes, Cirilo de

DESTAQUES DE TIAGO

Carta que frisa que a fé deve ser demonstrada por obras.

Escrita antes de 62 EC, mais de oito anos antes da destruição de Jerusalém pelos romanos.

Os cristãos que perseveram fielmente quando em provações têm motivos de ser felizes. (1:1-18)

- Deus generosamente nos dará a sabedoria necessária para perseverar se continuarmos a pedir isto com fé.
- Deus nunca nos prova por meio de coisas más; mas a pessoa pode ser engodada a um proceder errado por seu próprio desejo errado.
- Tudo o que Jeová provê é bom.

A adoração aceitável a Deus requer obras corretas para que se demonstre a fé. (1:19–2:26)

- Ponha de lado toda a maldade e aceite a palavra de Deus com brandura; seja cumpridor da palavra, não mero ouvinte.
- Aprenda a controlar a língua, cuide dos órfãos e das viúvas, e mantenha-se sem mancha do mundo.
- Favorecer o rico em detrimento do pobre é uma violação da "lei régia" do amor.
- A fé viva é revelada por meio de obras, como fica evidente nos exemplos de Abraão e Raabe.

Os instrutores têm grande responsabilidade perante Jeová. (3:1-18)

- Eles, e todos os cristãos, têm de aprender a controlar a língua.
- Podem fazer isto se manifestam a sabedoria de cima.

Tendências mundanas afetam nossa relação com Deus. (4:1–5:12)

- Os que são culpados de brigar para alcançar seus objetivos egoístas ou os que condenam seus irmãos precisam arrepender-se.
- A amizade com o mundo é inimizade com Deus.
- Fazer planos materialistas sem considerar a vontade de Jeová é sinal de arrogância.
- O julgamento divino está em reserva para os opressores ricos e defraudadores.
- Precisamos guardar-nos do espírito de impaciência e de suspiros quando sofremos adversidades, ao passo que esperamos que Jesus Cristo faça o julgamento.

Para recuperar-se duma doença espiritual resultante do pecado, aquele que sofre deve recorrer à ajuda dos anciãos. (5:13-20)

- A confissão franca dos pecados, bem como orações feitas pelos anciãos a favor do pecador, promoverão a cura espiritual.
- Restabelecer um irmão envolvido no erro equivale a salvá-lo da morte espiritual.

Jerusalém, Jerônimo, e outros, reconheceram-na como Escritura autêntica.

Data e Local da Escrita. A carta não fornece indício algum de que a queda de Jerusalém diante dos romanos (em 70 EC) já tivesse ocorrido. Segundo o historiador judeu Josefo, um sumo sacerdote chamado Ananus, saduceu, foi responsável de levar Tiago e outros perante o Sinédrio, e de mandar que fossem apedrejados até à morte. Este acontecimento, escreve Josefo, ocorreu após a morte de Festo, procurador romano, mas antes da chegada de Albino, seu sucessor. (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], XX, 197-203 [ix, 1]) Se assim foi, e se estiverem corretas as fontes que situam a morte de Festo por volta de 62 EC, então Tiago deve ter escrito sua carta algum tempo antes dessa data.

Jerusalém foi o local provável da escrita, pois é ali que Tiago residia. — Gál 1:18, 19.

A Quem Foi Escrita. Tiago escreveu "às doze tribos que estão espalhadas", literalmente, "os da dispersão". (Tg 1:1, n) Ele se dirige a seus "irmãos" espirituais, aqueles que se apegam à "fé do nosso Senhor Jesus Cristo", primariamente os que vivem fora da Palestina. (1:2; 2:1, 7; 5:7) Tiago fundamenta grande parte de seus argumentos nas Escrituras Hebraicas, mas isto não prova que sua carta tenha sido apenas para os cristãos judeus, assim como a familiaridade de alguém com as Escrituras Hebraicas, na atualidade, não prova que a pessoa seja de ascendência judaica. Sua referência a Abraão como "nosso pai" (2:21) harmoniza-se com o que Paulo diz em Gálatas 3:28, 29, ao mostrar que o que determina se a pessoa faz parte da verdadeira 'semente' de Abraão não é se ela é judia ou grega. Portanto, as "doze tribos" a quem se dirige a carta têm de ser o "Israel de Deus", o Israel espiritual. — Gál 6:15, 16.

Objetivo. O objetivo de Tiago ao escrever parece ter sido duplo: (1) exortar os concrentes a demonstrar fé e perseverança durante suas provações e (2) adverti-los dos pecados que resultam na desaprovação divina.

Alguns haviam caído no laço de dar atenção aos mais destacados e ricos, e de mostrar favoritismo. (Tg 2:1-9) Não discerniram o que realmente eram aos olhos de Deus, e eram ouvintes da palavra, mas não cumpridores. (1:22-27) Tinham passado a usar a língua de modo errado, e seus desejos ardentes de prazer sensual provocavam brigas entre eles. (3:2-12; 4:1-3) O desejo de possuir coisas materiais havia levado alguns a ser amigos do mundo e, portanto, a não ser virgens castas, mas "adúlteras" em sentido espiritual, em inimizade com Deus. — 4:4-6.

Tiago corrigiu-os para que fossem tanto cumpridores como ouvintes, mostrando-lhes à base de exemplos bíblicos que o homem que tem genuína fé manifesta-a por obras condizentes com sua fé. Por exemplo, a pessoa que tem genuína fé não diria a um irmão que estivesse nu e sem ter o que comer: 'Vá em paz, mantenha-se aquecido e bem alimentado', sem fazer provisões para essas necessidades. (Tg 2:14-26) Nisto, Tiago não contradizia Paulo, dizendo que alguém poderia ganhar a salvação por meio de obras. Pelo contrário, ele aceita a fé como a base da salvação, mas salienta que não pode haver genuína fé que não produza boas obras. Isto se harmoniza com a descrição que Paulo fez dos frutos do espírito, em Gálatas 5:22-24, e com seus conselhos sobre revestir-se da nova personalidade, em Efésios 4:22-24 e Colossenses 3:5-10, bem como com sua admoestação no que diz respeito a fazer o bem e partilhar as coisas com os outros, em Hebreus 13:16.

Estilo. A carta de Tiago tem forte tom profético e contém muitas figuras de linguagem e símiles, o que lhe dá certa semelhança com os discursos de Jesus Cristo, tais como o Sermão do Monte. Como Jesus, Tiago recorria a coisas físicas — o mar, a vegetação, os animais, barcos, um lavrador, a terra — para dar apoio vívido a seus argumentos sobre fé, controle da língua, paciência, e assim por diante. (Tg 1:6, 9-11; 3:3-12; 5:7) Isto, conjugado com o uso de perguntas diretas e mais de 50 imperativos que aparecem nesta carta relativamente curta, torna dinâmica a carta de Tiago.

Sua Relação com Anteriores Escritos Inspirados. Tiago citou ou se referiu às Escrituras Hebraicas com respeito à criação do homem (Tg 3:9; Gên 1:26); a Abraão e Raabe (Tg 2:21-26; Gên 15:6; 22:9-12; Jos 2; Is 41:8); a Jó (Tg 5:11; Jó 1:13-22; 2:7-10; 42:10-17); à Lei (Tg 2:8, 11; Êx 20:13, 14; Le 19:18; De 5:17, 18) e a Elias (Tg 5:17, 18; 1Rs 17:1; 18:1). Há muitos exemplos evidentes de harmonia direta com declarações de Jesus Cristo. Para citar alguns: a perseguição (Tg 1:2; Mt 5:10-12); pedir e receber coisas de Deus (Tg 1:5, 17; Lu 11:9-13); ser tanto ouvintes como cumpridores (Tg 1:22; Mt 7:21-27); manter-se separado do mundo (Tg 4:4; Jo 17:14); não julgar os outros (Tg 4:12; Lu 6:37); a confiabilidade da palavra da pessoa (Tg 5:12; Mt 5:33-37).

Tiago 4:5 apresenta um problema, porque não se tem certeza sobre que versículo(s) Tiago citou (ou a que talvez se tenha apenas referido). Este texto reza: "Ou parece-vos que a escritura diz sem propósito: 'É com a tendência de invejar que o espírito que estabeleceu residência em nós está ansiando'?" Tem-se sugerido que Tiago, sob inspira-ção divina, extraiu essas palavras das ideias gerais contidas em textos tais como Gênesis 6:5; 8:21; Provérbios 21:10; e Gálatas 5:17.

TIATIRA. Cidade reconstruída no início do terceiro século AEC por Seleuco Nicátor, ex-general de Alexandre, o Grande. Ficava a uns 60 km da costa do mar Egeu, à margem dum afluente do Gediz (antigamente chamado de rio Hermus), no oeste da Ásia Menor. A congregação cristã de Tiatira recebeu uma mensagem escrita pela mão do apóstolo João, ditada pelo Senhor Jesus Cristo. — Re 1:11.

Tiatira é hoje chamada de Akhisar e se acha localizada a cerca de 250 km ao SSO de Istambul e a uns 375 km ao L de Atenas. (FOTO, Vol. 2, p. 946) Esta cidade nunca foi uma grande metrópole ou um centro de especial significado ou importância política; mas era um próspero centro industrial, famoso por numerosos ofícios, incluindo tecelagem, tinturaria, trabalhos em bronze, curtume e olaria. Não raro se mencionam em inscrições sua indústria de tinturaria. Os tintureiros de Tiatira usavam a raiz da garança como fonte de sua famosa cor escarlate ou púrpura, conhecida mais tarde como vermelho-turco.

Lídia, convertida ao cristianismo na primeira visita de Paulo a Filipos, na Macedônia, era "vendedora de púrpura, da cidade de Tiatira". Talvez fosse representante no estrangeiro de fabricantes tiatirenos, uma mulher de negócios, de boa situação financeira, que possuía uma casa suficientemente espaçosa para hospedar Paulo e seus companheiros durante sua estada em Filipos. — At 16:12-15.

Não se sabe quando e por meio de quem o cristianismo foi levado aos tiatirenos. Não há registro de que Paulo ou outros evangelistas tenham visitado esta cidade, ou de Lídia ter voltado lá. É possível que a mensagem tenha chegado ali durante os dois anos (c. 53-55 EC) em que Paulo esteve ativo em Éfeso, situada a uns 115 km ao SO de Tiatira, porque, durante aquele tempo, "todos os que habitavam no distrito da Ásia, tanto judeus como gregos, ouviram a palavra do Senhor". (At 19:10) O que se sabe é que uns 40 anos depois havia uma congregação bastante ativa de cristãos em Tiatira. — Re 1:10, 11.

A Mensagem de Cristo para a Congregação de Tiatira. Esta congregação, a quarta das sete a receberem uma mensagem, foi elogiada pelo amor, pela fé e pela perseverança que havia demonstrado. Seu ministério também foi aprovado; suas 'ações mais recentes eram mais do que as anteriores'. Mas, embora manifestasse estas qualidades elogiáveis, essa congregação também permitira o desenvolvimento e a continuação de uma condição muito ruim. Neste sentido, a censura do Senhor era: "Toleras aquela mulher Jezabel, que se chama profetisa, e ela ensina e desencaminha os meus escravos para cometerem fornicação e para comerem coisas sacrificadas a ídolos." Esta "mulher" recebeu o nome de Jezabel provavelmente porque sua conduta iníqua lembrava a da esposa de Acabe e porque se negava empedernidamente a se arrepender. Parece, porém, que apenas uma minoria da congregação de Tiatira aprovava esta influência de Jezabel, visto que em seguida a mensagem se dirigiu 'aos demais, os que estavam em Tiatira, a todos os que não tinham este ensino, aos mesmos que não haviam chegado a conhecer as "coisas profundas de Satanás"'. — Re 2:18-29.

TIBATE [Matança]. Cidade ao N da Palestina,da qual Davi levou uma grande quantidade de cobre depois de golpear Hadadezer, rei de Zobá, em Hamate, cerca de 230 km ao NNE de Dã. (1Cr 18:3, 8) Na descrição paralela da campanha de Davi em 2 Samuel 8:8, Tibate, pelo visto, é chamada de Betá. (Veja BETÁ.) Alguns sugerem que Tibate talvez tenha recebido o nome do filho de Naor, Tebá. (Gên 22:24) Em harmonia com o fato de fazer parte do reino arameu de Zobá, Tibate provavelmente estava situada no vale que fica entre as montanhas Líbano e Antilíbano. Têm-se encontrado no Líbano vestígios de antigas fundições de cobre, em harmonia com o relato bíblico.

TIBERÍADES.

1. Cidade fundada por Herodes Ântipas por volta de 18 EC, e assim chamada em honra a Tibério César, que na época era o imperador do Império Romano. Ainda se chama Tiberíades (Teverya), e acha-se situada cerca de 25 km em linha reta ao ENE de Nazaré, numa faixa relativamente estreita ao longo da margem ocidental do mar da Galileia, a 210 m abaixo do nível do Mediterrâneo. Tiberíades distava cerca de 15 km de Cafarnaum, contornando-se a orla marítima, e ficava 9 km acima do lugar onde o Jordão sai desse corpo de água. Foi ali que Herodes, o tetrarca, fixou residência. Próximo dali, ao S da cidade, havia famosas fontes termais. A cidade só é mencionada uma vez nas Escrituras. — Jo 6:23; FOTO, Vol. 2, p. 739.

2. O mar da Galileia (Yam Kinneret) era às vezes chamado de Tiberíades, por causa da cidade do mesmo nome situada em sua margem ocidental. — Jo 6:1; 21:1.

TIBÉRIO. Segundo imperador de Roma. Nasceu em 42 AEC, como filho de Tibério Cláudio Nero e de Lívia Drusila. Tibério tinha 3 anos de idade quando seu pai, Tibério Nero, foi forçado por Otávio (Augusto) a se divorciar de Drusila. Otávio fez isso porque ele próprio queria se casar com ela. Depois da morte de seu pai, o jovem Tibério e seu irmão foram morar com a mãe. Mais tarde, o marido dela, Otávio, foi proclamado Augusto. Quando se tornou adulto, Tibério se casou com Vipsânia Agripina. Esse casamento, no entanto, durou pouco tempo porque Augusto insistiu que Tibério se divorciasse de Vipsânia e se casasse com sua filha, Júlia, que era viúva. Augusto o adotou em 4 AEC.

Augusto só escolheu Tibério como seu sucessor depois que outros que ele preferia em lugar de Tibério tinham morrido. Em 17 de agosto de 14 EC (calendário gregoriano), Augusto morreu; em 15 de setembro, Tibério permitiu que o Senado o nomeasse imperador. João começou a batizar "no décimo quinto ano do reinado de Tibério César". Contando-se os anos a partir da morte de Augusto, o 15.º ano se estenderia de agosto de 28 EC a agosto de 29 EC. Contando-se a partir de quando ele foi oficialmente proclamado imperador, o ano se estenderia de setembro de 28 EC a setembro de 29 EC. — Lu 3:1-3.

Tibério viveu até março de 37 EC, e, assim, foi imperador durante todo o período do ministério de Jesus. Portanto, tudo indica que era a imagem de Tibério que estava na moeda do tributo que foi trazida a Jesus quando ele disse: "Pagai de volta a César as coisas de César." (Mr 12:14-17; Mt 22:17-21; Lu 20:22-25) Tibério ampliou a lei de laesa majestas (lesa-majestade) de modo a incluir, além de atos sediciosos, simples palavras injuriosas contra o imperador, e, presumivelmente, respaldados nesta lei, os judeus pressionaram Pôncio Pilatos a mandar matar Jesus. (Jo 19:12-16) Mais tarde, Tibério chamou Pilatos a Roma, devido a queixas dos samaritanos contra a administração dele, mas Tibério morreu e Calígula o sucedeu antes de Pilatos chegar.

Como imperador, Tibério tinha tanto virtudes como vícios. Restringiu os gastos com luxos, e, assim, dispunha de fundos para empregar generosamente em aumentar a prosperidade do império; e dispunha de reservas para ajudar na recuperação em caso de calamidades e de maus tempos. Tibério se considerava um homem, não um deus, rejeitando muitos títulos honoríficos, e, em geral, orientou a adoração do imperador para Augusto (Otávio), em vez de para si próprio.

Todavia, seus vícios excederam suas virtudes. Era extremamente suspeitoso e hipócrita ao lidar com outros, e mandou matar muitas pessoas durante seu reinado, muitos de seus anteriores amigos se encontrando entre as vítimas. Ele consultava astrólogos. Em sua vila, em Capri, onde passou os últimos dez anos de sua vida, entregou-se à lascívia pervertida de forma muitíssimo degradada, com homens mantidos para propósitos desnaturais.

Tibério não só foi desprezado por pessoas tais como seu mestre Teodoro, o Gadareno, e seu padrasto, Augusto, mas também pelos súditos em geral. Após a sua morte, o Senado recusou-se a deificá-lo. Por estes e outros motivos, também, os peritos bíblicos veem em Tibério o cumprimento da profecia que menciona "um que há de ser desprezado", que surgiria como o "rei do norte". — Da 11:15, 21.

TIBNI. Contendedor pela realeza do reino de dez tribos de Israel, após o governo de sete dias de Zinri, o quinto rei de Israel, por volta de 951 AEC. O povo ficou dividido quanto a se Tibni ou Onri deveria ser então o rei. Quatro anos depois, período em que presumivelmente grassou uma guerra civil, a questão foi finalmente resolvida; Tibni perdeu para os apoiadores de Onri, e foi morto. Era filho de Ginate. — 1Rs 16:15, 21-23.

TÍCIO JUSTO. Veja JUSTO N.º 2.

TICVÁ [Esperança].

1. Sogro de Hulda, a profetisa; filho de Harás. (2Rs 22:14) Segundo o texto massorético, o nome é grafado Tocate em 2 Crônicas 34:22.

2. Pai de certo Jazeías que viveu no tempo de Esdras. — Esd 10:10, 11, 15; veja JAZEÍAS.

TIDAL. Rei de Goim e aliado do Rei Quedorlaomer, de Elão, quando eles e dois outros monarcas subjugaram cinco reis próximo ao Mar Morto. Após 12 anos de dominação, os cinco reis derrotados organizaram uma rebelião. Tidal, Quedorlaomer e os demais foram ao O para reprimi-la, e, ao fazerem isso, levaram despojos e cativos, inclusive Ló, sobrinho de Abraão. Abraão perseguiu os opressores e recuperou os prisioneiros e os bens saqueados, mas não há indício de que Tidal ou os reis com ele tenham sido capturados ou mortos. — Gên 14:1-17.

TIFSA.

1. Lugar situado no extremo N do reino de Salomão. (1Rs 4:24) Alguns procuram identificá-lo com Dibseh junto ao rio Eufrates, uns 90 km ao ESE de Alepo e a cerca da mesma distância da confluência dos rios Eufrates e Balique.

2. Lugar, aparentemente nas proximidades de Tirza, que foi golpeado pelo Rei Menaém, de Israel (c. 790-781 AEC). (2Rs 15:16) Sua exata localização é desconhecida. Khirbet Tafsah, uns 10 km ao OSO da antiga Siquém, tem um nome similar, mas parece estar longe demais do suposto lugar de Tirza para ser o local desta Tifsa.

TIGELA. Veja BACIA; VASOS.

TIGLATE-PILESER (III). Poderoso rei da Assíria (cujo nome também é grafado Tilgate-Pilneser) e o primeiro deles a ser citado por nome no registro bíblico. Embora alguns considerem Tiglate-Pileser III como pertencente à linhagem real e outros o classifiquem como usurpador do trono, sua origem e a forma como obteve o reinado são na verdade desconhecidas. Entretanto, seu reinado marcou uma era de reorganização, de crescente expansão e de força, que elevou o Império Assírio a novos apogeus. É considerado como o primeiro monarca assírio a estabelecer como política definida a deportação e o traslado em massa de povos conquistados. Declara-se que até 154.000 pessoas foram forçadas a mudar de lugar, em um só ano, no seu domínio de terras conquistadas. O objetivo aparente por trás de tal política dura era quebrantar o espírito dos grupos nacionais e debilitar ou eliminar qualquer ação unida em tentativas de livrar-se do jugo assírio.

Este rei aparece pela primeira vez no relato da Bíblia como "Pul". (2Rs 15:19) Primeiro Crônicas 5:26 também declara que Deus 'incitou o espírito de Pul, rei da Assíria, sim, o espírito de Tilgate-Pilneser, rei da Assíria, de modo que levou ao exílio' pessoas de certas tribos de Israel. Os antigos registros seculares aplicam ambos os nomes à mesma pessoa, o nome "Pulu" aparecendo no que é conhecido como a "Lista de Reis A, babilônica", ao passo que a "Crônica Sincronística" alista "Tukultiapilesharra" (Tiglate-Pileser). (Ancient Near Eastern Texts [Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo], editado por J. Pritchard, 1974, pp. 272, 273.) É também digno de nota que, em hebraico, o texto supracitado emprega o verbo no singular, "levou", em vez de no plural. Sugere-se comumente que "Pul" era o nome pessoal do monarca, e que ele assumiu o nome "Tiglate-Pileser" (o nome dum anterior e famoso rei assírio) ao subir ao trono.

Pelo que parece, na parte inicial do seu reinado, Tiglate-Pileser III estava ocupado em estabelecer fronteiras mais fortes para o império no S, no L e no N. Entretanto, a sombra ameaçadora da Assíria logo se agigantou sobre as terras da Síria e da Palestina em direção ao O.

As inscrições assírias mencionam proeminentemente Azriau de Ia-ú-da-a-a (Judá) com relação a uma campanha de Tiglate-Pileser III na Síria. (Ancient Near Eastern Texts, pp. 282, 283) Isto parece ser uma referência ao Rei Azarias, de Judá, mais comumente conhecido como Uzias (829-778 AEC), mas o assunto é polêmico, pois alguns sustentam que o pequeno reino de Sam'al, na Síria, também era às vezes chamado de Judá. A probabilidade de um rei pagão ter um nome que incluía o nome de Jah (a forma abreviada de Jeová) e ser contemporâneo do rei de Judá com o mesmo nome parece ser mínima; todavia, a Bíblia não menciona que Tiglate-Pileser III teve tratos com Azarias (Uzias), e os registros assírios estão consideravelmente mutilados.

Durante o reinado do Rei Menaém, de Israel (c. 790-781 AEC), Tiglate-Pileser III (Pul) invadiu a Palestina, e Menaém tentou obter o favor deste assírio por lhe pagar tributo no total de "mil talentos de prata" (US$ 6.606.000 em moeda corrente). Temporariamente apaziguado, Tiglate-Pileser retirou suas forças. (2Rs 15:19, 20) Os documentos assírios se referem a Me-ni-hi-im-me (Menaém), junto com Rezon (Rezim), de Damasco, e Hirão, de Tiro, como tributários de Tiglate-Pileser.

Subsequentemente, no tempo do Rei Acaz, de Judá (761-746 AEC), o Rei Peca, de Israel, formou uma confederação com o Rei Rezim, de Damasco, e atacou Judá. (2Rs 16:5, 6; Is 7:1, 2) Embora o profeta Isaías assegurasse que, dentro de curto período, os dois reinos conspiradores desapareceriam de cena, o Rei Acaz decidiu enviar um suborno para Tiglate-Pileser vir em seu socorro. (2Rs 16:7, 8; Is 7:7-16; 8:9-13) Certa inscrição assíria descreve o tributo pago por Ia-u-ha-zi (Jeoacaz ou Acaz) de Judá e por outros reis da região, como segue: "ouro, prata, estanho, ferro, antimônio, roupas de linho com enfeites multicoloridos, roupas de sua (indústria) nativa (feitas de) lã púrpura-escura . . . todo tipo de objetos custosos, sejam eles produtos do mar ou do continente, os produtos (seletos) de suas regiões, os tesouros de (seus) reis, cavalos, mulos (treinados para) o jugo". (Ancient Near Eastern Texts, p. 282) Esse agressivo assírio respondeu ao apelo de Acaz por invadir Israel e capturar diversas cidades setentrionais, e por assolar as regiões de Gileade, da Galileia e de Naftali, levando muita gente para o exílio. (2Rs 15:29; 1Cr 5:6, 26) Damasco foi atacada e caiu diante das forças assírias, e seu rei, Rezim, foi morto. Em Damasco, Tiglate-Pileser III recebeu a visita do Rei Acaz, de Judá, que veio para expressar gratidão ou então submissão à Assíria. — 2Rs 16:9-12.

Isaías fora inspirado a predizer que Jeová usaria o rei da Assíria como "navalha contratada" para "rapar" o reino de Judá. (Is 7:17, 20) Quer a "navalha contratada" se referisse especificamente a Tiglate-Pileser III, a quem Acaz subornou, quer não, o registro mostra deveras que ele causou grande aflição ao rei de Judá e que o suborno de Acaz não resultou 'ser de nenhum auxílio para ele'. (2Cr 28:20, 21) Isto talvez tenha assinalado a fase inicial da "inundação" pela invasão assíria contra Judá, a qual, por fim, deveria 'chegar até o próprio pescoço do reino', como de fato chegou na época de Ezequias. — Is 8:5-8; 2Rs 18:13, 14.

Tiglate-Pileser III, em suas inscrições, diz a respeito do reino setentrional de Israel: "Eles destronaram o rei deles, Peca (Pa-qa-ha), e eu coloquei Oseias (A-ú-si-') como rei sobre eles. Recebi deles 10 talentos de ouro [US$ 3.853.500], 1.000(?) talentos de prata [US$ 6.606.000] como [tri]buto deles e os trouxe para a Assíria." (Ancient Near Eastern Texts, p. 284) Assim, este rei assírio assume o crédito pela ascensão de Oseias ao trono de Israel após a conspiração assassina deste contra o antecessor de Oseias, Peca (c. 758 AEC). — 2Rs 15:30.

Antigos registros assírios atribuem a Tiglate-Pileser III um reinado de 18 anos. Entretanto, referências bíblicas parecem indicar que seu reinado durou mais tempo, visto que ele é mencionado desde o tempo de Menaém até o de Oseias. Mas as Escrituras Hebraicas não fornecem todos os pormenores necessários para se poder declarar taxativamente que os registros assírios estão errados neste caso. Isto se dá por diversos motivos: há incerteza a respeito da maneira em que os reinados dos reis de Israel se encaixam na estrutura cronológica. Também, vale a pena citar que o período que antecede ao tempo geralmente atribuído para o início do reinado de Tiglate-Pileser é relativamente obscuro no que tange aos registros antigos, e é considerado como um período de grande declínio para os assírios. Assim, o perito francês Georges Roux, em seu livro Ancient Iraq (O Iraque Antigo), declara que "por trinta e seis anos . . . a Assíria ficou praticamente paralisada". Quanto a Assurnirari V, considerado predecessor de Tiglate-Pileser III, o mesmo autor comenta: "Ele quase não podia atrever-se a deixar o palácio, e foi provavelmente morto numa revolução que irrompeu em Kalhu e entronizou seu irmão mais novo [?], Tiglate-Pileser III." (1964, p. 251) Em vista disso, parece inteiramente possível que Tiglate-Pileser tenha exercido o poder de reinado por um período mais longo do que comumente se atribui a ele, talvez até mesmo como corregente.

Em 2 Crônicas 28:16, menciona-se Acaz como enviando mensageiros "aos reis da Assíria para que [eles] lhe ajudassem". Ao passo que o plural "reis", que ocorre no texto massorético hebraico, aparece no singular ("rei") na Septuaginta e em outros manuscritos antigos, há traduções modernas que favorecem o plural hebraico. (ALA, CBC, NM) Alguns peritos consideram o plural aqui empregado como simples indicação da soma de majestade e de grandeza atribuída a um só monarca (Tiglate-Pileser III) como o "rei dos reis". Todavia, também se traz à atenção a jactanciosa afirmação do monarca assírio, registrada em Isaías 10:8: "Não são os meus príncipes ao mesmo tempo reis?" É possível, assim, que a referência a "Pul, o rei da Assíria" (2Rs 15:19), possa também ser aplicada no sentido de ser ele o governante duma província assíria antes de se tornar cabeça de todo o império.

Ao morrer, Tiglate-Pileser III foi sucedido por Salmaneser V. Poder-se-ia saber mais pormenores a respeito deste rei, se um rei ainda posterior, Esar-Hadom, não tivesse feito com que as inscrições de Tiglate-Pileser fossem mutiladas, uma afronta rara, desconhecida em outras partes da história assíria.

TIJOLO. Em geral, um bloco de construção, feito de barro ou argila endurecidos. Desde tempos primitivos, o tijolo (hebr.: leve·náh) foi amplamente utilizado nas terras bíblicas. Os construtores da antiga Babel não encontraram pedras nas proximidades do local que escolheram para sua cidade, e, assim, utilizaram tijolos em vez de pedras, e o betume lhes servia como argamassa. Pelo visto, os tijolos eram secados ao forno, isto é, eram endurecidos "por um processo de queima". (Gên 11:3) No antigo Egito, os israelitas escravizados labutavam na fabricação de tijolos. Sua vida foi dificultada por terem eles mesmos de juntar a palha e, ainda assim, produzir a mesma quantidade de tijolos. (Êx 5:7-19) Na Terra da Promessa, os israelitas continuaram empregando tijolos na construção, embora pareça que se dava preferência ao uso de pedra. (Is 9:10) Mesmo sendo abundantes nas colinas da Palestina, em certas áreas existe pouca pedra de construção de boa qualidade. Por isso, nas regiões baixas, em cidades como Jericó e Eziom-Géber, usava-se o tijolo, não só para as muralhas da cidade, mas também para as moradias. Na atualidade, em partes da Síria e da Palestina, casas têm sido construídas em parte com pedras talhadas, e as demais partes com tijolos secados ao sol, sendo que as pedras talhadas são empregadas para as paredes mais expostas às tempestades de inverno.

Na fabricação de tijolos, o barro era geralmente misturado com palha picada, ou com outra matéria vegetal, depois de se ter removido dele as substâncias estranhas. Isso é atestado por uma declaração contida nos Papiros Anastasi, do antigo Egito, que reza: "Não havia quem moldasse tijolos, e não havia palha nas proximidades." (Life in Ancient Egypt [A Vida no Antigo Egito], de A. Erman, 1894, p. 117) Embora se tenham encontrado no Egito tijolos fabricados sem palha, isso era evidentemente uma exceção e não constitui base válida para se concluir que os israelitas recorreram à fabricação de tijolos sem palha quando eles mesmos foram obrigados a juntá-la. Experiências realizadas em anos recentes indicam que o acréscimo de palha à argila facilita o amassamento e triplica a resistência dos tijolos assim produzidos.

A mistura de barro ou argila com palha era umedecida com água, pisoteada e então moldada a mão ou comprimida numa "forma para tijolos" quadrilátera, de madeira. (Hebr.: mal·bén; Na 3:14) As laterais das formas eram provavelmente polvilhadas com terra seca para que os tijolos se desprendessem com facilidade das formas. Com frequência, enquanto o tijolo ainda estava úmido, era carimbado com a marca do monarca reinante. Deixava-se então que os tijolos secassem ao sol, ou secavam-nos ao forno.

Em Babilônia, os tijolos eram comumente secados ao forno, e tais tijolos eram, em geral, usados nas muralhas das cidades e nas paredes e nos pisos de palácios. Às vezes, tijolos secados ao sol eram usados no interior de prédios ou assentados junto com tijolos queimados em camadas alternadas, da espessura de vários decímetros. No Egito, na Assíria e na Palestina, a secagem ao sol parece ter predominado. Os tijolos processados em fornos de calcinação são de qualidade superior aos secados ao sol. Os últimos tendem a desintegrar-se quando atingidos por enchentes e a encolher sob o intenso calor do sol de verão. Em certos casos, porém, os tijolos secados ao sol revelaram-se bem fortes, tais como os em Eziom-Géber, que têm resistido durante séculos. — Veja FORNO DE CALCINAÇÃO.

O amplo uso de tijolos secados ao sol explica por que os locais de certas cidades antigas permaneceram durante séculos sem ser descobertos. Elevações de terra bem parecidas à do solo circundante foram formadas pelos restos de tijolos de anteriores cidades. Na Palestina e na Síria, tais elevações contêm frequentemente as ruínas de várias cidades.

Os tijolos variavam consideravelmente em tamanho e formato. No Egito, era comum o formato retangular, e tijolos no formato de cunha eram usados na construção de arcos. Os tijolos egípcios tinham aproximadamente de 36 a 51 cm de comprimento, de 15 a 23 cm de largura e de 10 a 18 cm de espessura. Em Babilônia, encontraram-se tijolos quadrados, oblongos, triangulares e em formato de cunha. Entretanto, os tijolos de períodos posteriores, tais como os do tempo de Nabucodonosor, eram geralmente quadrados, medindo cerca de 30 cm de cada lado.

Fazer Israel fumaça sacrificial sobre os tijolos, nos dias de Isaías, talvez se refira ao calçamento do lugar onde o sacrifício era oferecido ou às telhas do telhado. — Is 65:3.

TILGATE-PILNESER. Veja TIGLATE-PILESER (III).

TILOM. Filho de Simão da tribo de Judá. — 1Cr 4:20.

TIMÃO [duma raiz que significa "honrar"]. Um dos sete homens "cheios de espírito e de sabedoria" designados pelos apóstolos para cuidar da "distribuição diária" na recém-formada congregação cristã. Apesar de seu nome grego, ele era provavelmente judeu de nascença. — At 6:1-6.

TIMEU [Honrado]. Pai de Bartimeu, o mendigo cego curado por Jesus. — Mr 10:46.

TIMNA.

1. Concubina do filho de Esaú, Elifaz, e mãe de Amaleque. (Gên 36:10-12) Na genealogia de 1 Crônicas 1:36, são primeiramente enumerados cinco filhos de Elifaz, filho de Esaú. A seguir são acrescentados "Timna, e Amaleque". O Professor C. F. Keil comenta sobre isso: "O acréscimo dos dois nomes Timna e Amaleque na Crônica parece ser simplesmente uma abreviação, que o autor podia muito bem permitir-se fazer, visto que a posteridade de Esaú era conhecida dos seus leitores por causa de Gênesis. O nome Timna, também, por sua forma (uma formação feminina), deve ter prevenido contra a ideia de certos exegetas modernos de que Timna também era um filho de Elifaz." (Commentary on the Old Testament [Comentário sobre o Velho Testamento], 1973, Vol. III, Primeiro Crônicas, p. 53) Assim, alistaram-se os seis filhos de Elifaz, mas com a observação de que um deles, Amaleque, era de Timna, a concubina de Elifaz. Deve-se lembrar que Amaleque tornou-se uma nação que odiava o povo de Deus e a respeito de quem Jeová disse: "Jeová terá guerra com Amaleque de geração em geração." (Êx 17:8-16) Assim, tanto o relato de Gênesis como o de Crônicas fornecem este pormenor sobre a origem de Amaleque. Esta Timna é possivelmente a mesma que a N.º 2.

2. Filha de Seir, o horeu, e, portanto, irmã de Lotã e dos demais filhos de Seir. (Gên 36:20-22; 1Cr 1:39) Possivelmente a mesma que a N.º 1.

3. O primeiro nome encontrado na lista dos 11 "xeques de Esaú", ou Edom. (Gên 36:40-43; 1Cr 1:51-54) No conceito de muitos tradutores, Timna e os demais nomes alistados são nomes de pessoas. (ALA, BJ, NM, So) No entanto, reconhece-se em geral que a expressão "segundo as suas famílias, segundo os seus lugares, pelos seus nomes", indica que se tem presente uma tribo ou região. Portanto, certas versões preferem expressões tais como "o príncipe [chefe] de Timna". (VB, JP) De fato, em Gênesis 36:41, na mesma lista, aparece o nome duma mulher, Oolibama, o que daria margem a que Timna fosse o nome duma mulher. Eusébio e Jerônimo identificaram Timna com um lugar edomita chamado "Thamna", que existia nos seus dias. (Onomasticon [Onomástico], 96, 24-27) Todavia, desconhece-se atualmente a localização de qualquer região assim com o nome de Timna.

TIMNÁ.

1. Lugar situado na fronteira entre Judá e Dã. (Jos 15:1, 10; 19:40-43) Alguns o têm identificado com um lugar que preserva certa similaridade com o antigo nome, Khirbet Tibnah, cerca de 6 km ao O de Bete-Semes, mas não foram encontrados no local restos arqueológicos anteriores aos tempos romanos. Muitos favorecem Tell el-Batashi (Tel Batash), cerca de 7 km ao ONO de Bete-Semes, situada na margem S do vale da torrente de Soreque.

Sansão escolheu uma filisteia de Timná para com ela se casar, quando estava "procurando uma oportunidade contra os filisteus", que na época dominavam Israel. A caminho da cidade, ele, só com as mãos, matou um leão nos vinhedos de Timná. (Jz 14:1-6) No tempo do Rei Acaz, os filisteus capturaram Timná e suas aldeias dependentes. — 2Cr 28:16-19.

2. Cidade da região montanhosa de Judá. Os peritos identificam esta Timná com Khirbet et-Tabbana (Horvat Tibnah), cerca de 3 km ao NO de Gibeá (El Jabʽa). (Jos 15:20, 48, 57) Pelo visto, foi perto desta Timná que Judá planejou tosquiar suas ovelhas, e em Enaim (que ficava na estrada de Timná) ele teve relações sexuais com Tamar, confundindo-a com uma meretriz. — Gên 38:12-18.

TIMNATE-HERES. Lugar da herança de Josué e mais tarde local de seu sepultamento na região montanhosa de Efraim, ao N do monte Gaás. (Jz 2:8, 9) É também chamado de Timnate-Sera.

TIMNATE-SERA. Cidade dada a Josué por herança na região montanhosa de Efraim. Ele pediu Timnate-Sera, e os filhos de Israel deram-na a ele "por ordem de Jeová". Josué edificou a cidade e foi mais tarde enterrado ali. (Jos 19:49, 50; 24:30) Juízes 2:9 reza "Timnate-Heres" em vez de "Timnate-Sera" tanto no texto massorético hebraico como na Septuaginta grega. Desconhece-se o motivo desta diferença de nomes.

Alguns identificam Timnate-Sera com Khirbet Tibnah, cerca de 30 km ao SO de Siquém. Situada na borda ocidental da região montanhosa, Khirbet Tibnah dá vista para a planície costeira. Hoje em dia, não se consegue localizar ao certo o monte Gaás, ao S de Timnate-Sera (Timnate-Heres). — Jos 24:30; Jz 2:9.

TIMNITA [De (Pertencente a) Timná]. Pessoa de Timná; na única ocorrência que há, o termo é aplicado ao sogro de Sansão. — Jz 15:6.

TIMÓTEO [Alguém Que Honra a Deus]. Filho duma judia, Eunice, e dum pai grego (cujo nome não é citado nas Escrituras). Enquanto ainda bem jovem, a mãe de Timóteo, e também provavelmente sua avó, Loide, ensinaram-lhe os "escritos sagrados". (At 16:1; 2Ti 1:5; 3:15) Não se sabe precisamente quando foi que Timóteo abraçou o cristianismo. No entanto, talvez no fim de 49 ou no início de 50 EC, quando o apóstolo Paulo chegou a Listra (pelo visto, o domicílio de Timóteo) durante sua segunda viagem missionária, diz-se o seguinte sobre o discípulo Timóteo (talvez já no fim da adolescência, ou com seus vinte e poucos anos): "Os irmãos em Listra e Icônio davam dele bom relato." — At 16:2.

Pode ser que nessa época, em resultado da operação do espírito de Deus, certas profecias ou predições tenham sido expressas a respeito de Timóteo. Depois de o espírito santo, desta forma, ter indicado o futuro de Timóteo, os anciãos da congregação juntaram-se ao apóstolo Paulo em pôr as mãos sobre Timóteo, colocando-o assim à parte para determinado serviço relacionado com a congregação cristã. (1Ti 1:18; 4:14; 2Ti 1:6; compare isso com At 13:3.) Paulo escolheu a Timóteo para companheiro de viagem e, para evitar fornecer aos judeus um motivo de tropeço, circuncidou-o. — At 16:3.

Viagens com Paulo. Junto com Paulo, Timóteo participou em atividades cristãs em Filipos, Tessalônica e Bereia. (At 16:11–17:10) Quando a oposição acirrada da parte de judeus fanáticos forçou Paulo a partir de Bereia, o apóstolo deixou Silas e Timóteo, a fim de cuidarem do novo grupo de crentes ali. (At 17:13-15) Parece que Paulo, depois disso, mandou uma mensagem a Bereia, aconselhando Timóteo a visitar os irmãos em Tessalônica, para encorajá-los a permanecer fiéis apesar de tribulação. (1Te 3:1-3; veja ATENAS [A Atividade de Paulo em Atenas].) Timóteo, pelo visto unindo-se de novo a Paulo em Corinto, trouxe boas novas sobre a fidelidade e o amor dos cristãos tessalonicenses. (At 18:5; 1Te 3:6) Na carta que Paulo enviou então aos tessalonicenses, ele incluiu os nomes de Silvano (Silas) e de Timóteo nas saudações, como fez também em sua segunda carta a eles. — 1Te 1:1; 2Te 1:1.

Durante a terceira viagem missionária de Paulo (c. 52-56 EC), Timóteo viajou novamente com o apóstolo. (Veja At 20:4.) Paulo, enquanto se achava em Éfeso (1Co 16:8), escreveu em sua primeira carta aos coríntios: "[Eu] vos envio Timóteo, visto que ele é meu filho amado e fiel no Senhor; e ele vos fará recordar os meus métodos em conexão com Cristo Jesus, assim como eu estou ensinando em toda a parte, em cada congregação." (1Co 4:17) Perto do fim de sua carta, porém, Paulo deu a entender que havia a possibilidade de que Timóteo não chegasse a Corinto: "Se Timóteo chegar, cuidai de que fique livre de temor entre vós, pois ele está realizando a obra de Jeová, assim como eu." (1Co 16:10) Se Timóteo realmente chegou a visitar Corinto, isto deve ter acontecido antes de ele e Erasto partirem de Éfeso para a Macedônia, visto que Timóteo e Paulo estavam juntos na Macedônia quando foi escrita a segunda carta aos coríntios (com base no relatório de Tito, e não de Timóteo). (At 19:22; 2Co 1:1; 2:13; 7:5-7) Talvez a tencionada visita de Timóteo não se tenha concretizado. Isto é sugerido pelo fato de que, em sua segunda carta aos coríntios, Paulo não menciona que Timóteo tivesse estado lá, exceto junto com ele próprio. (2Co 1:19) Mais tarde, na ocasião em que Paulo escreveu aos romanos, pelo visto quando em Corinto (o domicílio de Gaio), Timóteo estava com ele. — Veja Ro 16:21, 23; 1Co 1:14.

O nome de Timóteo acha-se incluído nas saudações das cartas que Paulo escreveu aos filipenses (1:1), aos colossenses (1:1) e a Filêmon (v 1) durante o primeiro encarceramento do apóstolo em Roma. Parece que o próprio Timóteo sofreu encarceramento em Roma, em alguma época entre a escrita da carta aos filipenses e a que foi enviada aos hebreus. — Fil 2:19; He 13:23.

Responsabilidades e Habilitações. Depois de Paulo ser libertado da prisão, Timóteo participou novamente no ministério com o apóstolo, permanecendo em Éfeso por ordem dele. (1Ti 1:1-3) Nesta época (c. 61-64 EC), Timóteo talvez já tivesse seus 30 e poucos anos, e dispunha de autoridade para nomear superintendentes e servos ministeriais na congregação. (1Ti 5:22) Era plenamente capaz de cuidar destas pesadas responsabilidades, tendo-se provado tal por trabalhar em íntima associação com o apóstolo Paulo durante 11 anos ou mais. A respeito dele, Paulo podia dizer: "Não tenho a nenhum outro de disposição igual à dele, que cuidará genuinamente das coisas referentes a vós. . . . Conheceis a prova que ele deu de si mesmo, que ele trabalhou como escravo comigo na promoção das boas novas, como um filho junto ao pai." (Fil 2:20-22) E a Timóteo ele escreveu: "Nunca deixo de me lembrar de ti nas minhas súplicas, noite e dia, tendo saudade de ti, ao me lembrar de tuas lágrimas, para que eu fique cheio de alegria. Pois eu me recordo da fé que há em ti sem qualquer hipocrisia." — 2Ti 1:3-5.

Embora tivesse de enfrentar constante enfermidade, devido a problemas estomacais (1Ti 5:23), Timóteo gastou-se de bom grado a favor de outros. Suas excelentes qualidades o tornaram querido pelo apóstolo Paulo, que desejava muitíssimo a companhia de Timóteo ao encarar a morte iminente. (2Ti 4:6-9) Sendo relativamente jovem, Timóteo talvez tenha sido tímido e hesitante em fazer valer a sua autoridade. (Veja 1Ti 4:11-14; 2Ti 1:6, 7; 2:1.) Isto mostra que Timóteo não era um homem orgulhoso, mas que reconhecia suas limitações.

TIMÓTEO, CARTAS A. Duas cartas inspiradas das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, que o apóstolo Paulo dirigiu a Timóteo, identificando-se logo nas palavras iniciais de cada carta como o escritor. (1Ti 1:1; 2Ti 1:1) A primeira carta foi evidentemente escrita na Macedônia. A base para se atribuir uma data aproximada à composição desta carta acha-se no capítulo 1, versículo 3, onde lemos: "Assim como te encorajei a ficar em Éfeso, quando eu estava para ir à Macedônia, assim faço agora." Não se faz menção alguma disto no livro de Atos, que abrange o período desde a época da ascensão de Jesus ao céu, em 33 EC, até o segundo ano da detenção de Paulo em Roma, por volta de 61 EC. Assim sendo, parece ter sido algum tempo depois de libertado que Paulo incentivou Timóteo a permanecer em Éfeso, e então, pelo visto, Paulo partiu para a Macedônia. Isto situaria a época da escrita de Primeira Timóteo entre a data da libertação do apóstolo de sua primeira prisão em Roma e seu encarceramento final ali, ou por volta de 61-64 EC. A segunda carta foi composta em Roma, durante a detenção final de Paulo (provavelmente c. 65 EC), e não muito antes de sua morte. — 2Ti 1:8, 17; 4:6-9.

Autenticidade. A autenticidade de Primeira e Segunda Timóteo acha-se bem confirmada. Todos os importantes catálogos antigos, começando pelo Fragmento Muratoriano do segundo século EC, alistam ambas as cartas como canônicas. Mais importante é que tais cartas estão em completa harmonia com o restante das Escrituras, e fazem citações delas. Citam ou fazem alusões a Números (16:5; 2Ti 2:19), Deuteronômio (19:15; 25:4; 1Ti 5:18, 19), Isaías (26:13; 2Ti 2:19), e às palavras de Jesus Cristo (Mt 10:10; Lu 10:7; 1Ti 5:18). Dignas de nota são as frequentes referências à fé (1Ti 1:2, 4, 5, 14, 19; 2:7, 15; 3:9, 13; 4:1, 6, 12; 5:8, 12; 6:10-12, 21; 2Ti 1:5, 13; 2:18, 22; 3:8, 10, 15; 4:7), bem como a ênfase à doutrina correta (1Ti 1:3, 4; 4:1-3, 6, 7; 6:3, 4, 20, 21; 2Ti 1:13; 3:14, 15; 4:3, 5), à conduta (1Ti 2:8-11, 15; 3:2-13; 4:12; 5:1-21; 6:1, 2, 11-14; 2Ti 2:22), à oração (1Ti 2:1, 2, 8; 4:5; 5:5; 2Ti 1:3) e à perseverança fiel sob sofrimentos (2Ti 1:8, 12; 2:3, 8-13).

Fundo Histórico de Primeira Timóteo. Por volta de 56 EC, quando se reuniu em Mileto com os anciãos da congregação de Éfeso, o apóstolo Paulo lhes disse: "Sei que depois de eu ter ido embora entrarão no meio de vós lobos opressivos e eles não tratarão o rebanho com ternura, e dentre vós mesmos surgirão homens e falarão coisas deturpadas, para atrair a si os discípulos." (At 20:29, 30) Em questão de alguns anos, a situação referente ao ensino de doutrinas falsas tornou-se tão grave, que Paulo incentivou Timóteo a permanecer em Éfeso, para que 'mandasse a certos que não ensinassem doutrina diferente, nem prestassem atenção a histórias falsas e a genealogias'. (1Ti 1:3, 4) Por conseguinte, Timóteo teve de travar um combate espiritual dentro da congregação cristã, para preservar a pureza dela, e ajudar seus membros a permanecer na fé. (1:18, 19) Aplicar ele as coisas mencionadas na carta do apóstolo serviria para proteger os membros da congregação de se desviarem.

Para que a congregação prosperasse, não se podia desperceber a oração. A fim de que os cristãos pudessem continuar levando uma vida calma

DESTAQUES DE PRIMEIRA TIMÓTEO

Conselho a um ancião cristão sobre suas responsabilidades.

Escrita pelo apóstolo Paulo, evidentemente algum tempo após ser libertado de sua primeira detenção em Roma.

Conselhos visando o bem-estar espiritual do próprio Timóteo.

Trave o combate espiritual, mantendo a fé e uma boa consciência. (1:18, 19)

Sua preocupação deve ser, não com o treinamento corporal, mas com a devoção piedosa; não permita que outros menosprezem sua mocidade, antes dê bom exemplo e faça progresso. (4:7b-16)

Não se precipite em designar alguém a um cargo, para evitar ser partícipe nos pecados de outros. (5:22)

Avisos contra influências corrompedoras na congregação.

Ordene a certos que não ensinem doutrinas diferentes, nem prestem atenção a histórias falsas e a genealogias. (1:3, 4)

Alguns se desviaram do amor e da fé sem hipocrisia; desejam ser instrutores da lei, mas carecem de entendimento sobre sua finalidade. (1:5-11)

Em tempos posteriores haverá um desvio da fé. (4:1-5)

Combata as influências erradas; nutra-se com palavras de fé; rejeita histórias falsas. (4:6, 7a)

Ensinamentos falsos produzem inveja, rixa, linguagem ultrajante, suspeitas, disputas violentas e o uso do que é piedoso para ganho egoísta. (6:3-5)

Fuja dos maus frutos resultantes do amor ao dinheiro; trave a luta excelente da fé e resista às doutrinas falsas. (6:11, 12, 20, 21)

Habilitações para os designados a servir como superintendentes e servos ministeriais.

As habilitações do superintendente incluem ser ele irrepreensível; ter uma só esposa; ser ajuizado, ordeiro, hospitaleiro, qualificado para ensinar, controlado no uso de bebidas e no temperamento, razoável; não amante do dinheiro; presidir bem sua família; não ser recém-convertido; e ter boa reputação fora da congregação. (3:1-7)

Os servos ministeriais devem ser sérios, não de língua dobre, não beber demais, não ser ávidos de ganho desonesto, ser primeiro testados quanto à aptidão, estar livres de acusação, presidir bem a família. (3:8-10, 12, 13)

Instruções sobre diversas necessidades da congregação.

Deve-se orar com respeito a toda sorte de homens — inclusive governantes, a fim de que os cristãos possam levar uma vida pacífica com devoção piedosa; é da vontade de Deus que toda sorte de homens sejam salvos. (2:1-4)

Há um só Deus e um só mediador, Jesus Cristo, de modo que os homens que oram devem erguer "mãos leais, sem furor e sem debates". (2:5-8)

As mulheres devem vestir-se de forma modesta e com decoro, refletindo reverência a Deus; não devem ensinar na congregação ou exercer autoridade sobre o homem. (2:9-15)

Somente viúvas com 60 anos ou mais, que gozem de boa reputação e que não tenham filhos nem netos vivos, devem ser incluídas na lista das que recebem ajuda material da congregação. (5:3-16)

Os anciãos que trabalham arduamente em falar e em ensinar devem ser considerados merecedores de "dupla honra". (5:17, 18)

Não aceite uma acusação contra um ancião, a menos que haja duas ou três testemunhas; os que praticam pecado devem ser repreendidos perante todos os espectadores. (5:19-21)

Os escravos devem ser exemplares na sujeição aos seus donos, especialmente se seus amos forem concrentes. (6:1, 2)

Todos devem estar contentes se tiverem o sustento e com que se cobrir; o amor ao dinheiro é raiz de coisas prejudiciais, e os decididos a ficar ricos sofrem danos espirituais. (6:6-10)

Os ricos não devem ser arrogantes, confiando nas riquezas; antes, devem estar prontos para partilhar generosamente com os necessitados. (6:17-19)

DESTAQUES DE SEGUNDA TIMÓTEO

Incentivo e conselhos para ajudar Timóteo a permanecer firme nos tempos difíceis à frente.

A última carta inspirada escrita por Paulo, durante sua segunda detenção em Roma.

Incentivo para Timóteo prosseguir fazendo progresso.

'Atice, como a um fogo, o dom de Deus' que você recebeu; não se envergonhe de dar testemunho sobre Cristo ou sobre Paulo, um prisioneiro; participe no sofrimento pelas boas novas. (1:6-8)

Guarde o modelo de palavras salutares. (1:13, 14)

Como soldado, tenha um objetivo em vista; como um atleta nos jogos, compita segundo as regras; seja como o lavrador, que trabalha arduamente; persevere fielmente. (2:3-13)

Faça o máximo para apresentar-se aprovado por Deus, manejando corretamente a palavra da verdade. (2:15)

Fuja dos desejos da mocidade, mas empenhe-se por qualidades piedosas na companhia daqueles que invocam o Senhor dum coração puro. (2:22)

Conselhos para ajudar Timóteo a permanecer firme contra falsos instrutores.

Evite discussões sobre palavras e conversas que violam o que é santo; com brandura, procure restabelecer os enlaçados pelo Diabo. (2:14, 16-26)

Nos últimos dias haverá tempos críticos, difíceis de manejar, devido às atitudes iníquas das pessoas; elas serão amantes do dinheiro e dos prazeres, em vez de amantes de Deus; afaste-se de tais pessoas. (3:1-7)

Estes homens corruptos continuarão resistindo à verdade; mas apegue-se àquilo que você aceitou como veraz, pois aprendeu de pessoas a quem conhecia bem e com base nas Escrituras inspiradas. (3:8-17)

Persevere em pregar a palavra, evangelizando, efetuando plenamente seu ministério — muito embora esteja chegando o tempo em que os homens não desejarão ouvir a doutrina salutar, mas preferirão que os instrutores de sua escolha lhes façam cócegas nos ouvidos. (4:1-5)

A situação de Paulo como prisioneiro.

Paulo foi nomeado apóstolo de Jesus Cristo; agora está sofrendo por isso, mas não se envergonha. (1:11, 12)

Como prisioneiro em cadeias, praticamente todos do distrito da Ásia o abandonaram, mas Onesíforo procurou-o diligentemente e lhe trouxe revigoramento. (1:15-18)

Reconhecendo a iminência de sua morte, Paulo aguarda confiantemente o dia em que Jesus Cristo concederá a coroa da justiça a ele e a todos os demais que amaram Sua manifestação. (4:6-8)

Ninguém se pôs do lado dele na primeira defesa; todavia, Paulo foi fortalecido pelo Senhor Jesus Cristo; está confiante de que o Senhor o salvará para Seu Reino celestial. (4:16-18)

e sossegada, sem interferências, era correto que orassem com respeito a reis e a homens em altas posições governamentais. A respeito dos que representavam a congregação em oração, Paulo escreveu: "Desejo . . . que em todo lugar os homens façam orações, erguendo mãos leais, sem furor e sem debates." Isto significava achegar-se a Deus de modo puro, sem quaisquer sentimentos de animosidade ou de ira para com outros. — 1Ti 2:1-8.

Timóteo também tinha de ficar alerta para que as mulheres mantivessem seu lugar designado por Deus (1Ti 2:9-15); para que apenas homens habilitados servissem como superintendentes e servos ministeriais, pois tais atuariam como forte baluarte contra a apostasia (3:1-13; 5:22); para que as viúvas merecedoras recebessem ajuda da congregação (5:3-16); para que se mostrasse a devida consideração aos anciãos que presidiam de maneira excelente (5:17-19); para que os escravos se portassem de modo correto para com seus amos (6:1, 2); para que todos ficassem contentes com aquilo que possuíam, em vez de procurarem ficar ricos (6:6-10); e para que os ricos não baseassem suas esperanças em coisas materiais, sendo, em vez disso, ricos em obras excelentes, e manifestando generosidade (6:17-19). O próprio Timóteo tinha de ser um "exemplo para os fiéis, no falar, na conduta, no amor, na fé, na castidade", e também tinha de preocupar-se em continuar a fazer progresso. — 4:12, 15, 16; 6:11-14.

Fundo Histórico de Segunda Timóteo. Em 64 EC, um grande incêndio grassou em Roma, destruindo cerca de um quarto da cidade. Surgiram rumores de que o César Nero era responsável por isso. Para proteger-se, Nero lançou a culpa nos cristãos. Isto parece ter suscitado uma onda de violenta perseguição governamental. Foi provavelmente por volta dessa época (c. 65 EC) que o apóstolo Paulo foi novamente preso em Roma. Embora muitos o abandonassem, e ele sofresse em cadeias e enfrentasse a morte iminente (2Ti 1:15, 16; 4:6-8), o apóstolo escreveu uma carta animadora a Timóteo, carta esta que preparava seu colaborador mais jovem para resistir aos elementos apóstatas de dentro da congregação, e para ficar firme diante de perseguição. (2:3-7, 14-26; 3:14–4:5) Por ficar sabendo das circunstâncias pelas quais Paulo passava, Timóteo teria meios de derivar encorajamento do bom exemplo de perseverança fiel do apóstolo sob grande tribulação. — 2:8-13.

Destemidamente, com a força que Jeová dá, Paulo exortou Timóteo: "Atices, como a um fogo, o dom de Deus que há em ti pela imposição das minhas mãos. Porque Deus não nos deu um espírito de covardia, mas de poder, e de amor, e de bom juízo. Portanto, não te envergonhes do testemunho a respeito de nosso Senhor, nem de mim, prisioneiro pela causa dele, mas participa em sofrer o mal pelas boas novas, segundo o poder de Deus." — 2Ti 1:6-8.

TINGIR. Veja CORANTES, TINGIR.

TINHA FAVOSA. Moléstia contagiosa da pele, caracterizada por manchas aneladas. Esta palavra ocorre na Tradução do Novo Mundo em Levítico 21:20 e 22:22, como tradução da hebraica yal·lé·feth. Causada por fungos, a tinha favosa ocorre em animais e no homem. Nos humanos, a tinha favosa pode atacar não só as partes pilosas do corpo, especialmente o couro cabeludo de crianças e a barba dos adultos, mas também as partes não pilosas. Esta última forma se desenvolve como mancha redonda, de cor rósea, geralmente apresentando pequeníssimas pústulas em sua borda. À medida que a mancha se amplia, o centro fica claro, dando à área atingida o seu usual aspecto anelado.

Embora yal·lé·feth tenha sido traduzido por outros termos que designam dermatoses, a tradição judaica liga-a com o herpes egípcio, ou líquen. Para yal·lé·feth, os tradutores da Septuaginta grega usaram lei·khén, que pode referir-se à tinha favosa. Assim, os hebraístas L. Koehler e W. Baumgartner sugerem "tinha, herpes". — Lexicon in Veteris Testamenti Libros (Léxico dos Livros do Velho Testamento), Leiden, 1958, p. 383.

Um homem de ascendência sacerdotal que fosse afligido por tinha favosa ficava desqualificado de apresentar ofertas a Jeová. (Le 21:20, 21) E os animais assim afligidos não deviam ser oferecidos em sacrifício a Deus. — Le 22:22.

TINTA. A palavra hebraica deyóh, só encontrada em Jeremias 36:18, é possivelmente uma palavra emprestada do egípcio. Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, mé·lan só ocorre três vezes (2Co 3:3; 2Jo 12; 3Jo 13), e é a forma neutra do adjetivo masculino mé·las, que significa "preto". — Mt 5:36; Re 6:5, 12.

Falando-se de modo geral, as tintas eram feitas de um pigmento ou matéria corante disperso num meio que continha goma, cola ou verniz, que atuava como agente transportador, ou veículo, e como aglutinante para fazer o pigmento aderir à superfície à qual fosse aplicado. As mais antigas fórmulas de tinta e os espécimes mais antigos encontrados indicam que o pigmento era um negro carbonáceo, quer em forma de fuligem amorfa, obtida da queima de óleo ou de madeira, ou dum carvão cristalino de origem animal ou vegetal. Os pigmentos de tintas vermelhas eram óxidos de ferro. Certas tinturas também eram empregadas pelos antigos. Josefo diz que o exemplar da Lei enviado a Ptolomeu Filadelfo foi escrito em letras douradas. (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], XII, 89 [ii, 11]) Se sumos ou tinturas vegetais foram alguma vez empregados em tintas, eles há muito desapareceram devido à sua natureza perecível.

Para a fabricação das melhores tintas, gastava-se muito tempo em moer e dispersar os pigmentos no veículo. As tintas eram, então, em geral, estocadas em forma de bolos ou barras secos, os quais o escriba umedecia o suficiente, quando aplicava a tinta ao pincel ou à cana.

As tintas chinesas usufruíram por muito tempo a reputação de terem a mais forte tonalidade e serem as mais duráveis. Documentos escritos com algumas destas tintas podem ficar imersos em água durante várias semanas sem que as tintas se apaguem. Por outro lado, algumas tintas também eram fabricadas para poderem ser apagadas por meio duma esponja molhada ou pano umedecido. Isto pode ter sido a base para a afirmação de Jeová, em sentido simbólico: "Extinguirei ["apagarei", PIB] do meu livro aquele que tiver pecado contra mim." — Êx 32:33; veja também Núm 5:23; Sal 109:13, 14.

TINTEIRO DE SECRETÁRIO. Em Ezequiel 9:2, 3, 11, o homem vestido de linho, responsável de marcar pessoas na testa, é descrito como tendo "um tinteiro de secretário sobre os quadris", estando este evidentemente preso à cintura por meio do cinto. Este tinteiro de secretário talvez fosse similar aos usados em certa época no antigo Egito. O 'estojo de escriba', egípcio, compunha-se dum longo e estreito estojo de madeira, e era dotado dum compartimento ou de aberturas para penas de cana. Do lado de fora, na parte superior, tinha ao menos uma reentrância para um pequeno bolo de tinta seca. O escriba preparava-se para escrever, aplicando a ponta umedecida da pena na tinta. Inscrições indicam que os escribas sírios utilizavam um 'estojo de escriba' similar.

TIO. O termo hebraico dohdh, às vezes traduzido "tio" ou "irmão do pai" (Le 10:4; 20:20; 25:49; Núm 36:11; 1Sa 10:14-16; 14:50; Est 2:7, 15; Je 32:7-9, 12; Am 6:10), possui uma aplicação muito mais ampla do que o vocábulo "tio" em português. Não se aplica somente a um parente, geralmente o irmão do pai, mas pode também indicar (no singular ou no plural) "amor" (Pr 7:18), expressões de carinho ou amor (Cân 1:2, 4; Ez 16:8; 23:17), e um ente querido ou alguém amado (Cân 1:14, 16; Is 5:1). Entretanto, o contexto ou outros textos relacionados muitas vezes estabelecem o parentesco designado pela palavra hebraica dohdh. Por exemplo, emprega-se dohdh para descrever o parentesco do Rei Joaquim com o Rei Zedequias. Uma vez que Zedequias era irmão de Jeoiaquim, pai de Joaquim, a palavra dohdh, neste caso, designa obviamente um tio, ou irmão do pai. (2Rs 24:6, 15, 17; 1Cr 3:15) Diferente parentesco é descrito em 1 Crônicas 27:32, onde se diz que o conselheiro Jonatã é dohdh de Davi. Segundo Samuel 21:21 e 1 Crônicas 20:7 indicam que Jonatã era filho de Simei, irmão de Davi. Assim sendo, a referência ao dohdh de Davi deve ser ao sobrinho de Davi, e não ao tio.

A forma feminina de dohdh é usada para a tia da pessoa. (Êx 6:20; Le 18:14; 20:20) O tio por parte de mãe é designado em hebraico pela expressão "irmão de sua mãe". — Gên 29:10; veja TIA.

"O filho da irmã de Paulo" revelou a Paulo, e depois ao comandante romano de Jerusalém, o plano que se havia tramado contra a vida do seu tio. — At 23:16-22.

TÍQUICO [duma raiz que significa "sorte; sucesso"]. Um dos auxiliares de Paulo, um "amado irmão, e fiel ministro, e coescravo no Senhor", originário do distrito da Ásia. (Col 4:7) Tíquico fazia parte do grupo de Paulo que retornava da Grécia, via Macedônia, para a Ásia Menor; mas não se declara se Tíquico foi até Jerusalém. (At 20:2-4) Tíquico é uma das várias pessoas que se sugere como sendo "o irmão" que, enquanto se achava na Grécia, ajudou Tito a providenciar a coleta em favor dos irmãos da Judeia. (2Co 8:18, 19; 12:18) Enquanto preso em Roma, Paulo enviou Tíquico com cartas para Éfeso e Colossos, prometendo que Tíquico lhes contaria mais sobre sua situação, e lhes seria de consolo; Onésimo é mencionado na carta aos colossenses como o acompanhando. (Ef 6:21, 22; Col 4:7-9) Depois de ser libertado da prisão, Paulo cogitou enviar Ártemas ou Tíquico para Creta. (Tit 3:12) Quando o apóstolo voltou a ser preso em Roma pela segunda vez, enviou Tíquico a Éfeso. — 2Ti 4:12.

TIRACA. Usualmente identificado com o Faraó Taarca, embora as datas geralmente atribuídas ao governo de Taarca pelos historiadores dos tempos modernos não se enquadrem na cronologia bíblica. (Para obter evidências a favor da cronologia bíblica, como superior à secular, veja CRONOLOGIA [Cronologia Bíblica e História Secular].) Durante o reinado de Ezequias, enquanto Senaqueribe, rei da Assíria, lutava contra Libna, chegaram notícias de que Tiraca, o rei etíope do Egito, estava a caminho para combater os assírios. (2Rs 19:8, 9; Is 37:8, 9) Uma inscrição assíria, embora não mencione Tiraca, indica que Senaqueribe derrotou as forças que subiram do Egito, e capturou "os condutores de carros do rei da Etiópia". O seguinte rei assírio, Esar-Hadom, jactou-se de ter conquistado o Egito, dizendo: "Ao rei deles, Tiraca, eu feri com cinco flechadas e governei sobre todo o país dele." No reinado de Assurbanipal, filho e sucessor de Esar-Hadom, Tiraca se revoltou contra a submissão à Assíria. Mas, de acordo com Assurbanipal, "o terror da arma (sagrada) de Assur, meu senhor, sobreveio a Tiraca, onde se havia refugiado, e nunca mais se ouviu falar dele". — Ancient Near Eastern Texts (Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo), editado por J. Pritchard, 1974, pp. 287, 288, 290, 295.

TIRANA. Filho de Calebe com Maacá, sua concubina; pertencente à tribo de Judá. — 1Cr 2:3, 48.

TIRANO [Governante Absoluto; Soberano]. Nome ligado ao auditório da escola efésia em que Paulo pregou durante dois anos depois de encontrar resistência na sinagoga judaica. — At 19:9, 10.

TIRAS. Um dos sete filhos de Jafé. (Gên 10:2; 1Cr 1:5) O povo que descendeu dos filhos de Jafé mais tarde 'se espalhou pelas suas terras, cada um segundo a sua língua'. — Gên 10:5.

De modo geral, os atuais peritos identificam Tiras com os tyr·se·noí dos escritores clássicos gregos, também chamados de tyr·rhe·noí. Os tyr·se·noí eram um povo navegante das ilhas e das regiões costeiras do mar Egeu.

TIRATITAS. Família queneia de escribas que moravam em Jabez. — 1Cr 2:55.

TIRIA. 'Filho' de Jealelel nas genealogias de Judá. — 1Cr 4:1, 16.

TÍRIO. Veja TIRO.

TIRO [Rocha]. O principal porto marítimo fenício; identificado com o atual Sur, situado cerca de 50 km ao N do monte Carmelo, e 35 km ao SSO de Sídon. (FOTO, Vol. 2, p. 531) Tiro era uma cidade antiga (Is 23:1, 7), mas não se sabe exatamente quando foi fundada como colônia pelos sidônios. É mencionada pela primeira vez após a conquista da Terra da Promessa, por volta de 1467 AEC, e, naquela época, era uma cidade fortificada. Esta menção de Tiro se relacionava com as fronteiras do território tribal de Aser. Desde o início, e no decorrer de toda a sua história, Tiro pelo visto permaneceu fora das fronteiras de Israel, como vizinho independente. — Jos 19:24, 29; 2Sa 24:7.

Houve, às vezes, relações amistosas entre Tiro e Israel, notadamente nos reinados de Davi e de Salomão. Artífices peritos, tírios, empenharam-se na construção do palácio real de Davi, utilizando o cedro enviado por Hirão, rei de Tiro. (2Sa 5:11; 1Cr 14:1) Os tírios também forneceram a Davi o cedro posteriormente utilizado na construção do templo. — 1Cr 22:1-4.

Após a morte de Davi, o Rei Hirão, de Tiro, forneceu a Salomão os materiais e a ajuda necessários para a construção do templo e de outros prédios governamentais. (1Rs 5:1-10; 7:1-8; 2Cr 2:3-14) Um meio-israelita, filho dum artífice tírio em cobre, ele mesmo um artífice perito, foi empregado na construção do templo. (1Rs 7:13, 14; 2Cr 2:13, 14) A ajuda dos tírios foi paga com trigo, cevada, azeite e vinho. (1Rs 5:11, 12; 2Cr 2:15) Além disso, Salomão deu 20 cidades ao rei de Tiro, embora o monarca de Tiro não ficasse muito contente com o presente. — 1Rs 9:10-13.

Com o tempo, Tiro tornou-se uma das grandes potências marítimas do mundo antigo, e seus marujos, bem como sua frota comercial de navios de "Társis", eram famosos por suas viagens a lugares distantes. Salomão e o rei de Tiro cooperaram num empreendimento naval conjunto para a importação de artigos preciosos, que incluíam o ouro de Ofir. — 1Rs 9:26-28; 10:11, 22; 2Cr 9:21.

Em todos os tratos que os tírios tiveram com Israel, não há indícios de que, como povo, estivessem interessados na adoração de Jeová; sua associação era especialmente comercial. Quanto à raça, eram cananeus, e, quanto à religião, praticavam uma forma de adoração de Baal, suas principais deidades sendo Melcart e Astarte (Astorete). Quando Etbaal era rei dos sidônios (incluindo Tiro), sua filha Jezabel casou-se com Acabe, rei do reino setentrional de Israel. Jezabel foi infame em sua determinação de eliminar a adoração de Jeová. — 1Rs 16:29, 31; 18:4, 13, 19.

Antiga didracma de prata com o nome Tiro.

Condenada por Deus. Todavia, não foi pela iniquidade pessoal de Jezabel e de sua filha, Atalia, que Tiro recebeu pesada condenação divina. Tiro prosperou muito à custa de outros povos, inclusive Israel. Fabricava objetos de metal, artigos de vidro e corantes de cor púrpura, sendo um centro comercial para as caravanas que seguiam via terrestre, bem como grande depósito de artigos de importação e exportação. Junto com este desenvolvimento industrial e comercial vieram riquezas, soberba e orgulho. Os mercadores e os comerciantes dela se jactavam de ser príncipes e pessoas honradas da terra. (Is 23:8) Com o tempo, Tiro também adotou uma atitude de oposição a Jeová, e conspirou com nações vizinhas contra o povo de Deus. (Sal 83:2-8) Assim, foi seu insolente desafio a Jeová que finalmente trouxe à cidade o julgamento adverso, a queda e a destruição.

Na parte final do nono século AEC, Jeová atentou para a atitude arrogante desta cidade. Por conseguinte, avisou-a de que seria paga na mesma moeda por ter roubado do povo Dele o ouro, a prata e muitas outras coisas desejáveis que utilizou para embelezar seus templos. Haveria de ocorrer também um ajuste de contas por Tiro ter vendido o povo de Deus à escravidão. — Jl 3:4-8; Am 1:9, 10.

Mais tarde, o profeta Isaías registrou um proferimento adicional contra Tiro, o qual indicava que ela seria esquecida por "setenta anos". (Is 23:1-18) Anos depois, o profeta Jeremias incluiu Tiro entre as nações selecionadas para beber o vinho do furor de Jeová. (Je 25:8-17, 22, 27; 27:2-7; 47:2-4) Uma vez que as nações mencionadas na profecia de Jeremias deviam "servir ao rei de Babilônia por setenta anos" (Je 25:8-11), isto sugere que tanto a profecia de Isaías como a de Jeremias se relacionavam com a campanha de Nabucodonosor contra Tiro.

Também por intermédio de Ezequiel, contemporâneo de Jeremias, Jeová indicou a calamidade que Tiro sofreria às mãos de Nabucodonosor. (Ez 26:1–28:19) Embora Tiro tivesse sido comparada a um lindo navio, com multicoloridas velas e coberturas de convés, e uma proa incrustada de marfim, naufragaria em mar aberto. (Ez 27:3-36) O 'rei' de Tiro (pelo visto a linhagem dos governantes tírios) se jactava orgulhosamente: "Sou deus. No assento de deus me assentei." Mas ele havia de ser removido como profano, e destruído pelo fogo. — Ez 28:2-19.

Destruição da Cidade. No decorrer do longo sítio que Nabucodonosor efetuou contra Tiro, as cabeças dos soldados dele ficaram 'calvas' devido à fricção dos capacetes, e os ombros deles ficaram 'esfolados' de tanto carregarem materiais usados na construção das obras de sítio. Uma vez que Nabucodonosor não recebeu nenhum "salário" por servir qual instrumento de Jeová na execução do julgamento contra Tiro, Jeová prometeu compensá-lo com a opulência do Egito. (Ez 29:17-20) Segundo o historiador judeu Josefo, o sítio durou 13 anos (Against Apion [Contra Apião], I, 156 [21]) e custou muito aos babilônios. A história secular não registra exatamente quão cabais ou eficazes foram os esforços de Nabucodonosor. Mas a perda de vidas e de propriedades dos tírios deve ter sido grande. — Ez 26:7-12.

Não obstante, quando os israelitas retornaram do exílio babilônico, os tírios os ajudaram por suprir madeiras de cedro do Líbano para a construção dum segundo templo, e reiniciaram seu comércio com a cidade reconstruída de Jerusalém. — Esd 3:7; Ne 13:16.

O conflito de Tiro com Nabucodonosor, embora grande, não havia de ser o fim completo de Tiro. Uma pronúncia profética posterior indicava que, embora Tiro construísse uma escarpa (ou antemuro) e amontoasse prata e ouro, o próprio Jeová a destruiria por completo. — Za 9:3, 4.

Quase 200 anos após a profecia de Zacarias, esta se cumpriu. Em 332 AEC, Alexandre, o Grande, atravessou a Ásia Menor com seu exército, e, em seu impetuoso avanço em direção ao S, pausou o bastante para dar atenção a Tiro. Quando a cidade se recusou a abrir as portas, Alexandre, enfurecido, fez com que seu exército ajuntasse os escombros da cidade continental e os lançasse no mar, construindo assim um aterro até a cidade-ilha, tudo isto em cumprimento da profecia. (Ez 26:4, 12; DIAGRAMA, Vol. 2, p. 531) Alexandre, usando suas forças navais para encurralar os navios de Tiro no porto, passou a construir as torres de sítio mais elevadas já usadas nas guerras antigas. Por fim, após sete meses, abriram-se brechas nas muralhas de 46 m de altura. Além dos 8.000 militares mortos em combate, 2.000 líderes destacados foram mortos em represália, e 30.000 habitantes foram vendidos como escravos.

Mencionada nas Escrituras Gregas. Apesar da destruição total da cidade por Alexandre, ela foi reconstruída durante o período dos selêucidas, e, no primeiro século EC, era um importante porto de escala no Mediterrâneo. Durante o grande ministério de Jesus na Galileia, muitas pessoas das proximidades de Tiro e de Sídon vieram para ouvir a mensagem dele e ser curadas de suas doenças. (Mr 3:8-10; Lu 6:17-19) Alguns meses depois, Jesus visitou em pessoa a região nos arredores de Tiro, ocasião em que curou a filhinha possessa de demônio duma senhora siro-fenícia. (Mt 15:21-29; Mr 7:24-31) Jesus comentou que, caso tivesse realizado em Tiro e Sídon as obras poderosas que realizou em Corazim e Betsaida, os pagãos de Tiro e Sídon teriam sido mais receptivos do que aqueles judeus. — Mt 11:20-22; Lu 10:13, 14.

TIRSATA. Título persa do governador dum distrito jurisdicional. Nas cinco vezes em que é empregado, acha-se precedido do artigo definido hebraico ha, tornando-se em português "o Tirsata".

As autoridades mencionadas na Bíblia com o título de "Tirsata" governavam sobre Judá, uma das províncias persas. Zorobabel, evidentemente, era o Tirsata mencionado em Esdras 2:63 e Neemias 7:65, 70. Mais tarde, quando Neemias se tornou governador, ele era o Tirsata, e é mencionado como tal em Neemias 8:9 e 10:1.

TIRZA [duma raiz que significa "agradar-se; aprovar"].

1. Uma das cinco filhas de Zelofeade, o manassita; contemporânea de Moisés e Josué. — Núm 26:29, 33; 27:1-7; 36:11, 12; Jos 17:3, 4.

2. Cidade em Samaria. As evidências arqueológicas parecem favorecer sua identificação com Tell el-Farʽah, uns 10 km ao NNE de Siquém.

Sob o comando de Josué, os israelitas derrotaram o rei de Tirza. (Jos 12:7, 24) Séculos depois, Jeroboão, o primeiro rei do reino setentrional, transferiu sua residência para Tirza. (Veja 1Rs 12:25; 14:17.) Tirza, evidentemente, continuou sendo a capital do reino setentrional durante os reinados de Nadabe, filho de Jeroboão (1Rs 15:25-28), e de seus sucessores, Baasa, Elá e Zinri. (1Rs 15:33; 16:5, 6, 8, 15) O último destes reis, Zinri, suicidou-se em Tirza, quando Onri capturou a cidade. (1Rs 16:17-20) Depois de reinar em Tirza por seis anos, Onri construiu Samaria e fez daquela cidade a sua capital. (1Rs 16:23, 24, 29) Mais de 150 anos depois, Menaém, morador de Tirza, matou Salum e se tornou rei em Samaria. — 2Rs 15:14, 17.

TISBITA. Evidentemente, habitante de Tisbé, pelo visto uma aldeia ao L do Jordão, na terra de Gileade. O termo "tisbita" é aplicado a Elias em todas as seis ocorrências. — 1Rs 17:1; 21:17, 28; 2Rs 1:3, 8; 9:36.

TISRI. Veja ETANIM.

TITO. Cristão grego que labutou junto com o apóstolo Paulo. Na época em que surgiu a questão da circuncisão em Antioquia (c. 49 EC), parece que Tito acompanhou Paulo e Barnabé a Jerusalém. (At 15:1, 2; Gál 2:1-3) Por volta de 55 EC, Tito ministrava altruistamente à congregação coríntia, tendo sido enviado a Corinto pelo apóstolo Paulo, a fim de ajudar na coleta feita em favor dos irmãos necessitados na Judeia, e talvez também para observar a reação da congregação à primeira carta que Paulo lhes enviara. (2Co 2:13; 8:1-6; 12:17, 18) Quando Tito se encontrou, depois disso, com o apóstolo na Macedônia, pôde fornecer-lhe um bom relato a respeito da congregação coríntia, relato este que proporcionou consolo e alegria a Paulo. O próprio Tito viera a ter grande afeição pelos cristãos coríntios por causa da obediência deles, e porque a atitude elogiável deles se revelara uma fonte de encorajamento e alegria para ele. — 2Co 7:6, 7, 13-15.

Uma vez que Tito havia iniciado os assuntos relacionados com a contribuição, Paulo desejou que ele concluísse essa tarefa e recomendou Tito à congregação coríntia como "parceiro meu e colaborador nos vossos interesses". Estando sinceramente interessado no bem-estar dos coríntios, e incentivado pelo apóstolo a fazê-lo, Tito partiu de bom grado para Corinto. — 2Co 8:6, 16, 17, 23.

Depois de Paulo ser solto de sua primeira detenção em Roma, Tito e Timóteo, pelo que parece, trabalharam com ele no ministério. Enquanto em Creta (evidentemente em algum tempo entre 61 e 64 EC), Paulo deixou Tito ali para 'corrigir as coisas defeituosas e fazer designações de anciãos numa cidade após outra'. (Tit 1:4, 5) Tratava-se, pelo visto, duma designação temporária, pois Paulo solicitou a Tito que fizesse o máximo para juntar-se a ele em Nicópolis. — Tit 3:12.

Em algum tempo durante o segundo encarceramento de Paulo em Roma (c. 65 EC), Tito, provavelmente por orientação do apóstolo, ou com a aprovação dele, partiu para a Dalmácia. — 2Ti 4:10; veja DALMÁCIA.

TITO, CARTA A. Carta escrita pelo apóstolo Paulo a Tito, colaborador que Paulo havia deixado em Creta para 'corrigir as coisas defeituosas e fazer designações de anciãos' nas várias congregações ali. (Tit 1:1, 4, 5) Todos os antigos catálogos notáveis das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, começando com o Fragmento Muratoriano do segundo século EC, atestam a autenticidade da carta.

Época e Lugar da Escrita. Visto que não há nenhum registro de que Paulo se tenha empenhado em atividades cristãs na ilha de Creta antes de seu primeiro encarceramento em Roma, ele deve

DESTAQUES DE TITO

Conselhos a um ancião sobre como lidar com as situações numa designação muitíssimo difícil.

Carta escrita pelo apóstolo Paulo, evidentemente após seu primeiro encarceramento em Roma.

Designação de superintendentes e como lidar com sérios problemas.

- Tito é comissionado a corrigir as coisas defeituosas e a designar superintendentes nas diversas cidades de Creta. (1:5)
- O homem designado superintendente deve estar livre de acusação, deve ser exemplar tanto pessoalmente como em sua vida familiar, hospitaleiro, equilibrado, dominando a si mesmo; precisa representar corretamente a verdade em seu ensino, sendo assim capaz de exortar e repreender aqueles que contradizem. (1:6-9)
- Homens indisciplinados nas congregações têm de ser silenciados, especialmente os adeptos da circuncisão, que subverteram famílias inteiras; devem ser repreendidos com severidade para que todos sejam sãos na fé. (1:10-16)
- Questões tolas, genealogias e conflitos sobre a Lei devem ser evitados; alguém que promova uma seita deve ser rejeitado depois de ter sido admoestado pela segunda vez. (3:9-11)

Conselho salutar para todo tipo de cristão.

- Os homens idosos são incentivados a ser exemplos de moderação, seriedade, juízo, fé, amor e perseverança. (2:1, 2)
- As mulheres idosas são igualmente exortadas a ser exemplares; devem ser instrutoras do que é bom, para que possam ajudar as mulheres mais jovens a encarar corretamente suas responsabilidades como esposas e mães, a fim de não trazerem vitupério sobre a palavra de Deus. (2:3-5)
- Os homens mais jovens são exortados a serem ajuizados. (2:6-8)
- Os escravos devem estar sujeitos aos seus donos, para que adornem o ensino de Deus. (2:9, 10)
- A benignidade imerecida de Deus deve motivar os cristãos a repudiar a impiedade e a viver com bom juízo neste sistema de coisas, enquanto aguardam pacientemente a gloriosa manifestação de Deus e de Jesus Cristo. (2:11-15)
- Devem mostrar a devida sujeição a governantes, evitar ser beligerantes e cultivar a razoabilidade e a brandura. (3:1, 2)
- Paulo e seus concristãos haviam, outrora, procedido em maldade também; mas, por intermédio da benignidade imerecida de Deus, foram salvos e têm agora a esperança segura da vida eterna; esses fatos devem ser constantemente enfatizados, a fim de incentivar os crentes a concentrar a mente em obras excelentes. (3:3-8)

ter estado ali, junto com Tito, algum tempo entre sua soltura e seu encarceramento final. Assim, a época da composição da carta se situaria entre cerca de 61 e 64 EC. A Macedônia pode ter sido o lugar do qual se enviou a carta; foi aparentemente ali, no mesmo período geral, que Paulo escreveu Primeira Timóteo. — 1Ti 1:3.

O Objetivo da Carta. A carta evidentemente devia servir como guia para Tito, e lhe dava apoio apostólico para o desempenho de seus deveres relacionados com as congregações cretenses. Sua designação não era nada fácil, pois tinha de lidar com pessoas rebeldes. Como Paulo escreveu: "Há muitos indisciplinados, conversadores improfícuos e enganadores da mente, especialmente os homens que aderem à circuncisão. É preciso fechar a boca de tais, visto que estes mesmos persistem em subverter famílias inteiras por ensinarem coisas que não deviam, por causa de ganho desonesto." (Tit 1:10, 11) Também, entre os cretenses, eram comuns a mentira, a glutonaria e a preguiça, e, pelo visto, alguns dos cristãos refletiam essas características ruins. Por esse motivo, Tito tinha de repreendê-los com severidade e mostrar-lhes o que se exigia dos cristãos, quer jovens, quer idosos, varões ou mulheres, escravos ou livres. Pessoalmente, tinha de ser exemplo de obras excelentes e mostrar incorruptibilidade no ensino. — 1:12–3:2.

TIZITA. Apelido de Joa, guerreiro de Davi. (1Cr 11:26, 45) O nome deriva provavelmente dum lugar atualmente desconhecido.

TOÁ. Levita coatita, ancestral do profeta Samuel e de Hemã, o cantor. (1Cr 6:33, 34, 38) Ele é provavelmente chamado de Naate em 1 Crônicas 6:26 e de Toú em 1 Samuel 1:1.

TOBE. "Terra" para a qual Jefté fugiu de seus meios-irmãos. Em Tobe ele reuniu uma força de homens antes de seus meios-irmãos lhe pedirem para ser seu comandante na luta contra os amonitas. (Jz 11:3-11) Há possivelmente outra referência bíblica a Tobe, caso o nome Istobe deva ser traduzido "homens de Tobe", em 2 Samuel 10:6-8. (Veja ALA, BJ, IBB, NM n.) Não se conhece a localização definitiva de Tobe. Entretanto, é muitas vezes identificada com a região em torno de Taiyiba, uns 60 km ao ESE do mar da Galileia.

TOBE-ADONIAS [Bom É o Senhor Jah]. Um dos levitas a quem Jeosafá, no terceiro ano de seu reinado, enviou para ensinar a lei de Jeová nas cidades de Judá. (2Cr 17:7-9) A referência feita a Adonias e a Tobijá no mesmo versículo leva alguns peritos a crer que este nome seja uma ditografia de copista, isto é, uma inadvertida repetição.

TOBIAS [Bom É Jah].

1. Antepassado de alguns exilados que retornaram, que não puderam confirmar sua genealogia israelita. — Esd 2:1, 59, 60; Ne 7:61, 62.

2. Oponente de Neemias. Tobias era "o servo", provavelmente alguma autoridade sob o rei persa. (Ne 2:19) Tanto ele como seu filho, Jeoanã, casaram-se com mulheres judias, e Tobias também era parente do sumo sacerdote Eliasibe. Isto colocava Tobias numa posição vantajosa para minar a autoridade de Neemias, visto que muitos judeus admiravam Tobias e falavam bem dele. — Ne 6:17-19; 13:4.

Quando Neemias chegou a Jerusalém, Tobias e seus associados ficaram desgostosos com as boas perspectivas de Israel. (Ne 2:9, 10) De início, eles simplesmente zombaram e caçoaram dos judeus (Ne 2:19; 4:3), mas, quando a reconstrução das muralhas fez progresso, ficaram muito irados. Entretanto, as várias conspirações — de matar os judeus (Ne 4:7-9, 11, 14, 15), e uma tentativa de fazer com que Neemias violasse a santidade do templo (Ne 6:1, 10-13) — fracassaram todas. Mesmo depois de as muralhas ficarem prontas, Tobias, mediante correspondência com seus simpatizantes em Jerusalém, tentou intimidar Neemias. (Ne 6:16-19) Neemias, por conseguinte, pediu corretamente a Jeová que se lembrasse dos muitos atos iníquos de Tobias e de seus confederados. (Ne 6:14) Na segunda vez em que Neemias veio de Babilônia, quando encontrou um refeitório no pátio do templo reservado para Tobias, prontamente lançou fora as coisas de Tobias. — Ne 13:4-9. Veja também TOBIJÁ.

TOBIJÁ [Bom É Jeová].

1. Um dos levitas que Jeosafá despachou para ensinar a lei de Jeová nas cidades de Judá em 934 AEC. — 2Cr 17:7-9.

2. Um dos judeus que retornaram do exílio, de quem se tirou ouro e prata para se fazer uma coroa para o sumo sacerdote Jesua. — Za 6:10, 11, 14.

TOCAIA. Veja EMBOSCADA.

TOCHA. Luz geralmente transportada na mão e que consistia, com frequência, quer dum archote aceso, de madeira resinosa, quer dum facho envolto em material absorvente, embebido em óleo e incendiado. — Gên 15:17; Jz 7:16, 20; 15:4; Is 62:1; Ez 1:13; Da 10:6; Na 2:4; Jo 18:3.

TODO-PODEROSO. A palavra "Todo-Poderoso" é traduzida da palavra hebraica Shad·daí e da palavra grega Pan·to·krá·tor. Ambas as palavras transmitem, evidentemente, a ideia de força ou poder.

O Termo Hebraico. No texto hebraico, Shad·daí é empregado sete vezes junto com 'El (Deus), formando o título "Deus Todo-Poderoso". (Gên 17:1; 28:3; 35:11; 43:14; 48:3; Êx 6:3; Ez 10:5) Nas demais 41 ocorrências, aparece sem 'El e é traduzido "o Todo-Poderoso". Similar a 'Adho·nai (Soberano Senhor) e 'Elo·hím (Deus), Shad·daí está no plural para denotar excelência. — Gên 49:25; Núm 24:4; Sal 68:14.

A derivação exata da palavra Shad·daí é um assunto debatido. Os tradutores da Septuaginta empregaram várias palavras gregas ao traduzi-la, mas, no livro de Jó, eles realmente empregaram a palavra Pan·to·krá·tor (Todo-Poderoso) 16 vezes ao traduzir Shad·daí. Em alguns casos, eles a traduziram por um termo grego (hi·ka·nós) que significa "suficiente" ou "idôneo" (Ru 1:20, 21; Jó 21:15; 31:2; 40:2), e posteriores tradutores gregos, tais como Áquila e Símaco, seguiram esta interpretação, apresentando assim Shad·daí como "O Suficiente (Idôneo)".

O conceito de alguns críticos atuais é expresso no comentário de Gênesis 17:1, na tradução católica conhecida como A Bíblia de Jerusalém (nota de rodapé o), que declara: "A tradução comum 'Deus Todo-Poderoso', é inexata. O sentido é incerto; propôs-se 'Deus da montanha'." Todavia, tal conceito extremista baseia-se numa imaginária ligação de Shad·daí com o termo acadiano shadu (montanha). O Unger's Bible Dictionary (Dicionário Bíblico de Unger, 1965, p. 1000) comenta: "Este conceito, porém, é inaceitável, e Sadai é melhor tomado da raiz shadad [sha·dhádh], 'ser forte ou poderoso', como em árabe." — Veja também The Analytical Hebrew and Chaldee Lexicon (Léxico Analítico Hebraico e Caldeu), de Benjamin Davidson, p. 702.

Sha·dhádh, no texto bíblico, comumente sugere poder violento, conforme usado numa assolação. (Veja Sal 17:9; Pr 11:3.) Isaías 13:6 declara: "Uivai, porque está próximo o dia de Jeová! Chegará como assolação [keshódh] da parte do Todo-Poderoso [mish·Shad·daí]." Ao passo que a ideia de ação violenta é básica no uso bíblico deste radical, certos eruditos sugerem que seu sentido original ou significado primário era simplesmente "ser forte" ou "agir fortemente". The Jewish Encyclopedia (A Enciclopédia Judaica, 1976, Vol. IX, p. 162) declara: "É possível, porém, que o significado original fosse o de 'predominância' ou 'força sobrepujante', e que este significado persistisse no [título] divino."

Jeová usou este título "Deus Todo-Poderoso" ('El Shad·daí) ao fazer sua promessa a Abraão a respeito do nascimento de Isaque, promessa que exigiu de Abraão muita fé no poder de Deus de cumprir sua promessa. Foi dali em diante usado quando se mencionava a Deus como aquele que abençoaria Isaque e Jacó como herdeiros do pacto abraâmico. — Gên 17:1; 28:3; 35:11; 48:3.

Em harmonia com isso, Jeová podia dizer mais tarde a Moisés: "Eu costumava aparecer a Abraão, a Isaque e a Jacó como Deus Todo-Poderoso [be'Él Shad·daí], mas com respeito ao meu nome Jeová não me dei a conhecer a eles." (Êx 6:3) Isto não podia significar que estes patriarcas desconheciam o nome Jeová, visto que eles e outros antes deles o usavam com frequência. (Gên 4:1, 26; 14:22; 27:27; 28:16) De fato, no livro de Gênesis, que relata a vida dos patriarcas, a palavra "Todo-Poderoso" ocorre apenas 6 vezes, ao passo que o nome pessoal Jeová foi escrito 172 vezes no texto hebraico original. Contudo, embora estes patriarcas viessem a reconhecer por experiência pessoal o direito e as qualificações de Deus para o título de "o Todo-Poderoso", não haviam tido a oportunidade de reconhecer o pleno significado do seu nome pessoal, Jeová, e o que este envolve. Neste respeito, O Novo Dicionário da Biblia (Vol. 1, p. 411) comenta: "A revelação anterior, aos patriarcas, dizia respeito às promessas referentes a um futuro distante e por isso mesmo haveria a necessidade de assegurá-los que Ele, Yahweh, era um Deus ('el) tal que era competente (shadday) para cumprir tais promessas. A revelação na sarça ardente, entretanto, foi maior e mais íntima, pois o poder e a presença imediata e contínua de Deus entre eles foram envolvidos no nome familiar de Yahweh." — Editado por J. D. Douglas, 1966.

Potência sugere força ou poder para realizar e cumprir algo intencionado, bem como vencer obstáculos ou oposição, e a onipotência de Jeová manifesta seu poder irresistível para realizar seu propósito. Às vezes apresenta-se ação violenta com relação ao título de Deus de "o Todo-Poderoso", como no Salmo 68:14, quando ele 'dispersa os reis'; em Joel 1:15, que descreve a "assolação [shodh] da parte do Todo-Poderoso [mi·Shad·daí]" que sobrevirá no "dia de Jeová"; e em Isaías 13:6, já citado. Assegura também sua capacidade de abençoar (Gên 49:25) e constitui garantia de segurança para os que confiam nele: "Quem morar no lugar secreto do Altíssimo procurará para si pouso sob a própria sombra do Todo-Poderoso." — Sal 91:1.

No livro de Jó, o termo Shad·daí ocorre 31 vezes, sendo usado por todos os personagens do drama ali apresentado. Destaca-se o poder de Jeová de punir ou afligir (Jó 6:4; 27:13-23), de modo que aqueles que dizem: “Que é o Todo-Poderoso, para que o sirvamos, e que nos aproveita termos entrado em contato com ele?”, e que, portanto, confiam em seu próprio poder, podem esperar beber “do furor do Todo-Poderoso”. (Jó 21:15, 16, 20) Portanto, o Todo-Poderoso merece reverência, até mesmo pavor, visto que não se pode desconsiderar sua vontade, nem se pode violar impunemente sua lei (Jó 6:14; 23:15, 16; 31:1-3), apesar de não se ver imediatamente a expressão de sua potência. (Jó 24:1-3, 24; compare isso com Êx 9:14-16; Ec 8:11-13.) Todavia, seu poder e sua potência são sempre usados em estrita harmonia com a justiça e o juízo, nunca de forma descontrolada, arbitrária, errática, ou irresponsável. (Jó 34:10, 12; 35:13; 37:23, 24) Portanto, não há motivo justo para os homens contenderem com ele ou acharem falta nele. (Jó 40:2-5) Os que praticam a justiça podem chegar-se a ele com plena confiança e usufruir uma relação pessoal com ele. (Jó 13:3; 29:4, 5; 31:35-37) Sendo o Criador, ele é a Fonte de vida e de sabedoria. — Jó 32:8; 33:4.

Na profecia de Isaías 9:6, a respeito do Messias, o título “Deus Poderoso” é aplicado ao prometido Príncipe da Paz. Esta expressão, porém, traduz o hebraico ’El Gib·bóhr, não ’El Shad·dai, como nos textos acima.

O Termo Grego. Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, a palavra Pan·to·krá·tor ocorre dez vezes, nove delas no livro de Revelação (Apocalipse). A palavra significa basicamente “Todo-Poderoso”, ou “Onipotente”. Seu uso nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs dá peso ao entendimento do termo hebraico Shad·dai como significando “o Todo-Poderoso”, visto que de outro modo não haveria termo correspondente a Pan·to·krá·tor nas Escrituras Hebraicas.

Em 2 Coríntios 6:18, Paulo cita as Escrituras Hebraicas ao exortar os cristãos a evitarem a adoração falsa e o uso de ídolos inanimados e impotentes, habilitando-se assim quais filhos do “Todo-Poderoso [Pan·to·krá·tor]”. Em vista das citações do apóstolo, é evidente que o título aqui aplica-se a Jeová Deus.

De modo similar, em todo o livro de Revelação o título Pan·to·krá·tor é aplicado ao Criador e Rei da Eternidade, Jeová, como no “cântico de Moisés, o escravo de Deus, e o cântico do Cordeiro [Jesus Cristo]”, que aclama a Jeová Deus como aquele que é digno de adoração e de temor por parte de todas as nações. (Re 15:3; compare isso com Re 21:22.) A aplicação do título a Jeová Deus torna-se óbvia em Revelação 19:6, com o uso da expressão Aleluia (Louvai a Jah!). Do mesmo modo, a expressão “Aquele que é, e que era, e que vem” (Re 1:8; 4:8) aponta claramente para o Deus da eternidade (Sal 90:2), que não só “era” o Todo-Poderoso nos tempos antigos, mas continua a sê-lo, e “que vem” como tal com a expressão de sua onipotência. Novamente indica-se ação violenta depois de ele ‘assumir o seu grande poder’ para governar como rei, pela expressão de seu furor contra as nações opositoras na “guerra do grande dia de Deus, o Todo-Poderoso”. (Re 11:17, 18; 16:14) Seu Filho, Cristo Jesus, “A Palavra de Deus”, é revelado como expressando este “furor de Deus, o Todo-Poderoso”, contra as nações na posição que ocupa como rei ungido por Deus. (Re 19:13-16) Contudo, tais potentes expressões das decisões judiciais de Deus continuam estando em plena harmonia com suas normas de verdade e justiça. — Re 16:5-7; veja DEUS.

TOFEL. Local mencionado junto com outros como ponto de referência para localizar o lugar onde Moisés falou aos israelitas pouco antes de sua morte. — De 1:1.

TOFETE. Lugar fora de Jerusalém onde israelitas apóstatas, inclusive Acaz e Manassés, realizavam sacrifícios de crianças. Por fim, o Rei Josias tornou-o impróprio para adoração. (2Rs 23:10; 2Cr 28:3; 33:6; Je 7:31-33; 19:3-14; 32:35) Tofete provavelmente ocupava um trecho da parte leste do vale de Hinom, perto do Portão dos Cacos (Portão dos Montes de Cinzas). — Je 19:2, 6, 14; veja HINOM, VALE DE.

Falando sobre 2 Reis 23:10, o comentarista judeu David Kimhi (1160?-1235?) diz o seguinte como possível explicação sobre Tofete: “Nome do lugar em que eles faziam seus filhos passar pelo [fogo] para Moloque. O nome do lugar era Tofete, e diziam que era chamado assim porque eles dançavam e tocavam pandeiros [hebr.: tup·pím] por ocasião da adoração, para que o pai não escutasse os gritos do filho quando o estivessem fazendo passar pelo fogo, e para que seu coração não ficasse agitado e ele o tirasse da mão deles. E esse lugar era um vale que pertencia a um homem chamado Hinom, de modo que era chamado de ‘Vale de Hinom’ e de ‘Vale do Filho de Hinom’. . . . E Josias conspurcou aquele lugar, reduzindo-o a um lugar impuro, para nele se lançarem carcaças e toda impureza, a fim de que nunca mais subisse ao coração do homem fazer seu filho ou sua filha passar pelo fogo para Moloque.” — Biblia Rabbinica (Bíblia Rabínica), Jerusalém, 1972.

Em Isaías 30:32, 33, declara-se que a punição que Jeová dará à Assíria “certamente mostrará ser com pandeiros [hebr.: bethup·pím] e com harpas. . . . Pois o seu Tofete está posto em ordem desde tempos recentes. . . . Há fogo e lenha em abundância. O sopro de Jeová arde contra ele como uma torrente de enxofre.” Neste caso, Tofete é mencionado figurativamente como local em que se faz queimas com fogo, para representar a destruição que havia de sobrevir à Assíria.

TOGARMA.

1. Filho de Gômer, que era filho de Jafé; portanto, bisneto de Noé. — Gên 10:1-3; 1Cr 1:4-6.

2. Descendentes de Togarma, filho de Gômer, e a região que ocupavam. Na endecha de Ezequiel, concernente a Tiro, menciona-se Togarma como fonte de "cavalos, e corcéis, e mulos", pelos quais Tiro trocava determinadas mercadorias. (Ez 27:2, 14) O mesmo profeta alista Togarma entre os aliados de Gogue de Magogue e o situa entre os povos "das partes mais remotas do norte". — Ez 38:6.

Muitos comentaristas relacionam Togarma com os armênios. Os próprios armênios tradicionalmente afirmam ser descendentes de "Haik, filho de Thorgom". Antigos escritores gregos falam dos armênios como um povo famoso por seus cavalos e mulos.

TOI, TOÚ. Rei de Hamate. Ao ficar sabendo que Davi havia derrotado o inimigo que tinham em comum, isto é, Hadadezer, rei de Zobá, Toi imediatamente enviou seu filho com congratulações e presentes. Davi santificou os presentes junto com o despojo da batalha. — 2Sa 8:9-12; 1Cr 18:9-11.

TOLA [Pano Carmesim (Escarlate)].

1. Primeiro filho alistado de Issacar, que acompanhou a casa de Jacó na mudança para o Egito, em 1728 AEC. (Gên 46:8, 13) Os filhos e alguns netos de Tola fundaram populosas famílias tribais em Issacar, coletivamente conhecidas como tolaítas. — Núm 26:23; 1Cr 7:1-4.

2. Juiz de Israel; filho de Puá. Tola era descendente de Issacar, mas vivia na região montanhosa de Efraim, onde posteriormente foi sepultado. Não se registram experiências de sua judicatura de 23 anos. — Jz 10:1, 2.

TOLADE. Trata-se, pelo visto, do nome alternativo da cidade simeonita de Eltolade. — 1Cr 4:24, 29, 31; Jos 15:30; 19:1, 4; veja ELTOLADE.

TOLAÍTAS [De (Pertencentes a) Tola]. Família da tribo de Issacar, fundada por Tola. — Núm 26:23; veja TOLA N.º 1.

TOLO. Em vez de referir-se a alguém que carece de capacidade mental, a palavra "tolo", conforme usada na Bíblia, em geral alude à pessoa que despreza a razão e cujo proceder é moralmente insensato, em desacordo com as normas justas de Deus. Há vários termos hebraicos para referir-se a uma pessoa assim: kesíl ('estúpido'; Pr 1:22), 'ewíl ("tolo"; Pr 12:15), na·vál ("insensato"; Pr 17:7), e lets ("zombador"; Pr 13:1). Em grego, á·fron refere-se ao "desarrazoado" (Lu 12:20), a·nó·e·tos ao 'insensato' (Gál 3:1), e mo·rós ao 'tolo' (Mt 23:17; 25:2).

O proceder de Nabal ilustra como o tolo age (1Sa 25), e o mesmo acontece no caso de pessoas que conhecem o verdadeiro Deus e ainda assim adoram coisas criadas. (Ro 1:20-25) Isaías disse que o tolo, ou a pessoa insensata, fala 'mera insensatez e o próprio coração dele faz o que é prejudicial, para praticar a apostasia e para falar contra Jeová aquilo que é desordenado, para fazer a alma do faminto ficar vazia, e ele faz até mesmo o sedento passar sem a própria bebida'. (Is 32:6) O tolo despreza a sabedoria e a disciplina. (Pr 1:7) Em vez de acatar conselhos, o tolo continua a andar no caminho que considera "direito aos seus próprios olhos". (Pr 12:15) Ofende-se facilmente e estoura em disputas. (Ec 7:9; Pr 20:3) Diz no coração (suas ações indicam o que seus lábios talvez não digam com tantas palavras): "Não há Jeová." — Sal 14:1.

Jesus Cristo chamou os escribas e os fariseus corretamente de "tolos e cegos", isto é, pessoas sem sabedoria e moralmente imprestáveis, pois haviam distorcido a verdade com tradições humanas e se tornado hipócritas. Ademais, Jesus respaldou a acertada descrição que fizera, ilustrando a falta de discernimento deles. (Mt 23:15-22; 15:3) No entanto, quem comete o erro de chamar seu irmão de "tolo desprezível", ato que o julga e condena como moralmente imprestável, põe-se em perigo de ser lançado na Geena. — Mt 5:22; Ro 14:10-12; Mt 7:1, 2.

Entre as excelentes ilustrações de Jesus, extraídas do cotidiano, para destacar a tolice de negligenciar coisas espirituais, com a consequente perda da verdadeira bênção, acham-se os seguintes dois exemplos: o homem tolo, que construiu sua casa sobre a areia, e o homem rico, cuja terra produzia bem e que, portanto, planejava expandir seus celeiros, para então realmente usufruir a vida. Ademais, é tolice não 'manter-se desperto' em sentido espiritual, como frisa a ilustração de Jesus das cinco virgens tolas que não levaram óleo para suas lâmpadas ao saírem a fim de encontrar o noivo. — Mt 7:24-27; Lu 12:16-21; Mt 25:1-13.

Para vir a ser realmente sábia, a pessoa deve tornar-se tola aos olhos do mundo, "pois a sabedoria deste mundo é tolice perante Deus". Os que Jeová escolhe para representá-lo não são os sábios segundo os padrões do mundo, mas os desprezados como pessoas sem conhecimento, os tolos. Isto resulta em a tolice deste mundo tornar-se ainda mais evidente. De mais a mais, remove todo motivo de jactância da parte do favorecido. Em vez disso, toda a glória cabe legitimamente à Fonte da sabedoria, Jeová. — 1Co 3:18, 19; 1:18-31.

Responder ao tolo em harmonia com, ou "segundo a sua tolice", no sentido de recorrer a seus métodos degradantes de argumentação, coloca a pessoa que assim o faz em harmonia com os arrazoamentos ou modos de agir desequilibrados do tolo. Para não nos tornarmos como o tolo neste respeito, o provérbio aconselha: "Não respondas ao estúpido segundo a sua tolice." Por outro lado, Provérbios 26:4, 5 mostra que pode ser proveitoso responder-lhe "segundo a sua tolice", no sentido de analisar suas alegações, expondo-as como ridículas, e de mostrar que seus próprios argumentos conduzem a conclusões inteiramente diferentes das que ele mesmo tirou.

TOMÉ [do aramaico, que significa "Gêmeo"]. Este apóstolo de Jesus Cristo era chamado "O Gêmeo", ou Dídimo. (Mt 10:3; Mr 3:18; Lu 6:15; Jo 11:16 n) Parece que era um tanto impetuoso ao expressar sentimentos ou manifestar dúvidas. No entanto, ao lhe serem esclarecidas as dúvidas, Tomé não hesitava em confessar abertamente sua crença.

Quando Jesus propôs regressar à Judeia, para ressuscitar Lázaro, Tomé disse: "Vamos também, para que morramos com ele." (Jo 11:16) Visto que pouco antes dessa ocasião os judeus haviam buscado apedrejar Jesus (Jo 11:7, 8), é possível que Tomé quisesse incentivar os outros discípulos a acompanhar Jesus, embora isto pudesse resultar em se juntarem a Lázaro ou ao próprio Jesus, na morte.

Diante do comentário de Jesus sobre ir embora a fim de preparar um lugar para os apóstolos, Tomé revelou ter dúvidas, ao dizer: "Senhor, não sabemos para onde vais. Como sabemos o caminho?" (Jo 14:2-6) Similarmente, depois de ouvir falar na ressurreição de Jesus, Tomé disse: "A menos que eu veja nas suas mãos o sinal dos pregos e ponha o meu dedo no sinal dos pregos, e ponha a minha mão no seu lado, certamente não acreditarei." Oito dias depois, Tomé teve oportunidade de fazer isto, quando Jesus novamente apareceu aos discípulos. Mas não se declara se Tomé realmente apalpou as feridas nessa ocasião. No entanto, ele ficou convencido e exclamou: "Meu Senhor e meu Deus!" Cristo então o repreendeu com brandura, dizendo: "Felizes são os que não veem, contudo, creem." — Jo 20:24-29.

TOPÁZIO. A variedade usada como pedra preciosa é um mineral duro, transparente, cristalino, composto de fluossilicato de alumínio. É mais duro que o quartzo e não raro é encontrado em cavidades de rochas graníticas. O topázio pode ser incolor, mas também ocorre numa grande gama de cores que incluem o branco, o amarelo, o marrom-claro, o vermelho-rosado e, às vezes, o verde ou o azul pálidos. O matiz mais popular é o amarelo-vinho. A palavra topázio deriva-se do vocábulo grego to·pá·zi·on, que faz alusão à ilha de Topázio, situada no Mar Vermelho, de onde os gregos obtinham os topázios com que Plínio, o Velho, e outros escritores primitivos estavam familiarizados. O livro de Jó relaciona o topázio com Cus, região que margeava o Mar Vermelho.

O topázio achava-se entre as pedras preciosas do "peitoral do julgamento" usado pelo sumo sacerdote Arão. Era a pedra engastada no meio da primeira carreira de gemas, e o nome de uma das 12 tribos de Israel estava gravado nela. (Êx 28:2, 15, 17, 21; 39:10) Os alicerces da "cidade santa, Nova Jerusalém, descendo do céu, da parte de Deus . . . estavam adornados com toda sorte de pedra preciosa", e o nono alicerce era de topázio. — Re 21:2, 19, 20.

TOQUÉM [Quantidade Fixa]. Cidade de Simeão. (1Cr 4:24, 32) Parece que é chamada de Eter, em Josué 19:7. — Veja ETER.

TORMENTO. A palavra grega ba·sa·ni·zo (e formas aparentadas) ocorre mais de 20 vezes nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. Significava basicamente "testar pela pedra de toque [bá·sa·nos]" e, por extensão, "examinar ou interrogar pela aplicação de tortura". Os lexicógrafos indicam que esse termo é usado, nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, no sentido de 'atormentar com penosas dores; ser fustigado, afligido'. — Mt 8:29; Lu 8:28; Re 12:2.

A Bíblia usou ba·sa·ni·zo em vários casos. Por exemplo, um servo afligido de paralisia estava "terrivelmente atormentado" (NM) ou "entre sofrimentos atrozes" (PIB) por causa da paralisia. (Mt 8:6; compare isso com 4:24.) Também, Ló "sentia-se atormentado em sua alma" (BV) ou "estava aflito" (Mo, RS) por causa das ações licenciosas do povo de Sodoma. (2Pe 2:8) Esta palavra é usada até mesmo com respeito ao avanço difícil de um barco. — Mt 14:24; Mr 6:48.

O substantivo grego ba·sa·ni·stés, que ocorre em Mateus 18:34, é traduzido por "carcereiros" em algumas versões (AT, Fn, NM; compare com Mt 18:30) e por "atormentadores" ou "torturadores" (Al, BV, MH) em outras. A tortura era às vezes usada nas prisões a fim de se obter informações (compare com At 22:24, 29, que mostra que isto era feito, embora ba·sa·ni·zo não seja usada neste caso), de forma que ba·sa·ni·stés veio a aplicar-se a carcereiros. A respeito deste uso, em Mateus 18:34, The International Standard Bible Encyclopaedia (A Enciclopédia Bíblica Padrão Internacional) observou: "É provável que a própria detenção fosse considerada um 'tormento' (como sem dúvida o era), e os 'atormentadores' não precisam significar nada mais do que carcereiros." (Editada por J. Orr, 1960, Vol. V, p. 2999.) Assim, a menção, em Revelação (Apocalipse) 20:10, daqueles que serão "atormentados dia e noite, para todo o sempre", evidentemente indica que eles ficarão numa condição de restrição. Os relatos paralelos em Mateus 8:29 e Lucas 8:31 indicam que se pode falar duma condição de restrição como se fosse "tormento". — Veja LAGO DE FOGO.

Alguns comentaristas chamam a atenção para casos em que a Bíblia usa a palavra "tormento", a fim de apoiar o ensino do sofrimento eterno no fogo. No entanto, como acabamos de mostrar, há motivos bíblicos para se crer que Revelação 20:10 não tem este sentido. De fato, o versículo 14 mostra que o "lago de fogo", em que ocorre esse tormento, na verdade significa "a segunda morte". E embora Jesus tenha falado sobre certo homem rico que 'estava em tormentos' (Lu 16:23, 28), como mostra o artigo LÁZARO (N.º 2), Jesus não descrevia a experiência literal de uma pessoa real, mas contava uma ilustração. Em Revelação há vários outros casos em que o sentido de "tormento" é claramente ilustrativo ou simbólico, como evidencia o contexto. — Re 9:5; 11:10; 18:7, 10.

TORNOZELEIRA. No caso das palavras hebraicas que se referem a "correntinhas para os tornozelos" ('ets·'a·dháh; Núm 31:50) e a "correntinhas para os passos" (tse'a·dháh; (Is 3:20), ambas vêm da raiz tsa·'ádh, que significa "dar passos; marchar". (Je 10:5; Pr 7:8) A palavra hebraica 'é·khes (manilha; tornozeleira) vem da raiz 'a·khás, que significa "fazer um som tilintante" ou "sacudir manilhas". (Is 3:16n, 18n) No Oriente Médio, era comum usar tornozeleiras ou argolas ornamentais nas pernas, acima dos tornozelos. Eram de materiais como bronze, ouro, prata, ferro, vidro e marfim. Em monumentos egípcios, pessoas de ambos os sexos são representadas usando tais itens, e era comum no Egito o uso de jogos de tornozeleiras e braceletes que combinavam.

É possível que tornozeleiras pesadas fizessem um som como de campainha, à medida que batiam uma na outra enquanto a pessoa que as usava caminhava. No entanto, às vezes se colocavam pedrinhas em manilhas ou tornozeleiras ocas para que produzissem um som, e moças árabes de tempos mais recentes também têm usado tornozeleiras com sininhos. Além disso, às vezes se prendiam correntinhas nas tornozeleiras usadas pelas mulheres. As correntinhas tilintavam à medida que a pessoa que as usava caminhava, e, naturalmente, elas e as próprias tornozeleiras chamavam atenção. Correntinhas para os tornozelos ou correntinhas para os passos também limitavam ou encurtavam os passos da mulher, de modo que ela caminhava com passinhos miúdos, o que talvez fosse considerado um modo de andar gracioso e delicadamente feminino. — Is 3:16.

Entre as joias que os israelitas tomaram dos midianitas como despojo de guerra e contribuíram como "oferta de Jeová" achavam-se "correntinhas para os tornozelos". (Núm 31:50, 51) As soberbas "filhas de Sião" de tempos posteriores são descritas como mulheres que "andam com passinhos miúdos e fazem um som tilintante", ou "nos seus pés sacodem manilhas". Por intermédio de Isaías, Jeová advertiu-as de que tiraria seus ornamentos e "a beleza das manilhas", ou tornozeleiras, bem como suas "correntinhas para os passos". (Is 3:16, 18, 20) A conquista de Judá e Jerusalém por Babilônia, em 607 AEC, certamente foi uma intromissão na vida dessas mulheres, o que resultou na perda de seus muitos ornamentos e da liberdade. — Veja ENFEITES (ORNAMENTOS).

TORRE. Construção (ou parte duma estrutura) que em geral é mais alta do que seu diâmetro e alta em relação aos arredores. A história da construção de torres remonta a pouco depois do Dilúvio, quando homens nas planícies de Sinear disseram: "Vamos! Construamos para nós uma cidade e também uma torre com o seu topo nos céus." (Gên 11:2-4) Julga-se que essa torre tinha o feitio dos zigurates religiosos, de traços oblíquos, piramidais, descobertos naquela parte da terra. — Veja ARQUEOLOGIA (Babilônia); BABEL.

Erguiam-se torres simples nos vinhedos, como pontos de observação para os vigias que guardavam as vinhas contra ladrões e animais. — Is 5:1, 2; Mt 21:33; Mr 12:1.

Para fins de defesa militar, construíam-se torres nas muralhas das cidades, e as mais elevadas em geral ficavam nas esquinas e ao lado dos portões. (2Cr 26:9; 32:5; Ez 26:4, 9; Sof 1:16; 3:6) Em alguns casos, as torres serviam como cadeia de postos avançados ao longo duma fronteira, ou como locais de refúgio em áreas isoladas, para pastores e outros. — 2Cr 26:10; 27:4; veja FORTIFICAÇÕES; TORRE DE VIGIA.

Não raras vezes uma torre dentro da cidade servia de cidadela. As torres de Siquém, Tebes e Penuel eram estruturas assim. (Jz 8:9, 17; 9:46-54) Ruínas de outras torres de cidade também já foram encontradas em Jericó, Bete-Sã, Laquis, Megido, Mispá e Samaria.

O termo hebraico migh·dál, que significa "torre" (Ez 29:10; 30:6), forma parte do nome de determinados lugares, tais como Migdal-Gade (que significa "Torre de Boa Sorte") e Migdal-El (que significa "Torre de Deus"). — Jos 15:37; 19:38.

Às vezes, os exércitos atacantes construíam "torres de sítio" ao investirem contra cidades fortificadas. Elas serviam de posições elevadas das quais os arqueiros ou arremessadores atiravam. Além disso, algumas torres de assalto continham aríetes e forneciam proteção para os que os operavam. — Is 23:13.

As Torres de Jerusalém. A Torre dos Fornos ficava no lado NO da cidade, perto ou ao lado do Portão da Esquina. (Ne 3:11; 12:38) Não se sabe com certeza por que era assim chamada, mas é bem possível que houvesse padeiros profissionais naquela vizinhança. Pode ter sido uma das torres construídas por Uzias, que reinou em Jerusalém de 829 a 778 AEC. (2Cr 26:9) Ao longo da muralha N da cidade havia duas outras torres importantes: a Torre de Hananel, que foi restaurada e santificada nos dias de Neemias (Ne 3:1; 12:39; Je 31:38; Za 14:10), e, perto dela, na direção L, próxima do Portão das Ovelhas, a Torre de Meá. Não se sabe por que era chamada de Meá, que significa "Cem". — Ne 3:1; 12:39.

Ao longo da muralha L, ao S da área do templo, havia a torre que era chamada de "torre saliente", e ainda mais para o S, em algum lugar na vizinhança do palácio de Davi, havia uma torre relacionada com a Casa do Rei, perto do Pátio da Guarda. (Ne 3:25-27) Alguns acreditam que esta última torre fosse a mencionada no Cântico de Salomão como "a torre de Davi, construída em camadas de pedras, em que se penduram mil escudos, todos os escudos redondos dos poderosos". (Cân 4:4) Esta torre não deve ser confundida com a chamada "Torre de Davi", que é mais recente e incorpora a torre de Fasel. Essa torre de Fasel foi uma das três construídas por Herodes, o Grande, para a proteção do seu novo palácio, erigido próximo ao local do antigo Portão da Esquina, no lado O da cidade.

A Torre de Siloé achava-se provavelmente na vizinhança do reservatório que tinha esse nome, no setor SE de Jerusalém. Jesus mencionou que esta torre desabou, acontecimento que causou a morte de 18 homens e devia estar fresco na memória dos que o ouviam. — Lu 13:4; veja também ANTÔNIA, TORRE DE.

Uso Figurado. Aqueles que se voltam com fé e obediência para Jeová têm grande segurança, como Davi cantou: "Tu [Jeová] mostraste ser um refúgio para mim, uma torre forte em face do inimigo." (Sal 61:3) Aqueles que reconhecem o que o Seu nome significa, que confiam nesse nome e fielmente o representam, nada têm a temer, pois "o nome de Jeová é uma torre forte. O justo corre para dentro dela e recebe proteção". — Pr 18:10; compare com 1Sa 17:45-47.

TORRE DE BABEL. Veja BABEL.

TORRE DE VIGIA. Local de vigilância ou posto de observação, não raro construído nas muralhas duma cidade. (Veja TORRE.) Construíam-se outras torres de vigia em áreas desérticas ou em zonas fronteiriças. Destinavam-se principalmente a fins militares e serviam para proteger uma cidade ou uma fronteira; eram construídas também como lugares de refúgio para pastores e lavradores em áreas isoladas e permitiam que o vigia alertasse contra saqueadores, de modo que os rebanhos e as plantações maturescentes da região pudessem ser protegidos. — 2Cr 20:24; Is 21:8; 32:14.

Várias cidades chamavam-se Mispé (hebr.: mits·péh, "Torre de Vigia"), provavelmente por estarem situadas em grandes elevações ou por causa de torres notáveis erguidas ali. Às vezes a Bíblia diferençava tais cidades, mencionando sua localização por nome, tal como "Mispé de Gileade" (Jz 11:29) e "Mispé, em Moabe". — 1Sa 22:3.

Jacó ergueu um monte de pedras e chamou-o de "Galeede" (que significa "Montão de Testemunho") e "A Torre de Vigia". Labão disse então: "Vigie Jeová entre mim e ti quando estivermos sem nos ver um ao outro." (Gên 31:45-49) Esse monte de pedras atestaria que Jeová estava observando, a fim de assegurar-se de que Jacó e Labão cumprissem seu pacto de paz.

TORTURA, ESTACA DE. Veja ESTACA DE TORTURA.

TOÚ. Ancestral de Samuel. (1Sa 1:1) Pelo visto, ele é chamado de "Naate" e de "Toá", em Crônicas. — 1Cr 6:16, 22-28, 34. — Veja TOI, TOÚ.

TOUCADO. Veja COBERTURA PARA A CABEÇA.

TOURO [hebr.: shohr (Êx 21:28), par (Êx 29:10), ba·qár (1Rs 7:25), 'agha·lím ("novilhos"; Am 6:4), re'ém ("touro selvagem"; Núm 23:22); aramaico: tohr (Da 5:21); gr.: taú·ros (Mt 22:4), bous (1Co 9:9), mó·skhos ("novilho"; Lu 15:23)]. Estas palavras das línguas originais, usadas para referir-se ao macho do gado bovino, foram traduzidas de forma variada por "touro", "novilho", "bezerro", "boi". No uso moderno, em português, "boi" aplica-se também ao touro castrado, mas as palavras nas línguas originais, muitas vezes vertidas "boi" e "bois", em várias traduções, não devem ser entendidas neste sentido restrito. Embora a castração seja o método comumente usado para domar touros a fim de que sirvam como animais de tração, parece que os israelitas não faziam isto, porque animais mutilados não serviam para ser oferecidos como sacrifício. (Le 22:23, 24; De 17:1; compare com 1Rs 19:21.) Sugere-se, portanto, que a raça usada pelos israelitas talvez fosse de índole mansa.

O macho do gado de corte tem ocupado um lugar de destaque nas religiões de muitos povos pagãos. Seja devido a sua grande força, seja ao seu potencial como reprodutor de numerosa progênie, ele tem sido honrado, e até adorado. Os babilônios usavam o touro qual símbolo de seu principal deus, Marduque. No Egito, touros vivos eram venerados como encarnações dum deus: Ápis, em Mênfis, e Mnevis, em Heliópolis. Ser Touro um dos principais signos do zodíaco dá evidência adicional da importância que se atribuía ao touro nas religiões pagãs.

Pouco depois do Êxodo, até mesmo os israelitas trocaram a glória de Jeová pela "representação de um touro", provavelmente por se terem contaminado pelos conceitos religiosos com os quais se haviam familiarizado enquanto estavam no Egito. (Sal 106:19, 20) Mais tarde, o primeiro rei do reino de dez tribos, Jeroboão, estabeleceu a adoração do bezerro em Dã e em Betel. (1Rs 12:28, 29) Naturalmente, segundo a Lei que Deus fornecera a Israel, de modo algum se devia venerar o touro ou qualquer outro animal, nem mesmo de modo simbólico. — Êx 20:4, 5; compare com Êx 32:8.

Os israelitas ofereciam touros em sacrifício (Êx 29; Le 22:27; Núm 7; 1Cr 29:21), e a Lei ordenava especificamente que se sacrificassem touros em certas ocasiões. Se o sumo sacerdote cometesse um pecado que resultasse em culpa sobre o povo, exigia-se dele a oferta de um touro, a maior e mais valiosa vítima sacrificial, o que sem dúvida era devido a sua posição de responsabilidade como líder de Israel na adoração verdadeira. Quando toda a assembleia de Israel cometia um erro, também era preciso oferecer um touro. (Le 4:3, 13, 14) No Dia da Expiação, devia-se oferecer um touro em favor da casa sacerdotal de Arão. (Le 16) No sétimo mês de seu calendário sagrado, exigia-se dos israelitas que oferecessem mais de 70 touros como ofertas queimadas. — Núm 29.

O touro era usado pelos israelitas no trabalho relacionado com tarefas agrícolas, como arar e debulhar. (De 22:10; 25:4) Este animal devia ser tratado de forma benevolente. O apóstolo Paulo aplicou aos servos cristãos de Deus o princípio incorporado na Lei, com respeito a não açaimar o touro enquanto debulha, o que indica que quem partilha coisas espirituais com outros é digno de receber provisões materiais, assim como o touro que estivesse trabalhando tinha direito a comer do cereal que debulhasse. (Êx 23:4, 12; De 25:4; 1Co 9:7-10) A legislação abrangia casos de roubo de touro e de danos causados a pessoas e a propriedades por um touro deixado solto. — Êx 21:28–22:15.

Os touros sacrificados pelos israelitas simbolizavam a oferta imaculada de Cristo como único sacrifício adequado pelos pecados da humanidade. (He 9:12-14) Os touros sacrificiais também representam um outro tipo de sacrifício, um em que Jeová se deleita em todos os tempos e em todas as circunstâncias, a saber, os frutos espontâneos dos lábios que, como novilhos vigorosos, são usados para 'fazer declaração pública do Seu nome'. — Sal 69:30, 31; Os 14:2; He 13:15.

Nos simbolismos bíblicos, o touro é usado para indicar poder e força. O mar de fundição, em frente ao templo de Salomão, repousava sobre as representações de 12 touros, em grupos de três, de frente para cada um dos pontos cardeais. (2Cr 4:2, 4) Cada uma das quatro criaturas viventes que Ezequiel observou em visão junto ao trono de Jeová, semelhante a um carro, tinha quatro faces, uma das quais era a dum touro. (Ez 1:10) Na visão do apóstolo João, uma das quatro criaturas viventes que estavam ao redor do trono era como um novilho. (Re 4:6, 7) Por isso, o touro representa apropriadamente um dos atributos básicos de Jeová, a saber, ilimitado poder. — Sal 62:11; Is 40:26.

Nas Escrituras, o touro aparece também como símbolo dos inimigos agressivos de Jeová e de seus adoradores, que visam escravizar ou destruir os servos de Deus, mas que serão, eles mesmos, aniquilados no dia da vingança de Jeová. — Sal 22:12; 68:30; Is 34:7, 8; Ez 39:18; veja BEZERRO; OFERTAS.

Nas Escrituras, faz-se alusão a várias características do "touro selvagem" (re'ém): sua disposição intratável (Jó 39:9-12), sua velocidade e invencibilidade (Núm 23:22; 24:8), o poder dos seus grandes chifres (De 33:17; Sal 22:21; 92:10) e suas travessuras quando jovem (Sal 29:6). Touros selvagens também são usados para representar os intratáveis inimigos de Jeová, contra quem se dirige a execução de Seus julgamentos. — Is 34:7.

TOURO SELVAGEM. Veja TOURO.

TRABALHADOR CONTRATADO. Alguém que (em contraste com um escravo) recebia um salário por seu trabalho.

A Lei requeria que tais trabalhadores fossem remunerados no fim do dia de trabalho. (Le 19:13; De 24:14, 15) Pelo menos até o primeiro século EC, parece que o salário era combinado antes de os trabalhadores começarem a trabalhar; que a jornada de trabalho era de 12 horas, de cerca das seis horas da manhã até às seis da tarde; e que o salário que se costumava pagar pelo trabalho de um dia nos vinhedos era evidentemente um denário (74 centavos de dólar). (Mt 20:1-13) A referência bíblica a "anos de um trabalhador contratado" parece indicar que também se fixava a duração do acordo, ou contrato, de trabalho. — Is 16:14; 21:16.

É evidente que em Israel muitos trabalhadores contratados eram incircuncisos, pois a Lei prescrevia que não participassem da Páscoa, embora escravos circuncisos tivessem permissão para isto, por serem considerados membros da família israelita à qual serviam. Da mesma forma, embora os trabalhadores contratados de um sacerdote não pudessem comer das coisas sagradas, não havia nenhuma proibição desse tipo sobre os escravos circuncisos, visto que também eram, na realidade, membros da família do sacerdote. — Êx 12:43-45; Le 22:10, 11.

O israelita que, devido a reveses financeiros, tivesse de vender-se em escravidão a outro israelita, ou a um residente forasteiro, a um colono, ou a um membro da família do residente forasteiro, não devia ser tratado com tirania, mas com a devida consideração, como um trabalhador contratado. Daí, se no seu caso não tivesse sido possível tirar proveito do direito de recompra, ele devia ser libertado da servidão, quer no sétimo ano de sua servidão, quer no ano do jubileu, dependendo de qual viesse primeiro. — Êx 21:2; Le 25:39, 40, 47-49, 53; De 15:12; veja ESCRAVO.

Às vezes, os trabalhadores contratados eram submetidos a abusos pelo patrão. Através do profeta Malaquias, Jeová advertiu que se tornaria testemunha veloz contra os que agiam fraudulentamente com o salário dos assalariados. — Mal 3:5; veja também Tg 5:4; SALÁRIO, REMUNERAÇÃO.

O trabalhador contratado em geral ficava ansioso pelo encerramento do dia de trabalho e para receber o salário. (Jó 7:1, 2) Raras vezes se interessava de todo o coração, como devia, pelos bens do patrão, conforme evidenciam as palavras de Jesus Cristo, ao dizer que, dessemelhante do homem contratado, que foge quando surge perigo, ele, o Pastor Excelente, entregaria a sua alma em benefício das ovelhas. — Jo 10:11-15; veja também Je 46:21.

TRABALHADOR EM METAL. Veja METAL, TRABALHADOR EM.

TRABALHO, OBRA. Aplicação das forças físicas ou mentais para atingir um objetivo ou para produzir algo; as Escrituras recomendam o trabalho. (Ec 5:18) Poder o homem comer, beber e 'ver o que é bom por todo o seu trabalho árduo' é uma dádiva de Deus, e a vontade divina é que o homem 'alegre-se com os seus trabalhos'. (Ec 3:13, 22) No caso do homem, o trabalho não foi instituído só depois de ele ter pecado, pois Jeová deu ao homem e à mulher perfeitos e sem pecados uma designação de trabalho, ao ordenar-lhes que sujeitassem a terra. (Gên 1:28) No entanto, o pecado resultou em trabalho vão. — Gên 3:19; compare isso com Ro 8:20, 21.

Sob a Lei mosaica, decretaram-se períodos de descanso do trabalho. Os israelitas não deviam trabalhar no sábado semanal. (Êx 20:8-11) Além disso, nas épocas de santo congresso não se devia fazer "nenhuma sorte de obra laboriosa". — Le 23:6-8, 21, 24, 25, 34-36.

Jeová e Seu Filho São Trabalhadores. Jeová é um trabalhador cujas obras incluem a criação de coisas como os céus, a terra, os animais e o homem. (Gên 1:1; 2:1-3; Jó 14:15; Sal 8:3-8; 19:1; 104:24; 139:14) É apropriado reconhecer a grandeza das obras de Jeová, exaltando-o e agradecendo-lhe por tê-las feito. (Sal 92:5; 107:15; 145:4-10; 150:2) As obras de Deus são fiéis e incomparáveis, elaboradas com sabedoria e são "verdade e julgamento". — Sal 33:4; 86:8; 104:24; 111:7.

Jeová realizou um "grande trabalho" ao livrar os israelitas da escravidão no Egito e permitir-lhes tomar posse de Canaã. (Jz 2:7) Suas obras às vezes envolvem a execução de julgamento divino. (Je 50:25) Assim, mediante Isaías se predisse: "Porque Jeová se levantará . . . para executar a sua obra — sua obra é incomum." (Is 28:21) Esta 'obra incomum' ocorreu em 607 AEC e de novo em 70 EC, quando Jeová causou ou fez ocorrer a destruição de Jerusalém e de seu templo. — Hab 1:5-9; At 13:38-41; veja PODER, OBRAS PODEROSAS.

A sabedoria personificada é representada como estando ao lado de Jeová na obra criativa, como "mestre de obras". (Pr 8:12, 22-31; compare isso com Jo 1:1-3.) Quando estava na terra como homem, Jesus Cristo, o Filho sábio de Deus, mostrou que era trabalhador e que Jeová continuava a trabalhar, embora as obras criativas materiais relacionadas com a terra já estivessem concluídas, pois disse: "Meu Pai tem estado trabalhando até agora e eu estou trabalhando." (Jo 5:17) Para Jesus, fazer a obra que Jeová lhe designara era tão nutritivo, satisfatório e revigorante quanto o alimento. (Jo 4:34; 5:36) As obras de Cristo eram feitas em nome do Pai, procediam do Pai e mostravam que ele estava "em união com o Pai". (Jo 10:25, 32, 37, 38; 14:10, 11; 15:24; At 2:22) Jesus terminou com êxito a obra que Deus lhe designara na terra. — Jo 17:4.

Jesus disse: "Quem exercer fé em mim, esse fará também as obras que eu faço; e ele fará obras maiores do que estas, porque eu vou embora para o Pai." (Jo 14:12) Evidentemente, Cristo não queria dizer que seus seguidores fariam obras mais miraculosas do que as suas, pois não há registro bíblico de que algum deles tenha realizado um milagre que superasse o de Jesus ao ressuscitar a Lázaro, que estivera morto por quatro dias. (Jo 11:38-44) Mas, visto que Jesus ia para o Pai, e seus seguidores receberiam o espírito santo a fim de serem suas testemunhas "tanto em Jerusalém como em toda a Judeia e Samaria, e até à parte mais distante da terra" (At 1:8), eles abrangeriam uma área mais ampla e trabalhariam por mais tempo do que Jesus, neste sentido realizando obras maiores do que as dele.

A Necessidade do Trabalho. Jesus Cristo disse que "o trabalhador é digno de seu salário", indicando assim que aos que trabalhassem com relação a assuntos espirituais não faltariam as necessidades básicas da vida. (Lu 10:7) Entretanto, como o apóstolo Paulo indicou aos tessalonicenses, o preguiçoso que se recusa a trabalhar não merece comer à custa dos outros, mas deve aprender a trabalhar com suas próprias mãos para cuidar de suas necessidades. (1Te 4:11; 2Te 3:10, 12) Semelhantemente, o gatuno 'não mais deve furtar', mas deve 'trabalhar arduamente'. — Ef 4:28.

A Qualidade do Trabalho dos Servos de Deus. Ao realizar qualquer trabalho que seja, o servo de Jeová deve lembrar-se de sua relação com Deus e fazer tudo "de toda a alma como para Jeová, e não como para homens". (Col 3:23) Isto requer laboriosidade (Pr 10:4; 13:4; 18:9), honestidade e fidelidade. Manifestar tais características dá glória a Deus, como se depreende da admoestação dada aos escravos cristãos: "Os escravos estejam sujeitos aos seus donos em todas as coisas e lhes agradem bem, não contradizendo, não praticando furto, mas exibindo plenamente uma boa fidelidade, para que adornem o ensino de nosso Salvador, Deus, em todas as coisas." — Tit 2:9, 10; Ef 6:5-8; He 13:18.

Avaliação Correta das Coisas Obtidas. Os cristãos devem recorrer a Deus com apreço em busca de sua bênção sobre o trabalho que realizam e não devem ficar indevidamente ansiosos pelas necessidades materiais. Jesus aconselhou seus seguidores a buscarem primeiro o Reino. (Mt 6:11, 25-33) E instou também: "Trabalhai, não pelo alimento que perece, mas pelo alimento que permanece para a vida eterna." (Jo 6:27) Por isso, os servos de Deus sabiamente consideram o dinheiro e as coisas materiais obtidos através do trabalho em segundo plano em relação às riquezas espirituais, muito mais importantes. Também usam os recursos materiais adquiridos pelo trabalho para promover os interesses espirituais, e assim fazem de Deus e de Cristo seus "amigos". — Ec 7:12; Lu 12:15-21; 16:9.

Obras Impróprias a Serem Evitadas. Jeová determina que obras são próprias e que obras são impróprias. Ele "levará toda sorte de trabalho a julgamento com relação a toda coisa oculta, quanto a se é bom ou mau". (Ec 12:13, 14) Deus também lidará com cada pessoa segundo as obras que ela realiza. (Sal 62:12) Isto, e especialmente o amor a Jeová Deus, são bons motivos para evitar obras impróprias e para praticar obras agradáveis aos Seus olhos. — 1Jo 5:3; Sal 34:14; 97:10; Am 5:14, 15.

Para terem o favor divino, os cristãos devem evitar as "obras da carne", que incluem coisas como fornicação, conduta desenfreada, idolatria, prática de espiritismo, ódios, acessos de ira e bebedeiras. Tais práticas impediriam a pessoa de herdar o Reino de Deus e evidentemente estão incluídas entre as "obras infrutíferas que pertencem à escuridão", obras que não resultam em nenhum benefício. — Gál 5:19-21; Ef 5:3-14; 1Pe 4:3; compare isso com Jo 3:20, 21.

Obras Corretas. A confiança em Jeová é essencial para que as obras da pessoa tenham êxito. (Sal 127:1; Pr 16:3) É Deus quem apoia e fortalece aqueles que se empenham em fazer Sua vontade. (2Co 4:7; Fil 4:13) Ao passo que a vida humana está repleta de obras vãs (Ec 2:10, 11), as obras relacionadas com a adoração verdadeira não são em vão. Os cristãos hebreus receberam a seguinte garantia: "Deus não é injusto, para se esquecer de vossa obra e do amor que mostrastes ao seu nome, por terdes ministrado aos santos e por continuardes a ministrar." (He 6:10) É evidente que essa obra incluía prestar ajuda material ou mostrar outras bondades aos necessitados ou àqueles que passassem por sofrimentos e perseguição. (Veja Ef 4:28; Fil 4:14-19; 1Ti 6:17, 18; Tg 1:27.) Outras obras excelentes incluem participar em fazer discípulos (Mt 28:19, 20; 1Co 3:9-15) e, no caso dos homens, servir como superintendente numa congregação cristã e ensinar os concrentes. — 1Te 5:12, 13; 1Ti 3:1; 5:17.

Fé e Obras. As obras da Lei mosaica, que incluíam coisas como ofertas sacrificiais, purificações e a circuncisão, não tornavam justa a pessoa. (Ro 3:20; 4:1-10; Gál 3:2) Todavia, o discípulo Tiago — que não estava considerando as obras da Lei mosaica — diz que "o homem há de ser declarado justo por obras e não apenas pela fé" (Tg 2:24), pois é preciso haver obras práticas que demonstrem a fé da pessoa e que a comprovem. (Veja Mt 7:21-27; Ef 2:8-10; Tg 1:27; 2:14-17; 4:4.) Por exemplo, Abraão tinha obras que provavam sua fé, tais como sua disposição de oferecer Isaque em sacrifício. Raabe também provou sua fé com obras, ao esconder os espias israelitas. — He 11:17-19; Tg 2:21-25.

TRABALHO COMPULSÓRIO. Veja SERVIÇO COMPULSÓRIO.

TRABALHOS FORÇADOS. Nos tempos bíblicos, pelo visto era muito comum lançar mão do "trabalho forçado" (hebr.: mas), e os povos conquistados não raro eram escravizados. (De 20:11; Jos 16:10; 17:13; Est 10:1; Is 31:8; La 1:1) Os israelitas, como escravos submetidos a trabalhos forçados, sob a supervisão imediata dos feitores egípcios que os tiranizavam, trabalharam na construção dos lugares de armazenagem de Pitom e Ramsés. (Êx 1:11-14) Mais tarde, ao entrarem na Terra da Promessa, em vez de cumprirem a ordem de Jeová de expulsar todos os habitantes cananeus daquela terra e devotá-los à destruição, os israelitas obrigaram-nos a fazer trabalhos forçados, próprios de escravos. O efeito disto foi ruim, pois engodou Israel para a adoração de deuses falsos. (Jos 16:10; Jz 1:28; 2:3, 11, 12) O Rei Salomão continuou recrutando os descendentes desses cananeus, isto é, os amorreus, os hititas, os perizeus, os heveus e os jebuseus, para trabalhos forçados como escravos. — 1Rs 9:20, 21.

Às vezes, recrutavam-se trabalhadores israelitas para fazer face a emergências ou para concluir um projeto especial que não podia ser postergado indefinidamente. Issacar, de acordo com as palavras de Jacó, seu pai, já à beira da morte, havia de ficar sujeito, como tribo, a esse tipo de trabalhos forçados. (Gên 49:15) Salomão recrutou 30.000 homens de Israel para o trabalho de construção do templo. No entanto, eles não se tornaram escravos, pois serviam em turmas de 10.000 por mês, no Líbano, de modo que passavam dois meses em casa e um no trabalho. Mas parece que surgiu considerável ressentimento contra o recrutamento de israelitas para trabalhos forçados. Os israelitas apedrejaram Adorão (Adonirão), a quem Roboão enviara para recrutar trabalhadores depois de não concordar em aliviar o pesado fardo que Israel suportara sob o governo de Salomão. Na ocasião, Adorão já devia estar bem idoso, visto que no tempo de Davi havia começado a servir como supervisor dos recrutados para trabalhos. — 2Sa 20:24; 1Rs 4:6; 5:13, 14; 12:14, 18; 2Cr 10:18.

A preguiça podia facilmente deixar um israelita endividado e com o tempo obrigá-lo a vender sua herança e também a si mesmo como escravo. Daí o provérbio: "A mão indolente virá a ser para trabalho forçado." — Pr 12:24.

TRAÇA [hebr.: 'ash; sas (traça das roupas); gr.: ses]. Inseto de quatro asas, que se assemelha a uma borboleta, mas que difere desta no sentido de que suas antenas geralmente são emplumadas, sem protuberâncias distintas nas extremidades. Em repouso, as asas da traça não ficam erguidas, como frequentemente acontece com as borboletas. Em vez disso, ficam dobradas para trás, sobre o corpo do inseto, ou estiradas dos lados. Além disto, as traças em geral têm hábitos noturnos. O inseto mencionado nas Escrituras é, evidentemente, a traça das roupas (Tineola bisselliella), em especial no destrutivo estágio larval. (Jó 13:28; Sal 39:11; Is 50:9; 51:8; Os 5:12; Mt 6:19, 20; Lu 12:33; compare isso com Tg 5:2.) A facilidade com que se pode esmigalhar uma traça foi a figura de linguagem usada por Elifaz para referir-se à fragilidade do homem mortal. — Jó 4:17, 19, 20.

As fêmeas das traças de roupas põem os ovos em tecidos de lã ou de seda, ou em peles, distribuindo-os de modo que as larvas, ao eclodirem, disponham de bastante espaço e matéria com a qual se alimentar. As larvas só comem depois de se proteger com uma "casa", ou casulo, construída com as fibras disponíveis. Elas permanecem nesta "casa" enquanto se alimentam. — Jó 27:18.

TRACONITES. Veja TRACONÍTIS.

TRACONÍTIS [duma raiz grega que significa "escabroso", provavelmente uma região escabrosa]. A região que, junto com a Itureia, achava-se sob a administração de Filipe, governante distrital romano, durante os ministérios de João, o Batizador, e de Jesus. (Lu 3:1) Os limites norte de Traconítis situavam-se a uns 40 km ao SE de Damasco, na parte nordeste de Basã. Quanto ao tamanho, abrangia uma área piriforme de cerca de 900 km^2.

De modo geral, a parte central dessa região acha-se coberta de depósitos expostos de lava, com profundas fissuras e buracos, o que deixa pouca terra própria para o cultivo de outras coisas que não vinhedos. Trata-se duma região inculta, inóspita e agourenta, conhecida atualmente pelo nome árabe de el Leja (que significa "o Refúgio"), pois proporciona esconderijos adequados para foragidos da justiça.

A julgar pelas ruínas de suas cidades antigas, houve época em que a população de Traconítis era bem maior do que na atualidade. A ausência de madeira na construção dessas cidades indica que mesmo no passado essa região provavelmente se achava tão destituída de florestas quanto hoje. Chuvas em quantidade suficiente e a presença de fontes tornam possível a criação de ovelhas e cabras.

Traconítis é mencionada só uma vez na Bíblia, embora Estrabão e Josefo façam diversas referências a esta região. Sabe-se, por tais fontes seculares, que o imperador romano, Augusto, incluiu Traconítis no território do reino dado a Herodes, o Grande. Ao morrer Herodes, seu filho, Filipe, recebeu Traconítis como parte de sua tetrarquia, sobre a qual governou até a morte.

TRADIÇÃO. Informações, doutrinas ou costumes transmitidos dos pais para os filhos ou que se tornaram o modo estabelecido de pensar ou de agir. A palavra grega pa·rá·do·sis significa, literalmente, "coisa entregue em adição" e, portanto, "o que é transmitido pela palavra oral ou por escrito". (1Co 11:2, Int) Esta palavra, conforme usada nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, aplica-se a tradições que eram aspectos apropriados ou aceitáveis da adoração verdadeira, bem como a aspectos errados, ou que eram seguidos ou considerados duma forma que os tornavam prejudiciais e objetáveis.

Ao longo dos séculos, os judeus adotaram muitas tradições. Estas incluíam maneiras de vestir-se e de cuidar de assuntos sociais, tais como casamentos e enterros. (Jo 2:1, 2; 19:40) Também, alguns aspectos da adoração judaica no primeiro século EC eram costumeiros ou tradicionais, como o uso de vinho na refeição pascoal e a celebração da rededicação do templo. (Lu 22:14-18; Jo 10:22) Jesus e seus apóstolos não objetaram a isto, embora soubessem que a Lei não exigia tais coisas. Quando a sinagoga se tornou um lugar comum para a adoração judaica, era costumeiro ou tradicional adorar ali todo sábado. Lucas diz que Jesus também comparecia, "segundo o seu costume". — Lu 4:16.

Tradições Desaprovadas. Os líderes religiosos judaicos, porém, haviam acrescentado muitas tradições verbais à Palavra escrita, por eles consideradas indispensáveis à adoração verdadeira. Paulo (Saulo), como fariseu e antes de sua conversão ao cristianismo, era incomumente zeloso em seguir as tradições do judaísmo. Estas, naturalmente, incluíam tanto as não objetáveis como as ruins. Mas, por seguir como se fossem "doutrinas os mandados de homens", ele foi levado a tornar-se perseguidor dos cristãos. (Mt 15:9) Por exemplo, eles 'não comiam sem lavar as mãos até os cotovelos, apegando-se à tradição dos homens dos tempos anteriores'. (Mr 7:3) Entre aqueles homens, este costume não era seguido para fins higiênicos, mas era um ritual cerimonioso que supostamente tinha mérito religioso. (Veja LAVAR AS MÃOS.) Cristo mostrou que eles não tinham nenhuma base para criticar seus discípulos por não seguirem esses e outros desnecessários "mandados de homens". (Mt 15:1, 2, 7-11; Mr 7:4-8; Is 29:13) Ademais, por causa de sua tradição a respeito de "corbã" (uma dádiva dedicada a Deus), os líderes religiosos haviam invalidado a Palavra de Deus, infringindo o mandamento de Deus. — Êx 20:12; 21:17; Mt 15:3-6; Mr 7:9-15; veja CORBÃ.

Nem Jesus nem seus discípulos alguma vez citaram a tradição judaica oral para apoiar seus ensinos, mas recorriam à Palavra escrita de Deus. (Mt 4:4-10; Ro 15:4; 2Ti 3:15-17) Uma vez estabelecida a congregação cristã, a observância de tradições judaicas não bíblicas redundava numa "forma infrutífera de conduta" que os judeus haviam 'recebido por tradição de seus antepassados [gr.: pa·tro·pa·ra·dó·tou, "transmitido por pais"]'. (1Pe 1:18) Ao se tornarem cristãos, aqueles judeus abandonaram tais tradições. Quando falsos instrutores em Colossos incentivaram a que se adotasse essa forma de adoração, Paulo advertiu contra 'a filosofia e o vão engano, segundo a tradição de homens'. É evidente que ele tinha em mente em especial as tradições do judaísmo. — Col 2:8, 13-17.

Tradições Cristãs. Encarando-se a tradição no sentido de orientações transmitidas oralmente ou pelo exemplo, as informações que o apóstolo Paulo recebeu diretamente de Jesus podiam ser corretamente repassadas para as congregações cristãs como tradição cristã aceitável. Este foi o caso, por exemplo, com respeito à celebração da Refeição Noturna do Senhor. (1Co 11:2, 23) Os ensinamentos e o exemplo dos apóstolos constituíam tradição válida. Assim, Paulo, que labutara com suas próprias mãos a fim de não ser uma carga financeira para seus irmãos (At 18:3; 20:34; 1Co 9:15; 1Te 2:9), podia instar os cristãos tessalonicenses a 'se retirarem de todo irmão que andasse desordeiramente e não segundo a tradição [pa·rá·do·sin]' que haviam recebido. A pessoa que se recusasse a trabalhar obviamente não seguia o excelente exemplo ou tradição dos apóstolos. — 2Te 3:6-11.

As "tradições" necessárias à pura e imaculada adoração de Deus com o tempo foram incluídas como parte das Escrituras inspiradas. Por isso, as tradições ou preceitos transmitidos por Jesus e pelos apóstolos, e que eram vitais para a vida, não foram deixadas em forma oral, para serem distorcidas com o passar do tempo, mas foram registradas com exatidão na Bíblia, para o benefício dos cristãos que vivessem em épocas posteriores. — Jo 20:30, 31; Re 22:18.

TRADUTOR. Veja INTERPRETAÇÃO.

TRAIDOR. Aquele que trai a confiança de alguém, que é falso para com um dever ou que age traiçoeiramente contra seu país ou governante. O traidor mais infame mencionado na Bíblia foi "Judas Iscariotes, que se tornou traidor". (Lu 6:16) O substantivo grego pro·dó·tes ("traidor", derivado dum verbo que significa "emitir ou entregar; trair") é adequado para descrever Judas, porque, depois de ter sido escolhido para ser apóstolo, ele se tornou um ladrão ganancioso, praticante (Jo 12:6), e por fim traiu Jesus, entregando-o às autoridades por uma soma comparativamente pequena. (Mt 26:14-16, 25, 48, 49) O que ele fez não foi abandonar temporariamente a Cristo, como seria o caso se tivesse fugido do que parecia ser uma situação perigosa (Mr 14:50), mas foi trair deliberadamente Jesus aos que procuravam matá-lo.

Os líderes religiosos judeus foram acertadamente denominados "traidores e assassinos", porque contrataram o traiçoeiro Judas, entregaram pessoalmente seu compatriota, Cristo, aos romanos, e então, num atentado à justiça, opuseram-se à declaração da inocência de Jesus e exigiram sua morte. — Jo 18:28–19:16; At 3:13-15; 7:52.

Outro caso notável de traição mencionado na Bíblia é o de Aitofel. Embora tivesse sido o conselheiro de confiança do Rei Davi, juntou-se à insurreição de Absalão. (2Sa 15:12, 31; 16:20-23; compare isso com Sal 55:20, 21.) Deus frustrou o conselho do traiçoeiro Aitofel, o que o levou ao suicídio. (2Sa 17:23) É evidente que houve outros casos de pessoas que se voltaram contra Davi. Várias traduções modernas da Bíblia vertem a forma plural participial hebraica de ba·ghádh (que significa "lidar traiçoeiramente") por "traidores", no Salmo 59:5(6):

"Não mostres favor a quaisquer traidores prejudiciais." (BJ, BV, NM) O cabeçalho do salmo sugere que ele se relaciona com a época em que Saul enviou homens para vigiar a casa de Davi a fim de matá-lo. (1Sa 19:11-18) De modo que os "traidores" mencionados no Salmo 59:5(6) talvez fossem associados de Davi que desertaram ou que estavam dispostos a traí-lo naquela hora de aflição. Ou, visto que as palavras precedentes solicitam que Deus volte sua atenção para "todas as nações", o termo "traidores" talvez se referisse a todos os opositores da vontade de Deus, quer dentro, quer fora de Israel.

A profecia em 2 Timóteo 3:1-5 sobre as condições que existiriam nos "últimos dias" indica que haveria muitos traidores (gr.: pro·dó·tai). Os cristãos foram aconselhados a 'se afastar' de tais pessoas, como convém a quem se esforça para ser leal e honesto em todas as coisas. — 1Te 2:10; He 13:18.

TRANSFIGURAÇÃO. Acontecimento miraculoso testemunhado por Pedro, Tiago e João, em que o "rosto [de Jesus] brilhava como o sol, e a sua roupagem exterior tornou-se brilhante como a luz". (Mt 17:1-9; Mr 9:2-10; Lu 9:28-36) Marcos diz que nessa ocasião a roupagem exterior de Jesus tornou-se "muito mais branca do que qualquer lavadeiro na terra poderia alvejar", e Lucas diz que "a aparência do seu rosto tornou-se diferente". A transfiguração ocorreu num monte, pouco depois da Páscoa de 32 EC, bem antes da última viagem de Jesus a Jerusalém.

Desde o quarto século EC, o monte Tabor tem sido considerado o local da transfiguração. Mas isso parece improvável. Logo antes da transfiguração, Jesus e seus discípulos estavam na região de Cesareia de Filipe, a atual aldeia de Bânias. (Mr 8:27) O monte Tabor fica a cerca de 70 km a SSO de Cesareia de Filipe. (Veja TABOR N.º 1.) Assim, parece improvável que Cristo e os apóstolos tenham escolhido ir para o "alto monte" onde ocorreu a transfiguração depois de terem saído da região onde estavam. — Mr 9:2.

Já o monte Hermom fica a apenas 25 km a NE de Cesareia de Filipe. E esse monte pode ser considerado "um alto monte" já que fica a 2.814 m acima do nível do mar. (Mt 17:1) Assim, a transfiguração deve ter acontecido em algum contraforte do monte Hermom. Embora essa seja a opinião de muitos estudiosos modernos, a Bíblia não fala nada sobre isso, o que deixa a localização da transfiguração algo incerto.

A transfiguração provavelmente se deu à noite, pois os apóstolos "estavam premidos de sono". (Lu 9:32) À noite esse acontecimento seria mais vívido, e eles realmente passaram a noite no monte, porque só desceram de lá no dia seguinte. (Lu 9:37) No entanto, a Bíblia não diz exatamente quanto tempo durou a transfiguração.

Antes de subirem ao monte, Cristo perguntara a todos os seus discípulos: "Quem dizem os homens que eu sou?", ao que Pedro respondeu: "Tu és o Cristo." Nisto, Jesus contou-lhes que morreria e seria ressuscitado (Mr 8:27-31), embora também tivesse prometido que alguns de seus discípulos 'não provariam absolutamente a morte' até que primeiro vissem "o Filho do homem vir no seu reino", ou "o reino de Deus já vindo em poder". (Mt 16:28; Mr 9:1) Esta promessa cumpriu-se "seis dias depois" (ou "oito", de acordo com Lucas, que pelo visto inclui o dia da promessa e o dia do cumprimento), quando Pedro, Tiago e João acompanharam Jesus a um "alto monte" (Mt 17:1; Mr 9:2; Lu 9:28), onde Jesus, enquanto orava, foi transfigurado diante deles.

Na transfiguração de Jesus, Moisés e Elias também apareceram "com glória". (Lu 9:30, 31; Mt 17:3; Mr 9:4) Eles falaram sobre a "partida [uma forma da palavra grega é·xo·dos], que [Cristo] estava destinado a cumprir em Jerusalém". (Lu 9:31) Este é·xo·dos, êxodo ou partida, evidentemente envolvia tanto a morte de Cristo como sua subsequente ressurreição para a vida espiritual.

Alguns críticos se têm empenhado em classificar a transfiguração como simples sonho. No entanto, como é óbvio, Pedro, Tiago e João não teriam tido exatamente o mesmo sonho. O próprio Jesus chamou o ocorrido de "visão" (Mt 17:9), não de mera ilusão. Cristo estava realmente ali, embora Moisés e Elias, que estavam mortos, não estivessem literalmente presentes. Eles estavam representados na visão. A palavra grega usada para "visão", em Mateus 17:9, é hó·ra·ma, também traduzida 'o que se vê'. (At 7:31) Ela não denota irrealidade, como se o ocorrido fosse fruto da imaginação dos observadores. Estes tampouco eram insensíveis ao que ocorria, pois estavam completamente despertos quando foram testemunhas da transfiguração. Eles realmente viram e ouviram com seus olhos e ouvidos literais o que aconteceu naquele momento. — Lu 9:32.

À medida que Moisés e Elias se afastavam de Jesus, Pedro, "não se dando conta do que estava dizendo", sugeriu que se armassem três tendas, uma para Jesus, outra para Moisés e outra para Elias. (Lu 9:33) Mas, enquanto o apóstolo falava, formou-se uma nuvem (Lu 9:34), o que evidentemente simbolizava (como no caso da tenda de reunião no ermo)

a presença de Jeová no monte da transfiguração. (Êx 40:34-38) Da nuvem saiu a voz de Jeová, dizendo: "Este é meu Filho, aquele que foi escolhido. Escutai-o." (Lu 9:35) Anos depois, com referência à transfiguração, Pedro identificou a voz celestial como a de "Deus, o Pai". (2Pe 1:17, 18) Embora no passado Deus tivesse falado por meio dos profetas, ele indicava que daquele momento em diante passaria a fazê-lo mediante seu Filho. — Gál 3:24; He 1:1-3.

O apóstolo Pedro considerava a transfiguração uma maravilhosa confirmação da palavra profética e, por ter sido testemunha ocular da magnificência de Cristo, pôde inteirar seus leitores 'do poder e da presença de nosso Senhor Jesus Cristo'. (2Pe 1:16, 19) O apóstolo vira o cumprimento da promessa de Cristo de que alguns de seus seguidores 'não provariam a morte, até que primeiro vissem o reino de Deus já vindo em poder'. (Mr 9:1) O apóstolo João talvez também tenha aludido à transfiguração, em João 1:14.

Jesus disse aos três apóstolos: "A ninguém conteis esta visão, até que o Filho do homem seja levantado dentre os mortos." (Mt 17:9) Naquela ocasião, eles realmente se refrearam de contar o que viram a quem quer que fosse, pelo visto até mesmo aos outros apóstolos. (Lu 9:36) Ao descerem do monte, os três apóstolos discutiram entre si o que Jesus queria dizer com "este levantamento dentre os mortos". (Mr 9:10) Um ensino religioso judaico da época era que Elias tinha de aparecer antes da ressurreição dos mortos, que inauguraria o reinado do Messias. De modo que os apóstolos indagaram: "Por que dizem então os escribas que Elias tem de vir primeiro?" Jesus assegurou-lhes de que Elias já havia vindo, e eles perceberam que ele falava de João, o Batizador. — Mt 17:10-13.

A transfiguração, segundo parece, serviu para fortalecer a Cristo para seus sofrimentos e morte, ao passo que também confortou seus seguidores e robusteceu-lhes a fé. Mostrou que Jesus tinha a aprovação de Deus e foi uma antevisão de sua glória e poder régio no futuro. Pressagiava a presença de Cristo, quando sua autoridade régia seria completa.

TRANSGRESSÃO. Veja PECADO.

TRANSPORTE. Meio de locomoção de um lugar para outro. As antigas formas e veículos de transporte variavam segundo a situação econômica dos viajantes e seu destino, ou conforme os lugares para os quais se levavam artigos.

A habilidade do camelo de subsistir das plantas comuns do deserto e de passar sem água por períodos prolongados tornava-o um animal ideal para viagens em regiões áridas. Os camelos serviam tanto para montaria como para transporte de mercadorias de um lugar para outro. (Gên 37:25-28; Jz 6:3-5; 7:12; 1Rs 10:2) Outros animais usados para montaria ou como bestas de carga eram o jumento (Jos 15:18; Jz 5:10; 10:4; 12:14; 1Sa 25:42; Is 30:6), a mula (1Rs 1:33) e o cavalo (1Rs 4:26; At 23:23, 24, 31-33). Os navios eram muito usados. (2Cr 9:21; Ez 27:9; Jon 1:3; At 20:13-15; 27:1-44) Utilizavam-se carroças para o transporte tanto de mercadorias como de pessoas. (Gên 46:5; Núm 7:1-9) Carros ou liteiras, às vezes belamente adornadas, serviam como meio costumeiro de transporte para a realeza ou para homens de alta posição. (2Rs 10:15; Cân 3:6-10; At 8:26-31) E as pessoas comuns geralmente viajavam a pé. — Lu 24:13-15; veja CARRO; CARROÇA; COMUNICAÇÃO; ESTRADAS; LITEIRA; NAVIO.

TREPADEIRA. Veja VIDEIRA.

TRÊS TAVERNAS. Pousada, cuja existência acha-se atestada em escritos antigos, situada na Via Ápia, a bem conhecida rodovia que ia de Roma a Brundisium, via Cápua. É possível que o local tenha obtido seu nome de três estalagens em que os viajantes podiam parar para descansar e reparar as forças. Três Tavernas ficava a 49 km ao SE de Roma. A Feira de Ápio ficava a uns 15 km mais adiante na Via Ápia. Tudo o que resta hoje no local são algumas ruínas romanas. Tendo ouvido falar da vinda de Paulo, parte da delegação de cristãos de Roma esperou em Três Tavernas, ao passo que os demais foram até a Feira de Ápio. — At 28:13-15.

TRIBO. Grupo de pessoas, composto de certo número de famílias ou clãs, unidos pela raça ou pelos costumes, sob os mesmos líderes.

As duas palavras hebraicas frequentemente traduzidas "tribo" (mat·téh e shé·vet) significam "bastão" ou "vara". (Êx 7:12; Pr 13:24) Pelo visto, estas palavras passaram a significar "tribo" no sentido de um grupo de pessoas lideradas por um chefe ou por maiorais que portavam um cetro ou bastão. (Veja Núm 17:2-6.) Na maioria dos casos, onde o contexto mostra que qualquer destas palavras tem o sentido de "tribo", ela é usada com respeito a uma das tribos de Israel, tal como a "tribo [mat·téh] de Gade", ou a "tribo [shé·vet] dos levitas". (Jos 13:24, 33) No entanto, a 'tribo que Deus resgatou como sua herança', mencionada no Salmo 74:2, refere-se evidentemente à inteira nação de Israel, falando-se dela como "tribo" ou povo distinto de outras nações e povos. E o termo "tribo", em Números 4:18, parece ser usado em sentido mais restrito, conforme aplicado aos coatitas, que eram uma subdivisão da tribo de Levi. As "tribos" egípcias, de Isaías 19:13, devem aplicar-se a certas categorias de pessoas, quer de acordo com a região, quer com a casta ou com outra coisa.

O termo grego fy·lé (traduzido "tribo") refere-se a um grupo de pessoas unidas por ascendência comum e também a uma subdivisão dele, isto é, um clã ou tribo. Esta palavra muitas vezes é usada nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs com respeito às tribos da nação de Israel. (At 13:21; Ro 11:1; Fil 3:5; He 7:13, 14; Re 5:5) Em expressões como "dentre toda tribo, e língua, e povo, e nação", o termo "tribo" parece significar um grupo de pessoas aparentadas por ascendência comum. (Re 5:9) Tais expressões, portanto, são de total abrangência, referindo-se a todas as pessoas, quer encaradas de acordo com as tribos dos indivíduos aparentados entre si, quer como parte de grupos linguísticos, grandes segmentos da humanidade, ou divisões políticas. (Re 7:9; 11:9; 13:7; 14:6) Além disto, fy·lé aparece na expressão "todas as tribos da terra", em Revelação (Apocalipse) 1:7, o que evidentemente significa todas as pessoas da terra, pois o versículo também diz que "todo olho o verá". — Compare com Mt 24:30.

Tribos de Israel. O arranjo tribal em Israel baseava-se na descendência dos 12 filhos de Jacó. (Gên 29:32–30:24; 35:16-18) Estes "doze chefes de família [gr.: dó·de·ka pa·tri·ár·khas]" produziram "as doze tribos de Israel". (Gên 49:1-28; At 7:8) No entanto, Jacó abençoou os dois filhos de José, Manassés, o mais velho, e Efraim, o mais novo, e disse: "Efraim e Manassés tornar-se-ão meus, iguais a [seus próprios filhos] Rubem e Simeão." (Gên 48:5, 13-20) Quando as várias tribos receberam sua herança de terras na Terra da Promessa (Jos 13-19), não havia uma "tribo" de José. Em vez disso, "os filhos de José", Manassés e Efraim, foram contados como tribos distintas em Israel. (Veja TERMO; MAPA, Vol. 1, p. 744.) Conforme arranjado por Jeová, porém, isto não aumentou para 13 o número de tribos de Israel que receberam uma herança, pois os levitas não receberam uma herança de terra. Jeová escolhera "a tribo de Levi" (Núm 1:49) no lugar dos primogênitos das outras tribos para ministrar no santuário. (Êx 13:1, 2; Núm 3:6-13, 41; De 10:8, 9; 18:1; veja LEVITAS.) Consequentemente, havia 12 tribos não levitas em Israel. — Jos 3:12, 13; Jz 19:29; 1Rs 11:30-32; At 26:7.

Quando Moisés abençoou as tribos (De 33:6-24), Simeão não foi mencionado por nome, talvez porque a tribo estava muito reduzida em tamanho e seu quinhão de terra seria incluído no território de Judá. Na visão de Ezequiel sobre a contribuição sagrada e as 12 tribos, as tribos alistadas são as mesmas que receberam uma herança de terras conforme indicado no livro de Josué. (Ez 48:1-8, 23-28) A tribo de Levi estava localizada dentro da "contribuição sagrada", na visão de Ezequiel. — Ez 48:9-14, 22.

Estrutura tribal. Grande parte da organização dos israelitas girava em torno da estrutura tribal. Tanto a ordem de marcha como de acampamento no ermo eram de acordo com as tribos. (Núm 2:1-31; 10:5, 6, 13-28) A herança de terras fora dividida à base de tribos, e leis especiais foram formuladas para que as terras não circulassem de tribo em tribo. — Núm 36:7-9; Jos 19:51.

A divisão da nação segundo chefes de família foi levada a cabo também dentro de cada tribo. Embora a tribo fosse a divisão básica e mais importante da nação, cada tribo achava-se subdividida em grandes "famílias" (o termo "família" usado em sentido amplo) com base na descendência de chefes paternos. (Núm 3:20, 24; 34:14) Em cada "família" havia muitos grupos familiares. Este arranjo, moldado segundo a estrutura tribal, é bem ilustrado em Josué 7:16-18 e 1 Samuel 9:21; 10:20, 21.

As Tribos do Israel Espiritual. Revelação 7:4-8 divide os 144.000 membros do Israel espiritual em 12 'tribos' de 12.000 membros cada uma. (Veja ISRAEL DE DEUS.) A lista difere ligeiramente das listas dos filhos de Jacó (inclui Levi), que eram os cabeças tribais do Israel natural. (Gên 49:28) O seguinte pode ser o motivo para esta diferença:

Rubem, o primogênito de Jacó, perdeu o direito de primogenitura por causa de sua conduta errada. (Gên 49:3, 4; 1Cr 5:1, 2) José (o primogênito de Jacó com Raquel, sua segunda esposa, mas a favorita) obteve os privilégios de primogênito, incluindo o direito de ter duas partes, ou porções em Israel. (Gên 48:21, 22) Na lista de Revelação, "José" evidentemente equivale a Efraim. E Manassés representa a segunda porção de José no Israel espiritual. A tribo de Levi está alistada; para dar lugar a Levi, sem aumentar o número de tribos, não se inclui a tribo de Dã, em Revelação 7:4-8, mas pelo visto não por causa de alguma inadequabilidade da parte de Dã. A inclusão de Levi também serviria para mostrar que não há nenhuma tribo sacerdotal especial no Israel espiritual, visto que a inteira nação espiritual é um "sacerdócio real". — 1Pe 2:9.

"Julgando as Doze Tribos de Israel." Jesus disse aos apóstolos que na "recriação" eles 'estariam sentados em doze tronos, julgando as doze tribos de Israel'. (Mt 19:28; veja CRIAÇÃO [Recriação].) E expressou um pensamento similar ao fazer um pacto para um Reino com seus fiéis apóstolos. (Lu 22:28-30) Não é razoável que Jesus quisesse dizer que eles julgariam as 12 tribos do Israel espiritual, mais tarde mencionadas em Revelação, pois os apóstolos deviam fazer parte desse grupo. (Ef 2:19-22; Re 3:21) Diz-se que os "chamados para ser santos" julgam, não a eles mesmos, mas "o mundo". (1Co 1:1, 2; 6:2) Os que reinam com Cristo formam um reino de sacerdotes. (1Pe 2:9; Re 5:10) Por conseguinte, "as doze tribos de Israel", mencionadas em Mateus 19:28 e em Lucas 22:30, referem-se evidentemente ao "mundo" da humanidade, que não faz parte da classe régia e sacerdotal, e a quem os que estão sentados em tronos celestiais julgarão. — Re 20:4.

TRIBULAÇÃO. A palavra grega thlí·psis, em geral traduzida "tribulação", significa basicamente angústia, aflição ou sofrimento resultante de pressões causadas pelas circunstâncias. É usada com referência à aflição relacionada com o parto (Jo 16:21), à perseguição (Mt 24:9; At 11:19; 20:23; 2Co 1:8; He 10:33; Re 1:9), ao encarceramento (Re 2:10), à pobreza e a outras adversidades comuns aos órfãos e às viúvas (Tg 1:27), à fome (At 7:11), e à punição pela transgressão (Ro 2:9; Re 2:22). A "tribulação" mencionada em 2 Coríntios 2:4, pelo visto, refere-se à angústia sofrida pelo apóstolo Paulo devido à má conduta dos cristãos em Corinto e porque ele teve de corrigi-los com severidade.

O Casamento Resulta em Tribulação na Carne. Ao recomendar o estado de solteiro como o melhor proceder na vida, o apóstolo Paulo comentou: "Porém, mesmo se te casares, não cometes pecado. . . . No entanto, os que o fizerem, terão tribulação na sua carne." (1Co 7:28) O casamento é acompanhado de certas ansiedades e preocupações em relação ao marido, à esposa e aos filhos. (1Co 7:32-35) A doença pode resultar em cargas e estresse sobre a família. Para os cristãos, pode surgir perseguição; famílias podem até mesmo ser expulsas de sua casa. O pai talvez verifique ser difícil prover as necessidades básicas da vida para a família. Pais ou filhos podem ser separados pelo encarceramento, talvez sofram tortura às mãos de perseguidores, ou até mesmo percam a vida.

Fidelidade em Tribulação. A tribulação, na forma de perseguição, pode ter efeito debilitante sobre a fé. Cristo Jesus, em sua ilustração do semeador, indicou que certas pessoas realmente tropeçariam por causa de tribulação ou perseguição. (Mt 13:21; Mr 4:17) Cônscio deste perigo, o apóstolo Paulo mostrava-se preocupadíssimo com a recém-formada congregação de Tessalônica. Os associados com essa congregação haviam abraçado o cristianismo sob muita tribulação (1Te 1:6; compare com At 17:1, 5-10) e continuavam a enfrentá-la. Portanto, o apóstolo enviou Timóteo para fortalecê-los e encorajá-los, "para que ninguém ficasse vacilante por causa destas tribulações". (1Te 3:1-3, 5) Quando Timóteo voltou com as notícias de que os tessalonicenses haviam permanecido fiéis na fé, Paulo sentiu-se muito confortado. (1Te 3:6, 7) Os esforços do apóstolo em prepará-los para esperar tribulação sem dúvida também ajudaram os tessalonicenses a continuar a ser fiéis servos de Deus. — 1Te 3:4; compare com Jo 16:33; At 14:22.

Embora a tribulação seja desagradável, o cristão pode exultar enquanto a suporta, visto que sabe que a fidelidade tem a aprovação de Deus e que no fim levará à realização de sua grandiosa esperança. (Ro 5:3-5; 12:12) A tribulação em si mesma é apenas momentânea e leve em comparação com a glória eterna a ser obtida por quem permanecer fiel. (2Co 4:17, 18) O cristão também pode ficar certo de que o amor leal de Deus jamais vacilará, seja qual for a tribulação que sobrevenha ao crente fiel. — Ro 8:35-39.

Escrevendo aos coríntios, o apóstolo Paulo indicou ainda outros fatores que ajudariam o cristão a suportar a tribulação. Ele disse: "Bendito seja o Deus . . . de todo o consolo, que nos consola em toda a nossa tribulação, para que possamos consolar os que estiverem em qualquer sorte de tribulação, por intermédio do consolo com que nós mesmos estamos sendo consolados por Deus. . . . Ora, quer estejamos em tribulação, é para o vosso consolo e salvação, quer estejamos sendo consolados, é para o vosso consolo que opera para vos fazer aturar os mesmos sofrimentos que nós também padecemos." (2Co 1:3-6) As preciosas promessas de Deus, a ajuda de seu espírito santo e sua resposta às orações daqueles que sofrem tribulação são fonte de conforto para os cristãos. À base de sua própria experiência, podem encorajar e confortar a ainda outras pessoas; seu exemplo de fidelidade e suas expressões de convicção inspiram outros cristãos a igualmente permanecerem fiéis.

O próprio Paulo sentia apreço pelo conforto que recebia dos concrentes enquanto suportava tribulações. Ele elogiou os cristãos filipenses por isto: "Agistes bem em vos tornardes parceiros meus na minha tribulação." (Fil 4:14) Por terem genuíno interesse por Paulo, que estava detido em Roma, eles o ajudaram a suportar sua tribulação, auxiliando-o materialmente. — Fil 4:15-20.

Há ocasiões, porém, em que certas pessoas ficam temerosas por causa da tribulação sofrida por outros. Com isto em mente, Paulo incentivou os cristãos efésios: "Peço-vos que não desistais por causa dessas minhas tribulações em vosso benefício, pois estas significam glória para vós." (Ef 3:13) As perseguições ou tribulações sofridas por Paulo resultaram de seu ministério em favor dos efésios e de outros. Por este motivo, ele podia falar sobre elas como tribulações 'em benefício deles'. Sua perseverança fiel sob tais tribulações significava "glória" para os cristãos efésios, pois demonstrava que valia a pena perseverar por aquilo que possuíam como cristãos (incluindo as promessas seguras de Deus e seu precioso relacionamento com Jeová Deus e seu Filho, Cristo Jesus). (Compare com Col 1:24.) Caso Paulo, como apóstolo, tivesse desistido, isto teria significado desonra para a congregação.

Outros poderiam ter tropeçado. — Compare com 2Co 6:3, 4.

A "Grande Tribulação". Ao responder à pergunta de seus discípulos a respeito do sinal de sua presença e da terminação do sistema de coisas, Jesus mencionou uma "grande tribulação, tal como nunca ocorreu desde o princípio do mundo até agora, não, nem tampouco ocorrerá de novo". (Mt 24:3, 21) Como revela uma comparação de Mateus 24:15-22 com Lucas 21:20-24, isto se referia inicialmente a uma tribulação que adviria a Jerusalém. O cumprimento se deu em 70 EC, quando a cidade foi sitiada pelos exércitos romanos sob o general Tito. Isto resultou em grave fome e grande perda de vidas. O historiador judeu Josefo relata que 1.100.000 judeus morreram ou foram mortos, ao passo que 97.000 sobreviveram e foram conduzidos ao cativeiro. O templo foi completamente destruído. Contrário à vontade do comandante romano Tito, os soldados romanos incendiaram o templo. De acordo com Josefo, isso aconteceu no mesmo mês e no mesmo dia em que os babilônios queimaram o antigo templo neste local. (The Jewish War [A Guerra Judaica], VI, 249-270 [iv, 5-8], 420 [ix, 3]; 2Re 25:8, 9) O templo destruído pelos romanos nunca mais foi reconstruído. Uma "grande tribulação" como essa não ocorreu novamente nem se repetiu em Jerusalém. No entanto, a evidência bíblica indica que a tribulação que sobreveio a Jerusalém, em 70 EC, apontou para uma tribulação muito maior que afetará todas as nações.

Jesus continuou sua profecia descrevendo eventos que ocorreriam durante os séculos após a destruição de Jerusalém. (Mt 24:23-28; Mr 13:21-23) Em Mateus 24:29, ele acrescentou que "imediatamente depois da tribulação daqueles dias" haveria amedrontadores fenômenos celestiais. E em Marcos 13:24, 25, Jesus diz que esses fenômenos apareceriam "naqueles dias, depois dessa tribulação". (Veja também Lu 21:25, 26.) A que tribulação Jesus se referia?

Alguns comentaristas da Bíblia raciocinaram que se trata da tribulação que sobreveio a Jerusalém em 70 EC, embora compreendessem também que os eventos descritos a seguir evidentemente aconteceriam em um momento que, do ponto de vista humano, estava distante. Eles raciocinaram que a expressão "imediatamente depois" envolvia a perspectiva de Deus sobre o tempo que isso levaria ou que a certeza daquilo que estava para acontecer foi expressa de uma forma como se os eventos acontecessem imediatamente diante do leitor.

Por outro lado, visto que a profecia em Mateus 24:4-22 (também em Mr 13:5-20 e Lu 21:8-24) tem duplo cumprimento, será que a "tribulação" mencionada em Mateus 24:29 e Marcos 13:24 seria a "tribulação" que ocorre durante o segundo e último cumprimento do que foi predito em Mateus 24:21 e Marcos 13:19? De modo geral, visto à luz da Bíblia, parece que sim. Será que as expressões usadas no texto grego permitem essa conclusão? Sim. Quando Mateus 24:29 se refere 'àqueles dias' e quando Marcos 13:24 menciona 'àquela tribulação' e 'àqueles dias', a gramática grega permite tal entendimento. Parece que a profecia de Jesus está dizendo que após o início da tribulação global, haverá fenômenos marcantes (como representado pelo sol e a lua sendo escurecidos, as estrelas caindo e os poderes do céu sendo abalados), bem como o cumprimento do "sinal do Filho do homem".

Cerca de três décadas depois da destruição de Jerusalém e com referência a uma grande multidão de pessoas de todas as nações, tribos e povos, o apóstolo João foi informado: "Estes são os que saem da grande tribulação." (Re 7:13, 14) O fato de os duma grande multidão 'sair da grande tribulação' mostra que eles sobrevivem a ela. Isto é confirmado por uma expressão similar usada em Atos 7:9, 10: "Deus estava com [José] e o livrou de todas as suas tribulações." Ser José livrado de todas as suas tribulações significava, não só que conseguira suportá-las, mas também que tinha sobrevivido às aflições pelas quais passara.

É digno de nota que o apóstolo Paulo mencionou como tribulação a execução do julgamento de Deus nos ímpios. Ele escreveu: "Isto toma em conta que é justo da parte de Deus pagar de volta tribulação aos que vos causam tribulação, mas, a vós, os que sofreis tribulação, alívio junto conosco, por ocasião da revelação do Senhor Jesus desde o céu, com os seus anjos poderosos, em fogo chamejante, ao trazer vingança sobre os que não conhecem a Deus e os que não obedecem às boas novas acerca de nosso Senhor Jesus." (2Te 1:6-8) O livro de Revelação (Apocalipse) mostra que "Babilônia, a Grande", e a "fera" têm trazido tribulação sobre os santos de Deus. (Re 13:3-10; 17:5, 6) Portanto, conclui-se logicamente disto que a tribulação que sobrevirá a "Babilônia, a Grande", e à "fera" está incluída na "grande tribulação". — Re 18:20; 19:11-21.

TRIBUNA DE JULGAMENTO. Veja CADEIRA DE JUIZ.

TRIBUNAL. Corte ou fórum de justiça. Esta palavra aparece em algumas traduções da Bíblia em 1 Coríntios 4:3, onde Paulo diz: "Para mim é um assunto muito trivial o de eu ser examinado por vós ou por um tribunal humano [gr.: an·thro·pí·nes he·mé·ras]." A expressão grega significa literalmente "dia humano", e se entende que se refere a um dia marcado, ou dia marcado por um juiz humano para um julgamento ou para proferir uma sentença.

Paulo reconhecia que homens como Apolo, Cefas e ele próprio pertenciam em certo sentido à congregação coríntia, ou eram servos dela. (1Co 3:21, 22) No entanto, alguns membros daquela congregação criticavam e julgavam Paulo, atitude esta que se originava do sectarismo; da carnalidade deles, em vez da espiritualidade; de se voltarem para homens, em vez de para Cristo. (1Co 9:1-4) Paulo defendeu habilmente seu ministério (1Co 9:5-27), delineando a regra ou conceito geral de que o cristão não se devia preocupar primariamente com o julgamento de homens, quer pelos coríntios, quer por algum tribunal humano, num dia marcado. Em vez disso, Paulo preocupava-se com o futuro dia de julgamento ou de avaliação por parte de Deus (mediante Jesus). Deus é que conferira a Paulo o mordomado ao qual tinha de mostrar-se fiel. — 1Co 1:8; 4:2-5; He 4:13.

TRIBUNAL DE JUSTIÇA. Jeová Deus, como Criador do universo, detém a soberania suprema. Ele é para o universo o que reconheceu a antiga nação de Israel, a saber, Juiz, Legislador e Rei. (Is 33:22) O chefe de família, Abraão, reconheceu-o qual "Juiz de toda a terra". (Gên 18:25) Jeová retrata-se como Juiz Supremo numa causa jurídica contra Israel (Miq 6:2), também numa causa jurídica a favor do Seu povo e contra as nações. (Is 34:8) Ele convoca seu povo quais testemunhas numa causa relacionada com um desafio levantado contra sua Divindade por adoradores de deuses falsos. — Is 43:9-12.

Na Sociedade Patriarcal. Após o Dilúvio, Noé emergiu qual chefe de família ou patriarca, e Deus fez um pacto com ele e seus filhos como representantes da raça humana. (Gên 9:12-16) Noé também recebeu leis básicas além das que Deus transmitira anteriormente. (Gên 9:3-6) Como patriarca, Noé tomou decisões que não afetaram apenas sua família imediata, mas também seus filhos casados e a descendência deles. — Gên 9:20-27.

O chefe de família era o juiz da família, que incluía os escravos e todos que viviam sob o teto do chefe de família, assim como Jeová Deus é o grande Chefe de família e Juiz. (Gên 38:24) Disputas entre as famílias eram solucionadas entre os chefes de família, quando era possível resolvê-las pacificamente.

Jacó atuou como juiz para os de sua casa, quando Labão levantou acusações de que alguém do acampamento de Jacó havia roubado seus terafins. Jacó disse: "Não viva aquele com quem achares os teus deuses." (Gên 31:32) Jacó, porém, não sabia que Raquel os pegara, e Labão não os encontrou, de modo que Raquel não foi acusada. Quando os irmãos de José o venderam ao Egito e apresentaram sua roupa, que havia sido ensopada de sangue, para dar a impressão de que ele fora morto por uma fera, Jacó atuou como juiz, examinou a evidência e tomou uma decisão judicial: "José está certamente dilacerado!" (Gên 37:33) Judá atuou como juiz ao saber que Tamar estava grávida, sentenciando-a à morte. Mas, ao ficar sabendo que ela o levara a realizar o que ele legalmente deveria ter mandado seu filho Selá fazer, ele declarou que Tamar era mais justa do que ele mesmo. — Gên 38:24-26.

Entre os adoradores do verdadeiro Deus, Jeová sempre foi reconhecido como Juiz Supremo. O chefe de família, na qualidade de juiz, era considerado responsável perante Deus, que atuou, ele mesmo, como juiz nas causas concernentes a Adão e Eva (Gên 3:8-24); a Caim (Gên 4:9-15); à humanidade na época do Dilúvio (Gên 6:1-3, 11-13, 17-21); aos construtores da Torre de Babel (Gên 11:1-9); a Sodoma e Gomorra (Gên 18:20-33); e a Abimeleque (Gên 20:3-7).

Sob a Lei. Com o êxodo dos israelitas do Egito, Moisés, como representante de Jeová, tornou-se juiz. De início, ele tentava cuidar de todos os casos, tão numerosos que ele ficava ocupado desde a manhã até a noitinha. Seguindo o conselho de Jetro, Moisés nomeou homens capazes como chefes de mil, de cem, de cinquenta e de dez. (Êx 18:13-26) Isto não parece significar que havia um juiz especificamente nomeado para cada sete ou oito varões vigorosos. Em vez disto, a nação estava organizada com chefes autorizados para cuidar de causas menores, quando necessário. Mas qualquer coisa incomumente complicada ou difícil, ou um assunto de importância nacional, devia ser levada a Moisés ou ao santuário perante os sacerdotes.

As questões difíceis de julgar incluíam as seguintes: suspeita do marido sobre a castidade da esposa (Núm 5:11-31), casos de derramamento de sangue, em que tivesse havido disputas (De 17:8, 9), e certos casos em que se levantasse uma acusação de revolta contra um homem, mas em que a evidência não fosse clara ou que fosse suspeita (De 19:15-20). Os sacerdotes oficiavam em casos não solucionados de assassinato. — De 21:1-9.

Não havia cláusulas que previssem uma apelação de um tribunal inferior para um superior, mas se os chefes de dez não conseguissem resolver determinada causa, podiam encaminhá-la aos chefes de cinquenta, e assim por diante, ou diretamente ao santuário ou a Moisés. — Êx 18:26; De 1:17; 17:8-11.

Os homens escolhidos como juízes deviam ser homens capazes, fidedignos, tementes a Jeová, que odiassem o lucro injusto. (Êx 18:21) Em geral eram chefes de família ou cabeças tribais, anciãos da cidade em que atuavam quais juízes. Os levitas, postos à parte por Jeová como instrutores especiais da Lei, também serviam de forma destacada como juízes. — De 1:15.

Muitas são as admoestações contra perverter o julgamento, aceitar suborno, ou ser parcial. (Êx 23:6-8; De 1:16, 17; 16:19; Pr 17:23; 24:23; 28:21; 29:4) Não se devia favorecer o pobre só por ser pobre, nem conceder vantagens ao rico em detrimento do pobre. (Le 19:15) Os residentes forasteiros não deviam ser tratados injustamente e seus direitos tinham de ser levados em consideração. Os juízes não deviam oprimir essas pessoas, nem a viúvas e órfãos, que pareciam não ter protetor, pois Jeová era seu Juiz e Protetor paternal. (Le 19:33, 34; Êx 22:21; 23:9; De 10:18; 24:17, 18; 27:19; Sal 68:5) Concordemente, exigia-se dos residentes forasteiros que respeitassem a lei do país. (Le 18:26) Mas esses estatutos e conselhos de Jeová vieram a ser desconsiderados pelos príncipes e pelos juízes em Israel, e esse descaso foi um dos motivos de Deus julgar adversamente a nação. — Is 1:23; Ez 22:12; 1Sa 8:3; Sal 26:10; Am 5:12.

Visto que deviam ser homens retos, que julgassem segundo a lei de Jeová, os juízes representavam a Jeová. Portanto, comparecer perante os juízes equivalia, como se considerava, a comparecer perante Jeová. (De 1:17; 19:17; Jos 7:19; 2Cr 19:6) Na maioria dos casos, o termo "assembleia" ou "congregação" significa a assembleia geral do povo, mas, ao falar de levar causas para juízo perante a assembleia ou congregação, a Bíblia refere-se a seus membros representativos, os juízes, como em Números 35:12, 24, 25, e Mateus 18:17.

O tribunal local ficava no portão da cidade. (De 16:18; 21:19; 22:15, 24; 25:7; Ru 4:1) O termo "portão" refere-se ao espaço aberto dentro da cidade, próximo do portão. Os portões eram locais em que se lia a Lei para o povo congregado e onde se proclamavam ordenanças. (Ne 8:1-3) No portão era fácil conseguir testemunhas para uma questão cível, tal como vendas de propriedades, e assim por diante, visto que a maioria das pessoas entrava ou saía pelo portão durante o dia. Também, a publicidade que teriam os julgamentos realizados no portão tenderia a influenciar os juízes a ter cuidado e ser justos nos trâmites do julgamento e nas decisões. Evidentemente havia um local perto do portão em que os juízes podiam presidir de modo confortável. (Jó 29:7) Samuel viajava no circuito de Betel, Gilgal e Mispá, e "julgava Israel em todos estes lugares", bem como em Ramá, onde ficava sua casa. — 1Sa 7:16, 17.

Os juízes deviam ser tratados com respeito, uma vez que em sua posição representavam a Jeová. (Êx 22:28; At 23:3-5) Quando uma decisão era anunciada pelos sacerdotes, pelos levitas no santuário, ou pelo juiz que atuava naqueles dias (por exemplo, Moisés ou Samuel), seu cumprimento era obrigatório, e quem quer que se recusasse a acatá-la era morto. — De 17:8-13.

Caso um homem fosse sentenciado a ser espancado com varas, ele devia ser deitado de bruços diante do juiz e espancado em sua presença. (De 25:2) A justiça era administrada com rapidez. Os únicos casos em que a pessoa era detida por algum tempo era quando um assunto era difícil e a decisão tinha de ser recebida de Jeová. Neste caso, o acusado era mantido sob custódia até que se recebesse a decisão. (Le 24:12; Núm 15:34) A Lei não tinha cláusulas que previam a prisão. Apenas mais tarde, à medida que a nação deteriorava, e também durante a época do domínio dos gentios, é que se veio a praticar a detenção. — 2Cr 18:25, 26; Je 20:2; 29:26; Esd 7:26; At 5:19; 12:3, 4.

No Período dos Reis. Depois de o reino ser estabelecido em Israel, as causas de natureza mais difícil eram encaminhadas, quer ao rei, quer ao santuário. A Lei, em Deuteronômio 17:18, 19, exigia que o rei, ao assumir o trono, escrevesse para si uma cópia da Lei e a lesse diariamente, de modo que estivesse devidamente habilitado a julgar causas difíceis. O profeta Natã fez com que Davi julgasse a sua própria causa no caso de Bate-Seba e Urias, o hitita. (2Sa 12:1-6) Joabe astutamente enviou uma mulher tecoíta para apresentar uma causa a Davi a favor de Absalão. (2Sa 14:1-21) Antes de morrer, Davi nomeou 6.000 levitas habilitados para atuar como oficiais e juízes em Israel. (1Cr 23:4) O Rei Salomão ficou famoso por sua sabedoria em julgar. Uma causa que lhe trouxe ampla fama foi a duma prova de maternidade relativa a duas prostitutas. (1Rs 3:16-28) Jeosafá realizou uma reforma religiosa em Judá e fortaleceu o sistema judicial. — 2Cr 19:5-11.

Quem eram os membros do Sinédrio judaico?

O Sinédrio era o supremo tribunal judaico. Estava situado em Jerusalém. Este supremo tribunal constituía-se de 71 membros e era chamado de Grande Sinédrio. Na época do ministério terrestre de Jesus, os 71 membros incluíam o sumo sacerdote e outros que haviam detido o cargo de sumo sacerdote (é possível que vários destes ainda vivessem numa mesma época, pois o cargo, sob o governo romano, passara a ser ocupado por nomeação). Também incluía membros das famílias dos sumos sacerdotes, anciãos, chefes de tribos e de famílias, e escribas, homens versados na Lei. (At 4:5, 6) Tais homens eram membros das seitas dos fariseus e dos saduceus. — At 23:6.

O cabeça e presidente do Sinédrio era o sumo sacerdote, que convocava a assembleia. (At 5:17, 21, 27; 7:1; 22:5; 23:2) Caifás, o sumo sacerdote, presidiu o julgamento de Jesus, embora Jesus primeiro tenha sido levado para interrogatório perante Anás. (Mt 26:3, 57; Mr 14:53, 55, 60, 63; 15:1; Lu 22:54; Jo 18:12, 13, 19-24) Ananias era o sumo sacerdote que presidia o Sinédrio na época do julgamento de Paulo. — At 23:2.

De acordo com o Tosefta (Sanhedrin 7:1) e a Míxena (Sanhedrin 4:1), o Sinédrio se reunia desde a hora da oferta do sacrifício matinal diário até o sacrifício da noitinha. Ele não se reunia para julgar no sábado ou em dias de festa. Em casos passíveis de pena capital, o Sinédrio realizava o julgamento durante o dia, e o veredicto tinha de ser proferido ainda durante o dia. Se o veredicto fosse condenatório, tinha de ser emitido no dia seguinte. Portanto, não se podia realizar julgamentos na véspera de um sábado ou na véspera dum dia de festividade. No entanto, este procedimento foi ignorado no caso do julgamento de Jesus.

A Míxena (Sanhedrin 4:3) diz: "A disposição do Sinédrio era como a metade duma eira circular, de modo que todos pudessem ver-se. Perante eles ficavam os dois escribas dos juízes, um à direita e outro à esquerda, e eles anotavam as palavras dos que favoreciam a absolvição e as palavras dos que favoreciam a condenação." — Conforme tradução, para o inglês, de H. Danby.

Segundo a tradição judaica, o Sinédrio foi instituído por Moisés (Núm 11:16-25) e reorganizado por Esdras imediatamente após o retorno do exílio. Mas não há evidências históricas em apoio da ideia de que 70 anciãos reuniam-se como tribunal único para ouvir causas naquele tempo. Em vez disto, parece que o Sinédrio veio à existência no tempo do domínio grego na Palestina. No tempo do ministério terrestre de Jesus, o governo romano permitia que o Sinédrio tivesse grande medida de independência, concedendo-lhe autoridade civil e administrativa. Ele tinha oficiais à sua disposição, bem como poder para prender e para pôr em detenção. (Mt 26:47; At 4:1-3; 9:1, 2) Sua autoridade religiosa era reconhecida mesmo entre os judeus da Diáspora. (Veja At 9:1, 2.) No entanto, sob o domínio romano, o Sinédrio com o tempo evidentemente perdeu sua autoridade legal para executar a pena de morte, a menos que obtivesse permissão do governador (procurador) romano. (Jo 18:31) Depois da destruição de Jerusalém em 70 EC, o Sinédrio foi abolido.

Além disso, havia em Jerusalém tribunais inferiores, cada um composto de 23 membros. Segundo a Míxena (Sanhedrin 1:6), havia desses tribunais menores também em outras cidades de tamanho suficiente em toda a Palestina. O pleno número de juízes que compunham o tribunal não se reunia em todos os casos. Esse número variava de acordo com a gravidade do assunto a ser julgado e com a dificuldade em chegar a um veredito. Ademais, havia o tribunal do povoado, que consistia de três homens, e um tribunal de sete anciãos do povoado.

As sinagogas, que eram usadas primariamente para a educação, eram também usadas até certo ponto como sede de tribunais locais, às vezes chamados de 'Sinédrios locais', com o poder de aplicar as penalidades de açoites e de excomunhão. — Mt 10:17, n; 23:34; Mr 13:9; Lu 21:12; Jo 9:22; 12:42; 16:2; veja ILUSTRAÇÕES (Algumas das principais ilustrações de Jesus [21]).

Na Congregação Cristã. Embora não tenha nenhuma autoridade secular como tribunal, a congregação cristã pode agir contra membros desordeiros que precisem de disciplina espiritual, e pode até expulsá-los. Portanto, o apóstolo Paulo diz à congregação que eles, isto é, seus membros representativos, os que exercem supervisão, têm de julgar os de dentro da organização. (1Co 5:12, 13) Ao escrever às congregações e aos superintendentes, tanto Paulo como Pedro salientam que os anciãos devem manter estrita vigilância pela condição espiritual da congregação, e devem ajudar e admoestar a quem quer que esteja dando um passo insensato ou errado. (2Ti 4:2; 1Pe 5:1, 2; compare isso com Gál 6:1.) Os que causam divisões ou promovem seitas devem ser admoestados uma primeira e uma segunda vez, antes de se tomarem medidas congregacionais. (Tit 3:10, 11) Mas os que insistem em praticar o pecado devem ser removidos, expulsos da congregação. Isto é uma disciplina, que mostra aos ofensores que sua conduta pecaminosa não pode ser tolerada na congregação. (1Ti 1:20) Paulo instrui os homens na congregação que têm a responsabilidade de atuar como juízes a que se reúnam para julgar assuntos assim. (1Co 5:1-5; 6:1-5) Só devem aceitar como verídicas as acusações quando houver duas ou três testemunhas, pesando as evidências sem opiniões preconcebidas e não fazendo nada segundo tendências preconceituosas. — 1Ti 5:19, 21.

Jesus ordenou que seus discípulos, caso um pecasse contra o outro, fizessem esforços para resolver o assunto primeiro entre si, pessoalmente. Se esses esforços falhassem, e o assunto fosse de natureza séria, eles deveriam apresentá-lo à congregação para ser resolvido (isto é, aos designados a posições de responsabilidade no que concerne a dirigir a congregação). Mais tarde, Paulo admoestou os cristãos a resolver dificuldades desta forma e a não levar uns aos outros perante tribunais seculares. — Mt 18:15-17; 1Co 6:1-8; veja CAUSA JURÍDICA.

TRIBUTAÇÃO. Veja IMPOSTO.

TRIBUTO. Em geral, dinheiro ou outra compensação, tal como gado, pagos por um Estado ou um governante a uma potência estrangeira em reconhecimento de submissão, a fim de manter a paz ou para obter proteção. (Para uma consideração das palavras nas línguas originais, veja IMPOSTO.) As nações que exigiam tributo de outros povos frequentemente recebiam ouro e prata, ou produtos escassos em sua própria terra. Desta forma, fortaleciam sua posição econômica ao passo que debilitavam as nações subjugadas, apropriando-se de grande parte de seus recursos.

Davi (2Sa 8:2, 6), Salomão (Sal 72:10; compare com 1Rs 4:21; 10:23-25), Jeosafá (2Cr 17:10, 11) e Uzias (2Cr 26:8), reis de Judá, bem como Acabe, rei de Israel (2Rs 3:4, 5), receberam tributos de outros povos. No entanto, por causa de infidelidade, os israelitas não raro ficavam em posição inferior e se viam obrigados a pagar tributo. Já na época dos juízes, quando sob domínio de Eglom, rei moabita, eles pagavam tributo. (Jz 3:12-17) Em anos posteriores, tanto o reino de Judá como o reino setentrional de Israel pagaram tributo ao ficarem sob o controle de potências estrangeiras. (2Rs 17:3; 23:35) Em várias épocas, pagaram o que equivalia a uma forma de tributo ao 'comprarem' nações inimigas ou subornarem outras nações em busca de ajuda militar. — 2Rs 12:18; 15:19, 20; 18:13-16.

TRIFENA [duma raiz gr. que significa "viver em luxo"]. Mulher cristã de Roma a quem Paulo cumprimenta em sua carta e elogia por seu trabalho árduo. (Ro 16:12) Trifena e Trifosa, com quem ela é mencionada, talvez fossem irmãs carnais, pois não era incomum que os familiares tivessem nomes que se derivassem da mesma raiz, como neste caso. Ambos os nomes eram comuns entre as mulheres da família de César; mas o registro nada diz quanto a se essas duas mulheres pertenciam a essa família. — Fil 4:22.

TRIFOSA [duma raiz gr. que significa "viver em luxo"]. Mulher cristã de Roma, cumprimentada e elogiada por Paulo. — Ro 16:12; veja TRIFENA.

TRIGO. Importante cereal que há muito supre ao homem valioso item de sua alimentação e que às vezes, tanto em tempos recentes como antigamente, é vendido ao dobro ou triplo do preço da cevada. (Compare com 2Rs 7:1, 16, 18; Re 6:6.) O trigo (hebr.: hhit·táh; gr.: sí·tos), puro ou misturado com outros grãos, era comumente transformado em pão. (Êx 29:2; Ez 4:9) Este cereal também podia ser comido cru (Mt 12:1) e era transformado em sêmola pelo esmagamento dos grãos. Especialmente as espigas verdes de trigo eram preparadas por tostamento. (Le 2:14; 2Sa 17:28) O trigo era exigido como tributo de tribos ou nações derrotadas (2Cr 27:5) e figurava entre as ofertas apresentadas a Jeová. — 1Cr 23:29; Esd 6:9, 10.

A própria planta, quando nova, assemelha-se à grama e é verde vivo. O trigo maduro, porém, pode alcançar de 60 cm a 1,50 m de altura e é castanho-dourado. Suas folhas são compridas e delgadas, e o caule central termina numa espiga cheia de grãos. Uma variedade de trigo (Triticum compositum), cultivada no antigo Egito, e ainda encontrada ali, tem várias espigas em cada caule. (Compare com Gên 41:22, 23.) As variedades de trigo comumente cultivadas na Palestina nos anos mais recentes, e provavelmente também nos tempos bíblicos, têm barba, isto é, possuem pelos ásperos, espinhentos, na casca dos grãos.

Os israelitas constataram que a Palestina, em conformidade com a promessa de Deus, era uma terra de trigo e de cevada. (De 8:8; 32:14; Sal 81:16; 147:14) Não só dispunham do suficiente para si mesmos, como também conseguiam exportar grãos. (2Cr 2:8-10, 15) Nos dias de Ezequiel, produtos de Judá e de Israel, incluindo o "trigo de Minite", eram comercializados em Tiro. — Ez 27:17.

O trigo era semeado na Palestina por volta da mesma época que a cevada, no mês de bul (outubro-novembro), depois de as chuvas do início do outono terem amolecido suficientemente o solo para a aradura. (Is 28:24, 25) A colheita de trigo seguia a colheita da cevada (Ru 2:23; compare isso com Êx 9:31, 32) e relacionava-se de perto com a Festividade das Semanas, ou Pentecostes, no mês de sivã (maio-junho), época em que se apresentavam a Jeová dois pães fermentados de farinha de trigo como oferta movida. (Êx 34:22; Le 23:17) Depois de o trigo ser debulhado, joeirado e peneirado, era estocado amiúde em covas subterrâneas, prática a que talvez se faça alusão em Jeremias 41:8.

A Bíblia também faz referências ilustrativas ao trigo. É usado para representar pessoas aceitáveis a Jeová, "os filhos do reino". (Mt 3:12; 13:24-30, 37, 38; Lu 3:17) Tanto Jesus como o apóstolo Paulo mencionaram o trigo ao ilustrar a ressurreição. (Jo 12:24; 1Co 15:35-38) E Jesus assemelhou a prova que viria sobre seus discípulos, em resultado das provações que ele estava prestes a enfrentar, ao peneiramento do trigo. — Lu 22:31.

TRÔADE. Principal porto marítimo do NO da Ásia Menor, de onde Paulo partiu para sua primeira visita à Macedônia, e ao qual voltou mais tarde, vez por outra. Ficava a cerca de 30 km ao S do Helesponto (Dardanelos) e a uns 25 km ao S do local tradicional da antiga Troia. O mesmo termo grego traduzido "Trôade", aplicava-se também a uma região da Mísia que circundava Troia e que tinha o mesmo nome.

A cidade de Trôade foi construída na última parte do quarto século AEC por Antígono, um dos generais de Alexandre, o Grande. Em 133 AEC, ficou sob controle romano, e dali em diante a região da Mísia tornou-se parte da província romana da Ásia. Por algum tempo Júlio César pensou em transferir a sede do governo romano para Trôade. O imperador Augusto favoreceu ainda mais esta cidade, tornando-a colonia, independente do governador provincial da Ásia, e isentando seus cidadãos dos impostos tanto sobre terras como por cabeça.

Na segunda viagem de Paulo, provavelmente na primavera do ano 50 EC, e depois de atravessar a Frígia e a Galácia, o apóstolo e seus companheiros chegaram a Trôade, pois 'o espírito de Jesus não lhes permitira' penetrar na Bitínia. (At 16:6-8) Em Trôade, Paulo teve uma visão incomum, a de um homem que o convocava: "Passa à Macedônia e ajuda-nos." Eles concluíram imediatamente: 'Deus nos convocou para declarar-lhes as boas novas.' A ocorrência de "nos" neste texto (e de verbos na 1.ª pessoa do plural nos versículos seguintes) deve indicar que em Trôade Lucas juntou-se ao grupo de Paulo e fez com eles a viagem pelo mar Egeu até Neápolis. — At 16:9-12.

Depois de partir de Éfeso em sua terceira viagem, Paulo parou em Trôade e pregou ali as boas novas a respeito do Cristo, pois, como ele diz: 'Abriu-se-me uma porta no Senhor.' Depois de um período não revelado, porém, o apóstolo ficou preocupado por Tito ainda não ter chegado, de modo que partiu para a Macedônia, esperando encontrá-lo ali. — At 20:1; 2Co 2:12, 13.

Evidentemente Paulo passou aquele inverno na Grécia, antes de retornar novamente a Trôade, na primavera de 56 EC. (At 20:2-6) Desta feita, Paulo permaneceu sete dias ministrando aos irmãos cristãos em Trôade e edificando-os em sentido espiritual. Na véspera de partir, Paulo reuniu-se com eles e "prolongou as suas palavras até à meia-noite". Um dos presentes, um rapaz chamado Êutico, estava sentado na janela do terceiro pavimento, mas adormeceu e despencou de lá, vindo a morrer. O apóstolo milagrosamente fez o rapaz reviver e continuou conversando com o grupo até o romper da alva. — At 20:6-12.

É provável que Paulo tenha visitado Trôade novamente depois de ter sido solto de sua detenção domiciliar em Roma, em 61 EC. O apóstolo Paulo escreveu a Timóteo na segunda vez em que esteve preso em Roma, por volta de 65 EC, pedindo que Timóteo levasse um manto e certos rolos e pergaminhos que Paulo deixara com Carpo, em Trôade. Parece muito improvável que esse pedido tenha sido feito cerca de nove anos depois, como seria o caso se a última visita de Paulo ao lar de Carpo tivesse ocorrido em sua terceira viagem missionária, por volta de 56 EC. — 2Ti 4:13.

TRÓFIMO [Alimentício; Nutritivo]. Colaborador do apóstolo Paulo; cristão gentio de Éfeso. (At 21:29) É possível que Trófimo se tenha tornado cristão durante o ministério prolongado de Paulo em Éfeso, em sua terceira viagem missionária. Depois, Trófimo foi um dos companheiros de viagem de Paulo no trecho de retorno da viagem pela Macedônia até a Ásia Menor, e dali rumo a Jerusalém. (At 20:3-5, 17, 22) Em Jerusalém, Trófimo foi visto na companhia de Paulo, e quando Paulo levou vários outros aos pátios do templo, os judeus pensaram que Trófimo, um gentio, tivesse ultrapassado o Pátio dos Gentios, aviltando assim o templo. (At 21:26-30; 24:6) Alguns anos mais tarde, depois da primeira prisão de Paulo, Trófimo viajou novamente com ele. Mas Trófimo adoeceu ao chegarem a Mileto, não longe de sua cidade natal, e não pôde continuar. — 2Ti 4:20.

TROMBETA. Instrumento de sopro que consiste em um bocal, em um comprido tubo de metal e em uma extremidade em forma de funil.

No ermo, antes de Israel ter levantado acampamento pela primeira vez, Jeová ordenou a Moisés que fizesse "duas trombetas de prata . . . obra batida". (Núm 10:2) Embora não se forneça nenhuma outra descrição desses instrumentos, moedas que circulavam na época dos macabeus e um relevo do Arco de Tito representam as trombetas com cerca de 45 a 90 cm de comprimento, retas, e com um pavilhão na extremidade. Josefo declara que o que Moisés fez foi um tipo de clarim com "um tubo estreito, ligeiramente mais grosso do que uma flauta, com um bocal suficientemente largo para receber o sopro e uma extremidade em forma de sino, como têm os trompetes". (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], III, 291 [xii, 6]) Na inauguração do templo de Salomão, 120 trombetas foram tocadas. — 2Cr 5:12.

Descrevem-se três sinais, com o uso de dois métodos de toque: (1) o toque de ambas as trombetas convocava a inteira assembleia de Israel; (2) o toque de uma só trombeta convocava apenas os maiorais, que eram cabeças sobre mil; e (3) toques trêmulos assinalavam a ordem de levantar acampamento. — Núm 10:3-7.

Jeová orientou adicionalmente que em épocas de guerra as trombetas soassem "um toque de guerra". (Núm 10:9) Isto era feito, posteriormente, pelo sacerdote que acompanhava o exército. (Núm 31:6) Abias, de Judá, quando procurava evitar a guerra com Jeroboão, de Israel, apontou para essas "trombetas . . . para tocar o alarme de batalha" como garantia divina da vitória de Judá na guerra. Quando Jeroboão persistiu obstinadamente em sua agressão, suas forças foram derrotadas por um exército de Judá que fora muitíssimo encorajado pelos "sacerdotes [que] tocavam alto as trombetas". — 2Cr 13:12-15.

As trombetas estavam entre os instrumentos musicais no templo. (2Cr 5:11-13) Os trombeteiros eram filhos de Arão, os sacerdotes. (Núm 10:8; 2Cr 29:26; Esd 3:10; Ne 12:40, 41) Todos os relatos em que a trombeta (hebr.: hhatso·tseráh) é mencionada sem que os sacerdotes sejam claramente identificados como tocadores são acontecimentos de importância nacional, ocasiões em que se contava com a presença dos sacerdotes. Portanto, é razoável supor que eles é que tocaram as trombetas. (2Cr 15:14; 20:28; 23:13; compare 1Cr 15:24 com o v 28.) Existe a possibilidade, porém, de que havia uma variedade de trombetas, e algumas delas talvez pertencessem a pessoas que não eram sacerdotes.

Jesus mandou que seus ouvintes não 'tocassem trombeta' (gr.: sal·pí·zo, palavra aparentada com sál·pigx, que significa "trombeta") para atrair atenção a atos de caridade, como faziam os hipócritas. (Mt 6:2) Sugere-se em geral que o ato de tocar a trombeta, neste caso, é figurativo, e que Jesus alertava contra a ostentação ao se fazer dádivas de misericórdia.

TRONCO. Antigo instrumento de confinamento e punição, que consistia numa armação de madeira em que se prendiam os pés da vítima que ficava sentada (2Cr 16:10; Je 20:2, 3), não raro enquanto ficava exposta aos olhares e ao escárnio públicos. O tronco romano possuía diversos olhais, de modo que, se desejado, as pernas da vítima pudessem ser amplamente distanciadas, o que intensificava a tortura. Em hebraico, o tronco para o confinamento dos pés é chamado sadh (Jó 13:27; 33:11), e, visto que é feito de madeira, é chamado, em grego, de xý·lon (madeira). Enquanto estavam presos em Filipos, Paulo e Silas foram confinados em troncos que lhes prendiam os pés. — At 16:24.

Em outras partes das Escrituras Hebraicas, outra palavra, mah·pé·kheth, é vertida "tronco". Visto que continha a ideia de virar, parece que a pessoa assim confinada era obrigada a ficar encurvada ou contorcida. Este instrumento talvez prendesse os pés, as mãos e o pescoço, ou pode ser que fosse usado junto a outros meios que prendiam o pescoço e os braços. É possível que se conjugasse o uso do tronco e do pelourinho para prender as pernas, bem como o pescoço e os braços da vítima. (Je 29:26, NE, NM) Nenhum desses instrumentos foram ordenados pela Lei que Deus dera a Israel, nem previa a Lei a existência de prisões.

TRONO. O termo hebraico kis·sé' significa basicamente "cadeira" (1Sa 4:13; 2Rs 4:10) ou um assento de importância especial, tal como um "trono" (1Rs 22:10). Sua aplicação não se limita aos assentos de monarcas governantes (1Rs 2:19; Ne 3:7; Est 3:1; Ez 26:16), nem se refere estritamente a um assento com encosto alto e braços. Eli, por exemplo, enquanto estava no portão de Silo, caiu para trás de seu kis·sé', evidentemente um assento sem encosto. (1Sa 4:13, 18) O termo grego thró·nos geralmente se refere a um banco alto, com encosto, braços e escabelo.

Isaías 14:9 dá a entender que tronos eram universalmente usados pelos monarcas, e a Bíblia menciona de modo específico os tronos do Egito (Gên 41:40; Êx 11:5; 12:29), da Assíria (Jon 3:6), de Babilônia (Is 14:4, 13; Da 5:20), da Pérsia (Est 1:2; 5:1) e de Moabe (Jz 3:17, 20). Os arqueólogos acreditam ter encontrado tronos usados por governantes de todas estas potências, ou por seus associados, exceto de Moabe. Encontrou-se em Megido um painel de marfim que, segundo se crê, retrata um trono e escabelo cananeus. De modo geral, os tronos não israelitas têm encosto e braços ricamente entalhados ou ornamentados. Um trono egípcio que ainda existe era de madeira recoberta com ouro, ao passo que certo trono assírio era de ferro trabalhado, com entalhes de marfim. Parece que era costume colocar o trono num tablado, ou plataforma elevada, e havia um escabelo na maioria dos casos.

O único trono dum governante de Israel descrito em pormenores é o que Salomão fez. (1Rs 10:18-20; 2Cr 9:17-19) Parece que ficava no "Pórtico do Trono", um dos prédios que se erguiam no monte Moriá, em Jerusalém. (1Rs 7:7) Era 'um grande trono de marfim, recoberto de ouro refinado, com dossel redondo por detrás, e com braços'. Embora o marfim possa ter sido o material básico desta cadeira real, a técnica de construção em geral adotada no templo parece indicar que era de madeira, recoberta de ouro refinado e ricamente ornamentada com painéis incrustrados de marfim. Para o observador, este trono pareceria ser todo de marfim e ouro. Depois de mencionar seis degraus que conduziam ao trono, o registro prossegue: "Dois leões estavam em pé ao lado dos braços. E havia doze leões em pé sobre os seis degraus, deste e daquele lado." (2Cr 9:17-19) É apropriado o simbolismo dos leões, que denota autoridade governante. (Gên 49:9, 10; Re 5:5) Parece que os 12 leões correspondiam às 12 tribos de Israel, o que possivelmente simbolizava sua sujeição e apoio ao governante que ocupava o trono. Um escabelo de ouro ficava de alguma forma preso ao trono. Conforme revela sua descrição, esse trono de marfim e ouro — elevado, coberto por um dossel e com leões majestosos na frente — transcende qualquer outro daquele período, quer descoberto pelos arqueólogos, quer representado em monumentos, ou descrito nas inscrições. É como o cronista comentou verazmente: "Nenhum outro reino tinha feito um exatamente igual a ele." — 2Cr 9:19.

Uso Figurado. Em sentido figurado, "trono" significa o assento da autoridade governamental (1Rs 2:12; 16:11) ou a autoridade régia e a própria soberania (Gên 41:40; 1Cr 17:14; Sal 89:44); um governo em exercício ou administração real (2Sa 14:9); controle soberano sobre um território (2Sa 3:10); e uma posição honrosa (1Sa 2:7, 8; 2Rs 25:28).

O que é o "trono de Jeová"?

Jeová, a quem nem sequer o "céu dos céus" pode conter, não precisa sentar-se num trono ou cadeira literal. (1Rs 8:27) No entanto, ele representa sua autoridade régia e soberania com o símbolo dum trono. Alguns servos de Deus tiveram o privilégio de ter uma visão do Seu trono. (1Rs 22:19; Is 6:1; Ez 1:26-28; Da 7:9; Re 4:1-3) Os Salmos descrevem o trono de Jeová, isto é, sua majestade ou poder, sua posição como Juiz Supremo, como estabelecido em justiça e em juízo "desde há muito". — Sal 89:14; 93:2; 97:2.

Jeová estendeu seu trono à Terra de modo típico e específico nos seus tratos com os filhos de Israel. Visto que quem governasse em Israel devia ser um 'rei que Jeová, seu Deus, escolhesse', que governasse em nome de Jeová sobre o povo de Jeová e de acordo com a lei de Jeová, o seu trono era realmente o "trono de Jeová". — De 17:14-18; 1Cr 29:23.

Além de sua identificação régia com a linhagem real de Judá, Jeová estava entronizado em Israel também em outro sentido. Conforme Jeremias o expressou: "Há o trono glorioso no alto, desde o princípio; é o lugar do nosso santuário." (Je 17:12) Falava-se que Jeová estava "sentado sobre os querubins" que se achavam sobre a tampa propiciatória da arca do testemunho, no santuário. (Êx 25:22; 1Sa 4:4) A presença divina era simbolizada por uma nuvem que alegadamente produzia uma luz milagrosa, mais tarde chamada de Shekhi·náh pelos escritores judeus. (Le 16:2) Embora Jeremias predissesse a ausência da Arca do Pacto quando Israel fosse restaurado de Babilônia, isto não significava que Jeová não mais objetivava ser entronizado no seu centro de adoração. Como Ele próprio disse: "Naquele tempo chamarão Jerusalém de trono de Jeová." (Je 3:16, 17) As profecias de restauração, anunciadas por Ezequiel, estão de acordo com isto, pois, em sua visão do templo de Jeová, em que não se viu a Arca do Pacto, foi-lhe dito: "Filho do homem, este [templo] é o lugar do meu trono." — Ez 43:7.

Jeová fez um pacto para que o próprio trono da 'semente' de Davi 'viesse a ser duradouro por tempo indefinido'. (1Cr 17:11-14) Ao anunciar o cumprimento desta promessa, o anjo Gabriel disse a Maria: "Jeová Deus . . . dará [a Jesus] o trono de Davi, seu pai, e ele reinará sobre a casa de Jacó para sempre, e não haverá fim do seu reino." (Lu 1:32, 33) Jesus não só herdaria um domínio terrestre, mas compartilharia do trono universal de Jeová. (Re 3:21; Is 66:1) Por sua vez, Jesus prometeu compartilhar seu trono de autoridade régia com todos aqueles que, como seus fiéis apóstolos, estivessem no novo pacto feito com seu Pai e que vencessem o mundo como ele próprio vencera. Assim, seria concedido a eles se sentar em tronos junto com Jesus. — Mt 19:28; Lu 22:20, 28-30; Re 3:21.

Em harmonia com a profecia de Jeová mediante Zacarias, de que o homem chamado "Renovo", o edificador do futuro templo para Jeová, 'teria de tornar-se sacerdote sobre o seu trono', Paulo registra, a respeito de Jesus: "Temos um sumo sacerdote tal como [Melquisedeque, um rei-sacerdote], e ele se assentou à direita do trono da Majestade nos céus." (Za 6:11-13; He 8:1) Além de Cristo Jesus, João viu os da inteira casa espiritual ou santuário de Deus, a fiel congregação cristã, entronizados como reis-sacerdotes para governar por mil anos. — Re 20:4, 6; 1Pe 2:5.

Como predito no Salmo 45:6, e aplicado por Paulo em Hebreus 1:8, o trono de Jesus, isto é, seu cargo ou autoridade como soberano, tem a Jeová como fonte: "Deus é o teu trono para todo o sempre." Por outro lado, o Diabo também fornece base ou autoridade para que suas organizações governem, conforme frisa Revelação (Apocalipse) 13:1, 2, com respeito à 'fera que ascendeu do mar': "O dragão deu à fera seu poder e seu trono, e grande autoridade." Quando Satanás ofereceu a Jesus Cristo poder e autoridade similar, seu preço foi declarado: "Se . . . fizeres um ato de adoração diante de mim, tudo será teu." (Lu 4:5-7) De forma correspondente, a concessão dum trono ou autoridade à "fera" deve ter sido feita com a condição de ela servir a Satanás.

Ao considerar a posição de Jesus como Mestre de Obras de Deus, Paulo menciona que se criaram "tronos" por meio de Cristo. O termo parece referir-se a posições de autoridade oficial, tanto visíveis como invisíveis, dentro do arranjo administrativo de Deus. — Col 1:16.

TROVÃO. O estrondo que segue a um relâmpago. É causado pela súbita expansão do ar aquecido por tal descarga elétrica, o que faz com que ele seja violentamente afastado do caminho percorrido pelo relâmpago e então volte de novo após ele. — Jó 28:26; 38:25.

O verbo hebraico ra·‛ám (que significa "trovejar") é às vezes mencionado com relação a Jeová (1Sa

2:10; 2Sa 22:14; Sal 18:13), Aquele que, em certas ocasiões, usou o trovão para realizar sua vontade. Por exemplo, na época de Samuel, Jeová lançou os filisteus em confusão por meio do trovão (hebr.: rá·ʽam). (1Sa 7:10; compare com Is 29:6.) Outra palavra hebraica, qohl, às vezes traduzida por "trovão" (1Sa 12:17, 18 n), significa basicamente "som" (Êx 32:18, 19) ou "voz". — De 21:18; 1Rs 19:12.

O assombroso som do trovão é relacionado com a voz de Jeová. (Jó 37:4, 5; 40:9; Sal 29:3-9) Quando certos judeus ouviram Jeová falar desde o céu a Jesus, houve uma diferença de opinião, quanto a se o som era um trovão ou a voz dum anjo. (Jo 12:28, 29; compare com Re 6:1; 14:2; 19:6.) Visto que o som do trovão não raro é indício antecipado duma tempestade que se avizinha, o termo "trovões" pode referir-se a avisos divinos, como em Revelação (Apocalipse) 8:5; 10:3, 4; 16:18.

Para os judeus no sopé do monte Sinai, os trovões que ouviam eram uma manifestação da presença de Deus. (Êx 19:16; compare com Re 4:5; 11:19.) As palavras do salmista talvez aludam a este acontecimento, ou a Deus conduzir Israel por meio duma coluna de nuvem (uma fonte de trovões): "[Eu, Jeová] comecei a responder-te no lugar escondido do trovão." — Sal 81:7.

TSADÊ [צ; final, ץ] (tsa·dhéh). A 18.ª letra do alfabeto hebraico. É uma das cinco letras hebraicas que têm forma diferente quando usadas como última letra duma palavra. Tem forte som sibilante similar ao som "ts", em português. No hebraico, ela aparece como letra inicial em cada um dos oito versos do Salmo 119:137-144.

TUBAL.

1. Um dos sete filhos de Jafé. — Gên 10:2; 1Cr 1:5.

2. Povo ou país geralmente mencionado com Meseque, nome de outro filho de Jafé. Tubal, junto com Javã e Meseque, praticavam intercâmbio comercial com Tiro, negociando escravos e artigos de cobre. (Ez 27:13) Na endecha de Ezequiel a respeito do Egito, Tubal foi incluído entre os "incircuncisos" com quem os egípcios se deitariam no Seol, por causa do terror que tinham causado. (Ez 32:26, 27) O povo de Tubal está também incluído entre os que se unem a "Gogue da terra de Magogue", que é chamado de "maioral-chefe de Meseque e Tubal" e que rompe "das partes mais remotas do norte", num ataque feroz contra o povo de Jeová. (Ez 38:2, 3; 39:1, 2; veja GOGUE N.º 2.) Em outra profecia, Jeová prediz que enviará emissários para proclamar sua glória a Tubal, a Javã e a outras terras. — Is 66:19.

Assim, Tubal ficava ao N de Israel, mas não tão distante a ponto de não ter contato comercial com Tiro, na Fenícia. A maioria dos peritos acha que esse nome refere-se ao povo Tabali, de inscrições assírias, em que Tabali e Musku (evidentemente Meseque) são mencionados juntos. (Ancient Near Eastern Texts [Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo], editado por J. Pritchard, 1974, p. 284) Alguns séculos depois, Heródoto (III, 94) também os alistou juntos, como os tibarenos e os moscos. À base disto, pensa-se que a terra de Tubal estava situada (pelo menos no tempo dos assírios) ao NE da Cilícia, no leste da Ásia Menor. A existência de minas de cobre nesta região concorda com o registro bíblico.

TUBALCAIM. Filho de Lameque com Zilá, sua segunda esposa; portanto, descendente de Caim e meio-irmão de Jabal e Jubal. Ele tinha uma irmã chamada Naamá. (Gên 4:17-22) Tubalcaim era "forjador de toda sorte de ferramenta de cobre e de ferro", o que talvez signifique que ele inventou essas ferramentas ou que fundou essa ocupação ou se destacou nela.

TÚMULO MEMORIAL. Lugar em que se colocavam os restos mortais duma pessoa falecida, na esperança de que seria lembrada, especialmente por Deus.

A respeito das palavras gregas usadas para referir-se a um lugar de sepultamento ou túmulo, A. T. Robertson, em Word Pictures in the New Testament (Quadros Verbais no Novo Testamento, 1932, Vol. V, p. 87), diz: "Tafos (sepultura) apresenta a ideia de sepultamento (thapto, sepultar), como em Mat. 23:27; mnemeion (de mnaomai, mimnesko, lembrar) é um monumento comemorativo (sepulcro como monumento)." A palavra mné·ma é aparentada com mne·meí·on e parece ter significado correspondente, referindo-se também a "um monumento comemorativo, ou registro de uma coisa ou de uma pessoa falecida, daí, um monumento sepulcral, e, assim, um túmulo". — Vine's Expository Dictionary of Old and New Testament Words (Dicionário Expositivo de Palavras do Velho e do Novo Testamento, de Vine), 1981, Vol. 2, p. 173.

Tal sepulcro talvez fosse um túmulo escavado no chão ou, como não raro ocorria entre os hebreus, uma caverna natural ou uma cripta escavada na rocha. (Compare isso com At 7:16 e Gên 23:19, 20.) Como se observou acima, ao passo que a palavra tá·fos (sepultura) ressalta a ideia de sepultamento, as palavras mné·ma (túmulo) e mne·meí·on (túmulo memorial) frisam a ideia de preservar a memória da pessoa falecida. Estas, portanto, parecem transmitir mais a ideia de permanência do que tá·fos; elas se relacionam com a palavra latina monumentum.

Parece evidente que os túmulos judaicos ficavam costumeiramente fora das cidades, mas uma importante exceção eram os dos reis. As referências a túmulos nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs parecem situá-los fora das cidades, exceto a referência ao túmulo de Davi, em Atos 2:29. Assim, por estarem afastadas e também por serem evitadas pelos judeus, devido à impureza cerimonial relacionada com elas, as áreas em que tais túmulos se localizavam eram, às vezes, guarida de pessoas loucas ou endemoninhadas. — Mt 8:28; Mr 5:5.

Não Eram Ornamentados. Embora servissem de recordação da pessoa falecida, parece que os túmulos memoriais judaicos não eram ornamentados ou ostentosos. Alguns eram tão simples e modestos que as pessoas podiam andar sobre eles sem se dar conta disso. (Lu 11:44) Embora os povos pagãos ao seu redor tivessem o costume de fazer túmulos tão suntuosos quanto permitissem as circunstâncias, os mais antigos túmulos judaicos descobertos se destacam pela simplicidade. Isto porque a adoração dos judeus não permitia a veneração dos mortos nem promovia conceitos sobre uma existência consciente após a morte, num mundo espiritual, como tinham os egípcios, os cananeus e os babilônios. Portanto, embora muitos críticos afirmem que a adoração da nação de Israel era, desde tempos remotos, sincretista, isto é, resultante da união de crenças conflitantes e desenvolvida pela adição de conceitos e práticas de religiões mais antigas, a resistência fundamental a essa corrupção religiosa fica mais uma vez evidente na simplicidade de seus túmulos. Mas houve desvios, sem dúvida. Jesus mostra que nos seus dias os fariseus e os saduceus tinham o costume de decorar os túmulos memoriais dos profetas e de outros. (Mt 23:29, 30) Naquela época, sob a influência grega e romana, a tendência entre os ricos era de túmulos mais ostentosos.

Fora o túmulo de João, o Batizador (Mr 6:29), os principais túmulos mencionados nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs são o de Lázaro e o de Jesus. O túmulo de Lázaro era tipicamente judaico: uma caverna cuja entrada era vedada por uma pedra, entrada essa que talvez fosse relativamente pequena, se concluirmos que túmulos similares descobertos na Palestina são comparáveis. O contexto indica que ficava fora do povoado. — Jo 11:30-34, 38-44.

O Túmulo de Jesus. O túmulo usado para sepultar Jesus era novo e pertencia a José de Arimateia; não era uma caverna, mas tinha sido escavado na rocha dum jardim, não muito distante do local em que Jesus foi pregado na estaca. O túmulo possuía uma entrada que precisava duma grande pedra para fechá-la, e esta pedra, pelo visto, era do tipo circular, às vezes usado. (Mt 27:57-60; Mr 16:3, 4; Jo 19:41, 42) Dentro dele talvez houvesse prateleiras escavadas nas paredes, semelhantes a bancos, ou nichos sepulcrais cortados verticalmente, em que se podiam colocar os corpos. — Compare com Mr 16:5.

Afirma-se que dois locais principais poderiam ter sido a localização original do túmulo de Jesus. Um deles é o local tradicional no qual a Igreja do Santo Sepulcro foi construída. O outro é conhecido como o Túmulo do Jardim, escavado numa enorme rocha que se projeta do lado de uma colina e que fica fora até mesmo das atuais muralhas da cidade. Mas não existem provas definidas de que um desses lugares representa autenticamente o túmulo memorial em que Jesus foi sepultado. — Veja GÓLGOTA.

'Abriram-se Túmulos' por Ocasião da Morte de Jesus. O texto de Mateus 27:52, 53, a respeito dos 'túmulos memoriais que se abriram' em resultado dum terremoto que ocorreu por ocasião da morte de Jesus, tem provocado muitos debates. Há quem diga que ocorreu uma ressurreição. No entanto, uma comparação com os textos a respeito da ressurreição deixa claro que esses versículos não descrevem uma ressurreição, mas um simples lançamento de corpos para fora dos túmulos, similar a incidentes ocorridos em tempos mais recentes, como no Equador, em 1949, e também em Sonsón, na Colômbia, em 1962, quando 200 cadáveres no cemitério foram lançados para fora dos túmulos por um violento tremor de terra. — El Tiempo, de Bogotá, Colômbia, 31 de julho de 1962.

Recordação por Deus. Em vista da ideia subjacente de lembrança associada a mne·mei·on, o uso dessa palavra (em vez de tá·fos), em João 5:28, com respeito à ressurreição de "todos os que estão nos túmulos memoriais", parece especialmente apropriado e contrasta-se nitidamente com a ideia de completo repúdio e apagamento total da memória, conforme representado pela Geena. (Mt 10:28; 23:33; Mr 9:43) A importância atribuída pelos hebreus ao sepultamento (veja ENTERRO, LUGARES DE SEPULTAMENTO) é um indício da preocupação de serem lembrados, primariamente por Jeová Deus, em quem tinham fé como "o recompensador dos que seriamente o buscam". (He 11:1, 2, 6) Inscrições nos túmulos de origem israelita são raríssimas e, quando encontradas, geralmente consistem apenas do nome. Os destacados reis de Judá não deixaram monumentos deslumbrantes, com encômios e feitos pessoais gravados neles, como fizeram os reis de outras nações. Assim, parece evidente que a preocupação dos homens fiéis dos tempos antigos era que seu nome estivesse no "livro de recordação" mencionado em Malaquias 3:16. — Compare isso com Ec 7:1; veja NOME.

A ideia básica de recordação contida nas palavras originais gregas para "túmulo" ou "túmulo memorial" dá também um sentido adicional ao apelo do malfeitor pregado na estaca ao lado de Jesus: "Lembra-te de mim quando entrares no teu reino." — Lu 23:42.

TURBANTE. Veja COBERTURA PARA A CABEÇA.

TURQUESA. Gema semipreciosa, opaca, porosa, que varia em coloração do azul-celeste pálido ao verde-fosco. É composta de fosfato hidratado de alumínio com traços de cobre (responsável pela cor azul) e de ferro (responsável pela cor verde). Quando aquecidas ou expostas às intempéries, as pedras azuis tornam-se verdes, o que às vezes acontece quando as pedras perdem sua umidade natural com o passar do tempo. Isto pode explicar a aparente popularidade das pedras de turquesa verde no passado. Os antigos egípcios usavam a turquesa em joias, e ela é encontrada na península do Sinai como nódulos em arenito vermelho.

A turquesa é fácil de gravar por se tratar duma pedra comparativamente mole. O sumo sacerdote Arão usava uma pedra gravada de turquesa no "peitoral do julgamento". Estava inscrito nela o nome de uma das 12 tribos de Israel, e ela estava situada em primeiro lugar na segunda fileira de pedras do peitoral. (Êx 28:2, 15, 18, 21; 39:11) A "cobertura" figurada, usada pelo rei de Tiro, é retratada como adornada com turquesa, junto com toda outra espécie de pedra preciosa. (Ez 28:12, 13) Edom era o "mercador" de Tiro para o fornecimento de turquesa, pela qual Tiro estava disposta a dar em troca algumas de suas mercadorias. — Ez 27:2, 16.

TUTANO (MEDULA). Tecido vascular mole e gorduroso que preenche as cavidades da maioria dos ossos. Há dois tipos de medula, a amarela e a vermelha. Nos adultos, os ossos longos e mais arredondados estão cheios de medula amarela, ou inativa, composta na maior parte de gordura, e os ossos achatados do crânio, das costelas, do esterno e da pélvis contêm medula vermelha, ou ativa. A medula vermelha desempenha importante papel na formação do sangue. Produz os glóbulos vermelhos do sangue, que transportam o oxigênio, os importantes agentes de coagulação, chamados plaquetas, e grande porcentagem de glóbulos brancos, que servem primariamente para o combate a infecções. Como órgão formador de sangue, a medula exerce efeito direto sobre a saúde e o vigor da pessoa. Assim, Jó (21:24) alude apropriadamente a uma pessoa bem nutrida e saudável, com a figura de linguagem de alguém cujo tutano, ou medula óssea, é "mantido úmido".

O tutano animal pelo visto era usado pelos israelitas como alimento. (Veja Miq 3:2, 3.) Ele tem altíssimo valor nutritivo, visto que é rico em proteínas, gorduras e ferro. Portanto, o banquete preparado por Jeová para todos os povos inclui, de forma apropriada, simbólicos "pratos bem azeitados, cheios de tutano". — Is 25:6.

Em Hebreus 4:12, a "palavra de Deus" é comparada a uma arma mais afiada do que qualquer espada de dois gumes e que pode perscrutar os pensamentos e as motivações da pessoa, penetrando, por assim dizer, até à medula, a parte mais interna dos ossos.

TUTOR. Nos tempos bíblicos, o tutor em geral não era o verdadeiro mestre, mas aquele que acompanhava a criança na ida e na volta da escola e possivelmente também em outras atividades. Ele entregava a criança ao instrutor. Isto prosseguia desde a infância até, talvez, a puberdade, ou por mais tempo. Ele devia proteger a criança de danos físicos ou morais. (Assim, tuteur, em francês antigo, e tutor, em latim, significam literalmente "um protetor ou guardião".) No entanto, os deveres do tutor envolviam também a disciplina, e ele talvez tivesse a atribuição de instruir a criança em questões de conduta. A disciplina dos tutores podia ser severa, quer fossem escravos, quer assalariados.

Portanto, Gálatas 3:24, 25 salienta que "a Lei . . . tornou-se o nosso tutor [gr.: pai·da·go·gós, literalmente: "guia de criança"], conduzindo a Cristo, para que fôssemos declarados justos devido à fé. Mas agora que chegou a fé, não estamos mais debaixo dum tutor". A Lei era rigorosa. Revelava que os judeus eram transgressores e os condenava. (Gál 3:10, 11, 19) A bem dizer, ela entregou os judeus que foram corretamente disciplinados a seu Instrutor, Jesus Cristo. O apóstolo Paulo diz: "Antes de chegar a fé, estávamos sendo guardados debaixo de lei, entregues juntos à detenção, aguardando a fé que estava destinada a ser revelada." — Gál 3:23.

O apóstolo Paulo disse aos coríntios: "Pois, embora tenhais dez mil tutores em Cristo, certamente não tendes muitos pais; porque eu me tornei vosso pai em Cristo Jesus por intermédio das boas novas." (1Co 4:14, 15) Paulo havia levado a mensagem de vida a Corinto, de modo que era como um pai para a congregação dos cristãos ali. Embora outros, posteriormente, pudessem cuidar dos interesses deles, como tutores a quem se confiam crianças, isto não alterava o relacionamento de Paulo com os coríntios. Os "tutores", como Apolo, talvez mostrassem interesse genuíno na congregação, mas o interesse de Paulo possuía um fator adicional, por ter sofrido as dores da paternidade espiritual referente a eles. — Compare isso com Gál 4:11, 19, 20; veja EDUCAÇÃO; INSTRUÇÃO.

U

UCAL. Um daqueles a quem Agur dirigiu as palavras encontradas em Provérbios, capítulo 30. Ucal talvez tenha sido filho ou discípulo de Agur, mas nada se sabe de definido sobre ele. — Pr 30:1.

UEL. Um dos filhos de Bani, que despediram suas esposas estrangeiras e filhos em atenção ao conselho de Esdras. — Esd 10:10, 11, 34, 44.

UFAZ. Localidade atualmente não identificada, onde se encontrava ouro em tempos antigos. — Je 10:9; Da 10:5.

ULA. Aserita cujos três filhos eram cabeças de família tribais e guerreiros valentes. — 1Cr 7:39, 40.

ULAI. "Curso de água" que fluía por Susã (Susa), ou perto dali, em Elão. Junto ao Ulai, Daniel recebeu a visão do carneiro e do bode. Não se pode determinar se o profeta realmente foi de Babilônia para lá, ou se foi transportado para esse lugar de modo visionário. (Da 8:1-3, 6, 16) As conjecturas sobre o Ulai variam consideravelmente, e a identificação é difícil porque os rios na vizinhança parecem ter mudado o curso ao longo dos séculos. Um dos conceitos é que o Ulai é o rio Carque. Segundo outro ponto de vista, era um canal artificial ao N ou ao NE de Susã, que ligava o Carque a outro rio.

ULÃO.

1. Pai de Bedã; da tribo de Manassés. — 1Cr 7:14, 16, 17.

2. Descendente distante de Saul, da tribo de Benjamim, cujos filhos eram notáveis arqueiros. Os descendentes de Ulão, "filhos e netos", somavam cerca de 150 no tempo do cronista. — 1Cr 8:33, 39, 40.

ÚLCERA. Ferida corpórea aberta, diferente de um ferimento direto, embora o tipo inflamatório geralmente resulte de um pequeno ferimento, tal como uma esfoladura da pele. As úlceras tanto podem ser externas como internas, desenvolvendo-se na pele ou em superfícies mucosas. Muitas vezes soltam pus e provocam a desintegração progressiva e a morte do tecido na área atingida. Úlceras inflamatórias, com sensação de ardência e dor, não raro surgem na parte inferior da perna.

Nas Escrituras Hebraicas, a palavra às vezes traduzida "úlcera" é ma·zóhr, que pode aplicar-se a uma úlcera, a uma ferida ou a um furúnculo. Certos peritos creem que se refira a uma ferida do tipo que talvez precise ser premida para eliminar pus. A palavra grega hél·kos, que denota uma úlcera, é usada nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs; ela aparece na Septuaginta grega em Êxodo 9:9 e Jó 2:7 para a palavra hebraica shehhín, que significa furúnculo. — Veja FURÚNCULO.

Uso Figurado. Profeticamente, Efraim (Israel) foi representado como estando doente, e Judá como tendo uma "úlcera", condições resultantes de seu proceder de erro e da consequente perda do favor de Deus. Mas, em vez de confiarem em Jeová para ter proteção contra seus inimigos, eles futilmente buscaram a ajuda do rei da Assíria, que não pôde curá-los de sua condição 'ulcerosa'. (Os 5:13) Mais tarde, tendo o povo de Sião sido levado para o exílio babilônico, Sião foi representada como sendo afligida com uma úlcera. — Je 30:12-15, 17; compare com Lu 16:20, 21; Re 16:2, 10, 11.

ÚLTIMA CEIA. Veja REFEIÇÃO NOTURNA DO SENHOR.

ÚLTIMOS DIAS. Nas profecias bíblicas, "últimos dias" ou expressões comparáveis, tais como "parte final dos dias", foram usadas para designar um tempo em que culminam acontecimentos da história. (Ez 38:8, 16; Da 10:14) O conteúdo da profecia indica que o ponto de partida da "parte final dos dias" é quando os acontecimentos preditos começam a ocorrer. Portanto, os que vivessem no tempo do cumprimento da profecia poderiam ser mencionados como vivendo nos "últimos dias", ou na "parte final dos dias". Dependendo da natureza da profecia, pode referir-se a um período que abrange apenas uns poucos ou muitos anos e pode aplicar-se a períodos de tempo amplamente distanciados.

A Profecia do Leito de Morte de Jacó. Quando Jacó disse a seus filhos: "Ajuntai-vos para que eu vos possa declarar o que vos acontecerá na parte final dos dias", ou "nos dias vindouros" (BV), ele se referia ao tempo futuro em que suas palavras começariam a ter cumprimento. (Gên 49:1) Mais de dois séculos antes, Jeová declarara a Abrão (Abraão), avô de Jacó, que seus descendentes sofreriam aflição por 400 anos. (Gên 15:13) Por conseguinte, neste caso, o tempo futuro a que Jacó se referia como "parte final dos dias" só poderia começar depois de terminarem os 400 anos de aflição. (Para considerar os pormenores relativos ao capítulo 49 de Gênesis, veja os artigos sobre os filhos de Jacó, sob seus respectivos nomes.) Também se poderia esperar uma aplicação posterior da profecia, aplicação esta que envolveria o espiritual "Israel de Deus". — Gál 6:16; Ro 9:6.

A Profecia de Balaão. Foi antes de os israelitas entrarem na Terra da Promessa que o profeta Balaão disse a Balaque, rei de Moabe: "Vem deveras, deixa-me advertir-te do que este povo [Israel] fará ao teu povo, posteriormente, no fim dos dias. . . . Uma estrela há de avançar de Jacó, e um cetro há de se levantar de Israel. E ele há de rachar as têmporas da cabeça de Moabe, e o crânio de todos os filhos do tumulto de guerra." (Núm 24:14-17) No cumprimento inicial desta profecia, verificou-se que a "estrela" era o Rei Davi, o subjugador dos moabitas. (2Sa 8:2) É evidente, pois, que no cumprimento desta profecia específica o "fim dos dias" começou quando Davi se tornou rei. Visto que Davi prefigurou Jesus como Rei messiânico, a profecia também se aplicaria a Jesus na época em que ele subjuga seus inimigos. — Is 9:7; Sal 2:8, 9.

A Profecia de Isaías e de Miqueias. Em Isaías 2:2 e Miqueias 4:1, as palavras "parte final dos dias" iniciam uma profecia sobre o tempo em que pessoas de todas as nações afluiriam ao "monte da casa de Jeová". Num cumprimento típico, entre 29 EC e 70 EC, durante a parte final dos dias do sistema de coisas judaico, a adoração de Jeová foi enaltecida acima da exaltação altaneira que as nações pagãs davam a seus deuses falsos. O Rei, Jesus Cristo, efetuou "o irrompimento" no que diz respeito a elevar a adoração verdadeira, e foi seguido, primeiro por um restante da nação de Israel e depois por pessoas de todas as nações. (Is 2:2; Miq 2:13; At 10:34, 35) Num cumprimento antitípico, na parte final dos dias do atual sistema de coisas, a adoração de Jeová tem sido elevada até os céus. O Rei, Jesus Cristo, tem conduzido o restante do Israel espiritual à adoração pura, e os do restante têm sido seguidos por uma grande multidão procedente de todas as nações. — Re 7:9.

Últimos Dias do Sistema de Coisas Judaico. Menos de três anos e meio antes de os não judeus se tornarem parte da congregação cristã, o espírito de Deus foi derramado sobre fiéis discípulos judeus de Jesus Cristo. Nessa ocasião, Pedro explicou que isto ocorrera em cumprimento da profecia de Joel, dizendo: "'E nos últimos dias', diz Deus, 'derramarei do meu espírito sobre toda sorte de carne . . . E darei portentos em cima no céu e sinais em baixo na terra: sangue, e fogo, e fumaça brumosa; o sol será transformado em escuridão e a lua em sangue, antes de chegar o grande e ilustre dia de Jeová'." (At 2:16-20) Neste caso, os "últimos dias" precederam o "grande e ilustre dia de Jeová", "dia" este que, pelo visto, resultou na terminação dos "últimos dias". (Compare com Sof 1:14-18; Mal 4:5; Mt 11:13, 14; veja DIA DE JEOVÁ.) Visto que Pedro dirigiu-se a judeus naturais e a prosélitos judaicos, é óbvio que suas palavras se referiam em especial a eles e evidentemente indicavam que viviam nos "últimos dias" do então existente sistema de coisas judaico, com seu centro de adoração em Jerusalém. Antes disto, o próprio Cristo Jesus predissera a destruição de Jerusalém e de seu templo (Lu 19:41-44; 21:5, 6), que ocorreu em 70 EC.

Também deve ter sido com relação ao fim do sistema de coisas judaico que Cristo Jesus foi mencionado como surgindo e executando sua atividade "no fim dos tempos" ou "no fim destes dias". (1Pe 1:20, 21; He 1:1, 2) Isto é confirmado pelas palavras de Hebreus 9:26: "Mas agora ele [Jesus] se manifestou uma vez para sempre, na terminação dos sistemas de coisas, para remover o pecado por intermédio do sacrifício de si mesmo."

Últimos Dias Relacionados com a Apostasia. As palavras "últimos dias", ou expressões comparáveis, são por vezes usadas em relação à apostasia que havia de ocorrer dentro da congregação cristã. Escreveu o apóstolo Paulo a Timóteo: "A pronunciação inspirada diz definitivamente que nos períodos posteriores de tempo alguns se desviarão da fé, prestando atenção a desencaminhantes pronunciações inspiradas e a ensinos de demônios." (1Ti 4:1; compare com At 20:29, 30.) Numa carta posterior a Timóteo, Paulo considerou novamente este ponto, e falou de "últimos dias" futuros. Devido ao abandono da conduta correta por parte das pessoas nessa época, estes haviam de ser "tempos críticos, difíceis de manejar" ou, mais literalmente, 'violentos tempos designados'. (Int) Depois de descrever em pormenores o proceder obstinado e as atitudes pervertidas que prevaleceriam entre as pessoas que vivessem nesse tempo, Paulo continuou: "Dentre estes surgem aqueles homens que se introduzem ardilosamente nas famílias e levam cativas mulheres fracas, sobrecarregadas de pecados, levadas por vários desejos, sempre aprendendo, contudo, nunca podendo chegar a um conhecimento exato da verdade." (2Ti 3:1-7) Em seguida, Paulo contrastou tais pessoas corruptas com Timóteo, que seguira de perto o ensino do apóstolo, e incentivou-o a 'continuar nas coisas que aprendera e que fora persuadido a crer'. (2Ti 3:8-17; veja também 2Ti 4:3-5.) Assim, pelo contexto, torna-se claro que o apóstolo estava informando Timóteo, bem de antemão, sobre futuras ocorrências entre os professos cristãos e descrevendo os frutos que essa apostasia por fim produziria.

Similarmente, o apóstolo Pedro forneceu conhecimento antecipado aos concristãos sobre as pressões que surgiriam dentro da congregação: "Haverá falsos instrutores entre vós. Estes mesmos introduzirão quietamente seitas destrutivas e repudiarão até mesmo o dono que os comprou, trazendo sobre si mesmos uma destruição veloz. Outrossim, muitos seguirão os seus atos de conduta desenfreada." (2Pe 2:1, 2) Esta mesma advertência é ecoada nas palavras de Judas, incentivando os cristãos a 'travar uma luta árdua pela fé': "Quanto a vós, amados, recordai-vos das declarações feitas anteriormente pelos apóstolos de nosso Senhor Jesus Cristo, de como vos costumavam dizer: 'No último tempo haverá ridicularizadores, procedendo segundo os seus próprios desejos de coisas ímpias.'" (Ju 3, 17, 18) Perto do fim do primeiro século EC, elementos apóstatas já se evidenciavam com clareza. Em nossos dias, os plenos frutos dessa apostasia são claramente evidentes; os "últimos dias" aos quais Paulo se referiu já chegaram.

"A Terminação dum Sistema de Coisas." No entanto, conforme Jesus Cristo predissera, a apostasia não abrangeu o inteiro conjunto de cristãos; os verdadeiros e leais seriam como o "trigo" misturado com o "joio". Depois de começar a presença invisível e em espírito de Cristo, e durante a "terminação do sistema de coisas" então existente, devia tornar-se evidente uma nítida separação e demarcação. O "joio", "os filhos do iníquo", seria 'removido do reino do Filho do homem'. Esta purificação da verdadeira congregação cristã deixaria um campo composto apenas de trigo limpo; os falsos cristãos, de imitação, estariam fora da verdadeira congregação cristã. Ao passo que os semelhantes ao joio seriam, por fim, lançados na "fornalha ardente", os semelhantes ao trigo 'brilhariam tão claramente como o sol, no reino de seu Pai'. (Mt 13:24-30, 37-43) Isto apontava definitivamente para a parte final do sistema de coisas sob o governo iníquo de Satanás, antes da destruição desse sistema.

Ademais, a ilustração sugeria que a apostasia produziria seus plenos frutos de iniquidade durante a "terminação do sistema de coisas" sob o controle de Satanás. É razoável concluir, portanto, que nessa ocasião estariam em evidência, em grande escala, entre os professos cristãos, as condições descritas pelos escritores das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs como sinal dos "últimos dias". Haveria crescente desrespeito à lei e desobediência aos pais. As pessoas seriam "mais amantes de prazeres do que amantes de Deus, tendo uma forma de devoção piedosa, mostrando-se, porém, falsos para com o seu poder". (2Ti 3:2-5) Haveria também "ridicularizadores com os seus escárnios, procedendo segundo os seus próprios desejos e dizendo: 'Onde está essa prometida presença dele? Ora, desde o dia em que os nossos antepassados adormeceram na morte, todas as coisas estão continuando exatamente como o princípio da criação.'" — 2Pe 3:3, 4.

A ilustração profética de Jesus também mostrava que teria de passar algum tempo antes de os semelhantes a joio se manifestarem por completo, para finalmente serem destruídos. Visto que os apóstolos sabiam disto, usarem eles as expressões "últimos dias" e similares, em relação à apostasia, não significava que eles esperavam que a presença de Jesus e a subsequente destruição dos ímpios ocorressem logo. Como Paulo indicou aos tessalonicenses: "No entanto, irmãos, com respeito à presença de nosso Senhor Jesus Cristo e de sermos ajuntados a ele, solicitamo-vos que não sejais depressa demovidos de vossa razão, nem fiqueis provocados, quer por uma expressão inspirada, quer por intermédio duma mensagem verbal, quer por uma carta, como se fosse da nossa parte, no sentido de que o dia de Jeová está aqui. Que ninguém vos seduza, de maneira alguma, porque não virá a menos que venha primeiro a apostasia e seja revelado o homem que é contra a lei, o filho da destruição." — 2Te 2:1-3.

"Último Dia." A Bíblia também se refere a um "último dia", durante o qual ocorrerá a ressurreição dos mortos. (Jo 6:39, 40, 44; 11:24; compare com Da 12:13.) Em João 12:48, este "último dia" está ligado a um tempo de julgamento. É óbvio, pois, que indica um tempo num futuro muito mais distante do que o fim do período apostólico. — Compare com 1Te 4:15-17; 2Te 2:1-3; Re 20:4-6, 12.

UMÁ. Cidade de localização indeterminada na fronteira do território de Aser. (Jos 19:29-31) Alguns peritos acham que "Umá" resultou duma alteração textual de "Aco" (este último nome aparecendo em alguns manuscritos da Septuaginta grega e na lista em Jz 1:31), mas não há certeza disso.

UNGIDO, O. Veja CRISTO.

UNGIDO, UNÇÃO. A Bíblia frequentemente usa a palavra hebraica sukh e a grega a·lei·fo para referir-se ao ato comum de untar-se ou esfregar-se com óleo. (Da 10:3; Ru 3:3; Jo 11:2) Mas, no caso duma unção especial com óleo, ela em geral usa a palavra hebraica ma·sháhh, de onde vem a palavra ma·shí·ahh (Messias), e a grega khrí·o, de onde vem khri·stós (Cristo). (Êx 30:30; Le 4:5 n; Lu 4:18; At 4:26) Esta distinção é mantida com bastante coerência tanto em hebraico como em grego. Algumas versões da Bíblia não mantêm esta distinção sutil, mas traduzem todas essas palavras pelo termo único "ungir".

Esfregar ou Untar com Óleo. Nos países do Oriente Médio, era comum esfregar óleo no corpo, e, entre outras coisas, isto ajudava a proteger dos intensos raios do sol as partes expostas do corpo. O óleo também ajudava a manter a elasticidade da pele. Geralmente se usava azeite de oliveira, e não raro se acrescentava perfume. O que se costumava fazer era aplicar o óleo após o banho. (Ru 3:3; 2Sa 12:20) Ester submeteu-se a um tratamento de massagens por seis meses com óleo de mirra e por seis meses com óleo de bálsamo, antes de ser apresentada ao Rei Assuero. (Est 2:12) Costumava-se também esfregar óleo no corpo da pessoa a ser sepultada. — Mr 14:8; Lu 23:56.

Quando Jesus enviou os 12 apóstolos aos pares, eles untavam com óleo a muitos a quem curavam. A cura do enfermo ocorria, não por causa do óleo em si, mas da operação miraculosa do espírito santo de Deus. O óleo, que realmente tinha propriedades curativas e revigorantes, simbolizava a cura e o revigoramento obtidos. — Mr 6:13; Lu 9:1; compare isso com Lu 10:34.

Untar a cabeça com óleo era um sinal de favor. (Sal 23:5) Os cabeças de Efraim agiram de modo favorável para com os soldados capturados de Judá untando-os e enviando-os de volta para Jericó, como aconselhado pelo profeta Odede. (2Cr 28:15) Jeová falou de provocar falta de óleo usado para esfregar o corpo como sinal de seu desfavor. (De 28:40) Refrear-se a pessoa de esfregar o corpo com óleo era considerado sinal de luto. (2Sa 14:2; Da 10:2, 3) Untar com óleo a cabeça de um convidado era considerado gesto de hospitalidade e cortesia, como indicam as palavras de Jesus a respeito duma mulher que untou-lhe os pés com óleo perfumado. — Lu 7:38, 46.

Jesus mandou seus discípulos untarem a cabeça e lavarem o rosto ao jejuarem para que parecessem normais, não fazendo uma ostentação de santimônia e abnegação como os hipócritas líderes religiosos judeus faziam para impressionar os outros. — Mt 6:16, 17.

Tiago fala duma 'unção com óleo' em sentido espiritual, em nome de Jeová, para os espiritualmente doentes, como um procedimento apropriado para a pessoa que precisa de ajuda espiritual. Que ele se refere à doença espiritual é indicado por suas declarações: "Chame a si os anciãos da congregação", não médicos, e, "se ele tiver cometido pecados, ser-lhe-á isso perdoado". (Tg 5:13-16) Jesus fez uma aplicação espiritual dessa prática ao mandar a congregação de Laodiceia 'comprar dele unguento para passar nos olhos, para que visse'. — Re 3:18.

Unção. Quando a pessoa era ungida com óleo, este era derramado sobre a cabeça, de onde escorria pela barba e pelo colar da veste. (Sal 133:2) Nos tempos da história bíblica, tanto os hebreus como alguns dos não hebreus ungiam cerimonialmente os governantes. Isto constituía a confirmação de sua nomeação oficial para o cargo. (Jz 9:8, 15; 1Sa 9:16; 2Sa 19:10) Samuel ungiu Saul como rei depois de Deus ter designado Saul como Sua escolha. (1Sa 10:1) Davi foi ungido como rei em três ocasiões diferentes: uma vez por Samuel, depois por homens de Judá e finalmente por todas as tribos. (1Sa 16:13; 2Sa 2:4; 5:3) Arão foi ungido depois de sua designação para o cargo de sumo sacerdote. (Le 8:12) Depois disto, espargiu-se um pouco do óleo de unção junto com o sangue dos sacrifícios sobre as vestes de Arão e de seus filhos, mas Arão foi o único sobre cuja cabeça se derramou óleo. — Le 8:30.

As coisas dedicadas como sagradas também eram ungidas. Jacó tomou a pedra sobre a qual descansara a cabeça quando teve um sonho inspirado, erigiu-a como coluna e ungiu-a, desta forma marcando aquele lugar como sagrado; e ele chamou o lugar de Betel, que significa "Casa de Deus". (Gên 28:18, 19) Pouco depois, Jeová reconheceu que essa pedra havia sido ungida. (Gên 31:13) No ermo de Sinai, às ordens de Jeová, Moisés ungiu o tabernáculo e sua mobília, indicando que se tratava de coisas dedicadas, santas. — Êx 30:26-28.

Há exemplos em que uma pessoa foi considerada ungida por ter sido designada por Deus, embora não se tivesse derramado óleo sobre sua cabeça. Este princípio foi demonstrado quando Jeová mandou Elias ungir Hazael como rei da Síria, a Jeú como rei de Israel e a Eliseu como profeta em seu lugar. (1Rs 19:15, 16) O registro bíblico prossegue mostrando que um dos filhos dos profetas associados com Eliseu realmente ungiu Jeú com óleo literal, para ser rei de Israel. (2Rs 9:1-6) Mas não há registro algum de que alguém tenha ungido com óleo, quer a Hazael, quer a Eliseu. Moisés foi chamado de Cristo, ou Ungido, embora não tenha sido ungido com óleo, porque Moisés foi designado por Jeová para ser seu profeta e representante, o líder e libertador de Israel. (He 11:24-26) Outro caso pertinente é o do rei persa Ciro, que Isaías predissera que Jeová usaria como Seu ungido. (Is 45:1) Ciro não foi realmente ungido com óleo por um dos representantes de Jeová, mas, por ter sido designado por Jeová para determinada obra, ele podia ser chamado de ungido.

Na Lei que Jeová deu a Moisés, ele prescreveu uma fórmula para o óleo de unção. Era uma composição especial dos ingredientes mais seletos — mirra, canela fragrante, cálamo fragrante, cássia e azeite de oliveira. (Êx 30:22-25) Era pecado capital preparar essa mistura e usá-la para algum propósito comum ou não autorizado. (Êx 30:31-33) Isto demonstrava figurativamente a importância e a sacralidade de uma designação para um cargo que fora confirmada pela unção com óleo sagrado.

Cumprindo muitas profecias das Escrituras Hebraicas, Jesus de Nazaré mostrou ser o Ungido de Jeová e pôde corretamente ser chamado de Messias, ou Cristo, títulos estes que transmitem essa ideia. (Mt 1:16; He 1:8, 9) Em vez de ser ungido com óleo literal, ele foi ungido com o espírito de Jeová. (Mt 3:16) Foi assim que Jeová o designou Rei, Profeta e Sumo Sacerdote, de modo que ele foi chamado de Ungido de Jeová. (Sal 2:2; At 3:20-26; 4:26, 27; He 5:5, 6) Na cidade em que foi criado, Nazaré, Jesus admitiu essa unção ao aplicar a si mesmo a profecia de Isaías 61:1, onde aparece a frase: "Jeová me ungiu." (Lu 4:18) Jesus Cristo é o único nas Escrituras que detém uma unção para os três cargos: profeta, sumo sacerdote e rei. Jesus foi ungido com "óleo de exultação mais do que a [seus] associados" (os outros reis da linhagem de Davi). Isto foi porque ele recebeu a unção diretamente do próprio Jeová, não com óleo, mas com espírito santo, não para um reinado terrestre, mas para um reinado celestial conjugado com o cargo de Sumo Sacerdote celestial. — He 1:9; Sal 45:7.

Como no caso de Jesus, os seguidores de suas pisadas, que foram gerados pelo espírito e ungidos com espírito santo, podem ser chamados de ungidos. (2Co 1:21) Assim como Arão foi diretamente ungido como cabeça do sacerdócio, mas não se derramou óleo na cabeça dos seus filhos, individualmente, da mesma forma Jesus foi ungido diretamente por Jeová, e sua congregação de irmãos espirituais recebe a unção como corpo de pessoas por meio de Jesus Cristo. (At 2:1-4, 32, 33) Assim, eles receberam uma designação de Deus para ser reis e sacerdotes com Jesus Cristo nos céus. (2Co 5:5; Ef 1:13, 14; 1Pe 1:3, 4; Re 20:6) O apóstolo João indicou que a unção por espírito santo que os cristãos recebem lhes ensina. (1Jo 2:27) Ela os comissiona e qualifica para o ministério cristão do novo pacto. — 2Co 3:5, 6.

Jeová tem grande amor e interesse por seus ungidos e vigia sobre eles cuidadosamente. (1Cr 16:22; Sal 2:2, 5; 20:6; 105:15; Lu 18:7) Davi reconheceu que Deus é aquele que escolhia e designava Seus ungidos e que Deus era quem os julgaria. Levantar a mão para prejudicar os ungidos de Jeová ou quem quer que ele designe resulta no desagrado de Jeová. — 1Sa 24:6; 26:11, 23; veja CRISTO; INVESTIDURA; MESSIAS; REI (Representantes divinamente nomeados).

UNGUENTO E PERFUMES. Os termos hebraicos relacionados com unguentos podem aplicar-se não só a preparados do tipo pomada, que se liquefazem quando esfregados na pele, mas também a compostos oleosos que permanecem em forma líquida em temperaturas normais. — Êx 30:25; Sal 133:2.

No passado, como na atualidade, usavam-se unguentos principalmente como cosméticos e preparados medicinais, e sua vantagem devia-se sobretudo ao óleo que continham. A propriedade que as gorduras e os óleos têm de absorver e de reter odores tornava possível que o fabricante de unguentos produzisse preparados perfumados que eram altamente apreciados por sua fragrância. (Cân 1:3) A eficácia do óleo em limpar e a característica de amaciar a pele, além da fragrância dos aditivos, tornavam tais unguentos muito úteis na prevenção de escoriações e de irritações da pele, e como "desodorante" para o corpo em países quentes, onde a água com frequência era muito escassa. Oferecer aos convidados tal preparado, quando eles chegavam à casa duma pessoa, era certamente um ato de hospitalidade, conforme se observa do que Jesus disse quando alguém untou-lhe os pés com óleo perfumado. — Lu 7:37-46.

Quando unguentos perfumados de fabricação especial eram usados na preparação dum cadáver para sepultamento, sem dúvida serviam primariamente como desinfetantes e desodorantes. (2Cr 16:14; Lu 23:56) Tendo presente tal uso, Jesus explicou que a unção que ele recebera na casa de Simão, o leproso, que consistira em caríssimo óleo perfumado, cuja fragrância enchera a casa toda, era, em sentido figurado, "em preparação para o meu enterro". (Mt 26:6-12; Jo 12:3) Perfumes preciosos, tais como o nardo usado nessa ocasião, eram geralmente guardados em lindos estojos ou frascos vedados de alabastro. — Mr 14:3; veja ALABASTRO.

Óleo de Santa Unção e Incenso. O primeiro unguento mencionado na Bíblia foi o óleo de santa unção usado para santificar os utensílios dedicados do tabernáculo e o sacerdócio. (Êx 30:25-30) Proibia-se, sob pena de morte, o uso desse unguento especial para fins pessoais. Esta lei evidencia a sacralidade relacionada com o tabernáculo e aos que nele oficiavam. — Êx 30:31-33.

Jeová deu a Moisés a fórmula do óleo de santa unção. Somente "os mais seletos perfumes" deviam ser usados: mirra, canela fragrante, cálamo fragrante, cássia e o mais puro azeite de oliveira, e cada um em quantidades especificadas. (Êx 30:22-24) Da mesma forma, Jeová deu a fórmula do incenso sagrado. Não se tratava apenas duma substância que arderia sem chama e fumegaria; era um incenso perfumado especial. (Êx 30:7; 40:27; Le 16:12; 2Cr 2:4; 13:10, 11) Para fabricá-lo, usavam-se quantidades específicas de gotas de estoraque, onicha, gálbano perfumado e olíbano puro, sendo que Deus o descreveu adicionalmente como "uma mistura aromática, trabalho de fabricante de unguento, salgado, puro, algo sagrado". Parte do incenso era reduzido a pó fino e provavelmente peneirado para se obter um produto uniforme, adequado para uso especial. Era crime capital usá-lo para fins pessoais. — Êx 30:34-38.

Usava-se fragrante óleo de bálsamo tanto na fabricação do óleo de unção como na do santo incenso. (Êx 25:6; 35:8, 28) Parece razoável presumir que as substâncias aromáticas usadas na fabricação do unguento sagrado eram reduzidas a pó e daí cozidas no óleo (compare com Jó 41:31), após o que se deixava o unguento descansar antes de o óleo ser retirado e filtrado.

A fabricação do óleo de unção e do incenso perfumado não foi algo aprendido pela prática e experiência, pois já no começo Jeová disse: "Deveras ponho sabedoria no coração de todo o sábio de coração, para que deveras façam . . . o óleo de unção e o incenso perfumado para o santuário." (Êx 31:6-11; 35:10-15; 37:29; 39:33, 38) Dali em diante, confiou-se a alguns dos sacerdotes a fabricação de unguento para a mistura desses materiais e também a supervisão do suprimento de tais itens. (1Cr 9:30; Núm 4:16) No entanto, quando Israel se desviou da adoração pura, Jeová deixou de sentir prazer na fabricação ou no uso desses unguentos e incensos especiais. — Is 1:13.

Importância Econômica dos Unguentos e dos Perfumes. Os unguentos, os perfumes e o incenso não se limitavam aos produtos sagrados usados no santuário. Já nos dias de Salomão havia "toda sorte de perfume" e de pós fragrantes disponíveis para perfumar casas, roupas, camas e o corpo dos membros da realeza e de outros que pudessem dar-se ao luxo de adquiri-los. (Est 2:12; Sal 45:8; Pr 7:17; Cân 3:6, 7; 4:10) Nem a fabricação destes preparados se restringia ao sacerdócio levítico. Até mesmo mulheres eram, às vezes, fabricantes peritas de unguentos, e nos dias de Neemias havia uma agremiação comercial a que pertenciam membros dos misturadores de unguentos. — 1Sa 8:13; Ne 3:8.

No mundo antigo, o interesse público em produtos perfumados gerava comércio e intercâmbio, não só de tais itens de consumo, mas também das matérias-primas necessárias para sua fabricação. Além da mirra, especialmente para os unguentos, e do olíbano para o incenso, outros materiais, incluindo o nardo, o açafrão, o cálamo, a canela, o aloés, a cássia, bem como várias especiarias, gomas e plantas aromáticas, com frequência eram transportadas longas distâncias, antes de chegarem aos potes e às perfumarias dos fabricantes de unguentos. — Cân 4:14; Re 18:11, 13.

UNGUENTO PARA OS OLHOS. Substância cuja finalidade era ser aplicada nos olhos por causa de suas propriedades curativas; usada em sentido figurado na Bíblia. Os cristãos espiritualmente cegos da congregação de Laodiceia foram incentivados a comprar 'unguento para passar nos olhos, para que vissem'. (Re 3:17, 18) O termo grego para unguento para os olhos (kol·loú·ri·on) significa literalmente pão grosseiro de massa enrolada ou redonda, o que sugere que o unguento era provavelmente transformado em pequenas massas redondas ou enroladas. Uma vez que Laodiceia era famosa por sua escola de medicina e provavelmente também produzia o remédio para os olhos conhecido como pó frígio, a recomendação de comprar unguento para os olhos teria sido muito significativa para os cristãos ali.

UNI.

1. Músico levita que tocou um instrumento de cordas na procissão que levou a Arca do Pacto para Jerusalém. — 1Cr 15:3, 16, 18, 20.

2. Levita do pós-exílio, designado para montar guarda sob o sumo sacerdote Jesua. — Ne 12:1, 9.

UNIGÊNITO. A palavra grega mo·no·ge·nés é definida pelos lexicógrafos como "único de sua espécie, ímpar", ou "o único membro de uma parentela ou espécie". (Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament [Léxico Grego-Inglês do Novo Testamento], de Thayer, 1889, p. 417; Greek English Lexicon [Léxico Grego-Inglês], de Liddell e Scott, Oxford, 1968, p. 1144) Este termo é usado para descrever a relação tanto de filhos como de filhas com seus pais.

As Escrituras mencionam o "filho unigênito" de uma viúva que vivia na cidade de Naim, a "filha unigênita" de Jairo e o filho "unigênito" dum certo homem, filho este a quem Jesus curou dum demônio. (Lu 7:11, 12; 8:41, 42; 9:38) A Septuaginta grega usa mo·no·ge·nés ao falar da filha de Jefté, a respeito de quem está escrito: "Ora, ela era absolutamente filha única. Fora dela não tinha filho nem filha." — Jz 11:34.

O apóstolo João repetidas vezes descreve o Senhor Jesus Cristo como o Filho unigênito de Deus. (Jo 1:14; 3:16, 18; 1Jo 4:9) Isto não se refere ao seu nascimento humano ou a ele como apenas o homem Jesus. Como o Ló·gos, ou Palavra, "este estava no princípio com o Deus", mesmo "antes de haver o mundo". (Jo 1:1, 2; 17:5, 24) Naquele tempo, enquanto se achava em seu estado de existência pré-humana, ele é descrito como o "Filho unigênito", a quem o Pai enviara "ao mundo". — 1Jo 4:9.

Ele é descrito como tendo "uma glória tal como a de um filho unigênito dum pai", aquele que residia "na posição junto ao seio do Pai". (Jo 1:14, 18) É difícil imaginar um relacionamento mais íntimo, mais confidente, ou mais amoroso e terno, entre um pai e seu filho do que este. — Veja SEIO, POSIÇÃO JUNTO AO.

Os anjos do céu são filhos de Deus, assim como Adão era "filho de Deus". (Gên 6:2; Jó 1:6; 38:7; Lu 3:38) Mas o Ló·gos, mais tarde chamado Jesus, é o "Filho unigênito de Deus". (Jo 3:18) É o único de sua espécie, o único a quem o próprio Deus criou diretamente, sem a intermediação ou cooperação de qualquer criatura. Ele é o único a quem Deus, seu Pai, usou para trazer à existência todas as outras criaturas. Ele é o primogênito e o principal dentre todos os outros anjos (Col 1:15, 16; He 1:5, 6), anjos que as Escrituras chamam de "os semelhantes a Deus" ou "deuses". (Sal 8:4, 5) Por conseguinte, de acordo com alguns dos mais antigos e melhores manuscritos, o Senhor Jesus Cristo é devidamente descrito em português como "o deus unigênito [gr.: mo·no·ge·nés the·ós; lit.: "unigênito deus"]". — Jo 1:18, NM, ALA, IBB.

Algumas traduções, em apoio ao conceito trinitário do "Deus Filho", invertem o sentido da frase grega mo·no·ge·nés the·ós e a traduzem nas línguas atuais por "único gerado Deus". Mas W. J. Hickie, em seu Greek-English Lexicon to the New Testament (Léxico Grego-Inglês Para o Novo Testamento, 1956, p. 123), diz que é difícil de ver por que esses tradutores vertem mo·no·ge·nés hui·ós como "o Filho unigênito", mas ao mesmo tempo traduzem mo·no·ge·nés the·ós como "único gerado Deus", em vez de "Deus unigênito".

Paulo referiu-se a Isaque como filho "unigênito" de Abraão (He 11:17), embora Abraão também tivesse gerado Ismael, com Agar, bem como diversos filhos com Quetura. (Gên 16:15; 25:1, 2; 1Cr 1:28, 32) O pacto de Deus, porém, foi estabelecido somente por meio de Isaque, o único filho de Abraão segundo a promessa de Deus, bem como o único filho de Sara. (Gên 17:16-19) Ademais, na ocasião em que Abraão ofereceu Isaque, este era o único filho que estava na casa de seu pai. Não tinham nascido ainda os filhos de Quetura, e já fazia cerca de 20 anos que Ismael fora embora — sem dúvida estava casado e era cabeça de sua própria casa. — Gên 22:2.

Assim, de diversos pontos de vista com respeito à promessa e ao pacto, as coisas a respeito das quais Paulo estava escrevendo aos hebreus, Isaque era o filho unigênito de Abraão. De maneira que Paulo tece um paralelo entre "as promessas" e o filho "unigênito" e "'teu descendente' . . . por intermédio de Isaque". (He 11:17, 18) Quer Josefo tenha adotado ou não um ponto de vista similar, ele também mencionou Isaque como o filho "unigênito" de Abraão. — Jewish Antiquities (Antiguidades Judaicas), I, 222 (xiii, 1).

UR.

1. [Luz]. 'Pai' de Elifal, um dos poderosos das forças militares de Davi. (1Cr 11:26, 35) Parece que Ur é o mesmo que Aasbai. — 2Sa 23:34.

2. "Ur dos Caldeus", a cidade da Mesopotâmia em que nasceu Harã, irmão de Abrão (Abraão) — e provavelmente também o próprio Abraão. (Gên 11:28; At 7:2, 4) Jeová apareceu a Abraão e mandou-lhe partir de Ur. A Bíblia, ao creditar essa mudança a Tera por ser o chefe da família, diz que Tera levou seu filho, Abraão, sua nora Sara e seu neto Ló, mudando-se de Ur para Harã. — Gên 11:31; 12:1; Ne 9:7.

Geralmente se identifica Ur com Muqaiyir, na margem O do atual leito do rio Eufrates e a cerca de 240 km a SE de Babilônia. As ruínas ali abrangem uma área de cerca de 910 por 730 m. Tendo sido outrora o centro da adoração da deusa-lua Nana (ou Sin), a característica mais notável do sítio ainda é uma torre-templo, ou zigurate, de uns 61 m de comprimento, 46 m de largura e 21 m de altura. — FOTO, Vol. 2, p. 322.

Embora atualmente o curso do rio Eufrates passe a cerca de 16 km ao L do lugar de Ur, a evidência indica que no passado o curso do Eufrates passava logo ao O da cidade. O historiador e geógrafo Henri Gaubert, em seu livro Abraham, Loved by God (Abraão, Amado por Deus), declarou: "Nos dias de Abrão, os três grandes rios (Carun, Tigre e Eufrates) fluíam para as águas do golfo Pérsico por três estuários separados. Convém salientar aqui o sítio da cidade de Ur . . . na margem esquerda [leste] do Eufrates. A tribo hebreia de Abrão, originária da cidade-estado de Ur, podia, em consequência, ser perfeitamente chamada pela frase 'o povo de além do rio'." — 1968, p. 8.

Também, uma edição revisada e atualizada de Excavations at Ur (Escavações em Ur), de Sir Leonard Woolley, mostra que o Eufrates estava definitivamente ao O de Ur. Comentando sobre as defesas de Ur, esse livro declara: "Essa maciça fortificação achava-se adicionalmente fortalecida pelo fato de que o rio Eufrates (como se pode ver do contorno afundado de seu antigo leito) banhava a base da muralha ocidental, ao passo que a cinquenta jardas [cerca de 45 metros] da base da muralha oriental fora escavado um largo canal que partia do rio logo acima da extremidade norte da cidade, de modo que, em três lados, Ur estava circundada por fossos." (Ur 'of the Chaldees' [Ur 'dos Caldeus'], de P. R. S. Moorey, 1982, p. 138) Assim, pode-se dizer apropriadamente que Jeová tomou Abraão “do outro lado do Rio”, isto é, o Eufrates. — Jos 24:3.

Nos túmulos reais em Ur, os escavadores encontraram muitos objetos de ouro, de prata, de lápis-lazúli, e outros materiais caros, bem como indícios de que antigos reis e rainhas sumérios da cidade eram sepultados junto com seu séquito de escravos e escravas.

As ruínas do que parece terem sido casas, descobertas em escavações em Ur (que alguns sugerem terem pertencido ao período entre os séculos 20 e 16 AEC), revelam que as casas eram construídas de tijolo, com paredes rebocadas e caiadas, e dispunham de 13 ou 14 aposentos ao redor dum pátio pavimentado. Entre as tabuinhas de argila encontradas neste sítio havia algumas usadas no ensino da escrita cuneiforme. Outras tabuinhas indicam que os estudantes ali dispunham de tabuadas de multiplicação e de divisão, e extraíam raízes quadradas e cúbicas. Muitas das tabuinhas são documentos de transações comerciais.

Assim, à base das escavações feitas em Ur, parece claro que Abraão fez notáveis sacrifícios materiais ao partir daquela cidade. Mas, com fé, o patriarca “aguardava a cidade que tem verdadeiros alicerces, cujo construtor e fazedor é Deus”. — He 11:8-10.

URBANO [do lat., que significa “Polido; Elegante”]. Cristão de Roma, saudado na carta de Paulo. (Ro 16:9) Este nome é encontrado com frequência em inscrições da família de César, mas nada indicam os registros quanto a se este Urbano era um servo imperial.

URDIDURA. Na tecelagem, o conjunto de fios dispostos no comprimento do tecido. O conjunto de fios tecidos alternadamente por cima e por baixo desses fios, em ângulos retos, atravessando o tecido constitui a trama. Quando os sacerdotes de Israel examinavam os materiais tecidos para detectar a lepra, eles inspecionavam tanto a urdidura como a trama. — Le 13:47-59; veja LEPRA (Nas roupas e nas casas); TECELAGEM.

Ao terminar o tecido, o tecelão corta transversalmente os fios da urdidura, removendo o material e deixando as “franjas”, ou extremidades dos fios da urdidura, presas ao tear. O Rei Ezequias fez alusão a isto ao relembrar sua grave doença, quando achava que Deus estava prestes a abreviar-lhe a vida, cortando Ezequias “dos próprios fios da urdidura” numa morte prematura. — Is 38:9-12.

URI [duma raiz que significa “luz”].

1. Descendente de Judá por intermédio de Peres, Esrom, Calebe e Hur. Bezalel, filho de Uri, era um notável artífice do tabernáculo. — Êx 31:2; 35:30; 38:22; 1Cr 2:4, 5, 9, 18-20; 2Cr 1:5.

2. Pai de Geber, que era um dos prepostos de alimento, de Salomão. — 1Rs 4:7, 19.

3. Um dos três porteiros levitas que despediram suas esposas estrangeiras e filhos em resultado do conselho de Esdras. — Esd 10:10, 11, 24, 44.

URIAS [Minha Luz é Jeová].

1. O marido hitita de Bate-Seba. Urias era um dos guerreiros estrangeiros de Davi. (2Sa 23:39; 1Cr 11:41) Suas palavras, sua conduta e ter-se casado com uma judia, bem como morar ele em Jerusalém, perto do palácio do rei, sugerem que adotara a adoração de Jeová Deus como prosélito circunciso. — 2Sa 11:3, 6-11.

Enquanto Urias se empenhava na batalha contra Amom, em Rabá, Davi cometeu adultério com sua esposa, Bate-Seba, sendo que Urias nunca veio a saber disto. Davi então mandou buscá-lo e fez com que Urias fosse a Jerusalém, após o que o rei lhe perguntou como ia a guerra e o mandou para casa, de modo que o filho da esposa de Urias parecesse ser do próprio Urias. No entanto, Urias recusou-se a ir para lá, porque o exército estava no campo. (De 23:9-11; compare com 1Sa 21:5.) Mesmo quando Davi o embriagou, ele ainda se recusou a dormir em casa. (2Sa 11:1-13) O crime de Davi contra Urias tornou-se então duplo, pois Davi o enviou de volta para a guerra com instruções dirigidas a Joabe, para que este manobrasse as coisas de modo que Urias morresse em combate. — 2Sa 11:14-26.

2. Sacerdote que serviu de testemunha quando Isaías escreveu o nome de seu filho, Maer-Salal-Hás-Baz, numa tábua. (Is 8:1, 2) O nome de Urias é grafado Urija em outro lugar. — 2Rs 16:10; veja URIJA, URIJÁ N.º 1.

3. Presume-se que tenha sido um sacerdote, um dos que ficaram em pé ao lado direito de Esdras quando este leu a Lei para os exilados que haviam retornado e que estavam reunidos junto ao Portão das Águas, em Jerusalém. — Ne 8:1-4.

URIEL [Deus É Luz].

1. Levita descendente de Coate; filho de Taate. — 1Cr 6:22, 24.

2. Chefe dos coatitas na época em que Davi mandou levar a Arca do Pacto a Jerusalém. — 1Cr 15:5, 11, 12, 15.

3. Pai de Micaia (Maacá), que era esposa do Rei Roboão e mãe de Abias. (2Cr 13:1, 2; 11:21) Maacá era neta de Absalão. Visto que os três filhos homens de Absalão pelo que parece morreram jovens e sem filhos (2Sa 14:27; 18:18), Micaia dever ter sido filha de Tamar e Uriel, sendo que Tamar era filha de Absalão e Uriel era genro, não filho, de Absalão.

URIJA, URIJÁ [Minha Luz É Jeová].

1. Sacerdote durante o reinado do Rei Acaz, de Judá (761-746 AEC). Quando Acaz foi a Damasco para oferecer tributo a Tiglate-Pileser III, ele enviou a Urija o desenho e o modelo do grande altar que vira lá e mandou-o construir um altar semelhante, instruindo-o depois a usar este altar, em vez de o de Jeová. Urija obedeceu. (2Rs 16:8-16) Urija (Urias) também testemunhou uma escrita de Isaías. (Is 8:1, 2) Embora não tenha sido assim identificado, presume-se que ele era sumo sacerdote, em vista de sua importância e de não existir outra pessoa com esse título naquela época.

2. Profeta de Jeová, filho de Semaías de Quiriate-Jearim. Durante o reinado de Jeoiaquim, Urijá profetizou contra Judá e Jerusalém exatamente como Jeremias fizera. No entanto, ao ficar sabendo que Jeoiaquim procurava matá-lo, Urijá fugiu para o Egito, mas foi levado de volta e morto, sendo que seu corpo foi lançado num cemitério comum. — Je 26:20-23.

3. Filho de Hacoz; sacerdote cujo filho, Meremote, era um dos sacerdotes aos cuidados de quem Esdras confiou o ouro e a prata, bem como os vasos do templo, levados a Jerusalém. Meremote, filho de Urijá, ajudou mais tarde a fazer reparos no muro de Jerusalém. — Esd 8:33; Ne 3:4, 21.

URIM E TUMIM. Objetos usados para determinar a vontade divina quando questões de importância nacional necessitavam duma resposta de Jeová.

Conforme registrado em Levítico 8:8, Moisés, depois de colocar o peitoral em Arão, pôs o Urim e o Tumim no peitoral. Ao passo que a preposição hebraica aqui traduzida "em" [abrangida na contração "no"] possa ser traduzida "sobre", a mesma palavra é usada em Êxodo 25:16 ao se falar de colocar as duas tábuas de pedra na Arca do Pacto. (Êx 31:18) Alguns têm sugerido que o Urim e o Tumim eram as 12 pedras afixadas no peitoral. Que este não era o caso é demonstrado pelo fato de que, na cerimônia de investidura do sacerdócio, o peitoral completo, com as 12 pedras costuradas nele, foi colocado em Arão, e depois o Urim e o Tumim foram colocados no peitoral. Também, uma comparação de Êxodo 28:9, 12, 30, refuta a teoria de que consistiam nas duas pedras de ônix colocadas sobre as ombreiras do éfode do sumo sacerdote. (Êx 28:9-14) É evidente que se tratava de objetos distintos.

Seu Uso. É digno de nota que o Urim e o Tumim devessem ficar sobre o coração de Arão quando ele 'entrasse perante Jeová', o que sem dúvida se referia a Arão pôr-se de pé no Santo, diante da cortina do compartimento Santíssimo, ao indagar de Jeová. Sua localização, "sobre o coração de Arão", parece indicar que o Urim e o Tumim eram colocados na dobra da veste, ou bolsa, formada pelo peitoral dobrado. Destinavam-se aos "julgamentos dos filhos de Israel" e eram usados quando uma questão de importância para os líderes nacionais e, por conseguinte, para a própria nação, precisava duma resposta de Jeová. Sendo o Legislador de Israel, Jeová daria uma resposta ao sumo sacerdote sobre o proceder correto a seguir em qualquer assunto. — Êx 28:30.

Quando Abiatar, depois de escapar da matança dos sacerdotes de Nobe, ocasião em que seu pai morreu, procurou Davi, levando o éfode, Davi pediu que usasse o Urim e o Tumim. Pelo visto, este era o éfode do sumo sacerdote. — 1Sa 22:19, 20; 23:6-15.

Podem Ter Sido Sortes. À base dos casos registrados nas Escrituras, em que Jeová foi consultado por meio do Urim e do Tumim, parece que a pergunta era formulada de tal modo que se pudesse responder com um "sim" ou um "não", ou pelo menos com uma resposta muito breve e direta. Em certo caso (1Sa 28:6), apenas o Urim é mencionado, evidentemente subentendendo-se a inclusão também do Tumim.

Vários comentaristas bíblicos creem que o Urim e o Tumim eram sortes. Estes são chamados de "as sortes sagradas" na tradução, em inglês, de James Moffatt, de Êxodo 28:30. Alguns supõem que consistiam em três peças, uma com a inscrição "sim", outra com "não" e a terceira em branco. Estas seriam retiradas, fornecendo a resposta à pergunta proposta, a menos que a peça em branco fosse tirada, caso em que não havia resposta. Outros acham que talvez fossem duas pedras achatadas, brancas num lado e pretas no outro. Quando lançadas, dois lados brancos significariam "sim", dois lados pretos "não", e um preto e um branco significariam nenhuma resposta. Em certa ocasião, quando Saul indagou por meio do sacerdote se devia prosseguir no ataque aos filisteus, ele não recebeu resposta. Achando que alguém dentre os seus homens havia pecado, ele suplicou: "Ó Deus de Israel, dá Tumim!" Saul e Jonatã foram separados dos que estavam presentes; depois disso, lançaram-se sortes para se decidir entre os dois. Neste relato, a súplica: "Dá Tumim", parece ser à parte do lançamento das sortes, embora talvez dê um indício de que havia alguma relação entre as duas coisas. — 1Sa 14:36-42.

Serviam para Vincular o Reino com o Sacerdócio. O sacerdócio arônico é mencionado em Deuteronômio 33:8-10, que diz: "Teu Tumim e teu Urim pertencem ao homem que te é leal." A referência a estes como pertencendo "ao homem que . . . é leal [a Jeová]" talvez seja uma alusão à lealdade da tribo de Levi (da qual proveio o sacerdócio arônico), demonstrada em relação com o incidente do bezerro de ouro. — Êx 32:25-29.

Jeová providenciou sabiamente o Urim e o Tumim e colocou-os nas mãos do sumo sacerdote. Isto tornava o rei dependente, em grande medida, do sacerdócio, evitando-se a concentração de demasiado poder nas mãos do rei. Tornava necessária a cooperação entre a realeza e o sacerdócio. (Núm 27:18-21) Jeová tornava conhecida a sua vontade a Israel por meio de sua Palavra escrita, também por meio de profetas e de sonhos. Mas parece que os profetas e os sonhos eram usados em ocasiões especiais, ao passo que o sumo sacerdote, com o Urim e o Tumim, estava sempre presente junto ao povo.

Seu Uso Cessou em 607 AEC. De acordo com a tradição judaica, o uso do Urim e do Tumim cessou quando Jerusalém foi desolada e seu templo foi destruído, em 607 AEC, pelos exércitos babilônios sob o Rei Nabucodonosor. (Talmude Babilônico, Sotah 48*b*) Este conceito é apoiado pelo que lemos a respeito destes objetos nos livros de Esdras e de Neemias. Ali, foi dito a certos homens, que alegavam ser descendentes sacerdotais, mas que não conseguiam encontrar seus nomes no registro público, que eles não podiam comer das coisas santíssimas, providas para o sacerdócio, até que um sacerdote se pusesse de pé com o Urim e o Tumim. Mas não há registro algum do seu uso naquela época, e, depois disso, a Bíblia não mais tece nenhuma referência a estes objetos sagrados. — Esd 2:61-63; Ne 7:63-65.

O Sumo Sacerdote Maior Consulta a Jeová. Jesus Cristo é descrito na carta de Paulo aos hebreus como o grande Rei-Sacerdote segundo a maneira de Melquisedeque. (He 6:19, 20; 7:1-3) Nele se combinam a realeza e o sacerdócio. Sua obra sacerdotal foi prefigurada pela do sumo sacerdote do antigo Israel. (He 8:3-5; 9:6-12) Todo o julgamento da humanidade está entregue às suas mãos, como tal Sumo Sacerdote. (Jo 5:22) No entanto, quando estava na terra, Jesus declarou: "As coisas que vos digo não falo da minha própria iniciativa; mas o Pai, que permanece em união comigo, está fazendo as suas obras" (Jo 14:10), e: "Não faço nada de minha própria iniciativa; mas assim como o Pai me ensinou, estas coisas eu falo." (Jo 8:28) Disse também: "Se eu julgo, o meu julgamento é veraz, porque não estou sozinho, mas o Pai, que me enviou, está comigo." (Jo 8:16) Certamente, em sua posição celestial exaltada, e aperfeiçoado como Sumo Sacerdote para sempre, ele continua neste proceder de sujeição ao Pai, voltando-se para ele em busca de orientação nos julgamentos. — He 7:28; compare isso com 1Co 11:3; 15:27, 28.

URSO [hebr.: dov ou dohv; gr.: ár·kos]. O urso-pardo da Síria (Ursus arctos syriacus) é a espécie outrora encontrada na Palestina, e ainda é encontrada no N da Síria, no NO do Irã e no S da Turquia. Sua cor mais frequente é o marrom-claro, e seu peso chega, em média, a uns 140 kg. Apesar de parecer desajeitado, o urso consegue mover-se com grande rapidez mesmo em terreno acidentado, e algumas variedades atingem uma velocidade de quase 48 km/h para curtas distâncias. Os ursos são também bons nadadores, e a maioria consegue trepar.

A ideia de que os ursos abraçam ou apertam suas vítimas até que morram não é comprovada pelos fatos. Quando luta, o urso ataca com suas enormes patas, e os braços fortes e pesados cravam fundo as unhas não retrácteis no corpo de seu oponente. Um único golpe talvez baste para matar um animal, tal como um veado. Portanto, as Escrituras mui apropriadamente aludem à periculosidade do urso, em comparação com a do leão. (Am 5:19; La 3:10) De fato, os naturalistas consideram o urso ainda mais perigoso do que os grandes felinos. Em geral, porém, como outros animais, o urso não incomoda os humanos, mas os evita, embora possa atacar quando provocado ou surpreendido.

A ferocidade da ursa quando os filhotes ficam perdidos é mencionada várias vezes nas Escrituras. (2Sa 17:8; Pr 17:12; Os 13:8) Em certa ocasião, Deus usou ursas para executar os jovens delinquentes que zombaram do profeta Eliseu. — 2Rs 2:24.

Os ursos subsistem duma alimentação variada, consumindo folhas e raízes das plantas, frutas, bagas, nozes, ovos, insetos, peixes, roedores e coisas assim, e têm predileção especial por mel. Embora haja exceções, os ursos parecem preferir uma alimentação vegetariana. No antigo Israel, porém, nas épocas em que frutas e outros itens vegetais da alimentação do urso eram escassos, os pastores de ovelhas e de cabras tinham de manter-se vigilantes contra as incursões dos ursos. Quando jovem, Davi teve de enfrentar o ataque dum urso, a fim de proteger o rebanho de seu pai. — 1Sa 17:34-37.

Sabe-se que os ursos soltam um grunhido impaciente quando estão famintos e sentem o cheiro de caça. Por isto, o profeta Isaías descreve os israelitas como se estivessem 'gemendo assim como ursos', na expectativa de justiça e salvação, apenas para serem repetidas vezes desapontados. (Is 59:11) Um urso que arremete é também apropriadamente comparado a um governante iníquo que fustiga e oprime seus humildes súditos. — Pr 28:15.

Na visão de Daniel sobre terríveis animais que simbolizam potências mundiais da terra, o urso representava a Potência Mundial Medo-Persa e sua cobiça pela conquista territorial e pelo saque. (Da 7:5, 17) Igualmente voraz, a fera que sai do mar, com sete cabeças e dez chifres, é observada na visão de João com pés "como os dum urso". (Re 13:2)

A paz entre o povo novamente ajuntado de Jeová, sob o domínio do Messias, é indicada pela profecia de que a ursa pastará com a vaca. — Is 11:7.

URTIGA. Qualquer dentre uma variedade de plantas com folhas serrilhadas que, em geral, acham-se abundantemente cobertas por pelos urticantes que contêm um líquido irritante. Quando tocadas, as pontas dos pelos se rompem e as extremidades pontiagudas quebradas penetram na pele, fazendo com que o líquido entre no ferimento. Sabe-se da existência de pelo menos quatro variedades de urtiga na Palestina, e a mais comum é a urtiga-romana (Urtica pilulifera), que pode atingir a altura de 1,8 m e é encontrada especialmente em ruínas.

Os termos hebraicos hha·rúl (Pr 24:31; Sof 2:9) e qim·móhs (Is 34:13; Os 9:6) aplicam-se a plantas que proliferam em campos abandonados e em ruínas. Em Jó 30:7, a referência a hha·rúl sugere plantas altas. Outra palavra hebraica, sir·pádh ("sarça", Al; "urtiga", BJ, NM), é contrastada com a murta. — Is 55:13.

Há quem considere que uma forma da palavra qim·móhs ("cardos", IBB; "espinhos", ALA; "ervas daninhas", NM), em Provérbios 24:31, esteja em paralelo com hha·rúl. Por conseguinte, alguns peritos acham que qim·móhs indica ervas daninhas em geral; outros creem que hha·rúl talvez seja um termo genérico que se aplica a mato. A tradução de hha-rúl por "urtigas", em Jó 30:7, também tem sido questionada por alguns, à base de que não se procuraria voluntariamente abrigo sob urtigas. Numa região árida, porém, as pessoas bem que poderiam aproveitar a sombra de urtigas altas ou, devido à fome, vir a ajuntar essas plantas para servir de alimento. De modo que a tradução é apropriada.

UTAI.

1. Residente de Jerusalém no período pós-exílico; descendente de Judá através de Peres. — 1Cr 9:3, 4.

2. Cabeça duma casa paterna entre os filhos de Bigvai que foram com Esdras para Jerusalém, em 468 AEC. — Esd 8:1, 14.

UTENSÍLIOS. O termo hebraico kelí tem aplicação muito ampla e pode referir-se a objetos (Gên 24:53; Êx 3:22; Le 13:49, 52, 57-59; 15:4, 6), a apetrechos (Gên 27:3), a bens (Gên 31:37), a receptáculos (Gên 42:25; 43:11), a equipamento (Gên 45:20), a instrumentos (Gên 49:5; 1Cr 15:16), a implementos (Êx 25:9), a utensílios (Êx 25:39; 27:3, 19; 30:27, 28; 31:7-9), a vasos (Le 6:28; 11:32-34), a vestimenta (De 22:5), a armas (Jz 9:54; 18:11, 16, 17), a bagagem (1Sa 10:22; 17:22), a sacolas (1Sa 17:40, 49), a organismos (1Sa 21:5) e a ferramentas (1Rs 6:7).

A palavra kelí muitas vezes refere-se aos vários utensílios usados no santuário. Esses utensílios incluíam itens tais como pratos, bilhas, pás, tigelas, garfos, porta-lumes, apagadores, espevitadeiras, bacias e taças. (Êx 25:29, 30, 39; 27:3, 19; 37:16, 23; 38:3; 1Rs 7:40-50; 2Cr 4:11-22) Por serem para finalidades sagradas, esses utensílios eram "sagrados". (1Rs 8:4) Concordemente, visto que os judeus que partiram de Babilônia em 537 AEC tiveram o privilégio de levar os utensílios sagrados que o Rei Nabucodonosor tirara de Jerusalém, eles tinham de manter-se limpos em sentido religioso e moral. Aplicava-se a eles a ordem profética: "Desviai-vos, desviai-vos, saí de [Babilônia], não toqueis em nada impuro; saí do meio dela, mantende-vos puros, vós os que carregais os utensílios de Jeová." (Is 52:11) Isto exigia mais do que pureza cerimonial, exterior. Exigia pureza de coração. O apóstolo Paulo, ao escrever aos coríntios, aplicou as palavras de Isaías 52:11 para mostrar que os cristãos também devem estar isentos da poluição da carne e do espírito. — 2Co 6:14-18; 7:1.

O fundador do cristianismo, Jesus Cristo, deu o exemplo neste sentido, permanecendo "leal, cândido, imaculado, separado dos pecadores". (He 7:26) Enquanto estava na terra, ele demonstrou zelo em manter a santidade do templo de Jeová, como nas duas vezes em que o purificou do comercialismo. (Jo 2:13-25; Mt 21:12, 13; Mr 11:15-17; Lu 19:45, 46) No que concerne à segunda ocasião em que Jesus purificou o templo, Marcos relata que ele "não deixou ninguém carregar qualquer utensílio através do templo". (Mr 11:16) De modo que Jesus evidentemente não permitiu que ninguém depreciasse a santidade do pátio do templo, usando-o como simples atalho ao carregar itens para outra parte de Jerusalém.

UZ.

1. Filho de Arã e bisneto de Noé através de Sem. — Gên 10:22, 23; 1Cr 1:17.

2. Primogênito de Naor e Milca; sobrinho de Abraão. — Gên 22:20, 21.

3. Filho de Disã e descendente de Seir, o horeu. — Gên 36:20, 21, 28.

4. Terra natal de Jó (Jó 1:1), povoada por Uz, mas não se pode dizer com certeza se este Uz era filho de Arã ou de Naor. (Gên 10:22, 23; 22:20, 21) Sua localização exata é desconhecida. Pelo visto, Uz ficava perto de Edom, o que permitiria uma ampliação posterior do domínio edomita até Uz ou que alguns edomitas posteriores residissem na "terra de Uz", conforme indicado em Lamentações 4:21. Jeremias recebeu a comissão de passar o copo do furor de Deus a "todos os reis da terra de Uz", e o contexto imediato inclui referências à Filístia, a Edom, a Moabe e a Amom. (Je 25:15, 17, 20, 21) A terra natal de Jó era vulnerável ao ataque dos sabeus (do S) e dos caldeus (do L). (Jó 1:15-17) Considerados em conjunto, estes fatores indicam um local ao L da Terra da Promessa e perto de Edom, em alguma parte do N da Arábia.

UZA [possivelmente uma forma abreviada de Uzias, que significa "Minha Força É Jeová"].

1. Benjamita. — 1Cr 8:1, 7.

2. Nome relacionado com um jardim. O Rei Manassés e o Rei Amom, de Judá, foram sepultados no jardim de Uza, em vez de nos costumeiros locais reais de sepultamento. (2Rs 21:18, 23, 26) Nem Uza nem o jardim são conhecidos em outros aspectos. Visto que se sepultavam pessoas nesse local, não podia estar localizado na área do templo, e considerando que o palácio real ficava contíguo ao templo, a "casa" de Manassés no jardim de Uza talvez fosse uma residência de verão.

3. Cabeça duma família de netineus, alguns dos quais retornaram a Jerusalém com Zorobabel, em 537 AEC. — Esd 2:1, 2, 43, 49; Ne 7:51.

UZÁ [possivelmente uma forma abreviada de Uzias, que significa "Minha Força É Jeová"].

1. Levita merarita. — 1Cr 6:29.

2. Filho de Abinadabe, sem dúvida um levita. Uzá e seu irmão, Aiô, conduziam a carroça que transportava a Arca do Pacto desde sua casa, quando Davi quis levá-la para Jerusalém. Quando os touros que puxavam a carroça quase a fizeram tombar, Uzá estendeu a mão e segurou a Arca para firmá-la, pelo que Jeová o golpeou no ato com a morte. Davi chamou esse local de Peres-Uzá, porque ali Jeová irrompera numa "brecha contra Uzá". — 2Sa 6:3-8; 1Cr 13:7-11.

Apesar das presumíveis boas intenções de Uzá de impedir que a Arca caísse, isto foi julgado como um "ato irreverente". (2Sa 6:7) Isto se deu porque houve desobediência deliberada. Jeová instruíra que em nenhuma circunstância a Arca devia ser tocada por pessoas não autorizadas, aviso que era de conhecimento público e que incorria na pena de morte para os violadores. (Núm 4:15, 19, 20) Se os autorizados, os levitas coatitas, a tivessem transportado com os varais nos ombros, como Deus orientara, não se teria incorrido na ira de Deus. — Êx 25:13, 14; Núm 7:9.

UZAI [forma abreviada de Azanias]. Homem, cujo filho, Palal, ajudou Neemias a reconstruir o muro de Jerusalém. — Ne 3:25.

UZAL.

1. O sexto mencionado dos 13 filhos de Joctã, e também a tribo que descendeu dele. (Gên 10:26-29; 1Cr 1:21) Segundo a tradição árabe, San'a (capital da República do Iêmen) era outrora chamada de 'Azal e relacionava-se com Uzal.

2. Local mencionado em relação com os comerciantes de Tiro, em Ezequiel 27:19. Uma identificação sugerida é a região de Izalla, no NE da Síria, perto do alto rio Tigre.

UZÉM-SEERÁ [possivelmente: Orelha de Seerá]. Cidade que Seerá, uma mulher efraimita, construiu. Não se diz em que sentido ela 'construiu'; talvez tenha sido no sentido de ter contribuído de alguma maneira notável para o progresso e para o desenvolvimento dessa cidade, bem como de outros lugares alistados. (1Cr 7:22-24) A localização de Uzém-Seerá não é definitivamente conhecida. No entanto, alguns geógrafos a identificam com Beit Sira, a uns 4 km ao O do sítio sugerido de Bete-Horom Baixa e a cerca de 21 km ao NO de Jerusalém.

UZI [forma abreviada de Uzias].

1. Filho ou descendente de Tola, da tribo de Issacar. Uzi e vários dos seus descendentes tornaram-se cabeças de casas ancestrais. — 1Cr 7:1-3.

2. Descendente de Benjamim através de Bela. Uzi era cabeça de família tribal. — 1Cr 7:6, 7.

3. Descendente de Arão através de Eleazar na linhagem do sumo sacerdócio; possivelmente bisneto de Fineias; antepassado de Esdras, um dos escritores da Bíblia. — 1Cr 6:3-6, 51; Esd 7:1-5.

4. Benjamita cujo filho ou descendente morou na Jerusalém do período pós-exílico. — 1Cr 9:3, 7-9.

5. Superintendente dos levitas em Jerusalém algum tempo após o exílio; descendente de Asafe. — Ne 11:22.

6. Cabeça da casa paterna sacerdotal de Jedaías durante o tempo de Joiaquim, sucessor do sumo sacerdote Jesua. (Ne 12:1, 12, 19) Possivelmente o N.º 7.

7. Sacerdote mencionado com Neemias no templo para a inauguração da muralha reconstruída de Jerusalém. (Ne 12:27, 40-42) Talvez a mesma pessoa do N.º 6.

UZIA [forma abreviada de Uzias]. Poderoso das forças de Davi. Uzia era asteratita, isto é, provavelmente da cidade de Astarote, ao L do Jordão. — 1Cr 11:26, 44; Jos 9:10.

UZIAS [Minha Força É Jeová].

1. Levita coatita; "filho" de Uriel. — 1Cr 6:22-24.

2. Homem cujo filho, Jonatã, era oficial do Rei Davi. — 1Cr 27:25.

3. Rei de Judá, também chamado Azarias. Atribui-se a Uzias, filho de Amazias com sua esposa, Jecolia, um reinado de 52 anos (829-778 AEC). Durante este período, Jeroboão (II), Zacarias, Salum, Menaém, Pecaías e Peca governaram sucessivamente o reino setentrional. (2Rs 15:1, 2, 8, 10, 13, 14, 17, 23, 25, 27; 2Cr 26:3) Os profetas Isaías (1:1; 6:1), Oseias (1:1), Amós (1:1) e talvez Joel eram contemporâneos de Uzias. No reinado deste rei ocorreu um terremoto incomumente grande. — Za 14:5.

Depois da morte de seu pai, Uzias, com 16 anos, foi empossado como rei pelo povo de Judá. (2Rs 14:21; 2Cr 26:1) De acordo com 2 Reis 15:1, porém, Uzias tornou-se rei no 27.º ano do rei israelita Jeroboão (II). Visto que isto situaria o início do governo de Uzias aproximadamente 12 anos depois da morte de seu pai, isto deve referir-se a ele 'tornar-se rei' num sentido especial. É possível que no 27.º ano do Rei Jeroboão, o reino de Judá, de duas tribos, tenha sido libertado da sujeição ao reino setentrional, sujeição esta que talvez tenha iniciado quando o Rei Jeoás, de Israel, derrotou a Amazias, pai de Uzias. (2Cr 25:22-24) Assim, pode ser que Uzias se tenha tornado rei pela segunda vez no sentido de ver-se livre do domínio do Rei Jeroboão (II), de Israel.

Uzias fez "o que era reto aos olhos de Jeová". Isto aconteceu principalmente porque ele acatou as boas instruções de certo Zacarias (não o profeta que tinha esse nome e viveu num período posterior). Mas seus súditos continuaram incorretamente a oferecer sacrifícios nos altos. — 2Rs 15:3, 4; 2Cr 26:4, 5.

Uzias ficou famoso por suas vitórias militares, obtidas com a ajuda de Jeová. Restituiu Elate (Elote) ao reino de Judá e reconstruiu essa cidade, situada na cabeceira do golfo de ʽAqaba. Foi bem-sucedido na guerra contra os filisteus, abrindo passagem através das muralhas de Gate, Jabné e Asdode, após o que construiu cidades no território de Asdode. Uzias obteve vitórias sobre os árabes e sobre os meunins, e fez dos amonitas tributários de Judá. Sua poderosa e bem equipada força combatente chegou a incorporar 307.500 homens sob o controle de 2.600 cabeças de casas paternas. Uzias reforçou as fortificações de Jerusalém e construiu máquinas de guerra ali. — 2Rs 14:22; 2Cr 26:2, 6-9, 11-15.

Este rei também tinha grande interesse na agricultura e na criação de gado. Uzias escavou muitas cisternas a fim de proporcionar amplo suprimento de água para os animais e erigiu torres no ermo, provavelmente para proteger de saqueadores as manadas e os rebanhos que pastavam. Atividades agrícolas e de vinhataria eram executadas sob sua orientação nos montes e no Carmelo. — 2Cr 26:10.

Parece que os brilhantes êxitos de Uzias resultaram em ele se tornar orgulhoso, a ponto de invadir o compartimento Santo do templo a fim de queimar incenso. Azarias, o sumo sacerdote, acompanhado de 80 subsacerdotes, entrou imediatamente no templo atrás do rei e o censurou por este ato ilícito, instando-o a sair do santuário. Tendo na mão o incensário para a queima de incenso e vociferando contra os sacerdotes, Uzias foi miraculosamente atacado de lepra na testa, diante do que os sacerdotes alvoroçadamente o tiraram do templo. Como leproso impuro, Uzias foi excluído de toda adoração prestada no santuário e não pôde desempenhar os deveres régios. Por conseguinte, embora Uzias permanecesse em certa casa, até o dia de sua morte, Jotão, seu filho, administrou os assuntos de Estado. — 2Cr 26:16-21.

A respeito de sua morte e sepultamento, 2 Crônicas 26:23 relata: "Por fim, Uzias deitou-se com os seus antepassados; e enterraram-no, pois, com os seus antepassados, mas no campo de inumação pertencente aos reis, porque disseram: 'Ele é leproso.'" Isto talvez signifique que, devido à lepra, Uzias foi sepultado no terreno dum campo ligado ao cemitério real, em vez de ser colocado num túmulo escavado na rocha.

Uma placa de calcário, encontrada em Jerusalém e que se crê datar do primeiro século EC, tem a seguinte inscrição: "Para cá foram trazidos os ossos de Uzias, rei de Judá. Não abra." — FOTO, Vol. 1, p. 960.

4. Sacerdote levita dos "filhos de Harim" (1Cr 24:8; Esd 2:36, 39) dentre os que despediram suas esposas estrangeiras acatando a exortação de Esdras. — Esd 10:10, 11, 21, 44.

5. Descendente de Judá através de Peres, cujo "filho", Ataías, acha-se alistado entre os residentes de Jerusalém no tempo de Neemias. — Ne 11:4.

UZIEL [Deus É Força].

1. Último mencionado dos quatro filhos de Coate; neto de Levi; tio de Moisés e Arão. Misael, El(i)zafã e Sitri, os três filhos de Uziel, tornaram-se cabeças tribais de famílias em Levi. — Êx 6:16, 18, 20, 22; Le 10:4; Núm 3:19, 30; 1Cr 6:2, 18; 23:12; veja UZIELITAS.

2. Cabeça de família na tribo de Benjamim; filho ou descendente de Bela. — 1Cr 7:6, 7.

3. Músico levita da família de Hemã, designado para encabeçar a 11.ª divisão musical de serviço; também chamado de Azarel. — 1Cr 25:1, 4, 18.

4. Descendente levita de Jedutum, que ajudou a dar fim aos objetos imundos removidos do templo no começo do reinado de Ezequias. — 2Cr 29:12, 14, 16.

5. Um dos quatro filhos simeonitas de Isi que conduziram 500 homens ao monte Seir para eliminar o restante dos amalequitas e ficar morando ali; contemporâneo de Ezequias. — 1Cr 4:41-43.

6. Ourives que ajudou a fazer reparos no muro de Jerusalém sob a orientação de Neemias; filho de Haraías. — Ne 3:8.

UZIELITAS [De (Pertencentes a) Uziel]. Descendentes levitas de Uziel, o quarto filho de Coate. (Núm 3:19, 27) Eles acampavam ao S do tabernáculo, e um dos uzielitas, El(i)zafã, era o maioral de todos os coatitas. (Núm 3:29, 30) Cento e doze uzielitas sob Aminadabe acompanharam a Arca do Pacto quando Davi mandou levá-la para Jerusalém. (1Cr 15:3, 4, 10) Os uzielitas também estiveram envolvidos na organização de Davi de serviço no templo. — 1Cr 23:6, 20; 24:24; 26:23, 24.

V

VACA [hebr.: pa·ráh; ʼé·lef (De 7:13); ʽegh·láh, novilha]. A vaca desempenhava importante papel na economia dos israelitas. Além de servir como animal de tração, a vaca era apreciada por sua produção de leite, do qual se preparavam outros itens comuns da alimentação, incluindo o queijo, a manteiga e o leitelho. (Núm 19:2; Is 7:21, 22) Também, o couro podia ser utilizado na fabricação de ampla variedade de artigos.

Vacas jovens, ou novilhas, eram às vezes oferecidas em sacrifício. (Gên 15:9; 1Sa 6:14; 16:2) As cinzas de uma inteira vaca vermelha, queimada fora do acampamento, tornaram-se ingrediente na "água da purificação", de Israel. (Núm 19:2, 6, 9) No caso de um assassinato não resolvido, exigia-se que os anciãos representativos da cidade mais próxima da vítima matassem uma novilha num vale de torrente não cultivado e, daí, lavassem as mãos sobre a carcaça do animal, enquanto atestavam a sua inocência no crime. — De 21:1-9.

Podem-se observar nas Escrituras numerosos usos ilustrativos da vaca ou da novilha. Foi explicado que as sete vacas gordas e as sete vacas de carnes magras do sonho de Faraó se referiam a sete anos de fartura a serem seguidos por sete anos de fome. (Gên 41:26, 27) Sansão referiu-se à mulher que lhe fora prometida em casamento como novilha com a qual os 30 padrinhos haviam lavrado a fim de chegar à solução de seu enigma. — Jz 14:11, 12, 18.

As mulheres amantes do luxo, espoliadoras, que moravam em Samaria, são mencionadas como "vacas de Basã". (Am 3:15; 4:1) Efraim é assemelhado a uma "novilha treinada que gostava de trilhar". (Os 10:11) Esta comparação adquire um significado adicional quando se considera que os animais que trilhavam não eram açaimados e, por conseguinte, podiam comer do cereal, recebendo assim benefícios diretos e imediatos de seu labor. (De 25:4) Por ter engordado em resultado da bênção de Deus, Israel 'deu coices', rebelou-se contra Jeová (De 32:12-15) e é, por conseguinte, mencionado apropriadamente como vaca teimosa, não disposta a aceitar o jugo. (Os 4:16) O Egito é comparado a uma bela novilha que sofreria desastre às mãos dos babilônios. (Je 46:20, 21, 26) Os babilônios, no seu ato de pilhar a 'herança de Deus', Judá, são assemelhados a uma travessa novilha que escarva com a pata na relva tenra. — Je 50:11.

Nas profecias, as pacíficas condições que resultam do reinado do Messias, Cristo Jesus, são apropriadamente representadas por amigáveis relações entre a relativamente inofensiva vaca e a rapinante ursa. — Is 11:7; veja BEZERRO; TOURO; NOVILHA.

VAEBE. Aparentemente um lugar agora desconhecido, perto do Árnon, "em Sufá". — Núm 21:14.

VAIZATA. Um dos dez filhos de Hamã. — Est 9:9, 10.

VALE. Depressão entre penhascos, colinas ou montes. Jeová Deus recebe apropriadamente o crédito pelo surgimento dos acidentes topográficos da terra, incluindo os muitos vales. (Sal 104:8) Nas Escrituras, alguns desses acidentes são chamados simplesmente de vales. (Jos 8:11; 1Sa 13:18) Outros eram "vales planos", áreas planas de nível baixo entre montes e colinas. (De 11:11; veja PLANÍCIE.) Havia também "vales de torrentes", às vezes com correntes perenes, mas em outros a água só fluía na estação chuvosa. (De 8:7; veja VALE DE TORRENTE.) Certas traduções usam "vale(s)", em casos que se referem a "baixada(s)" (Gên 14:3; 1Cr 12:15), e "vale(s)" ou "planície(s)" para a "Sefelá", a colinosa terra baixa entre a planície litorânea da Filístia e os altiplanos centrais da Palestina. — De 1:7; 1Rs 10:27.

Entre os vales notáveis mencionados nas Escrituras acham-se o vale de Moabe, "defronte de Bete-Peor" (De 3:29; 34:6) e o vale do Sal (2Sa 8:13), bem como os de Hinom (Ne 11:30), de Iftá-El (Jos 19:14), de Zeboim (1Sa 13:18) e de Zefata (2Cr 14:10). Os 'vales planos', ou 'planícies', mencionados no registro bíblico incluem os de Sinear (Gên 11:2), de Jericó (De 34:3), de Mispé (Jos 11:8), do Líbano (Jos 12:7), de Ono (Ne 6:2) e de Megido (2Cr 35:22; Za 12:11).

Uso Figurado e Profético. Um vale escuro, ou ravina, com fojos e animais selvagens seria perigoso para um rebanho, especialmente à noite, se não fossem os cuidados dum bom pastor. Embora similarmente confrontado com a ameaça de várias calamidades, Davi sentia-se seguro por saber que Jeová era seu Pastor. Portanto, podia declarar: "Ainda que eu ande pelo vale da sombra tenebrosa, não temerei mal nenhum." — Sal 23:1, 4.

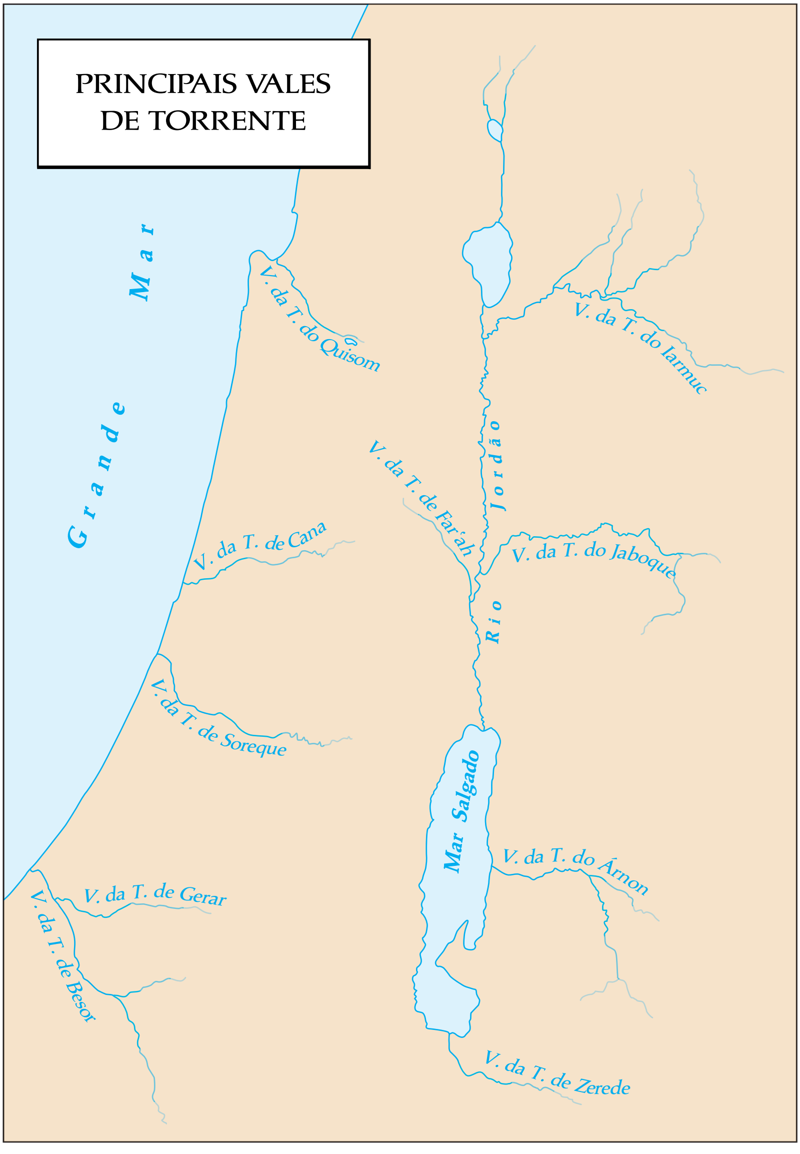
"A pronúncia do vale da visão" refere-se evidentemente à antiga Jerusalém. Embora em considerável altitude, a cidade é como um "vale" no sentido de estar cercada de montes mais elevados. — Is 22:1, 5.

Pode-se dizer que Jeová 'alteou todo vale', 'nivelou morros e montes' e fez do 'terreno escabroso um vale plano' para o retorno de Seu povo do exílio babilônico, evidentemente pela eliminação de todos os obstáculos que existiam no caminho. (Is 40:4) O restante judaico não padeceu de sede no percurso que fez. Cumpriram-se as palavras de Jeová mediante Isaías: "Em morros calvos abrirei rios, e no meio dos vales planos, mananciais." — Is 41:18; compare isso com Is 35:6, 7, 10; 43:19-21; 48:20, 21.

VALE, PORTÃO DO. Veja PORTA, PORTÃO.

VALE DE HINOM. Veja HINOM, VALE DE.

VALE DE TORRENTE. A palavra hebraica ná·hhal pode referir-se, quer ao vale através do qual flui uma corrente (Gên 26:19; 2Rs 3:16; Jó 30:6; Cân 6:11), quer à própria corrente. (1Rs 17:4; Sal 110:7) Sobre a palavra ná·hhal, A. P. Stanley, em seu livro Sinai and Palestine (Sinai e Palestina; 1885, p. 590), comenta: "Nenhuma palavra em inglês é exatamente equivalente, mas, talvez, 'leito de torrente' seja uma expressão bem aproximada."



Um léxico hebraico e aramaico de Koehler e Baumgartner dá “vale de torrente” como uma de suas definições. (Lexicon in Veteris Testamenti Libros [Léxico dos Livros do Velho Testamento], Leiden, 1958, p. 607) O termo “uádi” (em árabe) também é usado para referir-se a um vale de torrente. — Gên 32:23 n.

A Terra da Promessa é descrita como “terra de vales de torrentes de água, de fontes e de águas de profundeza surgindo no vale plano e na região montanhosa”. (De 8:7) Algumas das correntes são alimentadas por fontes e, portanto, são perenes, ao passo que outras são torrentes na estação chuvosa, mas secam-se inteiramente na estiagem. (1Rs 17:7; 18:5) O fiel Jó comparou o modo traiçoeiro de seus irmãos o tratarem a uma torrente hibernal que seca no verão. — Jó 6:15.

Entre os vales de torrente mencionados na Bíblia acham-se os do Arabá (Am 6:14), do Árnon (De 2:36), de Besor (1Sa 30:9), de Cana (Jos 16:8), do Cédron (2Sa 15:23), do Egito (Jos 15:4), de Escol (Núm 13:23), de Gerar (Gên 26:17), do Jaboque (De 2:37), de Querite (1Rs 17:3), do Quisom (Jz 4:7), de Soreque (Jz 16:4) e de Zerede (De 2:13; veja os vales de torrente sob os respectivos nomes). Outros vales de torrente que não são mencionados, mas que são afluentes principais do Jordão, são o Yarmuk (Iarmuc) e o Farʽah.

VALE PLANO. Veja PLANÍCIE.

VANIAS. Filho de Bani no período pós-exílico. Ele e muitos outros haviam casado com mulheres estrangeiras, mas as despediram, seguindo a admoestação de Esdras. — Esd 10:10, 11, 34, 36, 44.

VAPOR. Veja BRUMA, NEBLINA, NÉVOA.

VARA, BASTÃO. As palavras hebraicas shé·vet e mat·téh são frequentemente traduzidas por “vara” e “bastão”. Shé·vet significa bastão, cajado ou vara (de apoio) e também é traduzida por “cajado” (como o cajado ou bastão de um pastor). (Le 27:32) Possivelmente em virtude de os maiorais tribais portarem um bastão, ou cetro, tanto shé·vet como mat·téh referiam-se também a “tribo” e são assim traduzidas. (Êx 31:2; De 18:1; 29:18) A haste de lança ou de arma similar era designada pelas palavras hebraicas shé·vet ou ʽets (literalmente: árvore). — 2Sa 18:14; 21:19.

Outro termo, maq·qél, é traduzido por ‘vara’ e ‘bordão’ (Gên 30:37; 1Sa 17:43), e mish·ʽé·neth é traduzido por “bastão” ou “apoio”. — Jz 6:21; 2Rs 18:21.

A palavra grega para “vara” é rhá·bdos, às vezes traduzida por “vara” ou “bastão”. (Re 19:15; Mt 10:10) Outra palavra, xý·lon, é vertida por “bastão” em algumas traduções. Significa literalmente “madeira” ou algo feito de madeira. Esta palavra é traduzida por “cacetes”, em Mateus 26:47, 55 e em trechos paralelos.

Usos. Varas, bastões ou bordões eram usados como apoio (Êx 12:11; Za 8:4; He 11:21); para defesa ou proteção (2Sa 23:21; Mt 10:10); para punir filhos, escravos ou outros (Êx 21:20 [“pau”, NM]; Pr 10:13; 23:13, 14; At 16:22); para debulhar (Is 28:27 [tanto mat·téh como shé·vet aparecem neste versículo, e são traduzidas, respectivamente, por “bastão” e “vara” na NM]; compare isso com Jz 6:11; Ru 2:17); e para colher azeitonas (De 24:20; Is 24:13). Além disso, os pastores usavam o cajado para conduzir, controlar e ajudar o rebanho. Sobre a seleção dos animais a serem dados como dízimo ao santuário, a Lei dizia: “Quanto a cada décima parte da manada e do rebanho, tudo o que passar debaixo do cajado [o que quer que fique sob os cuidados do pastor], a décima cabeça deve tornar-se algo sagrado para Jeová. Não deve examinar se é bom ou mau, nem deve trocá-lo.” (Le 27:32, 33) Diz-se que o pastor ficava no portão do aprisco à medida que as ovelhas saíam, munido de um cajado, cuja ponta tinha um pedaço de pano embebido num corante; com este, ele tocava em cada décima ovelha e separava como dízimo as assim marcadas. — Veja Je 33:13.

Qual Símbolo de Autoridade. O bastão da pessoa era considerado um valioso bem pessoal, e alguns bastões sem dúvida identificavam o dono. Judá deu a Tamar sua vara e seu anel de chancela como garantia até que lhe mandasse um cabritinho em pagamento por ter tido relações sexuais com ela. (Gên 38:18, 25) Os maiorais portavam uma vara em símbolo de autoridade. Portanto, a Bíblia muitas vezes usa a vara para simbolizar a autoridade que a pessoa tem ou a autoridade de que outrem a investiu. O bastão de Moisés tornou-se símbolo de sua autoridade e comissão da parte de Deus, quando ele se apresentou aos anciãos de Israel, bem como quando compareceu perante Faraó e os sacerdotes-magos do Egito. (Êx 4:17, 29-31; 7:9-12) Neste último caso, diz-se que o bastão era de Arão, mas evidentemente Arão, como porta-voz, usava o bastão de Moisés, conforme indica uma comparação com Êxodo 7:15, 17.

Depois disto, o bastão de Moisés foi usado muitas vezes como símbolo de que ele fora nomeado por Jeová e tinha Seu apoio, com a autoridade de líder da nação. (Êx 8:5; 9:23; 10:13; Núm 20:11) Dentre os bastões dos líderes das 12 tribos, foi o bastão de Arão, que representava a casa de Levi, que Deus fez brotar e produzir amêndoas maduras, quando a autoridade de Moisés e de Arão foi questionada. Isto provou cabalmente que Arão, e, portanto, também sua casa, fora designado por Deus para deter o cargo e a autoridade do sacerdócio. Dali em diante, este bastão foi conservado por bom tempo na Arca do Pacto. — Núm 17:1-11; Êx 29:9; He 9:4.

O salmista escreveu: "A pronunciação de Jeová a meu Senhor é: 'Senta-te à minha direita, até que eu ponha os teus inimigos como escabelo para os teus pés.' Jeová enviará de Sião o bastão da tua força, dizendo: 'Subjuga no meio dos teus inimigos.'" (Sal 110:1, 2) O apóstolo Paulo aplica este texto a Jesus Cristo, que possui, por assim dizer, o 'bastão da força de Jeová' e sai como representante de Jeová com plena autoridade para executar o julgamento sobre Seus inimigos. (He 10:12, 13) Jesus Cristo, o 'renovo que saiu do toco de Jessé', "terá de golpear a terra com a vara da sua boca; e ao iníquo entregará à morte com o espírito de seus lábios". (Is 11:1, 4) Ele fala com a autoridade e exerce o poder que Jeová lhe deu para punir os iníquos. Diz-se que pastoreará as nações, não como um pastor que pacificamente conduz o rebanho com seu bastão, mas com vara de ferro. — Re 2:27; 12:5; 19:15.

A vara opressiva, ou bastão de domínio ou autoridade, que os inimigos da nação de Israel brandiam sobre ela é mencionada em Isaías 9:4; 14:5. Deus usou as nações ao redor de Israel, como a Assíria, para punir Israel por seus pecados, de modo que, ao assim agirem, essas nações eram como uma vara de punição, ou castigo, sob a autoridade ou permissão de Deus. Todavia, essas nações agiram, não por amor a Jeová ou por ódio pelos pecados de Israel, mas por animosidade tanto para com Deus como para com Israel, e foram além da comissão que receberam e derivaram prazer em impor aflições adicionais a Israel. Ademais, essas potências, especialmente a Assíria e Babilônia, enalteceram-se orgulhosamente contra o próprio Jeová Deus. Deus disse a respeito da Assíria, por intermédio do profeta Isaías: "Ah! o assírio, a vara para a minha ira", mas Ele também descreveu a soberba da Assíria, dizendo: "Realçar-se-á o machado sobre aquele que corta com ele, ou magnificar-se-á a própria serra sobre aquele que a move para lá e para cá, como se a vara movesse para lá e para cá aqueles que a erguem, como se o bastão erguesse aquele que não é pau?" Daí, predisse que viria a punição sobre a nação da Assíria por pensar que era maior do que Aquele que a usava e por se enaltecer contra Ele. — Is 10:5, 15.

Quando Jeová fez um pacto para o reino com Davi, ele disse a respeito da linhagem de reis da dinastia de Davi: "Eu mesmo me tornarei seu pai e ele mesmo se tornará meu filho. Quando cometer uma falta, também vou repreendê-lo com vara de homens e com pancadas dos filhos de Adão." (2Sa 7:14) Neste caso, a vara da disciplina que Jeová, como Pai, usaria era a autoridade dos governos do mundo, como Babilônia. Esta nação foi usada para derrubar o reino de Deus nas mãos dos reis da linhagem de Davi, até que 'viesse aquele que tem o direito legal'. (Ez 21:27) Em 70 EC, os exércitos romanos sob o general Tito foram uma "vara" para punir a infiel Jerusalém. — Da 9:26, 27.

Emprego errado da vara. Os governos e os juízes das nações terrestres não raro usavam sua vara de autoridade de forma injusta, chegando a lutar contra Deus e Seu povo. Quando Jesus Cristo foi levado perante o supremo tribunal judaico e perante Pilatos, o governador romano, ele foi afligido, zombado, cuspido, espancado e, por fim, morto. Os líderes judaicos primeiro usaram sua autoridade contra Jesus e depois tornaram a "vara" mais pesada, entregando-o ao governo romano para ser executado. O profeta Miqueias predisse essa aflição, com as seguintes palavras: "Com a vara golpearão a face do juiz de Israel." (Miq 5:1) Depois da morte e da ressurreição de Jesus, os governantes judeus usaram sua autoridade para perseguir os seguidores de Jesus, e, em muitos casos, Roma e os outros governos da Terra igualmente usaram sua vara de autoridade de modo errado. Por causa disso, Deus exigiria deles uma prestação de contas. — Jo 19:8-11; 2Te 1:6-9.

Autoridade parental. O termo "vara" também é usado para simbolizar a autoridade dos pais sobre os filhos. O livro de Provérbios faz muitas referências a essa autoridade, casos em que o termo simboliza todas as formas de disciplina usadas, mesmo a vara literal usada para castigar. Os pais realmente têm perante Deus a responsabilidade de usar esta vara para controlar o filho. Se os pais falharem nisto, trarão ruína e morte ao filho, bem como desonra e a desaprovação de Deus sobre si mesmos. (Pr 10:1; 15:20; 17:25; 19:13) "A tolice está ligada ao coração do rapaz; a vara da disciplina é a que a removerá para longe dele." "Não retenhas a disciplina do mero rapaz. Não morrerá se lhe bateres com a vara. Tu mesmo lhe deves bater com a vara, para que livres a sua alma do próprio Seol." (Pr 22:15; 23:13, 14) De fato, "quem refreia a sua vara odeia seu filho, mas aquele que o ama está à procura dele com disciplina". — Pr 13:24; 19:18; 29:15; 1Sa 2:27-36.

Jeová Deus, como 'Pai da vida espiritual' dos cristãos, não poupa seus filhos da "vara". O cristão que sob inspiração escreveu a carta aos hebreus disse: "Deus vos trata como a filhos. Pois, que filho há a quem o pai não disciplina? . . . Mas ele o faz para o nosso proveito, para participarmos de sua santidade." (He 12:7, 9, 10) Para administrar disciplina à congregação cristã, Jeová delegou autoridade a homens fiéis, em especial os apóstolos. Esta autoridade visava 'edificar os irmãos, não demoli-los'. (2Co 10:1-11) Isto inclui o direito de disciplinar transgressores. Quando a congregação em Corinto se desviou da justiça e passou a recorrer a homens em vez de a Cristo, Paulo escreveu para corrigi-los e disse: "O que quereis? Hei de ir ter convosco com uma vara, ou com amor e brandura de espírito?" — 1Co 4:21.

O bastão de liderança, pastoreio. O pastor usava seu bastão ou seu cajado para orientar, defender e ajudar o rebanho. Jeová e seu Filho, Jesus Cristo, providenciam um pastoreio similar para o rebanho de Deus, que é constituído de pessoas. Jeová frequentemente chamava a Israel, que estava numa relação pactuada com ele, de seu rebanho. Davi escreveu: "Jeová é o meu Pastor. . . . Guia-me nos trilhos da justiça por causa do seu nome. Ainda que eu ande pelo vale da sombra tenebrosa, não temerei mal nenhum, porque tu estás comigo; tua vara e teu bastão são as coisas que me consolam." (Sal 23:1-4) Miqueias orou: "Pastoreia teu povo com a tua vara, o rebanho da tua herança." — Miq 7:14; compare isso com Jo 10:11, 14; He 13:20; 1Pe 2:25; 5:4.

VASOS. Receptáculos côncavos, alguns com tampa (Núm 19:15), usados para reter líquidos ou materiais secos. (1Rs 17:10; Est 1:7; Je 40:10) Muitos eram de barro, de madeira, de metal ou de pedra. (Le 6:28; 15:12; Núm 7:85; 1Rs 10:21; Mt 26:7) Recipientes comuns incluíam jarros ou vasos "do tipo tigela" (Is 22:24), sacos ou bolsas (Gên 42:25; Ag 1:6), cestos (Mr 8:19, 20; 2Co 11:33), odres (Jz 4:19; Lu 5:37, 38) e baldes. — Núm 24:7; Jo 4:11; veja UTENSÍLIOS.

Jarros, Bilhas e Frascos. O jarro, que em geral era um vaso cilíndrico, fundo, com uma, duas ou até quatro asas, era comumente de argila (Is 30:14; La 4:2) e, às vezes, de pedra. (Jo 2:6) Um jarro grande comum nos dias dos reinos de Judá e de Israel talvez tivesse aproximadamente 65 cm de altura e cerca de 40 cm de diâmetro. Alguns jarros possuíam bico. (2Rs 4:2) Os jarros podiam ser mantidos em suportes (Le 11:35) e eram usados para guardar líquidos tais como água ou azeite (1Rs 18:33; 2Rs 4:2), e os grandes não raro eram usados para guardar vinho. (1Sa 10:3; 25:18; 2Sa 16:1; Je 13:12) Também se estocavam em jarros alguns materiais secos, como farinha. (1Rs 17:12) Às vezes se colocavam documentos, até mesmo escrituras de compra, em jarros, ou vasos, de barro para preservação. (Je 32:13-15) Diversos manuscritos antigos foram assim preservados em jarros na área de Qumran, perto do Mar Morto, entre os quais o bem conhecido Rolo do Mar Morto de Isaías.

Bilhas de água (1Sa 26:11, 12, 16; 1Rs 19:6) e frascos, ou botijas (1Sa 10:1; 1Rs 14:3; 2Rs 9:3; Je 19:1, 10), eram comumente de argila.

Tigelas, Pratos e Travessas. Usavam-se tigelas para líquidos como vinho (Am 6:6), leite (Jz 5:25) e água (Jz 6:38). Eram de argila, de pedra e de metal. Algumas tigelas de banquete eram de cerâmica. Como indicam descobertas arqueológicas, nos dias dos reinos de Judá e de Israel as tigelas de cerâmica tinham em média uns 20 cm de altura, aproximadamente 40 cm de diâmetro interno na borda e às vezes quatro asas. Em comparação com as tigelas, os pratos e as travessas eram provavelmente rasos. — Êx 25:29; 37:16; Núm 4:7; 7:84, 85; Mt 14:8, 11; Mr 6:25, 28.

Copos. O copo era um vaso comparativamente pequeno para beber líquidos e geralmente era de barro, embora, às vezes, fosse de metal. (Pr 23:31; Je 35:5; Mr 9:41) Alguns copos eram moldados para ajustar-se à mão. Em geral, eram recipientes rasos, sem asas. As que tinham asa podiam também servir como conchas.

Uso Figurado. O congregante indicou que na morte 'se quebra o cântaro junto à fonte'. Pelo visto, este cântaro, ou jarro, é o coração, que na morte para de receber e de bombear o fluxo de sangue através do corpo. Torna-se tão inútil quanto um jarro quebrado que não pode reter água. Também o cérebro, a que se faz alusão sob a figura de linguagem duma "tigela de ouro" (evidentemente o crânio, dentro do qual fica o cérebro), deixa de funcionar e sofre dissolução, ou seja, 'é esmagado'. — Ec 12:6, 7.

Vasos. As Escrituras não raro se referem às pessoas como vasos. (At 9:15) Os cristãos são frágeis vasos de barro, a quem se confiou um tesouro glorioso, o ministério. (2Co 4:7) As mulheres são chamadas de "vaso mais fraco". Portanto, o marido cristão, por levar em conta as limitações físicas e biológicas da esposa, como Jeová fez na Lei dada a Israel (Le 18:19; 20:18), age 'segundo o conhecimento, atribuindo-lhe honra como a um vaso mais fraco, o feminino'. — 1Pe 3:7.

A pessoa deve manter-se separada de vasos "sem honra" (aqueles que não se comportam direito) e deve empenhar-se por um proceder que se harmonize com a vontade de Jeová. Assim ela pode ser "vaso para fim honroso, santificado, útil para o seu dono, preparado para toda boa obra". (2Ti 2:20, 21) Refrear-se Jeová de trazer a destruição imediata sobre os "vasos do furor", pessoas iníquas, serve para poupar as de disposição justa, porque isto lhes dá tempo para serem moldadas como "vasos de misericórdia". — Ro 9:17-26.

Copo. O copo muitas vezes é símbolo da retribuição divina ou da ira de Deus. De tal copo, pessoas iníquas, cidades ou até povos e nações poderiam beber. (Sal 11:6; 75:8; Is 51:17, 22; Je 25:12-29; 51:41; La 4:21; Re 14:9, 10; 16:19; 18:5-8) A antiga Babilônia, por exemplo, era um simbólico "copo de ouro na mão de Jeová", do qual muitas nações tiveram de beber a poção amarga da derrota. — Je 51:7.

Quando a destruição aguardava Jerusalém, seus habitantes foram informados de que as pessoas 'não lhes dariam o copo de consolação para beber por causa do pai de alguém e por causa da mãe de alguém'. É possível que isto fosse uma alusão ao copo de vinho que se dava à pessoa que pranteava os pais mortos. — Je 16:5-7; compare isso com Pr 31:6.

O simbólico "copo" que Jeová derramou para Jesus Cristo era a Sua vontade para Jesus. Sem dúvida por causa da grande preocupação de Cristo com o vitupério que sua morte, como alguém acusado de blasfêmia e sedição, traria sobre Deus, Jesus orou pedindo que este "copo" fosse afastado dele, se possível. Todavia, ele estava disposto a submeter-se à vontade de Jeová e a bebê-lo. (Mt 26:39, 42; Jo 18:10, 11) A porção, ou "copo", designada por Jeová para Jesus não significava só o sofrimento, mas também o batismo de Jesus na morte, o qual culminou com sua ressurreição para a vida imortal no céu. (Lu 12:50; Ro 6:4, 5; He 5:7) Portanto, ela foi também "o copo da grandiosa salvação" para Cristo. (Sal 116:13) De acordo com a vontade divina, o "copo" que foi dado de beber a Jesus Cristo ele também partilha com o "pequeno rebanho" de co-herdeiros do Reino. — Lu 12:32; Mr 10:35-40.

VASTI. A rainha de Assuero (Xerxes I), rei da Pérsia. No terceiro ano de seu reinado, Assuero convocou todos os nobres, príncipes e servos dos distritos jurisdicionais. No fim da conferência, ele realizou um banquete de sete dias. Similarmente, Vasti deu um banquete para as mulheres, na casa real. No sétimo dia, Assuero ordenou aos oficiais da corte que trouxessem Vasti, adornada com o toucado real, para que todos vissem sua lindeza. (Parece que a rainha costumeiramente tomava as refeições à mesa do rei, mas a história não fornece provas de que isto ocorria em grandes banquetes. Ademais, Vasti, na ocasião, oferecia um banquete às mulheres.) Por algum motivo não declarado, Vasti persistentemente se negou a ir. Assuero consultou os sábios, que conheciam a lei, e foi informado por Memucã, um príncipe, que Vasti procedera mal, não só para com o rei, mas também para com todos os príncipes e o povo nos distritos jurisdicionais. Ele disse que quando as princesas ficassem sabendo o que a rainha havia feito (notícias que se espalhariam rapidamente no castelo), elas fariam o que Vasti fizera, tomando-o como precedente para ações desrespeitosas de sua própria parte. (Est 1:1-22) Vasti foi deposta, e, cerca de quatro anos depois, Ester, a judia, foi escolhida para se tornar a esposa de Assuero e assumir o cargo real de Vasti. — Est 2:1-17.

VAU [ו]. (waw). Sexta letra do alfabeto hebraico. Na pronúncia, esta letra corresponde geralmente ao "v" da língua portuguesa, como em "vinho". Nesta obra, ela é transliterada como "w" (ו = vau), "u" (וּ) e "oh" (וֹ). A não ser como prefixo, raramente é usada como letra inicial e em geral é substituída pela letra yohdh (י). No hebraico, ela inicia cada um dos oito versículos do Salmo 119:41-48.

VEADO [hebr.: 'ai·yál]. Cervo adulto. O veado-vermelho (Cervus elaphus), o gamo-persa (Dama mesopotamica) e o corço (Capreolus capreolus) são três variedades de veado que outrora eram nativos da Palestina.

Sendo ruminante e de casco partido, o veado, segundo a Lei, era aceitável como alimento se o sangue fosse derramado no solo, como no caso de outros animais. (De 12:15, 16, 22, 23; 14:4-6; 15:22, 23) A carne de veado achava-se incluída entre as carnes providas para a mesa do Rei Salomão. — 1Rs 4:22, 23.

Outras referências bíblicas ao veado são ilustrativas. A sulamita comparou seu namorado pastor a um veado novo e aludiu à rapidez deste animal. (Cân 2:9, 17; 8:14) A habilidade do veado em escalar lugares íngremes com facilidade é usada para ilustrar a cura completa de pessoas coxas. (Is 35:6; compare isso com He 12:12, 13.) Quando confrontados com o cerco babilônico, os príncipes de Sião ficaram como veados fracos demais para correr, por falta de alimento. — La 1:6.

VEDÃ. Um dos lugares com os quais Tiro mantinha intercâmbio comercial. (Ez 27:19) Sua localização exata é incerta. No entanto, tem sido provisoriamente identificado com Wadden, próximo de Medina, próximo ao meio do lado oeste da península Arábica.

VEGETAÇÃO. Plantas em geral. No terceiro "dia" criativo, Deus fez com que a terra produzisse "vegetação que dava semente segundo a sua espécie"; ela podia assim reproduzir-se. (Gên 1:11-13) Gênesis 2:5, 6, pelo visto, descreve as condições existentes naquele "dia", pouco depois de Deus fazer surgir a terra seca, mas antes da produção da relva, da vegetação que dava semente e das árvores frutíferas. A fim de fornecer a necessária umidade à vida vegetal que surgiria, Jeová fez com que da terra subisse regularmente uma neblina para regar o solo. Isto mantinha vicejante a vegetação em toda a terra, mesmo não havendo então chuva. Embora os luzeiros nos céus só se tornassem claramente discerníveis na expansão no quarto "dia" criativo (Gên 1:14-16), evidentemente já no terceiro "dia" havia bastante luz difusa disponível para estimular o crescimento da vegetação. — Veja Gên 1:14, Ro n.

Deus deu ao homem e aos animais a vegetação verde como parte do seu suprimento alimentício, ampliando mais tarde a alimentação do homem para incluir carne sangrada. (Gên 1:29, 30; 9:3, 4)

O homem pecador se viu compelido a lavrar o solo para obter a vegetação que consumia (Gên 3:18, 19), mas Jeová continuou a ser o Provisor dela tanto para o homem como para os animais, pois Ele é o Provisor do sol e da chuva essenciais para que ela cresça. — Sal 104:14; 106:20; Miq 5:7; Za 10:1; He 6:7; compare isso com De 32:2.

O crescimento da vegetação pode ser controlado por Deus segundo seu propósito. Ele assegurou aos israelitas que a obediência deles seria recompensada com chuva e vegetação para seus animais domésticos. (De 11:13-15) No entanto, se abandonassem seu pacto com Deus, Ele faria com que a terra deles ficasse privada de vegetação. (De 29:22-25; compare isso com Is 42:15; Je 12:4; 14:6.) Um golpe de Jeová contra o antigo Egito consistiu em saraiva que atingiu toda sorte de vegetação. Em outro golpe aplicado por Deus, os gafanhotos devoraram toda a vegetação que a saraiva tinha deixado. — Êx 9:22, 25; 10:12, 15; Sal 105:34, 35; compare isso com Am 7:1-3.

Uso Figurado. Durante a estação seca da Palestina, a vegetação, quando sujeita ao calor abrasador do sol, ou ao crestante vento oriental, seca-se rapidamente. Assim, as pessoas prestes a serem subjugadas por conquista militar são assemelhadas à "vegetação do campo e a tenra relva verde, grama dos telhados, quando há o crestamento diante do vento oriental". (2Rs 19:25, 26; Is 37:26, 27) De modo similar, profundamente afligido, o salmista exclamou: "Meu coração foi golpeado como a vegetação e se ressecou." "Eu mesmo estou ressequido como a mera vegetação." — Sal 102:4, 11.

Em condições favoráveis, a vegetação brota profusamente, tornando-a apropriada como figura representativa de muitos descendentes. (Jó 5:25) Por exemplo, durante o reinado de Salomão, "Judá e Israel eram muitos", e floresciam, "comendo e bebendo, e alegrando-se". (1Rs 4:20) Evidentemente, alude-se a isso no salmo referente a Salomão: "Os da cidade florirão como a vegetação da terra." (Sal 72:16) Por outro lado, embora os iníquos por um tempo talvez floresçam como a vegetação, não estão florindo por causa da bênção de Deus, mas estão destinados a ser "aniquilados para todo o sempre". — Sal 92:7.

Nas Escrituras, as árvores às vezes representam os destacados e enaltecidos (veja Ez 31:2-14), ao passo que a vegetação rasteira, como o espinheiro-de-casca-branca, a grama ou os juncos podem representar o povo em geral. (Veja Jz 9:8-15; 2Rs 14:8-10; Is 19:15; 40:6, 7.) Isto ajuda a entender o sentido de Revelação (Apocalipse) 8:7, que menciona a queima de um "terço das árvores" e de "toda a vegetação verde".

VENENO. Veja PEÇONHA.

VENTO. A palavra hebraica rú·ahh, frequentemente traduzida "espírito", também pode indicar o ar em movimento, o vento. (Ec 1:6) Outros vocábulos e expressões hebraicos podem ser vertidos "tufão" (Os 8:7), "tormenta", "tormenta rodopiante" (Je 25:32; 23:19), "vento tempestuoso" e "vendaval" (Sal 148:8; 2Rs 2:11). Embora em João 3:8 o termo pneú·ma (geralmente traduzido "espírito") signifique "vento", o termo grego á·ne·mos é o frequentemente usado para indicar vento. (Mt 7:25, 27; 11:7; Jo 6:18) A "viração [hebr.: rú·ahh] do dia" referia-se, pelo visto, às horas da tardinha, pouco antes do pôr do sol, quando brisas refrescantes comumente surgem na região em que se julga que o jardim do Éden se achava. — Gên 3:8; veja ESPÍRITO.

Jeová Deus é o Criador do vento. (Am 4:13) Embora não esteja literalmente nele (1Rs 19:11; compare isso com Jó 38:1; 40:6; Sal 104:3), Deus pode controlar o vento e utilizá-lo para servir a Seus propósitos, como no caso em que o usou como instrumento para fazer com que baixassem as águas do Dilúvio. (Gên 8:1; Êx 14:21; Núm 11:31; Sal 78:26; 107:25, 29; 135:7; 147:18; Je 10:13; Jon 1:4) Seu Filho, quando esteve na terra, demonstrou igualmente o poder de controlar os ventos, fazendo com que amainassem. (Mt 8:23-27; 14:24-32; Mr 4:36-41; 6:48, 51; Lu 8:22-25) Pelo visto, foi somente por permissão de Jeová que Satanás conseguiu produzir ou controlar "um grande vento" que causou a morte dos filhos de Jó. — Jó 1:11, 12, 18, 19.

Os ventos eram geralmente chamados segundo a direção da qual vinham, o "vento oriental" soprando na direção O, vindo do L. (Êx 10:13, 19; Sal 78:26; Cân 4:16) Todas as quatro direções, N, S, L e O, acham-se abrangidas nas referências aos "quatro ventos" do céu ou da terra. (Je 49:36; Ez 37:9; Da 8:8; Mt 24:31) Em Revelação (Apocalipse) 7:1, representam-se "quatro anjos em pé nos quatro cantos da terra, segurando firmemente os quatro ventos da terra". Por estarem em pé nos "cantos", os "anjos" soltariam os ventos obliquamente, em direções diagonais, não poupando nenhum quadrante da terra dos sopros desastrosos desses ventos.

Os ventos do norte eram frescos e traziam pesadas chuvas. (Jó 37:9; Pr 25:23) O vento do sul soprava das quentes áreas desérticas sobre a Palestina, e, assim, podia produzir uma onda de calor (Lu 12:55); ventos tempestuosos também podiam originar-se no S. (Is 21:1; Za 9:14) Na estação seca, o vento oriental, soprando em direção ao Egito e à Palestina, cruzava amplas áreas desérticas e assim era quente e seco, queimando e secando a vegetação. (Gên 41:6, 23, 27; Ez 17:7-10; compare isso com Os 13:15; Jon 4:8.) Durante a estação chuvosa, os ventos do O traziam do mar Mediterrâneo umidade para a Palestina, e causavam chuvas no país. (1Rs 18:42-45) Quando os observadores ali viam uma nuvem surgir no O, podiam esperar uma tempestade. (Lu 12:54) No verão seco, as brisas diárias, vindas do Mediterrâneo, tornavam o tempo mais suportável. — Veja EURO-AQUILÃO; NUVEM.

Uso Figurado. Os ventos podem surgir rapidamente e parar com igual rapidez, representando assim apropriadamente a transitoriedade da vida do homem. (Jó 7:7) Não tendo substância sólida, o vento pode denotar o conhecimento e a labuta vãos, palavras e esperanças vãs (Jó 15:1, 2; 16:3; Ec 5:16; Os 12:1), bem como a inexistência. (Is 26:18; 41:29; Je 5:13) Assim como as obras vãs acabam em futilidade, empenhar-se por elas é como um "esforço para alcançar o vento". (Ec 1:14; 2:11) E o homem que traz o banimento sobre sua casa 'toma posse do vento'. Ele nada obtém que seja valioso ou que tenha real substância. — Pr 11:29.

Os ventos espalham e lançam objetos de uma parte para a outra, e, assim, ser 'espalhado a todo vento', ou "repartido para os quatro ventos" significa a dispersão ou divisão completa. (Je 49:36; Ez 5:10; 12:14; 17:21; Da 11:4) Como uma embarcação lançada de um lado para o outro pelos ventos, sem rumo certo, aqueles que não têm madureza cristã estão sujeitos a serem "levados para cá e para lá por todo vento de ensino, pela velhacaria de homens, pela astúcia em maquinar o erro". — Ef 4:13, 14.

VENTRE. Parte dianteira do tronco humano não cercada pelas costelas, contendo o aparelho digestivo e outros órgãos; geralmente considerado sinônimo de abdome.

A palavra hebraica bé·ten, além de ser usada para indicar a região geral do abdome (Jz 3:21, 22; Pr 13:25), é usada diversas vezes relacionada com a formação duma criança no corpo da mãe. (Gên 25:23, 24; Jó 1:21; Sal 127:3; Ec 11:5; Is 44:2; Os 9:11) Os filhos são o fruto da madre (ou útero), situada no ventre. Todavia, outra palavra hebraica, ré·hhem (ou rá·hham), refere-se especificamente à madre, conforme se pode notar em Jó 31:15: "Não foi ele feito por Aquele que me fez no ventre e não foi apenas Um que passou a preparar-nos na madre?" — Veja também Gên 49:25; Sal 22:10; Pr 30:16.

O termo hebraico bé·ten (ventre) é também usado como termo arquitetônico em 1 Reis 7:20, referindo-se a uma protuberância, um bojo.

Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, a palavra koi·li·a significa "cavidade" e é diversamente traduzida "ventre" (1Co 6:13, Int; Fil 3:19), "madre" (Lu 1:15, 41), "intestinos" (Mt 15:17) e "mais íntimo" (Jo 7:38), segundo o contexto.

"Ventre" é usado em sentido figurado para denotar apetite ou desejo carnal (Ro 16:18; Fil 3:19), e como fonte de conversa ou argumento. (Jó 15:2; 32:18, 19) Quando Jonas estava no ventre do peixe, ele comparou o interior do peixe ao Seol, dizendo: "Do ventre do Seol clamei por ajuda", porque a bem dizer estava morto, a menos que Jeová o libertasse milagrosamente. — Jon 2:2; veja INTESTINOS; MADRE.

VERDADE. O termo hebraico 'eméth, frequentemente traduzido "verdade", pode designar aquilo que é firme, digno de confiança, estável, fiel, verdadeiro ou fato estabelecido. (Êx 18:21; 34:6; De 13:14; 17:4; 22:20; Jos 2:12; 2Cr 18:15; 31:20; Ne 7:2; 9:33; Est 9:30; Sal 15:2; Ec 12:10; Je 9:5) A palavra grega a·lé·thei·a contrasta-se com a falsidade ou a injustiça, e indica aquilo que se ajusta aos fatos ou ao que é direito e apropriado. (Mr 5:33; 12:32; Lu 4:25; Jo 3:21; Ro 2:8; 1Co 13:6; Fil 1:18; 2Te 2:10, 12; 1Jo 1:6, 8; 2:4, 21) Diversas outras expressões das línguas originais, dependendo do contexto, também podem ser traduzidas "verdade".

Jeová, o Deus da Verdade. Jeová é o "Deus da verdade". (Sal 31:5) Ele é fiel em todos os seus tratos. Suas promessas são seguras, pois ele não pode mentir. (Núm 23:19; 1Sa 15:29; Sal 89:35; Tit 1:2; He 6:17, 18) Ele julga segundo a verdade, isto é, de acordo com o modo como as coisas realmente são, e não à base da aparência exterior. (Ro 2:2; compare isso com Jo 7:24.) Tudo o que emana dele é puro e sem defeito. Suas decisões judiciais, sua lei, seus mandamentos e sua palavra são verdade. (Ne 9:13; Sal 19:9; 119:142, 151, 160) São sempre corretos e apropriados, e opõem-se a toda injustiça e erro.

O testemunho da criação. As obras criativas atestam que Deus existe. Mas, segundo Paulo, até mesmo alguns daqueles que 'conheciam a Deus' suprimiam esta verdade. Em vez de servirem a Deus em harmonia com a verdade a respeito do Seu eterno poder e Divindade, faziam ídolos e os adoravam. Os ídolos, não sendo realmente deuses, são mentira ou falsidade. (Je 10:14) Portanto, essas pessoas, embora possuíssem a verdade de Deus, trocaram-na "pela mentira, e veneraram e prestaram serviço sagrado antes à criação do que Àquele que criou". Terem recorrido à falsidade da idolatria levou-os a toda espécie de práticas degradadas. — Ro 1:18-31.

Em contraste com a pecaminosidade do homem. As práticas degradadas dos não judeus e a desobediência dos judeus à lei de Deus de forma alguma prejudicaram pessoalmente o Criador. Antes, sua veracidade, santidade e justiça se destacaram em nítido contraste, e isto para a Sua gló-ria. Mas o fato de que a transgressão do homem faz com que a justiça de Deus se destaque ainda mais não constitui base para se afirmar que Deus é injusto ao executar um julgamento adverso contra os errantes. Sendo criação de Deus, ninguém tem o direito de prejudicar-se por pecar.

O acima é o argumento usado por Paulo na sua carta aos romanos, dizendo: "Que diremos, se a nossa injustiça salienta a justiça de Deus? Será que Deus é injusto quando dá vazão ao seu furor? (Estou falando como homem.) Que isso nunca aconteça! Senão, como julgará Deus o mundo? Contudo, se por causa da minha mentira [veja Sal 62:9] a verdade de Deus tem sido destacada ainda mais para a glória dele, por que, também, sou ainda julgado pecador? E por que não dizer, assim como se nos acusa falsamente e assim como alguns homens declaram que dizemos: 'Façamos as coisas más, para que venham as coisas boas'? O julgamento contra tais homens está em harmonia com a justiça." (Ro 3:5-8) Deus libertou seu povo, não para um proceder de pecado, mas para uma vida de justiça, a fim de que O glorificasse. O apóstolo diz mais adiante na sua carta: "Nem continueis a apresentar os vossos membros ao pecado, como armas da injustiça, mas apresentai-vos a Deus como vivos dentre os mortos; também os vossos membros, a Deus, como armas da justiça." — Ro 6:12, 13.

Qual é o significado da declaração de que o próprio Jesus Cristo é "a verdade"?

Semelhante a seu Pai, Jeová, Jesus Cristo está "cheio de benignidade imerecida e de verdade". (Jo 1:14; Ef 4:21) Enquanto na terra, ele sempre falou a verdade conforme a recebera de seu Pai. (Jo 8:40, 45, 46) "Ele não cometeu pecado, nem se achou engano na sua boca." (1Pe 2:22) Jesus apresentava as coisas como realmente eram. Além de estar 'cheio de verdade', o próprio Jesus era "a verdade", e a verdade veio por intermédio dele. Ele declarou: "Eu sou o caminho, e a verdade, e a vida." (Jo 14:6) E o apóstolo João escreveu: "A Lei foi dada por intermédio de Moisés, a benignidade imerecida e a verdade vieram à existência por intermédio de Jesus Cristo." — Jo 1:17.

As palavras de João não significam que a Lei dada por intermédio de Moisés fosse errônea. Ela, também, era a verdade, ajustando-se ao padrão de santidade, de justiça e de bondade de Deus. (Sal 119:151; Ro 7:10-12) No entanto, a Lei servia como tutor que conduzia a Cristo (Gál 3:23-25), e tinha uma sombra ou figura profética de realidades maiores. (He 8:4, 5; 10:1-5) Fornecendo uma sombra, a Lei, embora verídica, não era a plena verdade, e, por conseguinte, tinha de ceder lugar às realidades que prefigurava. Este ponto é salientado pelo apóstolo Paulo na sua carta aos colossenses: "Nenhum homem vos julgue pelo comer ou pelo beber, ou com respeito a uma festividade ou à observância da lua nova ou dum sábado; pois estas coisas são sombra das coisas vindouras, mas a realidade pertence ao Cristo." (Col 2:16, 17) Assim sendo, a 'verdade veio a existir por intermédio de Jesus' no sentido de que Jesus trouxe as coisas prefiguradas pela Lei ao domínio da verdade real. Uma vez que ele mesmo não era sombra, mas a realidade, Jesus era "a verdade". Jesus também tornou-se 'ministro em favor da veracidade de Deus' no sentido de que cumpriu as promessas de Deus, feitas aos antepassados dos judeus, por ministrar a judeus e prosélitos circuncisos. — Ro 15:8; veja JESUS CRISTO ("Dar Testemunho da Verdade").

Similarmente, a referência do apóstolo Paulo à "verdade na Lei" não subentende que houvesse alguma falsidade nela (Ro 2:20), mas mostra que a Lei não era a plena verdade.

"O Espírito da Verdade." O espírito que procede de Jeová Deus é puro e santo. É "o espírito da verdade". (Jo 14:17; 15:26) Jesus Cristo disse a seus discípulos: "Ainda tenho muitas coisas para vos dizer, mas não sois atualmente capazes de suportá-las. No entanto, quando esse chegar, o espírito da verdade, ele vos guiará a toda a verdade, pois não falará de seu próprio impulso, mas falará as coisas que ouvir e vos declarará as coisas vindouras." — Jo 16:12, 13.

O espírito de Deus lhes ensinaria tudo o que necessitassem saber para executar seu trabalho, relembrando-lhes e abrindo ao entendimento deles coisas que anteriormente tinham ouvido de Jesus, mas que não haviam entendido. (Jo 14:26) O espírito de Deus também lhes declararia "as coisas vindouras". Isto talvez incluísse trazer à luz o significado da morte e da ressurreição de Jesus, uma vez que esses eventos ainda eram futuros e estavam entre as coisas que seus discípulos não entendiam. (Mt 16:21-23; Lu 24:6-8, 19-27; Jo 2:19-22; 12:14-16; 20:9) Naturalmente, o espírito de Deus mais tarde habilitou também os seguidores de Cristo a predizer acontecimentos futuros. (At 11:28; 20:29, 30; 21:11; 1Ti 4:1-3) Sendo "o espírito da verdade", o espírito santo de Deus jamais poderia ser a fonte do erro, mas protegeria os seguidores de Cristo das falsidades doutrinárias. (Veja 1Jo 2:27; 4:1-6.) Daria testemunho da verdade a respeito de Jesus Cristo. De Pentecostes de 33 EC em diante, o espírito de Deus deu testemunho por ajudar os discípulos de Jesus a entender as profecias que atestavam claramente que Jesus era o

Filho de Deus. À base de tais profecias, eles davam testemunho a outros. (Jo 15:26, 27; compare isso com At 2:14-36; Ro 1:1-4.) Mesmo antes de Pentecostes, porém, o "espírito da verdade" dera testemunho de que Jesus era o Filho de Deus (1Jo 5:5-8), pois fora com este espírito que Jesus foi ungido e habilitado para realizar obras poderosas. — Jo 1:32-34; 10:37, 38; At 10:38; veja ESPÍRITO.

A Palavra de Deus É Verdade. A Palavra de Deus apresenta as coisas como elas realmente são, revelando os atributos, os propósitos, e as ordens de Jeová, bem como a verdadeira situação das coisas entre a humanidade. A Palavra da verdade de Deus mostra o que se requer de alguém para ele ser santificado ou tornado santo, posto à parte para ser usado por Jeová em Seu serviço, e, daí, permanecer numa condição santificada. Por isso, Jesus podia orar a respeito de seus seguidores: "Santifica-os por meio da verdade; a tua palavra é a verdade." (Jo 17:17; compare isso com Tg 1:18.) A obediência deles à verdade revelada da Palavra de Deus conduziu-os à santificação, a verdade sendo o meio pelo qual purificaram a alma. (1Pe 1:22) Assim, destacavam-se como 'não fazendo parte do mundo' que não aderia à verdade de Deus. — Jo 17:16.

'Andar na Verdade.' Aqueles que desejam obter a aprovação de Deus devem andar na Sua verdade e servi-lo em verdade. (Jos 24:14; 1Sa 12:24; Sal 25:4, 5; 26:3-6; 43:3; 86:11; Is 38:3) Isto inclui ater-se aos requisitos de Deus e servi-lo em fidelidade e sinceridade. A uma samaritana, Jesus Cristo disse: "Vem a hora, e agora é, quando os verdadeiros adoradores adorarão o Pai com espírito e verdade, pois, deveras, o Pai está procurando a tais para o adorarem. Deus é Espírito, e os que o adoram têm de adorá-lo com espírito e verdade." (Jo 4:23, 24) Tal adoração não pode basear-se em imaginação, mas tem de ajustar-se ao que está em harmonia com o estado real das coisas, sendo coerente com o que Deus revelou na sua Palavra a respeito de si mesmo e de seus propósitos.

O cristianismo é o "caminho da verdade" (2Pe 2:2), e os que auxiliam outros em promover os interesses do cristianismo tornam-se "colaboradores na verdade". (3Jo 8) O inteiro conjunto de ensinos cristãos, que mais tarde se tornou parte da escrita Palavra de Deus, é "a verdade", ou "a verdade das boas novas". Apegar-se a esta verdade, ou 'andar' nela, é essencial para que se ganhe a salvação. (Ro 2:8; 2Co 4:2; Ef 1:13; 1Ti 2:4; 2Ti 4:4; Tit 1:1, 14; He 10:26; 2Jo 1-4; 3Jo 3, 4) No caso daqueles que se portam corretamente, a verdade — o enquadramento de seus modos de agir com a Palavra de Deus, e os resultados reais de seu proceder — testifica que eles constituem exemplos dignos de serem imitados. (3Jo 11, 12) Por outro lado, quem se afasta dos ensinos básicos do cristianismo, quer por se portar incorretamente, quer por advogar doutrinas falsas, não mais está 'andando' na verdade. Esta era a situação dos que insistiam que a circuncisão era necessária para alguém obter a salvação. O ensino deles era contrário à verdade cristã, e os que o aceitavam deixavam de obedecer à verdade e de andar nela. (Gál 2:3-5; 5:2-7) Similarmente, quando o apóstolo Pedro, por suas ações, impropriamente fez distinção entre judeus e não judeus, o apóstolo Paulo o corrigiu por não 'andar' em harmonia com "a verdade das boas novas". — Gál 2:14.

"Coluna e Amparo da Verdade." A congregação cristã serve como "coluna e amparo da verdade", preservando a pureza da verdade, e defendendo-a e sustentando-a. (1Ti 3:15) Por este motivo, é especialmente importante que aqueles a quem se confiou a supervisão da congregação sejam capazes de manejar corretamente "a palavra da verdade". O uso correto da Palavra de Deus os habilita a combater os ensinos falsos na congregação, instruindo "os que não estiverem favoravelmente dispostos, visto que talvez Deus lhes dê arrependimento conduzindo a um conhecimento exato da verdade". (2Ti 2:15-18, 25; compare isso com 2Ti 3:6-8; Tg 5:13-20.) Nem todos se habilitam para dar este tipo de instrução ou de ensino na congregação. Os homens que têm ciúme amargo e são contenciosos não têm base para jactar-se de serem habilitados para ensinar. Sua afirmação seria falsa. Conforme escreveu o discípulo Tiago: "Quem é sábio e entendido entre vós? Mostre ele as suas obras pela sua conduta excelente com a brandura que pertence à sabedoria. Mas, se tiverdes ciúme amargo e briga nos vossos corações, não vos jacteis e não mintais contra a verdade." — Tg 3:13, 14.

Para que a congregação cristã seja "coluna e amparo da verdade", os membros dela precisam, por sua conduta excelente, manifestar a verdade em sua vida. (Ef 5:9) Precisam ser coerentes e inalteráveis na conduta correta, como se estivessem "cingidos com a verdade". (Ef 6:14) Além de manterem a pureza pessoal, os cristãos precisam estar preocupados com a pureza congregacional. Ao dar ênfase à necessidade de manter a congregação cristã limpa das máculas trazidas por pessoas que são contra a lei, o apóstolo Paulo escreveu: "Retirai o velho fermento, para que sejais massa nova, conforme estiverdes livres do levedo. Pois, deveras, Cristo, a nossa páscoa, já tem sido sacrificado. Consequentemente, guardemos a festividade, não com o velho fermento, nem com o fermento de maldade e iniquidade, mas com os pães não fermentados da sinceridade e da verdade." (1Co 5:7, 8) Visto que Jesus Cristo foi sacrificado apenas uma vez (veja He 9:25-28) como a realidade do cordeiro pascoal, todo o proceder de vida do cristão, comparável à Festividade dos Pães Não Fermentados, deve estar isento de maldade e de iniquidade. É mister que haja a disposição de remover o que é pecaminoso, a fim de manter a pureza pessoal e congregacional, e, assim, 'guardar a festividade com pães não fermentados da sinceridade e da verdade'.

VERDE. Veja CORES.

VERME [hebr.: toh·le·'áh ou toh·lá·'ath]. Qualquer um de uma grande variedade de animais delgados, rastejantes ou que se locomovem lentamente, que em geral têm corpo mole e não possuem patas ou são virtualmente desprovidos delas. Na Escritura, "verme" amiúde ocorre para indicar o estágio larval dos insetos, especialmente os gusanos. (Êx 16:20, 24; Is 14:11; 66:24) Outras vezes, a referência não é a gusanos, mas a vermes que se nutrem de vegetação. — De 28:39; Jon 4:7.

O termo "verme" também ocorre num contexto ilustrativo. Bildade, de forma depreciativa, chamou o homem de verme (Jó 25:6), e predisse-se que o Messias seria encarado como um vitupério e desprezível, um verme. (Sal 22:6) Jeová Deus referiu-se a Israel como um verme, uma criatura humilde, desamparada, aparentemente à mercê de qualquer um que passasse por ali. Jeová, porém, assegurou aos israelitas Sua ajuda, e os incentivou a não terem medo. — Is 41:14. Veja também GUSANO.

VERSÕES. Traduções da Bíblia, feitas do hebraico, do aramaico e do grego em outras línguas. A tradução tornou a Palavra de Deus disponível a bilhões de pessoas que não entendem as línguas bíblicas originais. As primeiras versões das Escrituras eram escritas a mão, e, por conseguinte, tinham a forma de manuscritos. Não obstante, desde o advento da imprensa, surgiram muitas versões ou traduções adicionais, e estas, em geral, têm sido editadas em grandes quantidades. Algumas versões foram preparadas diretamente de textos hebraicos e gregos da Bíblia, ao passo que outras se baseiam em traduções anteriores. — TABELA, Vol. 1, p. 321.

As Escrituras já são publicadas, inteiras ou em partes, em mais de 3.000 idiomas. Do ponto de vista do âmbito linguístico, isto significa que cerca de 90 por cento da população da Terra pode ter acesso pelo menos a alguma parte da Bíblia. Um relato sobre as versões ou traduções das Escrituras suscitará gratidão a Jeová Deus pela forma maravilhosa em que preservou sua Palavra, em benefício dos milhões do gênero humano.

Versões Antigas das Escrituras Hebraicas. Atualmente ainda existem possivelmente 6.000 manuscritos antigos de todas ou de partes das Escrituras Hebraicas, escritos em hebraico (com exceção de uns poucos trechos em aramaico). Sabe-se que ainda existem também muitos manuscritos de versões ou traduções antigas das Escrituras Hebraicas, em vários idiomas. Algumas versões eram, elas próprias, traduções de versões anteriores do hebraico. Por exemplo, a parte das Escrituras Hebraicas da versão em Latim Antigo foi traduzida da Septuaginta, uma tradução grega das Escrituras Hebraicas. Por outro lado, algumas versões antigas das Escrituras Hebraicas (a Septuaginta grega, os Targuns aramaicos, a Pesito siríaca e a Vulgata latina) foram feitas diretamente do hebraico, e não por intermédio duma versão em grego ou em algum outro idioma.

O "Pentateuco" Samaritano. Depois de a maior parte dos habitantes de Samaria e do reino de dez tribos de Israel ter sido deportada pela Assíria, em 740 AEC, pagãos de outros territórios do Império Assírio foram ali estabelecidos pela Assíria. (2Rs 17:22-33) Com o tempo, os descendentes dos deixados em Samaria e dos trazidos pela Assíria vieram a ser chamados de samaritanos. Estes aceitavam os cinco primeiros livros das Escrituras Hebraicas, e, por volta do quarto século AEC, produziram o Pentateuco samaritano, que não é realmente uma tradução do Pentateuco original hebraico, mas uma transliteração ou transposição do seu texto para caracteres samaritanos, misturados com expressões idiomáticas samaritanas. Poucos dos manuscritos ainda existentes do Pentateuco samaritano datam de antes do século 13 EC. Dentre cerca de 6.000 diferenças entre os textos samaritano e hebraico, a grande maioria não têm importância. Uma variação de interesse ocorre em Êxodo 12:40, onde o Pentateuco samaritano corresponde à Septuaginta.

Os Targuns. Os "Targuns" eram traduções livres ou paráfrases das Escrituras Hebraicas para o aramaico. Embora fragmentos dos primeiros Targuns de alguns livros tenham sido encontrados entre os Rolos do Mar Morto, é provável que os Targuns judaicos como um todo tenham assumido sua atual forma não antes de cerca do quinto século EC. Um dos principais Targuns, o "Targum de Onkelos", sobre o Pentateuco, é bastante literal. Outro, chamado Targum de Jonatã para os Profetas, é menos literal. Ainda existem hoje Targuns sobre a maioria dos livros das Escrituras Hebraicas com exceção de Esdras, Neemias e Daniel.

A "Septuaginta" grega. A Septuaginta grega (ou Versão dos Setenta; frequentemente designada LXX) era usada pelos judeus e pelos cristãos de língua grega no Egito e em outros lugares. Segundo se informa, começou-se a trabalhar nela no Egito, nos dias de Ptolomeu Filadelfo (285-246 AEC), quando, segundo a tradição, 72 peritos judeus traduziram para o grego o seu Pentateuco. Mais tarde, o número 70 veio de algum modo a ser empregado, e a versão do Pentateuco era mencionada como a Septuaginta, que significa "Setenta". Os demais livros das Escrituras Hebraicas (vertidos por vários tradutores cujos estilos variavam do bastante literal até uma tradução relativamente livre) foram gradualmente acrescentados até que a tradução de todas as Escrituras Hebraicas foi finalmente concluída durante o segundo século AEC, e, talvez, por volta de 150 AEC. Depois disso, a obra inteira veio a ser conhecida como Septuaginta. Esta versão é frequentemente citada pelos escritores das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. Os escritos apócrifos foram evidentemente inseridos na Septuaginta grega algum tempo depois de ela ter sido inicialmente concluída. — Veja APÓCRIFOS.

Um dos manuscritos mais antigos ainda existentes da Septuaginta é o Papiro 957, o Papiro Rylands iii. 458, preservado na Biblioteca John Rylands, em Manchester, Inglaterra. Data do segundo século AEC, e consiste em fragmentos de Deuteronômio (23:24–24:3; 25:1-3; 26:12, 17-19; 28:31-33). Outro manuscrito do primeiro século AEC é o Papiro Fouad 266 (possuído pela Société Egyptienne de Papyrologie, do Cairo), contendo partes da última metade de Deuteronômio, segundo a Septuaginta grega. Em vários lugares dele encontra-se o Tetragrama (JHVH ou IHVH, em português) do nome divino numa forma de caracteres hebraicos quadrados bem no meio da escrita grega. — Veja FOTO, Vol. 1, p. 326; JEOVÁ.

A Septuaginta grega foi assim preservada em numerosos manuscritos, muitos sendo fragmentários, outros razoavelmente completos. É notável que os textos da Septuaginta se achem preservados nos três famosos manuscritos unciais escritos em velino: o Manuscrito Vaticano N.º 1209 e o Manuscrito Sinaítico, ambos do quarto século EC, e o Manuscrito Alexandrino, do quinto século EC. A Septuaginta, conforme se encontra no Manuscrito Vaticano N.º 1209 é quase completa; parte das Escrituras Hebraicas outrora incluída no Manuscrito Sinaítico foi perdida; e o que consta no Manuscrito Alexandrino é bastante completo, embora faltem partes de Gênesis, de Primeiro Samuel e dos Salmos.

Versões gregas posteriores. No segundo século, Áquila, prosélito judeu do Ponto, fez uma nova e bastante literal tradução das Escrituras Hebraicas para o grego. Excetuando-se alguns fragmentos e citações dela por parte dos escritores primitivos, ela se acha extinta. Outra tradução para o grego, do mesmo século, foi produzida por Teodocião. A versão dele, pelo visto, era uma revisão da Septuaginta, ou de outra versão grega das Escrituras Hebraicas, embora levasse em conta o próprio texto hebraico. Não existe mais nenhum exemplar completo da versão de Teodocião. Outra versão grega das Escrituras Hebraicas da qual não existe mais nenhum exemplar completo é a de Símaco. Sua versão, provavelmente feita em fins do segundo século EC, empenhava-se em transmitir o sentido correto, em vez de ser literal.

Por volta de 245 EC, Orígenes, o famoso perito de Alexandria, Egito, terminou uma gigantesca versão múltipla das Escrituras Hebraicas, chamada de Hexapla (que significa "sêxtupla"). Embora ainda existam fragmentos dela, nenhum manuscrito completo dela sobreviveu. Orígenes organizou o texto em seis colunas paralelas que continham (1) o texto hebraico consonantal, (2) uma transliteração do texto hebraico para o grego, (3) a versão grega de Áquila, (4) a versão grega de Símaco, (5) a Septuaginta, revisada por Orígenes, a fim de corresponder mais de perto ao texto hebraico, e (6) a versão grega de Teodocião. Nos Salmos, Orígenes empregou versões anônimas, que ele denominou de Quinta, Sexta e Sétima. A Quinta e a Sexta também foram usadas em outros livros.

Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. Traduções das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs para o siríaco (dialeto aramaico) foram produzidas a partir do segundo século. Uma versão siríaca de especial destaque é o Diatessaron, de Taciano, uma harmonização dos Evangelhos que data do segundo século EC. É possível que tenha sido escrita originalmente em Roma, em grego, e mais tarde traduzida para o siríaco, na Síria, pelo próprio Taciano, mas isto é incerto. O Diatessaron ainda existe nos nossos dias numa tradução para o árabe e num pequeno fragmento de velino do terceiro século em grego. Além disso, duas edições do comentário de Ephraem do quarto século, sendo uma no original siríaco e outra uma tradução para o armênio, contêm extensas citações de seu texto.

Hoje só existem manuscritos incompletos de uma versão em siríaco antigo dos Evangelhos (uma tradução diferente do Diatessaron), os Evangelhos siríacos curetoniano e sinaítico. Embora esses manuscritos talvez fossem copiados no quinto século, provavelmente representam um texto siríaco mais antigo. A versão original pode ter sido feita do grego por volta de 200 EC. É bem provável que outrora existissem versões em siríaco antigo de outros livros das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, mas não mais existem manuscritos delas. Todos os livros das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, exceto Segunda Pedro, Segunda e Terceira João, Judas e Revelação (Apocalipse) foram incluídos na versão Pesito, siríaca, do quinto século. Por volta de 508 EC, Filoxeno, bispo de Hierápolis, mandou que Policarpo fizesse uma revisão das Escrituras Cristãs da Pesito, e esta foi a primeira vez que Segunda Pedro, Segunda e Terceira João, Judas e Revelação foram acrescentados a uma versão em siríaco.

Já em fins do segundo século EC, as Escrituras Gregas Cristãs haviam sido traduzidas para o latim. Estavam também disponíveis em egípcio por volta de meados do terceiro século.

Versões Antigas da Bíblia Inteira. A versão Pesito dos povos de língua siríaca que professavam o cristianismo, estava em uso geral a partir do quinto século EC. O nome "Pesito" significa "simples". A parte das Escrituras Hebraicas era basicamente uma tradução do hebraico, feita provavelmente no decorrer do segundo ou terceiro século EC, embora uma revisão posterior envolvesse uma comparação com a Septuaginta. Ainda existem numerosos manuscritos da Pesito, o mais valioso deles sendo um códice do sexto ou sétimo século, preservado na Biblioteca Ambrosiana em Milão, Itália. A data inscrita num manuscrito do Pentateuco (que omite Levítico), da Pesito, corresponde a cerca de 464 EC. E um palimpsesto com o texto de Isaías tem a data inscrita de 459-460 EC. Assim, esses são os mais antigos manuscritos bíblicos datados em qualquer idioma.

Versões em latim antigo. Essa coleção de textos, também chamada de Vetus Latina, reflete as traduções em latim geralmente antes da Vulgata de Jerônimo. Esses textos provavelmente começaram a aparecer na última parte do segundo século EC em diante. Mas a primeira evidência da Bíblia em latim vem de Cartago, África do Norte, pelo menos por volta de 250 EC. As Escrituras Hebraicas foram traduzidas para o latim a partir da Septuaginta grega (ainda não revisada por Orígenes); no entanto, as Escrituras Cristãs foram traduzidas a partir do texto original em grego. Os estudiosos usualmente mencionam dois tipos básicos de texto em latim antigo: o africano e o europeu. Os manuscritos bíblicos mais antigos ainda em existência datam do quarto e quinto séculos EC.

A "Vulgata" latina. A Vulgata latina é uma versão da Bíblia inteira feita pelo mais destacado perito bíblico daqueles tempos, Eusebius Hieronymus, mais conhecido como Jerônimo. Ele empreendeu inicialmente uma revisão da versão em latim antigo das Escrituras Cristãs, comparando-a com o texto grego; começou com os Evangelhos, que foram publicados em 383 ou 384 EC. Não se tem certeza de quando ele terminou a revisão das Escrituras Cristãs em latim antigo. Entre cerca de 384 e 390 EC, ele fez duas revisões dos Salmos no latim antigo, baseando-se na Septuaginta grega. A primeira está agora perdida, mas a que tem sido chamada de Saltério Romano talvez represente o texto em latim antigo que ele revisou. A segunda é chamada de Saltério Gálico por causa da sua adoção na Gália. Jerônimo também traduziu os Salmos diretamente do hebraico, obra chamada de Saltério Hebraico. Ele começou a revisar outros livros das Escrituras Hebraicas a partir do grego, mas, pelo que parece, jamais concluiu essa revisão, preferindo traduzir diretamente do hebraico (embora também consultasse as versões gregas). Jerônimo trabalhou em sua tradução do hebraico para o latim desde cerca de 390 até 405 EC.

A versão de Jerônimo foi originalmente recebida com hostilidade generalizada e só aos poucos granjeou a aprovação geral. Vindo a gozar de posterior aceitação geral na Europa ocidental, passou a ser chamada de Vulgata, nome que indica uma versão comumente recebida (o termo latino vulgatus significa "comum, bem conhecido"). A tradução original de Jerônimo sofreu revisões, a Igreja Católica Romana fazendo da edição de 1592 a sua edição padrão. Ainda existem hoje milhares de manuscritos da Vulgata.

Outras traduções antigas. À medida que o cristianismo se espalhou, outras versões foram necessárias. Pelo menos por volta do terceiro século EC já se tinha feito a primeira tradução das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs para os nativos cópticos do Egito. No Egito usavam-se diversos dialetos cópticos, e, com o tempo, produziram-se várias versões cópticas. As mais importantes são a versão Tebaica ou Saídica do Alto Egito (no S) e a versão Boaírica do Baixo Egito (no N). Essas versões, que contêm tanto as Escrituras Hebraicas como as Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, foram provavelmente produzidas no terceiro e no quarto século EC.

A versão Gótica foi produzida para os godos no decorrer do quarto século EC, enquanto ainda estavam estabelecidos na Mésia (Sérvia e Bulgária). Nela se omitem os livros de Samuel e de Reis, alegadamente removidos porque o bispo Úlfilas, que fez a tradução, julgou que seria perigoso incluir, para o uso dos godos, estes livros que consideram a guerra e que contêm informações contra a idolatria.

A versão Armênia da Bíblia data do quinto século EC e foi provavelmente preparada à base de textos tanto gregos como siríacos. A versão Georgiana, feita para os georgianos do Cáucaso, foi concluída perto do fim do sexto século EC, e, embora revele influência grega, possui uma base armênia e siríaca. A versão Etíope, usada pelos abissínios, talvez tenha sido produzida por volta do quarto ou do quinto século EC. Há diversas versões árabes antigas das Escrituras. Traduções de partes da Bíblia em árabe talvez remontem ao sétimo século EC, mas o registro mais antigo é o de uma versão feita na Espanha, em 724 EC. A versão Eslavônia foi feita no nono século EC, e tem sido atribuída a dois irmãos, Cirilo e Metódio.

VESTE. Veja VESTIMENTA.

VESTE COMPRIDA. Veja VESTIMENTA.

VESTIMENTA. À parte da menção de algumas peças de vestuário na Bíblia, com certa descrição, há pouca informação histórica sobre a roupa usada pelos hebreus — muito menos do que sobre a dos egípcios e dos assírios. O motivo é que a nação de Israel não erigiu monumentos, nem fez inscrições elogiando seus militares vitoriosos, com figuras destes, à base dos quais se poderia obter uma ideia do seu estilo de vestimenta. Numerosos baixos-relevos egípcios e assírios, bem como os de outras nações, ilustram a vestimenta de seus próprios povos, e diversos mostram cativos de nacionalidades diferentes. Acredita-se que alguns dos retratados sejam hebreus, mas isto não pode ser provado. Parece razoável, porém, que parte da vestimenta usada hoje por pessoas nas terras bíblicas, a grosso modo, seja similar ao que se usava séculos atrás, visto que serve para o mesmo fim e os costumes não mudaram durante séculos. Por outro lado, a evidência arqueológica parece mostrar que os hebreus usavam cores na sua vestimenta em proporção muito maior do que os atuais beduínos árabes. Além disso, a vestimenta usada pelos atuais judeus e por outros povos naquelas terras frequentemente tem sido muito influenciada pela religião, e pelos costumes gregos, romanos e ocidentais, de modo que, no melhor dos casos, só podemos obter uma ideia geral pela comparação.

Os Materiais. O mais antigo material de vestimenta foi a folha de figueira, sendo que Adão e Eva coseram folhas de figueira para fazer coberturas para os lombos. (Gên 3:7) Mais tarde, Jeová fez para eles vestes compridas de peles. (Gên 3:21) "Uma vestimenta de pelos" foi usada por Elias e por Eliseu como "manto oficial" de seu ministério profético. Elias usava também um cinto de couro. João, o Batizador, vestia-se de modo similar. (2Rs 1:8; 2:13; He 11:37; Mt 3:4) Serapilheira, usualmente feita de pelo (Re 6:12), era usada pelos enlutados. (Est 4:1; Sal 69:10, 11; Re 11:3) Os principais tecidos eram de linho e de lã. (Le 13:47-59; Pr 31:13) Os tecidos mais grosseiros dos pobres eram feitos de pelos de cabra e de camelo, embora também usassem lã. O tecido de linho era mais caro. Talvez se usasse também algodão. Apenas em um único lugar na Bíblia há certeza da menção de seda, sendo ela alistada como artigo do comércio de Babilônia, a Grande. (Re 18:12) As vestes eram de várias cores, variegadas e listradas, e algumas bordadas. (Jz 5:30) Havia várias maneiras de tecer. A veste comprida de linho branco do sumo sacerdote foi tecida "enxadrezada". (Êx 28:39) Os israelitas que não eram sacerdotes talvez usassem uma veste de linho e outra de lã, mas eram proibidos pela lei de Deus usar uma vestimenta de dois tipos de fio mesclados. — Le 19:19; De 22:11; veja CORANTES, TINGIR; PANO.

Vestes. O termo geral para veste, ou roupa, mais usado nas Escrituras Hebraicas é bé·ghedh. Usavam-se outros termos, às vezes de modo geral, mas estes também ocorrem em alguns lugares referindo-se a peças específicas de vestimenta.

Peças de roupa interior. Parece ter havido uma peça de roupa íntima na forma duma tanga antiga, ou talvez calções, usados rente à pele, porque era vergonhoso expor totalmente a nudez. Exigia-se dos sacerdotes usar calções de linho (hebr.: mikh·na·sá·yim), para impedir a exposição indecente quando servissem junto ao altar. Os sacerdotes pagãos às vezes serviam nus, algo que era repugnante para Jeová. — Êx 28:42, 43.

O sa·dhín (hebr.) era uma roupa de baixo usada tanto por homens como por mulheres. (Is 3:23) Alguns acham que uma forma desta peça de roupa íntima era um pano que se passava em volta do corpo. Era usada sem roupa exterior por lavradores no campo, ou por pescadores, carpinteiros, madeireiros, tiradores de água, e assim por diante. Quando usada por baixo da roupa exterior, parece ter sido no estilo de camisolão, chegando aos joelhos ou mesmo abaixo deles, com mangas, e usada com ou sem faixa na cintura. Era de lã ou de linho.

O termo hebraico kut·tó·neth, um tipo de veste comprida, parece corresponder ao termo grego khi·tón. Ambos os termos são mais amplamente usados para se referir a uma túnica ou uma veste tipo camisão, de mangas compridas ou curtas, chegando até os joelhos ou os tornozelos. Era a roupa usada em casa ou em ambiente familiar externo. Em alguns modelos de kut·tó·neth, ou khi·tón, o pano talvez fosse deitado sobre um ombro, deixando o outro exposto, e era branco ou de diversas cores. O modelo mais comprido talvez tivesse fendas laterais de uns 30 cm, para facilitar o andar. Alguns eram de linho, mas na maioria das vezes provavelmente eram de lã, em especial entre os pobres. Esta veste também era usada tanto por homens como por mulheres, sendo provavelmente mais longa a veste comprida da mulher.

Kut·tó·neth é a palavra usada para a veste comprida do sumo sacerdote e dos subsacerdotes. (Êx 28:39, 40) Esta palavra também é aplicada ao comprido camisão listrado de José (Gên 37:3) e à comprida veste listrada de Tamar, que ela rasgou de pesar e de humilhação. (2Sa 13:18) A roupa interior de Jesus (khi·tón), sobre a qual os soldados lançaram sortes, era de uma peça inteiriça, sem costura. (Jo 19:23, 24) A kut·tó·neth, ou khi·tón, podia ser usada com faixa na cintura, como no caso dos sacerdotes, ou sem esta; na maioria dos casos, é possível que se usasse uma faixa. Provavelmente se usavam diversos estilos desta vestimenta, dependendo da atividade de quem a usava. Quem se empenhava em trabalho ou atividade física razoavelmente usava uma versão mais curta desta veste, para ter mais liberdade de movimento. A ilustração de Judas, no versículo 23, é apropriada, pois a khi·tón estaria em contato com a carne.

Peças de roupa exterior. O me'íl, uma túnica sem mangas frequentemente aberta na frente, era usado por cima da kut·tó·neth, ou comprida veste branca de linho do sumo sacerdote. (Le 8:7) Todavia, o me'íl não ficava restrito ao sacerdócio, mas era uma peça comum de vestimenta. Samuel, Saul, Davi, bem como Jó e seus três companheiros, estão entre os mencionados como usando túnicas sem mangas. (1Sa 2:19; 15:27; 18:4; 24:4; 1Cr 15:27; Jó 1:20; 2:12) Em cada caso, torna-se bastante claro que se refere a uma peça de roupa exterior ou secundária, usada por cima de outra. A Septuaginta às vezes verte me'íl, em grego, como sto·lé e hi·má·ti·on, termos que indicam uma veste exterior. Esta peça de vestimenta frequentemente era mais comprida do que a kut·tó·neth. A sal·máh (hebr.) talvez fosse também um tipo de roupa exterior.

A sto·lé, conforme mencionada nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, era uma imponente veste comprida, que chegava aos pés. Jesus criticou os escribas por gostarem de usar este tipo de veste comprida em lugares públicos, para atrair a atenção e para impressionar as pessoas com a importância deles. (Lu 20:46) O anjo no túmulo de Jesus usava este tipo de roupa. (Mr 16:5) Foi com esta veste comprida, "a melhor", que foi trajado o filho pródigo ao retornar. (Lu 15:22) E os martirizados servos de Deus, na visão de João, trajam a sto·lé (Re 6:11), como também os membros da "grande multidão". — Re 7:9, 13, 14.

E·sthés (gr.) usualmente tem referência a um manto ou uma veste adornada, esplêndida. Anjos apareciam em tal vestuário. (Lu 24:4; veja também Tg 2:2, 3.) Herodes trajou zombeteiramente Jesus com tal manto. (Lu 23:11) Depois de Jesus ter sido açoitado às ordens de Pilatos, os soldados puseram sobre ele um manto escarlate (khla·mýs) (Mt 27:28, 31), ou hi·má·ti·on. (Jo 19:2, 5) Pelo visto, tratava-se dum manto ou veste comprida usada por reis, magistrados, oficiais do exército, e assim por diante.

A sim·láh (hebr.), "capa", era a veste usada por fora, pela maioria. Era também a maior e mais pesada, feita de lã, linho ou pelos de cabra, e em alguns casos talvez de pele de ovelha ou de cabra. A capa frequentemente era a vestimenta rasgada para expressar pesar. (Gên 37:34; 44:13; Jos 7:6) Parece ter sido um grande pano retangular, usualmente colocado sobre o ombro esquerdo; uma das pontas era passada sob o braço direito, cruzada sobre o peito e lançada de novo sobre o ombro esquerdo, deixando o braço direito livre. Quando havia mau tempo, o pano era usado para envolver o corpo, passado sobre ambos os braços e até cobrindo a cabeça. Ocasionalmente, tinha a forma dum grande pano quadrado com aberturas para os braços. A capa, comparável em alguns aspectos ao xale, podia ser usada como cobertor (Gên 9:23), como cobertura (Êx 22:27; De 22:17), e para enrolar ou embrulhar objetos. — Êx 12:34; Jz 8:25; 1Sa 21:9.

A sim·láh era usada tanto por homens como por mulheres, distinguindo-se a da mulher daquela do homem talvez em tamanho, cor e enfeites, tais como bordados. Deus ordenou que a mulher não usasse vestimenta de homem, nem o homem, capa de mulher; sem dúvida, esta ordem foi dada para impedir perversões sexuais. — De 22:5.

O pobre talvez tivesse apenas uma capa, mas o abastado tinha várias mudas. (Êx 22:27; De 10:18; Gên 45:22) Visto que ela era a cobertura da pessoa pobre nas noites frias, era proibido tomar a vestimenta da viúva em penhor ou reter a vestimenta dum homem pobre durante a noite, sendo a referência aqui primariamente à capa. — De 24:13, 17.

O termo grego hi·má·ti·on, "roupa exterior", provavelmente em grande parte corresponde à capa (sim·láh) das Escrituras Hebraicas. Em alguns casos, parece ter sido uma ampla veste comprida, na maioria das vezes, porém, era um pano retangular. Era facilmente vestido e tirado. Seu dono costumava tirá-lo quando trabalhava por perto. (Mt 24:18; Mr 10:50; Jo 13:4; At 7:58) Jesus falou desta vestimenta quando disse: "A quem te tirar a tua roupa exterior [hi·má·ti·on], não negues nem mesmo a roupa interior [khi·tó·na]." (Lu 6:29) Talvez ele se referisse ali à retirada ilegal ou à força da vestimenta, sendo a roupa exterior naturalmente a primeira a ser tomada. Em Mateus 5:40, ele inverteu a ordem. Ali está tratando duma ação judicial, na qual os juízes talvez primeiro concedessem ao querelante o khi·tón, a roupa interior, que era de valor inferior.

Que hi·má·ti·on e khi·tón às vezes talvez fossem usados intercambiavelmente no sentido de

"roupagem" é indicado nos relatos de Mateus e de Marcos sobre o julgamento de Jesus. O sumo sacerdote rasgou sua roupagem para demonstrar com ostentosa santimônia seu horror e sua indignação. Mateus usa ali a palavra hi·má·ti·on, ao passo que Marcos usa khi·tón. (Mt 26:65; Mr 14:63) Ou é possível que, no seu fervor, ele rasgasse primeiro uma veste e depois outra.

O fe·ló·nes (gr.), que Paulo pediu que Timóteo lhe trouxesse à prisão provavelmente era uma capa de viagem para proteção contra o tempo frio ou tempestuoso. Não era uma vestimenta religiosa ou eclesiástica. — 2Ti 4:13.

O 'ad·dé·reth (hebr.) era o manto oficial de alguém assim como um profeta ou um rei. (2Rs 2:8; Jon 3:6) O manto oficial do profeta provavelmente era de pelos de camelo ou de cabra. (2Rs 1:8; Mt 3:4; Mr 1:6; compare isso com Gên 25:25.) Elias designou Eliseu para ser seu sucessor por lançar sobre ele seu manto oficial, e Eliseu apanhou este manto depois de Elias ter subido aos céus num vendaval. (1Rs 19:19; 2Rs 2:13) O que Acã tomou da "devotada" cidade de Jericó foi um manto oficial de Sinear, em violação da ordem de Jeová. — Jos 7:1, 21.

A palavra grega én·dy·ma é usada com referência a uma roupa de casamento (Mt 22:11, 12), ao vestuário do anjo junto ao túmulo de Jesus (Mt 28:3), à roupa de pelos de camelo de João, o Batizador, e ao vestuário em geral. — Mt 3:4; 6:25, 28; Lu 12:23.

Véu. A "mantilha" ou "véu" da mulher, de que o apóstolo Paulo fala, relacionado com o símbolo da sujeição da mulher à chefia, é pe·ri·bó·lai·on (gr.), algo que a pessoa põe em volta de si, um envoltório. (1Co 11:15) É diferente do véu facial, ou cobertura, usada por Moisés quando sua face brilhava a ponto de os israelitas não poderem olhar para ela. (Êx 34:33-35; 2Co 3:13) Rebeca pôs um lenço na cabeça quando se encontrou com Isaque, seu noivo, para indicar sujeição. (Gên 24:65) A palavra hebraica tsa·'íf, usada aqui, é traduzida "xale" (NM) e "véu" (Al, CBC) em Gênesis 38:14, 19.

Peças da vestimenta dos israelitas.

Simlah Me'il Kuttoneth

Faixa, cinto ou cinta. Frequentemente usava-se uma faixa de pano sobre a vestimenta interior ou exterior. Quando alguém se empenhava numa forma de atividade física ou trabalho, costumava 'cingir os lombos [ou: quadris]' por usar uma faixa, muitas vezes puxando as pontas da vestimenta para cima, por entre as pernas, e enfiando as pontas na faixa, para ter liberdade de movimentos. (1Rs 18:46; 2Rs 4:29; 9:1) O sumo sacerdote usava uma faixa tecida sobre a sua comprida veste de linho e, quando usava o éfode, uma faixa do mesmo pano era usada para segurar as partes das costas e da frente do éfode, parecido a um avental, presas à cintura. (Êx 28:4, 8, 39; 39:29) Era costume usar um cinto, ou cinta, por causa da sua conveniência adicional de segurar punhais ou espadas embainhadas, dinheiro, o tinteiro de secretário, e assim por diante. — Jz 3:16; 2Sa 20:8; Ez 9:3.

Visto que os que se empenhavam em algum tipo de trabalho, e servos ou escravos, usavam cinto, este tornou-se simbólico de serviço ou de alguém que ministrava a outros. A expressão de Jesus, "vossos lombos estejam cingidos", descreve figurativamente a prontidão para atividade espiritual por parte dos servos de Deus. (Lu 12:35) Jesus pôs de lado sua roupagem exterior e cingiu-se duma toalha. Daí ministrou aos apóstolos por lavar-lhes os pés, ensinando-lhes assim, por meio dum exemplo, a servirem seus irmãos. Os anjos observados na visão de João tinham cintos de ouro, o que significava que tinham um serviço mui precioso. — Jo 13:1-16; Re 15:6.

Elias usava um cinto (hebr.: 'e·zóhr) de couro "em volta dos lombos", assim como fazia João, o Batizador (sendo zó·ne a palavra gr. para o cinto de João). — 2Rs 1:8; Mt 3:4.

Franjas e borlas. Deus ordenou aos israelitas que fizessem franjas nas abas das suas vestes, com um cordel azul por cima da franja. Isto parece ter sido uma peculiaridade da vestimenta dos israelitas e fornecia um lembrete visual de que foram postos à parte como povo santo para Jeová. Manteria diante dos olhos deles que deviam obedecer aos mandamentos de Jeová. (Núm 15:38-41) Também se deviam colocar borlas nas quatro extremidades do seu vestuário; isto possivelmente tinha referência às quatro pontas da capa. (De 22:12) A bainha da túnica azul sem mangas do sumo sacerdote tinha alternadamente campainhas de ouro e romãs de tecido em volta. — Êx 28:33, 34.

Alfinetes. Quando uma veste comprida ou uma faixa precisava ser presa, os hebreus talvez usassem um tipo de alfinete. Espécimes dele, encontrados no Oriente Médio, são pontudos numa extremidade e têm no meio um buraco semelhante ao fundo duma agulha, no qual se prendia um cordão. A vestimenta era presa por se enfiar nela o alfinete e então enrolar o cordão em volta das extremidades salientes do alfinete. Parece que, por volta do décimo século AEC, introduziu-se no antigo Israel um tipo de alfinete de segurança um tanto parecido ao nosso atual.

Conceito Certo e Errado sobre a Vestimenta. O povo de Jeová foi informado de que não deve estar ansioso demais quanto a ter roupa suficiente. (Mt 6:25-32) Adverte-se a mulher cristã de não estar à procura de vestido ou estilo caro, ostensivo, mas, em vez disso, de usar roupa modesta, porém bem-arrumada, mostrando bom juízo. Portanto, ela deve dar atenção à sua vestimenta, mas deve dar ênfase primária na vestimenta dum espírito quieto e brando. (1Ti 2:9; 1Pe 3:3-5) No entanto, o escritor sábio dos Provérbios descreve a boa esposa como cuidando de que sua família esteja bem vestida, diligentemente produzindo vestimentas com suas próprias mãos. — Pr 31:13, 21, 24.

Por outro lado, muitas mulheres dos tempos bíblicos usavam a maneira de se vestir como meio de alcançar objetivos egoístas. Era costume que mulheres de cidades pagãs, quando estas estavam prestes a ser capturadas pelo inimigo, vestissem a melhor roupa para atrair os soldados que talvez as tomassem por esposa. Mas, no caso duma mulher cativa tomada por um soldado israelita, requeria-se dela remover suas peças de vestimenta, algumas das quais talvez estivessem ligadas à religião pagã, antes de ele poder casar-se com ela. — De 21:10-13.

Depois de Israel ter caído em muitas práticas idólatras e imorais, Jeová condenou as mulheres desta nação, que se vestiam e adornavam altivamente para atrair homens, mesmo homens de outras nações, e que se ataviavam com ornamentos da religião falsa. — Is 3:16-23; compare isso com Pr 7:10.

Uso Figurado. Jeová descreve Jerusalém como outrora por ele vestida figurativamente com vestimentas belas. Mas ela confiou na sua lindeza e consorciou-se com nações pagãs, ataviando-se para ser atraente, como uma prostituta. — Ez 16:10-14; veja também Ez 23:26, 27; Je 4:30, 31.

Em muitas passagens bíblicas usa-se roupa em sentido simbólico. Jeová retrata a si mesmo como trajado com dignidade, esplendor, alteza, luz, justiça, zelo e vingança. (Sal 93:1; 104:1, 2; Is 59:17) Diz-se que ele traja seu povo com vestes de justiça e de salvação. (Sal 132:9; Is 61:10) Seus inimigos serão vestidos de vergonha e de humilhação. (Sal 35:26) Paulo ordena aos cristãos desnudar-se da velha personalidade e revestir-se da nova personalidade, alguns dos aspectos dela sendo as ternas afeições de compaixão, benignidade, humildade mental, longanimidade, e, em especial, amor. — Col 3:9-14.

Fazem-se muitas outras referências simbólicas à roupa. Assim como um uniforme ou traje especial identifica a pessoa como pertencente a certa organização ou como apoiando certo movimento, assim a roupa, conforme usada simbolicamente na Bíblia, mostra a identificação da pessoa pela posição que adota e pelas suas atividades em harmonia com ela, como no caso da ilustração de Jesus a respeito da roupa de casamento. (Mt 22:11, 12; veja COBERTURA PARA A CABEÇA; SANDÁLIA.) Em Revelação (Apocalipse) 16:14, 15, o Senhor Jesus Cristo avisa contra o adormecimento espiritual e ser despojado da identidade como testemunha fiel do Deus verdadeiro. Isto poderia ser desastroso nas vésperas da "guerra do grande dia de Deus, o Todo-Poderoso".

VÍBORA [hebr.: 'ef·'éh; tsif·'o·ní; gr.: é·khi·dna]. Serpente venenosa, provida de presas altamente especializadas, que se dobram de encontro ao céu da boca, quando não estão sendo usadas.

A peçonha das víboras varia conforme o tipo, existindo vários deles na Palestina. Um dos tipos mais perigosos é a cobra-da-areia (Vipera ammodytes) do vale do Jordão. Outra espécie é a víbora palestina (Viper palaestina). O termo hebraico 'ef·'éh é comumente ligado ao árabe 'af'an, que se refere à víbora-carenada, perigosa cobra das planícies arenosas de Jericó.

Faz-se alusão à potência da peçonha da víbora em Jó 20:16, onde Zofar fala da "língua duma víbora" como tendo poder de matar. Depois de ter naufragado na ilha de Malta, o apóstolo Paulo estava juntando alguns gravetos e colocando-os numa fogueira, quando uma víbora saiu e se prendeu à mão de Paulo. Todavia, Paulo "sacudiu a bicha venenosa para dentro do fogo e não sofreu dano", embora as pessoas que estavam ali esperassem que Paulo inchasse devido à inflamação ou morresse subitamente. — At 28:3-6.

Uso Ilustrativo. A perigosa mordida da víbora é empregada de modo ilustrativo em Provérbios 23:32, onde o sábio descreve os efeitos da ingestão excessiva de vinho, dizendo: "Morde igual a uma serpente e segrega veneno igual a uma víbora [hebr.: u·khetsif·'o·ní]." Descrevendo a iniquidade que o povo de Deus, Israel, passara a praticar, o profeta Isaías escreveu: "Ovos duma cobra venenosa é o que eles chocaram . . . Qualquer que comia dos seus ovos morria e o ovo esmagado era chocado para resultar numa víbora." (Is 59:5) A maioria das cobras são ovíparas (põem ovos), e, embora a maioria das víboras não sejam ovíparas, certas espécies o são.

João, o Batizador, chamou os fariseus e os saduceus de "descendência de víboras". (Mt 3:7; Lu 3:7) E Jesus Cristo chamou os escribas e os fariseus de "descendência de víboras" por causa da iniquidade deles e do mortífero dano espiritual que podiam causar às pessoas insuspeitosas. — Mt 12:34; 23:33.

VÍBORA-CORNUDA [hebr.: 'akh·shúv; shefifón]. Uma das víboras venenosas que existem na Palestina, distinguindo-se por um pequeno chifre pontiagudo acima de cada olho. Raymond Ditmars relata que a víbora-cornuda (Cerastes cornutus) é encontrada no N da África, desde a Argélia até o Egito, e também na Arábia e no S da Palestina.

Por ser o veneno da víbora-cornuda potente (embora usualmente não fatal aos humanos), Davi diz apropriadamente que homens violentos têm aguçado a língua "como a duma serpente; a peçonha de víbora-cornuda está sob os seus lábios". — Sal 140:3; veja ÁSPIDE.

A víbora-cornuda, com um comprimento máximo de uns 80 cm, é de cor pálida, arenosa, e assim se esconde na areia, à espreita duma presa. O olho não acostumado acha muito difícil detectar a víbora-cornuda atocaiada. Raymond Ditmars, no seu livro Reptiles of the World (Répteis do Mundo; 1953, pp. 234, 235), descreve algumas víboras-cornudas que viu em cativeiro: "Como todas as víboras-do-deserto, elas procuravam continuamente lançar areia sobre seu dorso, ocultando assim seu corpo. Se a jaula fosse provida de várias polegadas de areia fina, nada se veria das serpentes durante o dia, exceto o alto da sua cabeça. Para pegar areia, o réptil achata o corpo a tal ponto, que a beira inferior atua como pá, daí, por uma série notável de movimentos ondulares pela extensão do corpo, em ambos os lados, a serpente afunda na areia e faz esta ficar sobre seu dorso."

Uso Figurado. É conhecido que a cobra-cornuda, alerta e de bote muito rápido, ataca cavalos; de modo que a comparação, em Gênesis 49:17, da tribo de Dã com a "cobra-cornuda" é bem apropriada. Jacó compara ali Dã a uma serpente, à cobra-cornuda, "que morde os talões do cavalo, de modo que o seu cavaleiro cai para trás". Isto não era para rebaixar Dã, como se fosse uma cobra vil na grama, que só merecia ser esmagada sob o calcanhar. Antes, na qualidade de cobra, Dã serviria a um grande objetivo nacional. Por ficar à espreita como a cobra-cornuda, na realidade poderia morder os talões do cavalo que levava um guerreiro inimigo, fazendo-o empinar-se e jogar o cavaleiro para trás. Portanto, embora pequena, a tribo de Dã seria tão perigosa como a cobra-cornuda para os que perturbassem Israel.

VIDA. O princípio de vida ou de existência; a existência animada, ou a duração da existência animada dum indivíduo. Quanto à vida terrestre, física, as coisas que possuem vida em geral têm a capacidade de crescimento, metabolismo, reação a estímulos externos, e reprodução. A palavra hebraica usada nas Escrituras é hhai·yím, e a palavra grega é zo·é. A palavra hebraica né·fesh e o termo grego psy·khé, que significam "alma", também são usados para referir-se à vida, não em sentido abstrato, mas à vida como pessoa ou animal. (Compare as palavras "alma" e "vida", segundo usadas em Jó 10:1; Sal 66:9; Pr 3:22.) A vegetação possui vida, operando nela o princípio de vida, mas não vida como alma. A vida no mais pleno sentido, conforme aplicada a entes inteligentes, é a existência perfeita com direito a ela.

Jeová Deus, a Fonte. A vida sempre existiu, porque Jeová Deus é o Deus vivente, a Fonte da vida, e ele não tem princípio nem fim de existência. (Je 10:10; Da 6:20, 26; Jo 6:57; 2Co 3:3; 6:16; 1Te 1:9; 1Ti 1:17; Sal 36:9; Je 17:13) Deu-se vida à primeira das suas criações, a saber, seu Filho unigêni-to, a Palavra. (Jo 1:1-3; Col 1:15) Por meio deste Filho foram criados outros filhos angélicos viventes, de Deus. (Jó 38:4-7; Col 1:16, 17) Mais tarde, foi trazido à existência o universo físico (Gên 1:1, 2), e, no terceiro dos "dias" criativos da terra, as primeiras formas de vida física: relva, vegetação e árvores frutíferas. No quinto dia foram criadas as almas viventes da Terra, os animais marinhos e as criaturas voadoras, aladas, e, no sexto dia, os animais terrestres, e, por fim, o homem. — Gên 1:11-13, 20-23, 24-31; At 17:25; veja CRIAÇÃO; DIA.

Por conseguinte, a vida na terra não teve de esperar a ocorrência de alguma combinação casual de substâncias químicas, sob determinadas condições exatas. Jamais se observou tal coisa, e, realmente, ela é impossível. A vida na terra veio a existir em resultado duma ordem direta de Jeová Deus, a Fonte da vida, e pela ação direta de seu Filho, na execução desta ordem. Somente a vida gera vida. O relato da Bíblia conta-nos que, em cada caso, uma coisa criada produziu descendência à sua semelhança, ou "segundo a sua espécie". (Gên 1:12, 21, 25; 5:3) Os cientistas verificaram que existe deveras a descontinuidade entre as diferentes 'espécies', e, excetuando-se a questão de origem, este tem sido o principal obstáculo para a teoria da evolução. — Veja ESPÉCIE.

A força de vida e o fôlego. Nas criaturas terrestres, ou "almas", existem tanto a força ativa de vida, ou "espírito", que as anima, como o fôlego que sustenta essa força de vida. Tanto o espírito (força de vida) como o fôlego são provisões de Deus, e ele pode destruir a vida por remover a qualquer dos dois. (Sal 104:29; Is 42:5) Na época do Dilúvio, tanto animais como humanos foram afogados; seu fôlego foi cortado e a força de vida foi extinta. Ela pereceu. "Morreu tudo em que o fôlego da força da vida estava ativo [literalmente: "em que o fôlego da força (espírito) da vida [estava]"] nas suas narinas, a saber, todos os que estavam em solo seco." — Gên 7:22; veja ESPÍRITO.

Organismo. Todas as coisas que possuem vida, quer espiritual quer carnal, têm um organismo ou corpo. A vida em si mesma é impessoal, incorpórea, sendo meramente o princípio de vida. Ao considerar o tipo de corpo com o qual retornarão os ressuscitados, o apóstolo Paulo explica que os criados para diferentes ambientes possuem corpos diferentes. Quanto àqueles que têm vida na terra, diz ele: "Nem toda a carne é a mesma carne, mas uma é a da humanidade, e outra é a carne do gado, e outra é a carne de aves, e outra de peixes." Diz também que "há corpos celestes e corpos terrestres; mas a glória dos corpos celestes é de uma sorte e a dos corpos terrestres é de sorte diferente". — 1Co 15:39, 40.

A respeito da diferença na carne de vários corpos terrestres, a edição de 1942 da Enyclopædia Britannica (Enciclopédia Britânica; Vol. 14, p. 42) diz: "Outra característica é a individualidade química manifesta em toda a parte, pois cada tipo distintivo de organismo parece possuir alguma proteína característica própria, e certa taxa ou ritmo característico de metabolismo. Assim, debaixo da qualidade geral de persistência no meio do incessante metabolismo, existe uma tríade de fatos: (1) a síntese que compensa a degradação de proteínas, (2) a ocorrência de tais proteínas num estado coloidal, e (3) sua especificidade, que varia dum tipo para o outro." — O grifo é nosso.

Transmissão da Força de Vida. A força de vida das criaturas, tendo sido posta em ação por Jeová nos primeiros de cada espécie (como exemplo, no primeiro casal humano), podia então ser transmitida à descendência através da procriação. Nos mamíferos, depois da concepção, a mãe fornece o oxigênio e outros nutrientes até o nascimento, quando o recém-nascido começa a respirar pelas narinas, a mamar e mais tarde a comer.

Quando Adão foi criado, Deus formou o corpo do homem. Para que este recém-criado corpo pudesse viver e continuar vivo, eram necessários tanto o espírito (a força de vida) como a respiração. Gênesis 2:7 declara que Deus passou "a soprar nas suas narinas o fôlego [forma de nesha·máh] de vida, e o homem veio a ser uma alma vivente". "O fôlego de vida" deve referir-se a mais do que apenas à respiração ou ao ar passando para os pulmões. Evidentemente, Deus forneceu a Adão tanto o espírito ou faísca de vida como o fôlego necessários para mantê-lo vivo. Assim, Adão passou a ter vida como pessoa, evidenciando traços de personalidade, e com a sua fala e suas ações podia revelar que era mais elevado do que os animais, que era "filho de Deus", feito à Sua semelhança e imagem. — Gên 1:27; Lu 3:38.

A vida do homem e dos animais depende tanto da força de vida inicialmente concedida ao primeiro de cada espécie, como do fôlego para sustentar esta força de vida. A ciência biológica atesta esta realidade. Isso se torna evidente no modo como alguns especialistas tentam dividir os vários aspectos do processo de morte: morte clínica, que é o fim das funções dos órgãos respiratórios e circulatórios; morte cerebral, que é quando o cérebro, de modo total e irreversível, para de funcionar; morte somática, que é quando as funções vitais de todos os órgãos e tecidos do corpo vão parando lentamente. Então, mesmo depois de a pessoa ter parado de respirar, de o coração ter parado de bater e de o cérebro ter parado de funcionar, a força de vida permanece por um tempo nos tecidos do corpo.

Envelhecimento e Morte. Todas as formas de vida vegetal, bem como de vida animal, são transitórias. Uma pergunta de longa data entre os cientistas tem sido: Por que envelhece e morre o homem?

Alguns cientistas propõem que toda célula tem uma duração de vida geneticamente determinada. Em apoio disso, apontam para experimentos nos quais se verificou que células cultivadas em ambiente artificial pararam de dividir-se depois de cerca de 50 divisões. Outros cientistas, porém, afirmam que tais experimentos não elucidam por que organismos inteiros envelhecem. Oferecem-se diversas outras explicações, inclusive a teoria de que o cérebro produz hormônios que desempenham um grande papel no envelhecimento e na subsequente morte. Que é preciso ter cautela quanto a aceitar uma ou outra teoria é sugerido pelos comentários de Roy L. Walford, M.D., que disse: "Não é motivo de alarme ou mesmo de surpresa que o paradigma de Hayflick [a teoria de que o envelhecimento é inerente na genética da célula] no fim possa mostrar-se falso ou ser substituído por um melhor, mas, por fim, igualmente falso paradigma. Tudo é verdade no seu próprio tempo." — Maximum Life Span (Duração Máxima da Vida), 1983, p. 75.

Ao tomar em consideração as descobertas e as conclusões dos cientistas, deve-se notar que a maioria deles não atribui a vida a um Criador. Eles esperam, pelos seus próprios esforços, descobrir o segredo do envelhecimento e da morte, a fim de estender indefinidamente a vida humana. Desconsideram que o próprio Criador decretou a sentença de morte para o primeiro casal humano, implementando esta sentença dum modo não plenamente entendido pelo homem; de maneira similar, ele oferece o prêmio da vida eterna àqueles que exercem fé no Seu Filho. — Gên 2:16, 17; 3:16-19; Jo 3:16.

Adão perdeu a vida para si e para sua descendência. Quando Adão foi criado, Deus colocou a "árvore da vida" no jardim do Éden. (Gên 2:9) Esta árvore evidentemente não possuía qualidades intrinsecamente vitalizadoras nos seus frutos, mas representava a garantia de vida "por tempo indefinido" da parte de Deus para aquele a quem Ele permitisse comer do fruto dela. Uma vez que Deus colocou essa árvore ali, com algum objetivo, sem dúvida Adão receberia permissão para comer este fruto depois de provar-se fiel a um ponto que Deus julgasse satisfatório e suficiente. Quando Adão transgrediu, foi-lhe cortada a oportunidade de comer daquela árvore, Jeová dizendo: "Agora, a fim de que não estenda a sua mão e tome realmente também do fruto da árvore da vida, e coma, e viva por tempo indefinido —." Daí, Jeová pôs as suas palavras em ação. Ele não podia permitir que alguém que não merecia a vida vivesse no jardim feito para pessoas justas, nem que comesse da árvore da vida. — Gên 3:22, 23.

Adão, que tinha usufruído a vida perfeita, dependente da obediência a Jeová (Gên 2:17; De 32:4), sentia então em si mesmo a operação do pecado e de seu fruto, a morte. Sem embargo, seu vigor de vida era forte. Mesmo em sua triste situação, apartado de Deus e da verdadeira espiritualidade, viveu 930 anos antes de lhe sobrevir a morte. No ínterim, conseguiu transmitir, não a plenitude de vida, mas certa medida de vida, à sua posteridade, muitos dos quais viveram de 700 a 900 anos. (Gên 5:3-32) No entanto, este processo iniciado com Adão é descrito por Tiago, meio-irmão de Jesus: "Cada um é provado por ser provocado e engodado pelo seu próprio desejo. Então o desejo, tendo-se tornado fértil, dá à luz o pecado; o pecado, por sua vez, tendo sido consumado, produz a morte." — Tg 1:14, 15.

O Que o Homem Precisa para Ter Vida. A maioria dos investigadores científicos não somente despercebe a causa da morte de toda a humanidade, mas, o que é mais importante, desconsidera o requisito primário para se ter vida eterna. Embora seja necessário que o corpo humano seja constantemente nutrido e revigorado por respirar, beber e comer, há algo muito mais essencial para a continuação da vida. O princípio foi expresso por Jeová: "O homem não vive somente de pão, mas . . . o homem vive de toda expressão da boca de Jeová." (De 8:3) Jesus Cristo repetiu esta declaração e disse também: "Meu alimento é eu fazer a vontade daquele que me enviou e terminar a sua obra." (Jo 4:34; Mt 4:4) Em outra ocasião, ele declarou: "Assim como o Pai vivente me enviou e eu vivo por causa do Pai, também aquele que se alimenta de mim, sim, esse viverá por causa de mim." — Jo 6:57.

Quando o homem foi criado, ele foi feito à imagem de Deus, segundo a Sua semelhança. (Gên 1:26, 27) Naturalmente, isto não significava uma imagem ou aparência física, porque Deus é Espírito, e o homem é carne. (Gên 6:3; Jo 4:24) Significava que o homem, diferente dos "animais irracionais" (2Pe 2:12), tinha a faculdade do raciocínio; tinha atributos semelhantes aos de Deus, tais como amor, um senso de justiça, sabedoria e poder. (Veja Col 3:10.) Tinha a capacidade de entender por que existia e o propósito de seu Criador para com ele. Portanto, dessemelhante dos animais, recebeu a capacidade de ter espiritualidade. Podia ter apreço pelo seu Criador e adorá-lo. Esta capacidade criava uma necessidade em Adão. Ele precisava mais do que apenas alimen-to literal; tinha de ter sustento espiritual; sua espiritualidade tinha de ser exercida para ele ter bem-estar mental e físico.

Por conseguinte, à parte de Jeová Deus e das Suas provisões espirituais não pode haver nenhuma continuação indefinida da vida. Quanto a viver para sempre, Jesus disse: "Isto significa vida eterna, que absorvam conhecimento de ti, o único Deus verdadeiro, e daquele que enviaste, Jesus Cristo." — Jo 17:3.

Regeneração. A fim de restaurar a perfeição do organismo e a perspectiva de vida eterna da humanidade, Jeová tem fornecido a verdade, a "palavra da vida". (Jo 17:17; Fil 2:16) Seguir a verdade levará a pessoa ao conhecimento da provisão que Deus fez de Jesus Cristo, que se entregou como "resgate em troca de muitos". (Mt 20:28) Somente por este meio é que se pode restaurar a plena espiritualidade, bem como a integridade física do homem. — At 4:12; 1Co 1:30; 15:23-26; 2Co 5:21; veja RESGATE.

Por meio de Jesus Cristo, então, vem a regeneração da vida. Ele é chamado de "o último Adão . . . espírito vivificante". (1Co 15:45) A profecia o chama de "Pai Eterno" (Is 9:6), e aquele que "esvaziou a sua alma até a própria morte", cuja alma foi 'posta como oferta pela culpa'. Ele, como tal "Pai", pode regenerar a humanidade, dando assim vida aos que exercem fé na oferta da alma dele, e que são obedientes. — Is 53:10-12.

A esperança dos homens dos tempos antigos. Os homens fiéis dos tempos antigos nutriam a esperança de vida. O apóstolo Paulo indica isto. Reporta-se ao tempo da descendência de Abraão, antes de ser dada a Lei, e fala de si mesmo, um hebreu, como se vivesse então, no sentido de que estava nos lombos de seus antepassados. Ele argumenta: "Eu estava uma vez vivo à parte da lei; mas, ao chegar o mandamento, o pecado passou a viver novamente, mas eu morri. E o mandamento que era para a vida, este eu achei ser para a morte." (Ro 7:9, 10; compare isso com He 7:9, 10.) Homens tais como Abel, Enoque, Noé e Abraão esperavam em Deus. Criam no "descendente [literalmente: semente]" que machucaria a cabeça da serpente, o que significaria libertação. (Gên 3:15; 22:16-18) Aguardavam o Reino de Deus, a "cidade que tem verdadeiros alicerces". Criam numa ressurreição dos mortos para a vida. — He 11:10, 16, 35.

Ao dar a Lei, Jeová declarou: "Tendes de guardar os meus estatutos e as minhas decisões judiciais, cumprindo as quais o homem também tem de viver por meio delas." (Le 18:5) Sem dúvida, os israelitas que receberam a Lei aclamavam-na como sua esperança de vida. A Lei era 'santa e justa', e marcaria como inteiramente justo aquele que vivesse plenamente à altura das suas normas. (Ro 7:12) Mas, em vez de dar vida, a Lei mostrou que todo o Israel, bem como a humanidade em geral, eram imperfeitos e pecadores. Ademais, condenava os judeus à morte. (Gál 3:19; 1Ti 1:8-10) Deveras, como Paulo disse, "ao chegar o mandamento, o pecado passou a viver novamente, mas eu morri". Portanto, não podia haver vida por meio da Lei.

O apóstolo argumenta: "Se tivesse sido dada uma lei que fosse capaz de dar vida, a justiça teria sido realmente por meio da lei." (Gál 3:21) Ora, não somente se mostrava que os judeus, condenados pela Lei, eram pecadores como descendentes de Adão, mas também estavam sob uma incapacidade adicional. Por este motivo, Cristo morreu numa estaca de tortura, conforme Paulo diz: "Cristo nos livrou da maldição da Lei por meio duma compra, por se tornar maldição em nosso lugar, porque está escrito: 'Maldito é todo aquele pendurado num madeiro.'" (Gál 3:13) Por eliminar este obstáculo, a saber, a maldição resultante para os judeus por sua violação da Lei, Jesus Cristo removeu para os judeus esta barreira para a vida, dando-lhes a oportunidade de obter vida. O resgate dele podia assim beneficiar tanto a eles como a outros.

Vida eterna, uma recompensa da parte de Deus. Em toda a Bíblia se evidencia que a esperança dos servos de Jeová Deus tem sido a de receberem das mãos dele a vida eterna. Esta esperança os tem incentivado a manter a fidelidade. E não se trata duma esperança egoísta. O apóstolo escreve: "Além disso, sem fé é impossível agradar-lhe bem, pois aquele que se aproxima de Deus tem de crer que ele existe e que se torna o recompensador dos que seriamente o buscam." (He 11:6) Ele é esta espécie de Deus; é uma das suas qualidades pela qual merece plena devoção das suas criaturas.

Imortalidade, incorrupção, vida divina. A Bíblia diz que Jeová tem imortalidade e incorrupção. (1Ti 1:17) Concedeu estas primeiro ao seu Filho. Na época em que o apóstolo Paulo escreveu a Timóteo, Cristo era o único que recebera imortalidade. (1Ti 6:16) Mas ela é prometida a outros, os que se tornam irmãos espirituais de Cristo. (Ro 2:7; 1Co 15:53, 54) Estes se tornam também participantes da "natureza divina"; compartilham com Cristo a glória. (2Pe 1:4) Anjos são criaturas espirituais, mas não são imortais, porque os que se tornaram demônios iníquos serão destruídos. — Mt 25:41; Lu 4:33, 34; Re 20:10, 14; veja IMORTALIDADE; INCORRUPÇÃO.

Vida terrestre sem corrupção. O que dizer de outros da humanidade, que não obtêm vida celestial? O apóstolo João cita Jesus como dizendo: "Porque Deus amou tanto o mundo, que deu o seu Filho unigênito, a fim de que todo aquele que nele exercer fé não seja destruído, mas tenha vida eterna." (Jo 3:16) Na sua parábola das ovelhas e dos cabritos, os das nações que são separados para o lado direito de Jesus como ovelhas entram na "vida eterna". (Mt 25:46) Paulo menciona os "filhos de Deus" e os "co-herdeiros de Cristo" e diz que "a expectativa ansiosa da criação está esperando a revelação dos filhos de Deus". Daí ele diz: "A própria criação também será liberta da escravização à corrupção e terá a liberdade gloriosa dos filhos de Deus." (Ro 8:14-23) Quando Adão foi criado como humano perfeito, ele era "filho de Deus". (Lu 3:38) A visão profética em Revelação (Apocalipse) 21:1-4 aponta para o tempo de um "novo céu" e uma "nova terra", e promete que, naquele tempo, "não haverá mais morte, nem haverá mais pranto, nem clamor, nem dor". Visto que esta promessa não é feita a criaturas espirituais, mas, especificamente, à "humanidade", ela garante que uma nova sociedade terrestre da humanidade, vivendo sob o "novo céu", usufruirá a restauração da mente e do corpo na plenitude da saúde, e a vida eterna como os terrestres "filhos de Deus".

Na ordem de Deus a Adão, ele deu a entender que, se Adão obedecesse, não morreria. (Gên 2:17) O mesmo se dá com os da humanidade obediente, quando o último inimigo do homem, a morte, for reduzida a nada, não haverá mais pecado operando em seus corpos para causar a morte. Não precisarão mais morrer, por tempo indefinido. (1Co 15:26) Ser a morte assim reduzida a nada ocorre no fim do reinado de Cristo, que o livro de Revelação mostra durar 1.000 anos. Ali diz a respeito daqueles que se tornam reis e sacerdotes com Cristo, que eles "passaram a viver e reinaram com o Cristo por mil anos". "Os demais mortos", que não passam a viver "até terem terminado os mil anos", têm de ser os que estiverem vivos no fim dos mil anos, mas antes de Satanás ser solto do abismo e trazer a prova decisiva sobre a humanidade. No fim dos mil anos, as pessoas na terra terão atingido a perfeição humana, estando na condição de Adão e Eva antes de pecarem. Terão então realmente vida em perfeição. Os que depois passarem a prova, quando Satanás for solto do abismo por um pouco de tempo, poderão usufruir esta vida para sempre. — Re 20:4-10.

O Caminho da Vida. Jeová, a Fonte da vida, tem revelado o caminho da vida por meio de sua Palavra da verdade. O Senhor Jesus Cristo "lançou luz sobre a vida e a incorrupção por intermédio das boas novas". (2Ti 1:10) Ele disse a seus discípulos: "É o espírito que é vivificante; a carne não é de nenhum proveito. As declarações que eu vos tenho feito são espírito e são vida." Pouco depois, Jesus perguntou a seus apóstolos se eles iriam deixá-lo, como outros haviam feito. Pedro replicou: "Senhor, para quem havemos de ir? Tu tens declarações de vida eterna." (Jo 6:63, 66-68) O apóstolo João chamou Jesus de a "palavra da vida" e disse: "Por meio dele foi a vida." — 1Jo 1:1, 2; Jo 1:4.

As palavras de Jesus evidenciam que os esforços humanos de prolongar indefinidamente a vida, ou as teorias de que certas dietas ou regimes trarão vida à humanidade, são fúteis. No máximo, podem melhorar a saúde apenas temporariamente. O único caminho para a vida é a obediência às boas novas, a "palavra da vida". (Fil 2:16) A fim de obter a vida, precisa-se fixar a mente "nas coisas de cima, não nas coisas sobre a terra". (Col 3:1, 2) Jesus disse aos seus ouvintes: "Quem ouve a minha palavra e acredita naquele que me enviou tem vida eterna, e ele não entra em julgamento, mas tem passado da morte para a vida." (Jo 5:24; 6:40) Não são mais pecadores condenados, seguindo na vereda da morte. O apóstolo Paulo escreveu: "Portanto, os em união com Cristo Jesus não têm nenhuma condenação. Pois a lei desse espírito que dá vida em união com Cristo Jesus libertou-te da lei do pecado e da morte." (Ro 8:1, 2) João diz que o cristão sabe que já 'passou da morte para a vida' por amar os seus irmãos. — 1Jo 3:14.

Uma vez que "não há outro nome debaixo do céu, que tenha sido dado entre os homens, pelo qual tenhamos de ser salvos", quem busca a vida tem de seguir a Cristo. (At 4:12) Jesus mostrou que é preciso conscientizar-se das necessidades espirituais; tem de se ter fome e sede de justiça. (Mt 5:3, 6) Não só se precisa ouvir as boas novas, mas tem de se exercer fé em Jesus Cristo, e, por meio dele, invocar o nome de Jeová. (Ro 10:13-15) Quem segue o exemplo de Jesus é batizado em água. (Mt 3:13-15; Ef 4:5) Precisa então continuar buscando o Reino e a justiça de Jeová. — Mt 6:33.

Resguardar o Coração. Quem se tornou discípulo de Jesus Cristo tem de continuar no caminho da vida. Ele é advertido: "Quem pensa estar de pé, acautele-se para que não caia." (1Co 10:12) É aconselhado: "Mais do que qualquer outra coisa a ser guardada, resguarda teu coração, pois dele procedem as fontes da vida." (Pr 4:23) Jesus mostrou que é do coração que emanam raciocínios iníquos, adultério, assassinato, e assim por diante. Estas coisas levam à morte. (Mt 15:19, 20) Guardar-se contra tais raciocínios do coração por supri-lo de vitalizadora nutrição espiritual, a verdade da Fonte pura da vida, protegerá o coração contra o erro e a perda do caminho da vida. — Ro 8:6; veja CORAÇÃO.

Para resguardar a vida por guardar o coração é preciso controlar a língua. "Morte e vida estão no poder da língua, e quem a ama comerá os seus frutos." (Pr 18:21) O motivo disso foi explicado por Jesus: "As coisas procedentes da boca saem do coração, e estas coisas aviltam o homem." (Mt 15:18; Tg 3:5-10) Mas pelo uso correto da língua para louvar a Deus e para falar coisas corretas, continua-se no caminho da vida. — Sal 34:12-14; 63:3; Pr 15:4.

Esta Vida Atual. O Rei Salomão, depois de experimentar tudo que esta vida tem a oferecer em matéria de riquezas, casas, jardins e formas de entretenimento, chegou à seguinte conclusão: "Odiei a vida, porque o trabalho que se tem feito debaixo do sol tem sido calamitoso do meu ponto de vista, pois tudo era vaidade e um esforço para alcançar o vento." (Ec 2:17) Salomão não odiava a vida em si mesma, porque ela é uma 'boa dádiva e presente perfeito de cima'. (Tg 1:17) Salomão odiou a vida calamitosa e vã que a pessoa leva ao viver assim como o mundo atual da humanidade, sujeita à futilidade. (Ro 8:20) Na conclusão do seu livro, Salomão exortou a que se tema o verdadeiro Deus e se guarde Seus mandamentos, o que constitui o caminho para a verdadeira vida. (Ec 12:13, 14; 1Ti 6:19) O apóstolo Paulo se referiu a si mesmo e a seus concristãos, dizendo que, depois de terem arduamente pregado e dado testemunho sobre Cristo e a ressurreição, em face de perseguição, "se somente nesta vida temos esperado em Cristo, somos os mais lastimáveis de todos os homens". Por quê? Porque teriam confiado numa esperança falsa. "No entanto", Paulo continuou, "agora Cristo tem sido levantado dentre os mortos". "Consequentemente, meus amados irmãos", concluiu ele, "tornai-vos constantes, inabaláveis, tendo sempre bastante para fazer na obra do Senhor, sabendo que o vosso labor não é em vão em conexão com o Senhor". — 1Co 15:19, 20, 58.

Árvores da Vida. Além da árvore da vida no Éden (Gên 2:9), já considerada aqui, a expressão "árvore[s] da vida" ocorre várias vezes nas Escrituras, sempre em sentido figurado ou simbólico. A sabedoria é chamada de "árvore de vida para os que a agarram", no sentido de que lhes suprirá aquilo de que precisam, não só para usufruir a vida atual, mas também para obter a vida eterna, a saber, conhecimento a respeito de Deus, e perspicácia e bom senso para obedecer aos Seus mandamentos. — Pr 3:18; 16:22.

"O fruto do justo é árvore de vida, e quem ganha almas é sábio", diz outro provérbio. (Pr 11:30) O justo, pela maneira de falar e pelo exemplo, ganha almas, isto é, por ouvirem a ele, as pessoas recebem nutrição espiritual, são levadas a servir a Deus e, assim, obtêm a vida que Deus torna possível. Similarmente, "a calma da língua é árvore de vida, mas a deturpação nela significa quebrantamento do espírito". (Pr 15:4) A fala calma do sábio ajuda e revigora o espírito dos que o ouvem, nutre neles boas qualidades, ajudando-os no caminho da vida, mas o uso deturpado da língua é como o fruto podre; causa dificuldades e desânimo, prejudicando os que a ouvem.

Provérbios 13:12 reza: "A expectativa adiada faz adoecer o coração, mas a coisa desejada, quando vem, é árvore de vida." O cumprimento de um desejo há muito aguardado é fortalecedor e revigorante, dando-nos renovado vigor.

O glorificado Jesus Cristo promete ao cristão vencedor que Ele lhe concederá comer da "árvore da vida, que está no paraíso de Deus". (Re 2:7) Novamente, nos versículos finais do livro de Revelação lemos: "E se alguém tirar qualquer coisa das palavras do rolo desta profecia, Deus lhe tirará o seu quinhão das árvores da vida e da cidade santa, coisas das quais se escreve neste rolo." (Re 22:19) No contexto destes dois textos bíblicos, Cristo Jesus fala àqueles que são vencedores, aos quais 'a segunda morte não fará dano' (Re 2:11), que obterão "autoridade sobre as nações" (Re 2:26), serão constituídos "coluna no templo do meu Deus" (Re 3:12), e se sentarão junto a Cristo no trono celeste dele. (Re 3:21) Por conseguinte, a árvore ou árvores não poderiam ser literais, pois os vencedores que comem delas são os participantes da chamada celestial (He 3:1), com lugares no céu reservados para eles. (Jo 14:2, 3; 2Pe 1:3, 4) A(s) árvore(s), portanto, seria(m) símbolo da provisão de Deus para a vida continuada, neste caso, a vida celestial e imortal que os fiéis recebem como vencedores ao lado de Cristo.

Faz-se menção das "árvores da vida" num contexto diferente, em Revelação 22:1, 2. Ali se mostra que as nações comem das folhas das árvores com fins curativos. As árvores estão nas margens do rio que flui do templo-palácio de Deus, no qual se acha o Seu trono. Esse quadro aparece depois da cena do estabelecimento do novo céu e da nova terra, e da declaração de que "a tenda de Deus está com a humanidade". (Re 21:1-3, 22, 24) Simbolicamente, então, estas seriam provisões curativas, sustentadoras da vida, para a humanidade, para no fim ter vida eterna. A fonte destas provisões é o trono régio de Deus e do Cordeiro, Jesus Cristo.

Fazem-se diversas referências ao "rolo da vida" ou ao "livro" de Deus. Este evidentemente contém os nomes de todos aqueles que, por causa da sua fé, são candidatos a receber a concessão da vida eterna, quer no céu, quer na terra. Contém os nomes dos servos de Jeová "desde a fundação do mundo", isto é, o mundo da humanidade redimível. De modo que o do justo Abel parece ser o primeiro nome escrito "no rolo". — Re 17:8; Mt 23:35; Lu 11:50, 51.

O que indica ter alguém seu nome inscrito no "livro" ou "rolo da vida" de Deus?

Ter alguém seu nome inscrito "no livro da vida" não o predestina para a vida eterna. Seu nome continuar ali depende da sua obediência. Assim, Moisés rogou a Jeová a favor de Israel: "Agora, se perdoares o seu pecado, . . . e se não, por favor, extingue-me do teu livro que tens escrito." Jeová respondeu: "Extinguirei do meu livro aquele que tiver pecado contra mim." (Êx 32:32, 33) Isto indica que a lista de nomes no "livro" passaria por mudanças por causa da desobediência de alguns, sendo o nome destes 'extinto' ou 'apagado' do "livro". — Re 3:5.

Na cena de julgamento, em Revelação 20:11-15, durante o Reinado Milenar de Cristo, o "rolo da vida" é mostrado aberto para receber nomes adicionais; abrem-se também rolos com instruções. Aqueles que retornam na 'ressurreição dos injustos' receberão assim a oportunidade de ter seus nomes escritos "no rolo da vida", desde que obedientemente realizem ações em harmonia com os rolos de instruções. (At 24:15) Naturalmente, os nomes dos servos fiéis de Deus, que voltam na 'ressurreição dos justos', já constarão no "rolo da vida". Manterão seu nome nele pela sua obediência leal às instruções divinas.

Como se consegue que o nome continue permanentemente no "livro da vida"? No caso dos que esperam receber a vida celestial, é por 'vencerem' este mundo pela fé, mostrando-se 'fiéis até a morte'. (Re 2:10; 3:5) No caso dos que esperam receber a vida na terra, dá-se isso por se mostrarem leais a Jeová durante uma prova decisiva, final, no fim do Reinado Milenar de Cristo. (Re 20:7, 8) Aqueles que mantiverem a integridade durante esta prova final terão seus nomes retidos permanentemente por Deus "no rolo da vida", Jeová reconhecendo assim que eles são justos em sentido pleno e dignos do direito à vida eterna na terra. — Ro 8:33.

'O rolo do Cordeiro.' O "rolo da vida do Cordeiro" é um rolo distinto, evidentemente só contendo os nomes daqueles com quem o Cordeiro, Jesus Cristo, compartilha seu governo do Reino, incluindo aqueles na terra que hão de receber vida celestial. (Re 13:8; compare isso com Re 14:1, 4.) Os inscritos no 'rolo do Cordeiro' são mencionados como entrando na cidade santa, Nova Jerusalém, tornando-se assim parte do messiânico Reino celestial. (Re 21:2, 22-27) Seus nomes estão inscritos tanto no 'rolo do Cordeiro' como no outro rolo, o "livro da vida" de Deus. — Fil 4:3; Re 3:5.

Rio de Água da Vida. Na visão de João, no livro de Revelação, ele viu "um rio de água da vida, límpido como cristal, correndo desde o trono de Deus e do Cordeiro", descendo pelo meio da rua larga da cidade santa, Nova Jerusalém. (Re 22:1, 2; 21:2) A água é essencial para a vida. A visão começa a se cumprir durante o "dia do Senhor", assim que o Reino de Deus é estabelecido. (Re 1:10) É um tempo em que alguns dos que fazem parte da noiva ainda estão na Terra para convidar pessoalmente "quem tem sede" para tomar de graça a água da vida. (Re 22:17) Daí no novo mundo, depois da destruição do atual sistema de coisas, o rio continua correndo e aumentando seu volume. A visão menciona nas margens do rio árvores que produzem frutos e folhas para a cura das nações. As águas vitalizadoras, então, seriam as provisões para a vida, que Jeová fez por meio do Cordeiro, Jesus Cristo, para todos na terra que receberão a vida.

'A Seiva da Vida.' No Salmo 32:1-5, Davi mostra a felicidade que acompanha o perdão, embora também revele a angústia sofrida antes de confessar a transgressão a Jeová Deus e obter o Seu perdão. Antes de confessar e enquanto tentava ocultar seu erro, o salmista sentia a consciência aflita, dizendo: "A seiva da minha vida se transformou como no calor seco do verão." A tentativa de reprimir a consciência culpada o desgastou, e a angústia reduziu seu vigor assim como uma árvore pode perder sua seiva vitalizadora durante uma estiagem ou no intenso calor seco do verão. As palavras de Davi parecem indicar que ele sentia maus efeitos, tanto mentais como físicos, ou que tinha, pelo menos, perdido a maior parte do prazer na vida, por não confessar seu pecado. Apenas a confissão a Jeová podia trazer o perdão e o alívio. — Pr 28:13.

A "Bolsa da Vida". Quando Abigail apelou a Davi para que desistisse da missão vingativa contra Nabal, desta forma refreando-o de incorrer em culpa de sangue, ela disse: "Quando um homem se levantar para te perseguir e para procurar a tua alma, a alma do meu senhor certamente mostrará estar embrulhada na bolsa da vida junto a Jeová, teu Deus; mas, quanto à alma dos teus inimigos, ele a atirará como que de dentro da concavidade duma funda." (1Sa 25:29-33) Assim como alguém embrulha algo valioso para protegê-lo ou preservá-lo, assim também a vida de Davi, como indivíduo, estava nas mãos do Deus vivente, e Ele preservaria a vida de Davi de seus inimigos, conquanto Davi não tentasse salvar-se por suas próprias mãos, mas esperasse em Jeová. A alma dos inimigos de Davi, porém, Deus lançaria fora.

VIDA, DURAÇÃO DA. O propósito original de Deus foi que o homem vivesse para sempre. O primeiro homem Adão, sendo perfeito, tinha a oportunidade de usufruir uma vida que nunca acabaria, desde que fosse obediente a Deus. (Gên 2:15-17) No entanto, por causa da desobediência, Adão perdeu esta oportunidade, e foi dele que toda a raça humana herdou o pecado e a morte. — Ro 5:12.

Durante o Período Patriarcal. Durante o período antediluviano, a duração da vida chegava perto dos mil anos. (Gên 5:5-29) Os que estavam mais perto da original perfeição do homem usufruíam maior longevidade do que os mais afastados dela. A vida mais longa de que há registro foi a de Metusalém, que viveu 969 anos. Depois do Dilúvio, a duração da vida humana diminuiu rapidamente.

Alguns apresentaram a teoria de que, nas épocas antes do Dilúvio, os anos tinham apenas a duração de um mês. No entanto, não há nenhuma base bíblica para tal conceito. Se o ano tivesse sido de um mês de 30 dias, isto significaria que Enos se tornou pai antes dos oito anos de idade, e outros, tais como Quenã, Malalel e Enoque teriam gerado filhos antes de terem seis anos de idade. (Gên 5:9, 12, 15, 21) A comparação de Gênesis 7:11 com Gênesis 8:3, 4, mostra que 150 dias eram cinco meses. Mencionar a Bíblia também o 10.º mês, e, depois, um período de 40 dias, e pelo menos dois períodos de 7 dias passados naquele ano, indica que o ano era de 12 meses. — Gên 8:5, 6, 10, 12-14.

A Partir do Tempo de Moisés. Há uns 3.500 anos, Moisés escreveu a respeito da duração da vida: "Os dias dos nossos anos são em si mesmos setenta anos; e se por motivo de potência especial são oitenta anos, mesmo assim a sua insistência é em desgraça e em coisas prejudiciais." (Sal 90:10) Neste respeito, a situação não mudou muito.

No decorrer dos séculos, os esforços do homem para prolongar a vida não tiveram êxito. Todavia, em muitos países, a expectativa de vida tem aumentado. Neste respeito, James Fries e Lawrence Crapo disseram: "A média da duração da vida nos Estados Unidos tem aumentado de aproximadamente 47 anos, na virada do século, para mais de 73 anos atualmente, um aumento de mais de 25 anos. . . . Um exame crítico destes dados, porém, mostra que o aumento na expectativa de vida resulta da eliminação de morte prematura, em vez de resultar da extensão da duração natural da vida." — Vitality and Aging (Vitalidade e Envelhecimento), 1981, pp. 74, 75.

Há quase 2.000 anos, Jesus Cristo declarou que ninguém "pode acrescentar um côvado à duração de sua vida". (Lu 12:25) No entanto, Jesus disse também: "As coisas impossíveis aos homens são possíveis a Deus." (Lu 18:27) Deus predissera por meio do profeta Isaías: "Os dias do meu povo serão como os dias da árvore." (Is 65:22) E em Isaías 25:8 predisse-se que Deus "realmente tragará a morte para sempre, e o Soberano Senhor Jeová certamente enxugará as lágrimas de todas as faces". Esta promessa foi repetida no último livro da Bíblia: "E [Deus] enxugará dos seus olhos toda lágrima, e não haverá mais morte, nem haverá mais pranto, nem clamor, nem dor." — Re 21:4.

VIDEIRA. Trepadeira sarmentosa das vitáceas, sendo a videira vinífera (Vitis vinifera) a variedade mais comum delas. A palavra hebraica géfen refere-se geralmente à "videira vinífera" (Núm 6:4; Jz 13:14), uma exceção sendo a "trepadeira silvestre" que produziu bagas silvestres. (2Rs 4:39) A palavra grega ám·pe·los se refere à videira vinífera, e a palavra am·pe·lón se refere a um vinhedo.

A história da viticultura começa com a declaração: "Noé . . . passou a plantar um vinhedo." (Gên 9:20) Melquisedeque, rei de Salém, trouxe "pão e vinho" para oferecer a Abraão, o que prova que na terra de Canaã já se cultivavam uvas antes de 1933 AEC. (Gên 14:18) Inscrições egípcias apresentam a vindima e o pisamento em lagares no segundo milênio AEC; os faraós daquele tempo tinham copeiros oficiais. (Gên 40:9-13, 20-23) A indústria vinícola egípcia, porém, sofreu um rude golpe quando Jeová "foi matar sua videira" com uma praga de saraiva. — Sal 78:47; 105:33.

Os espias que entraram na Terra da Promessa, "uma terra . . . de videiras, e de figos, e de romãs", trouxeram do vale da torrente de Escol um cacho de uvas tão grande, que teve de ser carregado numa barra por dois homens. (De 8:8; Núm 13:20, 23, 26) Cachos de uvas desta região, segundo se diz, costumam pesar de 4,5 a 5,5 kg. Registrou-se um cacho que pesou 12 kg; e, ainda outro, mais de 20 kg.

Além do vale da torrente de Escol, outras regiões vinícolas mencionadas na Bíblia são En-Gedi, junto ao Mar Morto (Cân 1:14), Siquém (Jz 9:26, 27), Silo (Jz 21:20, 21), e, do outro lado do Jordão, Sibma, Hésbon e Eleale. — Is 16:7-10; Je 48:32.

Plantio e Cuidados. Os vinhedos amiúde eram plantados nas encostas de colinas. Era costumeiro cercar ou murar os vinhedos (Núm 22:24; Pr 24:30, 31), e também construir ranchos ou torres de vigia (Is 1:8; 5:2), para proteger os vinhedos contra ladrões ou animais intrusos, tais como raposas e javalis. (Sal 80:8, 13; Cân 2:15) A Lei mosaica permitia que o transeunte comesse uvas até saciar-se, mas não que levasse consigo algumas num receptáculo, pois isso seria furto. — De 23:24.

Por conveniência, um lagar e um tanque eram escavados perto do vinhedo, visto que, geralmente, o grosso da colheita era esmagado para a fabricação de vinho. (Is 5:2; Mr 12:1; veja VINHO E BEBIDA FORTE.) Naturalmente, uvas frescas eram comidas em considerável quantidade, e produziam-se algumas passas secas ao sol. — 1Sa 25:18; 30:12; 2Sa 16:1; 1Cr 12:40.

Os vinhedos antigos eram dispostos de diversos modos. Às vezes, as videiras eram plantadas sistematicamente em fileiras com 2,5 m ou mais entre si, em solo bem preparado. Não se deviam plantar outras sementes num vinhedo, segundo a Lei mosaica, embora se pudessem plantar ali árvores, tais como a figueira. (De 22:9; Lu 13:6, 7) Às vezes se permitia que as vides crescessem rente ao solo, colina abaixo, apenas os cachos sendo levantados em paus forcados, porém, na maioria das vezes, fazia-se os sarmentos passar sobre caramanchões de madeira ou pilhas de pedras.

A poda é necessária para a produção de boas uvas. Jesus disse que "todo ramo . . . que não dá fruto, ele tira, e todo o que dá fruto, ele limpa [através da poda], para que dê mais fruto". (Jo 15:2) A poda dos ramos produtivos e o corte dos infrutíferos permitem que a planta use sua plena força para a produção de frutos de qualidade superior. A poda nas terras bíblicas começava na primavera setentrional, por volta de março, e era repetida em abril e de novo em maio, se necessária. — 2Cr 26:10; Is 18:5; Lu 13:7.

Uma videira frutífera, com cuidados apropriados e boas podas, pode atingir idade e tamanho incomuns. Por exemplo, relata-se que uma de tais videiras, em Jericó, tinha mais de 300 anos, e seu tronco tinha um diâmetro de quase 46 cm. Às vezes, estas velhas videiras atingiam uma altura de mais de 9 m, e, eram verdadeiros 'paus de videira'. Mas, apesar de tal estatura entre as árvores da floresta, esse pau de videira não serve nem como "pau para fazer qualquer obra", nem como "tarugo para pendurar nele qualquer espécie de utensílio", pois é mole demais; e não é suficientemente reto para servir de madeira. Deveras, o lenho da videira servia qual ilustração apropriada dos infiéis habitantes de Jerusalém, que só serviam para alimentar um fogo, que era o destino final das videiras infrutíferas, disse Jesus. — Ez 15:2-7; Jo 15:6.

A vindima bem-sucedida era uma ocasião de cantos e de alegria compartilhada pelos colhedores de uva e pelos pisadores dos lagares. (Jz 9:27; Is 16:10; Je 25:30; veja LAGAR.) Era também uma ocasião alegre para os pobres e os residentes forasteiros do país, aos quais se permitia rebuscar os vinhedos depois da colheita geral. (Le 19:10; De 24:21) O inverso também era verdade — quando as videiras se secavam, ou quando não produziam uvas, ou os vinhedos se tornavam ermos desolados, de espinhos, tratava-se de tempos calamitosos, de grande pesar. — Is 24:7; 32:10, 12, 13; Je 8:13.

As leis sabáticas exigiam que os proprietários deixassem seus vinhedos sem cultivo, poda ou colheita a cada sétimo ano, e durante o jubileu. (Le 25:3-5, 11) Mas, durante tais anos, quaisquer pessoas (seus donos, escravos, estrangeiros, pobres), bem como os animais, podiam comer à vontade o que crescesse espontaneamente. — Êx 23:10, 11; Le 25:1-12.

Uso Ilustrativo e Figurativo. A familiaridade com a videira vinífera — o conhecimento geral que as pessoas tinham do seu cultivo e da sua produtividade, bem como da vindima e das atividades de rebusca ligadas a ela — tornava-a objeto de frequente referência por parte dos escritores bíblicos. Os vinhedos que produziam frutos abundantes refletiam a bênção de Jeová. (Le 26:5; Ag 2:19; Za 8:12; Mal 3:11; Sal 128:3) A expressão 'sentar-se cada um debaixo de sua própria videira e debaixo de sua própria figueira' tornou-se proverbial duma condição de paz e segurança. — 1Rs 4:25; 2Rs 18:31; Is 36:16; Miq 4:4; Za 3:10.

As videiras improdutivas seriam manifestação do desfavor de Deus. (De 28:39) Israel era como que uvas no ermo, mas tornou-se como uma videira em degeneração (Os 9:10; 10:1), como uma videira estrangeira que produzia uvas bravas. (Is 5:4; Je 2:21) Uma expressão proverbial comum da época de Jeremias e de Ezequiel se referia a que as uvas verdes deixam os dentes embotados, devido à sua acidez. — Je 31:29, 30; Ez 18:2.

Fizeram-se tentativas de relacionar a "videira de Sodoma" com diversas plantas nativas da região do Mar Morto, mas o contexto desta expressão, na sua única ocorrência (De 32:32), claramente indica um uso figurado. Na Bíblia usa-se Sodoma repetidamente para representar corrupção e iniquidade morais. — Is 1:10; 3:9; Je 23:14.

Jesus falou em diversas ocasiões sobre vinhedos e suas uvas. (Mt 20:1-16) Apenas três dias antes da sua morte, apresentou a ilustração dos viticultores iníquos. — Mr 12:1-9; Lu 20:9-16; veja ILUSTRAÇÕES.

Quando instituiu a Refeição Noturna do Senhor, Jesus usou vinho, o "produto da videira", como símbolo do seu "sangue do pacto". Naquela última noite da sua vida terrestre, ele também falou de si mesmo como "a verdadeira videira", e de seu Pai como "o lavrador". Assemelhou seus discípulos a "ramos" que seriam podados, para dar mais frutos, ou decepados por completo. — Mt 26:27-29; Mr 14:24, 25; Lu 22:18; Jo 15:1-10.

Uso Profético. Quando Jacó abençoou Judá, havia significado profético em suas palavras: "Prendendo seu jumento adulto a uma videira [lag·gé·fen] e a cria de sua própria jumenta a uma videira seleta [welas·so·re·qáh], lavará certamente a sua vestimenta em vinho e a sua roupa no sangue das uvas. Seus olhos são vermelho-escuros do vinho." (Gên 49:8-12) A palavra hebraica so·re·qáh indica uma videira avermelhada que produz os frutos mais ricos ou mais seletos. (Veja Is 5:2; Je 2:21, onde ocorre o termo aparentado so·réq.) Poucos dias antes de se fixar o letreiro "O Rei dos Judeus" acima de Jesus Cristo na estaca de tortura (Mr 15:26), ele, que era da tribo de Judá, entrou em Jerusalém montado num jumentinho, cria duma jumenta, sendo assim apresentado a Jerusalém como seu rei. (Mt 21:1-9; Za 9:9) Embora Jesus não prendesse a cria da jumenta a uma videira literal, ele deveras atou suas pretensões régias a uma videira simbólica, espiritual, a saber, o Reino de Deus. — Veja Mt 21:41-43; Jo 15:1-5.

Em adição a este significado maior, a profecia de Jacó teve aplicação literal na herança dada à tribo de Judá, na Terra da Promessa. Esta incluía a região montanhosa, com seus vales produtivos e suas elevadas 'ladeiras férteis', com terraços para vinhedos. — Is 5:1.

No livro de Revelação (Apocalipse), depois de ser mencionada a "colheita da terra", ouve-se um anjo dar a ordem: "Ajunta os cachos da videira da terra, porque as suas uvas ficaram maduras." Daí, "a videira da terra" foi ajuntada e lançada "no grande lagar da ira de Deus". Esta videira difere da "verdadeira videira" que produz fruto para a glória de Deus. A "videira da terra" evidentemente produz frutos prejudiciais, pois ela é destruída por ordem de Deus. — Re 14:15, 18, 19.

VIDENTE. Evidentemente, homem habilitado por Deus para discernir a vontade divina, alguém com tal perspicácia; alguém cujos olhos como que haviam sido desvendados para ver e entender coisas não discerníveis aos homens em geral. A palavra hebraica ro·'éh, traduzida "vidente", deriva duma raiz que significa "ver", em sentido literal ou figurativo. O vidente era homem consultado por outros para obter conselho sábio sobre problemas enfrentados. (1Sa 9:5-10) A Bíblia chama Samuel (1Sa 9:9, 11, 18, 19; 1Cr 9:22; 29:29), Zadoque (2Sa 15:27) e Hanani (2Cr 16:7, 10) de videntes.

Os nomes "vidente", "profeta" e "visionário" têm relação íntima entre si nas Escrituras. A distinção entre os termos pode ser que "vidente" talvez se relacione com o discernimento, "visionário", com a maneira em que se deu a conhecer a vontade divina, e "profeta", mais com o proferimento ou a proclamação da vontade divina. Samuel, Natã e Gade são todos chamados de profetas (1Sa 3:20; 2Sa 7:2; 24:11), mas 1 Crônicas 29:29 indica uma distinção entre os três termos com a expressão "entre as palavras de Natã, o profeta, e entre as palavras de Gade, o visionário".

Primeiro Samuel 9:9 declara: "O profeta de hoje costumava ser chamado outrora de vidente." Isto talvez fosse assim porque perto do fim dos dias dos juízes e durante os reinados dos reis de Israel (que começaram nos dias de Samuel), passou a destacar-se mais o profeta como proclamador público da vontade de Deus. Samuel costuma ser classificado como o primeiro da série de homens chamados de "os profetas". — At 3:24; 13:20; veja PROFETA.

VIDRO. Mistura de areia especial (sílica) com traços de outros elementos, tais como boro, fósforo e chumbo. Estes ingredientes são fundidos a uma temperatura de uns 1650° C. O vidro recém-formado, quando esfriado, é não cristalino, liso, extremamente duro e bastante quebradiço. O calor vulcânico tem produzido uma forma de vidro chamada de obsidiana, e o relâmpago, quando atinge areia, às vezes a funde em longos e finos tubos de vidro conhecidos como fulguritos.

No Egito foram encontradas contas de vidro que, segundo os arqueólogos creem, foram fabricadas há 4.000 anos, por volta do tempo em que Abraão nasceu. Jó, que viveu no século 17 antes da Era Comum, menciona vidro junto com ouro quanto à preciosidade, dizendo: "Ouro e vidro não podem ser comparados com [a sabedoria]." — Jó 28:17.

O apóstolo João, ao descrever suas visões, faz menção de "vidro límpido" e de "vidro transparente" (Re 21:18, 21); também de "um mar vítreo, semelhante a cristal". — Re 4:6.

VIGIA. Alguém que se mantém em guarda para impedir possíveis danos a pessoas ou a propriedades, frequentemente durante a noite, e que talvez soe um alarme em face da ameaça dum perigo. No serviço militar, um vigia é geralmente chamado de guarda ou sentinela. — Je 51:12 n; At 12:6; 28:16; veja GUARDA.

Como proteção contra ladrões e vândalos, era comum colocar pessoas para vigiar os vinhedos maturescentes ou rebanhos de animais, posicionando-as talvez em ranchos ou em torres de vigia elevadas, construídos para essa finalidade. (2Rs 17:9; 2Cr 20:24; Jó 27:18; Is 1:8) As forças sitiantes que atacavam lugares fortificados dispunham de vigias ou sentinelas para fornecer a seus comandantes informações militares. (Je 51:12) Quando o Rei Saul se achava no acampamento com seu exército, ele também tinha vigias pessoais, cuja responsabilidade era cuidar do bem-estar do seu rei. — 1Sa 14:16; 26:15, 16.

Os vigias muitas vezes eram postados nas muralhas e nas torres da cidade, para observar à distância os que se aproximavam, antes de chegarem perto. (2Sa 18:24-27; 2Rs 9:17-20) Às vezes, os vigias faziam suas rondas de inspeção também pelas ruas da cidade. (Cân 3:3; 5:7) Pessoas temerosas, que ficavam acordadas durante as horas perigosas da noite, talvez indagassem repetidas vezes aos vigias se tudo ia bem (Is 21:11, 12), e era apenas natural que os próprios vigias ansiassem a luz do dia. (Sal 130:6) Feliz a cidade que, em adição aos vigias, tinha Jeová para vigiá-la. — Sal 127:1.

Uso Figurado. Jeová suscitou profetas que serviam como vigias figurativos para a nação de Israel (Je 6:17), e eles, por sua vez, às vezes falavam dos vigias de modo simbólico. (Is 21:6, 8; 52:8; 62:6; Os 9:8) Esses profetas-vigias tinham a responsabilidade de avisar os iníquos da destruição impendente, e, se deixassem de fazê-lo, eram responsabilizados por isso. Naturalmente, se as pessoas deixassem de acatar o aviso, o sangue delas cairia sobre elas mesmas. (Ez 3:17-21; 33:1-9) Um profeta infiel era tão imprestável quanto um vigia cego, ou um cão incapaz de latir. — Is 56:10.

VINAGRE. Líquido acre produzido, nos tempos antigos, pela fermentação do vinho ou de outras bebidas alcoólicas. Proibia-se os nazireus de beber 'vinagre de vinho ou vinagre de bebida inebriante', o que indica que o vinagre (provavelmente diluído) era às vezes consumido como bebida. (Núm 6:2, 3) Os ceifeiros mergulhavam seu pão no vinagre, talvez achando-o um condimento refrescante no calor do dia. — Ru 2:14.

O ácido acético do vinagre produz um sabor acre na boca e faz com que os dentes se tornem muito sensíveis. (Pr 10:26) Este teor de ácido se evidencia na vigorosa ação espumante que resulta quando o vinagre é misturado com o fraco álcali carbonato de sódio, reação esta a que, pelo visto, se faz alusão em Pr 25:20.

Quando Jesus Cristo estava na Terra, os soldados romanos bebiam um vinho ralo, acre ou azedo, conhecido em latim como acetum (vinagre), ou posca, quando era diluído em água. Esta foi provavelmente a bebida oferecida a Jesus Cristo quando ele estava na estaca de tortura. Jesus recusou o vinho acre narcotizado com mirra (ou fel) que lhe foi oferecido para aliviar-lhe o sofrimento. (Mr 15:23; Mt 27:34; compare isso com Sal 69:21.) No entanto, pouco antes de expirar, deram-lhe vinho acre puro, servido numa esponja, quando esta foi colocada à sua boca. — Jo 19:28-30; Lu 23:36, 37.

VINGADOR DO SANGUE. No hebraico, esta expressão é go·'él had·dám. A palavra hebraica go·'él (que tem sido aplicada ao vingador do sangue) é um particípio de ga·'ál, que significa "recuperar; reivindicar; comprar de volta; resgatar; remir". (Êx 15:13; Sal 69:18; Le 25:25; Is 43:1; Sal 72:14) Na lei dos hebreus, o termo aplicava-se ao parente masculino mais próximo, que tinha a obrigação de vingar o sangue daquele que fora morto. (Núm 35:19)

O termo go·'él designava também um parente com o direito de comprar de volta (ou remir). — Le 25:48, 49; Ru 2:20 n; veja RESGATAR, RESGATADOR.

Vingar o sangue tinha por base o mandado a respeito da santidade do sangue e da vida humana, declarado a Noé, em que Jeová disse: "Exigirei de volta vosso sangue das vossas almas . . . da mão de cada um que é seu irmão exigirei de volta a alma do homem. Quem derramar o sangue do homem, pelo homem será derramado o seu próprio sangue, pois à imagem de Deus fez ele o homem." (Gên 9:5, 6) O homicida deliberado devia ser morto pelo "vingador do sangue", e não se devia aceitar nenhum resgate por tal assassino. — Núm 35:19-21, 31.

Jeová cuidará de que o sangue inocente de todos os seus servos fiéis seja vingado no devido tempo. — De 32:43; Re 6:9-11.

As leis justas de Jeová faziam nítida distinção entre o homicídio deliberado e o acidental. Para este último caso, proveram-se amorosamente cidades de refúgio, a fim de proteger dos vingadores do sangue os homicidas acidentais. (Núm 35:6-29; De 19:2-13; Jos 20:2-9) Também, estabeleceram-se tribunais de justiça para julgar os casos que envolviam questões de culpa de sangue. — De 17:8, 9; 2Cr 19:10.

VINGANÇA. Infligir punição em represália por ferimentos ou ofensas causadas; ação retributiva. A palavra grega ek·di·ké·o, traduzida "vingar", significa literalmente "de justiça", sugerindo que a ação representa justiça obtida. Conforme empregado na Bíblia, o termo geralmente se aplica à retribuição da parte de Deus, a favor da justiça, mas pode também referir-se a alguém executar aquilo que reputa justo, ou pagar na mesma moeda para a sua própria satisfação.

Pertence a Jeová. A menos que alguém se habilite como executor de vingança, por designação de Jeová, ou por ser indicado como tal por sua Palavra, ele agirá errado se tentar vingar a si mesmo ou a outros. "Minha é a vingança e a retribuição", diz Jeová. (De 32:35) O salmista se dirige a Deus: "Ó Deus de atos de vingança, Jeová." (Sal 94:1) Assim sendo, Deus condenará a pessoa se esta nutrir ressentimentos ou buscar vingança pessoal por erros reais ou imaginários cometidos contra ela ou outrem. — Le 19:18; Ro 12:19; He 10:30.

As Escrituras salientam que a ira de Deus recai sobre todos os pecadores e transgressores, e que apenas por meio da benignidade imerecida de Deus em prover o sacrifício de resgate de Jesus Cristo é que existe base para abrandar ou frear a plena justiça retributiva contra o pecador. (Ro 5:19-21; 2Co 5:19; He 2:2, 3; veja RESGATE.) Deus age em plena harmonia com a sua justiça quando assim perdoa o pecado, e ele é também justo ao executar o julgamento nos pecadores que rejeitam Sua provisão; estes não podem escapar da vingança divina. — Ro 3:3-6, 25, 26; compare isso com Sal 99:8.

A vingança de Jeová tem um propósito. A vingança de Jeová traz alívio e benefício quando ele atua a favor daqueles que confiam nele; além disso, ela resulta em louvor para Ele como o justo Juiz. O salmista diz: "O justo se alegrará por ter observado a vingança. . . . E a humanidade dirá: 'De fato, há frutos para o justo. De fato, há um Deus que julga na terra.' " (Sal 58:10, 11) Por conseguinte, o propósito primário de Deus exercer vingança é defender a sua soberania e glorificar o seu próprio nome. (Êx 14:18; Sal 83:13-18; Is 25:1-5; Ez 25:14, 17; 38:23) Sua ação vindica também seus servos como sendo verdadeiramente Seus representantes, bem como os livra de circunstâncias indesejáveis. — Êx 14:31; 15:11-16; Ez 37:16, 21-23; Sal 135:14; 148:14; Pr 21:18.

Tempo fixo para a vingança de Deus. As Escrituras indicam que Deus tem um tempo determinado para expressar em grande escala a Sua vingança contra seus inimigos. O profeta Isaías foi comissionado a proclamar "o dia de vingança da parte de nosso Deus". A vingança de Deus foi expressa contra a antiga Babilônia, opressora de Seu povo, quando os exércitos da Medo-Pérsia foram usados para quebrar o poder dela, em 539 AEC. (Is 61:1, 2; 13:1, 6, 9, 17) Jesus Cristo, quando estava na Terra, citou parte da profecia de Isaías (61:1, 2) e a aplicou a si mesmo. (Lu 4:16-21) Embora o registro não diga que citasse a parte com respeito ao "dia da vingança", ele, na realidade, proclamou aquele "dia", que sobreveio a Jerusalém em 70 EC. Jesus predisse que exércitos (romanos) acampariam em volta da cidade, dizendo a seus seguidores que fugissem de Jerusalém quando vissem isso, "porque estes são dias para se executar a justiça ["dias de vingança"], para que se cumpram todas as coisas escritas". — Lu 21:20-22, Int; veja Al, BV, IBB, PIB.

Jesus Cristo disse mais, antes da sua morte e ressurreição: "Acerca daquele dia e daquela hora [da execução do julgamento no atual sistema de coisas] ninguém sabe, nem os anjos dos céus, nem o Filho, mas unicamente o Pai." (Mt 24:36) Revelou assim que a vingança certamente será executada num tempo conhecido e fixado por Deus. Ilustrou a certeza da ação de Deus no seu devido tempo, a favor do seu nome e dos seus servos, ao falar dum juiz que, devido à persistência duma viúva em pedir justiça, decidiu: "Cuidarei de que ela obtenha justiça ["exigirei vingança por ela"]." Jesus aplicou a ilustração a Deus, dizendo: "Certamente, então, não causará Deus que se faça justiça ["que haja vingança de"] seus escolhidos que clamam a ele dia e noite, embora seja longânime para com eles?" — Lu 18:2-8, Int.

Ademais, na visão do apóstolo João, registrada no livro de Revelação (Apocalipse), João viu as almas dos que foram mortos por causa da palavra de Deus e devido à obra de testemunho que costumavam realizar clamarem: "Até quando, Soberano Senhor, santo e verdadeiro, abster-te-ás de julgar e vingar o nosso sangue dos que moram na terra?" A resposta que receberam mostra que existe um tempo definido para a execução da vingança, a saber, quando "se completasse também o número dos seus coescravos e dos seus irmãos, que estavam para ser mortos assim como eles também tinham sido". — Re 6:9-11.

As Escrituras revelam que esta execução de vingança começa com Babilônia, a Grande, e então passa a sobrevir à 'fera e aos reis da terra, e aos seus exércitos'. — Re 19:1, 2, 19-21.

Executores Designados. O Senhor Jesus Cristo é o Principal Executor da vingança, da parte de Deus. O apóstolo Paulo consola os cristãos com as palavras: "É justo da parte de Deus pagar de volta tribulação aos que vos causam tribulação, mas, a vós, os que sofreis tribulação, alívio junto conosco, por ocasião da revelação do Senhor Jesus desde o céu, com os seus anjos poderosos, em fogo chamejante, ao trazer vingança sobre os que não conhecem a Deus e os que não obedecem às boas novas acerca de nosso Senhor Jesus. Estes mesmos serão submetidos à punição judicial da destruição eterna de diante do Senhor e da glória da sua força." — 2Te 1:6-9.

Na congregação cristã. Os apóstolos foram designados, sob Jesus Cristo, a cuidar da congregação cristã e a protegê-la da impureza e da perda do favor de Jeová. Em harmonia com sua autoridade, delegada por Deus, o apóstolo Paulo escreveu à congregação de Corinto, que apresentava divisões e dificuldades causadas por "falsos apóstolos": "Mantemo-nos em prontidão, para infligir punição por ["para vingar"] toda desobediência." — 2Co 10:6, Int; 11:13; 13:10.

Os anciãos designados para cuidar da congregação estavam autorizados a executar a "vingança" na medida em que podiam tomar ação para fazer justiça e restabelecer a congregação na justiça perante Deus, por corrigirem o erro que fora cometido. Os membros governantes da congregação coríntia fizeram isto, depois de Paulo os ter corrigido, de modo que Paulo escreveu na sua segunda carta a eles: "Que grande seriedade [isto] produziu em vós, . . . sim, o endireitamento do errado ["vingança"]!" Estes homens demonstraram arrependimento piedoso depois da primeira carta de Paulo, e expulsaram o iníquo mencionado nela, fazendo todo o possível para corrigir os assuntos diante de Jeová. (2Co 7:8-12, Int) No entanto, esses homens não estavam autorizados a executar no errante a pena integral exigida pela justiça — a plena vingança em inflingir-lhe a morte, como tinha sido a prerrogativa dos juízes sob a Lei mosaica. (Le 20:10; He 10:28) Simplesmente expulsavam tais impenitentes pessoas más da congregação. (1Co 5:13) Se essas permanecessem impenitentes, sofreriam por fim a plena justiça na morte eterna pelas suas ações erradas. (He 10:29, 30) Deveras, o cristão que passa a praticar a injustiça, como, por exemplo, fornicação, corre perigo, "pois Jeová é quem exige punição [literalmente: é o "vingador"] por todas estas coisas". — 1Te 4:3-6, Int.

Governantes. As autoridades governantes, cujo dever é certificar-se de que se faça justiça, talvez sejam quem execute a vingança contra os malfeitores, inclusive quaisquer cristãos que violarem as leis do país, as quais estão em harmonia com o que é justo e que sejam coerentes com a autoridade concedida por Deus a tais governantes. Nesse caso, esses governantes executam indiretamente a vingança de Deus, como escreve o apóstolo Paulo: "Pois, os que governam são objeto de temor, não para as boas ações, mas para as más . . . é ministro de Deus, vingador para expressar furor para com o que pratica o que é mau." — Ro 13:3, 4; 1Pe 2:13, 14; compare isso com Gên 9:6.

A Tendência do Homem Imperfeito de Buscar Vingança. É a tendência dos homens imperfeitos, decaídos, buscar vingar-se dos que lhes fazem injustiça ou dos que eles odeiam. O homem que comete adultério com a esposa de outro homem está em perigo da vingança retributiva do marido, conforme diz Provérbios: "Pois o furor dum varão vigoroso é ciúme, e ele não terá compaixão no dia da vingança. Não terá consideração para com nenhuma sorte de resgate, nem consentirá, não importa quão grande faças o presente." (Pr 6:32-35) Não obstante, a vingança tomada por alguém por iniciativa própria usualmente é executada em ira não controlada e não serve a nenhum bom objetivo, mas traz a ira de Deus contra a pessoa vingativa. — Tg 1:19, 20.

Inimigos de Deus e dos seus servos. Aqueles que odeiam a Deus têm mostrado hostilidade aos servos de Deus, procurando vingar-se deles. Isto não é a verdadeira execução de justiça, mas é um desejo ou uma ação resultante da hostilidade de pessoas contra o que é direito e justo, e é uma tentativa de se livrar daqueles justos cujas palavras e proceder as condenam por sua iniquidade. (Sal 8:2; 44:15, 16) Em alguns casos, servos de Deus foram mortos com a ideia pervertida de que se executava justiça. (Jo 16:2) Ao executarem esta alegada ou suposta "justiça vingativa", porém, tais pessoas não agradam a Deus, mas, antes, acumularam vingança contra si mesmas. É verdade que Jeová, às vezes, usou nações, tais como Babilônia, para executar Sua própria vingança no seu povo de Israel, quando este violou o pacto com Ele. (Le 26:25) Mas, essas nações, da sua parte, agiam por ódio e maldade, dando vazão à sua própria disposição vingativa, e, por causa disso, Jeová, por sua vez, executou vingança nelas. — La 3:60; Ez 25:12-17.

VINHEDO. Veja VIDEIRA.

VINHO E BEBIDA FORTE. Há diversos termos das línguas originais que geralmente designam alguma espécie de vinho (hebr.: ti·róhsh [Gên 27:28, 37; Os 2:8, 9, 22]; hebr.: hhé·mer [De 32:14; Is 27:2], e o correspondente termo aramaico, hha·már [Da 5:1, 2, 4, 23]; bem como gr.: gleú·kos [At 2:13]). Mas a palavra hebraica yá·yin é encontrada com mais frequência nas Escrituras. Ocorre primeiro em Gênesis 9:20-24, onde se faz referência a Noé plantar um vinhedo, depois do Dilúvio, e então ficar embriagado com o vinho resultante. A palavra grega oí·nos (que corresponde basicamente ao termo hebraico yá·yin) ocorre pela primeira vez nos comentários de Jesus sobre não ser aconselhável usar odres velhos para vinho novo, parcialmente fermentado, uma vez que a pressão acumulada por meio da fermentação faria com que os odres velhos se rompessem. — Mt 9:17; Mr 2:22; Lu 5:37, 38.

Diversas bebidas alcoólicas fortes, pelo visto derivadas de romãs, tâmaras, figos, e outros frutos semelhantes, eram geralmente chamadas pelo termo hebraico she·khár. (Núm 28:7; De 14:26; Sal 69:12) A palavra hebraica 'a·sís, em O Cântico de Salomão 8:2, refere-se ao "suco fresco de romãs", mas, em outras passagens, o contexto indica o vinho. (Is 49:26; Jl 1:5) A cerveja pode ter sido designada pela palavra hebraica só·ve'. — Is 1:22; Na 1:10.

Vinificação. Na Palestina, as uvas eram colhidas durante agosto e setembro, dependendo do tipo de uva e do clima da região. A vindima já tinha praticamente terminado na ocasião em que se celebrava a "festividade das barracas", no início do outono setentrional. (De 16:13) As uvas, depois de colhidas, eram colocadas em tanques, ou tinas, de calcário, nos quais os homens geralmente as esmagavam com pés descalços, cantando ao pisarem o lagar. (Is 16:10; Je 25:30; 48:33) Com tais métodos comparativamente brandos de esmagamento, os raminhos e as sementes não se rompiam, de modo que pouco do ácido tânico das cascas era espremido; isto, por sua vez, contribuía para um vinho de alta qualidade, com paladar suave e macio. (Cân 7:9) Às vezes, empregavam-se pedras pesadas, em vez de os pés. — Veja LAGAR.

O primeiro "mosto", ou sumo fresco, que flui das cascas rompidas das uvas, se mantido à parte do volume maior do sumo extraído sob pressão, resulta nos vinhos mais ricos e melhores. A fermentação começa dentro de seis horas após a maceração, enquanto o sumo ainda se acha nos tanques, e lentamente se processa por um período de vários meses. O teor alcoólico dos vinhos naturais varia de 8 a 16 por cento do volume, mas pode ser aumentado pela adição posterior de álcool. Se as uvas tiverem pouco teor de açúcar, e a fermentação levar tempo demais, ou se o vinho não for devidamente protegido contra a oxidação, transforma-se em ácido acético, ou vinagre. — Ru 2:14.

No período de envelhecimento, o vinho era conservado em jarras ou odres. (Je 13:12) Estes recipientes dispunham provavelmente de respiradouro para permitir a saída do dióxido de carbono (subproduto do desdobramento dos açúcares em álcool através da fermentação), sem que o oxigênio do ar entrasse em contato com o vinho, produzindo uma reação no vinho. (Jó 32:19) À medida que se deixavam os vinhos descansar, eles gradualmente se clarificavam, as borras precipitavam-se no fundo, havendo o melhoramento do buquê e do sabor. (Lu 5:39) Depois disso, os vinhos eram geralmente transferidos para outros receptáculos. — Is 25:6; Je 48:11; veja BORRA.

Usos. Desde tempos imemoriais, o vinho tem sido usado como bebida às refeições. (Gên 27:25; Ec 9:7) O vinho, o pão e outros alimentos são frequentemente mencionados juntos. (1Sa 16:20; Cân 5:1; Is 22:13; 55:1) Melquisedeque colocou "pão e vinho" diante de Abraão. (Gên 14:18-20) Jesus bebia vinho às refeições, quando estava disponível. (Mt 11:19; Lu 7:34) O vinho era parte integrante de banquetes (Est 1:7; 5:6; 7:2, 7, 8), de festas de casamento (Jo 2:2, 3, 9, 10; 4:46) e de outras ocasiões festivas (1Cr 12:39, 40; Jó 1:13, 18). Os armazéns reais eram abastecidos de vinho (1Cr 27:27; 2Cr 11:11); era a bebida costumeira de reis e de governadores. (Ne 2:1; 5:15, 18; Da 1:5, 8, 16) Os viajantes muitas vezes o incluíam nas suas provisões para viagem. — Jos 9:4, 13; Jz 19:19.

Seu amplo uso tornava o vinho um item de intercâmbio comercial (Ne 13:15), "o vinho de Helbom" (preferido pelos reis da Pérsia) e "o vinho do Líbano" sendo especialmente famosos. (Ez 27:18; Os 14:7) O vinho era um meio de se pagar os operários que trabalhavam em fornecer madeira para a edificação do templo. (2Cr 2:8-10, 15) Era considerado excelente presente para dar aos superiores (1Sa 25:18; 2Sa 16:1, 2), e estava incluído no dízimo contribuído para sustentar os sacerdotes e os levitas. (De 18:3, 4; 2Cr 31:4, 5; Ne 10:37, 39; 13:5, 12) E o vinho se achava entre as coisas seletas oferecidas a Jeová na adoração sacrificial prestada a Ele. — Êx 29:38, 40; Le 23:13; Núm 15:5, 7, 10; 28:14; 1Sa 1:24; 10:3; Os 9:4.

De início, o vinho não fazia parte da refeição da Páscoa, mas foi acrescentado mais tarde, talvez depois da volta do exílio babilônico. Por conseguinte, estava na mesa quando Jesus celebrou a Páscoa pela última vez com seus apóstolos, e foi convenientemente utilizado por ele em instituir a Comemoração de sua morte. O vermelho "sangue das uvas" constituía uma representação apropriada do sangue sacrificial do próprio Jesus. Naquela ocasião, Jesus mencionou esse vinho como 'este produto da videira', e visto que talvez já se tivessem passado sete meses depois da colheita das uvas ali, não pode haver dúvida de que era o sumo fermentado da vinha. — Gên 49:11; Mt 26:18, 27-29.

Conforme indicado por Jesus, e relatado pelo médico Lucas, o vinho tinha certo valor medicinal como antisséptico e desinfetante brando. (Lu 10:34) A Bíblia também o recomenda como remédio curativo nos casos de certos distúrbios gástricos. Paulo aconselhou a Timóteo: "Não bebas mais água, mas usa de um pouco de vinho por causa do teu estômago e dos teus frequentes casos de doença." (1Ti 5:23) Tratava-se de uma abalizada recomendação médica. O Dr. Salvatore P. Lucia, professor de medicina da Faculdade de Medicina da Universidade da Califórnia, escreve: "O vinho é a mais antiga bebida dietética e o mais importante agente medicinal em uso contínuo na história da humanidade. . . . Em realidade, poucas substâncias disponíveis ao homem têm sido tão amplamente recomendadas pelos seus poderes curativos como os vinhos." — Wine as Food and Medicine (Vinho Como Alimento e Remédio), 1954, p. 5; veja DOENÇAS E TRATAMENTO.

Ao contrário das opiniões errôneas de alguns, as bebidas alcoólicas não constituem estimulantes para a mente, mas são na realidade sedativos e depressores do sistema nervoso central. "Dai bebida inebriante àquele que está para perecer e vinho aos amargurados de alma", não como estimulante mental para tornar tais pessoas ainda mais cônscias da sua condição lastimável, mas, antes, como diz o provérbio, para que 'esqueçam suas desgraças'. (Pr 31:6, 7) Entre os romanos havia um costume antigo de dar vinho com tóxicos aos criminosos, a fim de amainar a dor da execução. Talvez fosse por isso que os soldados romanos ofereceram a Jesus vinho drogado quando o pregaram na estaca. — Mr 15:23.

É evidente que o vinho é uma das dádivas incluídas entre as bênçãos de Jeová para a humanidade. O vinho "alegra o coração do homem mortal", faz o coração 'sentir-se bem'. (Sal 104:15; Est 1:10; 2Sa 13:28; Ec 2:3; 10:19; Za 10:7) Assim, quando Daniel pranteava, não bebia vinho. (Da 10:2, 3) Abundante suprimento de vinho, simbolizado pela "videira" na muito repetida expressão, de 'cada um sentar-se debaixo de sua própria videira e de sua própria figueira', indica prosperidade e segurança sob a administração justa de Jeová. (1Rs 4:25; 2Rs 18:31; Is 36:16; Miq 4:4; Za 3:10) O vinho também está incluído nas bênçãos de restauração prometidas por Jeová. — Jl 3:18; Am 9:13, 14; Za 9:17.

Uso Moderado. A moderação em todas as coisas é um princípio bíblico. Nem mesmo o mel é exceção — com moderação é bom; comer demais é prejudicial. (Pr 25:27) O mesmo se dá com as dádivas do vinho e da bebida forte, provenientes de Jeová; têm de ser usadas conforme Ele orienta. O abuso delas e a desconsideração para com os princípios bíblicos no uso de tais provisões resultam na desaprovação de Jeová, e levam à devassidão e à morte. A Bíblia é muito taxativa sobre isto, tanto em seus preceitos como em seus exemplos. — Pr 23:29-31; veja BEBEDICE, EMBRIAGUEZ.

Talvez haja casos em que a ingestão de álcool, mesmo em pequenas doses, seja pouco aconselhável e seja prejudicial para a saúde. Em outras ocasiões, a pessoa talvez se refreie de ingerir uma bebida inebriante para evitar fazer outros tropeçar, e por amor e consideração para com outros. — Ro 14:21.

Jeová proibiu aos sacerdotes e aos levitas, quando estivessem em serviço no tabernáculo ou no templo, tomarem álcool, em qualquer forma, sob pena de morte. (Le 10:8, 9; Ez 44:21) Fora do serviço, estavam livres para beber com moderação. (1Cr 9:29) Da mesma forma, era um regulamento divino que o nazireu não tomasse nenhuma bebida alcoólica enquanto durasse este voto especial. (Núm 6:2-4, 13-20; Am 2:12) Visto que Sansão havia de ser nazireu de nascença, sua mãe não tinha permissão de tocar em vinho ou em bebidas alcoólicas durante a gravidez. (Jz 13:4, 5, 7, 14) Ao ofi-ciarem, "não é para os reis beber vinho ou para os dignitários dizer: 'Onde está a bebida inebriante?'", a fim de que não "se esqueça o decretado, e não se perverta a causa de qualquer filho de tribulação". (Pr 31:4, 5) Os superintendentes da congregação cristã não devem ser 'brigões bêbedos', e os servos ministeriais "devem igualmente ser sérios, . . . não dados a muito vinho". — 1Ti 3:3, 8.

Representativo. A antiga Babilônia, quando atuava como executora da parte de Jeová, fez com que todas as nações ficassem 'embriagadas de vinho', o que era simbólico do furor de Jeová contra as nações. (Je 51:7) Também em outros textos representam-se os oponentes de Jeová como sendo obrigados a beber a justa indignação de Deus, comparada a "vinho [que] está espumando", "vinho de furor", "vinho da ira de Deus". (Sal 75:8; Je 25:15; Re 14:10; 16:19) Uma poção amarga que não tem nenhuma relação com a ira divina é o "vinho da fornicação [espiritual] dela" que "Babilônia, a Grande", faz todas as nações beber. — Re 14:8; 17:2; 18:3, 13.

VIRGEM. A palavra hebraica bethu·láh refere-se a uma mulher que nunca se uniu a um homem em casamento e que nunca teve relações sexuais. (Gên 24:16; De 32:25; Jz 21:12; 1Rs 1:2; Est 2:2, 3, 17; La 1:18; 2:21) No entanto, o termo grego par·thé·nos pode aplicar-se tanto a solteiros como a solteiras. — Mt 25:1-12; Lu 1:27; At 21:9; 1Co 7:25, 36-38.

De acordo com a Lei, o homem que seduzisse uma virgem não comprometida em casamento tinha de dar ao pai dela 50 siclos de prata (US$ 110), tinha de se casar com ela (se o pai dela permitisse) e não podia divorciar-se dela "todos os seus dias". (Êx 22:16, 17; De 22:28, 29) Mas uma virgem noiva, encarada como já pertencente a um marido, devia ser apedrejada até a morte se não tivesse gritado ao sofrer um ataque sexual. Deixar ela de gritar indicaria seu consentimento e assim a tornaria adúltera. (De 22:23, 24; compare isso com Mt 1:18, 19.) Ser uma virgem noiva considerada como tendo um 'dono' marital também explica por que Joel 1:8 podia referir-se a uma "virgem" como chorando a perda do "dono da sua mocidade".

Uma vez que aqueles que conservam sua virgindade gozam de maior liberdade no serviço do Senhor, o apóstolo Paulo recomendou ficar sem se casar como o proceder melhor para os cristãos que têm autodomínio. (1Co 7:25-35) No entanto, a respeito dos que não têm esse autodomínio, ele observou: "Se alguém pensa que se está comportando de modo impróprio para com a sua virgindade, se esta estiver além da flor da juventude, e este é o modo em que deve ocorrer, faça ele o que quiser; ele não peca. Casem-se." — 1Co 7:36.

A palavra grega traduzida "virgindade" em 1 Coríntios 7:36-38 significa literalmente "virgem". Por este motivo, tem-se apresentado o conceito de que Paulo falava a respeito do dever dum pai ou guardião para com a filha casadoura. Assim, a versão do Centro Bíblico Católico reza: "Se alguém julga que é inconveniente para a sua filha ultrapassar a idade de casar-se e que é seu dever casá-la, faça-o como quiser: não há falta alguma em fazê-la casar-se." Outro conceito é o de que este texto se refere a um homem que decide casar-se com a moça que é sua noiva. A Bíblia na Linguagem de Hoje declara: "Se o rapaz sente que assim não está agindo certo com a noiva e acha que a sua paixão por ela ainda é muito forte e que devem se casar, então que se casem. Não há pecado nisso."

Todavia, o contexto sugere que a referência não é a uma moça virgem, mas sim à virgindade da própria pessoa. Certo comentador observou: "Acho que o apóstolo continua aqui seu discurso anterior, e aconselha pessoas não casadas, às quais cabe decidir o que fazer; a virgem do homem refere-se à sua virgindade." (Matthew Henry's Commentary on the Whole Bible [Comentário de Toda a Bíblia, de Matthew Henry], 1976, Vol. III, p. 1036) Visto que a palavra grega par·thé·nos pode incluir homens solteiros, a tradução "virgindade", segundo encontrada nas versões feitas por J. B. Rotherham e J. N. Darby (ambas em inglês), bem como na Tradução do Novo Mundo, é apropriada e parece ajustar-se melhor ao contexto.

Virgindade Espiritual. Assim como o sumo sacerdote de Israel só podia tomar por esposa uma virgem (Le 21:10, 13, 14; compare isso com Ez 44:22), assim também o grande Sumo Sacerdote, Jesus Cristo, só pode ter uma "virgem" como sua "noiva" espiritual no céu. (Re 21:9; He 7:26; compare isso com Ef 5:25-30.) Portanto, o apóstolo Paulo estava profundamente preocupado com a pureza da congregação coríntia, desejando apresentá-la "como virgem casta ao Cristo". (2Co 11:2-6) A noiva de Cristo é composta de 144.000 pessoas ungidas pelo espírito, as quais, individualmente, conservam sua 'virgindade' por permanecerem separadas do mundo, e por se manterem moral e doutrinalmente puras. — Re 14:1, 4; compare isso com 1Co 5:9-13; 6:15-20; Tg 4:4; 2Jo 8-11.

Profecia Messiânica. Embora a palavra hebraica bethu·láh signifique "virgem", outro termo ['al·máh] ocorre em Isaías 7:14: "Eis que a própria donzela [ha·'al·máh] ficará realmente grávida e dará à luz um filho, e ela há de chamá-lo pelo nome de Emanuel." A palavra 'al·máh significa "donzela" e pode aplicar-se tanto a uma não virgem como a uma virgem. É aplicada à "donzela" Rebeca antes do casamento, quando ela também foi chamada de "virgem" (bethu·láh). (Gên 24:16, 43) Mateus, sob inspiração divina, empregou a palavra grega par·thé·nos (virgem) quando mostrou que Isaías 7:14 teve cumprimento final em relação com o nascimento virginal de Jesus, o Messias. Tanto Mateus como Lucas declaram expressamente que Maria, mãe de Jesus, era então uma virgem que ficou grávida pela operação do espírito santo de Deus. — Mt 1:18-25; Lu 1:26-35.

Cidades, Lugares e Povos. Não raro o termo "virgem" é usado relacionado com cidades, lugares ou povos. Faz-se referência à "virgem" ou "virgem filha" de "meu povo" (Je 14:17), bem como de Israel (Je 31:4, 21; Am 5:2), Judá (La 1:15), Sião (2Rs 19:21; La 2:13), Egito (Je 46:11), Babilônia (Is 47:1) e Sídon (Is 23:12). O sentido deste uso figurado parece ser que os diversos povos ou localidades assim mencionados não haviam sido tomados e assolados por conquistadores estrangeiros, ou então, numa época, gozavam da condição não subjugada, como a duma virgem.

VISÃO. Vista ou cena apresentada à mente duma pessoa, de dia ou de noite, usualmente por meios que não eram comuns, e, às vezes, enquanto aquele que a recebia estava em transe ou sonhava. (At 10:3; Gên 46:2) Frequentemente é difícil estabelecer uma nítida demarcação entre as visões e os sonhos descritos na Bíblia, e, às vezes, são conjugados.

Quando alguém recebia uma visão da parte de Deus durante as horas em que estava acordado, parece que a impressão era inculcada na mente consciente. A visão podia mais tarde ser lembrada e descrita, ou registrada pelo que a recebera, nas suas próprias palavras. Alguns, tais como Daniel e Nabucodonosor, também tiveram visões noturnas, ou "visões da noite". Estas parecem ter sido inculcadas no subconsciente, enquanto quem as recebia estava dormindo.

Transe. Pelo visto, o espírito de Deus às vezes sobrepunha na mente um quadro do propósito de Deus, ou uma visão, enquanto a pessoa estava em transe, um estado de profunda concentração ou uma condição semelhante ao sono. A palavra grega traduzida "transe" nas Escrituras Cristãs é ék·sta·sis. Definida literalmente como pôr fora, ou deslocamento, transmite a ideia figurada de lançar a mente fora do seu estado normal. Quem estivesse em transe não se daria conta do que literalmente o cercava, e seria receptivo a uma visão. — At 22:17, 18.

Garantias do Favor Divino. Certas visões da parte de Jeová Deus revelavam aos servos dele como lidava com eles e lhes davam garantia do favor divino. A palavra de Jeová veio a Abrão (Abraão) numa visão, e assegurou-se ao patriarca: "Não temas, Abrão. Eu sou para ti escudo. Tua recompensa será muito grande." (Gên 15:1) Depois disso, Jeová fez um pacto com Abraão. (Gên 15:2-21) Anos depois, Deus falou com Jacó em visões da noite, dizendo-lhe que não tivesse receio de descer ao Egito, pois faria dele uma grande nação ali, e, por fim, o tiraria daquela terra. — Gên 46:1-4; compare isso com 2Sa 7:1-17; 1Cr 17:1-15.

Orientações de Acordo com o Propósito Divino. Algumas visões da parte de Jeová Deus supriam aos que as recebiam orientações para fazer a vontade Dele. Depois de o glorificado Jesus Cristo ter aparecido a Saulo de Tarso, Saulo, embora temporariamente cegado, teve uma visão em que observou um homem chamado Ananias colocar as mãos sobre ele, para que recuperasse a vista. Também foi por meio duma visão que Ananias foi orientado a ir exatamente à casa em que Saulo se achava, em Damasco. — At 9:1-19.

Em Cesareia, em 36 EC, o devoto gentio, Cornélio, recebeu uma visão em que um anjo lhe disse que mandasse buscar Simão Pedro em Jope. (At 10:1-8) Em Jope, Pedro caiu em transe e teve uma visão em que viu descer do céu um vaso que continha diversos animais impuros. Por este meio, ensinou-se ao apóstolo que ele não considerasse maculadas as coisas que Deus tinha purificado. Isto preparou Pedro para iniciar a obra de pregação das boas novas aos gentios. — At 10:9-23; 11:5-12.

Também a Paulo, por meio de visões, foram dadas orientações divinas na obra de pregação. Em Trôade, na segunda viagem missionária de Paulo, o apóstolo teve à noite uma visão dum macedônio que instava com ele: "Passa à Macedônia e ajuda-nos." (At 16:8-12) Mais tarde, devido a uma reconfortante visão à noite, em que o Senhor falou com ele, o apóstolo permaneceu em Corinto durante um ano e seis meses, ensinando a Palavra de Deus. — At 18:8-11.

Profecia. Algumas visões da parte de Deus foram proféticas, ou foram dadas para habilitar quem as recebeu a interpretar profecias que foram comunicadas em visões e em sonhos. O profeta Daniel "tinha entendimento de toda sorte de visões e sonhos". (Da 1:17) Foi numa "visão noturna" que Deus revelou a Daniel o conteúdo e o significado do sonho do Rei Nabucodonosor a respeito duma imensa estátua pictórica das potências mundiais. — Da 2:19, 28; compare com Da 4:5, 10, 13, 20-22.

Num sonho profético e em "visões durante a noite", Daniel observou quatro animais gigantescos que subiam do mar, indicando que quatro "reis" se ergueriam da terra. (Da 7:1-3, 17) O profeta teve também o privilégio de contemplar em visão "alguém semelhante a um filho de homem" obtendo do Antigo de Dias domínio, dignidade e um reino. — Da 7:13, 14.

Escritores da Bíblia, tais como Isaías (1:1; 6:1-13), Amós (7:1-9, 12; 8:1, 2) e Ezequiel (1:1), também obtiveram visões da parte de Deus. A inspirada declaração profética de Obadias contra Edom começa com as seguintes palavras: "Visão de Obadias." (Ob 1) A "visão de Naum" contém uma pronúncia contra Nínive. — Na 1:1.

O livro de Revelação (Apocalipse) contém uma série de visões observadas pelo idoso apóstolo João. O nome grego deste livro, A·po·ká·ly·psis, que significa "Exposição" ou "Exibição", é bem apropriado, pois Revelação deveras expõe assuntos, revelando muitos eventos do futuro distante, muito além do tempo da sua composição. — Re 1:1 n.

Visões Falsas. Antes da destruição de Jerusalém em 607 AEC, os falsos profetas desta cidade proferiram "a visão do seu próprio coração", mensagens que não se originaram de Jeová. (Je 23:16) Não recebendo nenhuma visão da parte de Jeová, aquilo que visionaram não tinha valor. (La 2:9, 14) Por falarem o que não era verdade e "visionarem uma mentira", Jeová era contra eles. — Ez 13.

Foi Predito Que Alguns Teriam Visões. Em contraste com as falsas visões, e em adição às visões dadas por Deus, já consideradas, Joel foi divinamente inspirado a predizer que, sob a influência do espírito de Deus, jovens 'teriam visões'. (Jl 2:28) Pedro indicou que houve um cumprimento desta profecia no dia de Pentecostes de 33 EC, quando o espírito santo foi concedido a seguidores de Jesus Cristo, e estes, miraculosamente, declararam em muitas línguas "as coisas magníficas de Deus". — At 2:1-4, 11, 15-17.

VISIONÁRIO. Homem que tinha ou afirmava ter visões da parte de Deus a respeito de assuntos ocultos ou futuros. A palavra hebraica para "visionário" é ho·zéh, derivada de ha·záh, que significa "contemplar; visionar". O termo ha·záh e seus derivados são usados com referência a ter visões. — Núm 24:4; Is 1:1; 21:2; 22:1; Ez 13:7; Da 8:1; veja VIDENTE.

Alguns visionários eram falsos, e Deus se opunha a eles. (Is 29:10; Miq 3:7) Outros foram enviados por Jeová e falaram em Seu nome. (2Rs 17:13; 2Cr 33:18) O termo "visionário" é aplicado a diversos homens, a saber: Hemã, Ido, Hanani, Gade, Asafe, Jedutum e Amós. (1Cr 25:5; 2Cr 12:15; 19:2; 29:25, 30; 35:15; Am 7:12) Alguns, tais como Gade e Ido, registraram suas visões ou escreveram outros relatos. (1Cr 29:29; 2Cr 9:29; 33:19) Nem todos os profetas de Jeová eram visionários. Não obstante, Gade foi chamado tanto de "profeta" como de "visionário de Davi", aparentemente porque pelo menos algumas das mensagens que recebeu de Deus vieram por visões com instruções ou conselhos divinos para o Rei Davi. — 2Sa 24:11; 1Cr 21:9.

VITELO. Veja TOURO.

VITUPÉRIO. Difamação, degradação ou escárnio, quer por motivo justo, quer não. Comumente traduz o substantivo grego o·nei·di·smós (e ó·nei·dos) e o substantivo hebraico her·páh. — Veja Gên 30:23; Sal 69:9; Lu 1:25; Ro 15:3.

Os motivos de vitupério, naturalmente, variam de acordo com as circunstâncias. Para o varão israelita, ser incircunciso durante a vigência do pacto da Lei era motivo de vitupério. (Veja Jz 14:3.) Assim, quando todos os varões nascidos durante a peregrinação no ermo foram finalmente circuncidados, pouco depois de cruzarem o rio Jordão, Jeová declarou: "Hoje rolei de cima de vós o vitupério do Egito." (Jos 5:2-9) Uma vez que a evidência indica que os egípcios praticavam a circuncisão, isto pode significar que, dali em diante, os egípcios não teriam motivos de vituperar Israel por tantos de seus varões serem incircuncisos. (Je 9:25, 26; veja CIRCUNCISÃO.) Por outro lado, a circuncisão era "sinal do pacto" entre Jeová e a semente de Abraão. (Gên 17:9-11) Daí, por meio desta circuncisão da nova geração que crescera no ermo (tendo a geração mais velha morrido ali), a circuncisão podia indicar uma reafirmação da sua relação pactuada com Deus. Tendo terminado os 40 anos de peregrinação, Deus também mostrava-lhes seu favor; introduzira-os na Terra da Promessa e agora os habilitaria a conquistá-la. Portanto, quaisquer zombarias, ou vitupérios da parte dos egípcios, no passado, por causa do que talvez parecesse aos egípcios ser a incapacidade de Jeová de levar Israel a uma terra própria sua, mostraram-se agora falsos. Os cristãos sob o novo pacto, quer judeus quer gentios, não estavam sujeitos ao vitupério por causa da incircuncisão. — Ro 2:25-29; 3:28-30; 4:9-12; 1Co 7:18, 19.

No caso das mulheres hebreias, permanecerem solteiras ou viúvas (Is 4:1; 54:4), bem como a esterilidade (Gên 30:23; Lu 1:25), era encarado como um vitupério. A promessa de Deus quanto à semente de Abraão, e de esta se tornar como "os grãos de areia que há à beira do mar", sem dúvida contribuía para este sentimento. (Gên 22:15-18; compare isso com 24:59, 60.) Em contraste, o apóstolo Paulo recomendou o estado de não casado, tanto por parte de homens como de mulheres, quando o motivo é servir a Deus com indivisa atenção, e disse a respeito da viúva, que "ela será mais feliz . . . se permanecer assim com está, segundo a minha opinião". — 1Co 7:25-28, 32-40; compare isso com Mt 19:10-12.

Transgressões tais como idolatria, adultério, roubo, e outros tipos de imoralidade, porém, eram constantemente motivo de vitupério, como era também toda deslealdade para com Deus. — 2Sa 13:13; Pr 6:32, 33; Ro 1:18-32; 2:17-24.

Os que buscam a aprovação de Deus não podem ficar difamando os outros. A respeito daquele que seria hóspede na tenda de Deus, o salmista declarou: "Não fez nenhum mal ao seu companheiro, e não levantou nenhum vitupério contra o seu conhecido íntimo", isto é, ele não divulga informações difamatórias sobre seu conhecido íntimo. (Sal 15:1, 3) Alguém que defrauda o humilde ou caçoa dele realmente vitupera a Deus (Pr 14:31; 17:5), como o fazem aqueles que lançam vitupérios contra os servos de Deus. (Sal 74:18-23) Por fim, tal vitupério leva à calamidade os que se empenham nele. — Sof 2:8-10.

Jeová Silencia o Vitupério Contra Seu Povo. Quando os israelitas se empenhavam na adoração falsa ou em práticas injustas, eles vituperavam a Jeová Deus, porque faziam com que a adoração de Jeová não parecesse ser melhor do que a das nações em sua volta. (Is 65:7) Por causa da infidelidade deles, Deus permitiu que lhes sobreviesse calamidade, fazendo com que se tornassem alvo de vitupério entre as nações. (Ez 5:14, 15) Não avaliando que o julgamento provinha de Jeová Deus, outras nações o atribuíam à incapacidade de Ele salvar Israel, e assim se lançava vitupério adicional sobre Ele. Por conseguinte, ao restaurar os israelitas à base do arrependimento deles, Jeová limpou Seu nome deste vitupério. — Ez 36:15, 20, 21, 30-36.

Sempre que surgem situações que fazem parecer que Deus, aparentemente, abandonou os do Seu povo, outros concluem que Ele não os está protegendo ou abençoando, e assim os vituperam. (Sal 31:9-11; 42:10; 74:10, 11; 79:4, 5; 102:8, 9; Jl 2:17-19) Mas, por fim, Jeová demonstra seus atos salvadores, e, desta forma, silencia os vituperadores. — Ne 1:3; 2:17; 4:4; 6:16.

Suportar Vitupério por Causa de Cristo. Também, ao cumprirem sua comissão, os servos de Jeová têm sido vituperados por aqueles aos quais foram enviados. Jeremias passou por isso (Je 6:10; 15:15-18; 20:8), e também Cristo Jesus (Mt 27:44; Mr 15:32; Ro 15:3), bem como seus seguidores (He 10:33). Aquele que é vituperado por causa de Cristo tem motivos para regozijar-se, uma vez que sua contínua fidelidade sob tal vitupério resulta numa grande recompensa nos céus (Mt 5:11; Lu 6:22, 23) e constitui prova de que tem o espírito de Deus. (1Pe 4:14) Por conseguinte, não se deve temer o vitupério. Aos que conhecem a justiça, Jeová disse: "Não tenhais medo do vitupério de homens mortais e não fiqueis aterrorizados por causa das suas palavras injuriosas." — Is 51:7.

Embora soubesse do grande vitupério que lhe sobreviria, Jesus submeteu-se voluntariamente a fazer a vontade de seu Pai a ponto de padecer uma morte vergonhosa numa estaca de tortura. (Is 53:3-7; Jo 10:17, 18; He 12:2; 13:12, 13) A fim de fazer o bem a outros, ele não procurou agradar a si mesmo, mas estava disposto a assumir o vitupério da parte de pessoas que por palavras e ações vituperavam a Jeová Deus. O apóstolo Paulo indicou isto ao salientar a atitude correta para com os espiritualmente fracos: "Nós, porém, os que somos fortes, devemos suportar as fraquezas dos que não são fortes, e não estar agradando a nós mesmos. Que cada um de nós agrade ao seu próximo naquilo que é bom para a edificação dele. Pois até mesmo o Cristo não agradou a si mesmo; mas, assim como está escrito: 'Os vitupérios daqueles que te vituperaram caíram sobre mim.' " (Ro 15:1-3) No capítulo anterior (Ro 14), Paulo tinha considerado as fraquezas de alguns cristãos que tinham escrúpulos conscienciosos a respeito de certos alimentos, ou a respeito da guarda de certo dia; ele mostrara a necessidade de se evitar ser causa de tropeço para tais, e a necessidade de edificá-los. Isto provavelmente significaria que os que eram fortes em entendimento, fé e consciência teriam de restringir-se no exercício de seus direitos, e isto poderia ser um tanto desagradável para eles. Todavia, tinham de "suportar" (o verbo aqui permite tanto o sentido de "levar" como o de "suportar ou aguentar" [compare isso com Gál 6:2; Re 2:2]) quaisquer cargas que tais fraquezas lhes impusessem, imitando a Cristo. (Veja Mt 17:17-20; também a expressão de Moisés em Núm 11:10-15.) Além disso, não deviam simplesmente seguir adiante em sua própria busca do favor, das bênçãos e das recompensas de Deus, tratando com descaso estes espiritualmente fracos, como se fossem empecilhos, ou permitindo que fossem decepados pelo Adversário, pela falta de consideração e de ajuda da parte destes fortes. — Veja 1Co 9:19-23; 10:23-33.

Evitar Trazer Vitupério por Transgressão. O cristão, embora espere ser vituperado por causa da justiça, jamais deve 'sofrer como assassino, ou como ladrão, ou como malfeitor, ou como intrometido nos assuntos dos outros'. (1Pe 4:15, 16) Uma das habilitações para superintendente da congregação cristã é que ele tenha "testemunho excelente de pessoas de fora, a fim de que não caia em vitupério". Isto impediria que trouxesse desonra a tal posição, e evitaria que se disseminassem comentários desfavoráveis a respeito dos verdadeiros cristãos, por causa da conduta de alguém dentre os membros destacados da congregação. — 1Ti 3:7.

VIÚVA. Mulher que perdeu o marido na morte e que não se casou de novo. A morte do marido corta o vínculo marital, deixando a viúva livre para casar-se de novo, se assim desejar. (Ru 1:8-13; Ro 7:2, 3; 1Co 7:8, 9) Sob o arranjo patriarcal, e, mais tarde, sob a Lei mosaica, o irmão do homem que morresse sem deixar filhos, devia tomar como esposa a viúva de seu irmão, e ter com ela um filho, a fim de dar continuidade à linhagem do falecido marido dela. — Gên 38:8; De 25:5-10; Ru 4:3-10; veja CASAMENTO DE CUNHADO.

Com a morte do cônjuge, as viúvas podiam voltar para a casa do pai. (Gên 38:11) Na Lei, fez-se uma provisão específica neste sentido para a filha dum sacerdote que ficasse viúva ou da qual o marido se divorciasse. Uma vez que o sacerdote recebia dízimos para o sustento da sua casa, a filha podia compartilhar desta provisão. Isto lhe garantia não enfrentar a pobreza, e, assim, evitava qualquer vitupério que de outro modo poderia recair sobre o sacerdócio. (Le 22:13) Para as viúvas que não dispunham deste meio de sustento ou de proteção, a Lei de Deus fazia provisões para que usufruíssem o direito de rebusca nos campos, nos olivais e nos vinhedos (De 24:19-21); de participar nas abundantes celebrações das festividades, cada ano (De 16:10-14); e, a cada terceiro ano, de compartilhar nos dízimos que eram contribuídos pela nação (De 14:28, 29; 26:12, 13).

A Solicitude de Jeová e de Cristo com as Viúvas. Jeová falou de si mesmo como Aquele que está "executando julgamento pelo menino órfão de pai e pela viúva". (De 10:18) Na Lei foram dadas fortes injunções no sentido de se administrar justiça plena e equitativa às viúvas. (Êx 22:22-24; De 24:17) Proferia-se uma maldição sobre os que desvirtuavam o julgamento das viúvas (De 27:19), e os escritos dos profetas instavam a que se desse o tratamento correto às viúvas. — Is 1:17, 23; 10:1, 2; Je 22:3; Ez 22:7; Za 7:9, 10; Mal 3:5.

Jesus demonstrou sua preocupação com o bem-estar das viúvas em Israel quando condenou os escribas como "os que devoram as casas das viúvas". — Mr 12:38-40; Lu 20:46, 47.

Assistência Cristã às Viúvas. Durante a emergência que surgiu na congregação cristã logo depois do dia de Pentecostes de 33 EC, as viúvas de língua grega estavam sendo passadas por alto na distribuição diária. Quando isto foi trazido à atenção dos apóstolos, estes julgaram o assunto tão importante que designaram "sete homens acreditados, cheios de espírito e de sabedoria", para supervisionarem a distribuição equitativa de alimentos. — At 6:1-6.

O apóstolo Paulo, em 1 Timóteo 5:3-16, forneceu instruções completas para que se cuidasse amorosamente das viúvas na congregação cristã. A congregação devia cuidar das viúvas indigentes. Mas, se a viúva tivesse filhos ou netos, estes deveriam assumir a responsabilidade de prover-lhe suas necessidades, ou, como Paulo instruiu: "Se alguma mulher crente tiver viúvas [isto é, viúvas que sejam parentas], que ela as socorra e a congregação não fique sob o fardo. Esta poderá então socorrer as que são realmente viúvas [isto é, realmente destituídas, sem ajuda]." A viúva colocada na lista para receber assistência material da congregação era uma 'que não tivesse menos de sessenta anos de idade', tendo bons antecedentes morais, de amorosa devoção fiel a Jeová, e de hospitalidade e de amor para com os outros. Por outro lado, o apóstolo recomenda que as viúvas jovens se casem, tenham filhos e cuidem da casa, desta forma evitando o laço dos impulsos sexuais e o perigo de ficarem "desocupadas, . . . tagarelas e intrometidas nos assuntos dos outros".

Tiago, meio-irmão de Jesus, salientou a importância de se cuidar dos órfãos e das viúvas na sua tribulação ao fazer um paralelo dessa medida com o manter-se sem mancha do mundo, como requisito da adoração pura e imaculada do ponto de vista de Deus. — Tg 1:27.

Entre as viúvas de notável fé achavam-se Tamar (Gên 38:6, 7), Noemi e Rute (Ru 1:3-5), Abigail (1Sa 25:37, 38, 42), a viúva de Sarefá (1Rs 17:8-24) e Ana, a profetisa (Lu 2:36, 37; compare a descrição de Lucas sobre Ana com as habilitações para a viúva digna, conforme esboçadas por Paulo em 1Ti 5:3-16). Também, uma viúva anônima foi grandemente elogiada por Jesus por ter contribuído tudo que ela possuía para o templo. — Mr 12:41-44.

Uso Figurado. As cidades, quando rejeitadas e desoladas, são simbolicamente comparadas a viúvas. (La 1:1; compare isso com Je 51:5.) Babilônia, a Grande, "a grande cidade que tem um reino sobre os reis da terra", jacta-se, assim como seu tipo, a antiga Babilônia, de que jamais ficará viúva. Todavia, assim como a antiga cidade de Babilônia se tornou deveras "viúva", assim também ficará a atual Babilônia, a Grande. — Is 47:8, 9; Re 17:18; 18:7, 8.

VIZINHO, PRÓXIMO. Vizinho é alguém que mora por perto, quer amigo, quer inimigo; ou, encarado espiritualmente, próximo é aquele que demonstra a outros o amor e a bondade que as Escrituras ordenam, embora more longe ou não seja parente ou companheiro. Uma palavra hebraica traduzida "vizinho[a]" é sha·khén, que se refere à localização, quer de cidades, quer de pessoas, e inclui amigos e inimigos. — Je 49:18; Ru 4:17; Sal 79:4, 12.

Outros termos hebraicos relacionados que, em alguns contextos, são traduzidos "vizinho[a]" ou "próximo" têm um sentido um pouco diferente e nos dão uma visão mais ampla do relacionamento expresso nas Escrituras Hebraicas. Ré·a' significa "próximo, companheiro, amigo", e pode aplicar-se à intimidade do relacionamento, mas, em geral, refere-se ao próximo ou conterrâneo da pessoa, quer seja associado íntimo, morando por perto, quer não. Na maioria dos seus usos nas Escrituras aplica-se a um companheiro que era membro da comunidade de Israel ou a alguém que morava em Israel. (Êx 20:16; 22:11; De 4:42; Pr 11:9) 'A·mith significa "colega" ou "companheiro" e é frequentemente usado no sentido de alguém com quem se tem alguns tratos. (Le 6:2; 19:15, 17; 25:14, 15) Qa·róhv, que significa "perto, à mão, aparentado com", tem referência a um lugar, a tempo ou a pessoas; pode subentender um relacionamento mais íntimo do que com um "vizinho" e é às vezes traduzido 'conhecido íntimo'. (Êx 32:27; Jos 9:16; Sal 15:3; 38:11) Nenhuma palavra em português pode expressar plenamente todas essas nuanças de sentido.

De modo similar, nas Escrituras Gregas há três palavras, com ligeira diferença no sentido, que usualmente são traduzidas "próximo" ou "vizinho": gei·ton, "conterrâneo" (Lu 14:12; Jo 9:8); pe·ri·oi·kos, adjetivo que significa "morar por perto", usado como substantivo (no plural) em Lucas 1:58; ple·si·on, que significa "perto", usado com o artigo ho (o), literalmente, "o (que está) perto". (Ro 13:10; Ef 4:25) A respeito dessas palavras gregas diz Vine's Expository Dictionary of Old and New Testament Words (Dicionário Expositivo de Palavras do Velho e do Novo Testamento, de Vine): "[Estas palavras] têm um sentido mais amplo do que a palavra ingl. neighbour [vizinho]. Na Palestina não havia casas de sítio espalhadas pelas regiões rurais; a população, ajuntada em aldeias, ia a pé para o trabalho. De modo que a vida doméstica em todos os pontos era tocada por um amplo círculo de vizinhança. Os termos para vizinho, portanto, têm um sentido muito abrangente. Isto pode ser visto nas principais características dos privilégios e deveres da vizinhança, conforme especificados na Escritura, (a) sua solicitude, e.g., . . . Luc. 10:36; (b) sua intimidade, e.g., Luc. 15:6, 9 . . . Heb. 8:11; (c) sua sinceridade e santidade, e.g., . . . Rom. 13:10; 15:2; Efé. 4:25; Tia. 4:12." — 1981, Vol. 3, p. 107.

Maus Vizinhos. No entanto, talvez alguns dos que moram por perto sejam vizinhos iníquos, tais como eram as nações vizinhas ao redor de Israel. Quando o templo de Jerusalém foi destruído pelas mãos dos babilônios, em 607 AEC, essas nações, tais como Edom, alegraram-se, até mesmo entregando judeus fugitivos aos inimigos destes. (Sal 137:7; Ob 8-14; Miq 4:11) O salmista sentiu-se induzido a escrever: "Tornamo-nos um vitupério aos nossos vizinhos [forma plural de sha·khén], caçoada e troça para os que estão ao nosso redor." Ele orou: "Paga de volta aos nossos vizinhos [forma plural de sha·khén], sete vezes ao seu seio, seu vitupério com que te vituperaram." Visto que Jeová 'residia' no meio de Israel, ele falava das nações opostas ao seu povo como "todos os meus maus vizinhos que tocam na propriedade hereditária que fiz que meu povo, sim, Israel, possuísse". — Sal 79:4, 12; Je 12:14; veja Sal 68:16.

Ordenado o Amor ao Próximo. A Bíblia inteira instrui-nos a exercer amor, benignidade, generosidade e solicitude para com o próximo, quer seja apenas um vizinho morando por perto, quer colega, companheiro, conhecido íntimo ou amigo. A Lei ordenava: "Com justiça deves julgar o teu colega [forma de 'a·mith]. . . . Não deves odiar teu irmão no teu coração. Decerto deves repreender o teu colega, para que não leves o pecado junto com ele . . . e tens de amar o teu próximo [forma de ré·a'] como a ti mesmo." (Le 19:15-18) (Na Septuaginta grega, a palavra ré·a' aqui é traduzida pela expressão grega ho ple·si·on.) Davi elogia o homem que "não caluniou com a sua língua. Não fez nenhum mal ao seu companheiro [forma de ré·a'], e não levantou nenhum vitupério contra o seu conhecido íntimo [forma de qa·róhv]". (Sal 15:3) Repetem-se as injunções de não fazer mal ao próximo (ré·a'), nem mesmo desprezando-o ou desejando algo que pertence a ele. — Êx 20:16; De 5:21; 27:24; Pr 14:21.

O apóstolo Paulo disse: "Quem ama o seu próximo tem cumprido a lei." Ele menciona então alguns dos mandamentos da Lei e conclui: "E qualquer outro mandamento que haja, está englobado nesta palavra, a saber: 'Tens de amar o teu próximo [ple·si·on] como a ti mesmo.' O amor não obra o mal para com o próximo [ple·si·on]; portanto, o amor é o cumprimento da lei." (Ro 13:8-10; veja Gál 5:14.) Tiago chama a ordem de amar o próximo como a si mesmo de "a lei régia". — Tg 2:8.

O segundo maior mandamento. Ao judeu que perguntou: "Que preciso fazer de bom, a fim de obter a vida eterna?" e que queria saber quais os mandamentos a cumprir, Jesus mencionou cinco dos Dez Mandamentos e acrescentou a injunção de Levítico 19:18, ao dizer: "Tens de amar o teu próximo [ple·si·on] como a ti mesmo." (Mt 19:16-19) Ele classificou também esta injunção como a segunda mais importante da Lei — uma das duas de que dependiam toda a Lei e os Profetas. — Mt 22:35-40; Mr 12:28-31; Lu 10:25-28.

Quem é meu próximo? Jesus aprofundou também o apreço dos seus ouvintes para com o sentido da palavra ple·si·on quando outro homem, ansioso de se mostrar justo, perguntou: "Quem é realmente o meu próximo [ple·si·on]?" Na ilustração do misericordioso samaritano, Jesus enfatizou que, mesmo que alguém more longe, ou não seja parente ou companheiro, o verdadeiro próximo é aquele que exerce amor e benignidade para com outro segundo as Escrituras mandam. — Lu 10:29-37.

Na Comunidade de Israel. Em Hebreus 8:11, na maioria dos textos gregos ocorre uma forma da palavra grega po·lí·tes, "cidadão"; alguns manuscritos posteriores rezam ple·si·on. Paulo cita aqui a profecia do restabelecimento, de Jeremias 31:34, dirigida aos da comunidade de Israel: "'E não mais ensinarão, cada um ao seu companheiro [forma de ré·aʽ] e cada um ao seu irmão, dizendo: "Conhecei a Jeová!" porque todos eles me conhecerão, desde o menor deles até o maior deles', é a pronunciação de Jeová." Paulo aplica-a à "nação santa" espiritual, "o Israel de Deus", dizendo: "E de modo algum ensinará cada um ao seu concidadão e cada um ao seu irmão . . ."

Conselhos de Provérbios. Embora se deva ajudar o próximo e amá-lo, todavia, é preciso exercer cautela para não tentar tornar-se o companheiro mais íntimo do vizinho ou próximo — a fim de evitar abusar ou aproveitar-se dele. O provérbio expressa esta ideia nos seguintes termos: "Faze raro o teu pé na casa do teu próximo [forma de ré·aʽ], para que não se farte de ti e certamente te odeie." — Pr 25:17.

Todavia, nos Provérbios aconselha-se ter fé e confiança no companheiro, e que é prudente que se recorra a ele em tempos de necessidade: "Não abandones o teu próprio companheiro ou o companheiro de teu pai, e não entres na casa de teu próprio irmão no dia do teu desastre. Melhor o vizinho [sha·kén] que está perto do que um irmão que está longe." (Pr 27:10) O escritor parece dizer aqui que um amigo íntimo da família deve ser prezado e que se deve recorrer a ele em busca de ajuda, em vez de recorrer mesmo a um parente tão íntimo como um irmão, se este irmão estiver longe, porque talvez este não esteja tão disposto ou pelo menos não numa situação tão favorável de prestar ajuda como o companheiro da família.

VOFSI. Naftalita cujo filho Nabi foi um dos 12 espias israelitas enviados para espiar Canaã. — Núm 13:2, 14.

VOTO. Promessa solene feita a Deus de realizar algum ato, fazer alguma oferta ou dádiva, ingressar em algum serviço ou condição, ou abster-se de certas coisas que em si não são ilícitas. Um voto era uma promessa solene, feita de livre e espontânea vontade. Sendo uma promessa solene, o voto tinha a força dum juramento, e, às vezes, as duas expressões ocorrem juntas na Bíblia. (Núm 30:2; Mt 5:33) O "voto" é mais uma declaração de intenção, ao passo que "juramento" indica o apelo feito a uma autoridade superior para que ateste a veracidade ou a natureza obrigatória da declaração. Juramentos frequentemente acompanhavam a atestação dum pacto. — Gên 26:28; 31:44, 53.

O registro mais antigo dum voto se encontra em Gênesis 28:20-22, onde Jacó prometeu dar a Jeová um décimo de todos os seus bens, caso Jeová continuasse com ele e o fizesse voltar em paz, desta forma mostrando ser o Deus de Jacó. Jacó não estava barganhando com Deus, mas queria certificar-se de ter a aprovação de Deus. Conforme este caso salienta, os patriarcas faziam votos (veja também Jó 22:27), e, como se dava com muitos outros costumes patriarcais, a Lei mosaica definiu e regulamentou estas modalidades já existentes de adoração, em vez de iniciá-las.

Muitos votos eram feitos como apelos a Deus para obter Seu favor e para ter êxito num empreendimento, como no caso de Jacó. Outro exemplo disso é o voto feito por Israel, de devotar à destruição as cidades do rei cananeu de Arade, se Jeová desse a vitória a Israel. (Núm 21:1-3) Votos eram também feitos como expressão de devoção a Jeová e à sua adoração pura (Sal 132:1-5), ou para indicar que a pessoa estava separando a si mesma ou seus bens para serviço especial. (Núm 6:2-7) Os pais podiam fazer votos relacionados com seus filhos, como Ana fez a respeito de Samuel. (1Sa 1:11; compare isso com Jz 11:30, 31, 39.) Nestes casos, os filhos cooperavam na execução do voto.

Voluntário, mas Obrigatório Quando Feito. Os votos eram inteiramente voluntários. Todavia, uma vez feito o voto por um homem, pela lei divina, o cumprimento era obrigatório. Assim, falava-se do voto como 'imposto à sua alma', subentendendo que a própria vida dele tornava-se garantia de que sua palavra seria cumprida. (Núm 30:2; veja também Ro 1:31, 32.) Uma vez que a vida está em jogo, é compreensível por que as Escrituras instam a que se use de extrema cautela antes de fazer um voto, considerando criteriosamente as obrigações a serem assumidas. A Lei declarava: "Caso faças um voto a Jeová . . . Deus, sem falta o exigirá de ti, e deveras se tornaria um pecado da tua parte. Mas, caso deixes de fazer um voto, não se tornará pecado da tua parte." — De 23:21, 22.

Conforme expresso mais tarde pelo Congregante: "O que votares, paga. Melhor é que não votes, do que votares e não pagares. Não permitas que a tua boca faça a tua carne pecar, nem digas diante do anjo que foi um engano." (Ec 5:4-6) Um voto feito precipitadamente sob um impulso momentâneo de entusiasmo ou pela simples emoção pode muito bem mostrar ser um laço. (Pr 20:25) Sob a Lei, quem fazia tal voto impensado era culpado diante de Deus e tinha de apresentar uma oferta pela culpa por seu pecado. (Le 5:4-6) Em última análise, o voto não tem mérito algum aos olhos de Deus a menos que esteja em harmonia com as Suas leis justas e proceda da espécie correta de coração e de espírito. — Sal 51:16, 17.

Votos das mulheres, sob a Lei. As leis que regulavam os votos feitos pelas mulheres acham-se delineadas em Números 30:3-15. O voto duma filha era válido desde que seu pai o tivesse ouvido e não tivesse levantado objeção; senão, ele podia anulá-lo. O voto duma esposa (ou duma noiva) igualmente dependia do marido (ou noivo) dela para ser válido. Caso o homem anulasse tal voto, depois de primeiro deixá-lo prevalecer, ele assumia o erro dela. (Núm 30:14, 15) No caso duma viúva ou duma mulher divorciada, "tudo o que ela impôs à sua alma ficará de pé contra ela". — Núm 30:9.

Uso das Coisas Votadas. Em cumprimento dum voto, qualquer pessoa ou bem, inclusive terrenos, podiam ser oferecidos a Jeová, exceto o que a Lei já separara para Ele, tal como o primogênito, as primícias, os dízimos, e assim por diante. (Le 27:26, 30, 32) Aquilo que era votado como "santificado" (hebr.: qo'dhesh, algo posto à parte como santo, para uso sagrado) podia ser resgatado através de determinado pagamento ao santuário (exceto animais limpos). (Le 27:9-27) No entanto, algo "devotado" (hebr.: hhé·rem) não podia ser resgatado, mas tornava-se inteira e permanentemente propriedade do santuário, ou, se tiver sido devotado à destruição, tinha de ser impreterivelmente destruído. — Le 27:28, 29.

Votos Errados ou Impuros. Os votos das religiões pagãs muitas vezes envolviam práticas impuras e imorais. Em toda a Fenícia, Síria e Babilônia, os ganhos da prostituição nos templos eram dedicados ao ídolo ou ao templo. Tais votos degenerados estavam proscritos em Israel: "Não deves trazer a paga duma meretriz nem o preço dum cão [provavelmente: um pederasta (sodomita)], à casa de Jeová, teu Deus, para algum voto." — De 23:18, n.

Após a destruição de Jerusalém, Jeremias lembrou aos judeus no Egito que um dos motivos da calamidade que lhes sobreveio foi que faziam votos à "rainha dos céus" e ofereciam sacrifícios a ela. As mulheres que tinham parte destacada nesta idolatria prontamente salientaram que seus votos e sua adoração à "rainha dos céus" tinham sido aprovados pelos maridos, e que elas estavam determinadas a cumprir seus votos a esta deusa. Assim, apresentavam a desculpa de estarem agindo em harmonia com a Lei no tocante aos votos das mulheres (Núm 30:10-15), mas Jeremias denunciou as ações delas como realmente um menosprezo pela Lei, uma vez que eram idólatras. — Je 44:19, 23-25; 2Co 6:16-18.

Votos hipócritas. Após o exílio, os judeus não recaíram em flagrante idolatria. Todavia, 'invalidavam a palavra de Deus por causa da sua tradição'. Seus argumentos capciosos na interpretação da Lei afetavam tanto o assunto dos votos como outros aspectos da adoração, ensinando seus líderes religiosos hipocritamente "por doutrinas os mandados de homens". (Mt 15:6-9) Por exemplo, a tradição judaica declarava que, se um homem dissesse a seu pai ou à sua mãe: "Tudo o que eu tenho, que da minha parte te poderia ser de proveito, é uma dádiva dedicada a Deus" (uma declaração de dedicação ou santificação), ele assim votava santificar a Deus tudo o que havia mencionado e não devia usar estas coisas para ajudar seus pais; isto baseava-se na teoria de que o templo tinha então primazia em reivindicar esses bens, embora ele mesmo, na realidade, tivesse plena liberdade de usá-los. — Mt 15:5, 6.

Sacrifícios Relacionados com Votos. Sob a Lei, uma oferta queimada às vezes acompanhava outros sacrifícios, a fim de indicar a completa dedicação e um apelo a Jeová para aceitar com favor tal sacrifício. (Le 8:14, 18; 16:3) Isto se dava com os votos. (Núm 6:14) Ofertas queimadas eram sacrificadas para a realização de votos especiais. (Núm 15:3; Sal 66:13) E a respeito de se apresentar "a Jeová um sacrifício de participação em comum, a fim de pagar um voto", o requisito era que se oferecesse um animal sem defeito, parte do qual era queimada sobre o altar. — Le 22:21, 22; 3:1-5.

A Observância da Lei dos Votos, por Paulo. O apóstolo Paulo fez um voto, não se sabendo ao certo se foi um voto de nazireado; tampouco se declara se ele fez esse voto antes de se tornar cristão. Talvez tivesse concluído o período de seu voto em Cencreia, perto de Corinto, quando mandou cortar rente o cabelo (At 18:18), ou, conforme alguns creem, quando se dirigiu ao templo, em Jerusalém, junto com outros quatro homens que estavam completando seus votos. Não obstante, Paulo tomou esta última medida por conselho do corpo governante cristão, a fim de demonstrar que ele, Paulo, andava ordeiramente e não ensinava a desobediência à Lei, conforme corria o rumor aos ouvidos de alguns dos cristãos judeus. Era comum a prática de alguém pagar para os outros as despesas envolvidas na purificação cerimonial ao expirar o período dum voto, como Paulo fez neste caso. — At 21:20-24.

Quanto à razão pela qual o apóstolo Paulo e seus associados no corpo governante cristão aprovaram o cumprimento de certas modalidades da Lei, embora a Lei tivesse sido tirada do caminho pelo sacrifício de Jesus Cristo, podem-se considerar as seguintes coisas: A Lei fora dada por Jeová Deus a seu povo, Israel. Por conseguinte, como disse o apóstolo Paulo: "A Lei é espiritual", e, a respeito dos seus regulamentos: "A Lei . . . é santa, e o mandamento é santo, e justo, e bom." (Ro 7:12, 14) Por conseguinte, o templo e os serviços ali executados não eram desprezados pelos cristãos, ou encarados como errados. Não eram idólatras. Além disso, muitos procedimentos tinham ficado arraigados como costumes entre os que eram judeus. Ademais, visto que a Lei não era simplesmente religiosa, mas também era a lei do país, era preciso que todos os que morassem naquela terra observassem certas coisas, tais como as restrições ao trabalho aos sábados.

Mas, ao considerar este assunto, o ponto principal é que os cristãos não encaravam estas coisas como meio de salvação. O apóstolo explicou que coisas tais como comer carne ou legumes, a guarda de certos dias como superiores a outros, até mesmo o comer carne que tinha sido oferecida a ídolos antes de ser colocada à venda regular nos mercados, eram questões de consciência. Ele escreveu: "Um homem julga um dia como superior a outro; outro homem julga um dia como todos os outros; esteja cada homem plenamente convencido na sua própria mente. Quem observa o dia, observa-o para com Jeová. Também, quem come, come para com Jeová, pois dá graças a Deus; e aquele que não come, não come para com Jeová, contudo, dá graças a Deus." Daí resumiu seu argumento por declarar o princípio: "Pois o reino de Deus não significa comer e beber, mas significa justiça, e paz, e alegria com espírito santo", e concluiu: "Feliz é o homem que não se põe a si mesmo em julgamento por aquilo que ele aprova. Mas, se tiver dúvidas, já está condenado, se comer, porque não come em fé. Deveras, tudo o que não vem da fé é pecado." — Ro 14:5, 6, 17, 22, 23; 1Co 10:25-30.

Um comentário esclarecedor sobre este ponto é feito pelo erudito bíblico Albert Barnes, em suas Notes, Explanatory and Practical, on the Acts of the Apostles (Notas, Explicativas e Práticas, sobre os Atos dos Apóstolos; 1858). Com referência a Atos 21:20 — que reza: "Ouvindo isso [um relato da bênção de Deus sobre o ministério de Paulo às nações], começaram a glorificar a Deus, e disseram-lhe: 'Observas, irmão, quantos milhares de crentes há entre os judeus; e todos eles são zelosos da Lei.' " — Barnes observa: "Aqui se faz referência à lei a respeito da circuncisão, de sacrifícios, distinções de carnes e de dias, festividades, etc. Pode parecer notável que eles ainda continuassem a observar tais ritos, visto que foi o manifesto desígnio do cristianismo aboli-los. Mas, devemos lembrar: (1.) Que esses ritos haviam sido instituídos por Deus, e que eles eram treinados para observá-los. (2.) Que os apóstolos agiram em conformidade com eles enquanto permaneceram em Jerusalém, e não acharam prudente opor-se violentamente a eles. [At 3:1; Lu 24:53] (3.) Que a questão da sua observância nunca havia sido suscitada em Jerusalém. Esta questão só surgira entre os conversos gentios, e ali tinha de surgir, porque se os ritos haviam de ser observados por eles, então tinham de ser-lhes impostos com autoridade. (4.) A decisão do conselho (cap. xv.) referiu-se apenas aos conversos gentios. [At 15:23] . . . (5.) É de presumir que, quando a religião cristã passou a ser melhor entendida — que, quando sua natureza ampla, livre e [universal] passou a ficar cada vez mais desenvolvida, as instituições peculiares de Moisés naturalmente foram abandonadas, sem agitação e sem tumulto. Se a questão tivesse sido suscitada [publicamente] em Jerusalém, teria provocado dez vezes mais oposição ao cristianismo e teria partido a igreja cristã em facções, e isso teria retardado muito o progresso da doutrina cristã. Devemos também lembrar, (6.) Que, no arranjo da Providência divina, aproximava-se o tempo de se destruir o templo, a cidade e a nação; que poria fim aos sacrifícios e efetivamente acabaria para sempre com a observância dos ritos mosaicos. Visto que esta destruição estava tão próxima, e visto que tão efetivamente seria um argumento contra a observância dos ritos mosaicos, o Grande Cabeça da igreja não permitiu que a questão da sua obrigatoriedade desnecessariamente causasse agitação entre os discípulos em Jerusalém."

VOZ. Sons emitidos por pessoas ao falar, cantar, e sons semelhantes, bem como os dos animais, são indicados na Escritura pela palavra hebraica qohl, seu equivalente aramaico qal, e a palavra grega fo·né. (Gên 3:8, 10; 21:17; Jó 4:10; Da 4:31; Mt 27:46) Além de "voz", o termo qohl pode também indicar "trovão", "som", "barulho", "nova", e assim por diante. (Gên 45:16; Êx 9:28; 20:18; 32:17) Similarmente, fo·né pode ter significados tais como "som", "grito", "voz falada" e "toque", bem como "voz". — Jo 3:8; At 19:34; 1Co 14:10, 11; He 12:26; Re 8:13.

Pessoas Espirituais. O apóstolo Paulo menciona as "línguas de homens e de anjos", indicando que as pessoas espirituais possuem linguagem e fala. (1Co 13:1) Os anjos, e o próprio Jeová Deus, têm sido ouvidos expressar-se com sons de vozes e em línguas audíveis e compreensíveis aos homens. Mas, não se deve supor que tais seriam a voz com que eles se comunicam uns com os outros nos céus, pois é necessária uma atmosfera tal como existe em torno da Terra para propagar as ondas sonoras da voz audível e compreensível ao ouvido humano.

Os casos em que Deus, ou anjos, falaram numa voz ao alcance dos ouvidos de homens, portanto, seriam uma manifestação de sua fala transformada em ondas sonoras, assim como a aparição de anjos à vista do homem exigia, quer a materialização, quer a transmissão para a mente humana de uma imagem pictórica. Atualmente, até mesmo cientistas humanos podem converter o padrão das ondas sonoras da voz duma pessoa em impulsos elétricos, que podem ser transmitidos para um receptor, o qual pode converter de novo esses impulsos em sons bem semelhantes à voz da pessoa.

Será que humanos realmente ouviram a voz do próprio Deus?

Em três casos, no registro da Bíblia, relata-se que Jeová falou audivelmente a humanos. Estes são: (1) Na ocasião do batismo de Jesus (29 EC), quando Jeová disse: "Este é meu Filho, o amado, a quem tenho aprovado." Tanto Jesus como João, o Batizador, sem dúvida ouviram esta voz. (Mt 3:17; Mr 1:11; Lu 3:22) (2) Na transfiguração de Jesus (32 EC), presentes os apóstolos Pedro, Tiago e João, quando se proferiram virtualmente as mesmas palavras. (Mt 17:5; Mr 9:7; Lu 9:35) (3) Em 33 EC, pouco antes da última Páscoa de Jesus, quando em resposta à solicitação de Jesus, de que Deus glorificasse Seu nome, uma voz do céu disse: "Eu tanto o glorifiquei como o glorificarei de novo." A multidão julgou que havia trovejado, ou que um anjo tinha falado com Jesus. — Jo 12:28, 29.

Nestas ocasiões, foi o próprio Jeová quem se manifestou por meio de sons audíveis da fala compreensíveis aos seus servos. Evidentemente, no último caso mencionado, a multidão não ouviu distintamente a voz, visto que alguns a compararam ao trovão. Sem dúvida, nestas ocasiões, foi Jeová quem falou, porque Jesus, por causa de quem essas declarações foram feitas, era o Filho do próprio Deus, mais íntimo do Pai que qualquer outra criatura. — Mt 11:27.

Falando a um grupo de judeus descrentes, por volta da época da Páscoa de 31 EC, Jesus lhes disse: "Também, o próprio Pai que me enviou tem dado testemunho de mim. Vós nem ouvistes jamais a sua voz, nem vistes a sua figura; e não tendes a sua palavra remanescente em vós, porque não acreditais naquele mesmo a quem ele mandou." (Jo 5:37, 38) Esta multidão descrente jamais tinha ouvido a voz de Deus, e nem mesmo tinha obedecido à Sua palavra ou ao testemunho óbvio que recebera por meio do apoio de Deus às obras de Jesus. Aliás, pelo visto, apenas Jesus e João, o Batizador, tinham ouvido a voz audível de Jeová, pois os dois últimos casos mencionados de Jeová falar ainda não tinham ocorrido naquele tempo.

A menção bíblica da "voz" de Jeová às vezes se refere ao peso de Sua ordem como a "voz de Deus Todo-Poderoso". — Ez 10:5, PIB.

Vozes angélicas. Em outras ocasiões em que se diz que Deus 'falou' foram usados anjos como Seus representantes, a fim de prover a manifestação vocal. Anjos representaram a Deus ao falar a Moisés no monte Horebe, e a Israel, reunido perto do sopé do monte. (Êx 34:4-7; 20:1-17; Gál 3:19) Estes anjos às vezes não apresentaram nenhuma forma visível, como no caso da voz que procedia do monte trêmulo, fumegante. (Êx 20:18, 19; De 4:11, 12; He 12:18, 19) Às vezes, eles apareceram em forma visionária (Da 8:1, 15, 16; Re 14:15-18) e em diversas ocasiões materializaram-se em forma humana para trazer mensagens orais aos homens. — Gên 18:1-3, 20; 19:1; Jos 5:13-15.

Ouvir a Voz de Deus. 'Ouvir a voz de Deus' não significa, necessariamente, ouvir uma voz literal, audível. Mais vezes significa reconhecer e ouvir com obediência aquilo que Deus fez com que fosse escrito na sua Palavra e transmitido por meio de seus servos terrestres, que o representam. (1Jo 2:3, 4) Assim, usa-se o termo "voz" como se aplicando a "cada pronunciação procedente da boca de Jeová", suas ordens, quer apresentadas oralmente à pessoa pelo próprio Deus, ou por anjos ou homens, quer por algum escrito inspirado. — Sal 103:20; Mt 4:4; veja OBEDIÊNCIA.

Ouvir a Voz de Jesus. Jesus Cristo mencionou a si mesmo como o "pastor excelente", cujas ovelhas "escutam a sua voz, . . . e as ovelhas o seguem, porque conhecem a sua voz. . . . não conhecem a voz de estranhos". (Jo 10:2-5, 11) Aqueles que são as "ovelhas" de Cristo "conhecem" sua voz, no sentido de que reconhecem e admitem como verdadeiro aquilo que Cristo diz, segundo registrado na Bíblia. Recusam-se a admitir o ensino de "estranhos", de falsos pastores. "Escutam" a sua voz no sentido de que obedecem às suas ordens, conforme delineadas nas Escrituras. (Jo 15:10, 15) Uma vez que Cristo Jesus é o Principal Representante de Deus, que sempre escuta a voz de Jeová e fala aquilo que Jeová o orienta a falar, quem segue a Cristo estará em união com Jeová. — Jo 5:19; 1Jo 2:6.

A voz do ressuscitado Jesus Cristo. Depois da ressurreição e ascensão de Cristo, ele apareceu a Saulo de Tarso (mais tarde o apóstolo Paulo), falando-lhe numa voz que Saulo entendeu, mas que os homens que o acompanhavam não entenderam. (At 9:1-9; 22:6-11; 26:12-18) Em Atos 9:7, o relato declara que os homens junto de Saulo ouviram uma "voz ["som", Da n; Ro n]". Aqui se emprega a palavra grega fo·nés, o genitivo de fo·né, com o sentido de 'ouvir da voz'. Isto permite o significado de que os homens ouviram apenas o som da voz, mas não a compreenderam. Quando Paulo, mais tarde, relatou tal experiência, ele disse que os homens "não ouviram a voz daquele que falava". (At 22:9) Neste relato, emprega-se o acusativo (objetivo) fo·nén. Isto pode dar o sentido de que, ao passo que o som era registrado nos ouvidos deles, eles não ouviram a voz em forma de palavras distintas que eles compreendessem, como entendeu Saulo, a quem Cristo estava falando.

O apóstolo Paulo disse, quando escreveu à congregação tessalonicense a respeito do ajuntamento dos santos ungidos de Deus: "O próprio Senhor [Jesus Cristo] descerá do céu com uma chamada dominante, com voz de arcanjo e com a trombeta de Deus." (1Te 4:16) O termo "arcanjo" significa "anjo principal". A expressão de Paulo "voz de arcanjo" evidentemente focaliza a atenção na autoridade da voz de comando de Jesus. Quando na Terra, Jesus revelou a autoridade de que Deus o investiu, quando disse: "Pois, assim como o Pai tem vida em si mesmo, assim também concedeu ao Filho ter vida em si mesmo. E deu-lhe autoridade para julgar, porque é Filho do homem. . . . Vem a hora em que todos os que estão nos túmulos memoriais ouvirão a sua voz e sairão." — Jo 5:26-29.

Uso da Voz Humana. A voz, junto com a linguagem, é uma dádiva de Deus. Por conseguinte, a voz deve ser elevada em louvor a Deus. Isto pode ser feito por se falar "as coisas magníficas de Deus", edificando outros com informações da Palavra da verdade de Deus, ou em cânticos de louvor e de agradecimento. — At 2:11; Sal 42:4; 47:1; 98:5; Ef 5:19; Col 3:16.

Deus ouve a voz dos seus servos. Aqueles que servem a Deus com espírito e verdade podem invocar a Deus na certeza de que ele ouve a sua voz, não importa em que língua eles o invoquem. Ademais, mesmo que não se use a voz literal, fazendo-se uma petição silenciosa a Deus, Ele, que conhece os corações dos homens, assim mesmo "ouve" ou dá atenção. (Sal 66:19; 86:6; 116:1; 1Sa 1:13; Ne 2:4) Deus ouve os aflitos que clamam a Ele por ajuda, e também escuta a voz e conhece as intenções dos homens que se lhe opõem, e que maquinam o mal contra Seus servos. — Gên 21:17; Sal 55:18, 19; 69:33; 94:9-11; Je 23:25.

Coisas Inanimadas. Entre as inúmeras coisas que fazem parte da criação de Deus há muitas que não produzem um som de voz. Mas a palavra hebraica qohl ("voz", "som") é usada com respeito ao testemunho que essas coisas sem voz dão da majestade de seu Criador. (Sal 19:1-4) Diz-se que a sabedoria, em sentido personificado, persiste em 'emitir sua voz' nas praças públicas, porque está disponível a todos os que a buscam, e Deus tem feito com que a sabedoria seja proclamada perante todos, de modo que aquele que não a escuta não tem desculpa. — Pr 1:20-30.

Uso Figurado. A angústia dos habitantes de Jerusalém em face do ataque babilônico é comparada à voz aflita duma mulher doente, "a voz da filha de Sião" sendo comparada à duma mulher que dá à luz seu primeiro filho. (Je 4:31) O inimigo reduziria Jerusalém a uma condição tão baixa, que quaisquer expressões feitas com sua voz subiriam da sua posição rebaixada como se ela estivesse no pó, e seriam como a voz baixa dum médium espírita. (Is 29:4) Por meio do profeta Jeremias, Deus também profetizou que o Egito seria derrotado pelos babilônios, que viriam em grande número como cortadores de lenha, para abatê-lo. Ele jazeria no chão, profundamente humilhado, chorando brandamente e gemendo, sua "voz" sendo baixa como a duma serpente sibilante em recuo. — Je 46:22.

X

XEQUE. Título usualmente dado aos chefes tribais edomitas e horeus, os filhos de Esaú e os filhos de Seir, o horeu. (Êx 15:15) Em hebraico, o nome é 'al·lúf, que significa "chefe", "líder de mil". (Veja Gên 36:15 n.) O antigo termo edomita e horeu corresponde ao título "xeque" conforme usado para os líderes tribais entre os atuais beduínos. Em algumas traduções da Bíblia usam-se títulos tais como "chefe" e "príncipe", em vez de "xeque".

Alistam-se sete xeques dos horeus, todos "filhos de Seir". (Gên 36:20, 21, 29, 30) Os xeques de Edom evidentemente eram 14: sete netos através do primogênito de Esaú, Elifaz, filho da sua esposa Ada, quatro netos através de seu filho Reuel, filho da sua esposa Basemate, e três filhos seus que teve com sua esposa Oolibama. (Gên 36:15-19) No entanto, surge a questão de se o xeque Corá, contado entre os filhos de Elifaz, devia ser incluído. Se a inclusão do xeque Corá for um erro de escriba, conforme alguns creem, isto significa que havia apenas 13 xeques de Edom. (Gên 36:16 n) Os clãs que procederam dos xeques levam os nomes deles como nomes do respectivo clã.

Em Gênesis 36:40-43 e 1 Crônicas 1:51-54 fornece-se uma lista diferente dos "xeques de Esaú [Edom]". Estes talvez sejam xeques posteriores aos alistados antes. Alguns comentadores, porém, acreditam que não se trata de nomes de pessoas, mas de cidades ou regiões onde os vários domínios dos xeques tinham centro. Adotando este conceito, a tradução (em inglês) da Sociedade Publicadora Judaica reza: "o chefe de Timna, o chefe de Alva", e assim por diante.

XIBOLETE. Senha usada pelos homens de Gileade para identificar os efraimitas que tentavam fugir através do Jordão. Significa "espiga" ou "curso de água". Os efraimitas em fuga, durante seu conflito com Jefté, traíam-se às sentinelas gileaditas nos vaus do Jordão por não pronunciarem certo o som inicial de "xi" desta senha. Eles diziam "Sibolete". (Jz 12:4-6) Torna-se assim evidente que existia alguma variação de pronúncia entre as tribos, assim como também em tempos posteriores os da Galileia tinham um sotaque diferente dos da Judeia. — Veja Mt 26:73; Lu 22:59.

YAH. Veja JAH.

YAHWEH. Veja JEOVÁ.

Z

ZAANÃ. Cidade mencionada pelo profeta Miqueias como entre os lugares que haviam de sofrer na predita invasão de Judá. (Miq 1:11) Muitos peritos acham tratar-se da Zenã de Josué 15:37. É provisoriamente identificada com ʽAraq el-Kharba, na região da Sefelá de Judá, a uns 6 km ao NO de Laquis.

ZAANANIM. "A árvore grande de Zaananim" pelo visto era um ponto no termo S do território tribal de Naftali. (Jos 19:32, 33) Sísera morreu na tenda de Jael, esposa de Héber, o queneu, "perto da árvore grande em Zaananim, que está junto a ["não longe de" (BJ) ou "perto de" (BMD, CBC)] Quedes", talvez a Quedes ao SE de Megido, em Issacar. (Jz 4:11, 17, 21; 5:19) No entanto, o lugar exato de Zaananim continua sem identificação.

ZÁBUDE [Dotado]. Um dos dois líderes dos filhos de Bigvai, casa paterna cujos membros foram a Jerusalém junto com Esdras, em 468 AEC. — Esd 8:1, 14.

11. Filho do Rei Jeosafá. Zacarias e seus irmãos haviam todos recebido generosos presentes de Jeosafá, mas o reinado passou para Jeorão, o primogênito. Jeorão, após a sua entronização, para fortalecer a sua posição, matou Zacarias e os demais irmãos, bem como alguns dos príncipes. — 2Cr 21:1-4.

12. Filho do sumo sacerdote Jeoiada. Após a morte de Jeoiada, o Rei Jeoás desviou-se da adoração verdadeira, dando ouvidos a conselhos errados, em vez de aos profetas de Jeová. Zacarias, primo de Jeoás (2Cr 22:11), advertiu severamente o povo sobre isso, mas, em vez de este se arrepender, apedrejou-o no pátio do templo. As palavras de Zacarias ao morrer foram: "Que Jeová o veja e o exija de volta." Este pedido profético foi atendido, porque não somente a Síria causou grande dano a Judá, mas também Jeoás foi morto por dois dos seus servos, "por causa do sangue dos filhos de Jeoiada, o sacerdote". A Septuaginta grega e a Vulgata latina dizem que Jeoás foi morto para vingar o sangue do "filho" de Jeoiada. O texto massorético e a Pesito siríaca, porém, rezam "filhos", possivelmente usando o plural para indicar a excelência e o mérito do filho de Jeoiada, Zacarias, profeta-sacerdote. — 2Cr 24:17-22, 25.

Zacarias, filho de Jeoiada, bem provavelmente é aquele a quem Jesus se referiu ao profetizar que "o sangue de todos os profetas, derramado desde a fundação do mundo", seria exigido "desta geração [os judeus do tempo do ministério terrestre de Jesus], desde o sangue de Abel até o sangue de Zacarias, que foi morto entre o altar e a casa". (Lu 11:50, 51) Os lugares mencionados como o local do assassinato correspondem a isso. No primeiro século EC, Crônicas era o último livro do cânon das Escrituras Hebraicas. De modo que a frase de Jesus, 'desde Abel até Zacarias', era similar à expressão: "Desde Gênesis até Apocalipse." No relato paralelo em Mateus 23:35, Zacarias é chamado de filho de Baraquias, possivelmente outro nome de Jeoiada, a menos que, por acaso, indique uma geração existente entre Jeoiada e Zacarias, ou se trate do nome de um antepassado anterior. — Veja BARAQUIAS.

13. Conselheiro do Rei Uzias, o qual reinou de 829 a 778 AEC. Zacarias é descrito como "instrutor no temor do verdadeiro Deus". — 2Cr 26:5.

14. Rei de Israel. Zacarias era filho de Jeroboão II e o último da dinastia de Jeú a governar. Seu reinado registrado de seis meses terminou quando foi assassinado por Salum. (2Rs 15:8-12) O pai de Zacarias faleceu aproximadamente em 803 AEC, no 27.º ano do reinado de Uzias (2Rs 14:29), mas passaram-se uns 11 anos antes de se iniciar o declarado governo de seis meses de Zacarias, no 38.º ano de Uzias (c. 792 AEC). (2Rs 15:8, 13) Isto talvez se devesse a ele ser muito jovem quando seu pai morreu, ou talvez por ter havido muita oposição (típica do reino setentrional de Israel), que teve de ser vencida antes de ele ser firmemente estabelecido no reino.

15. Testemunha de que Isaías escreveu o nome de seu filho numa tábua; filho de Jeberequias. — Is 8:1, 2.

16. Avô materno do Rei Ezequias. — 2Rs 18:1, 2; 2Cr 29:1.

17. Um dos levitas dos filhos de Asafe, que ajudou a eliminar os objetos imundos removidos do templo no começo do reinado de Ezequias. — 2Cr 29:13, 15-17.

18. Levita coatita designado para ajudar a supervisionar os consertos do templo, patrocinados pelo Rei Josias. — 2Cr 34:8, 12.

19. Um de três principais sacerdotes que fizeram contribuições generosas de animais para a grande celebração da Páscoa providenciada por Josias. — 2Cr 35:1, 8.

20. Pós-exílico profeta e escritor do livro que leva seu nome. Zacarias chama a si mesmo de "filho de Berequias, filho de Ido" (Za 1:1, 7), mas em outras referências a ele omite-se este elo intermediário. (Esd 5:1; 6:14; Ne 12:4, 16) Zacarias provavelmente nasceu em algum lugar em Babilônia, porque a sua atividade profética só começou 17 anos depois do retorno do exílio e é razoável presumir que naquela época tivesse mais de 17 anos, embora ainda chamado de "moço". — Za 2:4.

Zacarias e Ageu foram usados por Jeová para estimular Zorobabel, o sumo sacerdote Jesua e os exilados que haviam retornado para que terminassem a reconstrução do templo de Jeová, embora ainda vigorasse a proscrição decretada pelo governo persa. (Esd 5:1, 2; 6:14, 15) A profecia de Zacarias contém mensagens que ele transmitiu neste respeito durante um período de dois anos e um mês. (Za 1:1, 7; 7:1, 8) Não se registrou nenhuma outra atividade profética que tivesse exercido. — Veja ZACARIAS, LIVRO DE.

Embora o nome do pai deste Zacarias tenha sido B*ere*quias, mencionar Jesus "Zacarias, filho de B*ara*quias" (Mt 23:35; note a diferença na grafia.) mais provavelmente se refere a um sumo sacerdote que viveu numa época anterior. — Veja o N.º 12.

21. Um dos "cabeças" que Esdras mandou para que reunissem alguns ministros para a casa de Deus, na época da viagem a Jerusalém, em 468 AEC. (Esd 8:15-17) Ele possivelmente é o N.º 22 ou o N.º 23.

22. Cabeça da casa paterna de Parós. Zacarias e 150 varões daquela casa paterna foram com Esdras para Jerusalém. (Esd 8:1, 3) Possivelmente trata-se do N.º 21.

23. Cabeça da casa paterna de Bebai, que liderou 28 varões da sua família no retorno junto com Esdras. (Esd 8:1, 11) Possivelmente trata-se do N.º 21.

24. Um dos filhos de Elão que dissolveram sua aliança matrimonial com estrangeiras, segundo o conselho de Esdras. — Esd 10:10, 11, 26, 44.

25. Associado de Esdras quando este leu e explicou a Lei ao povo. Zacarias, provavelmente sacerdote, ficou de pé à esquerda de Esdras. — Ne 8:1, 2, 4.

26, 27. Dois homens de Judá, respectivamente o filho de Amarias e o filho do selanita, cujos descendentes moravam em Jerusalém após o exílio babilônico. — Ne 11:4, 5.

28. Sacerdote, filho de certo Pasur, cujos descendentes moravam na Jerusalém pós-exílica. — Ne 11:10, 12.

29. Trombeteiro sacerdotal no cortejo na inauguração da reconstruída muralha de Jerusalém; filho de Jonatã. — Ne 12:27, 31, 35.

30. Outro trombeteiro, também sacerdote, na mesma inauguração em que estava presente o N.º 29. — Ne 12:40, 41.

31. Sacerdote, pai de João, o Batizador. (Lu 3:2) Ele e sua esposa Elisabete, parenta de Maria, mãe de Jesus, moravam nas colinas da Judeia. Ambos temiam a Deus e obedeciam aos Seus mandamentos. Embora avançados em anos, não tinham filhos. — Lu 1:5-7, 36.

Quando chegou a vez de Zacarias oferecer incenso durante a "divisão de Abias", provavelmente por volta da primavera ou do começo do verão de 3 AEC, ele entrou no santuário como de costume. Nesta ocasião, apareceu-lhe Gabriel, anjo de Jeová, informando-o de que sua súplica fora ouvida favoravelmente, que sua esposa Elisabete lhe daria um filho e que o menino devia ser chamado João. Gabriel instruiu Zacarias sobre como o menino devia ser criado e o que este filho realizaria. (Lu 1:5-17) Zacarias pediu ao anjo um sinal como garantia adicional. Por causa desta sua relutância em acreditar no anjo, ele foi informado de que ficaria mudo até depois do nascimento de João. (Lu 1:18-23) No oitavo dia após o nascimento do menino, Elisabete rejeitou as sugestões de vizinhos e parentes, e insistiu que seu filho fosse chamado João. Quando apelaram para o pai, Zacarias, este tomou uma tabuinha e escreveu nela: "João é o nome dele." Ele instantaneamente recuperou a fala e proferiu uma profecia a respeito da obra de seu filho e da do Messias. — Lu 1:13, 57-79.

ZACARIAS, LIVRO DE. Este livro das Escrituras Hebraicas identifica seu escritor como "Zacarias, filho de Berequias, filho de Ido, o profeta". (Za 1:1) Fornece também a base para se determinar o período que abrange e a data aproximada da sua escrita. O último indicador de tempo encontrado no livro de Zacarias é o quarto dia de quisleu, no quarto ano do reinado de Dario (cerca de 1.º de dezembro de 518 AEC). (7:1) Por conseguinte, este livro não pode ter sido escrito antes do fim de 518 AEC. Visto que foi "no oitavo mês, no segundo ano de Dario" (outubro/novembro de 520 AEC), que "veio a haver a palavra de Jeová para Zacarias" (1:1), o livro abrange um período de pelo menos dois anos.

A partir do capítulo 9, o assunto encontrado no livro de Zacarias parece diferir bastante da primeira seção. Não se fazem outras referências a anjos e a visões, nem ao governador Zorobabel e ao sumo sacerdote Josué. Não há menção da reconstrução do templo, nem mesmo ocorre o nome de Zacarias. Em vista disso e da natureza das profecias contidas nos últimos capítulos do livro, diversos críticos sustentam que esta seção não pode ter sido escrita por Zacarias. Todavia, deve-se notar que Zacarias, assim como outros profetas, escreveu segundo inspiração divina e não recebeu todas as revelações ao mesmo tempo ou da mesma maneira. (2Pe 1:20, 21) Também, as profecias não precisavam enquadrar-se em determinado conjunto de circunstâncias existentes e englobar o nome do profeta ou de alguns dos seus contemporâneos, para que o livro inteiro fosse obra do profeta. Que o livro de Zacarias constitui um conjunto harmonioso, em vez de consistir em partes separadas e não relacionadas entre si, registradas por escritores diferentes, evidencia-se nos pensamentos expressos nele. O livro inteiro destaca que Jerusalém seria restaurada e que Jeová iria em defesa da cidade. — Za 1:13-21; 2:4, 5; 8:14-23; 9:11-17; 12:2-6; 14:3-21.

Fundo Histórico. Aproximadamente em 9 de fevereiro de 519 AEC, o profeta Zacarias ouviu as palavras: "A terra inteira está sentada quietamente e tem sossego." (Za 1:7, 11) Naquele tempo, Jerusalém não era fator perturbador para as nações, mas parecia aos observadores que Jeová abandonara a cidade. Embora os alicerces do templo tivessem sido lançados em 536 AEC, a reconstrução fizera pouco progresso, por causa da oposição dos inimigos, e, por fim, em 522 AEC, foi oficialmente proscrita. (Esd 4:4, 5, 24) Além disso, afligidos por secas e safras ruins, por terem negligenciado a reconstrução do templo, os judeus repatriados se viram numa situação muito difícil. (Ag 1:6, 10, 11) Precisavam de encorajamento para continuar com a reconstrução apesar de obstáculos montanhescos.

As palavras de Jeová, por meio de Zacarias, portanto, devem ter sido motivo de real consolo e inspiração para eles. As visões observadas por Zacarias mostravam claramente que era da vontade divina que Jerusalém e seu templo fossem reconstruídos. (Za 1:16; cap. 2) O poder das nações que haviam dispersado Judá seria destroçado. (1:18-21) O sumo sacerdote Josué obteria uma aparência aceitável perante Jeová (3:3-7) e o governador Zorobabel, com a ajuda do espírito de Jeová, terminaria de reconstruir o templo. — 4:6-9.

Concordância com Outros Livros da Bíblia. O livro de Zacarias está em plena harmonia com o restante das Escrituras em identificar Jeová como Protetor do seu povo. (Za 2:5; compare isso com De 33:27; Sal 46:11; 125:2.) Ele recompensa ou pune pessoas ou nações segundo a atuação delas, e retorna àqueles que, arrependidos, retornam a ele. (Za 1:2-6; 7:11-14; compare isso com Is 55:6, 7; Je 25:4-11; Ez 33:11; Mal 3:7; 2Pe 3:9.) Jeová requer que aqueles que desejam ter seu favor falem a verdade e mostrem obediência, justiça, benevolência e misericórdia. (Za 7:7-10; 8:16, 17; compare isso com De 24:17; Sal 15:1, 2; 82:3, 4; Pr 12:19; Je 7:5, 6; Ef 4:25.) Não atende os pedidos de ajuda daqueles que não lhe obedecem. — Za 7:13; compare isso com Is 1:15; La 3:42-44.

Também, similaridades dignas de nota são prontamente evidentes na comparação de passagens em Zacarias com outros textos bíblicos. — Compare Za 3:2 com Ju 9; Za 4:3, 11-14, com Re 11:4; Za 4:10 com Re 5:6; Za 8:8 com Re 21:3; Za 14:5 com Ju 14; Za 14:7 com Re 21:25; Za 14:8 com Re 22:1, 17.

Cumprimento de Profecia. O cumprimento de profecias registradas no livro de Zacarias atesta a sua autenticidade. O que se sabe sobre a campanha de Alexandre, o Grande, na Síria, na Fenícia e na Filístia, inclusive sobre a conquista de Tiro e de Gaza, ajusta-se às palavras de Zacarias 9:1-8, e, portanto, pode ser entendido como cumprimento desta profecia. Numerosas outras profecias contidas no livro de Zacarias encontram cumprimento em Cristo Jesus — sua entrada em Jerusalém como rei, "humilde, e montado num jumento" (Za 9:9; Mt 21:5; Jo 12:15), ser ele traído por "trinta moedas de prata" (Za 11:12, 13; Mt 26:15; 27:9), a subsequente dispersão dos seus discípulos (Za 13:7; Mt 26:31; Mr 14:27), ser Jesus traspassado com uma lança enquanto na estaca (Za 12:10; Jo 19:34, 37) e seu papel como Rei-Sacerdote (Za 6:12, 13; He 6:20; 8:1; 10:21).

ZACUR [duma raiz que significa "lembrar"].

1. Rubenita cujo filho Samua foi um dos 12 espias que Moisés enviou à Terra da Promessa. — Núm 13:3, 4.

2. Simeonita cujos descendentes através de Simei tornaram-se muitos. — 1Cr 4:24-27.

3. Levita merarita; filho de Jaazias. — 1Cr 24:26, 27.

4. Cabeça do terceiro grupo de músicos levitas; filho de Asafe, gersonita. (1Cr 25:2, 10; 6:39, 43; Ne 12:35) Zacur talvez tenha sido chamado Zabdi (Ne 11:17) e Zicri. — 1Cr 9:15.

5. Alguém que trabalhou na reconstrução da muralha de Jerusalém sob a direção de Neemias; filho de Inri. — Ne 3:2.

DESTAQUES DE ZACARIAS

Mensagens proféticas que incentivam os judeus a retomar a reconstrução do templo, fornecendo também vislumbres da vinda do Messias e do seu governo como Rei-Sacerdote.

Escrito por Zacarias durante o reinado do rei persa Dario I, uns 19 anos depois de os primeiros judeus terem voltado para sua terra, após saírem de Babilônia, em 537 AEC.

Convocação ao arrependimento, seguida por oito visões e uma profecia sobre o "Renovo". (1:1–6:15)

Primeira visão: Um cavaleiro num cavalo vermelho, parado com mais três cavaleiros entre as murteiras; a visão termina com a garantia de que se terá misericórdia com Jerusalém e que o templo será reconstruído.

Segunda visão: Os quatro chifres que dispersaram Judá são arremessados para baixo por quatro artífices.

Terceira visão: Um moço com uma corda de medir prepara-se para medir Jerusalém, mas um anjo prediz maior crescimento da cidade bem como a proteção de Jeová para ela.

Quarta visão: As vestes imundas do sumo sacerdote Josué são removidas e substituídas por trajes de gala.

Quinta visão: Zacarias vê um candelabro de ouro com sete lâmpadas supridas de óleo procedente de duas oliveiras; Zorobabel completará a reconstrução do templo com a ajuda do espírito de Deus.

Sexta visão: Um rolo voador representa a maldição que sai por causa de todos aqueles que furtam e que juram falsamente em nome de Jeová.

Sétima visão: Uma mulher chamada Iniquidade é transportada num efa para Sinear.

Oitava visão: Quatro carros saem de entre dois montes de cobre para percorrer a terra.

O homem chamado Renovo construirá o templo de Jeová e servirá qual rei-sacerdote.

Pergunta sobre a observância de jejuns em comemoração das calamidades que sobrevieram a Jerusalém. (7:1–8:23)

Calamidades sobrevieram como punição pela desobediência; jejuar em comemoração delas realmente não era feito para com Jeová.

Jerusalém usufruirá o favor divino; os anteriores dias de jejum serão transformados em "exultação, e alegria, e boas épocas festivas"; muitos procedentes das nações virão a ela em busca do favor de Jeová.

Julgamento das nações, profecias messiânicas e o restabelecimento do povo de Deus. (9:1–14:21)

Muitas cidades e nações sentirão o julgamento adverso de Jeová.

O Rei justo e humilde de Sião entrará na cidade montado num jumento.

Jeová expressa ira contra os falsos pastores.

O povo espalhado de Deus será trazido do Egito e da Assíria.

Zacarias é chamado para ser pastor; o povo recebe a oportunidade de pagar pelo trabalho dele, e avalia-o em 30 peças de prata.

Jerusalém tornar-se-á uma pedra pesada, que arranhará severamente a todos os que tocarem nela.

Abrir-se-á uma fonte para a purificação de pecados; o pastor será golpeado e as ovelhas serão espalhadas.

Jerusalém será atacada, mas Jeová guerreará contra os agressores.

Os remanescentes das nações atacantes celebrarão todo ano a Festividade das Barracas, curvando-se diante de Jeová como Rei.

6. Levita representado nas assinaturas do pacto de fidelidade proposto durante a governadoria de Neemias. Talvez Zacur estivesse pessoalmente presente, ou pode ser que um dos seus descendentes o tenha assinado em seu nome. (Ne 9:38; 10:1, 9, 12) Possivelmente trata-se do N.º 7.

7. Levita cujo filho Hanã foi encarregado da distribuição apropriada dos dízimos durante a governadoria de Neemias. (Ne 13:10-13) Talvez se trate do N.º 6.

ZADOQUE [Duma raiz que significa "ser justo"].

1. Sacerdote proeminentemente associado com o Rei Davi. Zadoque era descendente de Arão através da linhagem sumo sacerdotal de Eleazar. (1Cr 6:3-8, 50-53) Ele é também chamado de vidente. (2Sa 15:27) Zadoque, como jovem valente, foi um dos chefes tribais que passaram a dar seu apoio ao reinado de Davi. (1Cr 12:27, 28) Daquele tempo em diante, ele foi leal a Davi. — 2Sa 8:15, 17; 20:25; 1Cr 18:16.

Zadoque e Abiatar (sempre que se mencionam os dois, Zadoque vem primeiro, talvez por ter sido também profeta) acompanharam a Arca do Pacto quando Davi mandou que fosse levada para Jerusalém, continuando Zadoque depois a servir por um tempo em Gibeão, onde estava o tabernáculo. (1Cr 15:11, 14; 16:39) Quando Absalão se rebelou, Zadoque e os levitas começaram a levar a Arca junto ao acompanharem Davi na sua fuga de Jerusalém, mas Davi os mandou de volta para a cidade, designando Zadoque e outros para atuarem como informantes intermediários. (2Sa 15:23-29, 35, 36; 17:15, 16; 18:19-27) Acabada a rebelião, Zadoque e Abiatar tiveram parte em providenciar uma recepção favorável a Davi em Jerusalém. (2Sa 19:11-14) Bem mais adiante no reinado de Davi, quando ele organizou os serviços levíticos para o templo, tanto Zadoque como Aimeleque, filho de Abiatar, o ajudaram. — 1Cr 24:3, 6, 30, 31.

Em contraste com Abiatar, Zadoque não apoiou a tentativa de usurpação do trono por Adonias; por isso, Davi designou Zadoque como aquele que devia ungir Salomão como rei. (1Rs 1:7, 8, 26, 32-46) Durante os reinados de Saul e de Davi, Zadoque serviu apenas como sacerdote associado, mas, por causa da sua lealdade, em contraste com a fidelidade vacilante do sumo sacerdote Abiatar, Salomão expulsou Abiatar de Jerusalém e constituiu Zadoque sumo sacerdote. Isto cumpriu a profecia de Jeová, proferida contra a casa de Eli. (1Rs 2:26, 27, 35) O alistamento posterior de "Zadoque e Abiatar", em 1Rs 4:4, provavelmente é em sentido histórico. Josefo afirma que Zadoque foi o primeiro sumo sacerdote no templo de Salomão. (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], X, 152 [viii, 6]) Em 1 Crônicas 27:16, 17, Zadoque é alistado como líder da casa de Arão. A Bíblia fornece uma base para se acompanhar a linhagem de Zadoque ocupando o cargo de sumo sacerdote até o tempo de Dario, o persa (provavelmente Dario II). (1Rs 4:2; 1Cr 6:8-15; 2Cr 31:10; Ne 12:22) Os sacerdotes observados no templo da visão de Ezequiel eram "filhos de Zadoque". — Ez 40:46; 43:19; 44:15; 48:11.

2. Avô materno do Rei Jotão, de Judá. — 2Rs 15:32, 33; 2Cr 27:1.

3. Descendente de Arão através do N.º 1 na linhagem sumo sacerdotal e antepassado de Esdras, "copista destro". — 1Cr 6:3, 8, 12, 13; 9:11; Esd 7:1-6; Ne 11:11.

4. Um dos reconstrutores pós-exílicos da muralha de Jerusalém; filho de Baana. (Ne 3:4) Ou ele ou um representante duma família do mesmo nome assinou o pacto nacional proposto pouco tempo depois. — Ne 9:38; 10:1, 14, 21.

5. Outro que ajudou a reconstruir a muralha de Jerusalém; filho ou descendente de Imer, o qual possivelmente pertencia à família sacerdotal. — Ne 3:29.

6. Copista que Neemias incumbiu junto com Selemias e Pedaías dos depósitos levíticos. (Ne 13:13) Talvez se trate do N.º 5.

7. (Sadoque) Antepassado pós-exílico de José, pai adotivo de Jesus. — Mt 1:14.

ZAFENATE-PANEIA. Nome que Faraó deu a José quando o elevou em autoridade a uma posição só inferior à dele mesmo. (Gên 41:45) Para os que falavam hebraico, a pronúncia do nome evidentemente significava "Revelador de Coisas Ocultas", mas para os egípcios talvez significasse: "O Deus Disse: Ele Viverá!"

ZAFOM [duma raiz que significa "vigiar"]. Cidade designada a Gade. (Jos 13:24, 27) Alguns preferem identificá-la com Tell es-Sa'idiyeh, a uns 10 km ao NNO de Sucote. Em algumas traduções, em Juízes 12:1, o nome ocorre também em lugar de "em direção ao norte". — ALA, BJ, BLH, IBB.

ZAINE [ז] (za'yin). Sétima letra do alfabeto hebraico. Em geral, corresponde à letra "z" em português, e, no hebraico, é encontrada no início de cada versículo do Salmo 119:49-56.

ZAIR. Lugar dentro ou perto de Edom. Na vizinhança de Zair, à noite, o Rei Jeorão, de Judá, golpeou a força militar dos edomitas, que o cercava. (2Rs 8:20-22) Desconhece-se a localização exata de Zair.

ZALAFE. Pai de pelo menos seis filhos varões, um dos quais ajudou Neemias a reparar a muralha de Jerusalém. — Ne 3:30.

ZALMOM.

1. Guerreiro aoíta de Davi. (2Sa 23:8, 28) Parece ser chamado Ilai em 1 Crônicas 11:29.

2. Monte perto de Siquém. No monte Zalmom, Abimeleque e suas forças cortaram lenha para incendiar a cripta pertencente à cidade de Siquém. (Jz 9:48, 49) Visto que os únicos montes perto de Siquém são o Ebal e o Gerizim, Zalmom ou era um pico ou uma encosta num deles, ou então era algum morro próximo, menos importante.

3. Cume elevado, evidentemente em Basã, ao L do Jordão. (Sal 68:14, 15) Talvez fosse o cume mais elevado do monte Haurã (Jebel ed Druz).

ZALMONA. Lugar no ermo onde os israelitas acamparam depois de partir do monte Hor e antes de seguir para Punom. (Núm 33:41, 42) Zalmona é provisoriamente identificado por Y. Aharoni com es-Salmaneh, a uns 20 km ao NNO do lugar sugerido de Punom.

ZALMUNA. Um dos reis de Midiã, cujas forças e aliados oprimiram Israel por sete anos, antes do juizado de Gideão. (Jz 6:1) A pequena tropa de Gideão fez debandar os invasores, e, na perseguição das forças em fuga, capturou e matou os reis Zeba e Zalmuna. — Jz 6:33; 8:4-21; Sal 83:11, 12; veja ZEBA.

ZANOA [possivelmente duma raiz que significa "cheirar mal"].

1. Cidade de Judá na Sefelá. (Jos 15:20, 33, 34, 36) Ela estava entre as cidades novamente habitadas após o exílio babilônico. (Ne 11:25, 30) Os habitantes desta Zanoa talvez fossem os que fizeram reparos na muralha meridional de Jerusalém e no seu Portão do Vale. (Ne 3:13) É identificada com Khirbet Zanuʽ (Horvat Zanoah), a uns 5 km ao SE de Bete-Semes.

2. Cidade na região montanhosa de Judá. (Jos 15:20, 48, 56, 57) Parece ser a Zanoa mencionada em 1 Crônicas 4:18 como 'tendo por pai' a Jecutiel. (Veja JECUTIEL.) É provisoriamente identificada com Khirbet Beit Amra, a uns 10 km ao SSO de Hébron.

ZANZUMINS [possivelmente duma raiz que significa "ter em mente; tramar"]. Nome amonita para os refains; povo desapossado pelos amonitas. (De 2:19, 20) Não existe nenhuma ligação definida entre eles e os zuzins. — Gên 14:5; veja REFAINS.

ZAQUEU [do hebr., possivelmente duma raiz que significa "limpo; puro"]. Um dos principais cobradores de impostos em Jericó, que se tornou discípulo de Cristo. Zaqueu, como tal funcionário, provavelmente estava encarregado dos outros cobradores de impostos em Jericó e arredores. O distrito em torno de Jericó era fértil e produtivo, fornecendo uma considerável arrecadação de impostos em resultado do comércio, e Zaqueu, à moda da maioria dos cobradores de impostos, provavelmente recorrera a práticas questionáveis no seu posto, para obter parte da sua notável riqueza, porque, deveras, "era rico". — Lu 19:1, 2, 8; veja COBRADOR DE IMPOSTOS.

Quando Jesus veio a Jericó, na primavera de 33 EC, pouco antes de ir a Jerusalém e sofrer ali a morte, Zaqueu queria dar uma espiada nele, mas, por ser de estatura pequena, não podia vê-lo por cima da multidão. Assim, correndo à frente para um ponto mais adiante, ele deu jeito para obter um ponto de observação por subir numa árvore. Tal interesse, naturalmente, impressionou Jesus, que disse a Zaqueu que ficaria na sua casa enquanto em Jericó. As pessoas da cidade objetaram, porém, dizendo que Jesus fazia-se amigo de pecadores. Mostrando que mudara de atitude, Zaqueu declarou que restituiria quatro vezes mais aquilo que obtivera de forma injusta e que daria metade de seus bens aos pobres. Jesus reconheceu então que a casa deste homem candidatava-se à salvação. (Lu 19:3-10) Também, na visita de Jesus a Zaqueu, ele contou a ilustração das minas. — Lu 19:11-28.

ZARETÃ. A primeira referência a este lugar encontra-se em Josué 3:16, onde se fornece o relato do milagroso represamento das águas do Jordão "em Adão, cidade vizinha de Zaretã". Mais adiante, o relato declara que, na época em que se fundiam objetos de cobre para o templo, esta fundição era feita no Distrito do Jordão, "em molde de argila, entre Sucote e Zaretã". (1Rs 7:46) A argila disponível no vale do Jordão contribuiu para a viabilidade de tais fundições de cobre nesta região.

Visto que o lugar de Adão geralmente é situado em Tell ed-Damiyeh (no lado L do Jordão, defronte da entrada do uádi Farʽah), e visto que se considera que Sucote ficava a uns 13 km ao NNE de Adão, estes textos parecem indicar que Zaretã ficava no lado O do Jordão, não muito longe de Adão e Sucote. O cume de 82 m de altitude conhecido como Qarn Sartabeh, chamado de "grande ponto característico do vale do Jordão", é sugerido por alguns como provável localização de Zaretã. (Encyclopædia Biblica [Enciclopédia Bíblica], editada por T. Cheyne, Londres, 1903, Vol. IV, col. 5382) Fica além do Jordão, defronte de Adão, na entrada do uádi Farʽah.

Esta identificação, porém, é de certo modo difícil de harmonizar com a descrição do quinto distrito administrativo de Salomão, fornecida em 1 Reis 4:12, que menciona 'Taanaque e Megido, e toda a Bete-Seã, que está ao lado de Zaretã, abaixo de Jezreel, desde Bete-Seã até Abel-Meolá, até a região de Jocmeão'. Qarn Sartabeh fica muito mais ao S do que os outros lugares ali alistados e não "ao lado de" Bete-Seã, no sentido de ser vizinho a ela. A Bíblia de Jerusalém procura ajustar a ordem geográfica dos lugares alistados em 1 Reis 4:12, mencionando "todo o Betsã [Bete-Seã] abaixo de Jezreel, desde Betsã até Bet-Meula, perto de Sartã [Zaretã]", ligando assim Záretã com Abel-Meolá (Bet-Meula), em vez de com Bete-Seã. Todavia, visto que a referência é a "todo o Betsã [Bete-Seã]", sem dúvida indica uma região, em vez de a cidade propriamente dita. Se Zaretã realmente estava ligada com o cume saliente de Qarn Sartabeh, pode ser que a região de Bete-Seã abrangia o vale plano em torno da cidade e se estendia para o sul até onde Zaretã se tornava visível, o que servia assim para indicar uma região separada, mas vizinha.

Outros lugares sugeridos para Zaretã ficam ao L do Jordão, e, portanto, não parecem ajustar-se ao contexto. Escavações feitas num deles, Tell es-Sa'idiyeh, produziram uma quantidade incomum de objetos feitos de bronze (uma liga principalmente de cobre e de estanho), o que talvez confirme a localização da atividade de fundição de cobre, de Salomão, nesta região geral.

No relato de 2 Crônicas 4:17, paralelo ao de 1 Reis 7:46, ocorre "Zereda" em lugar de Zaretã, talvez representando uma grafia variante do nome.

ZATU. Antepassado duma grande família que retornou a Jerusalém junto com Zorobabel, em 537 AEC. (Esd 2:1, 2, 8; Ne 7:13) Quando Esdras foi a Jerusalém, alguns dos descendentes desta família despediram as esposas estrangeiras que haviam tomado. (Esd 10:10, 11, 27, 44) Pouco depois, um representante desta família, ou alguém chamado Zatu, selou o "arranjo fidedigno". — Ne 9:38; 10:1, 14.

ZAZA. Filho de Jonatã, entre os descendentes de Jerameel, da tribo de Judá. — 1Cr 2:3-5, 25, 33.

ZEBA [Sacrifício]. Rei de Midiã, que participou em oprimir Israel. Zeba e Zalmuna eram governantes presumivelmente durante os sete anos em que Midiã fazia incursões em Israel, arruinando campos e causando pobreza. (Jz 6:1-6) Num tempo não especificado, mataram também membros da família de Gideão. — Jz 8:18, 19.

Quando Gideão derrotou o exército de 135.000 homens deles, Zeba, Zalmuna e mais 15.000 conseguiram escapar à forte perseguição e chegar a Carcor, a uma distância bastante grande, mas ali foram novamente derrotados e por fim capturados. Quando Gideão trouxe de volta Zeba e Zalmuna como cativos humilhados, pelo menos até Sucote, eles devem ter-se lembrado das suas palavras jactanciosas (ou pelo menos da expressão da sua atitude) preservadas no salmo: "Tomemos posse para nós das moradias de Deus." (Sal 83:11, 12) Depois de admitirem ter matado os irmãos de Gideão, este matou pessoalmente os dois reis midianitas. — Jz 8:4-21.

ZEBADIAS [Que Jeová Dote].

1. Benjamita, filho ou descendente de Berias. — 1Cr 8:1, 15, 16.

2. Benjamita, filho ou descendente de Elpaal. — 1Cr 8:1, 17, 18.

3. Guerreiro benjamita que se juntou às forças de Davi em Ziclague; filho de Jeroão de Gedor. — 1Cr 12:1, 2, 7.

4. Sobrinho de Joabe e chefe da quarta turma mensal do exército. Vir ele 'depois de seu pai Asael' talvez indique que o sucedeu no posto depois de Asael ser morto. (2Sa 2:23) Ou, se estas turmas mensais foram organizadas depois da morte de Asael, então pode significar que Zebadias foi encarregado da turma que levava o nome de Asael. — 1Cr 27:1, 7; veja ASAEL N.º 1.

5. Porteiro envolvido na organização dos serviços levíticos por Davi; filho de Meselemias, coraíta. — 1Cr 26:1, 2.

6. Um dos levitas que Jeosafá, no seu terceiro ano, 934 AEC, enviou para ensinar a lei de Jeová nas cidades de Judá. — 2Cr 17:7-9, Al, ALA, BLH, IBB.

7. Líder da casa de Judá, filho de Ismael, entre os que o Rei Jeosafá designou para que cuidassem de casos judiciais. — 2Cr 19:8-11.

8. Cabeça da casa paterna de Sefatias. Zebadias, filho de Micael, levou 80 varões da sua casa paterna de volta a Jerusalém, junto com Esdras, em 468 AEC. — Esd 8:1, 8.

9. Um dos sacerdotes da casa de Imer, que estava entre os que Esdras incentivou a dissolver as alianças matrimoniais com estrangeiras. — Esd 10:19, 20.

ZEBEDEU [possivelmente duma raiz hebr. que que significa "dotar"]. Pai de Tiago e João, apóstolos de Jesus. (Mt 4:21, 22; 10:2; 26:37; Mr 3:17; 10:35; Lu 5:10; Jo 21:2) Crê-se em geral que Salomé tenha sido a esposa de Zebedeu e irmã de Maria, mãe de Jesus. Isto significaria que Zebedeu era tio de Jesus por casamento, e que Tiago e João eram primos de Jesus. — Mt 27:56; Mr 15:40; Jo 19:25; veja SALOMÉ N.º 1.

A ocupação de Zebedeu era a pescaria no mar da Galileia, e, pelo visto, saía-se bastante bem nisso, porque havia homens contratados trabalhando para ele. (Mr 1:16, 19, 20) Sua esposa, Salomé, tinha condições de prestar serviços materiais a Jesus. (Mr 15:40, 41) Assim, embora não haja nenhum indício de que o próprio Zebedeu tenha seguido a Cristo, sua família fazia isso livremente. — Mt 20:20.

ZEBIDA [duma raiz que significa "dotar"]. Esposa ou concubina do Rei Josias e mãe do Rei Jeoiaquim. Zebida era filha de Pedaías, de Ruma. — 2Rs 23:34, 36.

ZEBINA [Adquirido [isto é, comprado]]. Filho pós-exílico de Nebo. Zebina e seis de seus irmãos haviam-se casado com esposas estrangeiras, mas as despediram conforme aconselhados por Esdras. — Esd 10:43, 44.

ZEBOIM, I [Hienas].

1. Vale no território de Benjamim, perto de Micmás. Nos dias do Rei Saul, um bando de saqueadores filisteus costumava fazer surtidas desde Micmás e "se virava para a estrada que dá para o termo que olha para o vale de Zeboim, para o ermo". (1Sa 13:16-18) Embora não haja certeza sobre a localização do vale de Zeboim, ele talvez seja o uádi Abu Daba' (que significa: "Vale do Pai de Hienas"), a uns 10 km ao ESE de Micmás e a uns 13 km ao ENE de Jerusalém.

2. Cidade habitada por benjamitas após o seu retorno do exílio babilônico. Ela é mencionada entre Hadide e Nebalate, e junto com Lode (Lida). (Ne 11:31, 34, 35) Desconhece-se agora o lugar exato dela.

ZEBOIM, II. Lugar mencionado com relação ao termo do território cananeu. (Gên 10:19) Zeboim era uma das cinco cidades-estados do Distrito que se rebelaram depois de 12 anos de dominação por Quedorlaomer. Seu Rei Semeber juntou forças com os governantes de Sodoma, Gomorra, Admá e Bela (Zoar), e parece que foi derrotado com eles por Quedorlaomer e seus três confederados, na baixada de Sidim. Esta derrota resultou na captura de Ló e na subsequente vitória de Abraão sobre os invasores. (Gên 14:1-16) Mais tarde, Zeboim foi uma das cidades iníquas do Distrito destruídas por Jeová junto com Sodoma e Gomorra. (Gên 19:24, 25; De 29:22, 23; Os 11:8) Desconhece-se seu lugar exato. Muitos peritos acreditam que o lugar original se encontre agora sob as águas do Mar Morto, embora outros recentemente tenham afirmado que as ruínas da cidade talvez possam ser identificadas com um sítio junto a um dos uádis ao SE do Mar Morto.

ZEBRA [hebr.: pé·re']. Animal da família dos equídeos, semelhante a um jumento selvagem em aparência e hábitos, embora facilmente distinguível dele por suas listras escuras ou negras. As listras distorcem a figura e a uniformidade do contorno da zebra a tal ponto, que com frequência nem mesmo os nativos de vista aguda se apercebem da sua presença a apenas 40 ou 50 m de distância. Os sentidos aguçados da visão e do olfato da zebra, bem como sua capacidade de correr velozmente, servem de proteção contra os carnívoros. Relatou-se que o animal consegue correr a 64 km/h depois da arrancada inicial. Também, seus cascos e seus dentes são eficazes armas de defesa.

A zebra é um animal selvagem difícil de domar. (Jó 24:5; 39:5; Is 32:14) As zebras alimentam-se principalmente de gramíneas. (Jó 6:5; Je 14:6) Saciam regularmente a sede (Sal 104:11) e raras vezes estão a mais de 8 km da água.

A obstinação da zebra e o forte impulso que impele as fêmeas em cio foram usados para ilustrar o proceder independente e adúltero do obstinado Israel. (Je 2:24; Os 8:9) O anjo de Jeová predisse que Ismael, filho de Abraão, seria "uma zebra de homem". Isto provavelmente se referia a uma disposição feroz de independência, conforme sugerem as palavras: "Sua mão será contra todos." — Gên 16:12.

"Onagro" e "jumento selvagem" são apropriadas traduções alternativas do termo hebraico pé·re'. — Jó 6:5 n.

ZEBUL [Tolerância; ou, possivelmente: Moradia (Habitação) Elevada]. Comissário da cidade de Siquém, subserviente a Abimeleque, filho de Gideão. Quando certo Gaal e seus irmãos vieram a Siquém e tentaram incitar a cidade contra Abimeleque, Zebul informou Abimeleque e mais tarde desafiou o líder rebelde, Gaal, a provar as suas jactâncias por lutar. Os rebeldes siquemitas foram derrotados e Zebul expulsou Gaal e seus irmãos da cidade. — Jz 9:26-41.

ZEBULÃO [Tolerância; ou, possivelmente: Moradia (Habitação) Elevada].

1. Sexto filho de Leia, esposa de Jacó. Leia, sendo a esposa menos amada, agradou-se em especial com o nascimento do menino. O nome que lhe deu refletia a esperança de que sua posição perante Jacó melhoraria. Leia exclamou: "Por fim há de tolerar-me meu esposo, pois lhe dei à luz seis filhos." (Gên 30:20; 35:23; Êx 1:1-3; 1Cr 2:1) Zebulão, por fim, tornou-se pai de três filhos: Serede, Elom e Jaleel. (Gên 46:14) Um descendente distante de Zebulão, que tinha o mesmo nome de um destes três filhos, Elom, serviu de juiz em Israel. — Jz 12:11, 12.

2. O nome Zebulão refere-se também à tribo que descendia dele através dos seus três filhos. Cerca de um ano depois de os israelitas terem sido libertos da escravidão no Egito, os varões vigorosos desta tribo, de 20 anos para cima, ascendiam a 57.400. (Núm 1:1-3, 30, 31) Um segundo censo feito no fim dos 40 anos de peregrinação de Israel no ermo revelou um aumento de 3.100 varões registrados. — Núm 26:26, 27.

No ermo, a tribo de Zebulão, junto com as tribos de Judá e de Issacar, acampava ao L do tabernáculo. Esta divisão de três tribos era a primeira na ordem de marcha. Eliabe, filho de Helom, serviu de maioral do exército zebulonita. — Núm 1:9; 2:3-7; 7:24; 10:14-16.

Herança Tribal. O moribundo patriarca Jacó declarou a respeito da herança da tribo de Zebulão: "Zebulão residirá junto à costa marítima e estará junto à costa onde ancoram os navios; e sua parte remota será pelos lados de Sídon." (Gên 49:13) Visto que Sídon encontrava-se ao N de Israel e visto que o território de Zebulão seria em direção a Sídon, a localização do território de Zebulão seria setentrional. Embora não confinasse diretamente com o mar, a região designada a Zebulão ficava entre o mar da Galileia ao L e o Mediterrâneo ao O, e assim dava aos zebulonitas fácil acesso a ambas essas massas de água. Por isso podiam facilmente empenhar-se em intercâmbio comercial, a que talvez aludam as palavras de bênção de Moisés: "Alegra-te, ó Zebulão, na tua saída." — De 33:18.

Na época em que continuava em Silo a distribuição da Terra da Promessa, a terceira sorte saiu para Zebulão. (Jos 18:8; 19:10-16) Para ajudar na divisão daquela terra, Elizafã, filho de Parnaque, era o divinamente designado representante da tribo de Zebulão. (Núm 34:17, 25) Depois de se terem fixado os termos territoriais, Zebulão ficou cercado por Aser (Jos 19:24, 27), Naftali (Jos 19:32-34) e Issacar.

Diversas cidades dos levitas estavam situadas no território de Zebulão. (Jos 21:7, 34, 35; 1Cr 6:63, 77) De uma delas, Naalol (Naalal), os zebulonitas deixaram de expulsar os cananeus, o que se deu também com a cidade de Quitrom. — Jz 1:30.

Notáveis Guerreiros. A tribo de Zebulão produziu guerreiros corajosos. Dez mil homens de Naftali e de Zebulão atenderam a convocação de Baraque para lutar contra as forças sob o comando de Sísera. (Jz 4:6, 10) Depois da vitória, Baraque e Débora cantaram: "Zebulão era um povo que desdenhava a sua alma até a morte." (Jz 5:18) Entre os que apoiaram Baraque havia zebulonitas "que manejam o equipamento de escrevente", evidentemente encarregados de contar e alistar os guerreiros. (Jz 5:14; compare isso com 2Rs 25:19; 2Cr 26:11.) Zebulonitas também se juntaram ao juiz Gideão em resposta à sua convocação de guerreiros. (Jz 6:34, 35) Entre os apoiadores de Davi havia 50.000 zebulonitas, homens leais que não tinham "coração dúplice". (1Cr 12:33, 38-40) Durante o reinado de Davi, os zebulonitas evidentemente tiveram uma participação notável na subjugação dos inimigos de Israel. — Sal 68:27.

Atitude para com a Adoração Verdadeira. Na segunda metade do oitavo século AEC, alguns da tribo de Zebulão humilharam-se e acataram o convite do Rei Ezequias, de Judá, para participar da celebração da Páscoa em Jerusalém. (2Cr 30:1, 10, 11, 18, 19) Séculos mais tarde, em cumprimento da profecia de Isaías (Is 9:1, 2), Cristo Jesus pregou no território do antigo Zebulão e parece ter encontrado ali ouvidos atentos. — Mt 4:13-16.

Mencionado em Visões. Na visão de Ezequiel, a designação de território de Zebulão ficava entre Issacar e Gade (Ez 48:26, 27), e um dos portões da cidade "O Próprio Jeová Está Ali" levava o nome de Zebulão. (Ez 48:33, 35) O apóstolo João, em visão, ouviu que haviam sido selados 12.000 da tribo (espiritual) de Zebulão. — Re 7:4, 8.

ZEBULONITA [De (Pertencente a) Zebulão]. Membro da tribo de Zebulão. (Núm 26:26, 27) O juiz Elom era zebulonita. — Jz 12:11, 12.

ZEDADE. Ponto no termo setentrional de Israel. (Núm 34:8; Ez 47:15) É provisoriamente identificado com Sadad, a uns 105 km ao NE de Damasco.

ZEDEQUIAS [Jeová É Justiça].

1. "Filho de Quenaaná"; falso profeta que assegurou ao Rei Acabe que ele seria bem-sucedido no seu empenho de arrancar Ramote-Gileade dos sírios. Zedequias "fez para si chifres de ferro" para ilustrar que Acabe empurraria os sírios até o extermínio deles. Depois, quando o verdadeiro profeta de Jeová, Micaías, predisse calamidade para Acabe, Zedequias deu uma bofetada em Micaías. — 1Rs 22:11, 23, 24; 2Cr 18:10, 22, 23.

2. Príncipe no tempo do Rei Jeoiaquim. — Je 36:12.

3. "Filho de Maaseias"; profeta adúltero, mentiroso, entre os exilados em Babilônia. Jeremias, profeta de Jeová, predisse que o Rei Nabucodonosor assaria Zedequias e seu associado Acabe no fogo. — Je 29:21-23.

4. Filho de Josias com sua esposa Hamutal; último dos reis de Judá a reinar em Jerusalém. Quando foi constituído em rei vassalo, o rei babilônio Nabucodonosor mudou-lhe o nome de Matanias para Zedequias. Durante os 11 anos do seu reinado, Zedequias "fazia o que era mau aos olhos de Jeová". — 2Rs 24:17-19; 2Cr 36:10-12; Je 37:1; 52:1, 2.

Em 1 Crônicas 3:15, Zedequias é alistado como "terceiro" filho de Josias. Embora fosse realmente o quarto filho em ordem de nascimento (veja 2Rs 23:30, 31; 24:18; Je 22:11), talvez fosse colocado adiante do seu irmão germano Salum (Jeoacaz) por ter governado por muito mais tempo.

Quando seu pai, o Rei Josias, foi mortalmente ferido na tentativa de rechaçar em Megido as forças egípcias sob o Faraó Neco (c. 629 AEC), Zedequias tinha cerca de nove anos de idade, ou era uns três anos mais velho do que seu sobrinho Joaquim. Naquela ocasião, o povo constituiu rei a Jeoacaz, de 23 anos, irmão germano de Zedequias. O governo de Jeoacaz durou apenas três meses, porque o Faraó Neco o removeu como rei, substituindo-o por Eliaquim (a quem se deu o novo nome de Jeoiaquim), meio-irmão, de 25 anos, de Jeoacaz e Zedequias. Após a morte de seu pai Jeoiaquim, passou a reinar Joaquim. Parece que nesta época os exércitos babilônicos sob o Rei Nabucodonosor estavam sitiando Jerusalém. Depois de reinar por três meses e dez dias, Joaquim rendeu-se ao rei de Babilônia (617 AEC). — 2Rs 23:29–24:12; 2Cr 35:20–36:10.

Os Anos Iniciais do Reinado. Subsequentemente, Nabucodonosor colocou Zedequias no trono em Jerusalém e o fez jurar em nome de Jeová. Este juramento obrigava Zedequias a ser leal como rei vassalo. — 2Cr 36:10, 11; Ez 17:12-14; compare isso com 2Cr 36:13.

Pelo visto, logo cedo no reinado de Zedequias, chegaram mensageiros de Edom, Moabe, Amom, Tiro e Sídon, talvez com a intenção de conseguir que Zedequias se juntasse a eles numa coalizão contra o Rei Nabucodonosor. (Je 27:1-3; a referência a Jeoiaquim no versículo 1 talvez seja erro de quem o transcreveu, colocando-o em lugar de Zedequias; veja NM n.) As Escrituras não revelam o que os mensageiros conseguiram. É possível que sua missão tenha fracassado, visto que Jeremias instou com Zedequias e seus súditos a permanecer em submissão ao rei de Babilônia e também apresentou cangas aos mensageiros, para simbolizar que as nações das quais eles procediam também deviam sujeitar-se a Nabucodonosor. — Je 27:2-22.

Foi também logo cedo no seu reinado que Zedequias (por um motivo que a Bíblia não declara) enviou Elasá e Gemarias a Babilônia. Se este incidente tiver sido apresentado em ordem cronológica, isto aconteceu então no quarto ano do reinado de Zedequias. — Je 28:1, 16, 17; 29:1-3.

O próprio Zedequias foi a Babilônia no quarto ano do seu reinado. Provavelmente foi para apresentar o tributo e assim assegurar a Nabucodonosor sua contínua lealdade como rei vassalo. Naquela ocasião, Zedequias foi acompanhado pelo seu intendente Seraías, a quem o profeta Jeremias havia confiado um rolo que apresentava o julgamento de Jeová contra Babilônia. — Je 51:59-64.

Cerca de um ano depois, Ezequiel começou a servir qual profeta entre os judeus exilados em Babilônia. (Ez 1:1-3; veja 2Rs 24:12, 17.) No sexto mês do sexto ano de Zedequias como rei (612 AEC), Ezequiel teve uma visão que revelou as práticas idólatras, inclusive a adoração do deus Tamuz e do Sol, realizadas em Jerusalém. — Ez 8:1-17.

Rebela-se Contra Nabucodonosor. Aproximadamente três anos mais tarde (c. 609 AEC), contrário à palavra de Jeová por meio de Jeremias e o juramento que o próprio rei fizera em nome de Jeová, Zedequias rebelou-se contra Nabucodonosor e pediu ao Egito ajuda militar. (2Rs 24:20; 2Cr 36:13; Je 52:3; Ez 17:15) Isto fez com que os exércitos babilônicos sob Nabucodonosor viessem contra Jerusalém. O sítio da cidade começou "no nono ano, no décimo mês, no décimo dia do mês". — Ez 24:1-6.

Pode ter sido no começo deste sítio que Zedequias mandou "Pasur, filho de Malquijá [Malquias], e Sofonias, filho de Maaseias, o sacerdote", a Jeremias, para indagar de Jeová se Nabucodonosor se retiraria de Jerusalém. A palavra de Jeová dada por meio de Jeremias foi que a cidade e seus habitantes sofreriam calamidade às mãos dos babilônios. (Je 21:1-10) Parece que Jeremias, depois disso, seguindo a orientação divina, foi pessoalmente a Zedequias para avisá-lo de que Jerusalém seria destruída e que o rei seria levado a Babilônia, para morrer ali em paz. — Je 34:1-7.

Na sitiada Jerusalém, Zedequias e seus príncipes acharam aconselhável fazer algo para acatar a lei de Jeová e obter o Seu favor. Embora não fosse ano do jubileu, concluíram um pacto para libertar os seus escravos hebreus da servidão. Mais tarde, violaram este pacto por escravizar aqueles que haviam libertado. (Je 34:8-22) Isto parece ter ocorrido na ocasião em que uma força militar do Egito veio em defesa de Jerusalém, fazendo com que os babilônios levantassem temporariamente o sítio para enfrentar a ameaça egípcia. (Je 37:5) Evidentemente acreditando que os babilônios seriam derrotados e ficariam incapazes de recomeçar o sítio, aqueles que haviam libertado escravos hebreus achavam que havia passado o perigo, e, portanto, puseram os escravos hebreus novamente em servidão.

Durante este período geral, Zedequias mandou "Jeucal, filho de Selemias, e Sofonias, filho de Maaseias, o sacerdote, a Jeremias", com o pedido que o profeta orasse a Jeová em favor do povo, evidentemente para que não viesse a predita destruição de Jerusalém. Mas a resposta de Jeová, conforme transmitida por Jeremias, mostrou que o julgamento divino continuava imutável. Os caldeus voltariam e destruiriam Jerusalém. — Je 37:3-10.

Mais tarde, quando Jeremias decidiu sair de Jerusalém a fim de ir a Benjamim, ele foi detido no Portão de Benjamim e acusado falsamente de se bandear para os caldeus. Embora Jeremias negasse a acusação, Irijá, o oficial que tinha a supervisão, não lhe deu atenção, mas levou o profeta aos príncipes. Isto resultou em Jeremias ser encarcerado na casa de Jeonatã. Depois de ter passado bastante tempo e Jerusalém evidentemente ter sido novamente sitiada pelos babilônios, Zedequias mandou chamar Jeremias. Em resposta à indagação do rei, Jeremias disse a Zedequias que este seria entregue às mãos do rei de Babilônia. Quando Jeremias rogou para que não fosse devolvido à casa de Jeonatã, Zedequias concedeu-lhe o pedido e mandou pô-lo em custódia no Pátio da Guarda. — Je 37:11-21; 32:1-5.

O que indica que Zedequias era um governante fracalhão é que, mais tarde, quando os príncipes pediram que Jeremias fosse morto, por supostamente enfraquecer o moral do povo sitiado, Zede-quias disse: “Eis que está nas vossas mãos. Pois não há nada em que o próprio rei possa prevalecer contra vós.” Todavia, depois, Zedequias concedeu a Ebede-Meleque que resgatasse Jeremias e mandou que Ebede-Meleque levasse consigo 30 homens para ajudá-lo. Mais tarde, Zedequias teve novamente uma audiência particular com Jeremias. Ele assegurou ao profeta que não o mataria, nem o entregaria às mãos dos que procuravam matá-lo. Mas Zedequias temia represálias dos judeus que se haviam bandeado para os caldeus, e, portanto, não aceitou o conselho inspirado de Jeremias, de se entregar aos príncipes de Babilônia. Numa demonstração adicional de medo, o rei pediu que Jeremias não revelasse o assunto da sua conversa particular aos suspeitosos príncipes. — Je 38:1-28.

A Queda de Jerusalém. Por fim (em 607 AEC), “no décimo primeiro ano de Zedequias, no quarto mês, no nono dia do mês”, abriu-se uma brecha em Jerusalém. Zedequias e os homens de guerra passaram a fugir de noite. Alcançados nas planícies desérticas de Jericó, Zedequias foi levado a Nabucodonosor em Ribla. Os filhos de Zedequias foram mortos diante dos seus olhos. Visto que Zedequias na época tinha apenas uns 32 anos, os meninos devem ter sido bem jovens. Depois de presenciar a morte dos filhos, Zedequias foi cegado, preso com grilhões de cobre e levado a Babilônia, onde morreu na casa de custódia. — 2Rs 25:2-7; Je 39:2-7; 44:30; 52:6-11; compare isso com Je 24:8-10; Ez 12:11-16; 21:25-27.

5. Filho de Jeconias (Joaquim), mas, pelo visto, não um dos sete filhos que lhe nasceram enquanto era prisioneiro em Babilônia. — 1Cr 3:16-18.

6. Sacerdote ou antepassado de um, entre os que atestaram com selo o “arranjo fidedigno” elaborado durante a governadoria de Neemias. — Ne 9:38; 10:1, 8.

ZEEBE [Lobo]. Príncipe de Midiã, nas forças que Gideão e os israelitas derrotaram. Depois de inicialmente perderem, Zeebe e seu príncipe associado, Orebe, fugiram, sendo capturados e mortos pelos efraimitas. O tanque de vinho onde Zeebe foi morto passou a ser chamado pelo nome dele. — Jz 6:33; 7:23-25; 8:1-3; Sal 83:11.

ZEFATA. Vale perto de Maressa, onde Jeová habilitou as forças do Rei Asa, de Judá, a derrotar as de Zerá, o etíope (967 AEC). (2Cr 14:9-12) Zefata parece ser um dos vales ao N de Maressa. A Septuaginta grega foi traduzida para rezar “no vale ao norte de Maresa” (Bagster), mas “Zefata” ocorre no texto massorético hebraico.

ZEFATE [possivelmente duma raiz que significa “vigiar”]. Cidade real cananeia na parte sulina do território de Judá, aparentemente ao S de Arade, capturada pelas forças conjuntas de Judá e de Simeão. (Jz 1:16, 17; compare isso com Jos 15:30; 19:4.) A cidade recebeu o novo nome de “Hormá”, que significa “Devotamento à Destruição”. Esta cidade, assim como as outras cidades dos cananeus, havia sido colocada ‘sob proscrição’ por Jeová e devia ser devotada à destruição. (De 7:1-4) As tribos de Judá e de Simeão aplicaram então os termos desta proscrição a Zefata. Zefata talvez fosse a principal cidade cananeia daquele distrito ou região. — Veja HORMÁ.

ZEFÔ. Terceiro filho mencionado de Elifaz; neto de Esaú e xeque duma tribo edomita. — Gên 36:10, 11, 15; 1Cr 1:36.

ZEFOM. Primeiro filho mencionado de Gade e fundador da família dos zefonitas; também chamado Zifiom. — Gên 46:16; Núm 26:15.

ZEFONITAS [De (Pertencentes a) Zefom]. Família descendente de Gade através de Zefom. — Núm 26:15.

ZELA [possivelmente duma raiz que significa “costela; lado”]. Cidade em Benjamim. (Jos 18:21, 28) Os ossos de Saul e de Jonatã foram enterrados em Zela. Anteriormente, o pai de Saul, Quis, havia sido sepultado ali. (2Sa 21:14) Desconhece-se sua localização exata. Alguns peritos pensam que “Zela”, em Josué, devia ser combinado com o nome que segue, “Ha-Elefe”; todavia, veja HA-ELEFE.

ZELEQUE. Guerreiro amonita que se juntou “aos poderosos das forças militares” de Davi. — 1Cr 11:26, 39; 2Sa 23:37.

ZELO. Veja CIUMENTO, CIÚME.

ZELOFEADE [nome que possivelmente significa “Sombra (Abrigo) do Pavor”]. Descendente de Manassés através de Maquir, Gileade e Hefer. (Núm 26:29-33) Zelofeade morreu durante a peregrinação de 40 anos no ermo, não junto com “os que se combinaram contra Jeová na assembleia de Corá, porém, morreu pelo seu próprio pecado”. (Núm 27:3) Não tinha filhos varões, mas deixou cinco filhas: Maala, Noa, Hogla, Milca e Tirza, todas as quais sobreviveram para entrar na Terra da Promessa. — Núm 27:1; 1Cr 7:15.

Esta situação especial suscitou problemas a respeito de herança. Quando as filhas de Zelofeade solicitaram o quinhão de terras de seu pai em Manassés, Moisés levou o caso delas perante Jeová. A decisão judicial de Deus foi que as filhas que não tivessem irmãos deviam receber a herança da família. (Núm 27:1-9; Jos 17:3, 4) Mais tarde, estipulou-se que tais filhas tinham de casar-se com homens da tribo de seu pai, para que a herança permanecesse no domínio daquela tribo. — Núm 36:1-12.

ZELOSO, O. Apelido que distinguia o apóstolo Simão do apóstolo Simão Pedro, e evidentemente correspondia ao termo "Cananita", usado por Mateus e por Marcos. (Mt 10:4; Mr 3:18; Lu 6:15; At 1:13) Ser Simão chamado de "o zeloso" não significa necessariamente que ele em certa época estivesse associado com o grupo político chamado de zelotes. O nome pode ter sido simplesmente um apelido adequado à sua personalidade.

ZELZA. Lugar em Benjamim. Como um sinal em confirmação da liderança de Saul sobre Israel, ele devia encontrar-se com dois homens "perto do túmulo de Raquel, no território de Benjamim, em Zelza", e receber uma mensagem sobre as jumentas perdidas de seu pai. (1Sa 10:1, 2, 7) A Septuaginta grega foi traduzida para rezar "pulando muito", em vez de "Zelza", embora este último termo ocorra no texto massorético hebraico. Raquel foi sepultada num ponto desconhecido 'em caminho de Betel a Belém' (Gên 35:16-20), e o lugar de Zelza continua indeterminado.

ZEMARAIM.

1. Cidade benjamita não identificada mencionada junto com Betel. (Jos 18:21, 22) Sugeriu-se que era um lugar ao NE de Betel.

2. Um monte na região montanhosa de Efraim. De cima deste monte falou o Rei Abias, de Judá, salientando que Jeroboão e as dez tribos de Israel haviam rejeitado o pacto do reino que Jeová fez com Davi. Pelo visto, Betel ficava na mesma vizinhança. (2Cr 13:4, 19) É possível que o monte Zemaraim recebesse o nome da cidade benjamita de Zemaraim, mas a localização exata do monte continua indeterminada.

ZEMAREU. Família ou tribo que descendeu de Canaã, filho de Cã. (Gên 10:15, 18; 1Cr 1:13, 16) A menção deste povo cananeu entre o "arvadeu" (ligado a Arvade ao largo da costa fenícia) e o "hamateu" (provavelmente associado com Hamate, na Síria) indica que os zemareus se estabeleceram ao longo da costa no N da Fenícia. Segundo uma emenda, Ezequiel 27:8 menciona "homens experientes [os mais hábeis; os sábios] de Semer" (BV; CBC; MC), que alguns sugerem ser a cidade dos zemareus e provisoriamente identificam com Tell Kazel, a uns 35 km ao NE de Trípoli. Todavia, o texto hebraico reza aqui: "Teus sábios [peritos], ó Tiro." (Al; BJ; IBB) Indicando uma localização diferente, outros relacionam os zemareus com Sumra, uma cidade litorânea entre Trípoli e Arvade.

ZEMIRA [possivelmente duma raiz que significa "melodia"]. Cabeça de família na tribo de Benjamim; filho ou descendente de Bequer. — 1Cr 7:6, 8, 9.

ZENÃ. Cidade na região da Sefelá, de Judá. (Jos 15:33, 37) Muitos peritos acham provável tratar-se da Zaanã de Miqueias 1:11 e provisoriamente a identificam com ʽAraq el-Kharba, a uns 6 km ao NO de Laquis.

ZENAS. Conhecido de Paulo, a respeito de quem ele disse a Tito: "Supre cuidadosamente a Zenas . . . e a Apolo, para a viagem deles." (Tit 3:13) Naquela época, Zenas evidentemente estava na ilha de Creta, mas não se declara onde ele e Apolo iam, quer a Nicópolis, onde Paulo esperava encontrar-se com Tito (Tit 3:12), quer a outro lugar. Paulo disse que Zenas era "versado na Lei [mosaica]", o que pode significar que era ou judeu ou prosélito que se convertera ao cristianismo. Seu nome grego talvez favoreça esta última conclusão, mas de modo algum de maneira decisiva, visto que, no primeiro século EC, não era incomum que judeus tivessem nome grego ou romano. Outros exemplos assim incluem Justo, Dorcas e Marcos. — At 1:23; 9:36; 12:25.

ZEQUER [forma abreviada de Zacarias]. Descendente de Jeiel, "pai" de Gibeão. (1Cr 8:29-31) Zequer é abreviação de Zacarias, nome que ocorre no relato paralelo em 1 Crônicas 9:37.

ZER. Cidade fortificada no território de Naftali. (Jos 19:32, 35) Desconhece-se sua localização.

ZERÁ [possivelmente uma forma abreviada de Zeraías].

1. Xeque edomita. Zerá era filho de Reuel e neto de Esaú e Basemate, filha de Ismael. (Gên 36:3, 4, 13, 17; 1Cr 1:37) Possivelmente trata-se do N.º 2.

2. Pai do segundo rei edomita, Jobabe; ele era de Bozra. (Gên 36:33; 1Cr 1:44) Possivelmente trata-se do N.º 1.

3. Filho de Judá e Tamar; irmão gêmeo de Peres. (Gên 38:27-30; Mt 1:3) Zerá foi um dos que "vieram a Jacó ao Egito". (Gên 46:12, 26) Seus cinco filhos (1Cr 2:4, 6) passaram a formar uma família tribal de Judá (Núm 26:20), que por fim incluiu pessoas tais como Acã (Jos 7:1, 17, 18, 24; 22:20), dois dos líderes do exército de Davi (1Cr 27:11, 13) e alguns dos moradores pós-exílicos de Jerusalém (1Cr 9:3, 6; Ne 11:22, 24).

4. Filho de Simeão e fundador duma família nessa tribo. (1Cr 4:24; Núm 26:12, 13) Ele é chamado Zoar em Gênesis 46:10 e Êxodo 6:15.

5. Descendente de Gérson (Gersom), filho de Levi. (1Cr 6:16, 20, 21; compare isso com Gên 46:11.) Em 1 Crônicas 6:41 talvez se mencione a mesma pessoa.

6. Etíope, ou cusita, que conduziu um enorme exército de um milhão de homens e 300 carros a Judá durante o reinado de Asa, em 967 AEC. Zerá sofreu derrota, e suas forças em fuga foram perseguidas e abatidas “até Gerar”. (2Cr 14:1, 9-15) Continua incerta a identificação de Zerá com qualquer secularmente conhecido governante egípcio ou etíope.

ZERAÍAS [Jah Irradiou; Já Brilhou].

1. Descendente de Arão através de Eleazar e Fineias, na linhagem sumo sacerdotal. — 1Cr 6:3, 4, 6, 50, 51; Esd 7:4.

2. Pai de Elieó-Enai, que encabeçava a casa paterna de Paate-Moabe, da qual 200 varões retornaram a Jerusalém com Esdras, em 468 AEC. — Esd 8:1, 4.

ZERAÍTAS [De (Pertencentes a) Zerá].

1. Descendentes de Zerá, filho de Simeão. — Núm 26:12, 13; veja ZERÁ N.º 4.

2. Família tribal que descendeu de Zerá, filho de Judá. — Núm 26:20; Jos 7:17; 1Cr 27:11, 13; veja ZERÁ N.º 3.

ZEREDA.

1. Cidade natal de Jeroboão, primeiro rei do reino setentrional de Israel. (1Rs 11:26) A única indicação da sua localização é a declaração: “E havia Jeroboão, filho de Nebate, efraimita de Zereda.” Em geral é identificada com Deir Ghassana (na região de Efraim), onde uma fonte vizinha, chamada de ‘Ain Seridah, preserva o nome. Este lugar fica a uns 25 km ao SO de Siquém.

2. Menciona-se Zereda no “Distrito do Jordão” com relação à fundição de utensílios de cobre para o templo construído por Salomão. (2Cr 4:17) O texto paralelo de 1 Reis 7:46 indica que este é o mesmo lugar que Zaretã, sendo talvez uma grafia variante do nome. — Veja ZARETÃ.

ZEREDE, VALE DA TORRENTE DE. Vale de torrente em que os israelitas acamparam em caminho ao contornar a fronteira de Moabe, no fim dos 38 anos adicionais de peregrinação, desde o tempo da rebelião em Cades-Barneia. (Núm 21:12; De 2:13, 14) Em geral é identificado com o uádi el-Hasa’, o tributário mais sulino do Mar Morto. Este vale constituía a fronteira entre Moabe e Edom, e numa extensão de 56 km, desce 1.190 m para entrar no Mar Morto na extremidade SE. No alto, o vale tem uns 5 a 6 km de largura. Há ali evidência duma série de fortalezas edomitas que serviam para guardar os acessos naturais ao S do uádi el-Hasa’.

ZERERÁ. A fuga dos midianitas derrotados, perseguidos pelas forças de Gideão, é descrita como continuando “até Bete-Sita, de lá para Zererá, até as cercanias de Abel-Meolá, junto a Tabate”. — Jz 7:22.

Vinte manuscritos hebraicos rezam aqui “Zereda”, em vez de Zererá. Visto que Zereda e Zaretã são usadas em sentido paralelo em 2 Crônicas 4:17 e 1 Reis 7:46, alguns sugerem que a localização de Zererá é a mesma que a de Zaretã. — Veja ZARETÃ.

Essa localização, porém, só parece possível se a expressão “de lá para Zererá” for tomada no sentido de ‘em direção a Zererá’, visto que Zaretã parece ter estado consideravelmente ao S de Abel-Meolá. Senão, Zererá forçosamente seria considerada como situada entre Bete-Sita e Abel-Meolá; neste caso, sua localização exata é desconhecida.

ZERES. Esposa de Hamã. Zeres e os amigos de Hamã propuseram que este erigisse uma estaca de 50 côvados (22 m) de altura para pendurar nela Mordecai. (Est 5:10, 14) Mas, quando a situação começou a se inverter, Zeres, junto com os sábios de Hamã, disseram: “Se Mordecai, diante de quem principiaste a cair, é da descendência dos judeus, não prevalecerás contra ele, mas, sem falta, cairás diante dele.” — Est 6:13.

ZERETE. Primeiro filho mencionado que Hela deu à luz para Assur; da tribo de Judá. — 1Cr 4:1, 5, 7.

ZERETE-SAAR. Lugar em Rubem, situado “no monte da baixada”. (Jos 13:15, 19) É provisoriamente identificado com ez-Zarat, situado junto às fontes termais de Calírroe, na margem L do Mar Morto.

ZERI. Um dos seis filhos de Jedutum, todos músicos do templo. (1Cr 25:1, 3) Tendo como prefixo a letra hebraica yohdh, seu nome é grafado “Izri” em 1 Crônicas 25:11, onde ele é identificado como cabeça da quarta turma das 24 do serviço de músicos do templo, instituído por Davi.

ZEROR [duma raiz que significa “pederneira”]. Antepassado do Rei Saul; alistado como filho de Becorate e pai de Abiel; da tribo de Benjamim. — 1Sa 9:1.

ZERUA [duma raiz que significa “ser leproso”]. Mãe do Rei Jeroboão (I), era viúva na época em que Jeroboão começou a erguer a mão contra o Rei Salomão. — 1Rs 11:26.

ZERUIA [possivelmente duma raiz que significa “bálsamo”]. Irmã ou meia-irmã do Rei Davi, e mãe de Joabe, Abisai e Asael. Diz-se que Abigail, irmã de Zeruia, era “filha de Naás”, embora não se declare isso diretamente a respeito de Zeruia. (2Sa 17:25) Diz-se também que Zeruia e Abigail eram “irmãs” dos filhos de Jessé. (1Cr 2:16) Portanto, é possível que fossem filhas da esposa de Jessé, de um casamento anterior dela com Naás, sendo assim apenas meias-irmãs de Davi. (Veja ABIGAIL N.º 2; NAÁS N.º 2.) Pelo visto, Zeruia era consideravelmente mais velha do que Davi, porque os filhos dela parecem ter tido mais ou menos a mesma idade que Davi. O nome de Zeruia usualmente é associado com os seus três filhos, que todos eram lutadores valentes a favor de Davi. (2Sa 2:13, 18; 16:9) A única referência feita ao pai dos rapazes é que ele foi enterrado em Belém. — 2Sa 2:32.

ZETÃ [duma raiz que significa "oliva; oliveira"]. Descendente de Benjamim através de Jediael e Bilã. — 1Cr 7:6, 10.

ZETÃO [possivelmente duma raiz que significa "oliva; oliveira"]. Levita gersonita descendente de Ladã. Encabeçava uma casa paterna e foi designado para cuidar dos tesouros do templo. — 1Cr 23:7-9; 26:22.

ZETAR. Um dos sete oficiais da corte, que Assuero enviou para trazer Vasti à sua presença. — Est 1:10, 11.

ZEUS. Deus supremo dos gregos politeístas, que corresponde ao Júpiter dos romanos. Zeus era deus do céu e era encarado como controlando os ventos, as nuvens, a chuva e o trovão, exercendo seu poder sobre essas forças da natureza tanto para fins destrutivos como benéficos. O antigo poeta Homero (Ilíada, VIII, 1-25) apresenta Zeus como tendo força maior do que todos os outros deuses juntos. No entanto, Zeus não era encarado como supremo em sentido absoluto, mas às vezes era apresentado como vítima de engano e como tendo de ceder à vontade das Parcas e do Destino.

Além de relatarem os eventos do seu nascimento, da sua infância e da obtenção do trono, as lendas preocupam-se principalmente com os muitos amores de Zeus. Os relatos mitológicos contam que ele seduzia deusas e mulheres terrenas, e que gerou uma hoste de filhos ilegítimos. Paradoxalmente, relata-se que Zeus matou Jasião (um mortal) por ter cometido imoralidade com a deusa Deméter. O casamento de Zeus com Hera, além de ser prejudicado pelos muitos atos de infidelidade de Zeus, sofria muitas outras dificuldades. Diz-se que Zeus ficou tão atormentado pelos incessantes ralhos da sua esposa Hera, que ocasionalmente se queixava amargamente disso perante as deidades reunidas.

Às vezes, a adoração pura de Jeová entrava em conflito direto com a adoração do deus falso Zeus. O Rei Antíoco IV (Epifânio), na tentativa de eliminar a religião judaica, mandou que o templo em Jerusalém fosse profanado e então dedicado ao Zeus do Olimpo. Veja o livro apócrifo de 2 Macabeus 6:1, 2.

No primeiro século EC, o povo de Listra, ao ver Paulo curar um homem coxo, achava que Paulo e Barnabé eram deuses, identificando Paulo com Hermes e Barnabé com Zeus. O sacerdote de Zeus até mesmo trouxe touros e grinaldas para oferecer sacrifícios junto com a multidão. (At 14:8-13) Duas inscrições antigas, descobertas em 1909 na vizinhança de Listra, atestam a adoração desses dois deuses nesta cidade. Uma das inscrições refere-se aos "sacerdotes de Zeus", e a outra menciona "Hermes, o Grandíssimo", e "Zeus, o deus-sol". — The International Standard Bible Encyclopaedia (A Enciclopédia Bíblica Padrão Internacional), editada por J. Orr, 1960, Vol. III, p. 1944.

O navio em que Paulo, como prisioneiro, partiu da ilha de Malta tinha como figura de proa "Filhos de Zeus", isto é, os gêmeos Castor e Pólux. — At 28:11.

ZEUS, FILHOS DE. De acordo com a mitologia grega e romana, Castor e Pólux eram os filhos gêmeos de Leda e descendentes do deus Zeus (Júpiter), sendo assim chamados de Dióscuros ou "Filhos de Zeus". Entre outras coisas, eram considerados protetores dos marujos, capazes de salvar marinheiros que corriam perigo no mar. Acreditava-se que estas deidades manifestavam-se durante tempestades na forma de fogo de santelmo. O barco procedente de Alexandria, em que o prisioneiro Paulo viajou de Malta para Putéoli, em caminho para Roma, trazia a figura de proa "Filhos de Zeus". Talvez portasse a imagem ou o símbolo, bem como o nome, de Castor num lado da proa, e a correspondente representação e nome de Pólux no outro. — At 28:11.

ZIA [possivelmente duma raiz que significa "tremer; trepidar; estremecer violentamente"]. Gadita que morava em Basã. — 1Cr 5:11, 13.

ZIÁ.

1. Primeira família de netineus alistada que acompanhou os israelitas exilados de volta a Judá, em 537 AEC. — Esd 2:1, 2, 43; Ne 7:46.

2. Um de dois superintendentes dos netineus que retornaram do exílio babilônico. — Ne 11:21.

ZIBA. Servo da casa de Saul, de quem Davi, ao indagar, soube de Mefibosete, filho coxo de Jonatã. Davi trouxe Mefibosete para Jerusalém e incumbiu Ziba, seus 15 filhos e 20 servos, da herança de Mefibosete. (2Sa 9:2-12 [Julga-se em geral que a referência à "minha mesa", no versículo 11, seja um erro de escriba em lugar de "mesa de Davi"; outra possibilidade é a de que Ziba talvez estivesse repetindo as palavras exatas de Davi.]) Quando Davi fugiu de Jerusalém por causa da rebelião de Absalão, Ziba lhe trouxe suprimentos muito necessários de alimentos e de animais. No entanto, deixou Mefibosete para trás, embora este desejasse ir, e disse a Davi que Mefibosete tinha deliberadamente permanecido em Jerusalém, esperando recuperar o reino para a casa de Saul. Em resposta, sem investigar o assunto, Davi transferiu a propriedade de Mefibosete para Ziba. — 2Sa 16:1-4.

Quando Davi retornou, depois de a rebelião ter sido esmagada, Ziba achava-se entre os primeiros a saudar o rei. Daí, Mefibosete encontrou-se com Davi, cumprimentou-o pela volta, e informou-o do truque e da calúnia da parte de Ziba. À luz desta nova situação, Davi decidiu que a propriedade devia ser dividida entre Mefibosete e Ziba. Mefibosete, porém, declarou: "Que ele [Ziba] fique até com o inteiro, agora que meu senhor, o rei, veio em paz para a sua casa." — 2Sa 19:17, 24-30.

ZIBEÃO [Hiena; possivelmente: Hiena Pequena]. Xeque na terra de Seir. (Gên 36:20, 29, 30; 1Cr 1:38, 40b) Sua neta Oolibama casou-se com Esaú. (Gên 36:2, 14, 24, 25) Quanto à explicação sugerida do motivo de Zibeão ser descrito como heveu e como horeu, veja HOREU.

ZIBIA [Gazela]. Cabeça de família na tribo de Benjamim. Filho de Saraim com sua esposa Hodes. — 1Cr 8:1, 8-10. Veja também ZIBIÁ.

ZIBIÁ [Fêmea de Gazela]. Mãe do Rei Jeoás, de Judá, presumivelmente esposa do Rei Acazias, e, portanto, nora de Atalia. (2Rs 11:1, 2; 2Cr 24:1) Zibiá era de Berseba. Nada se diz sobre o que aconteceu com ela no expurgo da casa real de Judá promovido por Atalia.

ZICLAGUE. Conforme originalmente consignada, tratava-se duma cidade simeonita encravada no S de Judá. (Jos 15:21, 31; 19:1, 2, 5; 1Cr 4:24-30) Mais tarde, Ziclague ficou sob controle filisteu. Aquis, rei de Gate, deu-a ao fugitivo Davi como lugar de morada (e, dali em diante, ela tornou-se posse dos reis de Judá). (1Sa 27:6) Os amalequitas atacaram e incendiaram a cidade, levando cativos, incluindo as esposas de Davi, Ainoã e Abigail. Depois de derrotar os incursores e recuperar os cativos, bem como as coisas tomadas, Davi, de Ziclague, enviou alguns dos despojos da batalha para seus amigos, anciãos de Judá em várias cidades. (1Sa 30) Muitos homens poderosos, armados, juntaram-se a Davi em Ziclague, e foi ali que ele recebeu a notícia da morte do Rei Saul. (2Sa 1:1, 2; 4:10; 1Cr 12:1, 2, 20-22) Depois do exílio babilônico, alguns dos filhos de Judá se fixaram nesta cidade. (Ne 11:25, 28) Sugeriram-se diversos lugares para a identificação de Ziclague, mas Y. Aharoni e outros preferem identificá-la com Tell esh-Shariʽah (Tel Seraʽ), a uns 7 km ao L de Gerar e 22 km ao NO de Berseba.

ZICRI [forma abreviada de Zacarias, que significa "Jeová Lembrou-se"].

1. Terceiro filho mencionado de Izar; neto de Coate, levita. — Êx 6:18, 21.

2, 3, 4. Três cabeças de família na tribo de Benjamim, moradores de Jerusalém. Eram filhos ou descendentes respectivamente de Simei, Sasaque e Jeroão. — 1Cr 8:1, 19, 21, 23, 25, 27, 28.

5. Filho de Asafe e antepassado do músico pós-exílico Matanias. (1Cr 9:15) Em outros lugares talvez seja chamado Zabdi (Ne 11:17) e Zacur. — 1Cr 25:2, 10; Ne 12:35.

6. Descendente levita de Moisés através de Eliézer; pai ou antepassado do Selomote que no reino de Davi foi encarregado dos tesouros das coisas capturadas em guerra. — 1Cr 26:25-27; 23:15, 17.

ZIFE.

1. Descendente de Judá através de Jealelel. — 1Cr 4:15, 16.

2. Cidade não identificada na parte sulina de Judá. — Jos 15:21, 24.

3. Cidade na região montanhosa de Judá. (Jos 15:20, 48, 55, 57) Aparentemente trata-se do Zife de quem Mesa 'foi pai'. (1Cr 2:42) Os geógrafos em geral a relacionam com Tell Zif, a uns 6 km ao SE de Hébron. Davi refugiou-se do Rei Saul no ermo em torno de Zife, e os homens da cidade duas vezes revelaram seu paradeiro ao rei. (1Sa 23:14, 15, 19, 24, 29; 26:1, 2; compare isso com Sal 54:cab.) Aparentemente foi esta a Zife que mais tarde foi fortificada por Roboão. — 2Cr 11:5-8.

ZIFIOM. Veja ZEFOM.

ZIFITAS [De (Pertencentes a) Zife]. Habitantes de Zife na região montanhosa de Judá. — Salmo 54:cab.; veja ZIFE N.º 3.

ZIFROM. Lugar no termo setentrional da Terra da Promessa. (Núm 34:9) Não se conhece ao certo sua localização exata, embora Y. Aharoni o identifique com Hawwarim, a uns 100 km ao SSE de Hamate.

bíblico. Ela era a mãe de Tubalcaim e da irmã dele, Naamá. Lameque compôs um poema para suas esposas Ada e Zilá. — Gên 4:19-24.

2. Valente maioral manassita que se juntou às forças de Davi em Ziclague. — 1Cr 12:19-21.

ZILPA. Serva de Leia e uma das esposas secundárias de Jacó. Zilpa havia sido serva de Labão, pai de Leia, até que Leia e Jacó se casaram em 1774 AEC, quando ela foi dada a Leia. (Gên 29:24) Depois que Leia teve quatro filhos e pensou que não teria mais nenhum, ela deu Zilpa a Jacó como esposa secundária. Zilpa então deu à luz Gade e Aser, os quais, por sua vez, tiveram muitos filhos. (Gên 30:9-13; 35:26; 37:2; 46:16-18) Zilpa continuou na família de Jacó nas muitas viagens desta. — Gên 32:22; 33:1, 2.

ZIM.

1. Ermo percorrido pelos israelitas em caminho para Canaã; não é sinônimo do ermo de Sim. (Núm 33:11, 36) No segundo ano após a partida de Israel do Egito, 12 israelitas espiaram a Terra da Promessa, partindo do ermo de Zim. Naquela ocasião, os israelitas estavam acampados em Cades. (Núm 13:21, 26) Mais tarde, depois de terem peregrinado por anos no ermo, os israelitas chegaram a Cades, no ermo de Zim, pela segunda vez. Esta região do ermo de Zim era desolada, agreste, sem figo, vinhas, romã e água. (Núm 20:1-5; compare isso com Núm 20:28; 33:38; De 1:3.) Foi com relação às águas de Meribá, em Cades, no ermo de Zim, que Moisés e Arão deixaram de santificar Jeová perante o povo e perderam o privilégio de entrar na Terra da Promessa. — Núm 27:12-14; De 32:50, 51.

O ermo de Zim ficava "contíguo a Edom" (logo ao O de Edom) e na extremidade SE do território designado a Judá. (Núm 34:3; Jos 15:1) Visto que Cades se encontrava nas regiões ermas de Zim e de Parã (Núm 13:26; 20:1), é possível que estas fossem regiões ermas contíguas, ou que Zim talvez fizesse parte do mais extenso ermo de Parã.

2. "Zim" aparece duas vezes sem o termo "ermo". Nestes casos, pode designar uma cidade no S de Judá, atualmente não identificada, entre a subida de Acrabim e Cades-Barneia, da qual o ermo ao redor derivou seu nome. Ou pode referir-se ao próprio ermo de Zim. — Núm 34:4; Jos 15:3.

ZIMA. Levita gersonita. (1Cr 6:20) Possivelmente é o mesmo Zima mencionado em 1 Crônicas 6:42. Se esta genealogia estiver omitindo muitos nomes (conforme essas listas costumam fazer), ele pode ser também o mencionado em 2 Crônicas 29:12, cujo descendente Joá ajudou a limpar o templo nos dias de Ezequias.

ZINA. Descendente de Gérson através de Simei. (1Cr 23:6, 7, 10) Ele é chamado de Zizá em 1 Crônicas 23:11. — Veja ZIZÁ.

ZINRÃ. Primeiro mencionado dos seis filhos que Quetura deu à luz para Abraão. Zinrã e seus cinco irmãos germanos receberam presentes e foram enviados "para a terra do Oriente". (Gên 25:1, 2, 6; 1Cr 1:32) Alguns conjecturam que os descendentes de Zinrã estavam associados com Zabram, uma cidade situada ao O de Meca, junto à margem arábica do Mar Vermelho, ou com o lugar Zinri mencionado em Jeremias 25:25.

ZINRI.

1. Filho de Zerá e neto de Judá. — 1Cr 2:4, 6.

2. Maioral simeonita, filho de Salu, que levou Cosbi, a midianita, ao acampamento de Israel, cometendo fornicação com ela na sua própria tenda. Por causa disso, Zinri e Cosbi foram mortos por Fineias, com a aprovação de Jeová. Esta pronta ação acabou com o flagelo que já havia causado a morte de milhares de israelitas culpados. — Núm 25:6-8, 14-18.

3. Quinto rei do reino de dez tribos de Israel. Zinri governou em Tirza por sete dias, mais ou menos em 951 AEC. Fora antes disso chefe da metade dos carros sob o Rei Elá, mas quando o exército estava ausente em Gibetom, e o Rei Elá ficara para trás, Zinri matou-o e todos os demais da casa de Baasa; e fez-se rei. Seu governo foi muito curto, porque o exército fez Onri rei e logo retornou para sitiar Tirza, em vista do que Zinri incendiou a casa do rei estando ele dentro dela. Zinri é conhecido por fazer o que era mau aos olhos de Jeová. (1Rs 16:3, 4, 9-20) As últimas palavras de Jezabel relembravam as consequências que sobrevieram a Zinri. Quando Jeú entrou triunfantemente em Jezreel, ela zombou desde a janela: "Foi tudo bem com Zinri, matador de seu senhor?" — 2Rs 9:30, 31.

4. Descendente de Saul e Jonatã. (1Cr 8:33-36; 9:42) Foi sugerido que ele talvez fosse o N.º 3; o motivo é que há a possibilidade de que este Zinri (N.º 3) estava tentando recuperar a realeza como membro da casa de Saul.

5. Aparentemente, um lugar geográfico desconhecido; às vezes, mas sem boa autoridade, é relacionado com Zinrã, filho de Abraão. — Je 25:25; Gên 25:1, 2.

ZIOR [duma raiz que significa "ser insignificante"]. Cidade na região montanhosa de Judá. (Jos 15:20, 48, 54) É identificada com Si'ir, a uns 7 km ao NNE de Hébron.

ZIPOR [Pássaro]. Pai do Rei Balaque, de Moabe. — Núm 22:2, 4, 10, 16; 23:18; Jos 24:9; Jz 11:25.

ZÍPORA [Pássaro; ou, possivelmente: Passarinho]. Esposa de Moisés. Zípora conheceu Moisés junto a um poço, quando ela e suas seis irmãs davam água aos rebanhos de seu pai. Quando apareceram certos pastores que, como de costume, tentaram enxotar as moças, Moisés ajudou-as, dando ele mesmo de beber aos rebanhos. Por esta bondade, foi convidado ao lar de Zípora, e, por fim o pai dela, o sacerdote Jetro, deu-a em casamento a Moisés. (Êx 2:16-21) Zípora deu dois filhos a Moisés: Gersom e Eliézer. — Êx 2:22; 18:3, 4.

Quando Jeová mandou que Moisés voltasse ao Egito, Zípora e os dois filhos deles passaram a acompanhá-lo. Ao longo do caminho, ocorreu um incidente muito grave, dizendo sobre isso o relato um tanto obscuro: "Ora, sucedeu na estrada, na pousada, que Jeová [LXX: "o anjo de Jeová"] foi encontrá-lo e procurava um modo de entregá-lo à morte. Por fim, Zípora tomou uma pederneira e cortou o prepúcio de seu filho, e fez que tocasse nos pés dele e disse: 'É porque és para mim um noivo de sangue.' Por conseguinte, ele o largou. Naquele tempo ela disse: 'Noivo de sangue', por causa da circuncisão." — Êx 4:24-26.

Os peritos têm proposto muitas interpretações desta passagem, das quais algumas foram incorporadas em traduções modernas da Bíblia. (Veja ALA, BMD, BLH, BV, CBC, IBB, JB, LEB, MC, NE, RS, So, bem como a Zürcher Bibel alemã, a Bover-Cantera em espanhol e as versões Crampon, Lienart e Segond em francês.) Essas interpretações tentam resolver a questão de se a vida de Moisés ou a do filho estava ameaçada, se Zípora tocou os pés de Moisés, ou os pés do filho, ou os pés do anjo com o prepúcio. Aventam também opiniões sobre o motivo de Zípora dizer (e a quem ela disse): "És para mim um noivo de sangue."

Parece que era a vida do filho que estava em perigo, em vista do que a lei da circuncisão declarava em Gênesis 17:14; que Zípora circuncidou o menino porque se dava conta de que o assunto precisava ser endireitado; que ela lançou o prepúcio aos pés do anjo que ameaçava a vida do menino, para demonstrar seu acatamento da lei de Jeová; que Zípora se dirigiu a Jeová por meio do Seu anjo representativo ao exclamar: "És para mim um noivo de sangue", fazendo-o para mostrar que aceitava sua posição de esposa no pacto da circuncisão, com Jeová por esposo. — Veja Je 31:32.

No entanto, não há meios de se resolver biblicamente essas questões com certeza. A leitura literal do hebraico antigo, neste trecho, acha-se encoberta pelas expressões idiomáticas empregadas há quase 3.500 anos. Este é o motivo de traduções literais (NM, Ro, Yg) e outras (Al, AS, KJ, Da, Dy, JP, Mo, Le, PIB), inclusive a antiga Septuaginta grega, não serem claras neste assunto.

Pelo visto, Zípora voltou para visitar os pais, pois, após o Êxodo, Zípora e seus dois filhos acompanharam Jetro de volta para junto de Moisés, no acampamento no ermo. (Êx 18:1-6) A presença recém-notada de Zípora ali, pelo visto, suscitou o ciúme de Miriã, irmã de Moisés, e esta (junto com Arão) aproveitou-se da procedência cusita de Zípora como desculpa para se queixar de Moisés. (Núm 12:1) Isto não indica que Zípora tinha morrido e que Moisés se tinha casado de novo com uma etíope, como se argui comumente, pois, embora o termo "cusita" geralmente se refira aos etíopes, pode também abranger as pessoas da Arábia. — Veja CUS N.º 2; CUSITA.

ZIVE. Nome do segundo mês lunar do calendário sagrado; o oitavo do calendário secular dos israelitas. (1Rs 6:1, 37) Corresponde a parte de abril e a parte de maio. O comentário sobre 1 Reis 6:1, em Soncino Books of the Bible (Livros da Bíblia, de Soncino), diz a respeito do mês de zive: "Agora conhecido como íiar, o segundo mês depois de nisã. Era chamado de zive (brilho) porque cai na época do ano em que a terra fica 'abrilhantada' de florescências e de flores." (Obra editada por A. Cohen, Londres, 1950) O nome íiar encontra-se no Talmude judaico e em outras obras pós-exílicas.

Neste mês, a colheita da cevada já é feita na parte colinosa do país e a colheita do trigo está em andamento nas baixadas. Os morros da Galileia estão cheios de flores. É durante este mês que começa a época do estio, e as nuvens da madrugada logo desaparecem no calor do dia. Durante esta época, as plantas dependem do orvalho noturno, e aguardam o fim da estação seca em outubro. — Os 6:4; Is 18:4.

O dia 14 de zive oferecia uma segunda oportunidade para os israelitas celebrarem a Páscoa, caso tivessem sido impedidos de celebrá-la em 14 de nisã, devido à ausência ou à impureza cerimonial. — Núm 9:9-13; 2Cr 30:2, 3.

Foi no mês de zive que Salomão iniciou a construção do templo, e, quase 500 anos depois, no mesmo mês, Zorobabel começou a obra de reconstrução do templo. — 1Rs 6:1; Esd 3:8.

ZIZ. Passo pelo qual os exércitos de Moabe, de Amom e dos amonins vieram contra Judá durante o reinado do Rei Jeosafá (936-c. 911 AEC). Costuma ser identificado com o uádi Hasasa (Nahal Hazezon), a uns 15 km ao SE do lugar sugerido de Tecoa e a uns 10 km ao NO de En-Gedi. — 2Cr 20:1, 2, 16, 20.

ZIZA.

1. Filho do Rei Roboão com Maacá, neta de Absalão. Quando a sucessão régia foi dada ao irmão de Ziza, Abias, Ziza recebeu de Roboão presentes de cidades, alimentos e esposas. — 2Cr 11:20, 22, 23.

2. Um dos maiorais simeonitas que expandiram seus pastos por anexar território camita e destruir os habitantes durante o reinado de Ezequias; filho de Sifi. — 1Cr 4:24, 37-41.

ZIZÁ. Segundo filho alistado de Simei, cabeça duma casa paterna de levitas gersonitas, encarregado de certos deveres durante o reinado de Davi. (1Cr 23:6, 7, 10, 11) No versículo 10, o nome é grafado Zina no texto massorético, Zizá na Septuaginta grega e na Vulgata latina.

ZOÃ. Antiga cidade egípcia, construída sete anos depois de Hébron, portanto, que já existia por volta da época em que Abraão entrou em Canaã (1943 AEC). (Núm 13:22; Gên 12:5; 13:18) O nome bíblico Zoã corresponde ao nome egípcio (d'n·t) de uma cidade situada na parte nordeste da região do Delta, a uns 56 km ao SO de Port Said. Mais conhecida pelo seu nome grego, Tânis (perto da atual San el-Hagar), ficava no braço do Nilo conhecido como braço tanítico.

No Salmo 78:12, 43, "o campo de Zoã" é usado em paralelo com a "terra do Egito", ao narrar os atos miraculosos de Jeová a favor de Israel, os quais resultaram no Êxodo. Isto tem feito com que alguns peritos sustentem que as reuniões de Moisés com Faraó ocorreram em Zoã. De modo similar, tem levado a esforços de relacionar Zoã (Tânis) com a cidade de Ramessés, e também com a cidade de Avaris, mencionada por Mâneto no seu relato sobre os reis chamados hicsos. Assim, muitas das atuais obras de referência dizem que o nome Zoã passou a ser Avaris sob os "hicsos", sendo depois mudado para Ramessés sob a dinastia dos Ramsés, finalmente revertendo para Zoã (na forma grega de Tânis). Pode-se observar, porém, que a Bíblia usa coerentemente o nome Zoã como aplicado antes do Êxodo (remontando ao tempo de Abraão), na época do Êxodo e depois até o oitavo, o sétimo e o sexto séculos AEC (na época dos profetas Isaías e Ezequiel).

Se Zoã fosse o lugar das entrevistas de Moisés com Faraó, isto certamente forneceria algum indício sobre o ponto de partida da rota do Êxodo. No entanto, diversos fatores lançam dúvida sobre este ponto de vista. Para que o nome Zoã pudesse referir-se a tal lugar, seria preciso encarar a expressão "o campo de Zoã" como não sendo simples paralelo de "terra do Egito", mas como expressão muito mais específica, indicando o lugar exato onde os milagres ocorreram. Tal sentido limitador ou restritivo realmente não se ajusta ao caso, porque as Dez Pragas não ocorreram apenas numa única parte do Egito (tal como numa parte do Delta), mas em todo aquele país. Isto parece dar apoio ao ponto de vista de que "o campo de Zoã" é usado como paralelo para "terra do Egito".

Os peritos hodiernos que se empenham em apresentar Zoã (ou, segundo a relação que pretendem estabelecer, Avaris ou Ramessés) como residência de Faraó por ocasião do Êxodo também enfrentam a falta de apoio e concordância bíblicos em diversos aspectos. A Bíblia mostra que o primeiro encontro de Moisés ocorreu à beira do rio Nilo. (Êx 7:14, 15) Zoã (Tânis) não ficava realmente junto ao rio, mas junto ao término de um dos antigos braços que bifurcavam da corrente principal. Na tentativa de situar a cidade de Ramessés no mesmo lugar de Zoã, ou Tânis, eles também passam por alto que Zoã já era uma cidade no tempo de Abraão, ao passo que a bíblica Ramsés ("Ramessés", Al) começou a ser construída pelos israelitas no Egito cerca de 400 anos mais tarde (a menos que por "construir" a Bíblia queira dizer "desenvolver", ou reforçar). — Êx 1:11.

Esses peritos transformariam Zoã (Avaris-Ramessés, conforme a identificam) na capital do Egito no tempo do Êxodo, ao passo que a Bíblia identifica Ramessés apenas como 'lugar de armazenagem'. E, ao sustentarem que Ramsés II foi o Faraó do Êxodo, por ter afirmado ser o construtor da cidade de Ramessés (ou, mais exatamente, dum lugar chamado Per-Ramsés), eles desconsideram que a construção da bíblica Ramessés começou 80 anos ou mais antes do Êxodo (antes do nascimento de Moisés [Êx 1:11–2:10]), ao passo que os historiadores atribuem a Ramsés II um governo de apenas uns 66 anos. — Veja RAMSÉS, RAMESSÉS.

Resta então a pergunta por que "o campo de Zoã" parece ser usado em paralelo com a "terra do Egito" no que se refere à realização de atos milagrosos por Jeová. Embora não se possa totalmente descontar uma possível ligação com a corte de Faraó, é também inteiramente possível que a era de apogeu da cidade induziu o salmista a usar Zoã deste modo, visto que parece ter sido ela uma das primeiras cidades fundadas no Egito. Se este for o caso, seu uso pode ser similar ao uso de "Plymouth Rock" (Rocha de Plymouth) como representativa da primitiva colonização dos Estados Unidos da América. Ou o motivo pode ser seu destaque e sua localização na entrada do Egito para os que viessem da Palestina, talvez sendo a primeira cidade maior que a família de Jacó encontrou ao ir ao Egito. (Compare isso com Is 30:2-4; veja HANES.) Visto que ficava perto da extremidade setentrional do Egito, seu "campo" talvez até mesmo em sentido figurado se referisse a todo o vale do Nilo que se estendia para o S, até a fronteira meridional do Egito.

Não há dúvida da importância da cidade de Zoã (Tânis), especialmente quanto ao intercâmbio comercial e às estruturas religiosas. Há evidência de muitas construções régias ali, desde a época das primitivas "dinastias" dos reis egípcios. Construiu-se ali um grande templo, com cerca de 305 m de comprimento. O Faraó Ramsés II erigiu em Tânis uma imensa estátua monolítica de si mesmo, a qual tinha cerca de 28 m de altura e pesava mais de 800 toneladas. Os reis assírios, Esar-Hadom e Assurbanipal, mencionam Zoã (chamada Sa'nu ou Si'nu nas inscrições cuneiformes) como cidade real sob um príncipe. Antes deles, o profeta Isaías, na pronúncia divina contra o Egito, tinha-se referido aos "príncipes de Zoã" e tinha-os classificado junto com os de Nofe (Mênfis), desta forma indicando também a importância política de Zoã. (Is 19:1, 11-13) Diz-se que Tiraca, o governante etíope do Egito e contemporâneo de Isaías, usou Zoã (Tânis) como base administrativa para o Egito setentrional.

A conquista assíria do Egito, por Esar-Hadom e Assurbanipal, comprovou a 'tolice' dos conselheiros de Zoã. (Is 19:13) Daí, por volta de 591 AEC, o profeta Ezequiel avisou a respeito de outra conquista por parte do rei babilônio Nabucodonosor, 'acendendo-se um fogo em Zoã'. (Ez 29:17; 30:1, 10, 14) No entanto, parece que Zoã (Tânis) se recuperou e continuou a ser a principal cidade do Delta do Egito, até o tempo de Alexandre, o Grande. Depois disso, a nova cidade de Alexandria ofuscou a importância comercial de Zoã (Tânis), e esta entrou em gradual declínio.

ZOAR, I [Pequenez]. Cidade do "Distrito", evidentemente outrora situada à beira duma planície fértil. (Gên 13:10-12; veja DISTRITO DO JORDÃO.) Pelo visto, o nome anterior de Zoar era Bela. Nos dias de Abraão, era governada por um rei que, junto com os outros quatro do distrito, se rebelou depois de 12 anos de domínio por parte de Quedorlaomer, apenas para ser derrotado pelo monarca elamita e seus três aliados. (Gên 14:1-11) Quando Jeová estava prestes a destruir Sodoma, Ló solicitou e obteve permissão para fugir de lá para Zoar, e esta cidade foi poupada. (Gên 19:18-25) O medo fez com que, mais tarde, ele e suas duas filhas partissem de Zoar e se tornassem cavernícolas na região montanhosa próxima. — Gên 19:30.

Foi predito que, quando sobreviesse a Moabe uma catástrofe, os que fugissem de lá iriam para Zoar, e que o clamor por causa da devastação daquela nação seria ouvido "desde Zoar até Horonaim, até Eglate-Selisaia", talvez indicando que Zoar era então uma cidade moabita. (Is 15:5; Je 48:34) A Septuaginta grega e certas traduções recentes (AT, JB, BMD, LEB, MC, PIB) mencionam Zoar (Soar, Segor) em Jeremias 48:4 (31:4, LXX, Bagster), mas o texto massorético hebraico, em vez disso, menciona ali "seus pequenos". (NM, BJ, BV, So) Zoar marcava o ponto do extremo S visto por Moisés ao observar o país de cima do monte Nebo. (De 34:1-3) Parece que a cidade ficava em Moabe, ou nas vizinhanças, perto da região montanhosa de Moabe e em algum ponto ao SE do Mar Morto. (Veja Gên 19:17-22, 30, 37.) Alguns peritos colocam Zoar ao N do Mar Morto, ao passo que outros a situam na península el-Lisan, ou logo ao O ou ao S da extremidade meridional do mar. Yohanan Aharoni a identifica com es-Safi, situada no delta do vale da torrente de Zerede (uádi el-Hasa'). Na Idade Média, o nome foi relacionado com um importante lugar entre Jerusalém e Elate. Todavia, alguns peritos acreditam que a Zoar original e as outras "cidades do Distrito" jazem debaixo da água na parte S do Mar Morto. — Gên 13:12.

ZOAR, II.

1. Hitita cujo filho Efrom vendeu a caverna de Macpela a Abraão. — Gên 23:7-9; 25:9.

2. Quinto filho mencionado de Simeão e pai duma família tribal; um dos contados entre os 70 da casa de Jacó que "vieram ao Egito". (Gên 46:8, 10, 27; Êx 6:15) Em outros lugares é chamado de Zerá. — Núm 26:13; 1Cr 4:24.

ZOBÁ. Reino sírio (arameu) também conhecido como Arã-Zobá. (Sal 60:cab.) Um dos seus reis foi Hadadezer. (1Rs 11:23) A forma composta "Hamate-Zobá" talvez designe reinos adjacentes, chamados Hamate e Zobá. (2Cr 8:3) Zobá parece ter ficado ao N de Damasco, com um domínio que se estendia até a região de Hamate ao N e até o rio Eufrates ao L. — 2Sa 8:3.

O Rei Saul guerreou contra os reis de Zobá. (1Sa 14:47) Os amonitas, mais tarde, contrataram sírios de Zobá e outras tropas para lutar contra Davi, mas todos foram derrotados pelo exército dele. (2Sa 10:6-19; 1Cr 19:6-19) Foi provavelmente nesta guerra que Davi derrotou o rei de Zobá, Hadadezer, tomando despojos, inclusive muito cobre (mais tarde usado na construção do templo) das cidades dele, Betá (pelo visto também chamada Tibate) e Berotai (Cum?). (2Sa 8:3-12; 1Cr 18:3-9) Um dos poderosos das forças militares de Davi foi Igal, filho de Natã de Zobá. — 2Sa 23:8, 36; veja ARÃ N.º 5; HADADEZER.

ZOBEBA. Descendente de Coz, da tribo de Judá. — 1Cr 4:1, 8.

ZODÍACO. Faixa de estrelas vista da Terra dentro dum espaço de nove graus em ambos os lados do plano da órbita da Terra em volta do Sol. A respeito do Rei Josias, de Judá, 2 Reis 23:5 diz: "E acabou com a atividade dos sacerdotes de deuses estrangeiros, a quem os reis de Judá haviam constituído para fazerem fumaça sacrificial nos altos nas cidades de Judá e nas cercanias de Jerusalém, e também dos que faziam fumaça sacrificial a Baal, ao sol e à lua, e às constelações do zodíaco, e a todo o exército dos céus." A expressão aqui traduzida "constelações do zodíaco" provém da palavra hebraica maz·za·lóhth, que ocorre apenas uma vez na Bíblia, embora a palavra Maz·za·róhth, encontrada em Jó 38:32, possa ser aparentada. É o contexto que ajuda a tornar claro o seu sentido.

A descoberta do que pode ser chamado de faixa zodiacal é geralmente atribuída aos primitivos babilônios. Eles, sem dúvida, observavam a aparente trajetória anual do Sol entre as estrelas, trajetória que agora é conhecida como a eclíptica. Os astrônomos podiam notar que, dentro desta faixa de cerca de 18 graus de largura, que se estende 9 graus em cada lado da eclíptica, fica o aparente caminho do Sol, da Lua e os principais planetas, conforme vistos da Terra. Foi só no segundo século AEC, porém, que um astrônomo grego dividiu o zodíaco em 12 partes iguais de 30 graus cada uma; estas partes passaram a ser chamadas de signos do zodíaco e receberam os nomes das constelações relacionadas. A palavra "zodíaco" vem do grego e significa "círculo de animais", visto que a maior parte das 12 constelações do zodíaco originalmente eram chamadas por nomes da vida animal ou marinha.

Estes signos, atualmente, não coincidem mais com as constelações cujos nomes lhes foram originalmente dados. Isto se deve ao que é conhecido como precessão dos equinócios, que resulta num gradual deslocamento das constelações para o L, em cerca de um grau a cada 70 anos, num ciclo que leva uns 26.000 anos para completar-se. Assim, o signo de Áries, nos últimos 2.000 anos, deslocou-se cerca de 30 graus para dentro do signo de Peixes.

Ligação com a Astrologia. As constelações do zodíaco se transformaram em objetos da adoração falsa desde os primevos tempos mesopotâmicos. A cada uma das diferentes constelações atribuíram-se certas qualidades, e estas foram então usadas em predições astrológicas baseadas na respectiva posição ou relação dos corpos celestes para com os signos do zodíaco em qualquer tempo específico. Conforme indicado pelo texto de 2 Reis 23:5, esse uso da astrologia foi introduzido em Judá pelos sacerdotes de deuses estrangeiros que certos reis haviam trazido ao país. Jeová Deus, muito antes disso, já havia proibido tal adoração das estrelas, sob pena de morte. — De 17:2-7.

A astrologia era um aspecto predominante da adoração babilônica. As predições dos seus astrólogos, baseadas no zodíaco, porém, não salvaram Babilônia da destruição, assim como o profeta Isaías advertira corretamente com antecedência. — Is 47:12-15; veja ASTRÓLOGOS.

Nos tempos atuais, os signos do zodíaco continuam a desempenhar um papel importante na adoração praticada por muitas pessoas. É interessante notar que os signos do zodíaco de algum modo conseguiram penetrar nas catedrais religiosas da cristandade, e podem hoje ser observados em lugares tais como a Catedral de Notre Dame, em Paris, bem como nas catedrais de Amiens e Chartres, na França.

ZOELETE [duma raiz que significa "réptil"]. Pedra junto a En-Rogel; fora disso, sua localização é desconhecida. Perto da "pedra de Zoelete", Adonias ofereceu sacrifícios e foi proclamado rei por muitos homens de destaque de Israel. Todavia, sua tentativa presunçosa de suceder a Davi no trono fracassou. — 1Rs 1:9, 10, 25, 49, 50.

ZOETE. Descendente de Isi, da tribo de Judá. — 1Cr 4:1, 20.

ZOFA. Membro destacado da tribo de Aser. Alistam-se onze "filhos" dele. — 1Cr 7:35-37, 40.

ZOFAI [possivelmente duma raiz que significa "favo de mel"]. Filho de certo Elcana, e antepassado de Samuel. A forma alternativa do nome é Zufe. — 1Cr 6:26, 28, 33-35; veja ZUFE.

ZOFAR. Um dos três "companheiros" de Jó; naamatita. (Jó 2:11) Zofar foi o terceiro a falar no debate com Jó. A linha geral do seu raciocínio seguia o de Elifaz e Bildade; ele acusou Jó de iniquidade, dizendo-lhe que abandonasse as práticas pecaminosas. (Jó caps. 11, 20) Mas, depois de duas fases, Zofar desistiu; havia proferido suas palavras de denúncia e não tinha nada para acrescentar na terceira fase. No fim, Jeová ordenou que ele e seus companheiros oferecessem um grande sacrifício e que Jó orasse a favor deles. — Jó 42:7-9.

ZOFIM. Campo no alto do Pisga, onde Balaão mandou construir sete altares, em que se ofereceram sacrifícios, e onde o profeta proferiu um dos seus ditos proverbiais a respeito de Israel. (Núm 23:14-24) O nome Zofim parece estar preservado em Telaʽat es-Safa, perto do lugar sugerido do Pisga, ao L da extremidade N do Mar Morto. Alguns peritos, porém, traduzem a palavra tsoh·fim, em vez de considerá-la como nome próprio, usando expressões tais como "campo das Sentinelas". — BV; veja BJ, BMD, PIB.

ZOMBARIA. Veja ESCÁRNIO, ZOMBARIA.

ZORÁ. Cidade no quinhão da tribo de Judá na Sefelá. (Jos 15:20, 33) Situada na fronteira entre Dã e Judá, era habitada por pessoas de Dã. (Jos 19:41, 48; Jz 18:2, 8, 11) O danita Sansão nasceu em Zorá e foi sepultado perto dali. (Jz 13:2, 24, 25; 16:31) A cidade foi fortificada pelo Rei Roboão, talvez por causa da sua localização estratégica a uns 25 km ao O de Jerusalém. (2Cr 11:5, 10) Zorá foi novamente povoada por filhos de Judá que retornaram do exílio babilônico. (Ne 11:25, 29) É identificada com a atual Sarʽah (Tel Zorʽa), no lado N do que se sugere ser o vale de Soreque.

ZORATITAS [De (Pertencentes a) Zorá]. Descendentes de Sobal, da tribo de Judá. — 1Cr 2:3, 52, 53; 4:2.

ZORITAS [De Pertencentes a) Zorá]. Descendentes de Salma, da tribo de Judá. — 1Cr 2:3, 54.

ZOROBABEL [do acadiano, significando "Semente (Descendente) de Babel"]. Primeiro governador dos judeus repatriados (Ag 2:21); descendente do Rei Davi, e antepassado de Jesus Cristo; provavelmente era, na verdade, filho de Pedaías, mas legalmente reconhecido como filho de Sealtiel. (1Cr 3:19; Mt 1:12, 13; Lu 3:27; veja GENEALOGIA DE JESUS CRISTO [Problemas na Genealogia de Jesus Registrada por Mateus].) A lista genealógica de 1 Crônicas (3:19, 20) menciona sete filhos de Zorobabel (Mesulão, Hananias, Hasubá, Oel, Berequias, Hasadias, Jusabe-Hesede) e uma filha (Selomite). O nome oficial ou babilônico de Zorobabel parece ter sido Sesbazar. — Esd 1:8, 11; 5:14, 16; compare isso com Esd 3:8.

Depois da libertação do exílio babilônico, Zorobabel, em 537 AEC, liderou um restante judeu na volta a Jerusalém e Judá. (Esd 2:1, 2; Ne 7:6, 7; 12:1; MAPA, Vol. 2, p. 332) Como governador nomeado pelo Rei Ciro, confiou-se a Zorobabel os vasos sagrados de ouro e de prata que, anos antes, tinham sido tirados do templo por Nabucodonosor. (Esd 5:14, 15) Em Jerusalém, sob a direção de Zorobabel e do sumo sacerdote Jesua, erigiu-se o altar do templo no sétimo mês (etanim, ou tisri, setembro-outubro) (Esd 3:1, 2), e, no segundo ano, no segundo mês (zive, ou íiar, abril-maio, de 536 AEC) começou a construção do templo propriamente dito. (Esd 3:8) Reconhecendo a má motivação dos não judeus, que pediram para participar na obra de reconstrução, Zorobabel, Jesua e os cabeças das casas paternas declararam: "Não tendes nada que ver conosco na construção de uma casa ao nosso Deus, pois nós mesmos, juntos, construiremos para Jeová, o Deus de Israel, assim como nos mandou o Rei Ciro, rei da Pérsia." — Esd 4:1-3.

Estes não judeus, porém, continuaram a desanimar os reconstrutores do templo, e, por fim (em 522 AEC), conseguiram um embargo oficial da obra. Dois anos mais tarde, Zorobabel e Jesua (Josué), incentivados pelos profetas Ageu e Zacarias, corajosamente reiniciaram a construção do templo, apesar do embargo. (Esd 4:23, 24; 5:1, 2; Ag 1:1, 12, 14; Za 1:1) Depois disso, uma investigação feita nos arquivos persas vindicou a legalidade da obra deles. (Esd 6:1-12) Durante toda a obra, os profetas Ageu e Zacarias continuaram a incentivar Zorobabel, fortalecendo-o para a obra e garantindo-lhe que tinha o favor divino. (Ag 2:2-4, 21-23; Za 4:6-10) Por fim (em 515 AEC), o templo foi concluído. (Esd 6:13-15) Também, durante a governadoria de Zorobabel, cuidou-se das necessidades dos levitas, recebendo os cantores e os porteiros seu quinhão, "conforme a necessidade diária". — Ne 12:47.

ZUAR [duma raiz que significa "ser insignificante"]. Homem de Issacar cujo "filho" Netanel era maioral tribal no ermo. — Núm 1:8, 16; 2:5; 7:18, 23; 10:15.

ZUFE [possivelmente: Favo de Mel].

1. Levita coatita e antepassado de Samuel. (1Sa 1:1; 1Cr 6:33-38) É também chamado Zofai, forma alternativa do mesmo nome. — 1Cr 6:26.

2. "Terra" fora do território de Benjamim, percorrido por Saul em busca das jumentas de seu pai. Numa cidade na terra de Zufe, Saul teve seu primeiro encontro com Samuel. (1Sa 9:3-6, 15-18) Desconhece-se a localização exata de Zufe.

ZUR [Rocha].

1. Um dos cinco reis de Midiã, na época em que Israel se aproximava da Terra da Promessa. Zur é também chamado de maioral e de "um cabeça dos clãs duma casa paterna", bem como de 'caudilho de Síon'. Sua filha Cosbi foi a midianita que Zinri levou consigo para fins imorais e que Fineias matou. O próprio Zur foi morto quando os israelitas puniram Midiã por engodar alguns homens de Israel a relações imorais e à adoração falsa. — Núm 25:14-18; 31:1, 2, 7, 8; Jos 13:21.

2. Benjamita, filho de Jeiel e evidentemente irmão de Ner, avô de Saul. — 1Cr 8:29, 30; 9:35, 36, 39.

ZURIEL [Minha Rocha É Deus]. Maioral no ermo, dos levitas meraritas; filho de Abiail. — Núm 3:35.

ZURISADAI [Minha Rocha É o Todo-Poderoso]. Simeonita cujo "filho" Selumiel era chefe tribal durante a peregrinação no ermo. — Núm 1:6, 16; 2:12; 7:36, 41; 10:19.

ZUZINS. Povo ao L do rio Jordão, que as forças de Quedorlaomer derrotaram em Hã. — Gên 14:5.

A implantação das Testemunhas de Jeová em Portugal e no Ultramar português (1925-1974)*

PEDRO PINTO

Centro de Estudos Históricos – Universidade Nova de Lisboa pedroacpinto@yahoo.com.br

Resumo: A maioria dos estudos religiosos em Portugal tem centralizado o seu enfoque na Igreja Católica e nas diversas denominações protestantes. Contudo, durante o período ditatorial que envolveu o país de 1926 a 1974, e especialmente desde 1961, as autoridades portuguesas despenderam uma considerável quantidade de recursos e tempo investigando as Testemunhas de Jeová, cujo número de membros era aparentemente insignificante. Este artigo procurará entender as razões desse fenómeno e historiará a implantação desse movimento no território metropolitano e ultramarino, com destaque para Angola e Moçambique.

Palavras-chave: Testemunhas de Jeová, Estado-Novo, Minorias Religiosas, Angola, Moçambique.

Abstract: Most of the religious studies in Portugal have dealt mainly with the Catholic Church and several Protestant denominations. Nevertheless, during the Dictatorship that dominated the country from 1926 to 1974, and especially since 1961, the Portuguese authorities spent a considerable amount of resources and time researching and persecuting Jehovah's Witnesses, a religious denomination with a negligible number of members. This article aims at understanding the reasons for this phenomenon and will detail the introduction of this denomination in the metropolitan territory and overseas, especially in Angola and Mozambique.

Keywords: Jehovah's Witnesses, New State, Religious Minorities, Angola, Mozambique.

* Este artigo resulta de uma comunicação apresentada no âmbito do Seminário de História Religiosa Contemporânea do Centro de Estudos de História Religiosa, a 12.03.2011, e trata-se de um resumo muito sintético de um trabalho de investigação em curso sobre a implantação histórica das Testemunhas de Jeová em Portugal e suas colónias, cujos mais recentes resultados serão publicados na Alemanha no ano em curso (PINTO, Pedro – Jehovas Zeugen in Portugal während der Diktatur (1926-1974). In JEHOVAS Zeugen in Europa: Geschichte und Gegenwart. Ed. de Gerhard Besier & Katarzyna Stokłosa. Berlin, 2012). No decurso desta investigação, iniciada em 1999, foi defendida por uma colega, em 2009, uma dissertação de mestrado sobre a perseguição das Testemunhas de Jeová em Portugal, que deverá ser consultada para uma descrição mais detalhada dos vários episódios persecutórios ocorridos na metrópole de 1961 a 1974, dado que a análise do mesmo fenómeno nos territórios coloniais é sucinta (ALVES, Mafalda – As Testemunhas de Jeová face ao Estado Novo: Um caso de resistência (1925-1974)), Lisboa, Univ. Nova de Lisboa, 2009, diss. mestr.). A bibliografia do tema é escassa. Veja-se: PINTO, Pedro – Testemunhas de Jeová. Uma minoria perseguida no Estado Novo. Introdução Comecemos por descrever brevemente a origem moderna das Testemunhas de Jeová. Charles Taze Russell (1852-1916), filiado na Igreja Congregacional, mas durante alguns anos desiludido com a religião organizada, acabou por ver a sua fé restaurada numa palestra de Jonas Wendell, pregador adventista, em 1869. Russell organizou um grupo de estudo bíblico em Allegheny, Pennsylvania, de matriz restauracionista, ou seja, com o objectivo de restabelecer o cristianismo original, com doutrinas apenas baseadas na Bíblia. Fundou em 1884 a Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society (WTBTS), entidade jurídica utilizada no prosseguimento das suas actividades bíblicas educacionais. O grupo passou a ser conhecido como Estudantes da Bíblia (mudando para Testemunhas de Jeová em 1931, defendendo que Jeová é a pronúncia correcta, em português, do nome de Deus, constante nas Escrituras Hebraicas, também denominado Iavé ou Javé). Em 1879, Russell fundou a revista hoje conhecida como A Sentinela, e redigiu os seis volumes seminais do movimento, intitulados Estudos das Escrituras. O núcleo doutrinal do movimento centrou-se em torno da crença na redenção da humanidade por meio do sacrifício de Jesus e a iminente aproximação da presença de Cristo. Russell e os seus associados divulgaram as suas crenças por meio de turnés, convenções, panfletos, e sermões publicados na imprensa americana, mais tarde no mundo inteiro, defendendo em debates com ministros de outras confissões a falta de fundamento bíblico das doutrinas da imortalidade da alma, trindade, e inferno. Distinguia-os também o milenarismo e, baseados nos seus cálculos bíblicos, olhavam para 1914 como o ano que sinalizaria o "fim dos tempos dos gentios"[1], ocasião em que Cristo assumiria o controlo dos eventos mundiais. Um período de caos teria então início, conduzindo ao fim das instituições humanas e à chegada do Milénio, culminando na ressurreição dos mortos, a condução à perfeição da humanidade e a eliminação do Diabo[2].

A crença das Testemunhas de Jeová acerca do "fim do mundo", ou escatologia, é particularmente importante. Para elas, o "fim do mundo" não envolve a destruição do planeta, mas antes o fim da humanidade apartada de Deus. Acreditam que Deus, num futuro a breve trecho, irá introduzir um milénio no qual a humanidade obediente terá a oportunidade de ser conduzida à perfeição, isto depois de uma prévia intervenção divina que trará a retribuição de Deus sobre os que praticassem acções iníquas sem se arrependerem.

1 Lucas 21, 24; Daniel 4, 10-17.

2 Para uma explanação das crenças, cf. BARBEY, Philippe – Les Témoins de Jéhovah: Pour un christianisme original, Paris: L'Harmattan, 2003; INTROVIGNE, Massimo – I Testimoni di Geova: già e non ancora, Turim: Ed. Press, 1958, p. 150-152. Hoje, as Testemunhas de Jeová (TJ) crêem que Cristo foi nessa data coroado Rei nos Céus, seguindo-se um período de tempo ainda a decorrer designado na Bíblia como "últimos dias", constituindo a seu ver uma melhor compreensão das imutáveis verdades bíblicas (Jehovah's Witnesses: Proclaimers of God's Kingdom, Brooklyn: WTBTS, 1993, p. 618-641, 708-709).

Dentro da ideologia milenarista encontramos genericamente duas correntes principais: os pré-milenaristas e os pós-milenaristas. Aqueles que apoiam o pós--milenarismo acreditam que o Milénio será gradualmente alcançado e que actualmente o mundo está em progresso em direcção a esse objectivo. Assim, os cristãos devem não somente pregar mas tentar mudar o mundo e resolver os seus problemas através do activismo político e social[3]. As Testemunhas de Jeová não se inserem nesta corrente. De certa forma, poderão ser entendidas como pré-milenaristas, considerando que o mundo apartado de Deus é iníquo e piora a cada dia. Assim, a única forma de atingir o Milénio é por uma súbita intervenção divina, pelo que os cristãos apenas têm de aguardar e avisar o resto da humanidade de que poderão ser salvos. Destarte, os cristãos não devem desperdiçar o seu tempo tentando mudar a sociedade, algo considerado fútil e potencialmente perigoso, pois os distrairia do que entendem ser a sua actividade primordial – pregar[4].

As Testemunhas de Jeová defendem a separação dos cristãos face à política e aos governos humanos pois crêem que o Diabo controla o actual "sistema de coisas", e assim recusam-se a ter parte em actividades de cariz político e militar; contudo, obedecem às leis dos governos seculares ("autoridades superiores"[5]) das nações onde residem, excepto quando o Estado quer que desobedeçam ao que entendem serem mandamentos divinos, como pregar e reunir-se para culto, ou amar o próximo por não pegar em armas, pois isso implicaria violar a sua consciência baseada em princípios bíblicos. Apegam-se à injunção de Actos dos Apóstolos 5, 29: quando os discípulos de Jesus se recusaram a parar de pregar sobre Cristo mesmo sob ameaça dos líderes judaicos, e se arrogaram o direito de "obedecer antes a Deus que aos homens".

Muitos regimes políticos, ao longo do tempo, encararam esta leitura dos eventos políticos e históricos contemporâneos como uma ameaça, dado que esta pregação anuncia, na realidade, o fim do seu domínio às mãos de Deus, o que constituiu um desafio, quer para regimes democráticos, como os E.U.A., quer totalitários, como

5 João 17, 16; Romanos 13, 1-7. A partir de 1929, as TJ passaram a encarar estas "autoridades superiores" como Jeová e Jesus. Dado que em muitos países existiam leis que proibiam aquilo que consideravam ser ordens bíblicas (como, por exemplo, a evangelização), ou as forçavam a desobedecer a ordens bíblicas (como, por exemplo, o serviço militar obrigatório), não obedeciam aos governos nestas matérias ainda que ensinando a estrita obediência às demais leis nacionais. Em 1962, elas regressaram à anterior concepção de que as "autoridades superiores" se referiam aos governos políticos mas defendiam que isso em nada alterava a sua posição face aos governos dado que a noção de "sujeição relativa" àqueles se mantinha concernente à pregação e ao serviço militar (ibidem, p. 190-198).

o caso da Alemanha Nazi e da U.R.S.S. O seu não-envolvimento político e militar, especialmente em tempo de guerra, era considerado insubordinação ou rebelião. Na II Guerra Mundial, nos E.U.A., Testemunhas de Jeová foram presas e acusadas de serem uma quinta-coluna nazi por não quererem combater, enquanto na Alemanha foram perseguidas e enviadas para campos de concentração (onde 2.000 morreram), por serem consideradas inimigas da nação[6].

As Testemunhas de Jeová em Portugal

A presença deste movimento em terras lusas recua a Março de 1925, ocasião em que George Young, um colportor canadiano da WTBTS, se deslocou a Portugal e Espanha, para preparar a visita do Presidente da organização religiosa, Joseph Franklin Rutherford, que chegou a Lisboa, proveniente de Madrid, a 13 de Maio de 1925[7].

À data, tendo passado cerca de 15 anos da revolução republicana, o catolicismo continuava a ser a maior confissão religiosa no País, num domínio indisputado. Após a instauração da monarquia constitucional, em 1822, o Catolicismo estava inscrito na Constituição como a religião oficial de estado, apesar do texto permitir liberdade de consciência para todos. Na realidade, a liberdade de praticar outras religiões estava limitada às comunidades estrangeiras e ainda assim os seus locais de culto não deveriam ser reconhecíveis como tal a partir do exterior, condições que restringiam a expansão significativa de novas comunidades religiosas. O Código Penal de 1852 reprimia ainda mais o desvio do Catolicismo, definindo um conjunto de crimes contra a religião do Estado como a tentativa de propagar doutrinas contrárias aos dogmas católicos, proselitismo ou conversão de pessoas a uma religião diferente. Apesar da relativa tolerância, em graus variados, de algumas comunidades locais, muitos colportores protestantes eram hostilizados e perseguidos pelos clérigos locais e populações sob a sua orientação. As suas actividades foram seriamente travadas pelas autoridades, tendo alguns estrangeiros sido expulsos do país, outros tendo de emigrar, ao passo que cidadãos nacionais eram presos ou sentenciados a termos de prisão, tudo devido às suas diferentes convicções religiosas. Estas crenças religiosas tiveram de lutar por um espaço numa sociedade profundamente iletrada e num país onde, especialmente fora das grandes cidades, o Catolicismo afectava todo o modo de vida das pessoas. Além disso, novas correntes de pensamento que surgiram na Europa, como o Positivismo e Hegelianismo, e conceitos políticos como o Republicanismo e o Socialismo, eram também agora fortes competidores em Portugal enquanto "sistemas de crença" alternativos tanto ao Catolicismo como ao Protestantismo e, dado que este último era um recém-chegado à cena nacional, teria de enfrentar muito maiores dificuldades para se radicar na sociedade portuguesa. Se os primeiros protestantes em Portugal eram maioritariamente estrangeiros, rapidamente muitos cidadãos nacionais abraçaram estas novas crenças, sobretudo por estarem insatisfeitos com a rotina dos rituais católicos e a falta de conhecimento dos escritos bíblicos demonstrada pelos padres locais. O regime político evoluiu, especialmente a partir da década de 1870 – ainda que lenta e desigualmente –, em direcção a uma atitude mais tolerante face aos grupos religiosos minoritários, mantendo contudo uma forte vigilância e repressão de algumas das suas actividades, aliada à legislação que impedia a divulgação irrestrita da sua mensagem religiosa. Esta realidade, juntamente com as adversas circunstâncias sociais, tornava extremamente difícil a distribuição de Bíblias por colportores, bem como o proselitismo. Apesar disso, entre 1890 e 1910, o Protestantismo impregnou-se em muitas cidades e este período testemunhou o crescimento de uma geração de evangélicos portugueses: em 1900, havia 54 locais de culto protestante, bem como 31 escolas, sete livrarias e oito periódicos[8].

Depois da ascensão ao poder, em Outubro de 1910, o regime republicano decretou liberdade de religião para todos os cidadãos, mas também implementou uma política radical face às religiões, e em especial face às instituições católicas que eram já por muitas décadas vistas pelos republicanos mais radicais como a principal causa do atraso nacional e um inimigo do progresso civilizacional. Alguns líderes republicanos criam que a extinção da religião traria muitos benefícios para a nação e abriria caminho para uma sociedade moderna. O regime passou então a separar o Estado da Igreja e deixou de a financiar. Além disso, criou leis que permitiram o divórcio e secularizaram os cemitérios, proibiu o ensino do Cristianismo nas escolas, implementou o registo civil obrigatório de nascimentos, casamentos e óbitos, expulsou e dissolveu a Companhia de Jesus e outras ordens religiosas, nacionalizou a propriedade eclesiástica, e baniu as características públicas das práticas religiosas como procissões e vestes clericais, entre outras medidas. Esta política de perseguição religiosa e intolerância face ao Catolicismo permitiu o desenvolvimento das minorias religiosas que não estavam agora apenas confinadas às grandes cidades, mas se encontravam disseminadas por todo o país. No início da década de 1930, havia cerca de 10.000 protestantes, a maioria nas grandes cidades, e 70% das comunidades evangélicas tinham sido formadas após 1910. Muitos representantes protestantes concordavam com alguns dos aspectos do programa político republicano e, por seu turno, muitos republicanos viam no Protestantismo uma maneira de enfraquecer ainda mais a poderosa Igreja Católica. Na primeira parte (1910-1917) do período definido como Primeira República (1910-1926), as medidas governamentais almejavam a substituição das crenças e valores religiosos por um laicismo que introduziria novas formas de socialização baseadas numa nova moralidade alicerçada no altruísmo e na solidariedade que permitiria a qualquer cidadão ligar-se de novo à comunidade nacional e à Humanidade[9].

Contudo, em Dezembro de 1917, uma revolta militar liderada por Sidónio Pais expulsou o Partido Republicano Português (PRP) do poder e, durante o breve período de um ano de dominação política, a relação entre o Estado português e a Igreja Católica evoluiu numa direcção diversa: apesar de a separação do Estado e da Igreja ser mantida, muitos dos aspectos mais controversos foram revistos ou revogados, num esforço de corrigir alguns dos excessos exercidos por anteriores governos republicanos. Sidónio Pais percebeu que a efectiva pacificação da nação não poderia ser alcançada sem o apaziguamento dos católicos, que representavam a maioria da nação, especialmente fora das cidades. Este processo não foi drasticamente alterado pelos governos que lhe sucederam e, assim, a prevalência do anticlericalismo diminuiu[10].

O regime republicano caracterizou-se neste período por uma grande instabilidade política: entre 1910 e 1926 nove presidentes e quarenta e cinco governos exerceram funções no país. Desde a sua génese largos sectores da vida nacional conspiravam para derrubar o PRP. Sidónio Pais foi assassinado em Dezembro de 1918 e só no ano seguinte o PRP conseguiu regressar ao poder, onde permaneceu até 1926 com algumas breves intromissões de alguns governos mais liberais. A oposição ao PRP era composta não somente de apoiantes da monarquia como de republicanos radicais, socialistas, anarquistas e extremistas de direita, entre outras forças políticas e sociais insatisfeitas. Sucederam-se também cisões no seio do PRP, conduzindo à formação de outros partidos políticos na oposição, com uma atitude mais moderada face à Igreja Católica, a população rural de matriz monárquica e os sindicatos, contra quem o PRP tinha implementado fortes medidas. Desta forma, o modo como o PRP vinha a controlar o acesso ao poder levou outras forças políticas a recorrer à violência para tomar o lugar do PRP[11].

Em 18 de Abril de 1925, um novo pronunciamento militar ocorreu em Lisboa, apoiado por forças militares ligadas à extrema-direita republicana e adeptos da monarquia, junto com outras forças sociais antagonistas do PRP. O golpe de estado falhou e o Governo declarou o estado de sítio, suspendendo as liberdades civis em Lisboa[12].

Isto aconteceu um mês antes da visita de J. F. Rutherford, o presidente da WTBTS, o que obrigou a uma alteração de planos, fazendo coincidir a conferência do representante americano com a peregrinação de milhares de católicos até Fátima, onde oito anos antes três pastores afirmaram ter visto uma aparição de Maria, no auge da perseguição republicana aos católicos[13].

De acordo com um relatório da WTBTS publicado nesse ano, George Young aparentemente terá contactado a embaixada britânica em Lisboa e também terá obtido autorização governamental para usar um edifício público para a conferência. Young foi informado por Robert Moreton, secretário da Sociedade Bíblica, que "nem eles nem qualquer outra Sociedade Bíblica poderia obter tal permissão e que a distribuição de literatura bíblica em Portugal enfrentaria muita oposição". Young justificaria que o facto de J. F. Rutherford vir da América e aparentemente ser já conhecido em Portugal tinha conduzido o Governo a conceder um edifício público para a conferência, apesar de alegadas ameaças de comunistas de atirar bombas para o auditório. O citado relatório nota que a pessoa crucial para tal decisão favorável ser emitida fora um secretário-assistente do Ministro do Interior[14].

A conferência teve lugar no Liceu Camões, na Praça José Fontana, em Lisboa, sendo anunciada nos jornais citadinos, por meio de cartazes e outros meios de difusão. A palestra, intitulada "Como viver na terra para sempre", intentava, de acordo com o anúncio, esclarecer a audiência acerca de uma questão que, por séculos, intrigava sucessivas gerações de sábios e filósofos: "poderia a humanidade viver em paz na Terra por toda a eternidade?"[15]

Numa época de convulsão social, não foi surpreendente que, perante tal asserção, milhares de pessoas se dirigissem para o Liceu, embora apenas cerca de 2000 conseguissem entrar, algumas das quais testemunharam mais tarde à imprensa que esperavam adquirir uma qualquer sorte de elixir da vida eterna, vindo inclusivamente munidos de frasquinhos[16]. Nas imediações, alguns membros da Igreja Evangélica Lisbonense distribuíram aos transeuntes panfletos que procuravam contrariar as ideias do conferencista, algo que fez levantar as suspeitas numa parte da audiência de que, afinal de contas, a conferência trataria de questões religiosas. A audiência era muito diversificada, desde homens a mulheres, pessoas de todas as classes, funcionários públicos, oficiais do exército, septuagenários e estudantes universitários[17].

A conferência iniciou-se às 21:45, dada a afluência de pessoas, e durou até perto da meia-noite, em virtude das frequentes interrupções de alguns dos presentes que disputavam as propostas de Rutherford, acusando-o de ser um propagandista protestante imediatamente após o orador ter começado a apresentar textos bíblicos para comprovar as suas asserções. Uns protestaram a concessão de autorização de um edifício público para eventos religiosos, ao passo que outros vaiavam os Jesuítas e Protestantes, dando vivas à República, e causando uma divisão entre o público quanto a permitir-se a conclusão da palestra. Rutherford procurava assegurar a audiência que não pretendia explorar ninguém e que, assim como eles, também ele fora enganado por líderes religiosos. Alguns dos que protestavam abandonaram então o Liceu e Rutherford prosseguiu com a sua explanação das causas da Grande Guerra aludindo às profecias bíblicas que apontavam para o ano de 1914 como uma data marcante que abriria caminho para eventos momentosos que envolveriam todas as nações, mas não conseguiu avançar mais, pois novos protestos eclodiram, e Rutherford teve de abandonar o palco, deixando um convite àqueles que quisessem obter informações circunstanciadas sobre os temas que pretendera abordar naquela noite para que fornecessem o seu endereço. Corresponderam 1.252 pessoas a este convite, tudo isto no meio de contínuos protestos de alguns que, nas palavras de um jornalista, "estavam mais interessadas nas dificuldades da vida quotidiana do que viver para todo o sempre"[18].

O intenso conflito político que grassara em Lisboa desde o golpe revolucionário de 18 de Abril, e que forçara o Governador Civil a declarar o estado de sítio e a suspender algumas liberdades civis, bem como os rumores de novas revoltas militares em progresso[19], e a agitação social da República, cuja própria existência se mantinha muito instável desde 1910, podem também explicar o ódio e a suspeição demonstrados por muitos dos presentes face a qualquer tipo de discurso religioso, algo que os republicanos mais radicais associavam comummente com o velho e reaccionário regime monárquico e os seus representantes na época. Inclusivamente, um repórter de um jornal republicano radical noticiou como, após o fim da conferência, muitas pessoas se questionaram como o Governo pudera autorizar aquilo que entenderam como sendo uma conferência religiosa reaccionária[20]. Por outro lado, um jornal de matriz católica denunciou no seu editorial de primeira página a forma mal-educada e pouco hospitaleira como o pregador estrangeiro fora recebido, embora se distanciasse das suas doutrinas[21].

A reacção de algumas igrejas protestantes foi mais expressiva. Alguns jornais generalistas identificaram incorrectamente Rutherford como Protestante, o que induziu um protesto escrito de ministros protestantes como João Jorge de Oliveira[22], baptista, que lamentava que a interrupção da conferência não permitira a Rutherford expor bem as suas ideias bíblicas para que pudessem ser melhor contrastadas com as protestantes[23], ou como Joaquim Rosa Baptista[24], presbítero metodista da Igreja Evangélica Lisbonense, que classificava antes Rutherford como membro de uma "seita herética – o Russellismo" (uma alusão a Charles Taze Russell). Rosa Baptista admitiu ter sido a sua Igreja a imprimir e distribuir as brochuras entregues nas imediações do Liceu que alegadamente provavam os erros dos Estudantes da Bíblia[25], o que demonstrava um conhecimento antecipado da chegada de Rutherford. O periódico protestante congregacionalista O Mensageiro anunciou na sua edição de Maio que estava disponível a brochura para quem a quisesse. Nesse mesmo número, um artigo de José Augusto Santos e Silva, fundador do jornal, intitulado "Falsos profetas, falsos cristos e falsos evangelhos" atacou os Estudantes da Bíblia, embora não os identificasse por nome, acautelando os leitores para uma "praga de novas seitas" americanas e que um ministro "notável e sábio" de uma delas chegara a Lisboa para revelar as conclusões das suas pesquisas, numa clara alusão ao conteúdo do anúncio da palestra de Rutherford[26].

26 O Mensageiro, Lisboa, 2.5.1925, p. 2. Em Março de 1926, este periódico informará que no Alentejo um colportor evangélico encontrara uma brochura dos Estudantes da Bíblia. Ainda em 1925, Henry Maxwell Wright, um missionário anglicano, publicara uma brochura através da Aliança Evangélica Portuguesa em Lisboa intitulada Destino dos Mortos, para contestar a brochura dos Estudantes da Bíblia intitulada Onde estão os mortos? Aparentemente, outras obras de teor similar foram publicadas por confissões protestantes nesses anos (AATJ, Relatório sobre os primórdios das Testemunhas de Jeová em Portugal [a. 1971], p. 15; HENRIQUES, Apesar destes eventos, e dado o interesse de tantas pessoas que não puderam entrar no Liceu Camões, George Young publicou um anúncio em vários jornais contendo a morada de um escritório recém-inaugurado pelos Estudantes da Bíblia na Rua de Santa Justa, n.º 25, em Lisboa, e inclusivamente ordenou a transcrição de todo o discurso de Rutherford em O Século a 15 de Maio[27]. Young conseguiu imprimir em português o "bestseller" de Rutherford: Milhões que agora vivem jamais morrerão[28]. Os tratados Can the Living Talk With the Dead? e Hell – What is it? Who are there? Can they get out?, foram também publicados em português (embora desconheçamos os títulos traduzidos) nesse ano de 1925, demonstrando uma clara tendência não só para debater tradicionais crenças católicas e protestantes mas também o pensamento de uma comunidade em crescimento e uma prática muito procurada na época – o Espiritismo[29].

George Young iniciou ainda em Setembro de 1925 a publicação, em português, do principal órgão de divulgação das crenças do movimento: A Torre de Vigia (hoje, A Sentinela, e em inglês: The Watch Tower). De acordo com o relatório anual desse ano, 327.500 itens gratuitos foram distribuídos no continente, Madeira, Cabo Verde, Moçambique, Angola e Goa, sendo ainda vendidas 5.280 brochuras e recebidas 3.000 cartas, sinal de alguma vitalidade do movimento emergente[30]. Entretanto, chegou do Brasil, em Fevereiro de 1926, Virgil Ferguson, filho de Bellona Ferguson, uma das primeiras Estudantes da Bíblia a ser baptizada no Brasil, junto com sua esposa, que substituiria George Young na coordenação do movimento em Portugal[31]. Ferguson deu início em Abril às reuniões públicas de culto, que ocorriam três vezes por semana na sede em Lisboa[32]. No fim desse ano, A Torre de Vigia tinha 450 subscritores[33].

Para além das obras da WTBTS traduzidas para português e distribuídas localmente, a partir de 1926 muitos dos panfletos foram redigidos pelo grupo português (ou companhia, na expressão da época), sendo alguns visados pela Comissão de Censura, que também permitiria a circulação de A Torre de Vigia a partir da edição de Dezembro de 1927. Estes panfletos explanavam os objectivos do movimento bem como expunham as crenças da Igreja Católica e Protestante que consideravam não ter fundamento bíblico e que estavam ligadas à celebração de festividades tradicionais[34].

Em 14 de Outubro de 1927, Virgil Ferguson recebeu autorização do Governo Civil de Lisboa para dirigir reuniões de culto religioso, especificando-se que estava autorizado a "reunir em sua casa algumas pessoas a quem desejava ministrar explicações sobre assuntos das Escrituras Sagradas"[35]. Em 1971, Lúcio Mendes recordaria como, naquele ano, toda a "companhia" alugara um automóvel com o objectivo de distribuir panfletos pela cidade, após obterem previamente um carimbo do Governo Civil, que seria muito útil no caso de abordagem policial. Em Maio de 1928, encontra-se notícia desta evangelização num jornal protestante que adverte os incautos que tal "propaganda não era evangélica" mas de uma "seita não-protestante"[36].

Por esta altura, ocorreram os primeiros baptismos de crentes, por imersão, em número de catorze, na praia de Caxias[37]. Em Janeiro de 1929, João Feliciano, um português emigrante nos E.U.A., regressa ao país para servir como colportor[38], e por volta de 1930, Manuel da Silva Jordão, um jovem jardineiro que ouvira uma palestra de George Young no Brasil, decidiu também voltar a Portugal para partilhar a sua nova fé como colportor. Desta forma, novas fronteiras se abriram: Beja, Mafra, Ericeira, Soure, Figueira da Foz, Porto, Braga e seus arredores[39]. Ainda assim, Ferguson lamentava-se, em meados de 1930, na edição brasileira de A Torre de Vigia, de que eram necessários mais pregadores para cobrir o território do país[40]. O relatório anual das actividades dos Estudantes da Bíblia indicava que havia cerca de cinquenta pessoas interessadas na sua mensagem, que cerca de cinco a dez pessoas assistiam às suas reuniões de culto às quintas-feiras, e quinze a trinta pessoas aos domingos. Estas reuniões eram conduzidas por um alemão chamado Dienzler, antigo capataz de uma fábrica de farinha, que falava fluentemente português, apesar de ter chegado apenas um ano antes[41].

Entretanto, o principal periódico mudou o seu nome de A Torre de Vigia para Luz e Verdade, a partir de Janeiro de 1932, anunciando também a adopção do nome de Testemunhas de Jeová para identificar o movimento religioso. Foram alegadamente entregues a nível nacional 260.000 cópias a magistrados, autoridades policiais, médicos, advogados, oficiais militares e professores.

Data deste período a primeira resistência conhecida às actividades evangelizadoras do movimento, nomeadamente em Braga, onde Manuel da Silva Jordão organizou reuniões com meia-dúzia de assinantes do periódico Luz e Verdade, alugando ali um quarto e imprimindo alguns tratados, visitando ainda assinantes na zona rural. Terá havido uma queixa apresentada por um clérigo católico local e Jordão terá sido detido, e mais tarde liberto, seguindo-se em data incerta um debate com um sacerdote católico na Praça da República[42].

Apesar do reduzido número de evangelizadores, a distribuição maciça de publicações entre a população teria algum impacto e, mais uma vez, encontramos um eco das suas actividades no jornal protestante Portugal Novo, que publicou uma série de artigos redigidos por João Coelho, em 1931-1932, sobre os seus alegados erros doutrinais, esclarecendo os leitores que A Torre de Vigia mudara de nome para Luz e Verdade, dado muitos protestantes escreverem para o Portugal Novo para inquirirem se eram escritos evangélicos[43]. Mas este novo competidor iria cessar as suas actividades em breve, pois em Julho de 1933, Luz e Verdade deixa de ser impresso. O casal Ferguson deixa o país em 19 de Junho de 1934, ficando a supervisão da evangelização a cargo de M. S. Jordão e João Feliciano. Talvez o clima político e a turbulência social possam explicar essa saída do País, dado que dezenas de revoltas e tumultos, conspirações e manifestações não cessaram de ocorrer de 1925 a 1934[44]. A filial de Madrid das Testemunhas de Jeová supervisiona então as actividades em Portugal, com visitas ocasionais de colportores estrangeiros. Contudo, com o deflagrar da Guerra Civil de Espanha e o início da II Guerra Mundial as comunicações diminuem, e o grupo português vê decrescer a sua actividade, embora certos membros ainda se reúnam com alguma frequência, mas apenas em lares particulares. Só em meados da década de 40 abriram novamente um local de culto público, primeiro na Estefânia, em Lisboa, e depois em 1949 na Rua Passos Manuel[45].

Foi no decurso da II Guerra Mundial que o pequeno grupo contactou a filial do Brasil, em 1944, e a sede mundial nos E.U.A., em 1946, solicitando o envio de um missionário. Em Maio de 1947, Frederick Franz e Hayden Covington, representantes legais da WTBTS, visitam este grupo de oito membros e dez interessados. Foi efectuado um pedido oficial ao Ministério do Interior com vista à legalização e autorização do envio de missionários mas este foi indeferido, com o fundamento de que não seria conveniente permitir o estabelecimento em Portugal da filial de uma religião que entendiam como estrangeira. Nesse mesmo ano, em Dezembro, vieram novos representantes estrangeiros para procurar reorganizar os grupos, reajustar procedimentos congregacionais, e reactivar as reuniões e a evangelização, face à falta de supervisão por mais de uma década. Contrataram um advogado para a legalização, trazendo os estatutos da congénere brasileira como padrão. Aparentemente, o advogado não foi muito expedito, alegando que desde que as reuniões não tivessem muitas pessoas não haveria problema. Sucederam-se várias visitas até 1956 para reorganizar o movimento e fazer sucessivos pedidos de legalização, ficando, desde 1952, John Cooke como responsável. Formaram-se vários grupos em Lisboa, Vila Nova de Gaia, Açores, e uns mais pequenos na região de Braga e Torre de Moncorvo. Em 1959, chegam quatro casais de missionários estrangeiros, atingindo-se, em 1960, a cifra de 800 membros e outros tantos estudantes[46].

As actividades das Testemunhas de Jeová foram autorizadas pelo Governo Civil em 1927, mas não pelo Ministério do Interior. Até 1961 tudo decorreu sem grande intromissão das autoridades, ainda que com ocasionais e raras perturbações da parte de Estes missionários inauguraram a evangelização das TJ no Barreiro, Setúbal, Évora, Beja, Faro, Vila Franca de Xira, Santarém, Caldas da Rainha, Leiria, Coimbra, Aveiro, Castelo Branco, Viana do Castelo e Guarda. Em algumas das congregações, os missionários tiveram de criar escolas de leitura para ultrapassar a prevalecente iliteracia (AATJ, PICCONE, D. – Report on Portugal, c. 1971, p. 6, mimeog.).

ministros protestantes e católicos, mas com pouca expressão. Nem mesmo os pedidos sucessivos de legalização provocaram uma especial investigação da PIDE.

O que mudou esta situação de aparente indiferença por parte das autoridades foi a eclosão do conflito armado em Angola, em Março de 1961. A absoluta neutralidade política e militar das Testemunhas de Jeová revelar-se-ia inaceitável para a Ditadura, conduzindo a um confronto. Mas falamos de um universo de pouco mais de mil pessoas. Não pode ser apenas a objecção de consciência que explica que doravante a PIDE e outras agências governamentais passem a dedicar muito tempo a vigiar e impedir as actividades das Testemunhas de Jeová, resultando em 1962 na expulsão dos missionários estrangeiros, na proscrição das suas publicações, e posteriormente julgamentos em tribunal, prisões e outras sevícias. É preciso recuar no tempo e passarmos a África, para entendermos como se espalhou a mensagem das Testemunhas de Jeová ali, em particular nos territórios coloniais, como Moçambique e Angola, para se perceberem outros factores envolvidos[47].

As Testemunhas de Jeová em Moçambique

As crenças das Testemunhas de Jeová entraram em África através do missionário protestante australiano Joseph Booth, que defendia a "África para os Africanos" e sempre advogou causas políticas sociais e religiosas impopulares. Em 1906, rejeitado por muitas organizações religiosas, foi aos E.U.A. e convenceu Charles Taze Russell a designá-lo 47 Não podemos aqui detalhar a presença das TJ em Cabo Verde, São Tomé e Príncipe, Guiné-Bissau, Timor e Macau. Neste último território, as TJ estiveram presentes desde 1961, mas nunca houve mais do que dez fiéis até ao final do período em estudo. (cf. 1962 a 1975 Yearbook of Jehovah's Witnesses...). Salientamos, em 1965, um artigo em O Clarim, semanário católico macaense, que expressou desagrado pela evangelização das TJ. Consequentemente a PSP pediu instruções à PIDE que informou que a pregação das TJ era desnacionalizante e que as suas publicações deveriam ser apreendidas. Dois crentes da confissão, missionários em Macau, foram repatriados para Hong Kong e as suas publicações foram confiscadas (TT, PIDE/DGS, SC SR 337/46, vol. 15, fol. 107-111, 144-146; 1974 Yearbook of Jehovah's Witnesses, 1973, p. 58). Quanto a Timor, há evidências de que cinco TJ estavam activas na ilha em 1954 e 1955 (1955 e 1956 Yearbook of Jehovah's Witnesses). Na região da Guiné Bissau, de 1969 a 1973 evangelizaram ali três a quatro TJ (1970 a 1974 Yearbook of Jehovah's Witnesses...). No arquipélago de Cabo Verde, uma TJ deslocou-se de Dacar para ali em 1958, mas não conseguiu radicar o movimento. Apenas em 1962 houve nova tentativa, desta feita com a ajuda de cabo-verdianos que regressavam da América e que pregaram na Praia (Ilha de Santiago) e na Ilha Brava. A PIDE detectou com facilidade estas tentativas e controlou a correspondência dos crentes, apreendeu as suas publicações, deteve alguns dos fiéis e influenciou a recusa da extensão de autorização de permanência das TJ de origem cabo-verdiana que vieram da América, forçando-os a sair do arquipélago. Em Maio de 1963, a PIDE solicitou o apoio do Bispo de Cabo Verde, D. José Colaço, enviando-lhe diversas publicações das TJ. O bispo confirmou o carácter subversivo das TJ face à sua recusa em matar outros seres humanos, atitude incompreensível à luz da necessidade de o País travar uma guerra defensiva. Em 1974, havia catorze fiéis e trinta e um estudantes (TT, PIDE/DGS, SC CI (2) 1734, fol. 372-373; SC SR 337/46, vol. 14, fol. 226; Del CV SR 17, fol. 14, 220, 233-238, 252-253, 291-295; 1983 Yearbook..., p. 170, 182, 185, 213; 1959 a 1975 Yearbook of Jehovah's Witnesses...). Na Ilha de São Tomé a comunidade de TJ era formada pelos fiéis e simpatizantes deportados de Moçambique em diversas ocasiões a partir da década de 1930, não ultrapassando uma dúzia de membros, espalhados por diversas plantações, a esmagadora maioria deles com uma rudimentar doutrinação. No final do termo das suas sentenças, foram reenviados para Moçambique. A PIDE não gostava da sua presença na Ilha, procurando isolá-los no Ilhéu das Rolas para evitar a propagação das suas crenças, mas esse projecto nunca se concretizou. Em 1967, já não havia nenhuns trabalhadores forçados na Ilha pertencentes à confissão e só depois de 1974 a sua evangelização seria reiniciada (PINTO – Jehovah's Witnesses..., p. 78-79).

representante da WTBTS na África Central e do Sul. Da Cidade do Cabo começou a espalhar as crenças dos Estudantes da Bíblia, mas cedo adoptou um rumo independente. Um meio de difusão rápida de informações na época era o constante fluxo de trabalhadores para as minas sul-africanas que, depois de terminarem os seus contratos, ao regressarem a casa, espalhavam as novas crenças aprendidas nas minas, criando em alguns casos grupos de crentes, com um nível de doutrinação muito débil, pois fundiam frequentemente as novas crenças com doutrinas de outras religiões e costumes tradicionais africanos. Assim, quase até à década de 1950, a expressão "Watchtower" era usada na África Central Britânica para identificar sistemas de crenças religiosas heterodoxas sendo que as autoridades identificavam como iguais, por vezes, com pouco critério, tanto as Testemunhas de Jeová ortodoxas como os movimentos independentes. Só depois da II Guerra Mundial, as autoridades britânicas autorizaram a supervisão da WTBTS para filtrarem quem realmente pertencia ou não àquela organização religiosa[48].

Ora, os novos ideais religiosos dos trabalhadores regressando das minas eram percebidos pelas autoridades coloniais portuguesas como desnacionalizantes e diminuindo a influência católica, que era considerada, de forma geral, como contribuindo para os objectivos políticos e económicos coloniais. Defendia-se que apenas os missionários nacionais compreendiam a missão civilizadora portuguesa, ao passo que os de outras denominações concediam aos nativos africanos um espaço de debate e de consciencialização da sua sujeição ao domínio europeu[49]. Para alguns, as doutrinas das Testemunhas de Jeová eram vistas como uma afronta à nação portuguesa pois eram acima de tudo uma afronta ao Catolicismo. Um artigo no Diário de Moçambique[50] de 1952 declara-as uma "ameaça à soberania portuguesa", porque, entre outras razões, eram uma heresia religiosa, e "se não a combatermos, negamos a nossa condição como católicos, destruímo-nos como Portugueses"[51].

48 SHEPPERSON – Independent African..., p. 152-153, 155, 326; FIELDS – Revival..., p. 91, 252; CROSS – The Watchtower..., passim. A importância do papel das rotas migratórias neste âmbito é posta em evidência através de alguns breves exemplos de como as crenças das TJ entraram em Moçambique. Por volta de 1917, Habil Nantamanga, de Metangula (Niassa), migrou para a Rodésia, onde aprendeu sobre os Estudantes da Bíblia. Ao regressar a casa, pregou as "coisas novas" que aprendera apesar da oposição da Missão Anglicana. Foi para Blantyre (na Niassalândia, hoje Malawi), regressando a Metangula para pregar na década de 1940. Outro exemplo é Albino Mhelembe, ex-membro da Missão Suíça perto de Lourenço Marques, baptizado como TJ nas minas perto de Joanesburgo. Regressando a casa, partilhou as novas crenças com os membros da Missão Suíça, o que resultou na criação de grupos de crentes, um deles na capital da colónia. Um terceiro caso é o de Paulo Simango, natural de Manica, que se converteu depois de ter assistido a reuniões das TJ no Transvaal. Recebeu instrução intensiva durante 1934-35 na Rodésia do Sul e depois foi iniciado na actividade de pregação, tarefa que executou viajando a pé pelo continente africano, pregando e persuadindo outros indivíduos a juntarem-se àquela organização religiosa, ao passo que efectuava o trajecto de retorno a sua casa, onde chegou em 1937. Aí pregou por oito meses antes de seguir para a filial das TJ no Cabo, onde recebeu instrução adicional. Regressou a Moçambique em 1942, aí permanecendo até 1953, quando foi deportado para São Tomé (PINTO – Jehovah's Witnesses..., p. 76-79). Uma análise mais detalhada da presença das TJ nesta colónia poderá ser encontrada no artigo citado anteriormente (p. 61-123).

A atitude típica das autoridades portuguesas em Moçambique neste período inicial foi a repressão. Por exemplo, na década de 1930, um grupo de assinantes da revista A Torre de Vigia foi preso, julgado e deportado, uns para São Tomé e Príncipe e outros para o Norte da colónia, por cerca de dez a doze anos de trabalhos forçados. Contudo, isto acabou por favorecer a disseminação das suas crenças, muito embora como nos territórios britânicos, o domínio doutrinal das crenças das Testemunhas de Jeová dessas pessoas fosse rudimentar.

De 1929 a 1940, houve Testemunhas de Jeová estrangeiras que tentaram pregar a portugueses, ingleses e indianos, apesar das autoridades em Lourenço Marques não simpatizarem muito com as suas actividades. Algumas detenções ocorreram, segundo os relatórios das Testemunhas de Jeová, influenciadas pelo arcebispo local (D. Teodósio Clemente de Gouveia), que teria convencido o Governador de que as publicações das Testemunhas de Jeová levariam a população a pegar em armas e iniciar uma revolução[52]. No final da II Guerra Mundial, a maioria dos membros das Testemunhas de Jeová em Moçambique, cerca de 125, estava localizada no Norte, junto à Niassalândia, de onde vinham outros grupos de Testemunhas de Jeová ajudar na evangelização do território. Em 1945, quatro delas foram presas. O oficial português que os interrogou, ao ouvir falar de que eles pregavam acerca de "um outro reino", o de Deus, terá dito que o "único reino ali era o português e que não queria ouvir falar de outro". Foram presos e enviados para realizar trabalhos forçados[53].

Apesar de as Testemunhas de Jeová desincentivarem qualquer actividade que promova a sublevação contra as autoridades, alguns sectores dentro do regime ditatorial português temiam que infiltrações perniciosas os levassem a deixar de crer numa intervenção divina, para passarem elas próprias a tomar em mãos a tarefa de introduzir uma sociedade igualitária. Receavam que pudessem unificar grupos e/ou etnias diferentes num mesmo propósito ou que inflamassem os nativos que enfrentavam dificuldades económicas. Além disso, a ideia de um "novo mundo perfeito", servindo a Deus de forma unida, sem discriminação social, económica ou racial, mas antes no mesmo plano hierárquico, contrastava muito com a realidade colonial.

Nos anos 50, um dos elementos da administração colonial que se destacou no estudo e na definição da política colonial relativamente às igrejas africanas foi Afonso Ivens-Ferraz de Freitas, administrador do concelho de Lourenço Marques. Em 1957, concluiu um relatório policial secreto sobre essas "seitas", que foi, mais tarde, distribuído confidencialmente a todas as autoridades administrativas da colónia. O seu pensamento e actuação face às Testemunhas de Jeová é ilustrado num processo que conduziu em 1953, que revela outras duas formas de encarar o desafio da existência das Testemunhas de Jeová naquela colónia, em contraste com a repressão sumária vigente até então. Em Setembro de 1953, no Luabo, Zambézia, a polícia prendeu mais de uma dezena de Testemunhas de Jeová africanas, nacionais e estrangeiras, e enviou-as para a prisão de Lourenço Marques por quase um ano. O agente encarregado do processo propôs a deportação dos africanos nacionais para S. Tomé e a expulsão dos estrangeiros para a Niassalândia. A acusação era clara: os detidos pertenciam a uma organização religiosa que defendia o ideal de "Liberdade para Todos" e "Justiça num Mundo Novo", aparentados dos "comunistas" e, segundo o agente, tinha sido de uma maneira similar a esta que no Quénia tinham surgido revoltas[54].

Em Julho de 1954, o responsável da filial da WTBTS em Blantyre escreveu ao governador-geral de Moçambique, sem sucesso, e envolveu as autoridades britânicas da Niassalândia. Em Novembro, o consulado britânico em Lourenço Marques escreveu ao Governador, inquirindo sobre os seus dois súbditos, também detidos pelas autoridades portuguesas. Ferraz de Freitas fica com a impressão de que os dirigentes das Testemunhas, "uma das seitas religiosas mais perigosas", eram "capazes de remover o Céu e a Terra para defender os seus adeptos". É esta dimensão internacional do movimento que convence o administrador da sua perigosidade. Contudo, convicto de que a rede das Testemunhas de Jeová se estendia de Lourenço Marques ao Niassa, preferia que os detidos se mantivessem na colónia para, a partir deles, detectar outros grupos e depois agir decisivamente. No entanto, a intervenção britânica obrigava à manutenção da pena de desterro para S. Tomé, para "evitar que os indígenas pensem que se cedeu a pressões estranhas". A política do administrador passou assim mais pela obtenção de informações, do que propriamente "prisões indiscriminadas" tentando convencer disso as restantes autoridades administrativas. O administrador Ferraz de Freitas advogava assim uma aparente tolerância que tinha objectivos estratégicos bem definidos: conhecer melhor a implantação do movimento em Moçambique para agir decisivamente num futuro próximo com máxima eficácia[55].

Mas, neste processo, viria à superfície uma outra visão quanto à perigosidade das Testemunhas de Jeová. As averiguações conduziriam a polícia a Habil Nantamanga, que se reunia com mais seis pessoas em Metangula, junto ao lago Niassa. Foi pedido ao chefe de posto que investigasse e ele interrogou sete Testemunhas de Jeová. Apreendeu publicações em português e cinianja e reportou que já sabia que as Testemunhas de Jeová as recebiam, e até que vinha controlando discretamente as suas actividades, mas

"apesar de haver já decorrido muito tempo; nada se poude apurar contra êles que sómente se preocupam com a sua religião mas, pelos vistos, muito mal pois, muito embora aqui estejam há muitos anos, contam-se pelos dedos de uma mão os adeptos da seita. E o Estado Português garante a liberdade do culto!… "Se fossem perigosos já teriam causado inúmeros distúrbios na região dado ali estarem desde 1924", aduziu. Pelo contrário, distinguem-se pela "sua disciplina, acatamento e submissão à Autoridade Portuguesa". Ferraz de Freitas escreve que o chefe de posto, bem como o administrador de circunscrição de Amaramba, que concordara com o seu subalterno, desconheciam a importância e os reais objectivos das Testemunhas de Jeová. E acusou o chefe de posto de desconhecer a constituição portuguesa, já que a liberdade religiosa era limitada pelos "direitos e interesses da soberania de Portugal"[56].

Segundo Ferraz de Freitas, na sua síntese sobre as seitas de Moçambique, as doutrinas da Testemunhas de Jeová, "sob o ponto de vista subversivo, podem ser sintetizadas numa verdadeira 'guerra aberta' às sociedades existentes no Mundo e às suas regras de conduta. Opõem-se e contrariam as organizações políticas, religiosas e económicas mundiais, sejam elas quais forem. Só admitem a existência do Reino de Deus com absoluto desprezo pelo Mundo e a sua organização. Incitam à anarquia mundial". Assim, até ao fim do regime, em Moçambique, ao lado da repressão dura praticada por muitas das autoridades coloniais no terreno e da tolerância "temporária" de que Ferraz de Freitas era defensor (como prelúdio para uma repressão posterior quando se conhecesse toda a extensão da implantação do movimento), coexistiu uma terceira via, que se caracterizava pela convicção de que as Testemunhas de Jeová e outras igrejas minoritárias não representavam qualquer perigo[57].

Um outro teórico dos movimentos religiosos na África Negra foi Silva Cunha. Em 1956, o futuro ministro do Ultramar e, na altura, professor do Instituto Superior de Estudos Ultramarinos, elaborou um esboço de classificação das associações místico--religiosas existentes na África Negra, num relatório sobre movimentos associativos em Angola[58].

Quando fala da Watchtower ou Testemunhas de Jeová, Silva Cunha é bastante claro em afirmar que do "ponto de vista social e político, a doutrina é perigosa, pois conduz à rebelião permanente contra toda a autoridade constituída, por virtude de as considerarem produto apenas das forças do mal". Esta frase será citada dezenas de vezes, em Angola, Moçambique e na metrópole, nas décadas seguintes, em relatórios Freitas é influenciado na sua apreciação do movimento pela obra de Silva Cunha publicada no ano anterior que dedicava algumas páginas à "Watch Tower" em África (CUNHA, Joaquim Moreira da Silva – Movimentos Associativos na África Negra, Lisboa: JIU, 1956, p. 31-33, onde se encontram as mesmas conclusões que Freitas mais tarde adapta no seu relatório de 1957.

das autoridades policiais e judiciais, que lhe reconheceram a autoridade necessária para fundamentar iniciativas repressivas[59].

Esta ideia de que o separatismo ou a independência religiosa contribuía de alguma forma para o nacionalismo africano era comum junto das administrações coloniais europeias em África e estes teóricos portugueses procuram legitimar cientificamente os seus receios face ao aparecimento de novos movimentos religiosos na África portuguesa, apoiando-se nas ideias de investigadores sociais, como Georges Balandier, que defendiam na época que "as inovações religiosas na África Negra constituíam a pré-história do nacionalismo moderno"[60].

Um artigo seminal de Terence O. Ranger examina as análises efectuadas, ao longo de décadas, sobre a génese e evolução de movimentos religiosos em África. Aquelas mais usadas pelos pensadores coloniais portugueses, as de Balandier e Lanternari, não conseguiram sobreviver ao teste do tempo, pois focavam-se muito no colonialismo como único factor explicativo[61]. Foi Bujtenhujs quem expôs de modo mais enfático as limitações do modelo explicativo de Balandier, constatando que, em África, o nacionalismo e a independência religiosa foram mais ou menos simultâneos em vez de sequenciais e com poucas conexões entre si. Além disso, nenhum movimento nacionalista importante saiu directamente de uma igreja independente ou movimento messiânico[62].

Contudo, a extrema preocupação destas análises posteriores em dissociar aquilo que é cultural do político, ou entre aquilo que é simbólico do instrumental, cria, continua Ranger, uma falsa dicotomia. As novas teorias, retirando os movimentos religiosos do estudo político e histórico, também não se mostraram operacionais, pois, aduz Ranger, "poucos conseguem estudar estes movimentos [religiosos] sem sentirem que mesmo não sendo inequivocamente anticoloniais eles constituíam uma forma de política; sem sentirem uma racionalidade na sua irracionalidade; sem serem acometidos pela instrumentalização dos seus símbolos". Destarte, a questão seria não tanto se tais movimentos eram políticos, mas que forma tomava a sua actividade religiosa e política[63].

Ora, Ranger utiliza precisamente os estudos sobre os Movimentos Watchtower como exemplo da evolução da compreensão intelectual do significado dos movimentos religiosos em África ao longo do século XX. As explicações nacionalistas viam no discurso de Elliot Kamwana, que introduziu as crenças da Watchtower na África Central no final da primeira década do século XX, uma expressão do descontentamento africano contra a ordem estabelecida da Igreja e do Estado numa verdadeira manifestação de nacionalismo africano[64].

Em 1984, um estudo que analisou a produção escrita de Kamwana, aquando da sua prisão, nas Seychelles, em 1915, chegou à conclusão de que mais do que alterar as doutrinas de Russell da WTBTS com modificações protonacionalistas, Kamwana incentivou os seus seguidores a não participar em cerimónias de carácter nacionalista. Quando regressou à Niassalândia, em 1937, a sua recusa em juntar-se às associações nativas e participar na luta nacionalista desiludiu a muitos. A sua Missão Mlonda, como as Testemunhas de Jeová, sofreria violentos ataques do Malawi Congress Party, após a independência, em 1964, pela sua recusa em adquirir cartões do partido único no poder. Acrescenta Ranger que era agora claro que a motivação dos profetas destes movimentos religiosos independentes "Watchtower" não era nacionalista ou protonacionalista, embora algumas das suas ideias pudessem ser usadas numa espécie de anticolonialismo difuso[65].

Após o desvanecer da explicação nacionalista para a eclosão destes grupos religiosos, sucedeu-se a ligação a uma tomada de consciência proletária ou proto-proletária. Sholto Cross foi o primeiro a defender que se tratava de um "movimento social", operando como um primitivo movimento laboral, dado que era através do trabalho migratório que a sua ideologia se difundia, sendo o seu conteúdo ideológico e forma associativa particularmente adaptáveis àqueles cujas vidas alternavam entre os alojamentos mineiros e as aldeias. Cross defendia que "a ideia de confrontação entre os Negros e os Brancos, comum a todas as formas de crença 'Watchtower'", dava a aparência de "radicalismo" e "anticolonialismo", mas que, mais importante era a sua nova forma de expressão que reflectia a "formação de grupos sociais com interesses comuns derivados em última instância da sua participação comum na industrialização"[66].

Um segundo autor, John Higginson, foi mais longe e advogou a ideia de que no Katanga, os movimentos Watchtower se tornaram o catalisador para a erupção de uma ideologia de classe laboral. Segundo Higginson, nos anos 1920, esses movimentos cindiram-se em dois, Kitawala e Kitower. O primeiro estaria associado a Tomo Nyirenda que planearia a eliminação física e sistemática de brancos e chefes africanos leais aos governos coloniais. Kitawala seria assim uma ideologia de violência insurreccionista. Por outro lado, Kitower apelaria a uma "ideologia quietista de afastamento dos locais de trabalho e cidades industriais". Higginson defendia que os toscos conceitos de insurreição do movimento de Nyirenda se provariam adequados às condições urbanas, e que os líderes da Kitawala teriam sido proeminentes na organização de greves e boicotes com uma ideologia que alimentava a militância laboral. Ranger desmonta estas conclusões. Ao passo que não nega que algumas das ideias desses movimentos possam ter sido utilizadas para protesto popular, como nas revoltas campesinas no Zaire Oriental, em 1944, cujo líder, Bushiri, era um trabalhador migrante inspirado por ensinos Kitawala, já considera improvável que Nyirenda realmente planeasse um sistemático assassinato dos brancos e chefes africanos. Na realidade, os seus seguidores não atacaram brancos e alguns chefes africanos na Rodésia do Norte e no Katanga colaboraram com eles. Investigadores que trabalharam a documentação existente nos arquivos desses territórios têm sérias dúvidas quanto ao seu carácter anticolonial, anticapitalista e às suas intenções insurreccionárias. A publicação de material arquivístico, em 1983, mostrou que a preocupação vital do movimento de Nyirenda em Sakania (Katanga) era a purificação e restruturação das sociedades rurais africanas e não guerrear o colonialismo ou atacar os patrões europeus. É possível, defende Ranger, que a interpretação protoproletária desses protestos dependa dos temores paranóicos dos administradores coloniais que asseveravam que a Kitawala preparava uma insurreição a todo o instante[67].

Um estudo de Robert Smith sobre o movimento de curas Mpeve, em 1946, apresenta as autoridades belgas deportando homens apenas porque "realizavam curas" e prendendo aqueles que "oravam a Deus"[68]. Ora, tanto Smith como Ranger não estavam satisfeitos com uma interpretação exclusivamente religiosa para entender movimentos regionais tão abrangentes como os Movimentos Watchtower (designação mais comum nos territórios britânicos) e a Kitawala (designação mais comum no Congo Belga). Havia uma "aparente irracionalidade" na resposta colonial repressiva que espelhava a "aparente irracionalidade" dos adeptos dos movimentos. Seria o trabalho de Karen Fields, de 1985, sobre os movimentos Watchtower, a abordar estas questões de modo satisfatório, procurando entender a ideologia desses movimentos nos seus próprios termos e não enquanto percursora do nacionalismo ou de uma consciencialização de classe. O exemplo por ela apresentado no início da sua obra é paradigmático: um sacerdote católico, numa tarde outonal de 1918, viajando num trilho da floresta na região de Isoka (Rodésia do Norte), encontra um pregador africano que lhe diz: "Cuidado, Deus é grande. Ora apenas a Deus". O sacerdote, de imediato, acusa o homem de sedição, dispara para o ar, detém o pregador e faz com que seja chibateado, levando-o depois ao juiz de paz, que fica similarmente alarmado com o discurso do pregador. Esta reacção eriçada perante ameaças sobrenaturais e estranhas assinalava o receio de rebeliões igualmente estranhas. Fields ambicionou descobrir por que razão os regimes coloniais levaram tão a sério aquilo que define como "uma certa conversa acerca de Deus". Embora Fields conclua que muito do que as autoridades suspeitavam viesse a acontecer nunca se concretizasse, ela concorda que as autoridades estavam certas em encarar tal discurso como ameaçador do domínio colonial. Isto porque este domínio colonial era em si mesmo uma forma arcaica de governo, criticamente dependente de ideologias religiosas. Por exemplo, o domínio colonial na Rodésia do Norte dependia de duas ideologias religiosas irreconciliáveis: do Cristianismo progressivo ensinado pelos missionários, e das crenças tradicionais que conferiam autoridade aos chefes locais dentro do sistema do Domínio Indirecto. Assim, a ideologia colonial era ambígua, pois ao passo que as missões serviam o regime por espalhar a cultura ocidental e legitimar o domínio colonial, elas minavam o regime por combater o "paganismo" que estava na base de muito do que suportava as autoridades costumárias, um factor-chave na continuidade do sistema de Domínio Indirecto. Neste contexto, movimentos religiosos africanos que repudiassem tanto as missões da Cristandade como a religião tradicional, e em particular as missões por serem demasiado tolerantes com aquela, atacavam o coração da ideologia colonial, e aí residiria a justificação para o estado colonial atacar estes milenaristas[69].

Vimos assim como, até à década de 1950, a expressão "Watchtower", ou "Kitawala"[70], era usada na África Central para identificar sistemas de crenças religiosas heterodoxos e as autoridades coloniais identificavam, por vezes, com pouco critério, como se fossem iguais, tanto as Testemunhas de Jeová ortodoxas como os movimentos independentes. Estes, disseminados pela África Central, não só diferiam entre si, como frequentemente se opunham uns aos outros. Eram movimentos fluidos, marcados pelo discurso dos seus carismáticos pregadores e sem uma autoridade que centralizasse as suas doutrinas, caracterizadas por um sincretismo escatológico entre o profetismo africano e a reinterpretação de algumas crenças milenaristas das Testemunhas de Jeová, mas que nunca fizeram parte da estrutura da WTBTS.

A presença da Kitawala foi associada pelas autoridades belgas a diversos episódios de instabilidade social no Congo, pelo que qualquer novo movimento religioso que aparentasse uma mínima ligação discursiva ou evidência de conexões com a WTBTS (entendida como a raiz de todos esses problemas), era reprimido de imediato.

Essa prática belga é confirmada por Sholto Cross na análise de um extenso relatório preparado por essa administração colonial sobre a Kitawala ("Rapport de Synthèse sur le Mouvement Kitawala") por volta de 1954. Cross refere também como os relatórios de natureza similar preparados na Rodésia do Sul e Rodésia do Norte padeciam de similar dramatismo e distorção, alimentados por informadores e detectives africanos cujos dados fornecidos encaixavam no preconceito policial de que uma significativa rebelião africana estaria a ser preparada. As autoridades belgas, como mais tarde as portuguesas, temiam que os movimentos religiosos independentes unificassem as diferentes tribos, inflamassem as emoções dos povos enfrentando problemas económicos, e introduzissem perigosas influências americanas ou pan-africanistas[71].

Os administradores belgas eram "severamente paternalistas face às organizações africanas que não estivessem explicitamente sob o controlo do Estado ou da Igreja"[72] e esse panorama é similar quando lemos os relatórios portugueses. O relatório da Sûreté belga, que se estende por mais de 500 páginas, e cujo valor se mede não só a nível das representações, mas também por alguma informação factual recolhida localmente pelas autoridades coloniais belgas, desenvolve a teoria de que a WTBTS tem como objectivo subverter os estados coloniais em África obedecendo aos interesses do comunismo internacional e do pan-africanismo. Para a polícia belga, Kitawala equivale à WTBTS e todas as iniciativas africanas conducentes à independência são parte da Kitawala, retirando aos participantes africanos a sua autonomia de acção, sentimentos e emoções, deixando-lhes apenas um desejo malévolo de destruir ou uma incapacidade de lidar com a civilização europeia, transformando-os em marionetas em vez de actores no palco da História[73].

Uma leitura superficial ou apressada do trabalho produzido pelos serviços de informação congéneres portugueses poderia conduzir-nos a crer que a sua narrativa dos eventos, de qualquer natureza que estes sejam, corresponde à única e verdadeira versão dos mesmos. Ora, não convém esquecer que essas informações eram produzidas num determinado contexto histórico, com origem, muitas vezes, em denúncias, informadores e fontes anónimas que manipulavam factos e pretendiam mostrar serviço aos seus superiores hierárquicos, ou de quem procuravam obter proventos pecuniários. Essas informações eram então encaixadas nos preconceitos dos agentes policiais, cuja concepção de que todas as organizações de massas estavam controladas e infiltradas por comunistas é bem conhecida, incluindo a assunção de que as religiões de pendor protestante ou não-católicas teriam tendências comunistas, como um relatório produzido por Homero de Matos em 1961, director da PIDE, analisado mais à frente, o prova à saciedade[74]. Estas considerações serão fulcrais para entender a forma como as Testemunhas de Jeová foram encaradas em Angola, e como os eventos que conduziram à sua implantação nessa colónia influenciariam decisivamente a política das autoridades portuguesas na metrópole.

Em Moçambique, até à primeira metade do século XX, as Testemunhas de Jeová foram claramente reprimidas, mas factores como o aumento do número de crentes na década de 60, a sua mobilidade e dispersão geográfica, e a mudança de atitude em alguns sectores da administração colonial em Moçambique no sentido de serem menos repressivos para com as "seitas", com o intuito de melhor as controlar, favoreceu o seu aumento. Muitos funcionários coloniais manifestaram o seu desagrado pela disparidade de actuação das diversas autoridades envolvidas e a inexistência de um enquadramento legal coerente, pois isso, a seu ver, desprestigiava o Estado português. Nos anos 60 e 70, ocorreram ainda com alguma regularidade muitas rusgas e apreensão de publicações, detenções e prisões, e envio de fiéis para campos de concentração, sobretudo dos dirigentes locais das Testemunhas de Jeová. A intensidade da perseguição variava consoante as épocas e as regiões. Inegável é o aumento do número de crentes. Se no período de 1948-1959 o número de Testemunhas de Jeová estabilizou nas duas, três centenas de adeptos, para atingir os mil crentes em 1966, a realidade é que em 1974 já totalizavam 6.373 pregadores com um potencial de crescimento de uns adicionais quase cinco mil estudantes que regularmente se associavam com aqueles[75].

As testemunhas de Jeová em Angola

Apesar da visita episódica, em 1938, de um casal europeu de Testemunhas de Jeová, a várias cidades angolanas e de, no início da década de 1950, alguns angolanos terem recebido publicações da WTBTS por via postal, a decisiva implantação em Angola remonta a um grupo que se separou do Tocoismo na colónia penal da Baía

75 Em ambos os casos coloniais, e também em relação à metrópole, não podemos deixar de levar em linha de conta no grande aumento verificado na primeira metade da década de 1970 a importância da especulação entretanto disseminada entre as comunidades das TJ sobre a data que traria o "fim do sistema de coisas". Embora as publicações oficiais das TJ não o mencionassem de forma específica, circulava informalmente entre os crentes a convicção da possibilidade de 1975 ser esse ano decisivo. O decréscimo verificado nos anos seguintes justifica-se com o desapontamento e consequente defecção de fiéis (PINTO, Pedro – Jehovah's..., p. 114-116). Veja-se no final deste artigo uma tabela contendo os dados numéricos relativos aos crentes em Portugal, de 1961 a 1974, e da acção persecutória do regime concretizada de diversas formas.

dos Tigres no Sudoeste de Angola. O Tocoismo é um movimento religioso profético fundado por Simão Toco, angolano, que foi expulso em 1949 do Congo Belga para Angola por causa das suas crenças religiosas[76].

O percurso de Simão Toco tem sido já muito estudado na sua vertente sociológica e religiosa, pelo que apresentaremos apenas alguns dados novos de cariz mais factual e histórico que relevam para o nosso estudo, designadamente as suas ligações com a WTBTS e os ensinos das Testemunhas de Jeová, por forma a se entender melhor a atitude quer das autoridades belgas, quer portuguesas ao lidarem com Toco e seus seguidores (incluindo aqueles que se afastaram dele e se uniram às Testemunhas de Jeová)[77].

Simão Toco nasceu em 1918, educado na Missão Baptista de Kibokolo (Maquela do Zombo), onde ensinou por algum tempo, após ter concluído os seus estudos, em Luanda, em 1937. Mais tarde, foi usado como instrutor na Estação Missionária de Bembe, de 1939 a 1943. Nesse último ano, foi para Leopoldville (Kinshasa) no Congo Belga. Toco entrou acidentalmente em contacto com publicações das Testemunhas de Jeová, no início da década de 1940, em mais do que uma ocasião, e passou a fundir algumas das suas crenças com as Baptistas. Mais tarde, sem o conhecimento dos superiores baptistas, incorporou-as nas letras musicais do coro de que era responsável, em Kinshasa, composto maioritariamente por angolanos da comunidade Zombo, mas sem conhecimento dos superiores baptistas. É um exemplo dos movimentos africanos que têm na sua génese alguma relação com as actividades evangelizadoras das Testemunhas de Jeová, mas que acabam por se tornar independentes. Toco foi também influenciado pelo Kimbanguismo, como veremos adiante. Em 1946, Toco participou no Congresso Evangélico Missionário da África Ocidental, em Kinshasa, como um dos representantes angolanos. Esta ocasião permitiu-lhe alargar horizontes e trocar ideias com os representantes de igrejas americanas. Ele foi convidado a orar durante uma das sessões e "pediu a ajuda do Espírito Santo para África e para o incremento da Palavra de Deus". Segundo algumas evidências, Toco terá procurado obter junto dos participantes informações sobre a Sociedade Bíblica que editara a publicação das Testemunhas de Jeová que possuía. Ao regressar a Kinshasa, formou a Associação Cristã do Planalto do Zombo, uma associação cristã de ajuda mútua para o povo Zombo, que passou a operar em Setembro de 1946 com o objectivo de educar o povo e desenvolver a região[78].

De volta a Kinshasa, Toco instruiu os seus amigos a partilhar com os demais o que aprendera, alertando as pessoas para a iminência do Armagedom. Contudo, Toco não divulgava abertamente a origem do que ensinava. O seu prestígio na comunidade local aumentava consideravelmente, sendo as suas reuniões muito concorridas, inclusivamente por muitos que o ligavam a Simão Kimbangu, um outro profeta de origem baptista que, na década de 1920, iniciara um movimento no Congo Belga de curas pela fé, pregação contra fetiches e práticas mediúnicas, que acabaram por ter considerável influência no Tocoismo. Quando a Missão Baptista descobriu que Toco usava publicações das Testemunhas de Jeová para ensinar outros correligionários, repreenderam-no, mas a persistência no seu desvio doutrinal acabou por levar à sua expulsão. Toco tinha encomendado à WTBTS uma série de obras e recebera-as em meados de Abril de 1949. As autoridades belgas também se aperceberam do que se estava a passar dada a sua actividade pública de evangelização e expulsaram os membros do movimento para Angola, precisamente por Toco "proclamar uma nova ordem que acabaria com a existente", segundo a Sûreté, um ensino potencialmente subversivo, bem como as suas conexões com as Testemunhas de Jeová, que estavam nessa altura banidas no Congo, como a própria ordem de expulsão o refere. Como dissemos atrás, as autoridades belgas não hesitavam em reprimir quaisquer movimentos que tivessem uma ligação, por mais ténue que fosse, com a WTBTS. Foi isso o que aconteceu com Simão Toco e seus seguidores[79].

O facto de Toco ter tido vários contactos com as publicações das Testemunhas de Jeová na década de 1940 é não só relatado nos anuários dessa organização religiosa de 1955 (que indica que Toco escreveu à WTBTS, em 1949, tendo recebido diversos livros) e de 1956 (que indica que Toco teve um contacto acidental anos antes com publicações das Testemunhas de Jeová), mas também é apoiado por vários testemunhos escritos independentes que apontam para duas ocasiões, uma por volta de 1940, e outra em 1943, em que Toco teve acesso a publicações avulsas das Testemunhas de Jeová. Em uma das ocasiões, encontrou uma publicação das Testemunhas de Jeová na casa onde se alojara a caminho de Kinshasa, e da segunda, alguém lhe fez chegar uma publicação encontrada num caixote do lixo. Margarido pensara tratar-se de uma reelaboração da WTBTS, em 1956, para dar uma aparência milagrosa à eventual conversão de Toco e consequente incorporação nas Testemunhas de Jeová, mas, dado que as informações nos ditos anuários foram obtidas do grupo que mais tarde se afastaria de Toco, bem como a partir da visita em 1955 de John Cooke aos grupos Tocoistas, são, evidentemente, dados que se complementam e não que se contradizem. Não convém esquecer que o parque gráfico de grande dimensão da WTBTS era uma das características distintivas do movimento, imprimindo publicações em grandes quantidades, alcançando-se as dezenas, centenas de milhares, e por vezes, milhões de exemplares em diversos idiomas, que eram disseminados, quer por via postal, quer, sobretudo, por via da distribuição feita pelos crentes no terreno. Ora, em África este modelo não era diferente, e o fluxo de movimentos migratórios ajudava à dispersão das publicações, como referimos no início deste artigo, sendo que, no Congo Belga, as publicações da WTBTS já circulavam desde, pelo menos, o início da década de 1930[80].

Além disso, num artigo recente sobre Toco, redigido em tom panegírico[81], é citada uma carta enviada em 1.1.1947 por Toco ao Reverendo Alfredo da Silva, Presidente da Aliança Evangélica Portuguesa, no Porto, solicitando certos livros para seu estudo. O que nos interessa são os títulos dos livros solicitados, cuja proveniência o autor do artigo desconhece, e dos quais conseguimos identificar mais de metade como tendo sido editados pelas Testemunhas de Jeová[82], o que comprova que já antes dessa data Toco teria tido acesso a uma publicação das Testemunhas de Jeová que anunciava no seu interior outras obras disponíveis em português.

81 FERNANDO – A trajectória..., p. 31.

82 Sublinhámos e colocámos a data da impressão em português nas obras identificadas. As primeiras quatro e as últimas duas foram, de certeza, publicadas pelas TJ: A Harpa de Deus (1932), Onde estão os mortos? (1925), Libertação [1926-1930], Certeza de prosperidade [1926-1930], A Volta de Nosso Senhor, Inferno e Purgatório; Breve oração e a vinda do Espírito Santo; Criação do Mundo; Luz e Verdade (1932); Últimos Dias [?].

Seria apenas em Abril de 1949 que Toco receberia um conjunto significativo de publicações das Testemunhas de Jeová. Um parente recordou mais tarde essa ocasião, quando Toco, lendo porções dos livros em português, as traduzia para kikongo em benefício dos que estavam ali com ele:

> "O meu cunhado abriu o livro Filhos, e leu uma das passagens mais importantes que ficaram gravadas na minha mente sobre o estabelecimento do Reino de Deus. Dizia: O Reino pelo qual os cristãos têm orado estava prestes a ser estabelecida [sic] na terra conforme a oração de Jesus Cristo quando estava na terra dissera que fosse feita a vontade de Deus nos Céus como na terra. O meu cunhado lia em português e traduzia para nós em Kikongo. Folhando de relance o livro, leu outra passagem que dizia: sobre guerras, fome, pestes e terramotos, e quando virdes estas coisas acontecer levantais as vossas cabeças porque o vosso livramento está próximo. Daí o meu cunhado disse: Daqui em diante quando estivermos orando não apagaremos mais os olhos ou fechar, mas sim levantar os nossos rostos pera [sic] o Céu. E daqui em diante ajuntarei mais de 20 pessoas maiores para iniciarmos o estudo destes livros porque os missionários não nos ensinam a verdade, e além disso estes livros vieram de América onde foram imprimidos os folhetos Luz e Verdade assim como os Últimos dias"[83].

Apesar de as autoridades portuguesas suspeitarem do potencial subversivo do grupo, aceitaram-nos na colónia, em 10 de Janeiro de 1950, optando por dividir o grupo por vários locais, procurando assim quebrar o seu espírito, mas involuntariamente acabaram por potenciar a sua disseminação e crescimento[84].

Em Luanda, os Tocoistas continuaram a reunir-se, mas um deles, João Mancoca, não estava satisfeito com a prevalência das práticas mediúnicas, e, mais tarde, outros dois membros juntaram-se-lhe num esforço de regressar às origens doutrinais do movimento, baseadas sobretudo nas cópias manuscritas que tinham feito das publicações das Testemunhas de Jeová. Contudo, Toco confirmou à comunidade de seus seguidores a prevalência dos médiuns, que eram os únicos a poder fazer a leitura da Bíblia para a comunidade. Ostracizados pelos demais, Mancoca e alguns outros foram acusados

84 GRENFELL – An Account..., fol. 2. Existe um relato da entrada em território angolano dos Tocoistas cantando o hino nacional português ao passarem a fronteira (MARTINS, Manuel A. Morais – Angola: Do meu bornal de recordações, Lisboa: Ed. Internacional, 1998, p. 145-148). António Custódio Gonçalves confunde a influência em Toco das leituras das doutrinas das TJ com a Kitawala, ao dizer que "o contacto como kimbanguismo, o matsouanismo e o kitawala passa a ser mais frequente e Simão Toco vai constituir os fundamentos da sua doutrina. O movimento Kitawala nasceu de uma cisão da congregação americana da Watch Tower (Kitawala ou Kitower é uma corruptela da palavra original) ou Associação das Testemunhas de Jeová." (Tradição e Modernidade..., p. 46). Na realidade, Kitawala é um movimento religioso independente, influenciado por algumas doutrinas das TJ, mas que nunca fez parte da sua estrutura ortodoxa, logo nunca podendo ter existido cisão. Além disso, não há registo que indique que Toco tenha contactado no Congo com a Kitawala, mas apenas com publicações das TJ. Há indícios de que, junto da fronteira com a Zâmbia e com o Congo, alguns membros da Kitawala terão percorrido território angolano, na década de 1950, mas os dados são muito lacunares para permitir uma clara identificação da sua filiação religiosa (TT, PIDE/DGS, Del A P. Inf. 15.45.B, fol. 89; Idem, Del A P Inf 10.04 A/1, fol. 57; SANTOS – Movimentos Proféticos..., p. 304-307).

junto das autoridades portuguesas de estarem a criar novas doutrinas e de perturbarem o movimento. Independentemente do fundamento destas acusações, e de como as autoridades portuguesas as interpretaram, a realidade é que o grupo de Mancoca foi enviado, sob prisão, para a colónia penal da Baía dos Tigres, para cumprir uma pena de quatro anos, que se transformou em seis[85].

Em 1954, João Mancoca escreve à filial das Testemunhas de Jeová na Rodésia do Sul, dizendo que havia mil crentes em Angola, algo que naturalmente os surpreendeu. Enviaram um representante, John Cooke, em Janeiro de 1955, que contactando em Luanda um advogado local, foi avisado de que os seguidores de Toco eram identificados como próximos dos movimentos subversivos comunistas[86].

Os Tocoistas de Luanda receberam-no friamente e, segundo Cooke, aparentavam seguir mais a Toco do que propriamente estarem interessados em pertencer às Testemunhas de Jeová. O Governo-Geral de Angola agilizou o acesso de Cooke aos núcleos para poder perceber melhor se os Tocoistas eram perigosos ou não. Cooke comprometeu-se em repudiá-los se se demonstrasse terem intenções políticas. Depois de visitar o grupo da Baía dos Tigres, Cooke regressou a Luanda com uma recomendação escrita de Mancoca para que aceitassem Cooke como o representante da organização religiosa que lhes ensinara muitas verdades bíblicas no Congo, mas este gesto foi mal visto por se considerar que não havia autorização de Toco. E o Governo-Geral, na pessoa do secretário Santana Godinho, satisfeito de alguém ter conseguido entrar no meio do grupo, financia nova viagem a Sá da Bandeira, no Sul, para Cooke entrevistar Toco. Aparentemente, tudo correu bem e Toco escreveu uma carta de recomendação de Cooke, sendo até fotografado junto com ele, para aumentar a credibilidade. Contudo, em Luanda, Cooke conclui rapidamente que o grupo era o resultado do carisma pessoal de Toco e que não era possível integrá-los na ortodoxia das Testemunhas de Jeová. Crendo que Cooke lhe estava a tirar a liderança, Toco escreve aos grupos e anula a primeira missiva: "a nossa religião não é dos Brancos mas pertence a nós, africanos". Toco estava mais interessado numa organização religiosa para Africanos, e a sua integração numa organização de escopo mundial como as Testemunhas de Jeová retirar-lhe-ia a preeminência de que gozava até então. Cindiu-se assim o grupo, poucos ficando com Cooke, que teve de partir de Angola com a mudança de secretário do Governo-Geral[87].

Entretanto, chega um casal missionário de Testemunhas de Jeová a Angola para apoiar os poucos crentes que havia então em Luanda. Algumas autoridades militares em Luanda, como a PSP e o Exército, imaginavam as Testemunhas de Jeová e Tocoistas unidas numa possível actividade subversiva na Índia portuguesa dado que John Cooke tinha nascido em Bombaim: nada seria inocente. Também as autoridades administrativas em Moçâmedes estavam expectantes quanto ao desenlace da crise que se abrira nas hostes de Toco, e o Governador local queria mesmo aprofundar a divisão elaborando cartas forjadas para semear a discórdia entre Tocoistas, algo que o Governo de Luanda desaconselhou, embora recomendando a proibição dos dois movimentos. Havia confusão, sobretudo em Lisboa, no Ministério do Ultramar, sobre o que realmente representavam os dois grupos, com a certeza, porém, de que os territórios em África onde havia mais Testemunhas de Jeová eram agora independentes ou a caminho disso[88]. Característica das dificuldades em distinguir os dois movimentos neste período é a publicação intitulada "Quem são? 'As Testemunhas de Jeová' (Adeptos de Simão Toco, assim falado)", impressa pela Missão Católica de Carmona, Sanza Pombo e Quimbele, em Julho de 1956, com uma tiragem de 3.000 cópias, que a PIDE apreendeu, talvez por temer ainda mais a disseminação dos seus ideais por uma via que não controlava[89].

Em Junho de 1957, o casal de missionários das Testemunhas de Jeová é expulso e um cidadão nacional, Manuel Gonçalves Vieira, assume a coordenação do frágil e reduzido grupo de crentes. Uma das características pouco apreciada depois pela PIDE era o facto de o pequeno grupo de Luanda, agora reforçado com Mancoca e outros ex-Tocoistas, soltos em 1958, juntar brancos e africanos. O seu director, Aníbal de São José Lopes, chama os responsáveis do grupo, em Fevereiro de 1959, e explica-lhes que Ernesto Domingues, sacerdote católico, escreveu mais tarde contra a permissividade das autoridades em Angola por permitirem que Tocoistas e TJ mantivessem as suas actividades em vista da sua subversividade (Introdução ao estudo das seitas políticas de Angola. Missões, 16 (3) (1963), p. 5-21). Em 1963, reuniu diversos artigos sobre o Tocoismo, que publicara na Missões, e outros relatórios classificados a que tivera acesso, e remeteu-os aos Serviços de Centralização e Coordenação de Informações de Angola, propondo duras medidas para contrariar o avanço do Tocoismo, denunciando a leniência das autoridades (TT, SCCIA, 262, fol. 60-107).

isso tem de acabar, e que mais medidas repressivas estariam pendentes, após apreciação do Governador Geral de um relatório efectuado sobre as suas publicações (que eram lidas, estudadas e sublinhadas desde meados de 50, de acordo com a documentação de arquivo na Torre do Tombo)[90].

Depois dos massacres de Março de 1961, os grupos protestantes ficaram sob fogo cerrado da opinião pública e alguns jornais de Luanda acusaram também as Testemunhas de Jeová, nas suas palavras "uma seita anti-cristã e socialmente perniciosa", de terem incitado e justificado os massacres, fazendo citações truncadas e descontextualizadas de artigos das suas publicações, algo reproduzido depois nos principais jornais da metrópole[91], e que se tornou um "facto" repetido em posteriores reportagens jornalísticas, relatos memorialísticos e estudos pseudocientíficos[92], todos partilhando em comum o pressuposto de que todas as organizações religiosas não-católicas estiveram activamente envolvidas nos acontecimentos de Angola. Obras posteriores à queda da Ditadura perpetuaram tais mitos ou usaram erradamente as fontes disponíveis[93].

92 Pelissier refere, em meados dos anos 70, que em vista destas peças jornalísticas o papel da difusão das doutrinas das TJ no eclodir da revolta de 1961 ainda estaria por avaliar, mas após a consulta de centenas de processos no Arquivo da PIDE/DGS e em outros arquivos não conseguimos encontrar nenhuma evidência que as consubstanciasse. Na realidade, na mente de muitos agentes colonialistas, todos os não-católicos, e até mesmo alguns católicos, eram coniventes para com os movimentos independentistas (PELISSIER, René – La Colonie du Minotaure. Nationalismes et révoltes en Angola (1926-1961), Orgeval, 1978, p. 540-546, 564). São inúmeros os escritores que na época perpetuaram tais acusações. Hélio Felgas (Guerra em Angola, Lisboa, 1961, p. 42-43) aventou a hipótese de dissidentes Tocoistas e membros do Kimbanguismo e Kitawala terem participado nos ataques. Na realidade, em Outubro de 1961, Toco aceitou um convite para participar numa acção psicológica no Norte de Angola para convencer os angolanos que tinham fugido para o Congo a regressarem. Toco veementemente negou qualquer participação dos seus seguidores nos eventos e apoiou a política portuguesa (Diário de Luanda, p. 1, 3). Maurice-Yvan Sicard (sob o pseudónimo de Saint-Paulien) afirmou que, antes de 1961, as TJ e os Baptistas abertamente pregaram insurreição contra os portugueses (A "Contra-Revolução" Africana, Porto: Portucalense, 1967, p. 116-117, 149, 181-182). Em 1967, André Leandro defendeu a teoria de que sendo, ou tendo sido, Tocoistas alguns dos membros do MPLA, Toco não estaria isento de responsabilidades pelos eventos de 1961, avançando ainda com a ideia de que o grupo que se cindiu de Toco e passou para as TJ seria adepto do uso da violência (Alto Dange: Ensaio socio-político dos movimentos subversivos na região de Cambamba, Lisboa, 1967, diss., p. 145-148, 161-164). O jornalista Pereira da Costa (Um mês de terrorismo: Angola – Março-Abril de 1961, Lisboa, 1969, p. 93-98) fez uma subtil ligação entre o Tocoismo e dúbios eventos que teriam precedido a revolta de 1961, e identificou as TJ como um movimento antieuropeu, embora as ilibe das acusações de 1961. Em 1962, o sacerdote católico Joaquim Martins redigiu um artigo afirmando que os eventos de 1961 tinham na sua origem falsas seitas religiosas, agentes disfarçadas do comunismo, nas quais incluía as "seitas políticas" do Kimbanguismo, Kitawala e Tocoismo, as três resultado da evangelização das TJ (As pretensas seitas religiosas na base dos movimentos actuais em África. O Apostolado, 27.10.1962, consultado em TT, PIDE/DGS, Del A P. Inf. 15.47A).

93 Cf. PELISSIER – La Colonie du Minotaure..., p. 158-189. Marcello Caetano, no seu depoimento redigido no exílio em terras de Vera Cruz, recordou o "levantamento consciencioso dos Movimentos associativos da África negra" conduzido por Silva Cunha em Angola, ligando-os às forças ocultas entre a população negra que, escudadas num fundo religioso, prometiam a libertação messiânica da "libertação do continente pela expulsão do branco" (CAETANO, Marcello – Depoimento, Rio de Janeiro: Record, 1974, p. 25).

Eram tempos perigosos para os nativos se reunirem em Luanda, e em 25 de Junho de 1961 a polícia militar invadiu o Muceque Sambizanga onde a congregação das Testemunhas de Jeová se reunia, detendo e espancando os 30 homens ali reunidos. A acusação era "pertencerem a uma qualquer organização clandestina que almejava a independência de Angola". Ironicamente, o artigo considerado era: "Uma exibição de unidade num mundo dividido". Mancoca respondeu já nos calabouços da PIDE que ensinava os cristãos a amarem-se uns aos outros e ao próximo sem "qualquer discriminação racial ou objectivos políticos". Apesar de a PIDE confessar não ter encontrado quaisquer indícios criminais, a neutralidade política das Testemunhas de Jeová era perniciosa, pois "permitiria a muitos escusarem-se aos deveres militares, traindo a sua nação" por não combater os inimigos. Permitir sequer aos nativos, sem a devida preparação intelectual, este tipo de reuniões com perguntas e respostas era inaceitável para a polícia política e, a seu ver, punha em perigo a soberania do território. Criam os oficiais da PIDE que tendiam a formar-se grupos políticos a partir destas associações religiosas, pois a crítica dos princípios e sacramentos católicos era o início da desnacionalização[94].

Mesmo tão tardiamente quanto 1985, J. A. Soares Fernandes tentou ressuscitar os estudos de Silva Cunha, confundindo os ideais do missionário australiano Joseph Booth (descrito como africano – evidentemente confundido com o nativo Elliot Kamwana, um dos primeiros discípulos de Booth), de "África para os Africanos" com os da WTBTS, afirmando que esta promovia a crença de que os africanos se poderiam transformar em brancos, ideias que foi buscar a Eduardo dos Santos, mas sem o citar (Os movimentos profético-messiânicos na África Negra. Factos e Ideias, Braga, 1 (2) (1985), p. 128-132; cf. SANTOS – Movimentos Proféticos..., p. 279, 304). Em 2004, um ex-inspector da PIDE, Nogueira e Carvalho, publicou as suas memórias, reproduzindo o esquema de Silva Cunha para caracterizar as TJ em África, mas sem o citar também (Era Tempo de Morrer em África. Angola. Guerra e Descolonização: 1961-1975, Lisboa: Prefácio, 2004, p. 46-48). Um artigo publicado no Expresso (ROBALO, Mário – PIDE prendeu 5 mil Testemunhas de Jeová. Expresso, Lisboa, 28.11.1998, p. 17) relatava como cerca de 5000 TJ teriam sido alvo de algum tipo de acção persecutória por parte das autoridades portuguesas e Sánchez Cervelló, num artigo posterior sobre o Tocoismo e a guerra colonial identifica erradamente Tocoistas e TJ como sendo equivalentes, citando o artigo do jornal e afirmando que 5000 Tocoistas tinham sido perseguidos. O autor tenta provar que os Tocoistas estiveram envolvidos num desafio ao poder colonial e, a propósito do ano de 1961, diz que "o segundo desafio ao poder colonial aconteceu em Luanda com o assalto aos cárceres de Luanda em 4 e 5 de Fevereiro, no qual houve participação de alguns tocoístas que estavam ali deportados. Houve especialmente a participação de militantes do MPLA e da UPA. Não sabemos exactamente o empenhamento dos tocoístas durante a insurreição de 15 de Março, desencadeada pela UPA, mas do que não restam dúvidas é de que nelas participaram tocoístas e que as suas aldeias foram destruídas". O sentido disto não é claro. Por um lado, não apresenta nenhuma evidência consubstanciadora dessa participação Tocoista, apenas citando um trabalho de Carlos Pacheco em nota de rodapé, onde Cervelló diz que a "relação entre os tocoístas e o movimento emancipalista está documentada em Março de 1959". Ora, na citada obra de Pacheco, o que está documentado é um interesse do Exército de Libertação de Angola em querer ganhar os Tocoistas para a sua causa, o que é algo completamente diferente do que Cervelló pretende provar (SÁNCHEZ CERVELLÓ – Tocoísmo e Guerra Colonial..., p. 265, 270; cf. PACHECO, Carlos – MPLA: Um Nascimento Polémico, Lisboa: Vega, 1997, p. 81). Para a relação da religião com a política e a guerra em Angola nesta época, cf. Tão tardiamente quanto 1998, o Exército Português ainda afirmava, mas sem precisar fontes, que os Tocoistas apoiaram a União dos Povos de Angola (Estado Maior do Exército, Comissão para o Estudo das Campanhas de África (1961-1974) – Resenha Histórico-Militar das Campanhas de África: 1961-1974, vol. 6: Aspectos da Actividade Operacional: Angola: Livro I, Lisboa, 1998, p. 104-107).

Assim, na época, ser neutral era considerado uma posição política e subversiva. Em consequência, a maioria dos crentes foi nessa ocasião enviada para prisões e campos de concentração por anos a fio, alguns quase uma década[95].

Apesar das exposições escritas apresentadas pelas Testemunhas de Jeová da metrópole às autoridades portuguesas, a opressão manteve-se. Em 1963, o representante português enviado para reorganizar as actividades das Testemunhas de Jeová e dois outros nacionais foram presos. Um deles tinha-se juntado às Testemunhas de Jeová enquanto fazia a recruta em Portugal e, dada a sua consequente posição neutral, foi sucessivamente disciplinado militarmente. A PIDE encontrava aqui o seu maior receio, a disseminação de ideais não-beligerantes nas casernas. Mais assustada ficou com uma lista de assinantes desta novel Testemunha de Jeová que continha precisamente muitos militares. A solução foi repatriar as três famílias europeias, decapitando novamente a liderança local[96].

Silvério Marques, Governador de Angola desde 1962, suspeitava particularmente do potencial subversivo de reuniões religiosas e, perante a persistência das Testemunhas de Jeová em continuarem a evangelizar e se reunirem para culto religioso, emite um despacho que oficialmente proscreve as Testemunhas de Jeová em Angola, em 22.10.1963, recomendando a repatriação de nacionais e o envio para campos de concentração, eufemisticamente chamados de "campos de recuperação", donde só poderiam sair se as suas convicções se tivessem alterado[97].

Até 1974, a repressão foi a norma em Angola e não a excepção, com sucessivas vagas de detenções, sobretudo dos homens que supervisionavam congregações locais, e o seu envio para prisões ou campos de concentração. Apenas a alguns crentes foi permitida a prática da religião em casa com a família, sem direito a organizar ou assistir a reuniões de culto ou evangelizar publicamente[98].

Em 1969, surgiu a primeira geração de objectores de consciência nativos, filhos de Testemunhas de Jeová e, nesta altura, vinham também, presos, jovens Testemunhas de Jeová da metrópole que eram espancadas e enviadas para a frente de batalha desarmadas. Em Janeiro de 1974, a DGS ponderava enviar umas dezenas de fiéis a Tribunal dada a sua reincidência em desobedecer à proscrição e ao facto de as sucessivas vagas de detenções não os demoverem das suas práticas religiosas. Mas essa possibilidade foi mais uma vez posta em suspenso e, entretanto, a Revolução em Abril desse ano acabou por trazer a liberdade de culto às Testemunhas de Jeová, incluindo às que por anos estavam presas em campos de concentração[99].

No caso de Angola, nos mais altos escalões da administração colonial, havia uma convicção muito forte de que a repressão das Testemunhas de Jeová e de outras minorias religiosas consideradas subversivas era o melhor rumo a seguir. Assim, em 1962 havia 20 Testemunhas de Jeová activas, e apenas cerca de 130 em 1968, consubstanciando um crescimento muito ténue. Contudo, as sucessivas vagas de colonos para Angola também trouxeram muitas Testemunhas de Jeová e a sua resiliência e proselitismo acabaram por produzir resultados, atingindo a cifra de quase 2000 crentes em 1974[100].

De volta a Portugal: de 1961 até ao final do regime ditatorial

Como é que a PIDE se interessou pelas Testemunhas de Jeová em Lisboa? Via Luanda. Em 6 de Abril de 1961, o sub-director da PIDE em Luanda enviou um relatório à PIDE de Lisboa afirmando que havia membros das forças suecas da ONU, estacionadas no Congo, que eram Testemunhas de Jeová (algo extremamente inverosímil e revelador da sua ignorância), e cuja suposta missão era propagar as suas doutrinas em Angola. Um outro relatório da PIDE, de Maio, afirmava que o American Committee on Africa estava ligado à WTBTS e tentava influenciar nativos em Angola, preparando uma rebelião junto com os Protestantes. Nesta época havia muita informação proveniente de boatos que era validada[101].

Pouco tempo depois, surge o primeiro jovem objector de consciência na metrópole: João Gonçalves Mateus. O jovem apresenta aos oficiais uma exposição dos princípios bíblicos que o levaram a tomar tal posição e, mais tarde, explicou-se perante o General Luís da Câmara Pina, dado constituir uma espécie de novidade no meio castrense, sendo apodado de "O Messias". Foi preso, julgado no Tribunal da Boa Hora, e condenado a dois anos de pena suspensa, com a obrigação de cumprir os deveres militares, embora acabasse por não voltar a ser chamado. Até 1974, algumas dezenas de jovens Testemunhas de Jeová enfrentaram o mesmo desafio, uns sendo julgados, outros enviados celeremente para a frente de guerra, e outros espancados, nunca vendo o seu estatuto reconhecido pelo regime[102]. O procedimento corrente das jovens Testemunhas de Jeová objectoras de consciência era o de escreverem ao Presidente do Conselho, Presidente da República, Ministros e chefias militares. Muitas destas cartas eram passadas então à PIDE, GNR e PSP que colaboravam com a Polícia Militar para capturar os jovens já convocados e faltosos. Estes jovens eram usualmente acusados de serem comunistas. As autoridades militares temiam que as doutrinas das Testemunhas de Jeová se infiltrassem nos quartéis e mais seguissem o seu exemplo. Mesmo detidos, os jovens continuavam o seu proselitismo, falando aos soldados que os quisessem escutar[103].

Em vista do número crescente de jovens que objectavam ao serviço militar, as autoridades castrenses elaboraram um número especial da publicação Soldado! Coisas importantes que deves saber, dedicada às Testemunhas de Jeová. Uma súmula das suas doutrinas e textos bíblicos usados era assim entregue aos soldados, como forma de preparação para lidarem com as suas tentativas de evangelização. As Testemunhas de Jeová eram comparadas a um cavalo de Tróia e acusadas de serem subversivas, dado que a sua pregação de um novo Reino que estabeleceria a paz mundial equivaleria à predição da queda do Império Português. Ademais, a recusa em saudar a bandeira nacional ou em entoar o hino nacional eram particularmente afrontosos para o regime. Compreensivelmente, para melhor servir os interesses da instituição militar, muitas das suas crenças surgem deturpadas, como, por exemplo, ao se afirmar que as Testemunhas de Jeová não tinham nenhum respeito pela bandeira, que desobedeciam a toda e qualquer lei dos Governos, ou ainda que se recusavam a ingressar no Exército por já estarem ao serviço de uma organização que ambicionava tomar o controlo do mundo. Uma cópia desta publicação era entregue aos soldados e há registo de haver palestras sobre o seu conteúdo antes do embarque para África[104].

Alguns destes jovens, após captura, eram enviados para o Batalhão Disciplinar de Penamacor, onde eram frequentemente espancados, como relatou em certa ocasião a "Rádio Portugal Livre" (uma rádio clandestina comunista sedeada em Bucareste), em Julho de 1966 (TT, PIDE/DGS, SC SR 337/46, vol. 32, fol. 49-52).

Escreveu ao Comandante do Centro de Inspecção e ao Ministro da Defesa Nacional, explicando por que razão as suas convicções religiosas o levavam a apresentar-se como objector. Duas semanas depois, foi detido e aprisionado na Casa de Reclusão no Porto. Doze dias depois, foi liberto e algum tempo depois novamente preso, desta feita sendo transferido para o Regimento de Infantaria de Vila Real, onde foi colocado em confinamento solitário por três meses, antes de ser enviado, no início de 1973, para a Guiné-Bissau, junto com outra TJ que fora presa em Vila Real. Após serem encarcerados na prisão de Bissau, foram transferidos para a prisão de Bolama para iniciarem a recruta como militares. Os dois jovens pediram uma audiência ao General Spínola, de passagem por Bolama, e o então Comandante das Forças Armadas na Guiné anuiu. Após a entrevista, receberam uma comunicação escrita de que a sua presença continuada naquele território era altamente inconveniente e desmoralizante para o bem-estar das Forças Armadas, sendo reenviados para Lisboa no dia seguinte. Mas, após novo período de prisão na Ajuda, em Lisboa, foram mais uma vez enviados para uma frente de combate, mas em Angola, junto do Regimento de Infantaria N.º 21, em Nova Lisboa (Huambo), para iniciar a recruta. A sua recusa trouxe-lhes violentos espancamentos e tiveram de suportar diversas formas de tortura. Entretanto, juntaram-se-lhes três jovens TJ angolanas, presas pela mesma razão, e igualmente alvo de sevícias. Os dois portugueses são destarte enviados para Luanda e confinados a isolamento na Casa de Reclusão por duas semanas. Por fim, são expedidos para o campo de trabalhos forçados de Cabo Ledo no Sul da colónia, onde já havia 23 TJ internadas, 20 delas nativas. Algumas semanas depois, foi amnistiado, junto com as demais TJ, no seguimento da Revolução de 25 de Abril de 1974 (Entrevista de Mafalda Vieira a David Mota, 29.3.2006).

Em Setembro de 1961, uma Testemunha de Jeová foi detida em Lisboa acusada de proselitismo e de ter defendido perante uma moradora, a quem pregava, as virtudes da neutralidade mesmo em face da guerra que grassava em Angola. Nesta altura, muitos artigos de jornais em Lisboa tinham reproduzido as acusações jornalísticas provenientes de Luanda, e havia uma grande susceptibilidade no público, notando-se isso na reacção das pessoas à mensagem das Testemunhas de Jeová (já em 20 de Junho elas tinham escrito ao Ministério do Interior para esclarecer a sua posição)[105]. Neste caso particular, segundo a PIDE, era um tipo de conversa que importava obstar face ao seu potencial subversivo da moral da Nação. Aquele pregador detido foi torturado de forma agressiva, nunca recuperando psicologicamente do sucedido. Esse interrogatório revelou a existência na metrópole de três casais de missionários estrangeiros, que foram em seguida convocados e acusados de pertencer, como o pregador detido, ao Partido Comunista[106].

O então director da PIDE, o Coronel Homero de Matos, defendia a tortura como legítimo meio de defesa dos interesses do Estado[107], e foi ele quem estabeleceu no papel a ligação das Testemunhas de Jeová com uma conspiração mundial antiportuguesa.

Baseando-se em informações recolhidas em Angola pelo Governador Venâncio Deslandes, e enviadas à sede da PIDE em Lisboa em Novembro de 1961, para o Matos, o facto de a U.R.S.S. permitir igrejas baptistas no seu território estaria relacionado com as suas actividades em África, ligando ainda os Baptistas Americanos (mas os Metodistas em outro relatório da mesma autoria) com o American Committee on Africa (ACOA). Matos elaborou um significativo despacho, identificando o líder da Igreja Ortodoxa Russa como sendo um oficial de topo da KGB, asseverando que os Ortodoxos eram amigos dos Baptistas, que eram organizações israelitas quem fazia propaganda comunista no Médio Oriente e África, e concluindo que todas estas igrejas estavam ligadas às Testemunhas de Jeová (WTBTS) nos EUA. Para Homero de Matos, não era coincidência que os Baptistas e Metodistas tivessem missões nas províncias portuguesas, crendo até mesmo que muitos católicos estariam a fazer o jogo dos comunistas. Junto com eles estavam os membros da religião Baha'i. Matos achava que quem controlava tudo era o ACOA, embora a maioria dos membros de todas aquelas organizações não soubesse das intenções pró-comunistas das suas hierarquias

Em conclusão, para Homero de Matos, todas estas organizações eram uma quinta-coluna instalada no Ocidente e urgia inverter a política americana e britânica para anular a possibilidade de os grandes poderes comunistas se tornarem hegemónicos. Aparentemente as razões concretas que conduziram Matos a ligar tão inequivocamente as Testemunhas de Jeová (neste caso a WTBTS, a entidade legal que usavam para prosseguir os seus fins religiosos) ao ACOA, tinham em comum apenas o facto de terem as suas sedes nos E.U.A. Parece que para ele todas as organizações religiosas não-católicas faziam, ou poderiam vir a fazer, parte de um esquema global orquestrado pelos comunistas soviéticos para eliminar o regime português[109], ressoando assim a tese principal do relatório da Sûreté belga sobre os velados objectivos da WTBTS, Para um exemplo de como o comunismo era visto por autores pró-regime como estando por detrás de todo o género de organizações em África, e especialmente movimentos religiosos no Congo como a Kitawala, Kimbanguismo, e Tocoismo, cf. BOTZÀRIS, Alejandro – África e o Comunismo, vol. 2, Lisboa: JIU, 1961, p. 125-127, 157-160; e VENTURA, Reis – Em Defesa de Angola, Braga, Editora Pax, 1967, p. 115-117. Holden Roberto, líder da UPA, admitiu em 1999 que tivera ligações com o ACOA, sugerindo a Frank Montero e William Scheinman, seus fundadores, que fossem a Angola, o que fizeram, em Fevereiro de 1960, para verem por si mesmos se a situação ali era tão deplorável quanto Holden a apresentara. Por meio desta iniciativa, Holden Roberto tentou atrair a atenção dos nativos para a dominação colonial e promover contactos entre o ACOA e os nacionalistas cónego Manuel das Neves e Joaquim Pinto de Andrade, chanceler da arquidiocese de Luanda. O ACOA também preparou campanhas conjuntas a favor dos nacionalistas angolanos com o Methodist Board of Missions (Drumond Jaime & Hélder Barber (ed.) – Angola: Depoimentos para a História Recente, vol. 1, 1950 –1976, Vila Nova de Gaia, 1999, p. 18-20; PACHECO – MPLA..., 116; PELISSIER – La Colonie du Minotaure..., p. 305-306; VAZ – Opiniões públicas..., p. 174-175, 208-209; cf. 109 Digno de nota é o facto de a mais antiga pasta sobre as TJ nos Arquivos da PIDE em Lisboa ser constituída por informações sobre movimentos religiosos em Angola e no Congo Belga. O primeiro documento é um relatório do Governo do Huambo, de 1955, sobre o movimento Santos, que tinha eclodido em Julho desse ano em Nova Lisboa. Era um movimento anti-fetichista que proclamava a necessidade de as pessoas se verem livres de bens materiais, matarem o gado e deixarem de semear as plantações. O Governador do Huambo tinha recentemente lido um artigo num periódico português sobre a Kitawala no Congo e achou que o movimento Santos estava sem dúvida sob a influência da Kitawala ou do Tocoismo. Depois deste relatório inicial, seguem-se nessa pasta outros sobre o Kimbanguismo e o Tocoismo, e no meio destes, alguns sobre as TJ e traduções para português de excertos dos seus anuários e manuais bíblicos. A conclusão geral destes relatórios era que as religiões não-católicas eram uma ameaça à identidade nacional e, acima de tudo, uma possível causa de revoltas políticas e militares em Angola (Problemas de Angola: As seitas secretas. A Voz, Lisboa, 23.10.1955 (em DGARQ/TT, PIDE/DGS, SC SR 337/46, vol. 12, 518). Acerca do movimento Santos cf. PELISSIER – La Colonie du Minotaure..., p. 183. As conexões com a Kitawala, Tocoismo, etc. são abandonadas em CUNHA – Aspectos dos Movimentos..., Vol. II, p. 24-27, e em SANTOS – Movimentos Proféticos..., p. 493-499). Num relatório preparado em Janeiro de 1956, o Comando Militar de Angola mantinha a identificação das TJ com a Kitawala, fazendo eco da informação proveniente do Governo do Huambo: "[A Kitawala] filia-se na organização protestante [sic] "WATCH TOWER" com sede em New-York", dizia o relator, e passa a descrever os acontecimentos ocorridos no Huambo como sendo provocados por adeptos da Kitawala, introduzindo depois Simão Toco como estando em contacto com a WTBTS em Nova York. Ora, a descrição do comportamento agressivo e violento destes pretensos membros da Kitawala/TJ/Tocoistas não se enquadra numa secção do mesmo relatório que afirma terem os seus membros criado "graves problemas durante esta ultima guerra quer na Alemanha quer na Holanda e outros países onde obrigou à criação dos 'Tribunais de Consciência' no que foram julgados os indivíduos a que o recurso à guerra 'repugnava' a sua consciência. Na Alemanha foram adoptadas medidas capitais para a debelação dos seus efeitos", evidentemente referindo-se às milhares de TJ que foram enviadas para campos de concentração e àquelas que foram decapitadas após condenação pelos tribunais nazis, expondo assim os paradoxos e fragilidades do relatório (Arquivo Histórico Militar, FO/039/11/588/310, "Relatório da Situação do Comando Militar de Angola referente a Janeiro de 1956", 2 fol.).

a saber, a subversão dos estados coloniais em África ao serviço do comunismo, um relatório que circulou em Lisboa[110].

Não sabemos se Salazar e outros ministros que receberam estes relatórios criam piamente em todas estas ligações, pouco substanciadas em factos, mas Matos sim. Os visas dos missionários Testemunhas de Jeová não foram renovados, apesar da intervenção da embaixada inglesa, mas Matos concede-lhes uma entrevista. Nas notas dactilografadas que os missionários escreveram antes de abandonar o país, temos a confirmação do seu pensamento, que poderíamos pensar ficcionado se não tivéssemos os relatórios do Arquivo da PIDE para o corroborar. Matos falou-lhes do objector de consciência Mateus, e de como o seu exemplo era perigoso para a Nação em guerra, e que por essa razão eles não poderiam ficar em Portugal, apesar de os missionários alegarem que não poderiam ser responsabilizados por uma decisão pessoal de outrem baseada no estudo pessoal da Bíblia. Foi aí que Matos, rezam as notas,

> "tentou acusar-nos de sermos comunistas, dizendo que o PC usava várias religiões incluindo Catolicismo para infiltrar suas ideias em muitos países; e que o líder da Igreja Russa Ortodoxa era o chefe da KGB e que agora que a Igreja Russa era membro do Conselho Mundial de Igrejas, a KGB usaria esta organização para influenciar outros países, e que nós estávamos a ser inocentemente manipulados pelos comunistas. Quando lhe disse que Testemunhas de Jeová não pertenciam ao CMI ele não aceitou".

E a conversa acabou aí abruptamente. Foram expulsos do País e as publicações das Testemunhas de Jeová interditas de circular em todo o Império Ultramarino (2.1962)[111].

Foram remetidas várias exposições ao Ministério do Interior, em 1962, pelos responsáveis portugueses das Testemunhas de Jeová, em Lisboa, esclarecendo as suas crenças, defendendo-se da acusação de que eram comunistas, lançada pelos jornais e por algumas autoridades, bem como informando o que se considerava nas suas reuniões de culto, incluindo um convite para assistir às mesmas. Mas, não produziram os efeitos pretendidos. Conversas informais com o chefe de gabinete do Ministro revelaram que havia a convicção, por parte da PIDE, de que todas as organizações religiosas tinham sido infiltradas pelos Comunistas e que os recentes acontecimentos em Angola o provavam abundantemente[112].

A difusão de informações não-confirmadas continuou em Outubro de 1962. O Ministério do Interior emitiu nesse mês uma circular para os Governos Civis, baseado num relatório que apontava para uma série de homicídios brutais no Congo de que eram alegadamente autores as Testemunhas de Jeová, alertando que as Testemunhas de Jeová estavam a desnacionalizar os refugiados angolanos no Congo e ajudando os movimentos de libertação em Angola. O Ministério incentivava a uma enérgica acção para evitar a difusão das suas crenças na metrópole[113].

As autoridades estavam doravante municiadas com argumentos de peso: as Testemunhas de Jeová apoiavam os "terroristas" em Angola, repudiavam os valores nacionalistas por rejeitarem o Catolicismo e defendiam a não-beligerância quando a Nação estava em guerra.

As autoridades agiam agora com mais frequência e detinham fiéis das Testemunhas de Jeová em Viseu, Beja, Évora, Faro e Caldas da Rainha, onde uma congregação acabou por ser levada a Tribunal em 1963: o primeiro julgamento de muitos, por alegadamente não terem autorização para uma reunião religiosa. Foram contudo absolvidos porque não se provou que ultrapassavam o número permitido de pessoas numa reunião[114].

Entretanto, ainda nesse ano, mais uma congregação, desta feita em Aveiro, foi detida e levada a tribunal. Os seus membros foram condenados a penas de prisão, a maioria com pena suspensa, por pregação desnacionalizante[115].

Ainda assim, alguns núcleos de Testemunhas de Jeová tentaram ultrapassar as proibições. As congregações de Setúbal e Porto pediram aos respectivos Governos Civis autorização para realizarem conferências sob diferentes nomenclaturas. No Porto, o pedido foi feito em nome da "Associação Cristã dos Estudantes da Bíblia". No Porto, o pedido foi deferido. Em Setúbal, o pedido foi autorizado inicialmente, mas recusado após intervenção da PIDE, incidentalmente aqui com um dos filhos de Aristides de Sousa Mendes como fundador da "Conferência Religiosa dos Estudantes da Bíblia Sagrada"[116].

Uma outra fonte de pressão sobre a actividade evangelizadora das Testemunhas de Jeová foram os boletins paroquiais e os jornais, alguns deles de matriz católica, uns pró-regime (Diário da Manhã, Agora), outros de natureza regional (A Voz do Sado, Litoral de Aveiro), avisando os seus leitores do potencial nocivo das Testemunhas de Jeová face aos interesses da Nação, incentivando a denúncia às autoridades[117].

Também muitos livros foram publicados para apontar não só erros doutrinais das Testemunhas de Jeová face ao Catolicismo ou Protestantismo mas sobretudo os seus perigos sociais e políticos (o primeiro em 1956, a que se seguiu quase uma dezena depois de 1965)[118].

A reacção mais emblemática foi a do padre católico João de Sousa que, em Setembro de 1963, apresentou no seu programa televisivo nacional "Amanhã é Domingo", várias palestras sobre os perigos das Testemunhas de Jeová, simultaneamente dando-lhes uma visibilidade nacional. O texto sairia em formato de livro, aprovado pelo Patriarcado, um ano depois. Para Sousa, as razões do sucesso evangelizador das Testemunhas de Jeová passavam por uma grande capacidade de persuasão dos seus membros, apoiada em citações truncadas da Bíblia, explorando aquilo que achava ser uma falta de conhecimento bíblico dos católicos. Recomendava que se inscrevessem em cursos e comprassem uma boa Bíblia anotada. Em relação à objecção de consciência, Sousa afirmava que a Igreja os aceitava, mas que os Governos não podiam permitir que os cidadãos tomassem decisões baseadas na sua consciência, sem qualquer tipo de restrição, dado que a guerra travada em Angola era de natureza defensiva e apoiada por valores morais, como o direito natural de defender a soberania da pátria, concluindo que as Testemunhas de Jeová não poderiam invocar a liberdade religiosa para apoiar as suas posições[119].

Ministério do Exército informou a PIDE que as TJ usavam pseudónimos como disfarce, como "Estudantes da Bíblia", "Assembleia do Novo Mundo" e "Assembleia de Deus" (TT, PIDE/DGS, SC SR 337/46, vol. 14, fol. 221).

As Testemunhas de Jeová mudaram de estratégia a partir de 1964 para responder à ofensiva persecutória do Estado Novo, bem como ao clima de suspeição pública. Face ao fracasso de inúmeras exposições às autoridades, passaram a publicar artigos nos seus periódicos, expondo a perseguição de que eram alvo, apresentando datas, locais, nomes e citações de documentos oficiais. Convidavam os leitores a escrever às autoridades portuguesas em defesa da liberdade religiosa, uma prática corrente das Testemunhas de Jeová nessa década dada a repressão de que eram alvo em vários pontos do globo[120].

Começou com a Despertai! de 22.5.1964 (8.8.1964, em português) que referia a circular confidencial n.º 841, de 1962, que ao proibir a circulação da sua literatura não respeitava a liberdade de religião consagrada na Constituição. Expunham-se as acusações da imprensa que as associava aos massacres de Angola. A primeira cópia que as autoridades obtiveram foi enviada a Salazar[121].

Não foi assim surpreendente que a embaixada portuguesa em Washington replicasse e visse publicada uma carta aberta na edição portuguesa da Despertai! de 8.11.1964 defendendo que a liberdade religiosa não poderia servir de desculpa para a violação das leis, nomeadamente a distribuição de propaganda que encorajava o desrespeito da bandeira e o eximir-se dos deveres militares. Defendia ainda que a sua evangelização de casa-em-casa infringia os direitos individuais das pessoas, forçando as diversas confissões religiosas a pedir a intervenção das autoridades para sossegar as populações alarmadas. Nesse mesmo número, as Testemunhas de Jeová responderam com factos do mesmo teor do primeiro artigo, rejeitando as contra-acusações, e solicitando a suspensão da perseguição[122].

Ao mesmo tempo, milhares de cartas eram recebidas nas embaixadas e legações portuguesas pelo mundo inteiro que, preocupadas com o impacto, pedem instruções urgentes ao Ministério dos Negócios Estrangeiros. A PIDE fornece-as, asseverando não ter havido nenhuma represália contra as Testemunhas de Jeová, apenas acções para proteger os cidadãos de um proselitismo alarmista. Em consonância, o Ministro Franco Nogueira emite uma circular, a 1.9.1964, defendendo a existência de liberdade de Vigia, Lisboa, 1962). O livro de Sousa foi aprovado por Isaías da Rosa Pereira com o "Nihil obstat" e pelo Cardeal Patriarca de Lisboa em Maio de 1964. O Presidente do Sínodo da Igreja Evangélica Metodista do Porto elogiou o sacerdote católico pelo seu trabalho na televisão e esta carta foi publicada em anexo no seu livro, junto com outras redigidas por Protestantes, Católicos e uma ex-TJ (SOUSA – Amanhã é Domingo..., p. 368). Alguns meses mais tarde, em Setembro, J. M. Cruz Diniz ecoou as preocupações de João de Sousa, proclamando que os poderes públicos eram indiferentes à presença de uma seita tão anti-social e antipatriótica que estendia a sua influência de Lisboa ao Porto, Coimbra, Almada, Amadora, Queluz, Odivelas e Figueira da Foz (J. religiosa em Portugal, e que apesar dos nomes e datas especificada, a PIDE garantira que tudo era falso[123].

Quem não apreciava esta campanha era o Chefe do Estado Maior das Forças Armadas, que preparou um relatório para o Ministro do Interior, Santos Júnior, que não só o aprovou como o transformou numa circular expedida aos Governos Civis, GNR, PSP e PIDE. Nele afirma-se que as Testemunhas de Jeová têm objectivos puramente materialistas de extinção dos governos, autoridades e igrejas existentes, e ambições políticas de domínio universal, pelo que não poderiam beneficiar dos direitos constitucionais atribuíveis à prática religiosa, pois não só não estavam legalizadas como caíam sob a alçada do art.º 174.º do Cód. Penal, por, no seu entender, "pregar[em] a desobediência colectiva às leis de ordem pública e ordens legítimas emitidas pelas autoridades"[124].

Nessa circular, datada de 17.10.1964, o Ministro ordenou o fim das suas actividades e a dissolução dos locais de culto, considerados clandestinos e subversivos. Nesse ano, as rusgas policiais em lares, subiram para 130 em contraste com as 17 no ano anterior, e o número de pessoas detidas e presas quase chegou à centena, ultrapassando a centena e meia em 1965[125].

As Testemunhas de Jeová reagiram por assumir a via da clandestinidade: dividiram as congregações em grupos mais pequenos, que se reuniam em casas particulares, definindo-se horários de entrada diferentes para todos os crentes nos dias de culto, e adoptando-se protocolos de evasão e camuflagem de publicações em caso de rusgas. Os convites para participar nas reuniões de culto eram feitos com redobrada cautela, por causa dos agentes policiais disfarçados que procuravam infiltrar-se (há relatórios redigidos por agentes da PSP que assistiram a reuniões de culto em 1963, no Porto). Muitos dos fiéis deixaram de usar nomes completos ao falarem entre si, outros optaram por pseudónimos. A evangelização deixou de ser feita sistematicamente em todos os apartamentos de prédios, sendo antes errática: os pregadores mudavam constantemente de rua para não levantarem suspeitas. Incentivou-se a redacção de relatórios dos incidentes ocorridos com as autoridades, enviados à sede nos E.U.A., que depois os publicitava nas suas revistas (mas isto até a PIDE sabia, pois apreendeu uma circular interna das Testemunhas de Jeová de 1 de Janeiro de 1965 com estas indicações) [126].

Mas ainda era relativamente fácil, dadas as características peculiares da prática religiosa das Testemunhas de Jeová, serem identificadas, e sobretudo denunciadas. A maioria das denúncias eram anónimas, por carta ou telefonema, e advinham do descontentamento com a inépcia das autoridades[127]. Um opositor das Testemunhas de Jeová forjou até uma sua circular convocando uma manifestação silenciosa no Terreiro do Paço, em Outubro de 1966, em protesto contra o tratamento abusivo das autoridades. Chegou a várias congregações e às autoridades policiais. As Testemunhas de Jeová acharam que era uma manobra da PIDE, mas a consulta do processo no Arquivo da PIDE permite concluir que não. Embora a PIDE tivesse dúvidas quanto à autenticidade da missiva, no dia aprazado, a Polícia Militar e canhões de água foram colocados no suposto local da manifestação. Outra iniciativa teve lugar em 1970, nos arredores de Lisboa, sendo encontradas dezenas de folhetos anti-Testemunhas de Jeová nas ruas, um deles com um desenho de Álvaro Cunhal anunciando aos camaradas a mudança de nome para Testemunhas de Jeová, e outros que atribuíam às Testemunhas de Jeová um comportamento cobarde face à Guerra no Ultramar[128].

Os anos de 1964 e 1965 presenciaram uma elevada repressão contra uma comunidade que atingia agora cerca de 2000 a 3000 membros, de norte a sul do território metropolitano, incluindo as ilhas, quase 10% deles tendo sido alvo de alguma forma de repressão. Vários crentes foram levados aos tribunais civis, na Covilhã e no Porto, embora as sentenças não fossem as que a P.S.P. desejava. Um exemplo característico da dureza persecutória nesta altura é o caso de um jovem rapaz e três fiéis do sexo feminino, duas delas menores de 13 e 16 anos, que foram detidos pela PIDE na Prisão de Caxias por um mês. Quando a mãe das menores se dirigiu à prisão foi também presa. O rapaz seria levado para um quartel para treino militar forçado[129].

No auge da repressão, Franco Nogueira, Ministro dos Negócios Estrangeiros, acede a reunir-se com representantes estrangeiros das Testemunhas de Jeová, em 25.2.1965, no que parecia augurar uma mudança de atitude. O Ministro afirmou desconhecer a perseguição de que eram alvo e que não via razões para que não fossem legalizadas, como os seus representantes solicitavam, bem como que as suas reuniões fossem abertas ao público e que as suas publicações circulassem livremente. No entanto, fora Nogueira quem instruíra as missões diplomáticas, em 1964, a responder à campanha internacional das revistas das Testemunhas de Jeová expondo a perseguição de que eram alvo em Portugal. Isso tornou-se evidente no decurso da conversa quando Nogueira manifestou desagrado pelas Testemunhas de Jeová terem assumido tal estratégia em vez de falarem directamente com o Governo. Foram-lhe relembradas as várias exposições entregues pelas Testemunhas de Jeová desde 1961 a diversos ministros sem qualquer resposta. Nogueira prometeu olhar de perto para os seus pedidos, solicitando uma lista das alegadas incidências, que lhe foi entregue a 27.9.1965[130].

129 PINTO – Testemunhas de Jeová..., p. 41. Em 1964 e 1965, houve acções persecutórias em Abrantes, Algueirão, Almada, Amadora, Angra do Heroísmo, Barreiro, Beja, Belas, Castelo Branco, Caldas da Rainha, Coimbra, Covilhã, Entroncamento, Estômbar, Feijó, Funchal, Guarda, Idanha, Ílhavo, Lisboa, Mem Martins, Mouriscas, Odivelas, Porto, Ponta Delgada, Portimão, Queluz, Setúbal, Trafaria, Vila Nova de Gaia e Viseu (os dados para estes anos e os que se lhe seguiram foram obtidos a partir da consulta de processos do fundo PIDE/DGS na TT e nos relatórios de ocorrências no AATJ). Na Covilhã, um grupo de TJ de Castelo Branco, que ali fora evangelizar, foi detido e apresentado em tribunal pela PSP a 14.3.1965. Depois de terem sido interrogados toda a noite acerca do serviço militar e da saudação à bandeira, foram acusados de estarem envolvidos em política, mas o juiz absolveu-os sem fiança. No caso do Porto, quatro TJ foram levados a tribunal por terem conduzido sessões de culto num edifício que não estava licenciado para tal efeito. A acusação alegava que os réus tinham tentado convencer jovens a resistir à incorporação militar, mas o juiz não encontrou evidências disso, absolvendo os réus (AATJ, Cópia de sentença judicial, 10.5.1965; Relatório de perseguição, 14.12.1964).

Não encontrámos evidência de que Nogueira tivesse tomado qualquer iniciativa. O que aconteceu, alguns meses depois, foi novamente a detenção de mais uma congregação, neste caso no Feijó, pela G.N.R. Pela primeira vez, uma congregação religiosa ia ser levada ao Tribunal Plenário da Boa-Hora. Neste tribunal político quase invariavelmente os juízes seguiam as recomendações da PIDE, instrutora do processo, que no caso dos interrogatórios aos membros desta congregação seguiu os procedimentos habituais de uso da força e rudeza, mesmo com mulheres grávidas e menores, todos acusados de servir os interesses comunistas e de rebeldia contra o Estado por incitarem os jovens a não servir na guerra colonial[131].

Os principais jornais publicaram o despacho de pronúncia que denunciava as Testemunhas de Jeová como um movimento político importado para fomentar a agitação e subversão. Na primeira sessão, a 23.06.1966, alguns fiéis da confissão conseguiram entrar no recinto, ao passo que cerca de 2000 circulavam nas suas imediações, para dar apoio moral[132].

132 PINTO – Testemunhas de Jeová…, p. 43-44. Em reacção à detenção da congregação do Feijó, os responsáveis das TJ em Lisboa enviaram uma exposição, em 27.9.1965, ao Ministro do Interior, com conhecimento para Salazar e Américo Tomás. Os peticionários, José Maria de Almeida Lança, Pedro Saraiva do Amaral e Joaquim Martins São Pedro Junior explicam ter tido conhecimento da circular ministerial de 17.10.1964 e do relatório acompanhante acerca delas, o que os levara a compreender as razões da repressão que se abatera sobre os seus correligionários. Contudo, argumentavam que uma profunda distorção das suas crenças e objectivos teria ocorrido, passando a explicar em detalhe a posição da religião sobre os valores nacionais, a bandeira e deveres militares (AATJ, Exposição ao Ministro do Interior, 27.9.1965, fol. 1-15). Alguns meses depois, é expedida nova exposição, dado o aumento da repressão, solicitando uma audiência para explicar o seu conceito de neutralidade crista (AATJ, Exposição ao Ministro do Interior, 1.12.1965, fol. 1-8). A nenhuma das exposições foi dada resposta. Uma foto da multidão junto do Tribunal foi publicada

Toda a publicidade do evento tinha como objectivo apresentar negativamente o movimento religioso. Muitos jornais estrangeiros apareceram, e os recortes coleccionados pela PIDE mostram uma disseminação de informações que talvez não agradasse às autoridades. A Rádio Nacional Dinamarquesa relatava que "poderia parecer surpreendente, mas a segurança nacional portuguesa estava a ser ameaçada pelas Testemunhas de Jeová", ao passo que um jornal canadiano comparava Salazar a Hitler. As próximas sessões decorreram à porta fechada, mas havia jornais da oposição no Brasil que continuavam a noticiar o evento, bem como as rádios clandestinas "Portugal Livre" e "Voz da Liberdade", tendo ecos do julgamento chegado inclusivamente à Comissão de Direitos Humanos na ONU[133].

O advogado dos réus, Vasco de Almeida e Silva, alegou que nenhum dos réus cometera os factos da acusação. O Procurador da República não apresentou nenhuma testemunha, nem contra-interrogou os réus ou as suas testemunhas, e interveio apenas para sugerir que se as testemunhas dos réus eram também Testemunhas de Jeová deveriam estar também no banco dos réus. Aquando das alegações finais, pediu apenas que se fizesse justiça. Dois dias depois, a sentença correspondia, sem grandes alterações, àquilo que a PIDE já concluíra na informação que prestara ao Tribunal: condenou-se todos os réus a diversas penas de prisão que atingiram os cinco meses e meio, exceptuando dez dos réus que receberam penas suspensas dado não serem membros oficiais da confissão na ocasião da detenção, mas apenas pessoas interessadas nas suas doutrinas[134].

Na sentença, os juízes repetidamente afirmavam que não se tratava de um problema de liberdade religiosa, mas de desobediência às leis, forçando assim a inevitável condenação dos réus. Vasco de Almeida e Silva apelou para o Supremo Tribunal de Justiça argumentando que não se provara que qualquer dos réus fora o autor material de qualquer crime, mas antes que todos os réus, na data da rusga, se preparavam para uma reunião de natureza religiosa, que nem sequer se efectuou, pois a GNR interveio antes do seu início; pelo que nessa reunião os réus não poderiam ter instigado à desobediência colectiva. O que se provou, continuava o seu advogado, é que os réus eram Testemunhas de Jeová e, potencialmente, segundo a sentença agora exarada, poderiam praticar, em abstracto, se não o tivessem já feito, a difusão de doutrinas que poderiam ter o efeito de instigar à desobediência colectiva. Tratou-se, na realidade, do julgamento das crenças de uma confissão religiosa. Sem surpresas, o Supremo confirmou a sentença através dos juízes Francisco Soares, Adriano Vera Jardim e José Cabral Ribeiro de Almeida, em 22.2.1967. A sentença foi depois devidamente difundida pelas províncias ultramarinas para orientar as autoridades locais[135].

As penas de prisão foram convertidas em multas, e as autoridades portuguesas não esperavam que os réus ora condenados não as pagassem, preferindo antes ir para a prisão, mas foi isso o que sucedeu, forçando um adiamento do aprisionamento de 28 de Abril para 18 de Maio devido à burocracia envolvida. Surpreendentemente, estes criminosos condenados por crimes contra a segurança do Estado, incitadores à desobediência no que tangia a ordens públicas, civis e militares, segundo a sentença, no dia 18 de Maio de 1967 apresentaram-se voluntariamente ao secretário-geral do Tribunal Plenário, que confirmou o seu aprisionamento, designando as dezoito mulheres para a prisão das Mónicas e os seis homens à prisão do Limoeiro. Ora, estas eram prisões para ofensas civis não políticas. Esta linha de procedimento era incongruente dado que, desde o início, o processo fora assumido pela PIDE, trazido a um Tribunal Político, com condenações por crimes contra a segurança do Estado. Depois das formalidades estarem concluídas, os vinte e quatro condenados foram enviados sem nenhum guarda ou escolta oficial até aos locais onde serviriam os termos de prisão, que variava de um mês e meio até quatro meses e meio. O oficial judicial apenas lhes pediu que viajassem em grupos separados para não atrair as atenções. Alguns dos condenados entoaram cânticos religiosos pelo caminho e outros tiveram oportunidade de ir a um café comprar leite e fruta, antes de chegarem ao Limoeiro. Nessa prisão, uma Ramona aguardava as mulheres para as transportar até às Mónicas[136].

Em resposta, as Testemunhas de Jeová lançaram uma nova campanha internacional com artigos nas suas revistas, que decorreu de 1966 a 1967, acompanhando o julgamento na Boa Hora. Imprimiram também um folheto especial de quatro páginas, em português, intitulado Um julgamento simulado de cristãos – a vergonha de Portugal, contendo um relato detalhado das sessões, e que teve uma tiragem de vários milhares de exemplares, expedidos por via postal pelos fiéis espalhados pelo mundo, junto com cartas apelando à liberdade religiosa, para autoridades civis e militares nacionais, juízes, Cerca de vinte menores, cujos ambos os pais foram presos, tiveram de ser entregues aos cuidados de concrentes. Uma das condenadas dera à luz três semanas antes e entrou na prisão com o filho nos braços. Ironicamente, todos os prisioneiros beneficiariam de uma amnistia de três meses decretada pelo Governo após a visita a Portugal do Papa Paulo VI (AATJ, Carta da filial das TJ de Lisboa à sede em Brooklyn, 14.6.1967, fol. 1-2). empresas, escolas, etc. Cerca de cinco mil cartas foram detidas nos postos de Correio mas muitas conseguiram chegar ao seu destino, a julgar pelas inúmeras cartas entregues em mãos pelos destinatários às autoridades[137].

O Ministro do Interior, Santos Júnior, encomendou então cem cópias de uma obra de A. Luís Vaz que expunha os alegados erros e perigos das Testemunhas de Jeová, e distribuiu exemplares por todos os Governadores Civis, em Março de 1967, e ofereceu vinte deles à PSP, vinte e cinco à GNR e cinco à PIDE. Santos Júnior recomendou ainda aos Governadores Civis a aquisição das palestras publicadas pelo sacerdote católico João de Sousa, e chegou a convidar A. Luís Vaz a escrever uma resposta ao folheto Um julgamento simulado de cristãos – a vergonha de Portugal, tarefa que o autor aceitou, "para ajudar a conservar o Império e a nossa maneira de ser no mundo". Tanto a natureza do convite como a resposta do autor demonstram que o conflito, sendo religioso, era visto pelo regime como simultânea e eminentemente político[138].

Parece que o resultado deste processo judicial na Boa Hora marcou uma mudança de atitude de uma parte das forças repressivas ao serviço do regime, dado que a publicidade nacional e internacional trazida sobre o assunto acabou por favorecer mais a divulgação dos ideais das Testemunhas de Jeová e sua situação limitada em termos de liberdade religiosa. Se é certo que a GNR e a PSP mantiveram uma atitude agressiva no terreno, a PIDE passou a agir praticamente apenas quando forçada por denúncias ou quando as outras forças policiais lhes traziam fiéis detidos. Nos anos de 1968 e 1969 ainda detectamos um elevado registo de rusgas em casas privadas e locais de culto bem como de detidos. Entre 1970 a 1974, as rusgas em lares particulares diminuíram muito embora ainda existissem a expensas da PSP e da GNR, insatisfeitas com a postura da PIDE, renomeada de DGS a partir de finais de 1969, que relutava em enviar as Testemunhas de Jeová a tribunal, apenas as identificando, ordenando a destruição das suas publicações e, às vezes a sua detenção, por alguns dias. Parecia que a DGS agia agora com mais cautelas e relutava em enviar tais casos a tribunal para evitar que os condenados optassem novamente pelo cumprimento das penas, trazendo má publicidade ao regime[139].

Durante o consulado de Marcello Caetano

Em finais de 1968, após a queda do ditador Oliveira Salazar que provocou a sua retirada da cena política, Marcello Caetano substituiu-o como Presidente do Conselho. Nessa época, as Testemunhas de Jeová tinham 77 congregações em Portugal, com cerca de 4.300 membros e 5.700 pessoas que estudavam regularmente a Bíblia com elas. Com a ascensão de Caetano veio também a esperança de mudanças que permitissem mais liberdade de expressão das suas convicções religiosas, em particular quando, em 1970, o Governo apresentou uma proposta de lei para melhor regular os direitos das confissões religiosas não-católicas. Pouco tempo depois, o Ministro do Interior Gonçalves Rapazote emitiu um despacho, em 16.10.1970, esclarecendo que a proposta não alterava o facto de as actividades das Testemunhas de Jeová deverem continuar a ser impedidas pelas autoridades policiais, devido a razões do maior interesse nacional, leia-se, a sua objecção de consciência à participação na guerra[140]. Mas, as Testemunhas de Jeová começaram a ser mais audazes nas suas actividades, crendo que uma mudança estaria iminente[141].

139 TT, PIDE/DGS, SC SR 337/46, vol. 18, fol. 124-127; AATJ, Carta da filial das TJ de Lisboa à sede em Brooklyn, 16.11.1967 fol. 1, e 3.1.1969, fol. 1. Rumores espalhavam-se rapidamente e, em geral, eram de fonte militar ou paramilitar. Em Maio de 1969, o Ministério do Exército insistiu com a PIDE que na Trafaria, as TJ pregavam as suas doutrinas subversivas aos soldados aquartelados para que desertassem. Após investigação, a PIDE concluiu que não eram factos passíveis de confirmação, e o capitão Roque que fizera a denúncia não conseguia agora consubstanciá-la (TT, PIDE/DGS, SC SR 337/46, vol. 24, fol. 159-161). Em Março de 1970, uma criança perguntou ao seu pai, capitão da GNR em Alcantarilha (Silves) se as TJ podiam praticar ou não a sua religião e outras crianças fizeram a mesma pergunta ao seu professor de Religião. Em resposta, a GNR de Faro emitiu uma circular a todas as autoridades do distrito avisando que as TJ estavam a doutrinar jovens estudantes por meio de um professor para que os jovens não cumprissem seus deveres militares. Mais uma vez, a PIDE investigou e concluiu que não havia provas. Na realidade, o professor era Católico e o director da escola, apoiante do regime, afirmou que tais situações não seriam nunca toleradas na escola (TT, PIDE/DGS, SC SR 337/46, vol. 24, fol. 134-136). Um agente da PIDE terá alegadamente dito a um responsável das TJ que entre os agentes da PIDE havia diferentes opiniões acerca delas, a maioria dos agentes achando que eram inofensivas. Dizia o agente que o procedimento seguido era de apenas agir após denúncia, deter os fiéis por uns dias e depois libertá-los (AATJ, Carta da filial das TJ de Lisboa à sede em Brooklyn, 18.5.1968; cf. Cartas de 7.9.1968 e 16.11.1968). Localidades onde as autoridades policiais actuaram contra as actividades das TJ no ano de 1968: Algueirão, Almada, Almeirim, Bombarral, Braga, Cacém, Caia, Caldas da Rainha, Carcavelos, Coimbra, Cova da Piedade, Laranjeiro, Malveira, Mem Martins, Lisboa, Peniche, Porto, Póvoa de Santo Adrião, Queluz, Santo Tirso, Setúbal, Trancoso e Vila Nova de Gaia; em 1969: Alferrarede, Algés, Algueirão, Amadora, Angra do Heroísmo, Caldas da Rainha, Carcavelos, Damaia, Elvas, Évora, Lisboa, Odivelas, Porto, Peniche, Ponte da Bica, Ponte de Sor, Pontinha, Queluz, Sacavém e Sintra.

Um aumento de rusgas ocorreu na primavera de 1971, oito congregações sendo visitadas pela polícia no mês de Abril (AATJ, Carta da filial das TJ de Lisboa à sede em Brooklyn, 22.5.1971).

141 SEIT – Liberdade Religiosa..., p. 17-19. Por exemplo, 3.000 TJ viajaram para Toulouse (França) em Julho e Agosto de 1970 para assistirem a um congresso internacional. Ao regressarem, transportando uma grande quantidade de publicações bíblicas nas suas viaturas, a DGS apreendeu-as na fronteira do Caia junto a Elvas, identificando cada um dos crentes. Quando inquiridos pelas autoridades por que razão tinham trazido tais livros, responderam que o fizeram porque Caetano em breve os legalizaria (TT, PIDE/DGS, SC SR 337/46, vol. 29, fol. 90-131).

Contudo, a proposta governamental criou algum mal-estar no seio da Igreja Católica e, a 16.11.1970, Marcello Caetano apresentou uma comunicação ao País para esclarecer os supostos mal-entendidos, designadamente a ideia de que o Governo se preparava para diminuir os privilégios da Igreja Católica, reforçando a ideia de que se procurava antes regular as actividades das demais confissões[142].

No parlamento, um grupo de deputados que se tornaria conhecido como a "Ala Liberal" tentou apresentar propostas legislativas conducentes a uma reforma e liberalização do regime. Durante o ano de 1971, um membro da "Ala Liberal" contactou um dos superintendentes das Testemunhas de Jeová e pediu mais informações sobre a sua organização, crenças e objectivos, em particular no que tangia à neutralidade. As Testemunhas de Jeová aproveitaram a oportunidade e prepararam um memorando que foi entregue a muitos dos deputados da Ala Liberal, tais como Francisco de Sá Carneiro e Miller Guerra. A recepção aos emissários das Testemunhas de Jeová foi boa, mas os deputados foram unânimes na apreciação de que enquanto grassasse a guerra em África o regime não permitiria a sua legalização[143].

A questão das Testemunhas de Jeová era também considerada nos vários fóruns de discussão que surgiram nesta época. Numa conferência que decorreu no Centro Ecuménico de Reconciliação de Buarcos, em Março de 1971, D. Luís Pereira, bispo da Igreja Lusitana Católica Apostólica Evangélica em Portugal, terá defendido que o Governo deveria dialogar com as Testemunhas de Jeová, como outros países fizeram em relação à questão da objecção de consciência, no sentido de encontrar uma solução. No mesmo mês de Março, o padre católico António Montes Moreira, falando numa conferência em Peniche, terá sugerido a possibilidade de serviço cívico alternativo embora mais tarde escrevesse, num ensaio sobre a liberdade religiosa, que as crenças das Testemunhas de Jeová fomentavam um ambiente de insubordinação face às autoridades constituídas[144]. Já António Leite achava que eram doutrinas perigosas que poderiam conduzir os jovens a tomar acções perigosas[145].

A proposta de Lei foi, entretanto, submetida à Câmara Corporativa, que deixou bem claro em diversas passagens do seu parecer, exarado a 27.04.1971, que a Lei não se poderia aplicar às Testemunhas de Jeová. Por exemplo, em relação ao estabelecimento de limites à liberdade religiosa, o parecer explicava que havia "grupos confessionais aos quais é imputada a defesa de princípios ou a imposição de normas de conduta, que, estando em aberto conflito com regras fundamentais, quer do direito público, quer do direito privado, de muitos dos Estados modernos, excedem indubitavelmente o âmbito restrito dos bons costumes". A sombra do conflito armado em África explica a renitência em permitir a objecção de consciência. E para que não houvesse quaisquer dúvidas, o parecer aduz ainda que "as Testemunhas de Jeová, a pretexto de lhes repugnar todas as formas de violência contra o seu semelhante, exprimiriam a sua objecção de consciência, se não contra toda a prestação de serviço nas forças armadas, pelo menos contra o cumprimento de certos deveres militares"[146]. Daí decorreria naturalmente a acção punitiva em termos criminais por parte do Estado face a "certos actos ou omissões recomendados pela confissão religiosa a que o responsável pertence [...] mancebos que fogem à prestação do serviço militar, porque a confissão chamada das 'Testemunhas de Jeová' condena toda a forma de violência"[147]. Além disso, a Câmara Corporativa não deixou de citar o trabalho de Silva Cunha sobre os movimentos associativos em Angola para precisar como o critério da supremacia do conceito de ordem pública, enquanto princípio limitador geral da liberdade, levava precisamente em consideração estarem "em manifesta colisão com os princípios fundamentais da ordem constitucional portuguesa algumas das ideias aceites pelos adeptos da Watch Tower (mais vulgarmente designados por Testemunhas de Jeová)". No que tangia ao Ultramar, a permissão de reunião de culto por parte de "sequazes de certa religião" punha em perigo "os interesses da soberania portuguesa", pois, discorria o parecer, sabia-se "como as reuniões de carácter (real ou aparentemente) religioso constituem um veículo particularmente cómodo e expedito para a circulação de todas as ideias subversivas", rematando em nota de rodapé que movimentos confessionais nas províncias ultramarinas como as Testemunhas de Jeová, e outros, "não parece que sejam de carácter estritamente religioso"[148].

Nos anos finais do regime, como dissemos atrás, a repressão continuou, mas sobretudo na forma de rusgas aos lares particulares utilizados como locais de culto[149]. Em especial a GNR, e ocasionalmente a PSP, manifestavam o seu descontentamento com a linha de actuação da DGS, protestando junto do seu Director que tal inconsistência por parte das forças de segurança poderia resultar em graves danos para a nação[150]. Em 1972, a GNR voltava a instruir os postos para intensificar a repressão, em especial na noite da Comemoração da Morte de Cristo, que constituía o principal evento religioso anual da confissão. Três congregações em Lisboa foram detidas, mas não encarceradas. Dado que essa directiva da GNR, à qual as Testemunhas de Jeová tiveram acesso, tentava demonstrar que elas eram um grupo agindo de forma ilegal, os coordenadores das actividades das Testemunhas de Jeová em Portugal escreveram novamente ao Ministro do Interior explicando que estavam prontas para submeter uma petição para reconhecimento legal da confissão, assim que o Governo determinasse que repartição iria lidar com essa matéria. Tentaram forçar o regime a tomar uma posição oficial sobre a aplicabilidade à confissão da nova lei de liberdade religiosa, promulgada em 21.8.1971[151].

Sintomático desta indefinição de actuação repressiva, foi o pedido de esclarecimentos efectuado pela DGS de Coimbra à sua sede a 28.6.1972. O director reconheceu que se deviam limitar a efectuar apreensões, pois não conseguiam enquadrar as actividades das Testemunhas de Jeová em qualquer ofensa criminal[152]. Não há propriamente um atenuar da perseguição antes da Revolução de Abril de 1974, mas a DGS a realizar um mínimo de intervenções e a GNR e PSP a manterem a pressão. Novos casos foram levados a Tribunal em Cascais e no Peso da Régua, em 1972, mas as decisões favoráveis às Testemunhas de Jeová resultavam, no entender do Ministério do Interior, em carta enviada ao Ministro da Justiça, no desprestígio das forças policiais, desencorajando-as na luta contra os inimigos do Estado, além do pernicioso efeito de encorajar as Testemunhas de Jeová a prosseguirem a sua evangelização com renovado zelo. Foi neste estado que a Revolução de 1974 encontrou os cerca de 12.000 fiéis da confissão, que apenas seria reconhecida como tal, em 18.12.1974, pelo novo governo que ascendeu ao poder após o fim da Ditadura.

150 Por exemplo, em Setembro de 1971, a PSP de Almeirim deteve duas TJ e levou-as à DGS, mas esta recusou-se a recebê-las, alegando ter recebido ordens em contrário, originando um protesto escrito da PSP ao Ministério do Interior, recordando o despacho ministerial de 16.10.1970, que ordenava que as actividades das TJ fossem impedidas por todos os meios (TT, PIDE/DGS, SC SR 337/46, vol. 28, 174-176).

151 AATJ, Carta da filial das TJ de Lisboa à sede em Brooklyn, 13.4.1972, fol. 2. A inexistência efectiva de liberdade religiosa foi denunciada pelas forças políticas oposicionistas no 3.º Congresso da Oposição Democrática, reunido em Aveiro, em Abril de 1973, cujas actas apontam como exemplo a proibição das TJ se reunirem para culto (3.º Congresso da Oposição Democrática de Aveiro. Teses. 7.ª Secção, Lisboa: 1974, p. 225-231).

152 TT, PIDE/DGS, Del C PI 29248, vol. 1, fol. 53-56. Por exemplo, em Novembro de 1972, dezanove TJ foram detidas em Canidelo (Vila Nova de Gaia) enquanto se reuniam para adorar num lar particular, após uma denúncia de que estavam a discutir matérias políticas. Depois dos interrogatórios, os agentes da DGS concluíram que não houvera qualquer subversão, mas uma reunião de "pseudo-religião" (TT, PIDE/DGS, Del P PI 30058, vol. 4). Em Maio de 1973, duas vezes no Porto, e um mês depois, em Gondomar, outras congregações foram detidas e interrogadas, mas as investigações também foram arquivadas (TT, PIDE/DGS, Del P PI 30058, vol. 2-3).

Conclusão

Embora este trabalho de investigação ainda esteja longe de estar concluído é possível, desde já, em jeito de conclusões preliminares, perceber que as autoridades portuguesas durante o período ditatorial, quer na metrópole, quer nos territórios ultramarinos, consideraram indesejável a legalização e permanência de um movimento religioso de escopo internacional cuja directa supervisão não estava a cargo de cidadãos portugueses. Além disso, a questão religiosa era também delicada. Ao passo que o regime apregoava a defesa da liberdade religiosa, a aceitação de formas de culto religioso, ainda que cristão, diversas das tradicionalmente implantadas em território nacional, para lá do milenar Catolicismo, e do progressivamente mais aceite Protestantismo, era entendida pelos sectores mais conservadores dentro do regime como um perigo para a manutenção da identidade nacional, frequentemente ainda pensada em termos de referência católica, e, sobretudo nas províncias ultramarinas, como uma verdadeira ameaça aos interesses militares no âmbito da guerra colonial. Os ideais cristãos pregados pelas Testemunhas de Jeová de um "novo mundo" irmanado racialmente sem opressão ou sujeição de outros humanos contrastavam com a realidade colonial, e eram percebidos, sobretudo pelos pensadores coloniais do regime em matéria de assuntos religiosos, como Ferraz de Freitas e Silva Cunha, como uma afronta à soberania nacional, e associados imediatamente às propostas do comunismo e anarquismo, e assim passíveis de serem aproveitados pelas forças anti-regime para efeitos mais perversos. Para esses pensadores coloniais, e para todos os que desenvolveram as suas posições nas décadas seguintes, as Testemunhas de Jeová estavam irremediavelmente ligadas à eclosão de movimentos religiosos de natureza independente, quer fossem apodados de Movimentos Torre de Vigia ou Watchtower em certas regiões da África Central, ou Kitawala, em outras regiões. Apesar de esses movimentos independentes não terem sido fomentados pelas Testemunhas de Jeová, o facto de terem bebido algumas das suas diversas influências em algum do material impresso por elas, e abundantemente disponível na África Central e do Sul desde o início do século XX, nunca seria olvidado pelas autoridades coloniais portuguesas, que não deixaram de transmitir esses receios para as suas congéneres na metrópole, primariamente a partir da década de 1950, quando a sua presença no Ultramar se tornou mais evidente. A permanência desses receios, de que a difusão das crenças das Testemunhas de Jeová poderia unir todos os movimentos de reacção à presença portuguesa no Ultramar, é evidente no parecer da Câmara Corporativa exarado em 1971. Além disso, a reiterada afirmação de objecção de consciência pelos jovens Testemunhas de Jeová colocou-as numa posição insustentável face às autoridades portuguesas, em particular aquando do eclodir do conflito armado em Angola, em 1961. Quanto mais determinada era a posição dos jovens objectores (que nunca viram reconhecido o seu estatuto pelo regime ditatorial), sujeitando-se a duros interrogatórios, sevícias e humilhações em estabelecimentos militares, ao envio para África para serem expostos nas várias frentes de guerra (e desarmados, para testar a sua integridade), até ao internamento em campos de concentração, mais convencidas ficavam as autoridades políticas e militares de que não poderiam nunca tolerar ou aceitar tal comportamento, e correrem o risco de passar à sociedade portuguesa uma mensagem de descrença e diminuição do moral numa nação em guerra.

Why Opposition? An Exploration of Hostility Towards Jehovah's Witnesses

ABSTRACT: Jehovah's Witnesses have experienced opposition since the Watch Tower Society's inception, and the history of opposition is traced here. Initially, grounds for disapproval were doctrinal, but spanned out to controversies about "miracle wheat" and founder-leader Charles Taze Russell's marital breakdown. Under second leader Joseph Franklin Rutherford, controversy surrounded patriotism and military service. The Witnesses' refusal to celebrate popular festivals attracted subsequent disapprobation, as did allegations of failed prophecy. The Society's stance on blood, disfellowshipping, and shunning have given rise to further unpopularity, and its New World Translation of the Bible has attracted hostility from Christian counter-cult critics. Jehovah's Witnesses have experienced political opposition, and particular attention is given to Russia and South Korea. Most recently, accusations of sexual abuse have gained publicity, and official investigations in Australia and the Netherlands. Finally, the advent of the Internet has enabled critics to organize opposition online. The author does not evaluate these criticisms or examine the Society's rejoinders, but notes that Jehovah's Witnesses continue with faith maintenance, regarding opposition as fulfilment of biblical prophecy.

Jesus said, "And you will be hated by all people on account of my name. But the one who has endured to the end will be saved" (Mark 13,13). inception. Not only Jehovah's Witnesses believe that fierce opposition is one of the signs that we are living in the end times, but Jesus' words provide a measure of the veracity and impact of one's message. Vehement opposition demonstrates that the proclaimers have hit a raw nerve, and should redouble their efforts. This article aims to explore the various grounds on which Jehovah's Witnesses (originally known as Bible Students) have experienced opposition, from the inception of Zion's Watch Tower Tract Society (now the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society) to the present day.

From its very inception, the Bible students encountered opposition. Initially, opponents were mainstream Christian leaders who objected to founder-leader Charles Taze Russell's (1852–1916) teachings on theological grounds. William C. Irvine (1871–1946) commented that "any believer who has been induced to buy his literature ought to burn it" (Irvine 1917, 151); and William G. Moorehead (1836–1914) stated that, "perhaps among all the books of the English-speaking world there is not another which contains as many errors as 'Millennial Dawn'" (cited in Gray 1909, 70; Millennial Dawn was the original series title of Russell's six books, later named Studies in the Scriptures).

Moorehead's objections were mainly directed at Russell's Christology (Moorehead 1910, 107–08). Russell presented Christ as the firstborn of God's creation, thus denying his full deity, in contrast to the traditional creeds, which stated that Christ is "eternally begotten of the Father, begotten, not made, of one being with the Father." According to Watch Tower teaching, Jesus Christ pre-existed as the Archangel Michael, and was born as a fully human being, who acquired his messianic status, not at birth, but at his baptism. This concept of the person of Christ had important repercussions for Russell's doctrine of Atonement: while he viewed the doctrine of Christ's "ransom sacrifice" as central to his theology, the ransom was that of a perfect human being, not of one who was fully God and fully human.

The emphasis on Christ's human nature presented further implications for his resurrection and ascension, since a physical being could not be taken up into Heaven. Russell therefore declared that Jesus rose from the dead with a "spiritual body," not a physical one, and that his physical body was miraculously removed from the tomb. It was in this spiritual body that Jesus ascended back into Heaven, from whence he cast Satan down in 1874 (later revised to 1914), attaining his "second presence" with his followers; he is not expected to return on the clouds of Heaven, as many mainline Evangelicals hold.

Russell's teaching that humanity is living in the end times was no doubt not so objectionable, and even the calculation of end-time prophetic dates was done by many Adventists, and indeed had its origins with mainstream clergy like Edward Bishop Elliott (1793–1875) (Elliott 1844). However, his teachings on life after death were less acceptable. He rejected the immortality of the soul, which numerous clergy were teaching, and he held that there was no Hell for the wicked, only oblivion: not all the dead would be raised at the resurrection, but only those worthy of "probation after death," which meant a subsequent opportunity to accept the Christian faith.

What added to the mainstream clergy's resentment was who Russell was. He was a haberdasher, without formal theological training, who had mingled with a number of Adventist teachers who also lacked qualifications and, notwithstanding this lack of credentials, he had the temerity to criticize and correct the rest of Christendom, urging his supporters to "come out of her." James Martin Gray (1851–1935) commented, "How great effrontery, therefore, that this modern religious teaching ... by one man, should challenge the interpretation of all the churches, in all the centuries!" (Gray 1910, 20).

Not content simply to criticize all of Christendom, Russell and his supporters were enthusiastically propagating this message. Russell offered his sermons to newspaper syndicates, and they often appeared in as many as 2,000 different publications. Russell travelled worldwide, reaching countries as far afield as Japan, the Middle East, and Europe, setting up new branches of the Society, and his supporters travelled widely in the US, Canada, and Europe, distributing his literature, and promoting his distinctive brand of Christianity. Clergy were losing members to the Bible Students organization; it is impossible to determine the scale of the defections, but it was certainly a matter of concern to them.

Criticism of Russell, however, was not confined to his theology. Opponents continue to cite the "miracle wheat" controversy, over a century later, as an example of the allegedly fraudulent nature of the Watch Tower organization. In 1908, an edition of Zion's Watch Tower offered wheat for sale that was produced by a Virginian farmer, which had a remarkably high yield, the proceeds from which would go to the Society's funds (Zion's Watch Tower 1908). The wheat had already aroused the interest of the US government, and Russell believed it fulfilled Ezekiel's prophecy that "the earth shall yield her increase" (Ezekiel 34,27). When the seed failed to meet expectations, the Society offered refunds to purchasers (The Watch Tower 1910), but this did not prevent the Brooklyn newspaper The Eagle accusing Russell of profiteering. Russell decided to sue for libel, but lost the case, thus damaging the Society's prestige further.

A further controversy involved Russell's domestic life: his wife Maria (1850–1938) filed for divorce, amidst accusations of sexual impropriety with their foster child. The dispute was given prominence by Russell himself, who wrote about it at some length in Zion's Watch Tower (Zion's Watch Tower 1906a). A further high-profile libel suit involved John Jacob Ross (1871–1935), a Baptist minister who wrote a pamphlet in 1912, which, among other things, described Russell as "a religious fakir of the worst type, who goes about like the Magus of Samaria enriching himself at the expense of the ignorant" (Ross 1912, 4), and brought up the subjects of the miracle wheat and Russell's divorce once more. Russell sued and lost, and the court proceedings served to damage Russell further by raising questions about his competence in Greek.

The Rutherford Era

When Russell died in 1916, the Great War was at its height, and the US entered into it in the following year. During Russell's period of office, some readers of The Watch Tower had enquired about whether they should engage in combat. Russell's response was that enlisting in the army was acceptable, but not killing, and he recommended alternatives to armed military service, such as joining the ambulance corps, which involved saving rather than taking life.

When his successor Joseph Franklin Rutherford (1869–1942) took over the leadership, however, the Society's stance hardened. The catalyst for state opposition to the Society was the publication of The Finished Mystery in 1917: the book was inappropriately attributed to Russell as a posthumous publication, being substantially the work of Clayton J. Woodworth (1870–1951) and George H. Fisher (1870–1926), probably assisted by Gertrude Seibert (1864–1928). The book accused the clergy of being responsible for the war in Europe, denounced patriotism as being a narrow-minded "hatred of other peoples" (Woodworth and Fisher 1917, 247), and described the war as "butchery" (Woodworth and Fisher 1917, 272). The book was banned in Canada, and was only allowed to be circulated in the US once certain pages had been excised. Rutherford and seven other Watch Tower leaders were arrested, and made to serve prison sentences. Rutherford alleged that the arrests were instigated by the clergy, intensifying opposition between the Watch Tower organization and mainstream denominations.

The government finally withdrew its case, and the Watch Tower leaders were released from prison in 1919, after the Great War had ended, but their punishment increased rather than diminished their zeal. At a Watch Tower Convention at Cedar Point, Ohio, in 1922, signs were displayed throughout the auditorium with the letters "ADV." It became a practice to tantalize convention attendees by displaying enigmatic letters, whose meaning was eventually divulged, when Rutherford gave a rousing speech, concluding "Advertise, advertise, advertise the king and his kingdom!"

One of Rutherford's innovations was to encourage—indeed require—his supporters to advertise the Society's teachings by their house-to-house evangelism, for which they continue to be known. However, the encouragement to commence this work was at a time when the Society's popularity was extremely low. The promotion of the Society's teachings was not only by house-to-house visiting: its preachers would give talks using loudspeakers in public places, and go around the streets with "sound cars" (vans with loudspeakers). Sometimes this was without the requisite permission, since they believed that their right to proclaim Jehovah's message did not require permission from any human authority. If the police attempted to make arrests, Witnesses would summon other cars to converge on the area, so as to ensure that there was insufficient room in the jail cells to accommodate them (Chryssides 2019, 47).

Jehovah's Witnesses were not content simply to practice their own faith privately, and their evangelizing tactics were designed to draw attention to their organization. One method of publicity was the "information march," which began in Glasgow in 1936, when Witnesses put on sandwich boards advertising public events, such as conventions. Rutherford devised the slogan "Religion is a snare and a racket," which was frequently displayed on these boards, "religion" denoting mainstream Christendom.

In 1938, an information march heralded a lecture to be given by Rutherford in the Royal Albert Hall in London, entitled "Face the Facts." If the publicity was provocative, Rutherford's lecture was even more so. Rutherford claimed to identify two "incontrovertible" facts. The first was uncontentious enough, namely that God wanted to establish his kingdom over the earth, and that Jesus Christ had come to the world to establish that kingdom. The second "incontrovertible fact," however, was not so incontrovertible: he declared that a "hideous monstrosity" had ensured that no righteous government existed on earth, since Satan had been cast out from Heaven to earth, to establish his own governments there. Satan's new threat was totalitarian government, which, he argued, began in Russia in 1917 with the Bolshevik government's rise to power, and continued with the regimes in Italy and in Germany, under Benito Mussolini (1883–1945) and Adolf Hitler (1889–1945). Further, Christendom, he claimed, had colluded with these governments, and Britain had begun to forge an alliance with Roman Catholicism. Only Jehovah's Witnesses had maintained their allegiance to Jehovah by opposing these governments. Regarding the Pope and the current political leaders, Rutherford went on:

> Today you stand before the judgment seat of Christ, the great Judge of the world. According to the undisputed facts you are convicted out of your own mouth, and the Lord's final judgment has been entered against you and you are going to die. You have willingly yielded to Satan, abandoned God and his King, and have permitted the Devil to gather you to Armageddon, that battle of the great day of God Almighty, as Jesus foretold (Revelation 16,13–6). The final showdown has come. Your high-sounding titles, your garments, your exalted positions, your money, and your boasted power, shall now completely fail you. Christ Jesus, the antitypical David, has called your bluff. Jehovah's witnesses do not fear you, but they do fear and serve God and Christ. ... At the battle of Armageddon Christ Jesus, leading his invincible army, will slay you and give your dead carcasses to the fowls of the air and to the wild beasts of the earth, and all creation shall know that Jehovah is the Almighty God, that Christ Jesus is the rightful Ruler of the world and the Vindicator of God's word and name, and that Jehovah can put men on earth who will remain true to him (Rutherford 1938, 23–4).

Rutherford's lecture was relayed on a transatlantic radio link, and could be heard by around 150,000 listeners in the United States, Canada, Britain, Australia, and New Zealand. His strident tone proved too much for three of the stations, who cut the broadcast midway.

Holidays

A further way in which Jehovah's Witnesses have marked themselves out as different from others is their stance on holidays. The non-celebration of Easter was a feature of the Society from its inception, and appears to have been the norm in various Adventist groups that influenced Russell. Christmas celebrations were part of the Society's tradition initially, and Russell would typically wish all the residents a happy Christmas when he entered the dining room on Christmas morning. Rutherford, however, came to the view that 25 December was unlikely to be the authentic date for Jesus birth and, perhaps more importantly, the date was associated with "pagan" festivals, particularly the Roman Saturnalia, which were celebrated around that date. Accordingly, the last Christmas celebration at the Brooklyn Bethel was in 1926, and ever since then the festival has gone unmarked.

The avoidance of birthday celebrations did not come until some time later. The exact date of their abandonment is unclear, but appears to have been around 1950, and certainly after Rutherford's death. The biblical reasoning behind the avoidance is that the Bible only twice mentions birthdays—once that of the Egyptian pharaoh in the time of Joseph, and much later by King Herod (before 20 BCE–after 39 CE). Both birthdays were of "pagan" rulers, and both had unfortunate consequences: the pharaoh's baker was condemned to death, and Herod's birthday resulted in the execution of John the Baptist at the request of Herodias' (15 BCE–after 39 CE) daughter.

Jehovah's Witnesses also believe that birthdays involve superstitious practices such as making a wish when blowing out candles; they are also selfish events, involving adulation of the individual whose birthday is celebrated, and that they are unduly commercialized. Other more minor popular celebrations such as Valentine's Day and Halloween are associated with an apostate church's calendar. Jehovah's Witnesses do not acknowledge Christian saints, and Halloween involves occult practices, such as portrayals of witches and an inappropriate fascination for the dead.

While it is not particularly onerous for adults to avoid such celebrations, the Society's stance on these events impacts much more seriously on schoolchildren, at least in countries where Christianity is the dominant religion, since school activities frequently focus on such celebrations, for example designing Valentine cards or Halloween decorations. Socially, on returning from their Christmas vacation, children's conversation will frequently turn to the presents they have received, causing Jehovah's Witness children to explain that their families do not celebrate the festival.

There can be other issues for children at school: care is needed to avoid any overtly religious activity, for example at a morning assembly, and activities such as pledging allegiance to the state mark Witness children out as different. Religious education can present problems, although Jehovah's Witnesses normally have little objection to children being taught about religions in an objective and non-confessional way.

Sex education in schools can also create difficulties: although schools teach the biology of sex, Witnesses believe that this is inappropriate without promoting the moral standards that should accompany it. Some schools have been known to make contraceptives available, advise on how to avoid pregnancy, and have condoned practices such as masturbation, and most recently homosexuality and gender transitioning, all of which have attracted Jehovah's Witnesses' disapprobation.

"Failed Prophecies"

A further common criticism relates to prophetic failure. Although failed prophets are not as inconvenient to society as other aspects of Jehovah's Witnesses, members are frequently criticized for apparently setting dates for "the end of the world," which invariably fail to materialize. I have argued elsewhere that their prophetic statements and "adjustments in view," or "clarifications of doctrine," as they call them, are frequently misunderstood (Chryssides 2010). Nonetheless, the year 1925 provided a clear example of a prediction that did not materialize. In his highly publicized Millions Now Living Will Never Die (Rutherford 1920), Rutherford's end-time calculations gave rise to a firm prediction that in the year 1925 the "faithful ones of old"—the patriarchs, prophets, and other worthy individuals of ancient Hebrew times—would rise from their tombs and come back to life with the expectation of inheriting a renewed earth as their everlasting entitlement.

This prediction left no room for adjustment, and Rutherford was forced to admit that he had simply been wrong. At a convention the following year, he was asked, "Have the ancient worthies returned?" leaving Rutherford with this somewhat lame rejoinder, > Certainly they have not returned. No one has seen them, and it would be foolish to make such an announcement. It was stated in the "Millions" book that we might reasonably expect them to return shortly after 1925, but this was merely an expressed opinion (Yearbook of Jehovah's Witnesses 1980, 62).

The year 1975 was not explicitly defined in Watch Tower literature, but there was an expectation that, since the year was reckoned to be 6,000 years after Adam's creation (reckoned as 4026 BCE), it would mark the beginning of the millennium, and hence the commencement of Armageddon. Frederick Franz (1893–1992), who was then vice-president of the Society, was particularly vocal in raising expectations. Some members sold up property in order to fund the increased witnessing that took place in the run-up to the year; and others postponed marriage or having children. When 1975 came and went, some attempt was made to resolve the cognitive dissonance that resulted: the fact that the Jewish New Year began in October rather than January provided some leeway, as did the observation that Eve was created after Adam, which allowed a slight extension to the length of the sixth creative day. However, when 1976 had passed, disillusionment set in, and the Society experienced a decline of membership over the ensuing two years. Jehovah's Witnesses learned after the failed 1975 date not to set further dates for the end-times, but the reputation for failed prophecy lingers on, and critics continue to pour ridicule on the organization, claiming that "they keep changing the dates."

The Flag Salute Controversy

Jehovah's Witnesses' political neutrality has caused them to incur consequences that have gone beyond verbal criticism. They do not support any earthly government, holding that patriotism involves paying homage to the state rather than to Jehovah. This belief gave rise to major controversy about saluting the national flag. At a convention in 1935 in Washington DC, Rutherford urged his supporters to refuse to salute the flag, since this was placing loyalty to the nation over allegiance to Jehovah.

In 1931, Rutherford had authored a booklet entitled The Kingdom, the Hope of the World, which cited the story in the book of Daniel of three Jewish men—Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego—who refused to comply with King Nebuchadnezzar's (ca. 634–562 BCE) decree that all citizens should bow down and worship a 90-feet tall gold statue in Babylon, or else face the prospect of immolation in a blazing furnace (Daniel 3,1–30). At the 1935 convention, Rutherford urged followers of Jehovah to follow their example by refusing to comply with expressions of allegiance to the state, such as saluting the national flag or reciting the pledge of allegiance (Rutherford 1931).

Soon afterwards, a number of schoolchildren heeded his instruction, and were excluded from school. This led to numerous famous court cases: Jehovah's Witnesses were finally victorious in 1943, on the grounds that religious freedom, as granted by the First Amendment, should prevail over schools' requirements concerning declarations of national allegiance. Although the Watch Tower Society was jubilant at the final outcome, its members' non-compliance in expressions of patriotism did not enhance public perception of the organization.

Blood

Jehovah's Witnesses are probably best known for the stance they take on blood. There is no other religious group known to the author that rejects blood transfusion, and the uniqueness of the Jehovah's Witnesses' position therefore makes them stand out. Jehovah's Witnesses' stated opposition to blood transfusion is biblical (Pattillo 1931; The Watchtower 1944, 1945, 1952a). After the great flood, God gives Noah new dietary laws, stating, "Every moving animal that is alive may serve as food for you. Just as I gave you the green vegetation, I give them all to you. Only flesh with its life—its blood—you must not eat" (Genesis 9,3–4). A similar prohibition is found in the Book of Leviticus: "You must not eat the blood of any sort of flesh because the life of every sort of flesh is its blood. Anyone eating it will be cut off" (Leviticus 17,13–4). The continuing application of this law is seen as confirmed by the First Jerusalem Council in 49 CE, at which the early Christian leaders agreed to "abstain from things polluted by idols, from sexual immorality, from what is strangled, and from blood" (Acts 15,20). The Book of Leviticus prescribes the penalty for contravening the law relating to blood: the offender should be "cut off"—in other words, removed from the rest of the people.

In 1961, it was announced that voluntarily accepting a blood transfusion constituted grounds for being disfellowshipped; today the act of knowingly receiving a transfusion and being unrepentant is a signal that the member has disassociated from Jehovah's organization.

Jehovah's Witnesses have never attempted to conceal or play down their attitude to blood transfusion; indeed, if anything, they have been proud of what they regard as faithfulness to Jehovah. In 1994 the front cover of Awake! magazine displayed the heading "Youths Who Put God First," depicting three of five young people who were featured inside. They were between 12 and 17 years of age, and had refused blood transfusions rather than betray their religious beliefs. Three of them died of blood cancer. The article commended their courage (Awake! 1994), and two subsequent letters to the editor also endorsed their bravery, but opponents continue to draw attention to the article.

Disfellowshipping

The practice of disfellowshipping was mentioned above: congregations ensure that strict integrity is maintained among their members, in accordance with Jesus' preaching, as recorded by Matthew:

> Moreover, if your brother commits a sin, go and reveal his fault between you and him alone. If he listens to you, you have gained your brother. But if he does not listen, take along with you one or two more, so that on the testimony of two or three witnesses every matter may be established. If he does not listen to them, speak to the congregation. If he does not listen even to the congregation, let him be to you just as a man of the nations and as a tax collector (Matthew 18,15–7).

The first step in maintaining discipline, therefore, is for a member who is aware of another baptized member's wrongdoing to talk to that person and point out their error, thus giving him or her an opportunity to repent and change their behavior. If this proves ineffective, the other members should be brought in to speak to that person. If the erring member continues, then the matter should be raised at congregational level by involving the elders, who will investigate the report and determine how it should be dealt with, and whether they should form a judicial committee.

When a serious offence has been alleged, such as sexual impropriety, drunkenness, fraud, or apostasy, a judicial committee of three elders is appointed and meets with the accused. In accordance with biblical principles, two or more witnesses are needed before he or she can be found guilty and disciplined.

Depending on the severity of the offence, the committee may issue a judicial reproof, which may either be private or public, or they may decide to disfellowship the offending member. A public reproof or a decision to disfellowship will be announced to the congregation at its weekday meeting; the precise reasons are not announced, but it is merely stated that "[N] is no longer one of Jehovah's Witnesses." Disfellowshipping often involves being barred from association with fellow members; the disfellowshipped member may attend congregational meetings, but without social exchange with others, not even a simple greeting.

Shunning

The practice of shunning dissociated and disfellowshipped members has frequently attracted criticism, and there is no doubt that ostracism of such people has caused considerable suffering. In the Society's early years, Charles Taze Russell expressed the view that Christians in general—not merely Bible Students—should avoid becoming "unclean," and should separate themselves from God's enemies. By this, he meant that the Christians should avoid associating with people of reprehensible character, which did not include those whose opinions differed from the rest of the congregation. In his later work The New Creation, in which Russell set out the regulations governing congregational practice, he allowed that a congregation might discuss a member's misdemeanors and, if appropriate, disfellowship that person (Russell 1904).

However, disfellowshipping did not entail shunning, but merely that the rest of the congregation should "withdraw special brotherly fellowship" and that the offender should be treated "as a heathen man and a publican." The word "publican" means a tax collector in the King James Version of the Bible: tax collectors were unpopular among first century Jews, and were typically avoided.

Nonetheless, an early Zion's Watch Tower article (1906b, 3801) recommended that such people should be treated courteously, not snubbed, and even Joseph Franklin Rutherford, who wished to exert greater control over the Society's members, expressed opposition to "bondage to creeds," which he believed to be characteristic of the Roman Catholic Church (The Watch Tower 1930, 283). It was Nathan Homer Knorr (1905–1977), the third president, who argued that there was no biblical warrant for congregational voting, and introduced the institution of judicial committees in 1944. Offences which merited judicial investigation and possible disfellowshipping now included "disturbing the unity of the congregation" and not merely moral lapses, and recourse was made to Paul's advice to the Corinthians:

> But now I am writing you to stop keeping company with anyone called a brother who is sexually immoral or a greedy person or an idolater or a reviler or a drunkard or an extortioner, not even eating with such a man.... Remove the wicked person from among yourselves (1 Corinthians 5,11–3).

In 1952, it was made a requirement for congregations to disfellowship those who were guilty of serious offences and unrepentant, and in 1955, a Watchtower article went further, stating that even associating with a disfellowshipped person could itself be grounds for disfellowshipping (The Watchtower 1952b, 1955).

As the Watch Tower Society's stance on blood, disfellowshipping, and shunning intensified, it inevitably came to public attention, was publicized in the media, and became the subject of films, television programs, and documentaries. Jehovah's Witness parents refusing blood transfusion for their child made for exciting film and television drama; some plots, such as Ian McEwan's The Children Act, were based on real-life cases, although the fact that they were not always well researched no doubt helped fuel public antagonism towards the Society.

The New World Translation

The Watch Tower Society's own translation of the Bible, The New World Translation of the Holy Scriptures (1961/2013), which commenced in 1950 and was completed in 1961, enabled new opposition to the Society's teachings. Up to that time, the Society used mainstream versions of the Bible, mainly the King James Version and the American Standard Version. The Society wanted a version that was "not colored by the creeds and traditions of Christendom" (Jehovah's Witnesses: Proclaimers of God's Kingdom 1993, 609). In addition, the translators wanted to reintroduce the name "Jehovah" as a rendering of the tetragrammaton YHWH in the Hebrew scriptures and its presumed equivalent kurios in Greek. They also wanted to clarify the translation of parousia, which they have insisted, right from the time of Russell, means "presence" rather than "coming," and refers to Christ's invisible kingly presence which they believe began in 1914.

The New World Translation inevitably provoked much mainstream criticism, and a number of prominent mainline scholars expressed their evaluation. William Barclay (1907–1978) described it as "a shining example of how the Bible ought not to be translated" (Barclay 1953, 31–2), although his short article in The Expository Times did not identify any specific deficiencies. Bruce Metzger (1914–2007) provided a much more detailed critique, mainly focusing on how the translation addresses Christological issues (Metzger 1953). Like many subsequent critics, he takes issue with the rendering of John 1,1 as "the Word was a god," and takes exception to the translation of Colossians 1,15: "He is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of all creation, because by means of him all other things were created in the Heavens and upon the earth." As he points out, the word "other" does not appear in the Greek text, and the anonymous Watch Tower translators inserted it to support their view that Jesus Christ is the first created being, rather than "eternally begotten." Again, in common with many other critics, Metzger questioned the use of the name Jehovah, either as a rendering of Yahweh, or as a legitimate translation of kurios.

One postscript concerning The New World Translation is worth mentioning. Critics have alighted on the use that the Society allegedly made of Johannes Greber's (1874–1944) translation of the Bible, which appeared in 1937 (Greber 1937). Greber was a Roman Catholic priest who joined a Spiritualist group, and his translation supposedly involved the help of the spirit world. The Watch Tower Society referred to him in a small number of articles in the 1950s and 1960s, expressing approval of his translation of John 1,1, and Matthew 27,51–3, which I have discussed elsewhere (Chryssides 2016, 169–70). Greber's translation of John 1,1–3 was quoted in full in a booklet entitled "The Word"—Who is He? According to John (1962). The Society later ceased quoting Greber, recognizing his occultist connections with disapproval, but this detail of the Society's history continues to haunt it: its critics contend that not only are Jehovah's Witnesses really occultist at heart, but hypocritical as well!

Of the countercult literature that targets Jehovah's Witnesses, books by Robert H. Countess (1937–2005), David A. Reed, Ron Rhodes, and Robert M. Bowman, specifically address the Society's translation and interpretation of the Bible (Countess 1982; Reed 1986; Rhodes 1993; Bowman 1991). Particularly influential is the writing of Walter R. Martin (1928–1989), whose The Kingdom of the Cults was first published in 1965, and sold over half a million copies by 1986 (Martin 1965). His chapter on Jehovah's Witnesses started life as a short booklet, co-authored with Norman H. Klann (1919–1971), entitled Jehovah of the Watchtower (Martin and Klann 1953). Also well-known is Anthony A. Hoekema's (1913–1988) somewhat more measured The Four Major Cults (1963), one of which is inevitably Jehovah's Witnesses, and other more recent critics have included Bob Larson's Larson's Book of Cults (1982).

In addition to mainstream Christian literature, there are many writings by ex-members, the best-known being William J. Schnell (1905–1973), Raymond V. Franz (1922–2010), Marvin James Penton, and Edmund C. Gruss (1933–2018). A large number of ex-members have now produced novels, of which there are now over 50—a topic that merits further research—some of which are autobiographical, and others works of fiction, which show strong evidence of being based on the authors' own experience of the Watch Tower organization.

Political Opposition: Nazi Germany

Much more serious than countercult critique is political opposition. Undoubtedly, the most serious persecution was during the Third Reich in the 1930s and 1940s, when Jehovah's Witnesses—or Bibelforscher (Bible Students) as they were called in Germany—declined to participate in national festivals, to salute the national flag, or to give the greeting "Heil Hitler," and refused to undertake military service. They continued with their house-to-house work and their literature distribution, despite government banning of their activities. As a consequence, they were barred from government employment, denied state benefits, had their businesses boycotted, and children were separated from their families. They were subjected to arrests and beatings, and some 13,400 Bibelforscher were sent to prisons or camps.

Unlike the Jews, however, the Bibelforscher were given the option of release, on condition that they "swore off" by signing a document certifying that they had left the Watch Tower organization and would no longer participate in any of its activities, transferring their allegiance to the State. Very few Witnesses availed themselves of this option, and around 2,000 did not survive, 270 of whom were executed. The Nazi authorities were less inclined to sentence Bibelforscher to death, since they judged the Witnesses to be "ideologically" rather than biologically unfit, and renouncing their faith was viewed as a greater victory than execution.

South Korea

While Jehovah's Witnesses are now free to proclaim their message in Germany, opposition continues elsewhere. Military service remains a highly contentious issues: while there are many countries that offer alternative civilian service for conscientious objectors, some offer no alternatives, and some require longer periods of alternative service than the equivalent time required in the military. Jehovah's Witnesses are amenable to alternative service, so long as it is not under military control.

In recent times the greatest difficulties have occurred in South Korea and in Russia. In South Korea, the 1948 Military Service Act required military service for all men of 18 years and over, with no option of alternative service, and objectors were criminalized. From 1953, some 19,000 Jehovah's Witnesses have served prison sentences, totaling 36,000 years in all. When Park Chung-Hee (1917–1979) became president, his aim was to have a 100% compliance with the 1949 Conscription Law, and in 1971 he declared a state of emergency, thus making freedom of conscience subordinate to national security. Soldiers were ordered to seek out congregations to arrest conscientious objectors, and use was made of military courts rather than civilian ones, which entailed that Witnesses received not only a less sympathetic hearing, but longer prison sentences for non-compliance—typically, three years' imprisonment rather than two. Prison conditions were harsh, contacts with family were denied, and Witnesses were often tortured, as a result of which five young men died.

Matters changed for the better in 2001, when cases were moved to civilian courts and, following some 500 complaints to the United Nations' Human Rights Committee, assisted by the legal department of the Watch Tower Headquarters, the right of conscience became protected in 2018, and South Korea was required to offer alternative service. However, South Korea's alternative service extends to three years, as compared with the period of military service, which is only 18 months, making it the world's longest period of alternative service. However, all Jehovah's Witnesses there have now been released.

Russia

In Russia, the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917 resulted in new opposition. Although Vladimir Ilyich Ulyanov Lenin (1870–1924) had proclaimed the freedom of religion, the atheist Social Democratic Party soon regarded religion as the "opium of the people," and made religious instruction illegal. Opposition intensified, as Witnesses continued to ensure the availability of their literature by smuggling it into the country, operating clandestine printeries, and continuing with street witnessing. When Germany attacked Russia in 1941, Jehovah's Witnesses maintained neutrality, and refused to enlist in military service or to vote in elections. In 1951, the KGB persuaded Joseph Vissarionovich Stalin (1878–1953) to exile the "Jehovists" to Irkutsk and Tomsk, where they continued with informal witnessing. In 1961, a budget of 5,000,000 rubles was designated to deal with Jehovah's Witnesses, such was the perceived threat.

Under perestroika, which was announced in 1985, the situation began to change, and in 1990 the Chairman of the Committee for Religious Affairs received a delegation of 15 Jehovah's Witnesses, as a result of which the Society was allowed to register in 1991. The religious freedom of Jehovah's Witnesses was short lived, however. The situation for Jehovah's Witnesses was largely prompted by the attitude of the Russian Orthodox Church: Eastern Orthodoxy has tended to be intolerant of other forms of religion, and it is opposed to proselytizing, which of course Jehovah's Witnesses insist on undertaking.

In 1993 Alexander Dvorkin, a Russian Orthodox scholar and activist, decided to set up the Saint Irenaeus of Lyons Information and Advisory Center, Russia's first anticult organization, with the approval of the Patriarch of Moscow. At first, the Center targeted small sectarian Russian groups, but with the passage of time better-known new religious groups, such as Scientology, the International Society for Krishna Consciousness, and numerous others were targeted, including Jehovah's Witnesses.

In 2002, the Russian federal authorities passed a law "On Combatting Extremist Activity," defined as "propaganda of exclusivity, superiority or inferiority of a person on the basis of their religious affiliation or attitude towards religion." In 2006, modifications were made to the legislation, resulting in Jehovah's Witnesses being accused of incitements to "religious discord" and assertion of superiority and exclusivity, and the following year the Prosecutor General's Office began an investigation of the Watch Tower organization in the country, commissioning a number of "expert studies." Although it was concluded that Jehovah's Witnesses did not actively incite hostility, some 95 of their publications were defined as extremist, and put on the Federal List of Extremist Materials.

Meeting together as congregations came to be regarded as extremist, and 16 Jehovah's Witnesses were found guilty by the Taganrog City Court on November 13, 2015. This was followed by police raids, and in 2017 the Supreme Court required the liquidation of all the Society's assets, making it impossible for the premises to be used for meetings. As of October 9, 2020, 388 Witnesses in Russia and Crimea are under criminal investigation, 45 are in prison (10 convicted; 35 awaiting trial); over 190 have served time in pre-trial detention; 26 are under house arrest; and 1,146 homes have been raided since the Supreme Court ruling in 2017.

Sexual Abuse

As the public became increasingly aware of sexual abuse scandals, Jehovah's Witnesses came under scrutiny. In the year 2000, William H. Bowen, who had been an elder in a Kentucky congregation, and at one time a Brooklyn Bethelite, decided to publish an Internet post, inviting victims to contact him, and he set up the website Silentlambs.org, which became an incorporated organization in 2001. The website's material is not confined to the Watch Tower Society, but it describes Jehovah's Witness organization as a "pedophile paradise."

In reality, there are few, if any, opportunities for pedophile activity at Kingdom Hall meetings or at conventions, since there are well attended, with no special activities for children, who remain with their parents throughout. Sexual abuse has tended to occur within families, or with a congregational member—sometimes an elder or ministerial servant—who has befriended vulnerable fellow members and received hospitality in their homes. What has attracted particular attention, however, appears to be the way in which Jehovah's Witnesses have dealt with the problem. Jehovah's Witnesses have now been the subject of two government reports—one in Australia (Royal Commission into Institutional Responses to Child Abuse 2015), and the other in the Netherlands (van den Bos et al. 2019). The Australian Royal Commission's investigations were not confined to Jehovah's Witnesses but had a much wider scope, including health care and educational establishments, as well as a number of religious denominations, such as Anglicans, Roman Catholics, and the Salvation Army. By contrast, the Netherlands Report exclusively targeted Jehovah's Witnesses.

Online Opposition

Mention should also be made about the opportunities for opposition afforded by the Internet. There are many websites that have been created in opposition to the Watch Tower Society: many of these are amateurish, but there are a number of quite professionally produced web pages, such as avoidjw.org, jwfacts.com, jwsurvey.org. Particularly vocal in his online criticism is Lloyd Evans (who also writes under the pseudonym John Cedars), author of The Reluctant Apostate (Evans 2017), who has authored various books and web pages, and features numerous videos.

These online critiques of Jehovah's Witnesses address numerous perceived doctrinal and social issues, particularly blood, disfellowshipping, and shunning, and highlight atrocity tales, as well as alleged changes in doctrine, offering advice on what to say to Jehovah's Witnesses at the door and on literature carts, and how to leave. These pages also make available archival material, as well as restricted literature normally only available to elders.

Perhaps most important for ex-members is the role of social media. One major problem for ex-members is that they miss former friends, families, and community. Groups such as the Facebook (2020) Ex-Jehovah's Witnesses Support provide an alternative community: at the time of writing, it is followed by 9,140 members, with 8,695 "likes." The forum is international, and because social media groups are themed, it can readily bring together those who would have found difficulty in the past pre-Internet years finding others in like situations. Although such groups operate in cyberspace, the online contact frequently leads to physical meetings, and thus can create new communities of conventional friendships.

Conclusion

The preceding discussion has not attempted to evaluate these criticisms or to consider how the Watch Tower Society has responded, but merely to enumerate the kinds of criticism that have been made of the organization since its inception. A thorough assessment would be a more major task. More detailed discussion of sexual abuse allegations can be found in the Jehovah's Witnesses' response to the Dutch Government and an expert report by Holly Folk, Massimo Introvigne, and J. Gordon Melton (van Ling 2020; Folk, Introvigne, and Melton 2020). Further analysis must await my forthcoming Jehovah's Witnesses: An Introduction (Chryssides 2021). In the meantime, it is worth mentioning briefly that many of the critics only tell part of the story. For example, the Miracle Wheat incident ended with the Watch Tower Society offering a full refund to all purchasers—an offer of which no one took advantage.

Allegations against Russell and the foster child Rose Ball (1869–1950) were never substantiated, and indeed seem unlikely if, as is often reported, his marriage with Maria was a celibate one (The Watchtower 1953). Critics of the Society's policy on blood often fail to mention the medical alternatives that Jehovah's Witnesses find acceptable, their Hospital Liaison Committees, or the fact that blood transfusion has sometimes caused illness rather than cure. While their stance on war may seem unpatriotic, Jehovah's Witnesses will typically point out that, if all countries adopted the same attitude to armed conflict, the world would be a much more peaceful and prosperous place. I have discussed the Jehovah's Witnesses' position on prophecy elsewhere and, without endorsing their views on inter-time chronology, I have argued that it has been seriously misunderstood (Chryssides 2010).

Mainstream Christians will of course continue to challenge Watch Tower teachings; that is certainly their right, but criticism of course should be based on accurate understanding rather than caricature or scant and careless reading of the Society's literature. Few critics in the free world would endorse the persecution that Witnesses have undergone, but Jehovah's Witnesses remain undeterred, continuing with their worship and their evangelism, believing that the truth should not be compromised by secular ideologies or vociferous critics, and that opposition is to be expected as confirmatory evidence that Armageddon is near.

Opposition to Jehovah's Witnesses in the United States Through the Twentieth Century

J. Gordon Melton

ABSTRACT: The Jehovah's Witnesses have emerged in the United States as one of the very few denominations that have attracted as many as a million members, a status that came only after battling back from both social discrimination and government persecution over some of its unpopular beliefs. In 1918, the president and several of his fellow leaders of the precursor Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society were convicted under the Espionage Act for ostensibly advising young men to avoid joining the armed services. Then, beginning in the 1930s, members were harassed for refusing to salute the flag and recite the pledge of allegiance. About the same time, they also began to experience pushback from their active evangelistic efforts such as distributing materials on the street and knocking on the front door of private residents. Their ability to practice and spread their faith would lead to multiple cases going to the Supreme Court for final resolution, most culminating in Witnesses prevailing. Their fight to defend their freedoms in the courts through the mid and late twentieth century expanded the understanding of the First Amendment freedoms to all American religions.

Introduction

The Jehovah's Witnesses communion has emerged in the 21st century as one of the more important religious groups globally. It is one of a miniscule number of religious denominations to have a worshipping community in as many as 200 countries (of the 240 recognized by the UN). Meanwhile in the US, the land of its birth, and home to several thousand religious communities, it is one of but 25 denominations to attract as many as a million adherents (Chryssides 2008, 2009, 2016; Holden 2012; Knox 2018; Penton 2015; Bergman 1984). Its numerical success has not come without controversy, indeed, the JWs have a unique history of overcoming public disparagement of their beliefs and practices.

What we know today as the Jehovah's Witnesses emerged in stages through the 1870s in the United States, beginning with an independent Bible study group in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, organized by Charles Taze Russell (1852–1916) in 1870. Russell, who had been influenced by the Adventist tradition and was deeply concerned with eschatological questions, promoted a solution of a critical problem about the return of Jesus Christ based on a redefinition of the Greek word parousia (which had several historical antecedents). Rather than "return," he promoted the theory that parousia be translated as "presence." He followed that theory by suggesting that Jesus' parousia or presence was in 1874. A generation later (in 1914) would see the end of this present age (Horowitz 1986; Zydek 2009).

To further his views, Russell began issuing a periodical, the Zion's Watch Tower (1879), incorporated the Zion's Watch Tower Tract Society (1884), and moved his headquarters to Brooklyn in 1909. During this period, he also issued a six-volume Studies in the Scripture, that presented his broad perspective and announced the Millennial Dawn, the arrival of a new age of the coming kingdom. As the volumes appeared, he recruited an army of associates to spread out across the country and distribute his writings. Russell died in 1916, by which time he led a movement with centers across North America and was already spreading around the globe.

Russell died shortly after World War I began (but prior to the United States' entrance into the war in 1917) amid speculation that the war was a sign of the end of the present social order. Shortly after America's entrance into the war, the government passed the Espionage Act, which targeted anyone in the US who might interfere with military operations or recruitment, or provide support for the country's enemies. On May 16, 1918, the Sedition Act amended the Espionage Act, adding anti-war speech as a prosecutable offence. This act immediately called into question any religious groups with pacifist tendencies (such as the Mennonites and Quakers), especially those that had formed relatively recently, such as the Church of God in Christ, an African American Pentecostal group, whose founder Charles Harrison Mason (1864–1961) was arrested on two occasions for advising its younger members to refuse the draft (White 2015; Brock 2016; Mollin 2006).

Meanwhile, Russell would be followed by Joseph Franklin Rutherford (1869–1942) as the new head of the Watch Tower organization. The legitimacy of his leadership was challenged by several colleagues and led to the first schisms among the Watch Tower Bible Students, especially after Rutherford backed the publishing of a seventh volume of Studies in the Scripture, called The Finished Mystery (Woodworth and Fisher 1917). He emerged, however, with the overwhelming support of the followers, and went on to direct the society for the next three decades. He is remembered today for leading the society to adopt its present name, Jehovah's Witnesses, in 1931.

Rutherford died in 1942, and was succeeded by Nathan Homer Knorr (1905–1977), who would remain in charge for the next quarter of a century. Among the more noticeable changes introduced by Knorr was the removal of any author's name(s) from the literature. Rutherford had issued a stream of books, but beginning in the 1940s, Watch Tower books no longer carried the name of any who contributed to their writing. Knorr also instituted a new leadership training program that raised the level of interaction of Watch Tower people with possible recruits, and led to a significant expansion of the size of the Witnesses community both nationally and internationally. In addition, and possibly most significantly, Knorr oversaw the Witnesses' response to the controversies that surrounded them, and led them through its most intense phase.

Accusations of Being a "Cult"

It was during the height of Russell's career at the end of the nineteenth century that leaders within the mainstream Protestant denominations, still in a growth phase, recognized that they had a variety of competitors who denied what was considered the essential core of Christian doctrine. Inside the church were the Modernists, and on the fringe were a growing number of new religions, the "cults." The term "cult" was introduced in the 1890s, and popularized in the 1920s.

Relative to the Bible Students, Christian critics accused them of a variety of doctrinal errors beginning with the Arian theology espoused in the Studies in the Scriptures. The 4th century bishop Arius (256–336) essentially denied the divinity of Jesus, suggesting that Jesus was God's firstborn but slightly less than God himself. That definition of Jesus's status then reverberated through Christian theology relative to, for example, the nature of Jesus' role in human salvation.

The rise of a Christian counter-cult movement paralleled the rise of fundamentalism, and counter-cultists always included the Witnesses among their targets. They received lengthy chapters in Jan Karel Van Baalen's (1890–1968) The Chaos of the Cults (1938) and Walter Martin's (1928–1989) The Kingdom of the Cults (1965), and were prominent as one of the Four Major Cults (1963) cited by Anthony Hoekema (1913–1988). Through the last half of the twentieth century, the Witnesses vied with the Latter-day Saints as the major target of counter-cult attention (Van Baalen 1938; Martin 1965; Hoekema 1963).

Major accusations against the Witnesses included their denial of the full divinity of Jesus, their denial of the traditional doctrine of hell, and the obvious failure of some predictions about the end of the present social order (i.e., the failure of prophecies). Since the Witnesses introduced their own translation of the scripture, the New World Translation of the Holy Scriptures, beginning in 1950, it has been given extensive scrutiny and denounced by some as a flawed translation (Guarino 2019; Wright 2019).

The counter-cultists also gave particular attention to apostate stories. the autobiography of William Schnell (1905–1973), 30 Years a Watchtower Slave, initially released in 1956, becoming an essential item in every counter-cultist's library. It has remained in print into the new century. As apologetics has developed as a significant discipline in Evangelical seminaries, new anti-Jehovah's Witness material is continually being generated, including a whole new generation of apostate material (Schnell 1956; McDaniel 2014; Scorah 2019).

Persecution

This brief overview of JW history defines an environment in which the Witnesses encountered government and legal forces through the twentieth century. Their initial problem emerged just as the leadership was reorganizing in the wake of Charles T. Russell's death in 1916.

The United States formally entered World War I in April 1917. Two months later, the legislature passed the already mentioned Espionage Act, which made it a crime, among other things, to refuse duty in the armed forces and to obstruct the country's recruiting or enlistment service. Conviction led to fines (up to $10,000) and/or imprisonment (up to 20 years). It was passed by a narrow margin, the legislators being aware of the unpopularity of the war among the general population, the Woodrow Wilson (1856–1924) administration having been elected on the slogan, "He kept us out of war." As mentioned earlier, it was followed by the Sedition Act.

While initial targets of the acts were those in the socialist wing of the labor movement, the government also moved against the Bible Students. In May 1918, sedition charges were laid under the provisions of the Espionage Act against Rutherford and seven of the Watch Tower directors and officers, prosecutors citing as their rationale some statements made in The Finished Mystery, that final volume of the Studies in the Scripture series that had been published in 1917 (Woodworth and Fisher 1917).

Particular statements used against the Watch Tower Bible Students grew out of the general separatist position expressed in the Watch Tower's early pacifist stance. Rutherford and his colleagues were subsequently charged on four counts, arrested, and tried. Following their conviction, on June 21, the seven defendants were sentenced to four 20-years terms, the sentences to run concurrently. The war ended in November 1918, and shortly thereafter, the prisoners' cause gained some traction. Nine months into their sentence, Supreme Court Justice Louis Brandeis (1856–1941) ordered their release on bail. They served nine months in the federal penitentiary in Atlanta, Georgia, before finally being released. In April 1919, an appeals court ruled that they had been denied an impartial trial, and reversed their conviction. A year later, the government announced that all charges had been dropped, and there would be no attempt to retry them. The matter seemed closed.

Meanwhile, in the post-war years, the movement to display the flag and to wed that display to a newly written pledge of allegiance gained ground. Churches had become involved, especially in the Midwest where many German and Scandinavian churches, which had previously maintained worship in their home country's language, quickly anglicized during the war years, and placed an American flag in their sanctuaries.

After the war, especially after the adoption of the present text of the allegiance in the 1920s, the placement of a flag, the pledge of allegiance, and a lay form of a salute to the flag all began to make their way into the public schools. In the 1930s, even as the Jehovah's Witnesses gained a new level of visibility by adopting a distinctive name and beginning to build Kingdom Halls, the insertion of the pledge into the public schools morning exercise led to the Witnesses reiterating their belief that some expressions of patriotism were nothing more than idolatry and should be avoided.

As World War II began, and especially in the years prior to the United States officially entering the conflict in the wake of the attack on Pearl Harbor, the case of the children and youth of Witnesses families refusing to salute the flag and recite the pledge of allegiance would become a significant public issue.

The issue was assigned an increased importance after Congress formally adopted the pledge in 1942, and then the following year designated a standard form of the average citizen (not a member of the armed forces in uniform) response/salute (Jones and Meyer 2010; Ellis 2005).

The Jehovah's Witnesses refused to salute the flag, or repeat the pledge of allegiance, practices that had their greatest impact on the children attending public schools, where they faced both the ire of teachers and the taunts of classmates.

A new phase in the opposition to activities around the flag began in the summer of 1935 when Rutherford told a Jehovah's Witnesses convention that to salute an earthly emblem was unfaithfulness to God and that he would not do it. As school started up, one Carleton Nichols (1927–2007), a third-grade pupil brought up in a Jehovah's Witnesses family, refused to recite the pledge and was duly expelled from his school in Lynn, Massachusetts. As the incident received press coverage, other Jehovah's Witnesses children followed suit, and Rutherford publicly praised them. He wrote a brief booklet, Loyalty, discussing the issue, which had the effect of transforming his opinions concerning the flag into the official teachings and accepted doctrine of the organization. Rutherford explained that, while members of the organization respected the flag, going through a ritual before it constituted idolatry. Idolatry was repeatedly forbidden in the Scripture (Rutherford 1935, 16–8). Some Witnesses formed private schools to continue their offspring's education.

Several years later, in Minersville, Pennsylvania, a predominantly Roman Catholic community, the children of a local Witness, Walter Gobitas (1900–1990, whose name was incorrectly spelled "Gobitis" in the court decision), challenged the system by refusing to say the pledge of allegiance. By this time, the Witnesses had informally begun to actively oppose regulations that attempted to squelch their religious behavior. As early as 1933, the organization had quietly passed around instructions on how members should act if arrested and/or faced a court appearance (Bergman 1984).

Walter Gobitas and his family were recent converts to the Jehovah's Witnesses. They were inspired by stories of fellow members who challenged the system and suffered for it. Walter's children did not pledge allegiance when at school. His son William ("Billy," 1925–1989), in the fifth grade, and his sister Lillian (later Klose, 1923–2014) were expelled. His business was boycotted. The situation led to a trial in February 1938. Gobitas won the first round when in June a judge ruled the Minersville school board's requirement that the children salute the flag violated the children's free exercise of religious beliefs. The school board, however, decided to appeal the decision, and the case wound up in the US Supreme Court in 1940. In the case of the Minersville School District v. Gobitis, the court ruled 8-1 to reverse the lower courts and upheld the mandatory flag salute.

The ruling led to a public backlash against the Witnesses. People were physically assaulted, and kingdom halls were burned. The American Civil Liberties Union reported to the Justice Department that nearly 1,500 Witnesses had been physically attacked in more than 300 communities nationwide. At the time, the US was publicly debating the country's entrance into World War II, and many interpreted the decision as suggesting that the Witnesses were traitors to the country (Peters 2000).

In 1942, the West Virginia's Board of Education ordered the public schools to make the salute to the flag a regular part of the daily program of their schools' activities, and added that any refusal would be regarded as an act of insubordination. It should be noted that the salute at this time was a raised right arm that looked strangely similar to the Adolf Hitler (1889–1945) salute in Nazi Germany. It was also to be done while repeating the pledge of allegiance.

At this point, Marie Barnett (later Snodgrass, 1933-) and Gathie Barnett (later Edmonds, 1931–2012: their names were misspelled as "Barnette" in the court decisions), children of a Jehovah's Witness family in Charleston, West Virginia, refused to salute the flag, were duly expelled, and their parents filed suit against the school board. They actually won the case when first heard locally, but it was appealed upward and landed at the Supreme Court. The Witnesses' lawyer—Hayden Covington (1911–1978)—argued for the court to overturn its previous decision, an argument that had gained broad support including that of the American Bar Association. And the court listened. Reversing the Pennsylvania ruling, it concluded in a 6-3 decision that it was unconstitutional for public schools to compel students to salute the flag. It added that any attempt to establish a "compulsory unification of opinion" was both doomed to failure and antithetical to the values set forth in the First Amendment (Covington 1950; Peters 2000).

Parallel to the flag cases were a set of cases involving the Witnesses active program of evangelization. The Witnesses were active on the streets and in knocking on the doors of private homes to present their case. They passed out literature and solicited donations to cover the printing costs of their publications. They also carried phonograph machines to play records presenting their teachings. Some of this material was blatantly hostile to other religions in general and to the Roman Catholic Church in particular (which in turn published vitriolic criticism of the Witnesses). It should be noted that while the Roman Catholic Church was the largest church in the United States, and had been so for a hundred years, the Protestant churches were collectively much larger and often shared the anti-Catholic views of the Witnesses. While the content of the material distributed by the Jehovah's Witnesses was at issue in some contexts, the manner in which they distributed it was most often the legal concern at issue.

Beginning in the late 1930s, cases on literature distribution (and related issues) began to arise in locations around the country. The most critical one began in a predominantly Roman Catholic neighborhood of New Haven, Connecticut, in which a Witness name Newton Cantwell (1878–1981), along with his two sons, carried out their proselytizing ministry. They were arrested for not having obtained a certificate to solicit funds in public and for breaking the peace. Initially the state supreme court ruled against the Cantwells. But in a unanimous ruling, the US Supreme Court ruled against the state, in that requiring what amounted to a license to exercise religion violated the free exercise of religion. Crucial to the issuing such a document was allowing an individual official the authority to determine which groups should and should not receive such a certificate.

Cantwell v. Connecticut also had the effect of clarifying an understanding in American law—the first amendment guarantees of freedoms applied to the state governments and not just to the federal government. Not only was the federal government forbidden to pass laws abridging the free exercise of religion, but neither could the states (Alley 1999; Peters 2000, Kaplan 1989).

Conscientious Objection

Following Pearl Harbor, an old issue reemerged for the Witnesses, actual participation in the armed services. The Jehovah's Witnesses had from the days of Charles Russell refused to take up arms in any country's war, even as, citing Roman 13, Russell had no objections to service in the Armed Forces in noncombatant positions, especially in the supplying of medical services, under the obligation of being subject to the authority of government. However, a quarter of a century after Russell's passing, in 1940, the United States passed the Selective Training and Service Act, which provided for mandatory alternative service for those who refused to take part in combat because of religious belief. Those who objected to the noncombatant alternative service could be arrested and imprisoned. By this time, however, Rutherford had come to feel that even noncombatant service was wrong. In accepting noncombatant duties, one freed up someone else to take up firearms, and hence little was gained by the individual in a partial withdrawal from warfare (DePaul College of Law 1955).

The position articulated in the 1940s would become a source of tension between the Witnesses and the United States government over the next generation. In 1983, the Witnesses leadership, looking back over a generation of struggle on the issue, noted:

> An examination of the historical facts shows that not only have Jehovah's Witnesses refused to put on military uniforms and take up arms but, during the past half century and more, they have also declined to do noncombatant service [under the Army] or to accept other work assignments as a substitute for military service. [...] Many of Jehovah's Witnesses have been imprisoned because they would not violate their Christian neutrality (United in Worship of the Only True God 1983, 167).

Witnesses developed a rather sophisticated position on war and peace and their place in it, given Israel's many wars described in the Old Testament. The Witnesses also reflected upon a coming war in the future, the war of Armageddon, in which they might be called upon to fight (although without using "carnal weapons"). One was in the far historical past, the other in a future only vaguely conceivable form the limited texts referring to it. More consequential were the anti-war biblical statements that offer an immediate rationale for refusal to participate in any present-day armed services, on the grounds that Bible believers should be neutral in worldly conflicts and as Isaiah 2:4 states, "neither shall they learn war anymore."

Over the years of the war and for decades afterwards, Jehovah's Witnesses faced periodic conflict even as a general acceptance of conscientious objection to war was largely accepted by the public. Among the key cases relative to Witnesses arrested for their conscientious objection was that of Anthony Sicurella (1927–1988), who had refused to enlist in the armed forces because of his religious beliefs.

Sicurella's appeal of his conviction worked its way to the Supreme Court in 1955. In this case, his status as a pacifist was challenged due to his stated willingness to fight, if called upon by God, in the eschatological battle of Armageddon. The Supreme Court overturned his conviction holding that the law on conscientious objection to military service referred to citizen's attitudes to real shooting wars in the present rather the spiritual battles anticipated at the world's end, wars in which the Jehovah's Witnesses were by no means unique in believing to be in their future (Hunt 1969). The Supreme Court also reiterated that in these future "spiritual wars," "Jehovah's Witnesses, if they participate, [believe they] will do so without carnal weapons" (Sicurella v. United States 1955).

The Witnesses would continue to deal with conscientious objection issues in the United States until the end of the draft in the mid-1970s made the issue largely a moot point. The Witnesses' leadership has nevertheless remained alert due to the on-going nature of the issue relative to military service in multiple countries around the world.

Blood Transfusions

A final set of court cases, all more recent, involved a particular belief of the Witnesses relative to drinking blood. Based upon biblical admonitions not to drink blood (cf. I Samuel 14:33), the Witnesses refuse blood transfusions. This belief, while considered by many secular opponents to be ignorant and superstitious, and by most mainline Christians to be based on a very peculiar exposition of scripture, is a strongly held credence of the Jehovah's Witnesses.

In the United States, individuals (adults) can refuse most medical treatments. The issue is medical, not legal. For Witnesses, the primary legal issue involving blood transfusions has concerned minors who might need operations in life or death situations that involve the use of transfusions. This situation has often led to court intervention, and the assumption by the court of the responsibility of the minor's parents until the operation is performed.

These cases, however, assumed a radically new perspective in the 1990s, when America faced a dramatic blood shortage due to contamination of the blood supply by the AIDS virus, and in several countries, patients died because of transfusions with contaminated blood. Through the 1970s and 1980s, due to their belief, the Witnesses had led in the development of various alternative surgical procedures that did not require transfusions. These alternative procedures became quite popular in the 1990s, and have led to more permanent changes in surgical procedures in the post-AIDS era, affecting all patients and not the Jehovah's Witnesses only (Stevenson 2016; Carbonneau 2003; Bergman 1980).

Conclusion

Through the middle and late twentieth century the Witnesses championed a set of unpopular beliefs and practiced several very unpopular behaviors, which led initially to a community reaction, and then caused them to challenge a set of laws that at the state and local level attempted to push back against those beliefs and practices (Côté and Richardson 2001). In order to practice their religion, the Witnesses at first fell victim to the laws, and then mounted a successful legal effort to have the laws changed or removed.

Through the 1940s, their efforts resulted in more than twenty First Amendment cases that went to the Supreme Court, almost all of which they won. That number has more than doubled in the years since. In winning these cases, they ended their major conflicts with the American government, but also have, in the process, rewritten American law relative to the First Amendment to the Constitution by extending the impact of the Bill of Rights and of its guarantees of the freedoms of the exercise of religion, speech, and assembly. They have done so just as America has experienced a radical growth of religious diversity, with the decisions in their many cases clarifying the covering that the First Amendment offers for all religious communities.

Dangerous Freedoms: Jehovah's Witnesses, Religious Liberty, and the Questions of Sexual Abusers and Disfellowshipped Ex-Members

Massimo Introvigne

ABSTRACT: Sociologist Hans Joas sees the coexistence, and sometimes conflict, of three form of sacralizations in modern history: religious sacralization, and the sacralizations of the nation and the person. The article argues that today the "religion of God" defends its religious liberty against some excessive claims both by the "religion of the state" and the "religion of the person." Like canaries in the coal mine, Jehovah's Witnesses are often the first to be hit, both by the "religion of the state" in non-democratic regimes that deny their individual religious liberty, and by the "religion of the person" in modern democracies where their corporate religious liberty is under attack. By defending their rights to be free from interferences of the states when they decide which members should be disfellowshipped (and as a consequence shunned or "ostracized"), even when these members are accused of sexual abuse (a different question with respect to whether they should be reported to secular authorities), the Jehovah's Witnesses are again today at the cutting edge of the defense of religious liberty against the most subtle and dangerous forms of assault.

Three Forms of Sacralization and Their Conflicts

The struggle of the Jehovah's Witnesses for their individual and corporate religious freedom throughout the world is one of the most relevant issues in the global scenario of religious liberty and persecution. It is also a mirror reflecting crucial questions in the contemporary sociology of religion.

Perhaps the issue most frequently discussed by sociologists of religion is secularization. In his 2017 book, Die Macht des Heiligen, German sociologist

The Journal of CESNUR, Volume 5, Issue 1, January—February 2021, pages 54—81.

Hans Joas offered an original answer to the decade-old question whether secularization is a theory invented by some anti-religious scholars, or a real phenomenon. Joas believes that the situation of some Western European countries shows that a society without organized religion, or where organized religion only interests a small minority, is at least theoretically possible, if not already present. Building on the early sociology of religion of Émile Durkheim (1858–1917), but going beyond it, Joas argues that there may be societies without (organized) religion, but not societies without sacralization. Religion is not the only possible form of sacralization. History also knows a "sacralization of the nation" (or the state, or the country), and a "sacralization of the person" (Joas 2017, 475–79).

An alternative to Joas' terminology would be to see three "religions" at work in history: the "religion of God" (where "God" can be personal or impersonal, and there can be one God or many), the "religion of the nation" (or "of the state," although state and nation are obviously not the same), and the "religion of the person." Other relevant insights by Joas are that the sacralization of the nation, at least since the late 18th century, is present everywhere, in democratic as well as in totalitarian states, although in different forms, that modern sacralization of the person centers on human rights (Joas 2011), and that some conflict between the three forms of sacralization is unavoidable.

I would argue that here precisely lie the core problems of religious liberty in the 20th and 21st centuries. The forms of sacralization are different, but the human individual is one, and inhabits different spheres at the same time. One may be a member of a particular "religion of God," yet being subject to the "religion of the nation" as a citizen, and partaking of the "religion of the person" as a general cultural climate. This situation may be lived as not conflictual. One example is Alcide De Gasperi (1881–1954), who was Prime Minister of Italy between 1945 and 1953. He was such a pious Catholic that he is now being considered for beatification. At the same time, he certainly regarded himself as an Italian patriot, and was an enthusiastic apologist of the then newly proclaimed Universal Declaration of Human Rights (Romano 2008).

Conflict, however, is also frequent. Each of the three "religions" may exhibit a tendency to affirm itself against the others. This is also true for the "religion of the person" and human rights, which may at first sight look as the more benign and less dangerous form of sacralization. One problem, here, is that the concept of human rights is not uncontested, and there is a continuous tendency to add or claim new rights. Feminists and the LGBT community, or more recently the Black Lives Matter movement, for example, claim, and in their own way "sacralize," "new" rights that may create conflicts with the "religion of God." Feminists claim for women the right to access all positions and offices, while several religions reserve their priesthood and higher offices to males. LGBT activists may see religions teaching that homosexuality is a sin as infringing their rights to be respected and not discriminated. During the Black Lives Matter protests, statues of saints and other religious figures that the movement accused of having supported colonialism and racism were vandalized or destroyed, in incidents that some religionists have in turn perceived as an assault on their religious freedom.

Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, later Pope Benedict XVI, whose richness of analysis of religious liberty is unsurpassed among Catholic theologians, saw new, growing conflicts between (what I call here) "religion of God" and "religion of the person," due to the emergence of "new human rights," joining old conflicts between the "religion of God" and the "religion of the nation." Ratzinger was, of course, aware that religious liberty is in itself part of human rights, but distinguished between individual and corporate freedom of religion. In modern democratic societies, Ratzinger noted, it is generally accepted that individuals have a freedom to believe or not to believe, but it is less accepted that corporate religious bodies have rights of their own (see Introvigne 2012).

Ratzinger, however, did not fully elaborate on the question of the limits of corporate freedom of religion. The latter is limited by other essential human rights. A religion cannot claim that organizing human sacrifices is part of its corporate freedom. But what other human rights should be considered essential? Ratzinger saw something important, that corporate religious liberty is at risk today because of the sacralization and expansion of the "religion of the person," centered on both old and new human rights. But almost all his examples of corporate religious liberty worth being defended concerned the Catholic Church.

There is, however, a political and legal Vatican document endorsed by Pope Benedict XVI that was highly significant in this respect. On January 23, 2013, shortly before he announced his resignation, the Pope authorized the Permanent Representation of the Holy See to the Council of Europe to publish a note on two cases then being examined by the European Court of Human Rights, Sindicatul "Păstorul cel Bun" v. Romania and Fernández-Martínez v. Spain (Permanent Representation of the Holy See to the Council of Europe 2013). Both cases would be eventually decided by the Grand Chamber according to the Holy See's recommendations. Fernández-Martínez affirmed the right of the Catholic Church, who under the Concordat with Spain designates the teachers of religion and ethics in Spanish public schools, who are then appointed and remunerated by the government, to ask the Ministry of Education to dismiss an ex-priests whose teachings were no longer in accordance with the Church's (European Court of Human Rights 2014).

While Fernández-Martínez concerned the Catholic Church, Sindicatul affirmed the right of the Romanian Orthodox Church to prevent his priests from forming an unauthorized trade union, both by disciplining them and by persuading the government to de-register the union (European Court of Human Rights 2013). Although Sindicatul was about a non-Catholic organization, the Vatican document supporting the Romanian Orthodox Church was still written with a primary reference to the Catholic Church itself:

> A member of the lay faithful or a religious cannot, with regard to the Church, invoke freedom to contest the faith (for example, by adopting public positions against the Magisterium) or to damage the Church (for example, by creating a civil trade union of priests against the will of the Church). It is true that every person is free to contest the Magisterium or the prescriptions and norms of the Church. In case of disagreement, everyone may exercise the recourses provided by canon law and even break off his relations with the Church. Since relations within the Church are, however, essentially spiritual in nature, it is not the State's role to enter into this area to settle disputes (Permanent Representation of the Holy See to the Council of Europe 2013, no. 3).

It was also the case that the ecclesiastical structure of the Romanian Orthodox Church is not too dissimilar from the Catholic one. We may wonder whether the Holy See would have taken the same position, had the corporate religious freedom rights of groups labelled as "cults" and annoying the Catholics with their proselytization practices been at stake. The Vatican Note, however, affirmed a general principle that "it is not the State's role to enter into the area" of internal church discipline, and that the freedom of the single devotee is guaranteed by his or her right to leave the church in case of disagreement, not by pretending that the church adapts to beliefs and practices it regards as unorthodox.

Canaries in the Coal Mine: Jehovah's Witnesses and Individual Religious Liberty

The Jehovah's Witnesses powerfully contributed to the advancement of religious liberty in the world's courts. Like the proverbial canaries in the coal mine, they opened the way, at times through great efforts and suffering, and obtained decisions that went to the benefit of many other religious groups.

This is not coincidental, and is in fact deeply rooted in the Jehovah's Witnesses' theology. They regard any form of sacralization of the nation as contrary to the rights of God. They do not vote, do not join political parties, refuse to serve in the Army, and do not salute flags, precisely because they interpret all these acts as implicitly denying their exclusive allegiance to the Kingdom of God.

In the United States, the Jehovah's Witnesses have been defined as "a catalyst for the evolution of the Constitutional law" (McAninch 1987), as they obtained key Supreme Court and other decisions upholding their rights to conscientious objections, not to vote, not to salute the flag, recite the pledge of allegiance, nor sing the national anthem (Manwaring 1962).

In all or most of these cases, however, the Jehovah's Witnesses were insisting on the rights of individual believers to refuse what Joas calls the "sacralization of the nation." Their legal struggles, as Shawn Francis Peters argued in 2000, were parts of the "rights revolution," affirming the person's rights against the pretenses of the state (Peters 2000).

The Jehovah's Witnesses' right to follow the "religion of God" and reject the "religion of the nation" has been affirmed in the United States and other democratic countries, but does not prevail everywhere. In South Korea, the Witnesses are still struggling to see their right to conscientious objection recognized, notwithstanding a favorable Constitutional Court decision in 2018 (Kwang 2018), and an equally favorable opinion of the United Nations Working Group on Arbitrary Detention in the same year (Human Rights Council, Working Group on Arbitrary Detention 2018). The situation in Russia is well-known. In China, although the Jehovah's Witnesses are not officially included in the list of xie jiao (groups banned as "heterodox teachings," an expression often incorrectly translated as "evil cults"), on June 30, 2020, the Korla City People's Court, in Xinjiang, sentenced 18 of them to heavy jail penalties, applying Article 300 of the Chinese Criminal Code, which refers to xie jiao (Korla City People's Court 2020; Chang 2020).

The Chinese case deserves a short comment. Recent research has evidenced that the sacralization of the state is a constitutive part of modern China, and continues in the present-day Communist regime (Walsh 2020). Wu Junqing has explored the concept of xie jiao through Chinese history, arguing that those who were banned as xie jiao were movements perceived as offering a competing sacralization with respect to the state, through "black magic" (opposed to the state's "white magic") and messianism (opposed to the state's own messianic role). The contemporary Chinese Communist Party has inherited this concept, and "black magic" has been secularized into accusations of "brainwashing" and mind control (Wu 2016, 2017). Whether or not the Jehovah's Witnesses are officially listed as xie jiao, they are perceived as living outside the sphere of the sacralized Chinese state, which is enough to go to jail in contemporary China.

When they struggle to protect their individual religious freedom against the states, the Jehovah's Witnesses may find allies in those who do not believe in the "religion of God," yet believe in the "religion of the person" and of human rights. After all, except some extreme anti-cultists, few would not defend the Jehovah's Witnesses when they are detained and tortured in China (Chang 2020), or Russia, for no other reason than peacefully practicing their faith (Rainsford 2019; The Moscow Times 2020). Indeed, those who promote the sacralization of the person are glad to cooperate with all those who can help them in "desacralizing the state" (Joas 2017, 478). However, religionists and libertarians make strange bedfellows, and their cooperation may turn into conflict when corporate, rather than individual, religious liberty is at stake.

A Different Freedom: Corporate Religious Liberty, Disfellowshipping Practices, and "Ostracism"

As the Vatican note of 2013 clarified, new problems arise when some ask the states to intervene and protect human rights "within the church[es.]" Clearly, those who join a religion do not intend to abdicate their basic human rights. They do not authorize their religious leaders to rape or kill them and, should they give such an authorization, it would be null and void under the secular laws of the state. The question, however, is whether when joining a religion, devotees can, and perhaps should, abdicate some human rights.

The question easily gets emotional when dealing with religions, and scholars who answer in the affirmative are easily accused of defending abusive religious leaders. To make it less emotional, we can start by observing that joining any social formation involves surrendering human rights that would otherwise exist. By marrying, in a monogamic society, one surrenders the basic human right to marry—i.e., to marry again, without passing through a divorce, and even in most polygamic societies the number of wives allowed is limited. By joining a political party, one surrenders his right to campaign for a rival party (indeed, expulsions from political parties for this and lesser reasons are common, and not generally regarded as objectionable). By doing consulting work for a law firm, one often signs an agreement where the right to work or consult with some rival law firms is surrendered. And so on.

The European Court of Human Rights in its Sindicatul decision observed that > Article 9 of the [European Human Rights] Convention [which protects freedom of religion and belief] must be interpreted in the light of Article 11, which safeguards associations against unjustified State interference. Seen from this perspective, the right of believers to freedom of religion encompasses the expectation that the community will be allowed to function peacefully, free from arbitrary State intervention. The autonomous existence of religious communities is indispensable for pluralism in a democratic society and is an issue at the very heart of the protection which Article 9 affords. It directly concerns not only the organization of these communities as such but also the effective enjoyment of the right to freedom of religion by all their active members. Were the organizational life of the community not protected by Article 9, all other aspects of the individual's freedom of religion would become vulnerable (European Court of Human Rights 2013).

We find here the key statement that, in order to be real, religious freedom should include corporate religious liberty, i.e. the right of a religious community to organize itself as it deems fit, which is also a pre-condition for the "effective enjoyment" of individual religious liberty by its members.

The problem, which is both cultural and legal, is that those embracing some more radical versions of the "religion of the person" view with suspicion the fact that certain individuals may decide to surrender some of their human rights to acquire membership in a corporate body, religious or otherwise. They may even claim that the state should protect them against themselves, or that, if they accept to surrender their human rights to a religion, they are victims of brainwashing or mind control, a notion debunked by mainline scholarship (Richardson 1996, 2014, 2015; USCIRF 2020) but still popular with some media and the anti-cultists.

The Jehovah's Witnesses discovered that they were entering a second phase of their struggle for religious freedom, one where they should defend their corporate religious liberty and could not count on the support of non-religious libertarians defending individual human rights, when they started being sued by disfellowshipped ex-members. These ex-members claimed that their human rights had been violated by the Jehovah's Witnesses, as a corporate body, in two different ways. First, they claimed they had been disfellowshipped unfairly or unjustly. Second, after being disfellowshipped, they had been subject to "ostracism," i.e. other Jehovah's Witnesses, including their closest friends, had started shunning them. They did not sue their former friends, but the Jehovah's Witnesses' corporate organizations for teaching the practice.

It is important to note that an exception to shunning is, however, made for members of the immediate family, as illustrated in numerous texts published by the Jehovah's Witnesses.

> What of a man who is disfellowshipped but whose wife and children are still Jehovah's Witnesses? The religious ties he had with his family change, but blood ties remain (Christian Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses 2020).
>
> Since [...] being disfellowshipped does not sever the family ties, normal day-to-day family activities and dealings may continue. Yet, by his course, the individual has chosen to break the spiritual bond between him and his believing family. So loyal family members can no longer have spiritual fellowship with him. For example, if the disfellowshipped one is present, he would not participate when the family gets together for family worship (Christian Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses 2008, 208).
>
> If in a Christian's household there is a disfellowshipped relative, that one would still be part of the normal, day-to-day household dealings and activities ("Imitate God's Mercy Today" 1991, 22).

This is not a new development. In 1974, The Watchtower explained that,

> Since blood and marital relationships are not dissolved by a congregational disfellowshiping [sic] action, the situation within the family circle requires special consideration. A woman whose husband is disfellowshiped [sic] is not released from the Scriptural requirement to respect his husbandly headship over her; only death or Scriptural divorce from a husband results in such release. (Rom. 7:1–3; Mark > 10:11, 12) A husband likewise is not released from loving his wife as "one flesh" with him even though she should be disfellowshiped [sic] (Matt. 19:5, 6; Eph. 5:28–31) ("Maintaining a Balanced Viewpoint Toward Disfellowshiped [sic] Ones" 1974, 470).

In 1981, The Watchtower reiterated that, "if a relative, such as a parent, son or daughter, is disfellowshiped [sic] or has disassociated himself, blood and family ties remain," while "spiritual fellowship" ceases ("If A Relative Is Disfellowshiped [sic]" 1981, 28).

In 1988, the magazine stated again that,

> A man who is disfellowshipped or who disassociates himself may still live at home with his Christian wife and faithful children. Respect for God's judgments and the congregation's action will move the wife and children to recognize that by his course, he altered the spiritual bond that existed between them. Yet, since his being disfellowshipped does not end their blood ties or marriage relationship, normal family affections and dealings can continue ("Discipline That Can Yield Peaceable Fruit" 1988, 28).

The first substantial discussion of the practice of "shunning" disfellowshipped members of the Jehovah's Witnesses is included in the 1987 decision of the United States Court of Appeal for the Ninth Circuit Paul v. Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., which is quoted in all subsequent American cases. The court acknowledged that the plaintiff has experienced some unpleasant incidents in being "shunned" by those who were once close friends who were Jehovah's Witnesses after she was disfellowshipped. Nonetheless, the court maintained that, > Shunning is a practice engaged in by Jehovah's Witnesses pursuant to their interpretation of canonical text, and we are not free to reinterpret that text. Under both the United States and Washington Constitutions, the defendants are entitled to the free exercise of their religious beliefs.

The Jehovah's Witnesses, the court reported, > argue that their right to exercise their religion freely entitles them to engage in the practice of shunning. The Church further claims that assessing damages against them for engaging in that practice would directly burden that right. We agree that the imposition of tort damages on the Jehovah's Witnesses for engaging in the religious practice of shunning would constitute a direct burden on religion.

The court observed that punishing shunning would have dramatic consequences for the religious freedom of the Jehovah's Witnesses.

> Imposing tort liability for shunning on the Church or its members would in the long run have the same effect as prohibiting the practice, and would compel the Church to > abandon part of its religious teachings. [...] The Church and its members would risk substantial damages every time a former Church member was shunned. In sum, a state tort law prohibition against shunning would directly restrict the free exercise of the Jehovah's Witnesses' religious faith (United States Court of Appeal, Ninth Circuit, 1987).

The plaintiff argued that shunning had caused to her emotional distress. This may well be true, the court answered, but the harm was > clearly not of the type that would justify the imposition of tort liability for religious conduct. No physical assault or battery occurred. Intangible or emotional harms cannot ordinarily serve as a basis for maintaining a tort cause of action against a church for its practices—or against its members. [...] Offense to someone's sensibilities resulting from religious conduct is simply not actionable in tort. [...] Without society's tolerance of offenses to sensibility, the protection of religious differences mandated by the first amendment would be meaningless (United States Court of Appeal, Ninth Circuit, 1987).

In this old decision, we find already a convincing criticism of the anti-cult claims based on "emotional harm." While "physical assault or battery" are clearly not justified by an appeal to freedom of religion, if courts were allowed to sanction religious groups for inflicting "emotional harm," that would be the end of religious liberty as we know it. And perhaps of other liberties, too. One can imagine a student suing a professor for the "emotional harm" suffered after failing an exam. The court correctly concluded that,

> The members of the Church [Ms.] Paul decided to abandon have concluded that they no longer want to associate with her. We hold that they are free to make that choice. The Jehovah's Witnesses' practice of shunning is protected under the first amendment of the United States Constitution (United States Court of Appeal, Ninth Circuit, 1987).

In 2007, the Court of Appeals of Tennessee observed that,

> The Church [the congregation of the Jehovah's Witnesses] argues that the freedom of religious bodies to determine their own membership is such a fundamentally ecclesiastical matter that courts are prohibited from adjudicating disputes over membership or expulsion. We agree. Because religious bodies are free to establish their own guidelines for membership and a governance system to resolve disputes about membership without interference from civil authorities, decisions to exclude persons from membership are not reviewable by civil courts.

Concerning the "shunning" of disfellowshipped ex-members, the court stated that,

> The doctrines of the Jehovah's Witnesses and their reading of scripture require that their members ostracize individuals who have been disfellowshipped. While there is no question that this practice has resulted in a painful experience for the Andersons [the plaintiffs in the case], the law does not provide a remedy for such harm. For example, in other contexts, family members sometimes become estranged from each other for various reasons on their own volition, and the law does not recognize a basis for suit for the pain caused by such estrangement. Courts are not empowered to force any individual to associate with anyone else [...]
>
> Shunning is religiously based conduct, a religious practice based on interpretation of scripture, and is subject to the protection of the First Amendment. [...]
>
> Shunning is a part of the Jehovah's Witnesses belief system. Individuals who choose to join the Church voluntarily accept the governance of the Church and subject themselves to being shunned if they are disfellowshipped. The practice is so integrally tied to the decision to expel a member that it is beyond judicial review for the same reasons as the membership decision. Conduct that is inextricably tied to the disciplinary process of a religious organization is subject to the First Amendment's protection just as the disciplinary decision itself (Court of Appeal of Tennessee 2007).

Also, in 2007, the Justice Court of Bari, in Italy, in a well-publicized case, rejected the claims of a disfellowshipped ex-Jehovah's-Witness who happened to be a lawyer. The court concluded that, even if the principles governing the ecclesiastical system of the Jehovah's Witnesses are different from those of the Italian law, once they have been correctly followed in disfellowshipping a certain individual, secular courts cannot interfere with the decision (Tribunale di Bari 2007; see also Tribunale di Bari 2004).

In 2010 the Administrative Court of Berlin examined a complaint by a disfellowshipped Jehovah's Witness against the public announcement in congregational meetings of the measure against him, since "members of the association should have no social contact with disfellowshipped persons," and it would become impossible for him to "to have a picnic, celebrate, do sports, go shopping, go to the theatre, have a meal at home or in a restaurant" with those who used to be his friends and remained in the Jehovah's Witnesses. The court denied the request, commenting that the Jehovah's Witnesses' policy on these matters "is not subject to state authority" and is protected by "freedom of religion, the separation of Church and state, and the right of religious associations to self-determination." How the Jehovah's Witnesses decide to "exercise their constitutionally guaranteed right to self-determination" is something the state should not interfere with. Disfellowshipping policies and the so called "ostracism" are "internal church measures" (Verwaltungsbericht Berlin 2010).

The Italian Supreme Court (Cassazione) in 2017 ruled that the so called "ostracism" is also protected by the principle of non-interference. The decision observed that in this case "ostracism" is "a refusal to associate" with the disfellowshipped ex-member, and "no law requires a person to behave in the opposite manner." As a conclusion, "no discrimination took place." Even if one would argue that refusing to associate with disfellowshipped members violate "good manners and civilized behavior," this would not "constitute a justiciable crime or civil tort." Individuals, and even a whole "category," have a right to decide to "break off or interrupt personal relations," and courts have no business in telling them otherwise (Corte di Cassazione 2017).

In 2018, in Judicial Committee of the Highwood Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses and Highwood Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses v. Randy Wall, a unanimous Supreme Court of Canada reiterated that "secular judicial determinations of theological or religious disputes, or of contentious matters of religious doctrine, unjustifiably entangle the court in the affairs of religion." It added that, "even the procedural rules of a particular religious group may involve the interpretation of religious doctrine," and concluded that, "these types of [religious] procedural rules are also not justiciable" (Supreme Court of Canada 2018 [SCC 26]).

More recently, on March 17, 2020, in Otuo v. Morley and Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Britain, the Court of Appeal in London, Queen's Bench Division (Court of Appeal [London], Queen's Bench Division 2020), upheld a High Court decision of 2019, which found that,

> In accordance with Matthew 18:15–17 (the procedural compliance with which is not itself justiciable) it is to be expected that a [Christian] religious body which is guided by and which seeks to apply scriptural principles will have the power to procure that in an appropriate case a sinner can be expelled. Among other things, this is sensible, if not essential, because someone who is unable or unwilling to abide by scriptural principles not only does not properly belong as a member of such body but also, unless removed, may have an undesirable influence on the faithful.

Protecting the faithful from such an "undesirable influence" is thus not a violation of the disfellowshipped member's human rights, but a right of the congregation (High Court of Justice, Queen's Bench Division 2019). The community's right to articulate and enforce its code of conduct is also part of its corporate religious liberty.

This body of decisions is now substantial. Critics quote the 2019 Spiess decision by the District Court of Zurich (Bezirksgericht Zürich 2019), but the Jehovah's Witnesses were not the defendants in the case. They had filed a criminal complaint against an anti-cult activist who had claimed in an interview that their "ostracism" practices and how they handle cases of sexual abuses are dangerous practices contrary to human rights. The judge found the activist not guilty, regarding some statements as true and others as uttered in good faith. As I and Alessandro Amicarelli have explained elsewhere (Introvigne and Amicarelli 2020), the Jehovah's Witnesses were not on trial in Zurich, were not interrogated, and did not have a chance to defend themselves. We regard the verdict as wrong, but it only establishes that Mr. Spiess did not commit the criminal offense of defamation.

In fact, everything that needed to be said was already said in 1987 in the Paul decision. It is true that those who join the Jehovah's Witnesses surrender some of their human rights. The adherents are well aware, and the elders make sure this is the case before baptism, of both the Jehovah's Witnesses' moral standards and the consequences for violating them. They are aware that they may be disfellowshipped and shunned, which may be very unpleasant. If they want to avoid this risk, they should simply not join the Jehovah's Witnesses, or leave them voluntarily. The human rights involved in being disfellowshipped and shunned are not imaginary—but, unlike, say, the right to life or to sexual integrity, they are alienable rights, in the sense that they can be surrendered in a legally valid matter, and irrespective of the discussion whether there is a general distinction between unalienable and "ad hoc" human rights, to which I will return in the last paragraph. Disposing of them may offend certain sensibilities, but "without society's tolerance of offenses to sensibility, the protection of religious differences [...] would be meaningless" (United States Court of Appeal, Ninth Circuit, 1987).

In this respect, the Jehovah's Witnesses acted as the canaries in the coal mine again. They came back with the good news that, even at a time when the sacralization of the person advances at full speed, and new rights are created and sacralized, in a democratic society the "religion of God" may lawfully maintain enclaves where it is protected. This protection, as we have argued when commenting the Spiess decision (Introvigne and Amicarelli 2020), benefits many other religions. Several religions have, or had until recent times, practices similar to the Jehovah's Witnesses' disfellowshipping process and "ostracism." Thanks to the Jehovah's Witnesses, they now know that these practices are part of their protected corporate religious liberty.

Sexual Abuse and Corporate Religious Liberty

The second assault on the corporate religious liberty of the Jehovah's Witnesses has been conducted in the area of sexual abuse. There is a growing and justified societal concern for sexual abuse in general, and religions are often criticized for protecting their abusive ministers from prosecution by secular courts (Shupe 1995, 1998, 2000, 2007). Anson D. Shupe's (1948–2015) theory of "clergy malfeasance" argued that the risk is maximum when a clergy presides on closed communities of vulnerable male and female children or teenagers. This would predict a lower incidence of sexual abuse, with respect to other religions, among the Jehovah's Witnesses, which do not operate "institutions" such as Sunday Schools, catechisms, kindergartens, schools, boarding schools, or similar.

Nonetheless, official reports and studies commissioned by public authorities, including one by a Royal Australian Commission in 2017 (Royal Commission into Institutional Responses to Child Sexual Abuse 2017) and a study by researchers from the University of Utrecht (van den Bos et al. 2019), on which the Dutch Minister for Legal Protection, Sander Dekker, based some controversial statements in August 2020 (Pieters 2020), have included the Jehovah's Witnesses among the groups where problems of unreported or under-reported sexual abuse exist.

I am a co-author of an Expert Report criticizing the Utrecht study (Folk, Introvigne, and Melton 2020), and we have discussed there some substantive issues on how sexual abuse is dealt with among the Jehovah's Witnesses. Here, I will focus on the connection between criticism of how the Jehovah's Witnesses handle cases of sexual abuse and corporate religious liberty.

This is a classical case where the same individuals are part of two different communities, regulated by two different systems of laws and regulations, which are both in their own way sacralized. A Jehovah's Witness is subject to the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of its congregation and is, at the same time, subject to the secular jurisdiction of state courts and law enforcement agencies. The two jurisdictions may operate in parallel without conflicts, but in other cases conflicts and delicate problems of religious liberty may arise.

A Jehovah's Witness is suspected of sexual abuse. Very rarely, for the reasons mentioned above, this would be a case of "institutional" abuse. In most cases, the abuse would occur in the family. The elders of the congregation are informed, or hear rumors about the abuse. When this happens, two different chains of events are set in motion. The first relates to the duty to inform the secular authorities. This is regulated by national laws, which were somewhat vague decades ago but are becoming much stricter and more precise as social concern about abuse grows. The second chain of event will lead to an evaluation of whether and how the alleged offender should be prosecuted by the internal ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the Jehovah's Witnesses, and eventually, if found guilty, disfellowshipped. It is of crucial importance that these two spheres are carefully distinguished.

As we have discussed in our criticism of the Dutch report, it is factually false that the Jehovah's Witnesses do not inform secular authorities of believable reports of sexual abuse their elders have received, or worse, disfellowship victims of sexual abuse, or those who report incidents of sexual abuse to secular authorities. The current edition of the official handbook for congregation elders, "Shepherd the Flock of God"—1 Peter 5:2, confirms that a person who reports an allegation of abuse (or any other crime) to the secular authorities will not be disfellowshipped or in any other way sanctioned by the Jehovah's Witnesses:

> One who reports an accusation to the police, the court, the elders, or others who have authority to look into matters and render a judgment would not be viewed by the congregation as guilty of committing slander [...] This is true even if the accusation is not proved (Christian Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses 2019, 12:28).

The 2010 edition had a parallel provision:

> It is not considered slander to make an accusation to the police, the court, [...] or others who have authority to look into matters and render a judgment [...] This is true even if the accusation is not proved (Christian Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses 2010, 5:27).

The current handbook adds that,

> Jehovah's Witnesses abhor child sexual abuse (Rom. 12:9). Thus, the congregation will not shield any perpetrator of such repugnant acts from the consequences of his [sic] sin. The congregation's handling of an accusation of child sexual abuse is not intended to replace the secular authority's handling of the matter (Rom. 13:1–4). Therefore, the victim, her parents, or anyone else who reports such an allegation to the elders should be clearly informed that they have the right to report the matter to the secular authorities. Elders do not criticize anyone who chooses to make such a report (Christian Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses 2019, 14:4).

The official child safeguarding policy of Jehovah's Witnesses, published in dozens of languages on their official website, states at paragraph 4,

> In all cases, victims and their parents have the right to report an accusation of child abuse to the authorities. Therefore, victims, their parents, or anyone else who reports such an accusation to the elders are clearly informed by the elders that they have the right to report the matter to the authorities. Elders do not criticize anyone who chooses to make such a report—Galatians 6:5 (Christian Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses 2018, no. 4).

As early as 1993, the Awake! magazine recommended that, in case of rape, one should "call the police as soon as you are able to," noting also that, "reporting is not the same as prosecuting, but if you choose to prosecute later, your case will be weakened by a delayed report" ("How to Cope with Rape" 1993).

In 1997, the same Awake! magazine suggested to Jehovah's Witnesses that, "children should also be warned about—and urged to report to authorities—any person making improper advances toward them, including people they know" ("Sexual Exploitation of Children—A Worldwide Problem" 1997).

Also, in 1997, The Watchtower asked, ""What if a baptized adult Christian sexually molests a child?" The answer was that "the molester may well have to serve a prison term or face other sanctions from the State. The congregation will not protect him from this" ("Let Us Abhor What Is Wicked" 1997).

The book How to Remain in God's Love, published in 2017, includes a discussion of I Corinthians 6:1–8, where Apostle Paul cautions against taking a fellow Christian to court. While in general, "taking our brother to court could reflect badly on Jehovah and on the congregation" (Christian Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses 2017, 253), there are exceptions.

> If a serious crime is involved, such as rape, child abuse, assault, major theft, or murder, then a Christian who reports such a crime to the secular authorities does not violate Paul's counsel (Christian Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses 2017, 254).

Also, in the May 2019 issue of The Watchtower, we read that,

> Elders assure victims and their parents and others with knowledge of the matter that they are free to report an allegation of abuse to the secular authorities. But what if the report is about someone who is a part of the congregation and the matter then becomes known in the community? Should the Christian who reported it feel that he has brought reproach on God's name? No. The abuser is the one who brings reproach on God's name ("Love and Justice in the Face of Wickedness" 2019, 10–1).

After our criticism of the Dutch report, the anti-Jehovah's-Witnesses organization Reclaimed Voices objected to us that practice does not always follow theory, and that it is possible that some local congregation of the Jehovah's Witnesses does not follow the indications of the official publications (Hintjes 2020). This is certainly possible in all organizations. However, the fact that in some cases the policy was not followed does not call into question its soundness. We cannot blame the policy, and should recognize that no human organization is composed exclusively of perfect humans, and that even the best of policies does not guarantee against the reality of human error.

There have been some cases (but much less than those concerning other religions, including the Catholic Church) in which secular courts have concluded that the Jehovah's Witnesses were not quick or effective enough in reporting sexual abuse cases to secular authorities. However, these cases should be read and assessed in context. A typical British example, and one quoted by anti-cultists against the Jehovah's Witnesses, is A. v. The Trustees of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, The Trustees of the Loughborough Blackbrook Congregation and Jehovah's Witnesses, and The Trustees of the Loughborough Southwood Congregation of the Jehovah's Witnesses (High Court of Justice, Queen's Bench Division 2015). Although it is true that the court found that a local congregation had some responsibility in not protecting children from a member who was a sexual abuser, it is important to note that the case, judged in 2015, refers to events of the 1980s and early 1990s. The judge mentioned that it was a matter of agreement between the parties that

> (1) The level of understanding of child sex abuse in 2015 is very different to the level of understanding in the late 1980s and early 1990s. (2) In the late 1980s and early 1990s there was an emerging awareness of child sexual abuse, which was a long way short of a developed understanding of the complexity of the issue. (3) The Jehovah's Witness organisation could be viewed as ahead of its time in terms of its educative publications addressing the issues of child sexual abuse.

Concerning the elders of the Loughborough congregations, the judge stated that,

> I found them all to be honest, upright, loyal, and devout men for whom being a Jehovah's Witness is and has been for many years a way of life for them and their families […] All are horrified by the sexual abuse that occurred.

Ostensibly, the judge was quite reluctant to find against these "honest and devout" Jehovah's Witnesses, although in the end he believed he had to sanction them based on how he reconstructed both the facts and the British law in force in the 1980s and 1990s.

There is a consensus that while, as it happened for other religious groups, their attitudes evolved as society became more concerned about sexual abuse, particularly of minors, in general Jehovah's Witnesses complied with the laws asking them to report instances or credible allegations of abuse to secular authorities, when and where these laws existed. Their awareness of these issues compares favorably, and may even be regarded as having been at one stage "ahead of time," with respect to other religious organizations. There were some cases where congregations were found in breach of legal obligations of reporting, but these cases are rare. They do not warrant the conclusion that there was a general policy to evade these obligations, nor that the Jehovah's Witnesses were less cooperative with secular authorities than most other religious communities.

Jehovah's Witnesses, however, are vehemently criticized on a different issue, whether their internal ecclesiastical jurisdiction dealt fairly and effectively with members accused of sexual abuse or child molestation. In particular, the fact that they adhere to the Biblical "two-witnesses rule," requiring the testimony of two witnesses before a member can be sanctioned, has been criticized, as well as the weight they attribute to repentance.

Again, the problem here does not concern the Jehovah's Witnesses only, and it is not new. Human justice and what religionists regard as divine justice may follow different paths. Christian theology has often discussed the issue of the "latro poenitens," whose story is told in Luke 23:40–3. When Jesus was crucified, one of the criminals who shared the same fate asked him, "Jesus, remember me when you come into your kingdom." The criminal, addressing the fellow bandit who was cursing Jesus, told him, "We are punished justly, for we are getting what our deeds deserve. But this man has done nothing wrong." Jesus answered him, "Truly I tell you today you will be with me in paradise."

As the author of the Gospel of Luke tells it, the story is not about criticism of the secular justice or the death penalty. The bandits are "punished justly." It is about a different justice, where the good thief manages to steal the Kingdom of God, and becomes a member in good standing of the Church Triumphant. He is even venerated as a saint, Saint Dismas, by the Roman Catholic Church.

Jehovah's Witnesses' internal justice is accused of being too severe in general in its disfellowshipping process, yet it is at the same time accused of being too bland in cases of sexual abuse, perhaps because it is administered by men only and not by women. Both the Australian (Royal Commission into Institutional Responses to Child Sexual Responses 2017, I, 53) and the Dutch (van den Bos et al. 2019, 120) reports "recommended" that women be included in the Jehovah's Witnesses' judicial committees, and that their rules be amended.

The Australian government rightly concluded that these are matters for internal consideration by the Jehovah's Witnesses. Indeed, it is part of corporate religious liberty that religious organizations may organize their canonical courts or judicial committees as they deem it appropriate. Their judgements may look wrong in secular eyes, but they do not have effect outside of the religious sphere. It is a matter for the secular courts to decide whether a defendant accused of sexual abuse is guilty, and what punishment is appropriate. It is a matter for religious courts and committees to decide whether the same defendant should be disciplined, expelled, or not expelled. Religious instances, as the case of the bandit crucified with Jesus shows, may have a different assessment of the value of repentance.

It is part of the contemporary sacralization of the state and the person that states, and media, presume to dictate to religious organizations how they should deal with their members guilty, or even simply accused, of serious crimes. Laws can (and perhaps should) compel religious bodies to immediately report to secular authorities allegations of secular abuse they have received, outside of the existing safeguards that explicitly protect the confidentiality of the Roman Catholic confession and similar practices. Once this has been done, states cannot interfere in the parallel, but independent, ecclesiastical investigation and sanctioning. The principle is the same with respect to the disfellowshipping process in general. How the Jehovah's Witnesses and other religious organizations conduct their internal affairs is not a matter states should interfere with.

Jehovah's Witnesses are not the only targets of this criticism. Some media, for instance, immediately request that Catholic priests accused of sexual abuse be dismissed from their clerical status. The Catholic Church has become more severe and rapid in enforcing its internal discipline in recent years, but ultimately whether a priest should be defrocked or not is an internal matter for the church to decide, not to mention that some of the priests for which the media reclaimed immediate canonical sanctions were later declared not guilty at trial.

In the case of the Catholic Church and other religious bodies, it has been argued that internal sanctions are needed to prevent pedophiles from continuing to be involved in church-operated kindergartens or boarding schools, where their crimes may be repeated. In fact, such orders can be imposed on the suspects, even before they are sentenced, by secular courts. At any rate, this does not apply to the Jehovah's Witnesses, who do not operate kindergartens or boarding schools. In addition, according to the Jehovah's Witnesses' policy, a pedophile or sexual abuser who is serving as an elder, when his acts of sexual abuse come to light, is immediately removed from his position.

The freedom for religious bodies to sanction, or not to sanction, their members may be an unpopular freedom, particularly in case of sexual abuse, which is perceived, and with good reasons, as the equivalent of sacrilege against the "religion of the person." However, it is an essential part of corporate religious liberty. Religions should be free to regulate their own internal affairs.

The Perils of Secretary Pompeo: Is There a Hierarchy Among Human Rights?

On July 8, 2019, Secretary of State Michael R. Pompeo announced the formation of a Commission on Unalienable Rights. On July 16, 2020, the Commission released its draft report to the general public (Commission on Unalienable Rights 2020). The name of the Commission indicates its aim, to help the Department of State, in a moment of confusion and controversy about human rights, to identify the "unalienable human rights," and to distinguish them from "ad hoc human rights," most of which are of recent creation, and are not included in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

The Commission has been seen by critics as a propaganda effort to rubber-stamp decisions already taken by the Trump Administration and the Republican Party, and to promote, in particular, the idea that religious freedom should prevail in case of conflict with "ad hoc human rights," including women's reproductive rights and LGBT rights to non-discrimination. Critics also observed that most members of the Commission, which included a Rabbi and a Muslim scholar, were conservative experts on freedom of religion, with pro-life Christians in the majority (Inglis 2020).

The draft report defended the right of the United States, when determining its foreign policy, to interpret the Universal Declaration of Human Rights in the light of the American Constitution. It noted that,

> Foremost among the unalienable rights that government is established to secure, from the founders' [of the U.S.] point of view, are property rights and religious liberty. A political society that destroys the possibility of either loses its legitimacy (Commission on Unalienable Rights 2020, 13).

It admits that in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, all rights "have an integrated character and are not meant to be severed from or pitted against one another," yet it claims "it is no departure from that affirmation to recognize that certain distinctions among rights are inherent in the Universal Declaration itself" (Commission on Unalienable Rights 2020, 37). "In practice, it concludes, decisions about the priority of rights are not only inescapable but desirable [...] in many circumstances certain rights have a necessary logical precedence" (Commission on Unalienable Rights 2020, 38). The report cautions against the post-UDHR proliferation of "new rights," and tries to establish a list of "unalienable" rights, while remaining aware that this is a controversial area and that no list can be fully satisfactory or complete. Mentioned as "unalienable" are > the right to life, liberty and security of person; protection against slavery and torture; guarantees of equality before the law and of due process; recognition of the right to private property; [...] freedom of thought, conscience, and religion; freedom of opinion and expression; freedom of association; freedom to take part in elections by universal and equal suffrage; freedom of movement and residence; the right to marry and found a family; and the right to privacy in one's family, home, and correspondence (Commission on Unalienable Rights 2020, 30).

Judging from the many negative reactions (see e.g. Human Rights First 2020), the Commission and its report, which was presented to a deeply divided country in an electoral year, did not offer an especially noticeable contribution towards creating a consensus on human rights. Yet, the Pompeo Commission may at least have called the attention on one real problem, whether there is a hierarchy of human rights, and which should prevail in case of conflict.

While it is unlikely that other countries would particularly care about the U.S. Constitution, as Joas himself noted in his dense book on human rights, it does make a difference whether a human right is mentioned or not in the Universal Declaration. Claiming that the Declaration reflects the values of 1948, which are different from those of the 21st century, or of a small group of nations that were active in drafting it, plays in the hands of the tyrants of this world, who insist that the UDHR is not applicable to the "special" situation of their countries (Joas 2013, 181–85). Perhaps a new consensus and a UDHR 2.0 will one day emerge, but for the time being the text of the 1948 remains a fundamental reference and standard for the international community, and all countries that have signed it.

In classrooms all over the world, students are told that the UDHR was a reaction to Nazi tyranny and the Holocaust; that it was mostly an American and Western European initiative; that it was drafted by former U.S. First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt (1884–1962) and French jurist René Cassin (1887–1976); and that it was mostly promoted throughout the world by the United States. These arguments are now used in Russia, China, and some Arab countries to argue that the UDHR is not really "universal" but an attempt to impose Western values to the rest of the world. However, in a seminal article published in 2002, American political scientist Susan Waltz argued that all four statements are factually false. The process leading to the UDHR started, and produced significant texts, at the beginning of the 20th century, well before Nazism and the Holocaust. More important than Eleanor Roosevelt or Cassin were, in drafting the Declaration, two delegates coming from Asia, Lebanese academic Charles Malik (1906–1987), an Orthodox Christian, and Chinese philosopher Chang Pen Chun (1892–1957), who identified himself as Confucian. Although not as crucial as Malik and Chang, Indian activist for women's rights Ms. Hansa Jivraj Mehta (1897–1995) and Chilean diplomat Hernán Santa Cruz (1906–1999) were also important. The Canadian secretary of the drafting commission, legal scholar John Peters Humphrey (1905–1995), was the editor, not the author, of the first draft, although his editorial role was in no way negligible. In the United States, many resisted propagating a document that might be used to submit their country to censorship by international authorities, while the text was enthusiastically embraced in Europe and by some "Third World" countries (Waltz 2002). The UDHR was less "Western" than it may seem, and reading it through the lenses of an opposition of the West versus the rest makes for ideological, inaccurate interpretation.

As for the distinguished conservative religious scholars that drafted the Pompeo Commission report, my personal impression is that they missed one main problem of the defense of religious liberty, discussed in this paper. They probably had in mind cases where Christian bakers were sanctioned when they refused to bake cakes, or florists when they refused to prepare floral arrangements, for same-sex marriages (for a discussion of some of these cases, see Introvigne 2017). Understandably, conservative Christians do feel strongly about these cases, yet they remain within the sphere of individual religious freedom. It is my argument here that, notwithstanding the advance and the increasing sacralization of "new rights," balanced solutions are easier to find here, at least in democratic countries.

At times, Evangelicals and conservative Catholics who focus on such cases cannot see the forest for the trees. I do not argue that fights about individual religious freedom are over. My point, however, is that in most democratic Western countries the most serious dangers for religious freedom come from those who deny corporate religious liberty, based on their interpretation of the modern sacralization of the person. By defending the rights of their judicial committees to remain free from state interference when they decide whether a member should be disfellowshipped or otherwise, and their right to interpret the Bible in the sense that it mandates shunning those who have been disfellowshipped, the Jehovah's Witnesses are, once again, defending the religious liberty of all, precisely in the area where today it is mostly under attack.

Religious Freedom in the Russian Federation and the Jehovah's Witnesses

ABSTRACT: Anti-extremism legislation has existed in Russia for over a decade, but only recently has it been used to discriminate against, persecute, and eventually "liquidate" the Jehovah's Witnesses. The article reconstructs the history of anti-minority legislation in Russia, from the Soviet Union to the liberal post-Soviet reforms of the 1990s and the retrenchment in the Putin era. Jehovah's Witnesses have been the victims of a notion of the Russian nation granting a de facto monopoly to the Russian Orthodox Church, and regarding religious minorities, particularly those headquartered in the West and proselytizing among Orthodox believers, as a threat to national integrity.

KEYWORDS: Jehovah's Witnesses, Religion in the Russian Federation, Religious Freedom in Russia, "Anti-Extremism" Laws in Russia, Jehovah's Witnesses in Russia.

Interventions Against Jehovah's Witnesses in the Russian Federation

The application of the "anti-extremism" legislation to minority religious groups, regarded as hostile to the cultural schemes and subversive of the political order, has led to a progressive institutional stiffening of persecution and heavy discrimination in the Russian Federation, especially towards Jehovah's Witnesses (Cigliano 2013).

Although many of these legislative tools have existed for over a decade, the Russian government only recently has begun to use them in campaigns designed to punish or exclude "non-traditional" religions and movements. In the specific case of the Jehovah's Witnesses, these measures have taken on the purpose of delegitimizing an entire community, only on the basis of its religious faith, with accusations that vary from illegal missionary activity to offending the religious sentiments of majority Orthodox believers. Overall, these interventions are part of a wider process of ideological control over society, aimed at stemming, if not stifling, the forces of political and religious dissent. It is a process that has characterized Russian history since its transformation into a Soviet dictatorship. and which offers a new perspective to analyze, even today, the issues of "identity" and "dissent" in this geographical area.

In the Stalinist period, cultural and religious life had been severely limited, to the advantage of the so-called "Russification" policies, which tended to suffocate ideologies that were not homologated with the political objectives of the new state (Zernov 1963; Vasil'eva 1998; Kalkandjieva 2015; Kolarz 1961; Baran 2007, 2014). The Soviet government had, in fact, pursued a strategy of balance between regulation and repression. In the phase of glasnost and perestroika, a different legal scheme prevailed, which was more open to pluralism, including religious. The recognition of the Witnesses in the 1990s seemed to have brought Russian law closer to Western models of the protection of human rights but, with the beginning of the 21st century, the process took a different turn.

The culminating moment of this legal process was represented by the decision of the Russian Supreme Court which, in 2017, qualified the Jehovah's Witnesses as an "extremist" organization and forced the liquidation of their assets. The religious community has thus been transformed into a "criminal network," and individual believers have been made vulnerable to arrest, simply for having shared their faith with others, i.e., for carrying out the normal activity of evangelization. This intervention was, however, the culmination of two decades of growing state hostility towards the Witnesses. In fact, at the end of the 1990s, they were sued by the government of the city of Moscow to deny their legitimacy, in a long trial that ultimately led to the ban of the organization. The latest episodes, in chronological order, involved in 2020 two Russian Jehovah's Witnesses who were deprived of their Russian citizenship, in consequence of verdicts contrary to religious freedom, as was also denounced by the United Nations Working Group on Arbitrary Detention.

The banning of Jehovah's Witnesses, the confiscation of all their properties in the country and the imprisonment of the devotees—for the first time since the collapse of the Soviet Union—has therefore highlighted a dangerous dictatorial and xenophobic tendency, to the detriment of the right to religious freedom, enshrined in the Russian Constitution. A correct analysis of the current Russian problems cannot, however, disregard two further considerations: the space of religious freedom in the state, and the particular position of the Jehovah's Witnesses within its social structure. Fundamental in this sense is the reference to the Russian law on freedom of conscience and religious associations of 1997, which, when read jointly with the rules subsequently adopted, appears as inspired by the desire to guarantee the "spiritual security" of Russia, according to a concept that frames the role of the Orthodox Church in safeguarding "national values." In the Presidential Decree 24 of 2000, the administration stated that guaranteeing the national security of the Russian Federation also includes the protection of the cultural, spiritual, and moral heritage of its historical traditions and norms of social life, and the preservation of the cultural wealth of all peoples of Russia. This "spiritual security," the Decree said, also requires countering the negative influence of foreign religious organizations and missionaries.

Within the logic of absolutism, the persistence of endogenous groups, which profess equality as a moral standard, and practice a conduct that does not correspond to the expectations of the regime, nor can be approved by it, constitutes a dangerous and implosive threat to the social order the state tends to build, based on the compactness of the people on the basis of the ideals defined by the leadership (Gentile 2001). In the particular Soviet situation, the establishment of a denominational and hierocratic system, even if not aimed at favoring a single religion, and of a correlated jurisdictional regime in which some religions try to assume privileged status (Russian Orthodox Church in primis), finds its own rationale in the need of the post-Communist state to find a superior and historically founded legitimacy of its sovereignty, and to guarantee political stability, to which is added the aspiration of the privileged religions to receive, in exchange for a support of the political system, a special ius protectionis.

Therefore, the case of the Jehovah's Witnesses has implications that transcend the problems of the individual religious group. In this case, the persecutions and condemnations of which they have been, and still are, victims, and their ban, take on the characteristics of a paradigmatic example of how the right to exercise religious freedom is violated in dictatorial systems. Often, the road immediately pursued to obtain legal convictions is, in fact, based on the reference to the alleged "political" and not religious character of the group, to remove it from the protection of religion otherwise guaranteed at the constitutional level. This has been the treatment of Bibelforscher (as the Jehovah's Witnesses were called) in Nazi Germany (Buber-Neumann 2008) and, for diametrically opposed reasons, in the Stalinist dictatorship and in the current phase of the Putin regime.

The accusations were (and are) essentially linked to the legal concept of "betrayal of the Fatherland," of conspiracy with foreign powers, of the will to weaken the armed forces and the effort for national unity. In short, Jehovah's Witnesses have always been considered as dangerous subversive elements, a "cult engaged in a conspiracy" (Garbe 2008). It is also necessary to consider that the multinational and multireligious reality of the Russian territory and society has constituted a fundamental component of this cultural, religious, and political universe, within which the Russian Orthodox Church has positioned itself as the center of gravity of a complex system. Furthermore, this exclusive bond, leading to an actual identification, highlights the fear of facing religious diversity, potentially able to act as a disintegrating factor of the social fabric. This translates into a position of defense of the national traditions, and an obstacle towards "foreign" religions, not only for the protection of religious monotheism but also as a guarantee of "national security."

The Historical Presence of Jehovah's Witnesses in Russia

The Jehovah's Witnesses movement is of comparatively recent establishment, is often derogatorily referred to as a "cult," and is linked to Protestantism, more correctly to Adventism, with whom it has many traits in common. It is part of the religious renewal paths of Christianity, especially of Protestant origin, typical of North American history of the late nineteenth century, which quickly spread to Europe as well. Jehovah's Witnesses have been present in Russia since 1891 but, like all religious denominations, they were banned after the 1917 Revolution and persecuted in the Soviet Union. The history of the movement in the country has therefore been marked since the 1950s by the aversion, both by governments and by society. The spread of their preaching was deemed a threat to political power. Their concepts of peace and equality, which had been considered by the Nazis as a "Bolshevik" threat, were, on the contrary, judged by the Stalinists as dangerous for the stability of Communist power.

Added to this, both in Germany and in the USSR, was the hostility of the dominant Churches (in one case, Catholics and Protestants, in the other, the Moscow Patriarchate) towards such preaching. "Religious extremism": this is how we could summarize the motivation that allowed the authorities, first Soviet and then Russian, to systematize the widespread hostility towards the group. The accusation of constituting a political organization, even "disguised," with revolutionary or in any case subversive intentions against the established state order, was linked to the other charge, perhaps even more serious, of connection to a foreign, enemy power and therefore of being part of an international conspiracy.

Again, the group's proclaimed pacifism, pushed to the extreme, was seen as indicative of an attempt at destabilization, within totalitarian states that used force and the army to hold power. The Jehovah's Witnesses' ideas were therefore in opposition to the interests of the dictatorships, and this led them to consider the religious aspect of their organization as secondary, almost a cover "of convenience," compared to the international ties with the headquarters of the movement.

The story of the "purple triangles," a visible symbol of the Jehovah's Witnesses in the concentration camps in Nazi Germany is now well known (Vercelli 2011; Canonici 1998; Graffard and Tristan 1994). In the decisions issued against the congregation, reference was always made to the anti-patriotic spirit, neutralism, and pacifism, perceived as a deliberate offense to the honor of the German people. In this way, they were perceived as a "foreign" element with respect to the constituting "national community of the people" and, therefore, as dangerous. However, their tragedy fits fully into the European corpus of the history of deportations.

Nevertheless, they were also victims (which is less known) of the Stalinist dictatorship, characterized by a systematization of violence, with thousands of arrests, incarcerations, and deportations, of those accused of not joining the "Soviet system." As in Adolf Hitler's (1889–1945) Germany, more than on religious motivations, the accusations against the Jehovah's Witnesses were centered on their lack of fidelity to the ideals of the state, denial of political leadership, categorical refusal to participate in patriotic ceremonies and to serve the state through the use of weapons, clandestine press activities, and refusal to enroll children in Communist youth organizations (see Solženicyn 1973). A slight improvement in the life of believers was recorded only after the 1960s, but until the implosion of the USSR there were still several cases of trials, within a framework of discrimination common to all religious communities.

Following the entry into force, in 1990, of the law on "freedom of conscience and religious organizations," the Ministry of Justice was able to register their statute, and so, on February 28, 1991, the religious organization of Jehovah's Witnesses was officially registered in Russia. However, starting in 1995, the Committee for the Salvation of Youth from Totalitarian Cults, a non-governmental organization aligned with the Russian Orthodox Church, began to denounce the leaders of the community, arguing, in particular, that they oppressed followers with exorbitant demands, putting their families in an economically precarious situation, and fomented the hatred of "traditional" religions. These requests, rejected five times, were finally accepted in 1998, but the conclusion was that, even if the community acted in violation of certain Russian and international laws, it had not committed any criminal offense. However, this resulted in a civil action against the congregation, with the request for its dissolution and the prohibition of its activities. In 2001, a new series of proceedings began, and three years later, in 2004, the Moscow District Court decided to grant the prosecutor's requests to dissolve the applicant community and to permanently ban its activity. After 2009, however, new and dangerous episodes of violence began to occur.

Invested of the case, the European Court of Human Rights (ECHR) intervened with a 2010 judgment (Lapi 2011). Accused of interference with consciences, violation of privacy, being a "cult," religious extremism, incitement to social isolation and behaviors that undermined the harmony of society, according to the Russian authorities, it was concluded that the Jehovah's Witnesses could represent a "threat to the defense of the rights and the interests of society and public safety." The ECHR pointed out, however, that the refusal to grant recognition under the 1997 law revealed an interference with the religious organization's right to freedom of association, and also its right to freedom of religion, as the "law on religions" limited the faculty of a religious association, without legal personality, to carry out a whole series of activities and to modify the articles of its Statute (Carobene 2008). Consequently, it found an interference in the rights of the applicant community, pursuant to the combined provisions of Articles 9–11 of the Convention. In 2015, the Russian Federation also blocked www.jw.org, the official website of Jehovah's Witnesses, making its advertising within the country a crime.

The culmination of these judicial proceedings was reached with the aforementioned intervention of the Supreme Court that, at the request of the Ministry of Justice, in 2017, defined the Jehovah's Witnesses as an "extremist organization." Its members were thus prohibited from practicing their faith, and the seizure of assets was envisaged. Already in the months following this decision, their places of worship had been searched by the police, and many devotees had been arrested. In 2019, the United Nations Working Group on Arbitrary Detention firmly condemned the arrests of Jehovah's Witnesses, and called on the Russian Federation for the immediate release of the believers illegally detained. In 2020, the European Union also expressed concern over recent reports of torture and other mistreatment suffered by many Jehovah's Witnesses. Both the OSCE (of which Russia is a participating state) and the EU reiterated that Russia is required to stop the ongoing persecution and protect the victims, ensuring that all—including Jehovah's Witnesses—enjoy their human rights peacefully, including the right to freedom of religion or belief. It is also important to remember that the Jehovah's Witnesses are, so far, the only organized religion to which Russian extremism legislation has been applied.

Religious Freedom in Soviet Union Law

Russian history includes a particular approach to the religious phenomenon, which appears as profoundly different when compared to the contexts of the Western European countries (Zenkivskyy 1953). It is known that the conversion to Christianity, before the year 1000, represented for the first Russian state, the so-called Kievan Rus', a fundamental historical turning point, since it meant the entry into the Eastern Christian ecumene and, more generally, into the group of European states. The model that was emerging was linked to the theocratic one of Constantinople and, in this sense, the Orthodox Christian faith modeled the more traditionalist Russian ideology of a different relationship between religion, state, and nation, developing a corresponding geopolitical approach. The ideas of the so-called Slavophiles, still in the present age, perceive, in fact, the Orthodox Church, society, and the state as one, and believe that the Church, as the mystical body of Christ, includes in itself the nation, the people and culture, having the Christian mission at their center (Codevilla 2011; Stroyen 1967; Timasheff 1942; Ferrari 2007; Bordeaux 1970).

The "oriental" vision of a Christian nation as a single community was already structured in the Byzantine and early traditions. This connoted Russian theological and philosophical thought, giving rise to the concept of the "Nation-Church," and developing the doctrine of Moscow as the "Third Rome," which led to the elevation of the metropolitan seat to the rank of Patriarchate, strengthening the prestige of the Church (Strémooukhoff 1953; Codevilla 2009; Ellis 1990; Ramet 1988). If this union has kept its importance over time, it has nevertheless undergone a long period of "captivity" since 1721, after its abolition by Peter the Great (1672–1725).

It was only with the beginning of the twentieth century that the Orthodox Church felt the need to get out of this impasse and to re-establish the relationship of harmonious collaboration, that symphony between Imperium and Sacerdotium, which Russia had inherited from the Byzantine world (Codevilla 2019a; Werth 1993; Daniel-Rops 1964). Following the revolutionary events of 1905, there were further and important consequences for the internal structure of the synodal Church. The idea began to emerge that the Russian Church should definitively break away from the state administration (Walters 1986). The fall of Tsarist Russia meant the end of the Orthodox state model, heir to the Byzantine Empire and its theocratic tradition. Paradoxically, it was only in the midst of the October Revolution that the Church achieved what Peter the Great had denied two centuries earlier, with the restoration of the Patriarchate.

The rise to power of the Bolsheviks, however, radically changed the course of historical events. The Marxist ideology, on which the new political power was based, was absolutely convinced of the need to completely eradicate religious feelings (Codevilla 2019b). According to this approach, the disappearance of religion was perfectly framed within a program of radical renewal of society and restructuring of consciences. The Orthodox Church, completely deprived of its assets, was enslaved to the government, also by virtue of a "lexical trick": the affirmation, in fact, that church and religion are private affairs did not have the same semantic meaning attributed by Westerners, given that the concept of "private" was not envisaged in the Communist ideology and everything was nationalized, or put under state control. Russian Communism subsequently developed this vision to its extreme consequences, and imposed a concept of revolutionary class struggle, which fatally degenerated into genuine persecution. Religious practice was allowed only in the context of approved religious associations, limited in fact only to adult citizens, gathered as a community supervised by the state (Berdjaev 1937; Zenkovsky 1957).

The establishment of Soviet power led, in 1918, to the promulgation of a decree on the separation of the church from the state, which recognized freedom of conscience for all citizens, understood both as the right to profess a religious faith but above all not to profess it at all and to make atheistic propaganda. The Socialist state was not, therefore, simply separatist, in the sense of neutral or indifferent, but adopted an explicit discriminatory and repressive policy towards all religious faiths, including the Orthodox (Curtis 1953; Anderson 1944; Alexeev 1953). If during the period of the Second World War the government had referred to the patriotism of the Russian Orthodox Church, in the post-war phase of the 1950s and 1960s the persecutions toward the Orthodox believers began again, leading to total state control over the country's religious life. Thus began a particularly difficult period, which led to multiple attempts to separate the various churches, favored by the Soviet government which, in the division of the Orthodox Churches, saw the possibility of annihilating the Patriarchal one. Furthermore, the 1977 Constitution, establishing the obligation to respect the "rules of Socialist coexistence," had transformed the right to atheism into a duty of the Soviet bonus civis, in the sense that this must actively contribute to curing believers from the "disease" of religious faith.

The Laws on Freedom of Conscience of the 1990s

The adherence to new legislative models on freedom of conscience only started with the political opening promoted by Mikhail Gorbachev. The process of détente that began in 1985 with his appointment as party secretary and, in particular, the phase of perestroika, determined the approval of the law of 1990, which guaranteed the perfect equality of all religious denominations and the full exercise of the right to freedom of conscience (Carobene 1991; Codevilla 1998). It also imposed a complete semantic revolution of the Soviet concept of freedom. The new law defined freedom as a right that could be exercised individually or together with others; ample space was given to religious organizations, which were legally granted the right to obtain legal personality, in an equal position.

However, the subsequent phase of the so-called "religious awakening" did not bring about major upheavals in the discipline and guarantees given to religion, due especially to the position granted to the Russian Orthodox Church within the political and social structure. The liberal tendencies of the law determined, in fact, an increase in foreign missionary activity, and the renewed success of dynamic religious movements, including the Jehovah's Witnesses, immediately arousing some concern within the Russian Orthodox Church, which began to press for a stricter law (Codevilla 2008). The weakness of the "rule of law" has gradually become an endemic feature of the system, which has now become a so-called "dictatorship of the law." The Russian legislative approach, in fact, leverages on principles and ideas that are not exactly those of the liberal European tradition of the protection of human rights, but are still culturally anchored to the Tsarist and Socialist past, even if, after the collapse of the Soviet Union, it had to establish new standards of human rights protection.

The 1993 constitutional text and subsequent adhesions to international organizations, such as the Council of Europe, introduced a conceptually new noyau of rights compared to the past, at least on a theoretical level. This allowed the country to comply with the requirements of freedom of religion, opinion, and information of the liberal West. The Constitution stated, in Articles 14 and 28, that the Russian Federation is a secular state that guarantees freedom of religion and belief, as well as the ideal of separation between the church and the state (Codevilla 1998; Pospielovsky 1984; Fletcher 1973). Furthermore, it is proclaimed that it is the people and not the party, the Soviet, the collective that is the holder of sovereignty and the only source of power. The implosion of the Communist ideology in the same years made it no longer possible to identify secularism with the exclusion of religious phenomena from the social life of the country. At least at a tendential level, secularism should now be defined as a principle of neutrality or indifference towards religion of the political power.

In 1996, by joining the Council of Europe, Russia undertook, inter alia, to adapt the 1990 law on religious freedom to European standards. A reform was thus approved by the Duma, the Russian Parliament, in 1997, but on the contrary, it seemed aimed at bringing the protection of religious freedom back to the period of the Church's submission to temporal power (Anderson 1994; Durham and Homer 1998; Shterin 2000; Medvedev 2002). The recognition of the "particular role of Orthodoxy in the history of Russia, in the formation and development of its spirituality and culture" is immediately evident from a first reading of the Preamble, where a respect is proclaimed for "Christianity, Islam, Buddhism, Judaism, and other religions, which form an integral part of the historical heritage of the peoples of Russia" (Fagan 2012). With this law, the tradition at the center of Orthodox theology thus becomes a political category, also through the reference to the symbiotic relationship between "Russian" and "Orthodox" (Carobene 2008).

The approval of this law, and its endorsement by the highest hierarchies of the Orthodox Church, therefore highlighted the desire of the latter to place itself in a position of supremacy over all the other denominations existing in the country that, after the collapse of the regime, had acquired greater force of penetration. There were less worries about the ensuing situation of enslavement to temporal power, which carried the role of the Church centuries back in history (Baran 2006a, 2006b; Richardson and Van Driel 1994). The rights of the "other" Orthodox not part of the Patriarchate of Moscow, non-Orthodox Christians, and those belonging to the "new religious denominations" were thus severely limited. This law has therefore clearly granted innumerable advantages to the Patriarchate of Moscow, which was eager to strengthen ties with the political power.

The law operated by strengthening the Patriarchate's position of dominance, and avoiding an opening towards religious minorities, unlike what was foreseen in the previous legislative document. It also favored the representatives of power who dreamed of a single national ideology of the "Slavophile" type, capable of bringing together "Orthodoxy," "national spirit," and "autocracy," taking a dangerous step back in time. Limits on freedom of religion have been established when necessary, among other things, in order to "guarantee the defense and security of the state," in evident contrast with the specific terms of article 9.2 ECHR. It should also be considered that, alongside this legislation, there is the coexistence of a plurality of norms, since there are more than eighty federal and thirty national laws governing the activities of religious associations.

In 1999, the Constitutional Court ruled that the state has the right to provide limitations in order not to automatically assign the status of religious organizations to, and not to allow the legalization of, "cults" that violate human rights or commit illegal and criminal acts, as well as the power to hinder missionary activity (Škarovskii 2003).

From a formal point of view, therefore, in Russia religious freedom for minorities is still currently in force. It applies only, however, to the four "respected/traditional" religions (non-Orthodox Christianity, Islam, Buddhism, and Judaism) and to the other "religious organizations" that register with the authorities. What is happening is the implementation of an inverse process to that of secularization, and a clear governmental orientation towards Orthodoxy as a state religion. This is reflected in a wide range of possibilities recognized to it within the army and the education system, and the Russian Orthodox Church's participation in public events. It claims the role of a new ideology, a kind of special Orthodox thinking. However, this bond of union between Church and nation, between Orthodox religion and traditional national values, seems to be in clear contrast with the secular and separatist regime outlined by the Constitution.

This law, in the years following its approval, has been continuously subject to discussions and amendments. In 2004, in order to make some improvements and to provide a precise legal definition of missionary activity, the Department of the Russian Parliament that deals with religious and social organizations considered four proposals of amendments (Simons and Westerlund 2016). They, however, were not accepted, given the religious stability that the country enjoyed in those years. A subsequent attempt to modify it was made in 2007, with the declared intention of protecting atheism, which was also rejected (Codevilla 2007).

The amendments to this rule, introduced with a series of federal laws that followed one another until 2016, also established numerous cases in which, through a judicial procedure, it is possible to order the prohibition of religious activities, if not the dissolution of the organizations themselves, widening the scope of the restrictions to which religious groups must submit. In 2013, it was stated that domicile and residence in the Russian Federation may be denied to foreign citizens engaged in subversive activities. The latter, however, were not defined with sufficient clarity, thus allowing arbitrary and discriminatory applications of the law.

Currently, all religious communities without legal status should inform the authorities about their existence and activities. Still, another amendment required religious organizations, which receive foreign funding, to report information to the Ministry of Justice about their budget plans, activities, and leadership. The government therefore has the right to inspect, without any warning, the financial activities of the religious groups that receive funding from abroad, or are suspected of illegal activity or extremism.

The "Anti-Extremism" and Counter-Terrorism Legislation

Since the beginning of the new century, the legislation on religious organizations has been grafted on to the law on combating extremist activities, which has granted the authorities the power to censor freedom of religion and expression, and to criminally prosecute a wide spectrum of religious activities, defining a whole federal list of prohibited "extremist" materials (Codevilla 2007; Rousselet 2000; Moniak-Azzopardi 2004; Curanovic 2012).

Since 2012, the intensification of the fight against extremism in Russia has therefore manifested itself through a series of interventions aimed at suppressing political opposition and, progressively, also non-traditional religious groups. This situation has also been perceived as discriminatory in Europe and, in fact, in the same year the Parliamentary Assembly of the European Council adopted a further resolution (no. 1896/2012) denouncing the violation of fundamental human rights in Russia, emphasizing the impediments to the normal development of civil society. The resolution was, however, totally ignored in Russia.

In 2013, a law introduced substantial changes to art. 148 of the Criminal Code and art. 5.26 of the Code of Administrative Offences, which, although with slightly different formulations, include liability and penalties up to six years in jail for public actions that express a clear lack of respect for society and have the intention of offending the religious feelings of believers. The ambiguity of these normative formulations, which are undoubtedly anomalous in a secular state, is obvious.

The anti-extremist legislation of 2014, although formally enacted because of the need to combat terrorism, has also allowed dangerous interferences in the sphere of religious practices. It has, in fact, introduced with Art. 282.1 and 282.2 a criminal liability for inducing, recruiting, or otherwise involving a person in extremist organizations. This is how the concept, absolutely indefinable at a legal level, of the "inductor to participation," distinguished from the mere member/adept, was included in the law. The law frames as extremist activity the propaganda of the exclusivity, superiority, or inferiority of a person, on the basis of religious affiliation or attitude to religion.

The authorities are also extremely suspicious of religious practices that may seem incompatible with the public order, including the refusal to serve in the military. Sometimes, the unknown nature of some denominations or their links to foreign entities could be arbitrarily linked to alleged terrorist or subversive activities. The case of the Jehovah's Witnesses is paradigmatic in this respect. The ambiguous notion of "extremism," mentioned in the Russian laws, allows the authorities to interfere in religious activities, and to prosecute believers. The policy of the government in the religious sphere is perfectly embedded in a process of ideological control of the society, albeit in a different sense than that exercised during the Communist period.

The most recent anti-terrorism law, passed in 2016, further aggravated the situation of Christian churches other than the Russian Orthodox, and other faiths. This law, in fact, forbids any pastoral or missionary activity by foreigners who have only a tourist visa, unregistered organizations, and foundations that do not have an immediate religious purpose. In addition, religious activities (catechisms, training, liturgical celebrations) carried out in private apartments have also been prohibited. Religious denominations are obliged to sign an employment contract in order to invite a person to Russia for religious activities. The laws also prohibit missionary activities in public places, as they could allegedly violate security and public order, engage in extremist activities, separate families, violate the person or rights and freedoms of citizens, harm the morality and health of citizens, including through the use of drugs, and incite citizens to disobey their statutory obligations. Finally, foreigners wishing to engage in religious activities will not be able to receive a humanitarian visa to enter the country. The Russian Orthodox Church continues to maintain a position of privilege, but only as it remains an institution functional and subservient to the political power.

Among the most significant criticisms of these anti-terrorism regulations, introduced as part of the "Yarovaya package," is that of the United States Commission on International Religious Freedom, which stresses that the provisions of the law, under the pretext of tackling terrorism, would grant the government radical powers to reduce civil liberties, including the introduction of broad restrictions on religious practices, which would make it very difficult for religious groups to operate (Kravchenko 2018). These measures would allow the Russian authorities to further crack down on smaller religious communities that are critical of the government and the President, and to jail dissidents.

The accusation of "extremism," with its extremely broad definition, may include in this case the peaceful promotion of the "superiority of one religion over another," thus also leading to the banning of religious texts, or even to the obligation to dissolve religious groups, as happened in the case of Jehovah's Witnesses. Numerous accusations are based on the ambiguous definitions contained in the law, in particular, where it defines, for example as "dangerous" the propaganda of exclusivity, superiority or inferiority of a person on the basis of her religious affiliation, something which does not seem only aimed at preventing hate speech on the basis of religious motivations. On the contrary, an attitude of suspicion is implied, which is reflected in the use of the adjective "non-traditional" and the term "cult" (in Russian, "секта," sekta), which are firmly rooted, in a negative sense, in the official vocabulary. The most worrying elements of these laws and their application are essentially linked to the considerable and arbitrary interference of the state in the internal organization and doctrines of religious communities, and in the creation of discrimination between the religious communities themselves.

The recent amendment of the Russian Constitution in 2020, promoted by Putin, approved by the Constitutional Court, by the Parliament, and by the citizens themselves in a referendum, in addition to the extension of the prime minister's mandate, inserted an explicit reference to God in the Constitutional text, accepting the explicit requests of the current Patriarch. The art. 67 was integrated with the addition of the formula:

> the Russian Federation, unified by a millenary history, preserving the memory of the ancestors who transmitted to us the ideals and faith in God as well as the continuity in the development of the Russian state, recognizes the historically established state unity.

Conclusion

The examination of this legislative evolution makes it possible to highlight how the substantial profile of the significant legal interests in Russia is linked not so much to the (omitted) recognition of individual and collective rights of freedom, as to the emergence, in increasingly stronger forms, of a real totalitarian ideology. Its characteristics as a way of thinking are, inter alia, the anti-pluralistic intolerance (which obviously involves intolerance of dissent as an expression of plurality of ideas), and a millenarian tension, perhaps not to spirituality but to nihilistic destruction (Fisichella 1992). The churches are suppressed or coopted, that is, concretely, ideologized, and obliged to respect the line drawn by the propaganda, with evident and important repercussions in the legal sphere.

The right to freedom of religion includes the right to express one's belief in community with others, and the expectation that believers can associate freely, without arbitrary state intervention. Indeed, the autonomous existence of religious communities is indispensable for pluralism in a democratic society. The duty of neutrality and impartiality of the state should therefore be incompatible with any provision authorizing the government to assess the legitimacy of religious beliefs.

Even the European Court, in its intervention in favor of Jehovah's Witnesses against Russia, made it clear that any interference must correspond to an "urgent social need" (Lapi 2011). A need is something "necessary," not just "useful" or "desirable," and European institutions actively promote this standard of religious liberty. Gradually, we witnessed an expansion of the European concept of freedom of religion, which should have had important effects on domestic laws, consolidating this fundamental right and extending it to all religions, not only traditional but also "new" in a given country.

With reference to Russia, however, these important legal developments, due to political pressure, may remain only within the speculative, theoretical sphere. In fact, on July 14, 2015, the Russian Supreme Court ruled that the country could set aside an ECtHR ruling, in the event of a conflict with the fundamental principles and norms of the Constitution, and this resolution was transformed into federal law in the same year. The following year, on April 19, 2016, the Russian Constitutional Court established for the first time the inapplicability of a judgment of the ECtHR, affirming the supremacy of the Russian constitutional rule over a supranational decision whose interpretation seemed to conflict with the Federal Constitution. The logical consequence was the impossibility of enforcing, in the specific case, the intervention of the European Court (Abashidze, Ilyashevich, and Solntsev 2017).

The danger of such a legal approach is obvious. As is well known, according to international law, a state cannot invoke the provisions of its domestic law to justify the non-execution of a treaty. The application of this norm implies that the conventional bonds cannot yield, even if in individual and specific cases, in the face of the (conflicting) constitutional norms of a contracting state, even of norms that define its constitutional identity. The state would have the only remedy, to safeguard its constitutional identity, of withdrawing from the treaty. This hypothesis, however, is not feasible for those multilateral documents which, for the matter dealt with, have assumed strategic political importance in the context of relations between states of the same geographical area. For the purposes it pursues, this trend cannot, moreover, be confused with the so-called doctrines of "counter-limits," on the basis of which the constitutional embankment placed on supranational law was essentially designed to safeguard a standard of protection of humans rights not known or not applied at the supranational level (Bowring 2015).

What seems to emerge from this impasse is that the national supreme and constitutional courts may experience difficulties in establishing a dialogue with the European Court of Human Rights and, above all, in accepting interference in the so-called domestic jurisdiction. The emergence of increasing tensions between the defense of the constitutional identity of the contracting states and the fulfillment of the obligations deriving from the ECHR should, however, lead to the necessary identification of new instruments. This could also be implemented through an amendment of the Convention, which would ensure a stable dialogue between courts, providing the Strasbourg judge with full and effective awareness of the functioning of an internal system, before assessing its compatibility with the conventional system, to avoid dangerous and arbitrary implosions of the European system of protection of human rights, deriving from the failure to implement the decisions of the European court.

The particular juridical position of Jehovah's Witnesses in the Russian Federation, within a legal framework of freedom so strongly compromised, therefore takes on a further symbolic value, in which the defense of freedom of religion must be placed as an insurmountable limit to dictatorial tendencies. The Soviet state had tenaciously pursued a political strategy that attempted to establish a relationship between regulation and repression. After the 1991 reform, with the easing of state pressures, however, the will to control of the dominant Church emerged, associated with the general attitude of mistrust towards the new "cults" that emerged in Europe at the end of the 20th century due to the originality of their message, which could not be framed within the schemes of traditional religions.

The current political phase is, however, linked to a more centralized form of state control, with greater restrictions on individual and collective freedoms. The characteristics of the Jehovah's Witnesses movement have, therefore, evidenced in even clearer forms the difficult balance between the protection of religious freedom and the states' claims that they need to defend themselves from the centripetal forces, potentially implosive, that can operate within their structure.

It is well known that secularism is based on two fundamental principles: first, the inviolability of human rights, which constitute the pre-condition of political power and therefore of the state and, second, the importance of a culture and institutions that guarantee the effectiveness of pluralism. The analysis of the peculiarities of Russian history and of the problems of the Jehovah's Witnesses offer, in this sense, an important perspective. They call into question the effectiveness of the European model of recognition and guarantee of religious pluralism if it is not subordinated to a real and effective control by supranational bodies that can guarantee the effectiveness of rights (Mazzola 2012; Licastro 2014).

Beth Sarim: Princes, Slander, and the Millennium

Massimo Introvigne
CESNUR (Center for Studies on New Religions)

ABSTRACT: A perpetual item of anti-Jehovah's-Witnesses controversy is that they built a home in San Diego, California, the "House of the Princes" (Beth Sarim), to welcome there rulers and prophets of the Old Testament when they will be resurrected and serve as "Princes in All the Earth." Waiting for the Princes, it was used by the second president of the Watch Tower Society, Judge Joseph Franklin Rutherford, who died there in 1942. The Jehovah's Witnesses sold the property in 1948. The article reviews the story of Beth Sarim and the controversies that prevented Rutherford from being buried there, as he had wished. It discusses the anti-cult slander associated with Beth Sarim, and the gratuitous comparisons in the media with a controversial Los Angeles new religious movement called The Great Eleven. Finally, it situates the Beth Sarim episode within the context of the evolving millennial theology of the Jehovah's Witnesses.

Beth Sarim

At the address 4440 Braeburn Road, San Diego lies a 2-story house built between October 10, 1929, and January 17, 1930, in Spanish eclectic style, with a 3rd-floor round tower. It was designated on August 23, 2001, as a historical landmark by the San Diego Historical Resources Board (Flanigan 2001; San Diego Historical Resource Board 2001, 2010, no. 474).

The house is known as Beth Sarim, the "House of the Princes," and is mentioned in a significant part of the literature hostile to the Jehovah's Witnesses. This is how their story goes. The Jehovah's Witnesses believed that the world as we know it would soon end. The worthy rulers and prophets of the Old Testaments such as David, Joseph, and others would be resurrected and would serve as "Princes in All the Earth" (Psalm 45:16, New World Translation used by the Jehovah's Witnesses) before the end of the present system of things. The Jehovah's Witnesses prepared a residence in San Diego to host these Princes. However, as the Princes did not manifest themselves, the house was in fact used by the second president of the Watch Tower Society, Judge Joseph Franklin Rutherford (1869–1942) to enjoy the good weather, a beautiful house, and a luxurious lifestyle. He died there on January 8, 1942.

The implication in the anti-Jehovah's-Witnesses literature is often that Rutherford milked his gullible followers of their hard-earned money, and used the Princes as a pretext to enjoy a nice house in California. Told in these terms, the story is certainly false, and relies on typical anti-cult stereotypes. The real story of Beth Sarim is, on the other hand, much more interesting.

Who Built Beth Sarim and Why

That Rutherford went to Beth Sarim because the expected Princes did not appear is not true. Documents clearly show that the house was originally built using private funds to give to Rutherford a place where he could work and take advantage of weather conditions better than those available at the Jehovah's Witnesses' headquarters in Brooklyn, New York. Why was this needed, and how did the idea of Beth Sarim as an administrative center for the resurrected Princes arise?

Those associated with the Watch Tower Society (the name Jehovah's Witnesses was adopted later, in 1931) were conscientious objectors, as the Jehovah's Witnesses are today. During World War I, their refusal to serve in the military was regarded as a serious crime in the United States, as in other countries. With others, Rutherford was arrested and sentenced to a jail term of 20 years on June 21, 1918. Happily, with the end of the war, cooler tempers prevailed. The 1918 decision was overturned on appeal, and the prosecutor decided to drop the charges.

However, the time spent in jail took a serious toll on Rutherford's health. He was diagnosed with chronic pneumonia, and left with only one regularly functioning lung. Doctors noticed that warm weather improved his condition. In particular, time spent in San Diego was especially effective. A local doctor called Albert Ernest Eckols (1904–1940) treated Rutherford and advised him to escape the humid and cold winter of New York. He should rather spend in San Diego the winter seasons, he advised, or better still the rest of his life. By 1929, Rutherford had been wintering in San Diego for a few years on the doctor's recommendation. However, it had proved difficult to find a house suitable for Rutherford and his staff that could be rented for just a few months each winter (Martin 1930, 405).

Robert J. Martin (1878–1932) was one of the Watch Tower co-workers who had been arrested and sentenced with Rutherford in 1918. He came from a wealthy family, although he had sold his shares in the Martin Boards company to his brothers to devote himself full-time to the Watch Tower work. Martin testified that it was he and other Watch Tower devotees that prevailed upon Rutherford and persuaded him to acquire a permanent residence in San Diego. Finally, he accepted, and Martin went to California to consult with Dr. Eckols.

It was Eckols himself who purchased two lots of land in fashionable Kensington Heights, and transferred their property to Martin on October 8, 1929 (Flanigan 2001, 4). On October 10, Martin entered into a contract with the locally prominent J.W. Gernandt Construction Company to build the 2-story house, completed with a tower symbolizing the Watch Tower Society (Flanigan 2001, 2, 4). The notice of completion of the building was filed by Martin on January 17, 1930 (Flanigan 2001, 9).

On March 3, 1930, when media controversies had already started, William Edwin Van Amburgh (1863–1947), another of those sentenced in 1918, who served as treasurer of the Watch Tower Society, signed a written statement that "not one penny" had left the society's coffers to pay for the house (Martin 1930, 406). Martin and others had provided the money.

On December 24, 1929, while the house was being built, Martin transferred the property of the lots and the building to Rutherford until the end of the judge's life on earth, with the stipulation that it will then pass to the Watch Tower Society. Martin testified that in fact Rutherford "refused to have [the property] for himself, except to use it for the Lord's work" (Martin 1930, 405). Hence, the provisions about the Princes arose from Rutherford's insistence that the property originally funded and put at his disposal by his doctor and friends be deeded not to him but to the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society.

It should also be clarified that Rutherford was not on vacation in San Diego. He directed from there an organization that was growing and expanding to numerous countries, and wrote in the house several books (Consolation 1942, 5–6).

The Princes

To understand the Princes connection, there is no need to consult the sensational accounts of the media of the time or the anti-Jehovah's Witnesses literature. What Beth Sarim had exactly to do with the Princes was clearly spelled out in the deed between Martin and Rutheford signed on December 24, 1929.

> Both the grantor [Martin] and the grantee, the said JOSEPH F. RUTHERFORD are fully persuaded from the Bible testimony, which is the Word of Jehovah God, and from extraneous evidence that God's kingdom is now in course of establishment and that it will result beneficially to the peoples of earth; that the governing power and authority will be invisible to men but that kingdom of God will have visible representatives on the earth who will have charge of the affairs of the nations under the supervision of the invisible ruler Christ; that among those who will thus be the faithful representatives and visible governors of the world will be David, who was once king over Israel; and Gideon, and Barak, and Samson, and Jephthae, and Joseph, formerly the ruler of Egypt, and Samuel the prophet and other faithful men who were named with approval in the Bible at Hebrews the eleventh chapter. The condition herein is that the said WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY shall hold said title perpetually in trust for the use of any or all of the men above named as representatives of God's kingdom on earth and that such men shall have possession and use of said property hereinabove described as they may deem for the best interest for the work in which they are engaged.
>
> [...] IT IS FURTHER PROVIDED that if the said JOSEPH F. RUTHERFORD while alive on the earth shall by lease, deed or contract provide that any other person or persons connected with the said WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY shall have the right to reside on said premises until the appearing of David or some of the other men mentioned in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews as above set forth even such person or persons so designated by the said JOSEPH F. RUTHERFORD in such lease or other paper writing shall have the right and privilege of residing on said premises until the same be taken possession of by David or some of the other men herein named and this property and premises being dedicated to Jehovah and the use of his kingdom it shall be used as such for ever. Any persons appearing to take possession of said premises shall first prove and identify themselves to the proper officers of said Society as the person or persons described in Hebrews chapter eleven and in this deed (Martin 1930, 406–7).

The last clause was not unnecessary. In an interview he granted in January 1931 to The San Diego Sun, a newspaper that at the end of the same year would merge with The Evening Tribune into The Tribune-Sun, a predecessor of the contemporary San Diego Union-Tribune, Rutherford explained that

> One morning as I was going from the house to the garage, a queer-looking creature approached me, tipped his dirty hat and cried, "Howdy, judge, I'm David." "Go and tell that to the winds," I told him, and he left without arguing the matter (Wyatt 1931).

Rutherford did not believe that "a gaunt, unshaven tramp" might have been one of the Princes. He interpreted the Bible to the effect that

> David, Gideon, Barak, Samuel, Jephtae [sic], Joseph and Samuel will be sent there to wrench the world from Satan's grasp clothed in modern garb as we are, and able, with little effort, to speak our tongue (Wyatt 1931).

Prophetically, in entering the house, Rutherford had declared that he realized "the possibility of some old codger turning up bright and early some morning and claiming he is King David" (Pittsburgh Gazette 1930).

The 1939 article commented that Rutherford "pictured the arrival of the biblical delegation perhaps in frock coats, high hats, canes and spats." He also noted that the Princes will find in the house "French telephones," "Kolnisch Wasser from Cologne," and "a new, yellow 16-cilinder" coupe car in the garage (Wyatt 1931). The journalist was clearly amused but at least he let Rutherford express himself in his own voice, and his article was less sensational than others published in the media of the time.

There is thus little doubt that Rutherford and the Jehovah's Witnesses did contemplate the possibility that the Princes may return and find a base of operations in San Diego. However, they did not appear during Rutherford's lifetime, and he died at Beth Sarim of cancer on January 8, 1942.

The Controversy About Rutherford's Burial

Rutherford had expressed the wish to be simply buried within the Beth Sarim property. The local authorities objected that the lot was not an authorized cemetery, but the battle was soon fought not so much about funerary legislation but about the Jehovah's Witnesses.

In November 1941, Rutherford had surgery in Elkhart, Indiana, from which it became clear he would not recover. He asked to be brought back by train and ambulance to Beth Sarim, as he wanted to die and be buried there. In anticipation of his death, his co-workers formed a corporation called Beth Sarim's Rest, whose purpose was to operate a small cemetery located three hundred feet from the house and down the nearby canyon slope, invisible from any house. Rutherford confirmed his wish to be buried in the Beth Sarim property to Dr. George Roy Stevenson (1887–1959), the physician who assisted him in his last days and signed the death certificate (Los Angeles Times 1942a).

When Rutherford died, the corporation and the mortician sought permission for Rutherford to be buried there. However, although Beth Sarim's Rest was duly incorporated, it needed a "conditional permit" to operate a cemetery. The permit was sought, while Rutherford's remains continued to be kept in the mortuary (Los Angeles Times 1942a). It was denied by San Diego's Planning Commission after two weeks, on January 24 (The Fresno Bee 1942a).

The question was more political and religious than administrative. Several organizations petitioned the authorities not to grant the permit. The Veterans of Foreign Wars, which still resented Rutherford's advocacy of conscientious objection while another World War was being fought, wrote that "Judge Rutherford during his lifetime taught intolerance; therefore, as a manifestation of our 'tolerance,' we do not wish him buried." Troublemakers gathered in front of Beth Sarim, and sometimes trespassed inside the property, shouting cruel mockery such as "How long are you going to keep the old boy on ice?" (Consolation 1942, 3–4).

259 owners of nearby properties also signed a petition opposing the burial, but the Jehovah's Witnesses claimed that those who signed had been deceived by the Witnesses' opponents into believing that a large cemetery was planned there, while in fact they had no intention to bury in the plot anybody else than Rutherford. When this was clarified, some of the neighbors signed the Jehovah's Witnesses' own petition in favor of the burial, which in its first version gathered 1,070 names (Consolation 1942, 6). By the end of the process, the number of supporting signatures would rise to 14,693. After the denial by the Planning Commission, the Jehovah's Witnesses appealed the decision before the Board of Supervisors. The appeal was also denied, on February 2 (Monrovia Daily News-Post 1942; The Ventura County-Star Free Press 1942).

Undaunted, the Jehovah's Witnesses on January 6 brought the case to the local County Superior Court (The Sacramento Bee 1942) and, reportedly at the judge, Arthur L. Mundo's (1895–1983), suggestion (Los Angeles Times 1942b), filed on February 28 another request for burial further away from any house (The Fresno Bee 1942b). This

> New location for interment was in almost the center of the property known as Beth-Shan, which is roughly 75 acres of canyon and mesa land, adjoining Beth-Sarim but separated by a half-mile width of canyon.
>
> This property, also be1onging to WATCHTOWER, has one small and one large dwelling upon it and a few out-houses, and consists of some fruit trees and other cultivated patches in aggregate about seven acres, and about 65 acres of unreclaimed brush, either too steep, or rocky, or inaccessible for development. It offers retreat for all forms of animal life common to this portion of southern California, such as coyotes, bobcats (lynxes), rabbits, Blue Mountain quail, doves, and songsters of many varieties, all of which die and are buried without fuss under the leaves of the cactus and greasewood. Judge Rutherford, in a discussion before his death, had said that as a second choice he wished to be buried somewhere on these wild acres.
> In order that all the objections made in regard to the first site near to Kensington Heights might be removed in regard to this new site, it was requested that only a ten-foot-square cemetery be granted. The spot was also inaccessible except by private road a half mile long and closed by a gate. Dr. Alexander Lesem [1879–1957, the local County Health Officer] looked at the site himself and declared that there was no health hazard. (He also stated that there was no health hazard in the first site) (Consolation 1942, 9).

After a hearing on February 28, on March 14, 1942, the second petition was also denied by the Planning Commission (Los Angeles Times 1942b), with the Veterans of Foreign Wars continuing to agitate for denial of any burial outside of an established cemetery. On March 16, the decision was confirmed by the Board of Supervisors (Los Angeles Times 1942c). The Jehovah's Witnesses were treated quite harshly, with one of the commissioners telling them: "Our patience is at a limit; we cannot spend any time with this; we are too busy with defense work" (Consolation 1942, 11). The Jehovah's Witnesses appealed again to Judge Mundo of the Central District Court, where the trial started on April 1 (Los Angeles Times 1942d). It quickly turned into a trial of the Jehovah's Witnesses and their expectation that the Princes will return to Beth Sarim.

The local authorities admitted that there would have been no problems in burying an ordinary citizen in the new location. However, Rutherford was so famous that his burial place, even with no monument as the Jehovah's Witnesses offered, would attract "pilgrimages." In fact, pilgrimages to their deceased leaders' graves are not part of the practices of the Jehovah's Witnesses, and they explained it to the court. To no avail, as Judge Mundo ruled against them on April 16 (San Bernardino Daily Sun 1942).

While according to some local media they had originally considered continuing the legal battle (San Bernardino Daily Sun 1942), the Jehovah's Witnesses finally realized that in the heated war climate further appeals to higher courts would be futile. They decided, having obtained the authorities' permission on April 18 (Daily News [Los Angeles] 1942; Oakland Tribune 1942), to bring the remains of Rutherford to Staten Island, New York (Los Angeles Times 1942e).

They were buried there on April 25, 1942, at dawn, in a burial plot of the Woodrow Road cemetery, near the Watch Tower Society's property from where it operated a radio station. This was reported both by the Jehovah's Witnesses (e.g. Consolation 1942, 16) and the media (Red Bluff Daily News 1942; The Fresno Bee 1942c). The Los Angeles Times offered more details than other newspapers:

> The body was taken in a hearse from a funeral home to the cemetery without cortege. At the cemetery entrance a small group of followers was waiting. They carried the casket from the hearse to the grave. Nathan [Homer] Knorr [1905–1977], Rutherford's successor and president of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, corporate title of the sect, read a few prayers and the casket was lowered into the grave (Los Angeles Times 1942f).

Rutherford, Martin, Van Amburgh, and Clayton J. Woodworth (1870–1951), who had been sentenced to jail together in 1918, all rest in the same cemetery and plot. In 1952, the Jehovah's Witnesses' publication Awake! commented

> How appropriate it is that the remains of these men who labored together during their lifetime, Rutherford, Van Amburgh, Martin and Woodworth, should be buried there together! Not that we attach importance to the remains or to the spot of burial, but we see appropriateness in the circumstances and know that the unity is a reality ("'The Things They Did Go Right with Them'" 1952).

However, the fact that the Jehovah's Witnesses burial site in the Woodrow Road cemetery had no grave markers was used to support the legend that Rutherford had been clandestinely buried in the area adjacent to Beth Sarim, in defiance of the court's order. The legend is still occasionally repeated today. However, Rutherford's remains traveled east pursuant to an official authorization by County Health Officer Dr. Lesem, and accompanied by the authorized mortician, Harvey Lewis (1885–1972). The legend is thus just a late legacy of the emotions that accompanied the whole controversy.

Media Reactions

In 1806, Italian poet Ugo Foscolo (1778–1827) wrote one of the most famous poems of the Italian literature, one that generations of Italian students have been requested to memorize, "Sepulchers" (Dei sepolcri). It is a deep meditation on the meaning of the graves for the living. Foscolo, although a progressive poet himself, nostalgically lamented that the French Revolution and Napoleon I (1769–1821) had created a restrictive burial policy, while Italians were accustomed to see illustrious citizens buried in churches or in mausoleums placed in the center of their cities (Foscolo 1807).

American and, in particular, California funerary laws were never as strict as their European counterparts that followed the Napoleonic model. The Jehovah's Witnesses were able to argue in court that the case law of California's Supreme Court looked with favor both to burial in remote and isolated locations even when they were not legally part of cemeteries, and to liberally accommodating the wish of the deceased whenever possible (Consolation 1942, 8). In the Rutherford case, these precedents were not followed, not because of any peculiar local health or zoning reason but due to the hostility against the Jehovah's Witnesses.

The confrontation with the Roman Catholic Church in the area was particularly harsh. The fact that the Jehovah's Witnesses were conscientious objectors mobilized against them, in the middle of World War II, organizations such as the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion (Consolation 1942, 10). Catholic media were among the most hostile in reporting about Rutherford's death (see e.g. The Tablet 1942). Ultimately, it was prejudice against the Jehovah's Witnesses that prevented Rutherford's wish to be buried in the property around Beth Sarim to be honored.

This was initially acknowledged by the local San Diego media. In January 1942, some of the articles published by The Tribune-Sun and The San Diego Union were surprisingly balanced. The Union reported, without disapproving it, the opinion of Beth Sarim's next-door neighbor, one A.L. Jacobs, who said he had no sympathy for the Jehovah's Witnesses but he believed that if Rutherford "wanted to be buried there, that's the place to put him" (The San Diego-Union 1942).

The Jehovah's Witnesses acknowledged the initial fairness of the local media, calling their January reports "unbiased" (Consolation 1942, 7). However, they also noted that the tune of the media coverage changed in the following months, perhaps under Catholic influence. The media looked into their own archives and found that both local and national media had treated Beth Sarim in the 1930s as a typical example of the practices and beliefs of a "cult."

Time in 1930 compared the Jehovah's Witnesses to the two main Rosicrucian organizations that had their world headquarters in California, the Rosicrucian Fellowship in Oceanside and the Ancient and Mystical Order Rosae Crucis in San Jose, and offered a pseudo-sociological explanation of why "cults" were flourishing in the state:

> Flowery, sun-drenched California, where Nature exhibits itself in mystical opulence, where plenty of people have plenty of money, where there are many invalids contemplating eternity, is particularly propitious for this flourishing (Time 1930).

In one of the most bizarre turns of the whole story, stereotyping the Jehovah's Witnesses as a "cult" was also reinforced by a comparison with an organization that had nothing to do with them, known as The Great Eleven.

A Faulty Comparison: The Great Eleven

A surprising number of newspapers, probably based on a United Press syndicated story, had published in 1930s stories about Beth Sarim and the Princes comparing the Jehovah's Witnesses to The Divine Order of the Royal Arms of the Great Eleven (Nashville Banner 1930; The Neosho Daily News 1930; Washington Herald 1930; Syracuse Herald 1930, which also offers a comparison with the community around Jiddu Krishnamurti, 1895–1986, in Ojai). Known in short as The Great Eleven, it was a Los Angeles new religious movement founded in 1922 by May Otis Blackburn (1881–1951). She had also established a parallel (but not identical) organization called "The Church of the Divine Science of Joshua, the Branch, the Headstone of the Corner" (Supreme Court of California 1931, 2). Since Blackburn's movement is almost completely forgotten, an excursus into its history and controversies is needed.

Blackburn was born in Storm Lake, Iowa, but started gathering followers of her numerological speculations about the Bible and the universe (see Blackburn 1936) in Portland, Oregon, and moved to California in 1918. Most of her early followers came from Christian Science, and one of her organizations may have been called "The Church of the Divine Science" to offer them some continuity with their previous religion.

In California, May taught that she and her daughter Ruth Wieland (1898–1978) were the Two Witnesses mentioned in the Book of Revelation, and were receiving messages from Gabriel and other angels (Blackburn 1936). Gabriel had ordered that the revelations should be collected in a book to be published under the title The Great Sixth Seal or The Lamb's Book of Life. Not only would the book offer a new interpretation of the Bible and reveal hitherto unknown secrets on the origins and destiny of the universe; the publication itself would trigger apocalyptic events, leading to the millennial reign of eleven God-appointed queens, who would have their palaces in Hollywood and include May and her daughter.

When the media compared The Great Eleven to the Jehovah's Witnesses, two sensational events concerning the former organization had occurred. First, the police had discovered in 1929 that two members of The Great Eleven, William (1869-1944) and Martha Rhoads (1869–1944) had kept the body of their adopted daughter Willa Rhoads (1908–1925), who had died at age 16, preserved on salt and ice in the movement's headquarters, then moved it to various locations, hoping she might be resurrected when the kingdom of the eleven queens would come. Willa had been designated herself as one of the queens, and was buried together with the bodies of seven dogs named after the seven musical notes, which had been given to the girl by May Blackburn as a gift.

Whether the dogs had been "ritually sacrificed," as some claimed, and had a special mystical role was never clarified. The police investigated the matter, and found that no crimes had been committed (Nashville Banner 1930). It is also possible that Martha Rhoads's ideas about the possibility that Willa would not die and, once dead, might be resurrected came from her interpretation of Christian Science, her former religion, rather than from The Great Eleven's theology (Fort 2019, 258–59).

The second incident concerned a court case started against Blackburn by the nephew of the oil magnate Joseph Benjamin Dabney (1858–1932), Clifford Richard Dabney (1891–1977). He was a disgruntled ex-member of The Great Eleven, and claimed he had been fraudulently persuaded to donate significant sums of money, together with shares of oil companies and land, to support the movement and the publication of The Great Sixth Seal, which was never published. In fact, the heavy donations, together with disagreements with his uncle, had almost bankrupt him. Blackburn was arrested, prosecuted, and convicted of grand theft by the Superior Court of Los Angeles County on March 2, 1930.

The jury had heard damning testimonies not only about the Willa Rhoads incident, but also about the fact that the abusive husband of Blackburn's daughter Ruth, a man called Samuel Rizzio (1906–1929), had been killed by The Great Eleven's leaders, probably with poison. Rumors that other members had been killed also circulated. They have been regarded as believable by the author of the only (non-academic) nonfiction book on The Great Eleven, Samuel Fort (Fort 2019), and by those who wrote fiction on the sensational case. They included Rick J. Baudé, the grandson of The Great Eleven leader Gale Conde Banks (1890–1982), who authored The Blackburn Chronicle (Baudé 2008), and Kim Cooper, who in The Kept Girl (2014) put novelist Raymond Chandler (1888–1959) on the tracks of the homicidal movement (Cooper 2014).

That The Great Eleven committed serious crimes, including homicides, is thus the subject matter of a literary tradition. The movement is now defunct, although according to Fort it did not disappear in 1930, as others had claimed, but remained in existence for several decades (Fort 2019, 462). Fort does build a case for the criminal nature of The Great Eleven, but its legal story is different. In fact, one of the reasons The Great Eleven is of some interest is that it offered to the Supreme Court of California the opportunity for a landmark decision on religious liberty.

In their decision of November 30, 1931, confirming the opinion of the District Court of Appeal of California, Second District, Division One, which on March 23, 1931, had already overcome the Superior Court decision, the California Justices severely chastised the prosecutor for having introduced in the 1930 trial evidence about Willa Rhoads and the alleged homicide of Samuel Rizzio, with the obvious intent of prejudicing the jurors by exposing them to matters that had nothing to do with the grand theft accusation. The Justices had no sympathy for The Great Eleven. In fact, they wrote that the movement's > whole plan of life and salvation is a babel of incoherency abounding in absurdities of an extreme type and the wonder is that rational minds should have become obsessed by such chimerical delusions (Supreme Court of California 1931, 6).

However, the Supreme Court noted that while it would be illegal to use such delusions to prey on the mentally weak, "In the instant case no claim is made of a weakening of mentality on the part of those who accepted the defendant in the role she manifested herself," including Clifford R. Dabney, who while he was a member of The Great Eleven was perfectly capable of functioning as a businessman (Supreme Court of California 1931, 6). It also came out that Dabney was not a reluctant participant in The Great Eleven but contributed to the movement's lore through his own visions, including one where he saw the founder of Christian Science, Mary Baker Eddy (1821–1910: Fort 2019, 415).

The Supreme Court concluded that Dabney and others had accepted a strange interpretation of the Scriptures but, being mentally competent, they had done it freely. According to the Justices, from Dabney's point of view at the moment he made the donations, his choice was rational because he believed he could access "the arcanum of all knowledge" and "the paltry dollars which he had expended (…) were as trifles compared with [the] priceless gifts" he hoped to acquire (Supreme Court of California 1931, 6).

While not resisting the temptation to pass judgement on The Great Eleven's doctrines as "absurdities," the Supreme Court ultimately came to a strong statement of religious liberty and the principle that judges were forbidden to investigate whether Blackburn was really talking with angels and receiving revelations.

> Any legislative attempt to limit or regulate persons in their claims to the possession of exceptional spiritual power or knowledge would be rejected as a dangerous invasion of the state into the realm of religious freedom and privilege, which, from the beginning of our government, has been guarded by constitutional barriers. The framers of our criminal statutes had in mind material affairs and not spiritual matters nor the punishment of persons who claim or represent themselves, by divine favor, to be endowed with supernatural power, unless the intent to defraud is discernible in the pretense as to the possession of supernatural powers. This power in the instant case, according to the prosecution's evidence, was claimed by defendant to be derived from God agreeable with His written word as recorded in Holy Scripture. That book is an > open record and all who will may solve for themselves the extent or degree of divine power that mortals may hope to attain. Each person is at liberty to interpret it for himself (Supreme Court of California 1931, 5–6).

As for the alleged homicides, further investigations failed to find any evidence and, although vilified in the media, Blackburn was not arrested or prosecuted again until her death in 1951. People v. Blackburn appears thus as an early decision where claims by apostate ex-members (i.e., those former members of a religious group who have become it militant opponents: see Introvigne 2022a, 2022b), hints that something that decades later will be called "brainwashing" was at work, and sensational claims by the media were treated with a healthy skepticism by the Supreme Court of California. Its Justices reiterated the principle that professing and teaching unpopular beliefs is not a crime.

As the Court of Appeal had already stated,

> It matters not how absurd the faith of the defendant and her followers may seem to be, if in good faith she believed in the cult or creed upon which she was founding this new society, and in the truth of the said representations. Defendant had the same right to organize a society based upon that faith, that her followers had to join with her in creating the society and establishing the community, provided only that they did not conspire together for some purpose prohibited by law. And if for the purposes of such society they chose to invest their money, that was no crime against the state (District Court of Appeal of California, Second District, Division One 1931, 5).

Both in 1931 and in 1942, the media could have applied these lessons in religious tolerance to the Jehovah's Witnesses—not because the two groups were similar (they weren't) but because the principle of religious freedom is universal. Instead, they maliciously used The Great Eleven to imply that the Jehovah's Witnesses too were a "cult," and that the claims about the return of the Princes were not less absurd that Blackburn's angelic revelations.

The media coverage of Beth Sarim demonstrates that how the prejudice against groups labeled as "cults" (see Introvigne 2022c) operates is both old and repetitious. Groups that have very little in common with each other—such as the small, secretive Great Eleven, which was hardly capable of publishing anything about its beliefs, and the very public two-million-member organization of the Jehovah's Witnesses, which by the 1940s had published a whole library of texts expounding its interpretation of the Bible—are lumped together under the same derogatory label of "cults." The sins, real or otherwise, of one group, preferably the most extreme and bizarre, are extended to all the others. One egregious example is an article in the Washington Herald, which uses The Great Eleven as evidence that "Judge Rutherford's plan [for Beth Sarim] is one of many evidences of strange cult worship in California" (Washington Herald 1930).

But were the beliefs of the Jehovah's Witnesses about the Princes "absurdities" of the type the Supreme Court of California found in The Great Eleven? The question can only be answered by putting the matter in a broader context.

But What About the Princes?

"Fiducia christianorum resurrectio mortuorum; illam credentes, sumus" (The resurrection of the dead is Christians' confidence. By believing it we are what we claim to be: Tertullian 2016, 5). These words by early Christian apologist Tertullian (155–220) can hardly be clearer. He believed that to be Christian, one has to believe in the resurrection of the dead.

The quote from Tertullian is still included today in the normative statement of the Roman Catholic faith, the Catechism of the Catholic Church, which acknowledges that "Belief in the resurrection of the dead has been an essential element of the Christian faith from its beginnings" (Catechism of the Catholic Church 1992, no. 991). The same Catechism proclaims that all "those who have done good" will rise with their bodies (Catechism of the Catholic Church 1992, no. 998). Obviously, they will include the patriarchs, kings, and prophets of the Old Testament who also "have done good."

However, the Roman Catholic Church today acknowledges that how and when this resurrection will happen is the subject matter of different theological theories and interpretations. It teaches that the resurrection of the flesh will surely happen, but its "'how' exceeds our imagination and understanding" (Catechism of the Catholic Church 1992, no. 1000). Based on these warnings, many contemporary Catholic theologians prefer not to speculate on these matters, and the same happens in most liberal Protestant churches. Eschatology is rarely preached today in Roman Catholic and many mainline Protestant congregations. As opposite to this, most Evangelical and conservative Protestants maintain a vivid interest for matters such as the Millennium and the resurrection of the flesh, although they offer very different interpretations (Wessinger 2016).

Several observers of the Jehovah's Witnesses, including the undersigned, believe that a main reason of their success is precisely that they offer a millennial hope increasingly difficult to find in mainline Christian churches. The fact that eschatology is regarded as the most difficult and uncertain part of theology has led to its virtual disappearance from the daily preaching and public discourse of many Christian congregations. This does not mean, however, that ordinary Christians have lost interested in these crucial matters. Organizations that offer clear answers and hope such as the Jehovah's Witnesses are thus successful (Introvigne 2015).

They are, however, not without opponents. Liberal Christians claim that pretending to know the truth about our eschatological future is pretentious and arrogant. Conservatives are not against raising questions about eschatology but find the answers offered by the Jehovah's Witnesses at odds with their standard premillennialism, and thus heretical. The very series of booklets that give to fundamentalism its name, The Fundamentals, included a detailed rebuttal of the "vicious system" of the Watch Tower by Presbyterian theologian and former missionary to Italy William Gallogly Moorehead (1836–1914: Moorehead 1910, 123).

When the Beth Sarim discussion occurred, there were also political undertones, which would later reappear in different times and forms. A militant right saw the Jehovah's Witnesses as unpatriotic and perhaps Communist, while a certain left saw them as arch-conservatives and perhaps Fascist (Knox 2018). Today, there is a certain rhetoric about "apocalyptic cults," which resorts, as mentioned earlier, to examples of criminal or suicidal groups, then lumps them together with peaceful and law-abiding organizations (Wessinger 2000). And today of course this strategy of grouping indiscriminately different organizations and phenomena as if they belonged to the same category of "cults" compares Christian millennialism with QAnon and other conspiracy theories, radical supporters of Donald Trump, and anti-vaccination campaigns during the COVID-19 crisis (see Introvigne 2022b).

When all this unnecessary dust settles, we discover that the belief in the resurrection of the flesh, which includes the bodily resurrection of those who "did good" both before and after Jesus, was unanimous in the early Christian church, and is still official Roman Catholic doctrine (although rarely preached). Views of a literal Millennium are opposed by liberal denominations, but widely shared, although differently interpreted, within the vast Evangelical world.

This is not to say that there was nothing peculiar in the beliefs of the Jehovah's Witnesses in the 1930s and 1940s. They believed then that those who had faithfully served God in ancient times would be resurrected before the end of this system of things and would serve as "princes throughout the land," as the New International Version translates Psalms 45:16. In the 1950s, "further study of the Scripture indicated that those earthly forefathers of Jesus Christ would be resurrected after Armageddon" (Jehovah's Witnesses—Proclaimers of God's Kingdom 1993, 76).

The matter had always been regarded as speculative, as demonstrated by this passage in The Watch Tower of January 15, 1925:

> While it is true that the ancient worthies are to be children of the New Covenant, yet there could be no good reason to say that God could not awaken them out of death if he wished to do so before the New Covenant is made. The fact that they are awakened out of death does not put them on trial.
>
> Our opinion is that the ancient worthies will not be resurrected until every member of the Church is gone. We have reached that conclusion by a process of analysis, however, not by some Scriptural statement. We should not arbitrarily say that God will not resurrect them or that he will resurrect them; for we do not know. That he could do it, of course must be admitted. That his awakening them out of death would not be inconsistent with any part of his plan, seems likewise well taken, but it does not seem probable that he will do so ("Questions and Answers" 1925, 23).

The belief that the Princes will be the first to be resurrected, before Armageddon, and serve as the Lord's representatives on earth developed gradually and was then abandoned or corrected. Beth Sarim was a living testimony to a specific phase of the theological development of the Jehovah's Witnesses, based on an interpretation the organization no longer maintains today.

In 1947, Nathan Knorr, as Rutherford's successor as president of the Watch Tower Society, had already announced, before the doctrinal interpretation was revised, that Beth Sarim would be > disposed of, either by outright sale or by rent, because it had fully served its purpose and was now only serving as a monument quite expensive to keep; our faith in the return of the men of old time whom the King Christ Jesus will made princes in ALL the earth (not merely in California) is based, not upon that house Beth-Sarim but upon God's Word of promise ("'All Nations Expansion' Assembly" 1947, 382).

In 1948, Beth Sarim was sold to a San Diego physician, Franklyn Davis Hankins (1905–1995), who in turn sold it in 1953 to Gilbert Aubrey Davidson (1868–1957), a banker and former president of the local Chamber of Commerce, of the Panama-California Exposition (Gaebel 1915), and of the San Diego Museum, who was an important figure in the growth of the city of San Diego. Davidson's heirs sold the house in 1959 to another physician and retired U.S. Army Captain, Clarence M. Ching (1908–1994) (Flanigan 2001, 6).

From another point of view, however, the spirit of Beth Sarim faithfully represented what the Jehovah's Witnesses are all about. One detail is that through the unsuccessful battle to bury Rutherford there the Jehovah's Witnesses were able to build a coalition of citizens concerned with religious liberty and, as their 1943 yearbook proclaimed, "a real witness was given in this territory for a period of months" (1943 Yearbook of Jehovah's Witnesses 1942, 34). Witnessing for religious liberty will continue to be part and parcel of the Jehovah's Witnesses' testimony up to the present day.

Perhaps more importantly, as Rutherford's book Salvation stated in 1939, > the purpose of acquiring that property [Beth Sarim] and building the house was that there might be some tangible proof that there are those on earth today who fully believe God and Christ Jesus and in his kingdom (Rutherford 1939, 311), as well as in a literal Millennium and in the resurrection of the flesh. By the 1930s, many Christian denominations were already reluctant to preach about eschatology, as if it were something incompatible with modern science and easily derided as superstition. Beth Sarim's paradox was that it fiercely proclaimed by its very controversial existence that some were not shy in cultivating and preaching a millennial hope, which just as the faith in Jesus remained "a stumbling block to Jews and foolishness to Gentiles" (1 Corinthians 1:23, New International Version).

The War in Ukraine and Russian Conspiracy Theories About the Jehovah's Witnesses

ABSTRACT: After the war in Ukraine, sensational revelations were spread by Russian anti-cultists presenting the Jehovah's Witnesses as American or Ukrainian agents preparing riots and even a coup against the Putin regime in Russia. These theories may look like the ramblings of lunatics. However, the lunatics are not isolated. They are supported by mainline Russian media and by an international anti-cult network abroad. While obviously false and inherently ridiculous, such conspiracy theories should be understood within the larger framework of Russian campaigns to justify the war in Ukraine and international anti-cult efforts targeting the Jehovah's Witnesses.

KEYWORDS: Jehovah's Witnesses, Jehovah's Witnesses in Russia, Conspiracy Theories About the War in Ukraine, Alexander Korelov, FECRIS, Anti-Cult Movements in Russia.

The Sensational Revelations of Alexander Korelov

In 2022, Alexander Korelov, the official lawyer for the Russian national anti-cult organization RATsIRS, which at that time was affiliated with the European anti-cult federation FECRIS ("Информационно-консультационный центр по вопросам сектантства" 2023), launched a sensational revelation on Russian media. He claimed that, after it was "liquidated" and banned in Russia in 2017, > the extremist cult of the Jehovah's Witnesses did not cease to operate. As we expected, they went underground, holding their meetings in safe houses, receiving instructions from the American center through instant messengers, blogs, and so on. But lately the picture has changed. From the leading centers located in the United States, instructions are sent to the illegal divisions of the cult in our country through "closed" channels, which indicate an attempt by the cult to organize a coup d'état in Russia like the Maidan > in the now former Ukraine ("Свидетели Иеговы готовят государственный переворот" 2022).

A coup against Putin, Korelov said, > is precisely what is being intensively prepared in the milieu of cults. Now we have absolutely certain data that Jehovah's Witnesses are turning from an extremist organization into a terrorist one. We warned about this already several years ago ("Свидетели Иеговы готовят государственный переворот" 2022).

Perhaps overlooking the fact that the Jehovah's Witnesses moved their headquarters from Brooklyn to Warwick in 2016–2017, Korelov insists that > the leaders from the Brooklyn center are turning Russian adherents into cannon fodder to achieve their goals. Just like in Ukraine, the United States is fighting with the hands of Ukrainians and mercenaries, so in Russia they are ready to waste biomaterial they do not need in the form of adherents of this cult. The American leadership of Jehovah's Witnesses is made of people unencumbered by moral standards. They are ready for anything. At the same time, ideological support is being launched among American-sponsored religious scholars, who have already started talking about the need for a "rehabilitation" of the Jehovah's Witnesses ("Свидетели Иеговы готовят государственный переворот" 2022).

The Jehovah's Witnesses were accused of operating in Russia

> "sleeping" extremist cells under the leadership of their center in the United States. And the fact that the Brooklyn [again] center of this cult is under the complete control of the American secret services is no longer a secret ("Свидетели Иеговы готовят государственный переворот" 2022).

After he was ridiculed internationally and received some criticism even domestically, Korelov granted an interview to the national magazine Izvestia claiming that he had now found the smoking gun. He stated that in the remote Yamalo-Nenets Autonomous Okrug on the Arctic Circle (the same place where FECRIS dignitaries gathered for a conference with Russian anti-cultists in 2017: European Federation for Freedom of Belief 2017), mysterious men were knocking at the doors of the residents and asking, "Where can I find the answer to the question about happiness?" (Petrov 2022a).

According to Korelov the mysterious "philosophers" were Jehovah's Witnesses, who had "received instructions from the center through closed communication channels" (Petrov 2022a).

The men did not identify themselves as Jehovah's Witnesses. However, Korelov said, > Simply put, Jehovah's Witnesses are required to resume walking around the entrances without directly naming their organization. Why is this being done? First, in order to resume their activities. And secondly, they are given operative instructions on organizing protests, including against the conduct of the Special Military Operation. That is, our fears about the danger of this organization are confirmed. The structure was essentially in a dormant mode, and today it is starting to show activity. According to my information, members of Jehovah's Witnesses are asked whether they are ready for active protests, including physical resistance to representatives of law enforcement agencies (Petrov 2022a).

Even the Izvestia journalist objected that there are not enough Jehovah's Witnesses in Russia to organize mass protests and overthrow the government. They are more than many believe, answered Korelov, and they will not act alone:

> If we add to this [the number of the Jehovah's Witnesses] that other cults, including the neo-Pentecostals and the Scientologists, will be involved in the protests, then we get a fairly significant number of people (Petrov 2022a).

enough to create serious trouble.

Korelov's theory may identify him as a madman, but he is not an isolated madman. Several media and the main anti-cult websites in Russia reprinted his interviews (see e.g. Petrov 2022b). Korelov had even been invited in 2017 to speak at a main FECRIS event in the Belgian Parliament, although recently he became such an embarrassment that FECRIS manipulated the program of the conference as it appears in its website by retroactively eliminating Korelov's name from the list of speakers (Introvigne 2023).

An International Anti-Cult Network

The theory that the Jehovah's Witnesses are preparing an anti-Putin coup is somewhat extreme. However, other items of Russian propaganda about the Jehovah's Witnesses are taken seriously internationally and spread through the anti-cult network. This emphasizes the growing and dangerous influence of an international anti-cult movement. Their subtle collusion with media and politics allows not only an unstoppable spread of lies, hatred, and intolerance against those they label as members of "cults" but also incites mentally unstable people to act.

On March 9, 2023, a man entered a Kingdom Hall of the Jehovah's Witnesses in Hamburg, Germany, and opened fire with a semi-automatic gun, killing seven members of the congregation and an unborn child. When the police arrived and were about to arrest him, he shot himself. While the real political problem was why a man who had exhibited obvious symptoms of mental disease had been legally allowed to buy and carry a deadly weapon, anti-cultists focused on the fact that the assassin was an ex-member of the Jehovah's Witnesses. They speculated that his mind has probably been destabilized either by his permanence in a "cult" or by the fact that those who leave the Jehovah's Witnesses are ostracized or "shunned" by their former co-religionists, who are counseled not to associate with ex-members. Several German and international media took the anti-cultists seriously, and started suggesting that the Jehovah's Witnesses of Hamburg were somewhat responsible for what had happened to them (see e.g. Dahlinger 2023; Schaaf 2023; Zanni 2023).

What was, in fact, missing in the media coverage of the Hamburg shooting was the possibility that the criminal had been excited by the anti-cult propaganda. The Hamburg shooter, just by being German, was obviously exposed to the media slander against "cults" and the Jehovah's Witnesses prevailing in his country, and he lived in a city, Hamburg, where some of these campaigns have been officially sponsored by the local government (Respinti 2020). Yet, the negative role of media is so strong that they were able to turn the blame from perpetrator to victims.

Anti-cult movements in various countries, which widely differ politically, ideologically, and economically, are collaborating so closely and crafting together their poisonous messages against non-majority religions. What do you think today may unite Russia, China, France, Germany and Japan? The right answer is, their joint fight against the so-called "cults." They combat them for very different reasons, but at the end of the day they craft the messages against the so-called "cults" in a similar manner. Consequently, through compliant media, these messages are effortlessly crossing all borders (Berzano et al. 2022a, 2022b). It is amazing to see, for instance, how once a negative message against the Jehovah's Witnesses started being spread in Russia, it was exported to democratic countries such as Germany, Japan, and even the United Kingdom.

When Russia in 2017 named the Jehovah's Witnesses an extremist group, liquidated their organization, and confiscated their properties, it seemed something so illogical that I believed it will stop at the borders of Russia and perhaps some satellite states. On the contrary, more and more governments and media around the world are accepting unfounded accusations against the Jehovah's Witnesses. This propaganda may even excite feeble minds and result in deadly attacks.

I could easily understand why a state-sponsored campaign was created and struck the Jehovah's Witnesses in Russia. Why the same arguments used in Russia against the Jehovah's Witnesses are gaining momentum in Europe and beyond, was totally eluding me. What does this connection mean?

As I have argued elsewhere, Russia is and was so much against religious organizations such as the Jehovah's Witnesses because it wants to protect the monopoly of the Russian Orthodox Church in a country where there is a very close connection between the state and the church. Since the time of Czar Peter the Great (1672–1725), the Russian Orthodox Church was part and parcel of the state apparatus. Its role was twofold. It was supposed to spread a message favorable to the state's policies to the Russian masses, and at the same time to collect information about the people's mood and report it to the powers that be. This role never changed (Šorytė 2020, 2023).

When President Putin introduced the notion of "spiritual security," he confirmed once again that only the Russian Orthodox Church is and can be the religious guardian of the Russian soul. In addition to the Russian Orthodox Church, ethnic religions are tolerated if they cater to ethnic minorities such as Muslims in Chechnya or Buddhists in the East, teach them to support the regime and obediently fight and die in its wars, and do not try to convert Orthodox believers. Any other religion or spiritual movement is a deviation from the Russian identity and should be contained and fought. The first in the row targeted by this fight, much before the war in Ukraine started, have been the Jehovah's Witnesses, because their headquarters are in the United States, which is perceived as the largest enemy of Russia. Many others followed suit.

Changes After the War in Ukraine

In other lectures and articles, I repeatedly discussed these aspects, trying to explain the Russian mentality and fears (Šorytė 2020, 2023). But after the aggression against Ukraine started, many things inside Russia changed. This took Western and international anti-cultists by surprise, as evidenced by the crisis in the FECRIS, the European umbrella organization of anti-cult movements. Russian organizations and activists had a prominent role in the FECRIS, but they became an embarrassment after they started supporting Putin's war in Ukraine. FECRIS took some cosmetic measures to hide its Russian connections but waited until March 2023 to exclude the Russian branches from its affiliated organizations ("Информационно-консультационный центр по вопросам сектантства" 2023). However FECRIS did not change its ideological attitude, which remains like Russia's and sometimes relies on propaganda created in Russia.

The real reason of the Russian aggression against Ukraine is cynically simple. Russia wants to bring back Ukraine under the Russian control, thus putting in place one piece of its big puzzle of the reconstruction of the former Soviet Union. It is as simple at that. This truth, however, is hidden by propaganda under arguments that are continuously changing and try to supply an ethical and moral justification for what is in fact just brutal aggression.

Different arguments target different audiences. The world is full of anti-Americans, and they are told that Ukrainians are just fighting a proxy war on behalf of the United States, whose aim is to contain and destroy Russia. When addressing right-wing audiences, the Russian propaganda would insist that it is fighting the corrupt West and defending family values against a LGBT "invasion" that has reached Ukraine and may enter Russia itself. But when talking to left-wing interlocutors, the same propaganda would downplay the LGBT argument and argue that a good number of Ukrainians, including their leading politicians, are "Nazis," and Russia is really fighting a resurgence of Nazism in Europe. When reaching pious Christian churchgoers, Russia would say that it is fighting "Satanism" and that there are many "Satanists" in Ukraine, although the word "Satanism" should be decoded and sometimes is just a metaphor for LGBT rights. And when talking to anti-cultists, they would say that the U.S. and Ukraine use "cults" as a weapon against Russia.

The Russian anti-cult movement, which in the last thirty years has been alternatively dismissed as marginal or unleashed by the authorities, depending on what was more convenient in a particular political situation, contributes the argument that "cults," since the Maidan revolution of 2014 and perhaps even earlier, dominate the Ukrainian political life, are the American tool of choice to excite anti-Russian feelings in Ukraine (Berzano et al. 2022b), and are infiltrated into the Russian territory to create riots and commit acts of sabotage. As usual, the Jehovah's Witnesses are presented as the main culprits.

The question remains, though, whether these stories are created for domestic Russian consumption or for international propaganda. My answer is that they serve both purposes. Domestically, they reinforce an old Russian narrative that has constantly been mobilized in times of war, that Russian is under siege by enemies who use as tools the Western idea of democracy, immorality, and "bad" religion, meaning religions perceived as being in competition with the Russian Orthodox Church.

At the same time, Russia desperately needs friends in the West that would put pressure on their governments and ask them to stop supporting Ukraine. For this purpose, anti-cultists and opponents of the Jehovah's Witnesses are as good as anybody else.

Russian anti-cultists are less important in Russia than they believe themselves to be. However, they are supported and financed by the Kremlin and the Russian Orthodox Church because they create sympathy for Russia, and antipathy for the allegedly "cult-friendly" Ukraine. They spread these theories in the international anti-cult network, which has close ties with the government in France, with important politicians in Germany, Japan, and other countries, and with media everywhere.

The Russian Orthodox Church itself is part of this propaganda machine both domestically and internationally. For instance, it tries to sell the Russian version of what is happening in Ukraine, through its ecumenical connections, to the World Council of Churches and even to the Vatican and the Pope, with some success.

Originally, the Jehovah's Witnesses were targeted and finally "liquidated" in Russia because the Russian Orthodox Church perceived them as successful competitors and perhaps because somebody had an interest in acquiring their valuable real estate properties. After the war started, they became part of a propaganda narrative that claims that Russia is not the aggressor but is defending itself against the aggression of forces that threaten its "spiritual security" and want to overthrow its government, including LGBT activists, Nazis, Satanists—and the Jehovah's Witnesses.

Capítulo Parágrafos

Capítulo Parágrafos

Introdução

1. No tempo dos apóstolos, eles e outros anciãos visitavam no momento certo as congregações cristãs como superintendentes viajantes. A visita de Paulo e Barnabé às congregações na Ásia Menor 'fortaleceu os discípulos e os encorajou a permanecer na fé'. (Atos 14:21-23) O corpo governante em Jerusalém enviou Judas e Silas a Antioquia, onde eles "encorajaram os irmãos com muitos discursos e os fortaleceram". — Atos 15:32.

2. Os anciãos que visitavam as congregações no tempo dos apóstolos as ajudavam a funcionar de modo organizado e harmonioso debaixo de seu cabeça, Jesus Cristo. (Efé. 4:15, 16) Tito foi enviado a Creta para 'corrigir as coisas que precisavam ser endireitadas e fazer designações de anciãos em cada cidade'. Por ensinarem, encorajarem e repreenderem usando a Palavra de Deus, Tito e outros anciãos designados de forma teocrática podiam ajudar os irmãos a ser "sãos na fé". (Tito 1:5-13) Na sua carta à congregação em Éfeso, o apóstolo Paulo destacou que todos os superintendentes precisavam servir debaixo da liderança de Cristo "para o reajustamento dos santos, para a obra ministerial, para edificar o corpo do Cristo". (Efé. 4:8, 11-13) Uns quatro ou cinco anos antes, quando se reuniu com os anciãos de Éfeso, Paulo os incentivou amorosamente a prestarem atenção ao rebanho de Deus a seus cuidados, seguindo o exemplo zeloso que ele deu em pregar o Reino e em dar ajuda aos necessitados. — Atos 20:17-38.

3. Assim como na época dos apóstolos, as visitas dos superintendentes de circuito hoje são uma bênção para as congregações. O zelo que mostram na obra de evangelização, sua preocupação amorosa com o bem-estar espiritual do rebanho e a ajuda prática que dão aos irmãos vai ajudar todos a serem fortes na fé nestes últimos dias críticos.

4. O documento Orientações para Superintendentes de Circuito foi preparado para ajudar os superintendentes de circuito a cumprir sua designação. Procurou-se evitar a duplicação de informações já fornecidas a todos os anciãos, a menos que estejam relacionadas diretamente com o serviço dos superintendentes de circuito. Assim, se tiverem dúvidas sobre assuntos congregacionais, consultem primeiro o livro Pastoreiem, o Adendo do Pastoreiem ou outras publicações disponíveis aos anciãos. Se precisarem de mais orientações, consultem então este documento. O documento Orientações para Superintendentes de Circuito é fornecido para cada superintendente de circuito efetivo e superintendente de circuito substituto. Este documento não deve ser mostrado a outros. Quando um superintendente de circuito efetivo ou um superintendente de circuito substituto deixa de servir nessa função, ele deve destruir seu exemplar impresso deste documento e apagar todas as cópias eletrônicas que tiver.

CAPÍTULO UM

Acomodações

1. Ao visitar algumas congregações, pode ser conveniente que o superintendente de circuito fique hospedado nas casas dos irmãos. Deve-se tomar cuidado para evitar situações em que o superintendente de circuito ou sua esposa ficaria sozinho em casa com uma pessoa do sexo oposto. O superintendente de circuito deve se sentir à vontade para falar com o coordenador do corpo de anciãos, antes de iniciar a visita, sobre qualquer preocupação com sua hospedagem. Se a congregação não tiver condições de providenciar uma hospedagem adequada, o superintendente de circuito deve considerar outras opções com o corpo de anciãos. Isso pode incluir alugar acomodações adequadas para a semana ou reservar um quarto de hotel. Se a congregação não puder cobrir as despesas relacionadas a essas opções, o superintendente de circuito deve consultar o Departamento de Serviço antes da visita. — sfl 10:1-4.

2. Não é correto que o superintendente de circuito sugira aos anciãos do circuito que providenciem um apartamento para ele. Mas, se um apartamento for providenciado, o superintendente de circuito deve mostrar gratidão, não pedindo coisas desnecessárias. Se as congregações não tiverem condições de fornecer acomodações adequadas, o superintendente de circuito deve entrar em contato com o Departamento de Serviço para receber orientações.

3. Se a distância entre as congregações for relativamente grande, talvez não seja prático retornar ao apartamento toda noite. Nesses casos, seria melhor que o superintendente de circuito ficasse hospedado num local adequado perto da congregação visitada, se houver um disponível, do que viajar uma grande distância todo dia para ir e voltar.

4. Se um superintendente de circuito precisar viajar uma grande distância entre congregações ou circuitos, talvez deseje um lugar para passar a noite e depois continuar viagem. Ou pode ser que deseje ficar num lugar tranquilo por alguns dias. Nesses casos, talvez seja possível usar um apartamento num Salão de Assembleias. Se ele decidir pedir hospedagem num Salão de Assembleias, deve fazer isso com a maior antecedência possível. — 1 Cor. 10:24.

5. Os superintendentes de circuito que usam um apartamento fornecido pelo circuito devem cuidar bem dele, fazendo sua parte para mantê-lo limpo e em bom estado. Não se deve manter nenhum animal de estimação no apartamento. Antes de o superintendente de circuito se mudar para uma nova designação, o apartamento deve ser deixado completamente limpo. Isso mostra consideração amorosa para com o próximo superintendente de circuito que vai usar o apartamento.

6. Os superintendentes de circuito devem consultar o Departamento de Serviço antes de adquirir um trailer ou motor home para usar ao visitar as congregações. Se for permitido usar um trailer, todas as despesas relacionadas com o seguro, a manutenção e o deslocamento do trailer são por conta da pessoa. Não é responsabilidade da congregação ou do circuito ajudar a cobrir os gastos com o trailer. Não se devem usar os fundos da congregação ou do circuito para essa finalidade.

Capítulo Dois

Designações

1. Em geral, os superintendentes de circuito são transferidos de um circuito para outro a cada três anos. Essa mudança é boa em diversos sentidos, tanto para o superintendente de circuito como para as congregações que ele visita. Quando um novo superintendente de circuito é designado para servir num circuito, o superintendente de circuito atual informa todas as congregações do circuito por meio do formulário Aviso de Mudança no Circuito (S-307).

2. O superintendente de circuito e sua esposa não precisam usar seu período de ausência para se mudar para uma nova designação. Betel determina quanto tempo é necessário para fazer a mudança, conforme as circunstâncias.

3. Não é possível fazer designações apenas com base na conveniência pessoal, nem é correto que os superintendentes de circuito procurem planejar entre si que circuitos acham que seriam melhores para eles. Aceitar lealmente as designações promove a ordem e a paz na organização.

4. Por outro lado, um superintendente de circuito talvez ache necessário fazer um pedido específico por causa de um problema grave de saúde ou de responsabilidades para com membros da família imediata — situações que afetam diretamente a sua permanência no serviço de circuito. Nesses casos, Betel pode dar atenção a esse pedido. Alguns talvez precisem deixar o serviço de circuito para cuidar desses assuntos, mas em muitos casos é possível atender às necessidades de irmãos que são eficientes no serviço de circuito e que estão servindo nessa modalidade por muitos anos — talvez 20, 30 ou mais anos.

5. Se um superintendente de circuito ficar noivo e desejar permanecer no serviço de circuito, ele deve informar imediatamente o Departamento de Serviço. Betel vai determinar então se ele poderá continuar servindo como superintendente de circuito depois de se casar.

6. Betel está muito interessado no bem-estar de todos os superintendentes de circuito. Por esse motivo, depois de completarem 70 anos de idade, os superintendentes de circuito deixam de servir nessa modalidade em 1.° de setembro, mesmo que não tenham completado o período de três anos na designação de circuito atual.

Capítulo Três

Assembleias de circuito

1. Assim que as datas da assembleia de circuito forem confirmadas, o superintendente de circuito deve informar as congregações sobre as datas e os locais usando o formulário Aviso sobre as Próximas Assembleias de Circuito (S-317). — Veja instruções detalhadas sobre contratar locais, confirmar datas e cancelar a assembleia no documento Orientações para a Organização de Assembleias (S-330).

2. Dois ou três meses antes de cada assembleia, o superintendente de circuito deve lembrar aos anciãos as orientações do livro Pastoreiem, capítulo 20, parágrafo 16. — Veja 3:14.

3. Os circuitos têm a opção de iniciar o programa da manhã no horário indicado para a sessão da tarde e apresentar o programa da tarde no início da noite, se for mais conveniente para a maioria.

4. Os superintendentes de circuito e suas esposas são incentivados a ficar na assistência durante as sessões das assembleias de circuito. Reservar tempo para se associar com os irmãos e as irmãs antes e depois das sessões é encorajador para todos.

5. Veja no documento Orientações para a Organização de Assembleias (S-330) instruções detalhadas sobre interpretação simultânea em assembleias de circuito, sobre assembleias de circuito em língua estrangeira e sobre métodos alternativos para assistir a assembleias de circuito.

ORADORES E OUTROS PARTICIPANTES

6. Depois de receber os esboços, o superintendente de circuito deve escolher com oração anciãos exemplares que sejam qualificados para ensinar assistências grandes. Assim que possível, ele deve enviar os esboços correspondentes a cada orador em todos os formatos disponíveis, para que eles possam se preparar e apresentar suas partes de modo animador, motivador e prático. O superintendente de circuito também deve enviar para os oradores os documentos Lembretes aos Designados para Fazer Discursos com Esboço em Assembleias ou Congressos (CO-90), Lembretes aos Designados para Participar de Séries de Discursos em Assembleias ou Congressos (CO-91) e Lembretes para os Oradores Quando Câmeras de Vídeo Forem Usadas (CO-94), se for o caso. O orador designado para dar o último discurso deve fazer a oração final. Se o superintendente de circuito ou o representante da filial não for fluente no idioma do programa, a oração dele poderá ser interpretada, se ele concordar. Mas, se ele preferir, um irmão fluente no idioma do programa pode fazer a oração final.

7. Quando o superintendente de circuito identifica um ancião com potencial (por meio das informações da classificação de oradores que a congregação envia ou por pessoalmente observá-lo proferindo um discurso na congregação), ele poderá designar para ele uma parte numa assembleia. Isso talvez limite o número de designações de oradores mais experientes, mas pode ajudar o superintendente de circuito a fazer a devida avaliação e ver se a quantidade de irmãos qualificados registrados em Betel como oradores de congresso pode ser aumentada. — Veja 5:20.

8. O superintendente de circuito é responsável por escolher os presidentes de sessão. Um irmão diferente pode ser usado em cada sessão. Os presidentes de sessão devem ser irmãos que tenham uma classificação excelente como oradores de congresso e que consigam fazer as introduções de modo natural e animado.

9. Os que forem convidados para participar em demonstrações e entrevistas devem levar uma vida exemplar como cristãos, e sua aparência não deve afetar negativamente o programa. Por exemplo, se um irmão for extremamente obeso, a ponto de chamar indevidamente a atenção caso participe no programa, será necessário bom critério ao decidir se ele receberá uma designação ou não, mesmo que esteja qualificado em outros sentidos.

10. O superintendente de circuito deve programar um ensaio de todas as demonstrações e entrevistas. Não é necessário que o superintendente de circuito ensaie o resumo da Sentinela, embora os participantes devam se apresentar com antecedência para o ensaio no dia da assembleia.

11. Se o circuito estiver dividido em partes e os publicadores morarem relativamente perto do local da assembleia, talvez seja possível usar o mesmo grupo de publicadores para as demonstrações e entrevistas em mais de um programa. Nesse caso, o tempo necessário para ensaios será menor.

DISCURSO DE BATISMO

12. O superintendente de circuito deve informar o ancião designado a fazer o discurso de batismo que, se não houver candidatos ao batismo presentes, não é preciso fazer as duas perguntas nem a oração mencionada no esboço. — Para instruções detalhadas sobre batismos nas assembleias de circuito, veja o documento Orientações para a Organização de Assembleias (S-330).

REUNIÃO ESPECIAL COM OS PIONEIROS

13. Na semana de uma das assembleias de circuito do ano, os superintendentes de circuito se reúnem com os pioneiros regulares, os pioneiros especiais e os missionários em campo, usando os esboços fornecidos por Betel (S-312). A esposa do superintendente de circuito deve estar presente nessa reunião. Mas os representantes da filial não assistirão a essa reunião. Pode-se usar o Salão de Assembleias ou um Salão do Reino bem localizado. Se for usado um Salão de Assembleias, os servos desse Salão de Assembleias podem assistir à reunião. Geralmente a reunião é realizada com todos os pioneiros do circuito na mesma ocasião. Mas, se isso não for prático, mais de uma reunião pode ser realizada. (Veja 3:14.) O superintendente de circuito deve ter bom senso ao tomar essa decisão, para não sobrecarregar financeiramente os pioneiros. Pode haver casos em que a distância impeça alguns pioneiros de uma ou mais congregações de assistir à reunião em seu circuito. Nesses casos, o superintendente de circuito deve entrar em contato com o Setor de Congressos e Assembleias, do Departamento de Serviço, pedindo permissão para que esses pioneiros assistam a uma gravação ou à transmissão da reunião, conforme as orientações sobre métodos alternativos para assistir a assembleias de circuito fornecidas no documento Orientações para a Organização de Assembleias (S-330).

14. O superintendente de circuito tem diversas opções para decidir em que assembleia de circuito no ano e em que dia da semana a reunião será realizada. Se a assembleia for no sábado, talvez seja prático realizar a reunião especial na sexta ou no domingo. Se a assembleia for no domingo, a reunião pode ser realizada na manhã ou na tarde da sexta ou do sábado, antes da assembleia. Em outros casos, talvez seja melhor realizar a reunião dividindo o programa em duas noites durante a semana, antes da assembleia. A decisão deve levar em conta as circunstâncias da maioria dos que estarão presentes. Na medida do possível, a reunião deve ser realizada numa ocasião em que não atrapalhe significativamente o serviço dos pioneiros. Nessa reunião, não se deve servir nenhuma comida ou bebida. O superintendente de circuito deve orientar os anciãos a avisar os pioneiros sobre o local e a hora da reunião e passar para eles a lista de publicações necessárias. Mas não deve fornecer aos pioneiros um programa impresso, uma pauta ou esboço parcial da reunião. Se um pioneiro de outro circuito, ou de outra parte do circuito, pedir para assistir a essa reunião, não há objeção quanto a isso. Talvez ele tenha perdido sua reunião designada, ou a reunião em seu circuito ou em sua parte do circuito não foi realizada na língua nativa dele. O superintendente de circuito deve ter bom senso e ser razoável nesses casos. — Veja 3:17.

15. O superintendente de circuito deve designar com bastante antecedência as partes do programa que devem ser feitas por anciãos locais e enviar a cada orador o esboço correspondente. Devem-se usar pioneiros regulares, pioneiros especiais e missionários que são bons instrutores, se estiverem disponíveis. Um ancião pioneiro deve ser designado para a oração inicial, e o superintendente de circuito fará a oração final. Cada orador deve anunciar o próximo. Ao apresentar as informações, deve-se dar tempo suficiente para os pioneiros fazerem anotações, incluindo o título das partes apresentadas.

Essa orientação também deve ser transmitida aos oradores designados. Quando um esboço fala sobre participantes de entrevistas e demonstrações, usa pronomes masculinos. Mas, se o esboço não for específico, tanto irmãos como irmãs podem ser usados nas entrevistas e demonstrações.

16. O superintendente de circuito deve ensaiar todas as entrevistas e demonstrações. Anciãos que são pioneiros e bons instrutores nas congregações do circuito poderão receber mais de uma designação. Se não houver um número suficiente de anciãos habilitados que são pioneiros, pode-se usar as gravações do JW Stream ou um ancião habilitado com alguma experiência no serviço de pioneiro ou de missionário. As designações devem ser feitas com bastante antecedência para os participantes terem tempo para se preparar bem. Informem aos oradores designados que não é necessário usar todos os pontos das publicações de referência indicadas, mas apenas os que estiverem relacionados ao assunto do esboço. Destaquem que é importante todos cumprirem suas designações dentro do tempo de cada parte.

17 Se a reunião for realizada no circuito do pioneiro, mas o circuito não for da sua língua nativa, ou se um pioneiro não conseguir assistir à reunião, os anciãos da congregação do pioneiro podem disponibilizar para ele a gravação da reunião que está no JW Stream, se essa reunião estiver disponível na língua desejada.

CAPÍTULO QUATRO

Programação semanal

VISITA REGULAR A UMA CONGREGAÇÃO

1. Na mesma ocasião em que o superintendente de circuito envia seu itinerário ao Departamento de Serviço, as congregações devem ser avisadas de sua visita por meio do formulário Aviso da Visita do Superintendente de Circuito (S-302). (Uma exceção seria se, ao enviar seu itinerário, o superintendente de circuito pedir para usar um substituto. Nesse caso, ele deve esperar receber aprovação de Betel antes de informar as congregações sobre a visita.) De quatro a seis semanas antes da visita programada, o superintendente de circuito deve escrever à congregação, dando instruções mais detalhadas sobre os preparativos para a visita. Deve instruir os anciãos a ler a carta na próxima reunião do meio de semana. Nessa carta, o superintendente de circuito deve incentivar a congregação a participar o máximo possível no serviço de campo. Ele deve incentivar todos os que puderem a servir como pioneiros auxiliares durante a visita, lembrando a eles que poderão assistir à reunião com os pioneiros e escolher o requisito de 30 horas. (km 06/13 p. 2) Numa nota ao corpo de anciãos, ele deve lembrá-los de seguir as orientações do formulário Informações Necessárias para a Visita do Superintendente de Circuito (S-61). Isso vai garantir que as perguntas na página 2 sejam respondidas. (Veja 10:2-3.) Ele deve lembrá-los de que, um mês antes da visita, eles devem enviar o nome dos irmãos recomendados usando o formulário Recomendações para Designação de Anciãos e Servos Ministeriais (S-62). (Veja 17:3.) Deve pedir aos anciãos que o informem no começo da semana sobre quaisquer problemas sérios que estejam ocorrendo na congregação. O superintendente de circuito deve informar aos anciãos os cânticos que serão usados durante sua visita, mas é melhor não copiar a fraseologia usada para introduzir os discursos nos congressos. (Veja 4:11.) Não é necessário pedir que o corpo de anciãos ou que cada ancião forneça por escrito, antes da visita, suas observações sobre a condição espiritual da congregação.

2. A programação semanal do superintendente de circuito é cheia de atividades e muito recompensadora. Ele verifica os registros da congregação; participa no serviço de campo; faz visitas de pastoreio; assiste às reuniões da congregação; profere discursos; dirige reuniões com anciãos, servos ministeriais e pioneiros; e prepara um relatório para Betel. Também se esforça para encorajar e edificar os irmãos em suas conversas com eles. O superintendente de circuito pode dar um bom exemplo por seguir de perto a programação estabelecida. Ele não deve organizar reuniões especiais ou instituir programas inovadores não aprovados por Betel. — Veja 10:5; 19:7-8.

3. Na terça-feira às 13 horas, o superintendente de circuito deve fazer uma análise completa dos registros da congregação e também dos da Comissão de Manutenção do Salão do Reino, se houver uma. (Veja o apêndice C.) Essa análise pode ser feita na hospedagem do superintendente de circuito ou no Salão do Reino. Visto que as informações e os registros que devem ser providenciados pelo corpo de anciãos estão alistados no formulário Informações Necessárias para a Visita do Superintendente de Circuito (S-61), o superintendente de circuito não precisa enviar uma lista adicional de itens a serem analisados. Nem deve solicitar aos anciãos que gastem tempo reunindo dados e calculando médias. Em vez disso, o superintendente de circuito deve observar pessoalmente como os registros estão sendo cuidados, pois isso também permitirá que ele se familiarize com os nomes e as atividades dos publicadores. Se o superintendente de circuito concluir que a congregação precisa de anciãos, servos ministeriais ou pioneiros, ele talvez decida enviar o formulário Congregação Que Precisa de Ajuda (S-310) para o Departamento de Serviço.

4. Em algum momento antes da reunião de terça-feira à noite, o superintendente de circuito deve se reunir com o coordenador do corpo de anciãos ou outro ancião local para considerar quaisquer dúvidas que tenham surgido ao analisar os registros ou para pedir mais informações sobre os irmãos recomendados para ser designados anciãos ou servos ministeriais ou para ser removidos do cargo. O ancião local poderá responder perguntas sobre a condição espiritual da congregação e indicar quaisquer problemas sérios que necessitem de atenção. (Pro. 15:22) O ancião também pode informar como os publicadores estão se saindo nos vários aspectos do ministério e quem seria ajudado por uma visita de pastoreio. Quando os problemas são identificados logo no começo da semana, há mais tempo para fazer pesquisa, o que permite ao superintendente de circuito tratar desses assuntos nos discursos de serviço ou pelo menos fazer recomendações aos anciãos. — Veja 4:16.

5. Ao examinar os Registros de Publicador de Congregação (S-21), o superintendente de circuito procura observar quem está irregular ou inativo e conversa com os anciãos sobre o que se pode fazer para ajudar esses publicadores. Ele também fica atento aos que têm potencial para entrar no serviço de pioneiro auxiliar ou regular e procura oportunidades para dar incentivo pessoal a esses publicadores. Mostra interesse especial nos pioneiros regulares e na sua atividade. (Veja 16:2.) Ele leva em conta se alguns estão envolvidos em projetos da organização ou cuidam de responsabilidades adicionais, como os que ajudam na construção de Salões do Reino ou de Salões de Assembleias, os que servem em Comissões de Ligação com Hospitais, em Comissões de Ajuda Humanitária e em Comissões de Congresso, ou que ajudam no serviço de Betel como voluntários à distância. Todas essas designações são formas importantes de serviço sagrado que podem afetar o serviço dos publicadores no campo e a sua participação em outras atividades da congregação. Todos os irmãos que servem dessas maneiras merecem elogios, incentivo e apoio. (Veja 14:5-6.) O superintendente de circuito pode fazer comentários positivos sobre as atividades da congregação no discurso de serviço na terça-feira à noite. — Veja 18:2, 7.

6. O superintendente de circuito deve se certificar de que as congregações não tenham um estoque excessivo de publicações e de que os pedidos sejam compatíveis com o número de publicadores da congregação. Ao visitar a congregação coordenadora de idioma, ele deve analisar o formulário Movimento Mensal de Publicações (S-28). Também deve analisar a quantidade de itens de pedido especial em estoque. O objetivo é verificar se os irmãos responsáveis estão monitorando corretamente a quantidade de publicações que estão sendo pedidas pela congregação. Essa análise pode indicar se merecem elogios ou se precisam de lembretes amorosos. Ele deve verificar se o servo de publicações está recebendo treinamento dos anciãos para cumprir sua designação. O superintendente de circuito deve manter Betel informado sobre qualquer dificuldade, para que a congregação receba ajuda e encorajamento. Se houver um estoque excessivo de publicações, ele deve confirmar se os itens em excesso foram disponibilizados a outras congregações. Nenhuma publicação deve ser devolvida à filial sem uma orientação específica para isso.

7. O superintendente de circuito deve verificar como a congregação está cobrindo seu território designado. Se a congregação não estiver conseguindo cobrir seu território pelo menos uma vez por ano, será que as congregações próximas poderiam ajudar? Se não for possível que a congregação tenha ajuda para cobrir seu território e se o território não tiver sido trabalhado por dois anos, o superintendente de circuito deve informar ao Departamento de Serviço as partes do território da congregação que ele recomenda que devam ser designadas para as congregações próximas ou ser alistadas como território não designado.

8. O superintendente de circuito verifica as contas da congregação. — Veja o apêndice C.

9. Devem-se realizar reuniões para o serviço de campo de quarta a sexta-feira, de manhã e à tarde, e também no fim de semana, em horários determinados de comum acordo pelo superintendente de circuito e pelos anciãos, conforme as circunstâncias locais. Se as circunstâncias do superintendente de circuito permitir, ele pode apoiar outras programações para o campo que a congregação talvez tenha, como, por exemplo, o campo no começo da noite. Os superintendentes de circuito devem apoiar toda a programação de serviço de campo nos finais de semana. Eles devem se esforçar para acompanhar os publicadores que não puderam participar no serviço de campo no meio da semana. Se a congregação não realiza a reunião do fim de semana no domingo, o zelo pelo ministério e o amor aos irmãos motivarão o superintendente de circuito a usar seu tempo com a congregação de modo produtivo e benéfico. A programação de serviço de campo deve ser anunciada terça-feira à noite. — Veja 10:1-6.

10. Deve-se programar tempo para fazer duas ou três visitas de pastoreio na semana da visita. Essas visitas podem ser programadas conforme as circunstâncias locais, para horários em que os irmãos e as irmãs que serão visitados estejam disponíveis; podem ser de manhã, à tarde ou à noite. Em alguns casos, talvez seja possível fazer as visitas de pastoreio em horários em que a pregação de casa em casa é menos produtiva. — Veja 19:1-6.

11. Na terça-feira à noite, a reunião do meio de semana será realizada conforme a programação apresentada na Apostila da Reunião Vida e Ministério, com as exceções a seguir. Na seção Nossa Vida Cristã, o estudo bíblico de congregação será substituído por um discurso de serviço de 30 minutos feito pelo superintendente de circuito. (Veja 18:7.) Antes do discurso de serviço, o presidente da Reunião Vida e Ministério fará a recapitulação do programa apresentado, destacará pontos que serão considerados na semana seguinte, fará os anúncios necessários e então introduzirá o superintendente de circuito. Após seus comentários iniciais e o discurso de serviço, o superintendente de circuito concluirá a reunião com um cântico de sua escolha. Ele pode convidar outro irmão para fazer a oração final. A reunião inteira, incluindo os cânticos e as orações, terá a duração de uma hora e 45 minutos.

12. Na quarta-feira à noite ou sábado à tarde, o superintendente de circuito preside uma reunião de uma hora com os pioneiros regulares, pioneiros auxiliares, pioneiros especiais e missionários em campo. O dia e a hora dessa reunião podem ser ajustados de acordo com a situação dos pioneiros. Mas é melhor que ela não interfira na programação regular das reuniões para o serviço de campo. Não há objeção a que um pioneiro de outra congregação peça para assistir a essa reunião. Talvez ele tenha perdido a reunião na visita do superintendente do seu circuito, ou a reunião em sua congregação não foi realizada na língua nativa dele. O superintendente de circuito deve ter bom senso e ser razoável nesses casos. — Veja 16:3-5.

13. Uma reunião com os servos ministeriais e anciãos é realizada usando o esboço fornecido por Betel (S-337). É preferível que essa reunião seja feita sexta-feira à noite. Mas, se for necessário ajustar o horário por causa de circunstâncias locais, ela pode ser feita no sábado à tarde ou à noite. Os superintendentes de circuito não devem distribuir uma pauta ou esboço parcial baseado no esboço fornecido por Betel. (Naturalmente, o superintendente de circuito deve preparar uma pauta sobre quaisquer assuntos locais que serão considerados na reunião com os anciãos.) Todos os anciãos e servos ministeriais designados, incluindo os que se mudaram para a congregação com uma carta de recomendação favorável, devem ser convidados para assistir à parte da reunião que considera o esboço de Betel. Não há objeção a que um ancião ou servo ministerial de outra congregação peça para assistir a essa reunião. Talvez ele tenha perdido a reunião na visita do superintendente do seu circuito, ou a reunião em sua congregação não foi realizada na língua nativa dele. O superintendente de circuito deve ter bom senso e ser razoável nesses casos. A reunião com os anciãos e os servos ministeriais é iniciada com oração. Ao concluir a parte da reunião destinada aos anciãos e servos ministeriais, os servos ministeriais são dispensados. Não é necessário concluir essa parte da reunião com oração. Depois disso, o superintendente de circuito preside uma reunião com os anciãos. (Se não houver recomendações ou remoções e se os anciãos ou o superintendente de circuito não tiverem mais pontos a considerar, a reunião pode ser concluída depois que o esboço fornecido por Betel for considerado.) A reunião será então concluída com oração. O superintendente de circuito deve procurar dar bom exemplo, não desperdiçando tempo em pontos que já foram bem considerados. Em geral, a duração dessas reuniões não deve ultrapassar duas horas.

14. No dia em que a congregação costuma realizar a reunião do fim de semana, o presidente começará a reunião com o cântico escolhido pelo superintendente de circuito. Após a oração inicial, o presidente chamará o superintendente de circuito, que fará o discurso público de 30 minutos. Após o discurso, o presidente agradecerá brevemente o superintendente de circuito e convidará o dirigente do estudo da Sentinela. O dirigente convidará a assistência a cantar o cântico inicial indicado para o estudo daquela semana. Após um estudo da Sentinela abreviado de 30 minutos, o dirigente chamará o superintendente de circuito, que fará o discurso de serviço final de 30 minutos. (Veja 18:8.) O superintendente de circuito concluirá a reunião com um cântico de sua escolha e oração. A reunião inteira, incluindo os cânticos e as orações, terá a duração de uma hora e 45 minutos. O superintendente de circuito não deve pedir que a congregação mude o dia e o horário da reunião do fim de semana visando sua própria conveniência. — Veja 4:9.

15. Antes de terminar a visita à congregação no domingo, e numa hora que não interfira na programação do serviço de campo, o superintendente de circuito se reúne com a comissão de serviço da congregação para considerar o Relatório sobre a Visita do Superintendente de Circuito à Congregação (S-303). (Veja 5:14.) Apenas a comissão de serviço da congregação precisa estar presente, mas outros anciãos também podem estar presentes se desejarem. O superintendente de circuito poderá informar os anciãos disso, mas não deve ser dado nenhum anúncio à congregação sobre essa reunião. Às vezes, o superintendente de circuito pode achar necessário ou melhor que outros anciãos estejam presentes, principalmente se o relatório incluir assuntos complexos. Ele deve deixar uma cópia do S-303 com o coordenador do corpo de anciãos. Também deve lembrar o coordenador de pedir ao secretário que circule o relatório entre os anciãos e de considerá-lo com o corpo na reunião de anciãos realizada três meses depois da visita.

16. Dentro do possível, o superintendente de circuito não deve deixar problemas para Betel cuidar depois da visita. Se, depois de orar pedindo espírito santo e sabedoria, e de pesquisar a Bíblia e as publicações, o superintendente de circuito não estiver seguro sobre o que deve ser feito, ele pode ficar à vontade para consultar os irmãos no Departamento de Serviço ou um superintendente de circuito experiente. Se a programação apertada do superintendente de circuito não permitir que ele cuide do assunto ou conclua todos os detalhes, ele deve dizer para os anciãos qual é a orientação da organização, para que eles possam concluir o assunto depois. O superintendente de circuito deve tomar nota do assunto. Na sua próxima visita ou talvez na assembleia de circuito, ele pode verificar o que foi feito para se resolver o assunto. — Veja 4:4.

17. Se não for possível realizar uma reunião congregacional por causa de situações excepcionais, como um clima muito ruim, a reunião pode ser reprogramada para outra ocasião durante a semana, desde que o novo dia e horário não entre em conflito com uma reunião de outra congregação que usa o mesmo Salão do Reino.

18. Os superintendentes de circuito devem usar a semana da Celebração para servir como pioneiros numa congregação. — Veja 5:11.

SEMANA DA ASSEMBLEIA DE CIRCUITO

19. O superintendente de circuito e sua esposa devem usar essa semana para trabalhar como pioneiros junto com uma congregação. Nenhuma reunião será realizada com a congregação, além das reuniões para o serviço de campo. Além de acompanhar a congregação no serviço de campo, ele pode aproveitar o tempo para se preparar para futuras designações ou para cuidar de outros assuntos do circuito. A sexta-feira pode ser usada para receber o representante da filial ou para dirigir a reunião com todos os pioneiros regulares, pioneiros especiais e missionários em campo que servem no circuito. (Veja 3:14.) Se o superintendente de circuito presidir apenas uma assembleia no fim de semana, parte do outro dia daquele fim de semana pode ser usada para o serviço de campo, se for prático. A semana da assembleia de circuito é considerada uma semana de trabalho. Mas o superintendente de circuito tem a liberdade de usar o tempo como achar melhor. Ele e sua esposa também podem usar seus dias de ausência em qualquer ocasião durante essa semana.

CAPÍTULO CINCO

Correspondência e relatórios

1. Visto que os superintendentes de circuito observam em primeira mão o que acontece no campo, seus relatórios fornecem informações valiosas que ajudam Betel a se manter em dia com os assuntos que afetam a evangelização, o ensino e o pastoreio entre os servos de Jeová. Além de fornecer as informações solicitadas por Betel, os superintendentes de circuito devem se sentir à vontade para se corresponder com o Departamento de Serviço em qualquer ocasião.

ORIENTAÇÕES GERAIS

2. As cartas que os superintendentes de circuito enviam a Betel devem ser bem redigidas e incluir as seguintes partes:

(1) Remetente: Deve incluir o nome, a designação atual e a data.

(2) Destinatário: Deve incluir o nome da filial e, se souber, o respectivo setor ou departamento.

(3) Saudação inicial

(4) Corpo: O primeiro parágrafo deve explicar o objetivo da carta. Se o assunto não for complexo, use apenas uma ou duas sentenças. Se houver correspondência anterior sobre o mesmo assunto, mencione-a de modo resumido. O texto da carta deve ser curto, mas ao mesmo tempo claro e completo, incluindo os pormenores necessários. Use um parágrafo diferente para cada assunto específico.

(5) Despedida e assinatura com o nome digitado abaixo

3. Os superintendentes de circuito não devem usar em suas correspondências papel com timbre similar ao usado por Betel. Essa orientação também se aplica às correspondências que eles enviam para as congregações. Alguns poderiam concluir de forma errada que as cartas com esse timbre foram aprovadas ou enviadas por Betel. Se as congregações locais estiverem usando envelopes ou papel de carta questionáveis, os anciãos devem ser orientados sobre o assunto.

4. Não é necessário que o superintendente de circuito relate a Betel cada assunto que os anciãos estão tratando. Se os anciãos precisarem de ajuda ao cuidar de um assunto judicativo ou de algum outro caso de pecado grave, e o assunto não for resolvido com a ajuda do superintendente de circuito, o superintendente de circuito deve orientar os anciãos a entrar em contato com o Departamento de Serviço. Se o superintendente de circuito precisar pedir orientações a Betel a respeito de outros assuntos em que ele está diretamente envolvido, ele deve fornecer informações claras, específicas, verídicas, exatas e completas. Devem-se fornecer detalhes pertinentes, como os nomes, a ordem dos eventos e, se possível, as datas. Assuntos relacionados a abuso de menores devem ser tratados por telefone.

5. A correspondência deve ser endereçada ao departamento que cuida do assunto em Betel, e não a pessoas específicas. Se o superintendente de circuito souber o nome de irmãos que servem em Betel e fornecem orientações para o campo, é melhor não passar essa informação aos irmãos nas congregações.

6. Ao responder a uma correspondência de Betel, os superintendentes de circuito devem citar as siglas e a data da carta recebida. Ao escreverem sobre alguém, os superintendentes de circuito devem sempre fornecer o nome completo da pessoa.

7. Ao mencionar uma congregação, os superintendentes de circuito devem fornecer o nome completo dela exatamente como consta nos arquivos de Betel, incluindo a cidade e a província ou estado.

ITINERÁRIO DO SUPERINTENDENTE DE CIRCUITO (S-300)

8. O superintendente de circuito envia seu itinerário para o Departamento de Serviço com três meses ou mais de antecedência, usando o formulário Itinerário do Superintendente de Circuito (S-300). Deve-se enviar um itinerário para cada mês completo — não para períodos maiores nem menores. Se uma semana começar num mês e terminar em outro, ela deve ser incluída no itinerário do mês em que ela começa. Por exemplo, a semana da terça-feira 30 de janeiro ao domingo 4 de fevereiro deve ser incluída no itinerário de janeiro. O nome da congregação só deve ser informado se o evento for uma visita regular à congregação. Se o evento for de outro tipo, como uma semana de pioneiro numa congregação, o nome da congregação não deve ser informado. Se o superintendente de circuito receber aprovação para alterar o itinerário, ele deve enviar imediatamente o formulário revisado para o Departamento de Serviço. (Veja 5:12.) Quando um superintendente de circuito recebe aprovação para visitar um grupo de língua estrangeira, ele deve escolher o tipo “Outro” e escrever o nome do grupo no campo “Observações”. Ao enviar o itinerário de um irmão que assumirá o circuito no seu lugar, o superintendente que está deixando o circuito deve consultar o superintendente que vai assumir o circuito para confirmar se ele estará disponível. Não se deve usar o formulário S-300 para informar períodos de ausência. — Veja 22:7-12.

9. O superintendente de circuito pode determinar a ordem em que as congregações serão visitadas. Ele deve notificar as congregações sobre a próxima visita usando o formulário Aviso da Visita do Superintendente de Circuito (S-302) na mesma ocasião em que envia o formulário S-300 ao Departamento de Serviço. — Veja 4:1.

10. Todas as congregações do circuito devem ser visitadas duas vezes por ano de serviço. Em cada visita, o superintendente deve usar a série de esboços do semestre. (Veja 18:9.) Se o superintendente de circuito não puder fazer todas as visitas, deve pedir aprovação ao Departamento de Serviço para que as congregações sejam visitadas por um ou mais superintendentes de circuito substitutos. (Veja 21:13.) Ao decidir quais congregações serão visitadas por um superintendente de circuito substituto, o superintendente de circuito deve dar prioridade às necessidades das congregações, e não a interesses pessoais. (Fil. 2:4) Por exemplo, se ele souber que uma congregação está passando por sérios problemas, seria melhor que ele a visitasse, e não um superintendente de circuito substituto. Além disso, na medida do possível, a mesma congregação não deve receber visitas consecutivas de um superintendente de circuito substituto.

11. Ao fazer sua programação, o superintendente de circuito talvez note que vai conseguir visitar todas as congregações usando as séries de esboços dos dois semestres, e ainda vão sobrar algumas semanas livres. Nesse caso, ele pode incluir na sua programação uma ou mais semanas para trabalhar como pioneiro com a(s) congregação(ões) que achar melhor. Ele pode ficar à vontade para escolher que semanas programará para isso. Ele e sua esposa poderão ser revigorados espiritualmente ao trabalhar no ministério com outros publicadores zelosos numa congregação. Se desejar, o superintendente de circuito pode se oferecer para dirigir algumas reuniões para o serviço de campo. Mas ele não realizará nenhuma reunião com pioneiros, anciãos ou servos ministeriais, nem fará nenhum discurso naquela semana. Ele pode usar o tempo para se preparar para as designações que estiverem mais à frente ou cuidar de outros assuntos do circuito. Ele e sua esposa também poderão usar seus dias de ausência em qualquer ocasião durante a semana.

12. Os superintendentes de circuito devem ter em mente que, quando uma congregação é informada da visita regular, muitos irmãos ajustam sua programação para apoiar a semana especial de atividades. Alguns publicadores alteram planos de férias ao saberem da visita do superintendente de circuito. Portanto, depois que a congregação for informada da visita programada por meio do formulário Aviso da Visita do Superintendente de Circuito (S-302), o superintendente de circuito não deve mudar a data da visita sem um bom motivo. Se o superintendente de circuito desejar mudar a data de uma visita regular e a congregação já tiver sido notificada ou o Departamento de Serviço já tiver sido informado da visita por meio do formulário S-300, ele deve primeiro telefonar para o Departamento de Serviço para obter permissão antes de enviar o itinerário revisado.

13. Às vezes um superintendente de circuito tem que cancelar uma visita programada porque ela coincide com a de outro superintendente de circuito. Isso pode ocorrer quando dois superintendentes de circuito (geralmente de circuitos de idiomas diferentes) programam visitas na mesma semana a congregações que usam o mesmo Salão do Reino. Nesses casos, deve-se telefonar para o Departamento de Serviço para receber orientações sobre como resolver a situação. A fim de evitar esse tipo de coincidência na programação, os superintendentes de circuito que visitam congregações que usam o mesmo Salão do Reino devem entrar em contato um com o outro e elaborar o roteiro antes de preencher o formulário S-300.

RELATÓRIO SOBRE A VISITA DO SUPERINTENDENTE DE CIRCUITO À CONGREGAÇÃO (S-303)

14. Os superintendentes de circuito devem evitar fazer os mesmos comentários toda semana em seus relatórios. Cada congregação tem suas próprias características e mostra um espírito diferente. As mensagens de Jesus às sete congregações na Ásia Menor mostram que cada congregação tem seus pontos fortes e fracos. (Apo. caps. 2-3) Assim, não seria apropriado ter o costume de usar as mesmas expressões nos relatórios.

RELATÓRIO DA ASSEMBLEIA DE CIRCUITO (S-318)

15. O número de batizados nas assembleias de circuito é enviado por meio do Relatório da Assembleia de Circuito (S-318). O formulário deve ser enviado imediatamente após o término da assembleia (ou série de assembleias, se o circuito for dividido em partes). De vez em quando, realizam-se batismos sem ser em assembleias ou congressos. Por exemplo, os anciãos talvez providenciem o batismo de uma pessoa debilitada ou com uma doença contagiosa. Alguns talvez sejam batizados em prisões. Sempre que isso ocorrer, os anciãos devem ser lembrados de relatar esses batismos ao Departamento de Serviço.

RELATÓRIO DE QUALIFICAÇÕES PESSOAIS (S-326)

16. Ao preencherem o Relatório de Qualificações Pessoais (S-326), os superintendentes de circuito devem fazer comentários específicos e indicar com clareza para que designação a pessoa se qualifica no momento e qual é seu potencial para o futuro. Superintendentes de circuito substitutos não devem preencher e enviar o S-326.

17. Todo ano de serviço, na primeira visita às congregações, o superintendente de circuito deve enviar um S-326 sobre missionários em campo e pioneiros especiais (incluindo pioneiros especiais enfermos), bem como de pioneiros regulares que servem em território isolado. Se algum pioneiro especial estiver enfrentando dificuldades financeiras ou de moradia, isso deve ser incluído no relatório. (Veja 16:9.) Nas outras visitas naquele ano, sempre que necessário, o superintendente de circuito pode escrever uma carta breve e comentar a atividade e o progresso do missionário em campo ou pioneiro especial, dizendo o que precisa de atenção. Se um superintendente de circuito incluir no relatório aspectos em que a pessoa precisa melhorar, ele já deverá ter conversado com ela sobre isso. — Veja 12:3.

18. Betel acompanhará e avaliará o progresso de todos os pioneiros especiais temporários e de alguns pioneiros regulares que se formaram na Escola para Evangelizadores do Reino. Esse programa de avaliação pode durar até três anos depois de a pessoa entrar no serviço de pioneiro especial temporário ou se formar na escola. O superintendente de circuito só precisa preencher um S-326 sobre alguém que está no programa de avaliação quando Betel pede especificamente que ele faça isso. Se uma pessoa estiver no programa de avaliação, o superintendente de circuito deve consultar o Departamento de Serviço antes de pedir que ela se mude para outra congregação.

PETIÇÃO PARA CURSAR A ESCOLA PARA EVANGELIZADORES DO REINO (G-8)

19. Depois de receber da comissão de serviço de uma congregação uma Petição para Cursar a Escola para Evangelizadores do Reino (G-8) preenchida, o superintendente de circuito deve segurar a petição até sua próxima visita à congregação do peticionário. Durante a visita, o superintendente de circuito deve trabalhar com o peticionário e observá-lo. (Se o superintendente for novo no circuito, deve entrar em contato com o superintendente de circuito anterior para saber sua opinião.) Depois, o superintendente de circuito se reunirá com a comissão de serviço para analisar os comentários da comissão a respeito do peticionário. O superintendente de circuito só deve encaminhar a petição ao Departamento de Serviço se estiver convencido de que as circunstâncias e as habilidades do peticionário permitem que ele use bem esse treinamento avançado numa designação. Caso contrário, o superintendente de circuito deve orientar a comissão de serviço a dar conselhos honestos e bondosos ao peticionário nos aspectos em que ele pode melhorar. Para preencher uma petição para a Escola para Evangelizadores do Reino, a pessoa precisa ter entre 23 e 65 anos. Mas pode ser que o superintendente de circuito conheça alguém que tenha entre 21 e 22 anos ou entre 66 e 70 anos e que tenha qualidades espirituais e habilidades realmente excepcionais. Nesse caso, o superintendente de circuito pode incentivar essa pessoa a preencher uma petição. Os publicadores e anciãos em geral não devem saber que existe essa opção. Ela é apenas para candidatos realmente excepcionais.

RECOMENDAÇÕES DE ORADORES PARA CONGRESSOS

20. Betel conta com os superintendentes de circuito para fazerem recomendações equilibradas de oradores para congressos. (Veja o documento Instruções para Avaliação de Oradores e Intérpretes para Congressos [S-311].) Ao visitar as congregações, o superintendente de circuito deve alistar os anciãos que talvez se habilitem para esse privilégio. Deve anotar informações sobre esses anciãos ao observá-los na congregação e nas assembleias de circuito. Se um irmão tiver o potencial para se habilitar no futuro, o superintendente de circuito pode designar uma parte para ele na assembleia de circuito para que os irmãos envolvidos na reunião de avaliação anual tenham oportunidade de observar suas habilidades de oratória. — Veja 3:7.

RECOMENDAR A FORMAÇÃO DE UMA NOVA CONGREGAÇÃO

21. Por causa do aumento contínuo no número de publicadores do Reino, de tempos em tempos é necessário formar novas congregações. Os superintendentes de circuito devem conhecer bem os documentos Instruções para Recomendar a Formação de Novas Congregações (S-50), Pedido de Ajuste de Território (S-6), e Pedido de Formação/Informações de Congregação (S-51). O superintendente de circuito tem a responsabilidade de ajudar os anciãos a preencher corretamente os formulários e de verificar se estão completos antes de enviá-los para o Departamento de Serviço.

22. Dividir prematuramente uma congregação pode resultar em duas congregações fracas. Antes de uma recomendação ser feita, os seguintes fatores devem ser considerados: Quantos publicadores maduros haverá em cada congregação? Haverá um número suficiente de anciãos e servos ministeriais qualificados, tanto na nova como nas congregações existentes, para cuidar das partes nas reuniões e de outras responsabilidades? Será que dividir a congregação nessa ocasião reduzirá o número dos que frequentam as reuniões a ponto de os publicadores se sentirem desanimados? Se o Salão do Reino não for grande o suficiente para comportar todos os que comparecem, seria melhor que, por enquanto, a congregação realizasse a reunião do fim de semana em duas sessões separadas?

23. O superintendente de circuito não deve tentar influenciar os anciãos a propor mudanças nos limites dos territórios apenas com base em preferências pessoais. Por exemplo, talvez ele queira reorganizar os limites porque acha que certos anciãos deveriam servir em determinada congregação. Em vez disso, o fator mais importante ao se definir limites de território é que sejam simples e fáceis de identificar. Se o superintendente de circuito achar que é necessário fazer grandes ajustes nos limites dos territórios, ele deve entrar em contato com o Departamento de Serviço antes de levar o assunto à frente junto com os anciãos das congregações envolvidas. Isso é ainda mais importante nos casos em que o ajuste proposto envolve mudar de congregação vários irmãos designados.

24. É melhor que os publicadores frequentem a congregação que cuida do território em que moram. Mas, no fim das contas, cabe aos chefes de família decidir o que é melhor para sua família. Por isso não seria correto os superintendentes de circuito pressionarem outros a frequentar determinada congregação. Nem seria correto usar isso como base para decidir se um irmão deve ou não receber privilégios na congregação ou no circuito.

RECOMENDAR A DISSOLUÇÃO DE UMA CONGREGAÇÃO

25. Por causa de circunstâncias locais, mudanças nas condições econômicas ou outros fatores, um superintendente de circuito pode recomendar a dissolução de uma congregação e a fusão dela com outra. Dissolver uma ou mais congregações pode contribuir para um melhor aproveitamento dos Salões do Reino e pode ajudar uma congregação que enfrenta dificuldades porque tem poucos publicadores ou porque precisa de irmãos qualificados para exercer a liderança. Os superintendentes de circuito devem conhecer bem o documento Instruções para a Fusão de Congregações (S-67). — Veja 5:24.

ENVIAR EXPERIÊNCIAS

26. Pede-se que os superintendentes de circuito enviem ao Departamento de Serviço experiências excepcionais relacionadas com o serviço de campo. A exatidão de todos os relatos deve ser confirmada com o coordenador do corpo de anciãos. Betel aprecia especialmente experiências que mostram a iniciativa e a engenhosidade dos publicadores ao trabalhar em diversos aspectos do ministério. O relato deve fornecer informações completas e destacar o que o publicador fez de especial, que produziu bons resultados. Deve explicar também quanto progresso a pessoa interessada fez. Se uma experiência no serviço de campo ensinar uma lição importante, ela deve ser enviada mesmo que não seja excepcional.

27. Outras experiências encorajadoras não relacionadas diretamente com o serviço de campo também podem ser úteis. Essas podem incluir: como um publicador inativo foi reativado, como um jovem se manteve firme ou deu um bom testemunho na escola, como um marido ou esposa descrente foi ajudado(a) a aceitar a verdade, como alguém simplificou a vida e entrou no ministério de tempo integral, e assim por diante. Ao se enviar uma experiência, devem-se fornecer as seguintes informações: o nome do publicador que teve a experiência, o nome de sua congregação e a data em que aconteceu.

MANTER SIGILO

28. Os superintendentes de circuito devem cuidar de correspondências confidenciais com o devido cuidado. (Veja 23:5.) Não se deve mostrar nenhuma correspondência de Betel a pessoas de fora da organização sem a autorização expressa de Betel.

CANDIDATOS A BETEL

29. Os recomendados para servir em Betel devem ser bons exemplos de vida cristã. Os anciãos não devem deduzir que o ambiente em Betel ajudará alguém a vencer um problema pessoal. Se a situação do peticionário na congregação mudar a ponto de ele não estar mais qualificado para servir em Betel, os anciãos devem informar Betel imediatamente.

EX-SERVOS DE TEMPO INTEGRAL ESPECIAL

30. Se um superintendente de circuito souber de alguém que dedicou boa parte da sua vida ao serviço de tempo integral especial e agora está passando necessidade, ele deve informar o Departamento de Serviço. Seria melhor que o superintendente de circuito não mencionasse à pessoa que ele está escrevendo sobre ela a Betel. Deve fornecer todos os detalhes que souber a respeito da situação atual e dos antecedentes dessa pessoa.

INFORMAÇÕES DE CONTATO

31. É importante que os superintendentes de circuito escolham com cuidado qual endereço de correspondência vão usar. Em alguns casos, talvez seja melhor o superintendente de circuito usar o endereço de um irmão responsável em seu circuito e mantê-lo informado da programação de suas atividades, para que possa encaminhar a ele sua correspondência. Mas, se usar essa opção, o superintendente de circuito não deve alistar os números de telefone ou endereços de e-mail desse irmão como se fossem seus. Os superintendentes de circuito devem informar Betel imediatamente sobre qualquer mudança nas suas informações de contato alterando seu perfil de usuário no site jw.org. Se o superintendente de circuito não tiver acesso à internet, ele deve usar o formulário Informações de Contato do Superintendente de Circuito (S-351).

CAPÍTULO SEIS

Preparativos para enfrentar desastres e prestação de socorros

1. Provérbios 22:3 diz: "Quem é prudente vê o perigo e se esconde." De acordo com esse princípio, é sábio fazer os preparativos antecipados necessários para possíveis desastres. Um bom programa de preparação para desastres pode ajudar todos os publicadores a agir corretamente quando um desastre acontece. O chefe de família é o principal responsável por fazer preparativos para a segurança e o bem-estar de sua família.

2. Os corpos de anciãos devem seguir as instruções descritas no livro Pastoreiem, capítulo 26.

3. Antes e depois do desastre, o superintendente de circuito precisa manter boa comunicação com cada coordenador de corpo de anciãos em seu circuito. Por isso, ele deve fornecer a cada coordenador os números de telefone que podem ser usados para entrar em contato com ele se um desastre acontecer.

4. Como diz o documento Orientações para Prestar Ajuda Humanitária (S-180), quando um desastre acontece, Betel vai se informar sobre as necessidades imediatas de todos os irmãos e procurar atendê-las por meio dos superintendentes de circuito, anciãos locais, representantes em campo do Departamento Local de Projeto/Construção (LDC, sigla em inglês) e encarregados de grupo de construção, e quaisquer outros irmãos que forem necessários, que servem no território da filial. Essas necessidades incluem assistência médica, alimento e abrigo, além de ajuda espiritual e emocional. Esse levantamento deve ser feito o mais rápido possível, visto que vidas estão em jogo.

5. O Departamento de Serviço pode orientar os superintendentes de circuito da região afetada a trabalhar em contato direto com a Comissão de Ajuda Humanitária, se uma comissão for formada. Os superintendentes de circuito devem visitar as congregações afetadas de seu circuito o mais rápido possível para dar ajuda espiritual e emocional. Eles precisam manter contato direto e constante com o coordenador do corpo de anciãos de todas as congregações de seus circuitos. Os superintendentes de circuito devem trabalhar junto com os anciãos para cuidar de que os suprimentos de ajuda humanitária sejam distribuídos adequadamente e de modo justo entre as famílias. Quando há desastres grandes ou que duram muito tempo, Betel pode designar superintendentes de circuito de outras regiões para dar mais ajuda. O Departamento de Serviço vai designar superintendentes de circuito substitutos para fazer as visitas regulares às congregações se os superintendentes de circuito estiverem sendo usados para apoiar o programa de ajuda humanitária.

6. É fundamental que os superintendentes de circuito e anciãos escolhidos façam visitas de pastoreio o mais rápido possível. Um desastre pode ser traumático, causando extrema tristeza e ansiedade. Assim, os irmãos precisam do amor e da atenção de pastores cristãos bondosos. O pastoreio ajudará as vítimas do desastre a encarar sua situação de um ponto de vista espiritual, para que possam lidar melhor com a mudança de circunstâncias. Elas precisam restabelecer sua rotina espiritual, que inclui fazer estudo pessoal e adoração em família, ler a Bíblia todos os dias, assistir às reuniões congregacionais e participar regularmente no ministério. Por isso, as reuniões congregacionais devem ser restabelecidas o mais rápido possível.

CAPÍTULO SETE

Congressos

1. Todo ano aguardamos ansiosamente o rico banquete espiritual preparado para o povo de Jeová nos congressos. Betel aprecia o trabalho dos superintendentes de circuito em recomendar participantes para o programa, em proferir discursos bem preparados e em colaborar de outras maneiras.

2. Concede-se ao superintendente de circuito e à esposa a semana do congresso para os preparativos, para a viagem e para assistir ao programa. Esse tempo também pode ser usado para cuidar de assuntos do circuito, como preparar uma futura assembleia de circuito ou os discursos para o novo ano de serviço. Eles também podem usar seus dias de ausência em qualquer ocasião durante essa semana.

3. Betel informa aos superintendentes de circuito o congresso ao qual eles estão designados. Na maioria dos casos, os superintendentes de circuito são designados para assistir ao mesmo congresso ao qual seu circuito ou parte do circuito foi designado. É bom assistir ao congresso designado, visto que as designações são feitas para equilibrar o número de superintendentes de circuito que podem cuidar de partes do programa nos vários congressos. — Veja 9:2.

4. Se, por razões pessoais, um superintendente de circuito achar necessário assistir a um congresso que não seja o seu designado, deverá escrever imediatamente para o Departamento de Serviço, indicando a data e o local do congresso a que precisa assistir e o motivo disso. Se receber permissão para assistir ao congresso numa semana diferente, ele deve enviar um formulário Itinerário do Superintendente de Circuito (S-300) revisado referente à semana do congresso ao qual ele estava designado. — Veja 5:8-13.

5. Se o superintendente de circuito quiser usar uma semana de ausência (cinco dias) para assistir a um segundo congresso, poderá fazer isso. Ele deve avisar imediatamente o Departamento de Serviço se estiver disponível para cuidar de uma parte do programa. Se ele for escolhido como congressista para assistir a um congresso internacional ou especial, será concedido um dia e meio para assistir a esse evento. Se o congresso estiver programado para o meio da semana, ele receberá os dias correspondentes aos dias do evento que caírem no meio da semana. (Por exemplo, dois dias inteiros serão concedidos se o evento for de quinta-feira a sábado.) Esses dias são concedidos além do período de um dia e meio concedido todo ano para assistir ao congresso designado. Se um superintendente de circuito for escolhido como congressista para assistir a um congresso internacional ou especial, ele poderá usar seus dias de ausência para assistir ao congresso sem a necessidade de tirar semanas inteiras.

6. Se um superintendente de circuito precisar de uma hospedagem fornecida pela organização do congresso, quer esteja designado para trabalhar no congresso quer não, deve preencher um Pedido Especial de Hospedagem (CO-5a) e enviá-lo para o Departamento de Hospedagem com bastante antecedência.

7. Todos os anos antes do mês de dezembro, o superintendente de circuito, com a ajuda do superintendente de assembleia, deve se certificar de que a lista da equipe de organização da assembleia esteja atualizada, conforme a instrução no documento Orientações para a Organização de Assembleias (S-330), para o caso de uma Comissão de Congresso solicitá-la. Essa lista deve incluir o nome, o ano de nascimento, o e-mail, o telefone e o nome da congregação do superintendente de assembleia, do superintendente ajudante de assembleia, dos encarregados de departamento e dos ajudantes dos encarregados de departamento. Quando uma Comissão de Congresso pedir a lista, devem-se incluir informações úteis sobre a saúde, as habilidades e a disponibilidade dos irmãos alistados, e mencionar se algum deles é pioneiro regular ou especial. Deve-se preparar também uma lista de outros irmãos no circuito que estão qualificados para servir em congressos, incluindo nela as mesmas informações mencionadas acima.

SERVIR COMO PRESIDENTE DE CONGRESSO

8. Se um superintendente de circuito for designado para ser presidente de um congresso, Betel não programará que ele receba mais uma semana para assistir a outro congresso. Ele terá uma cópia dos esboços de cada parte do congresso e estará escutando o programa. Assim, ele poderá aproveitar todo o programa apresentado. — Veja o documento Instruções para o Presidente do Congresso (S-329).

MÉTODOS ALTERNATIVOS PARA ASSISTIR AOS CONGRESSOS

9. Pode ser que uma congregação ache difícil assistir a um congresso por causa do custo da viagem ou de outros fatores. Nesses casos, a congregação pode pedir aprovação ao superintendente de circuito para receber a gravação ou a transmissão do programa do congresso. Se ele achar que o pedido é válido, deve entrar em contato com o Setor de Congressos e Assembleias, do Departamento de Serviço, e responder às seguintes perguntas:

(1) Que congregação está fazendo o pedido? Quantas pessoas são esperadas para assistir ao congresso no local alternativo?

(2) Quais são as circunstâncias excepcionais que impedem a congregação de viajar até o local do congresso?

(3) Onde o programa será apresentado? Se um Salão do Reino for usado para apresentar o programa, os corpos de anciãos das congregações que usam o Salão aprovaram isso? (Os dias e horários das reu-niões não devem ser mudados para que o Salão do Reino seja usado para apresentar o programa do congresso. Se necessário, pode-se usar uma sala adicional no Salão do Reino ou outro local adequado sem ser o Salão do Reino.) Existe algum ancião ou servo ministerial capacitado que possa supervisionar a preparação desse local alternativo?

(4) O JW Stream tem a gravação do congresso na língua desejada? Se tiver, é melhor usar essa gravação do que receber a transmissão do congresso ao vivo.

10. Se Betel aprovar o uso do local alternativo e forem esperados publicadores de mais de uma congregação, o superintendente de circuito deve designar uma congregação para ser a anfitriã. Além disso, ele deve designar um ancião ou servo ministerial capacitado para supervisionar o evento. Ele deve organizar os irmãos para cuidar da limpeza, do estacionamento, etc.

11. Se uma congregação assistir ao congresso num local alternativo, ela deve realizar o estudo da Sentinela abreviado, como é feito na visita do superintendente de circuito, em vez de assistir a uma gravação de um estudo de uma semana anterior.

12. Em casos raros, um ou mais candidatos ao batismo podem estar entre os aprovados para assistir ao congresso em locais alternativos. Se for possível realizar o batismo logo depois do discurso de batismo, isso pode ser feito. Se os candidatos forem assistir a transmissão ao vivo do discurso de batismo, o orador deverá ser informado com antecedência para que ele saiba desses candidatos ao fazer seu discurso. Esse aviso antecipado é necessário principalmente se não houver candidatos no local do congresso, mas houver no local alternativo. Se o batismo no local alternativo for feito no mesmo dia que o batismo no congresso designado dos candidatos, o número de batizados no local alternativo deve ser somado ao número de batizados no congresso. Se for em outro dia, os anciãos devem informar o número de batizados no local alternativo para o Departamento de Serviço.

13. Caixas de donativos devem ser colocadas nos locais alternativos. Dois irmãos devem recolher os donativos e registrar o valor. Esses donativos devem ser depositados na conta bancária da congregação anfitriã. Esses recursos podem ser usados para cobrir as despesas diretamente relacionadas ao evento no local alternativo. O valor que sobrar deve ser enviado para Betel. Se forem usadas gravações para assistir ao congresso, as orações devem ser feitas localmente.

CAPÍTULO OITO

Licença

1. Os superintendentes de circuito às vezes se deparam com uma emergência, como o falecimento de um membro da família imediata. Se ocorrer uma emergência, o superintendente de circuito deverá telefonar para o Departamento de Serviço a fim de receber orientação antes de providenciar um substituto. Se o superintendente de circuito receber permissão para se ausentar da designação, ele deverá, ao retornar, enviar uma carta para explicar a natureza da emergência, os dias específicos em que esteve ausente da designação e o nome do superintendente de circuito substituto aprovado que fez as visitas em seu lugar. Deve-se seguir o mesmo procedimento se a esposa do superintendente de circuito precisar se ausentar da designação devido a uma emergência.

2. É bom lembrar que só se deve pedir licença em situações de emergência. Para tratar de assuntos pessoais menos importantes, devem-se usar os dias pessoais de ausência. O Corpo Governante providenciou amorosamente que os servos de tempo integral especial recebam todo ano dias de ausência adicionais com base nos anos de serviço de tempo integral ou na idade. (Veja 22:3-6.) Essa provisão é para que haja dias de ausência não só para descanso e recreação, mas também para cuidar de assuntos pessoais e familiares. Assim, quando há uma situação pessoal ou familiar que obviamente exigirá atenção periódica, é importante um bom planejamento dos dias disponíveis de ausência. Naturalmente, algumas coisas acontecem de repente e estão além do controle da pessoa. — Ecl. 9:11.

3. Quando um superintendente de circuito fica doente e não pode cuidar de sua designação, ele deve telefonar imediatamente para o Departamento de Serviço. Se ele não estiver em condições de telefonar, a esposa poderá fazer isso em seu lugar. Em seguida, deve-se enviar uma carta com mais informações sobre a doença, as datas da ausência e o nome do superintendente de circuito substituto (caso se tenha usado algum). Se a esposa do superintendente de circuito ficar doente, de modo que não possa participar no serviço de campo ou assistir às reuniões por vários dias, o Departamento de Serviço deve ser informado. Em caso de doença prolongada, o Departamento de Serviço talvez peça informações atualizadas de tempos em tempos.

CAPÍTULO NOVE

Despesas e reembolsos

1. De modo geral, as congregações e os circuitos sabem muito bem que é um privilégio receber hospitaleiramente os superintendentes de circuito. (3 João 8) A generosidade dos irmãos é muito apreciada, e jamais se deve abusar dela ou considerá-la apenas uma obrigação. A maioria dos irmãos precisa controlar bem seu orçamento para não gastar mais do que pode. Da mesma forma, os superintendentes de circuito precisam controlar cuidadosamente suas despesas para não ser "um peso financeiro" para as congregações e os circuitos. (1 Tes. 2:9) É importante que os superintendentes de circuito não sejam esbanjadores nem deem a impressão de que querem o melhor de tudo em relação a alimentação, roupas, móveis para o apartamento, aparelhos eletrônicos, viagens e assim por diante. Assim não darão "motivo para tropeço" e servirão de exemplo para os pioneiros e outros que se esforçam em buscar primeiro o Reino. — 2 Cor. 6:3, 4; Fil. 1:9, 10.

2. Os superintendentes de circuito não devem pedir que a congregação reembolse suas despesas da semana. Eles só podem apresentar as despesas se os anciãos pedirem que ele faça isso. Se a congregação não providenciar hospedagem ou não tiver condições de reembolsar o superintendente de circuito, ele pode apresentar suas despesas para o superintendente de assembleia para que o circuito as reembolse. Ele não precisa esperar até a próxima assembleia de circuito. Os superintendentes de circuito também podem apresentar para o superintendente de assembleia as despesas que tiverem na semana de uma assembleia de circuito, de um congresso designado e de uma Escola do Serviço de Pioneiro em que forem instrutores, mesmo que a escola não seja em seu circuito. Se o circuito não reembolsar as despesas, o superintendente de circuito pode apresentá-las para o Departamento de Serviço, usando o formulário Pedido de Reembolso para Superintendente de Circuito (S-301). Se uma congregação não reembolsar as despesas de um superintendente de circuito substituto, ele também pode apresentá-las para o Departamento de Serviço. Sempre que as despesas são apresentadas para reembolso, seja para os anciãos, seja para o Departamento de Serviço, devem-se apresentar os comprovantes junto com o pedido.

3. As despesas gerais da semana incluem gastos com alimentação, despesas rotineiras de escritório, gastos com transporte e algumas despesas pessoais. (Veja o apêndice A.) Essas despesas devem ser mantidas o mais baixas possível. Elas são explicadas em mais detalhes abaixo. O superintendente de circuito pode querer usar o dinheiro que talvez tenha recebido como presente para cobrir essas despesas. Se os publicadores derem algum presente em dinheiro e disserem claramente que esse dinheiro deve ser usado para cobrir as despesas da semana, o superintendente de circuito não vai incluir as despesas cobertas por esse presente em dinheiro quando pedir o reembolso.

4. A hora do almoço é uma boa ocasião para ter conversas animadoras, criar boas amizades e até fazer pastoreio. Por isso, quando os superintendentes de circuito visitam as congregações, é preferível que eles aceitem a hospitalidade que os irmãos locais mostram ao oferecer os almoços que foram programados pelos anciãos. Fica a critério do superintendente de circuito aceitar ou não convites para outras refeições. Os superintendentes de circuito devem apreciar bastante a hospitalidade da congregação. Se o superintendente de circuito tiver restrições alimentares, ele deve ser discreto ao falar sobre elas. Ele não deve dar a impressão de que deseja determinados alimentos.

5. As despesas rotineiras de escritório incluem telefone, material de escritório, postagem de cartas, cartuchos de tinta e outros gastos relacionados com designações da organização. Se, em certa semana, essas despesas forem maiores do que as de costume, em vez de pedir que uma congregação as cubra, o superintendente de circuito deve dividi-las entre as congregações ou apresentá-las para o superintendente de assembleia. Mas não seria apropriado pedir o reembolso de despesas com serviços de TV a cabo ou via satélite, ligações interurbanas pessoais, e compra ou aluguel de computadores, fotocopiadoras e equipamentos similares. Se os serviços de internet ou de telefonia celular forem necessários para o superintendente de circuito se comunicar com as congregações ou com Betel, ele poderá dividir essas despesas entre as congregações ou apresentá-las para o superintendente de assembleia. Se nem as congregações nem o circuito puderem cobrir as despesas com internet ou celular, elas poderão ser apresentadas para o Departamento de Serviço reembolsar. Mas, se o superintendente de circuito gastar com internet ou celular mais do que é necessário para se comunicar com as congregações e com Betel, essa diferença deve ser coberta pelo próprio superintendente de circuito. As despesas da esposa dele com internet ou celular também são pessoais e não devem ser apresentadas para reembolso.

6. Certas despesas pessoais, como lavagem a seco, conserto de sapatos e corte de cabelo, podem ser apresentadas à congregação. Mas essas seriam despesas pequenas, e em alguns casos é melhor que o superintendente de circuito as cubra com o dinheiro que talvez receba como presente ou com sua ajuda de manutenção.

7. Não se deve pedir às congregações ou aos circuitos que reembolsem outras despesas pessoais, como a compra de roupas, cosméticos, vitaminas e medicamentos que não precisam de receita, ou despesas com trailers, com veículos para puxar o trailer e com um seguro de vida. (Veja 1:6.) Não se deve pedir reembolso dos valores gastos durante o período de ausência. Em vez disso, esses valores devem ser cobertos com o dinheiro que talvez receba como presente, com a Ajuda para Despesas Pessoais (ADP) ou com outros recursos próprios. Se um superintendente de circuito tiver alguma necessidade específica, como comprar medicamentos, deve se sentir à vontade para entrar em contato com Betel em busca de ajuda. — Veja o apêndice F.

DESPESAS COM A MUDANÇA PARA UMA NOVA DESIGNAÇÃO

8. Quando muda de designação, o superintendente de circuito pode apresentar as despesas de viagem e com frete (se não forem muito altas) para o superintendente de assembleia do novo circuito. Se o circuito não puder reembolsar essas despesas, o superintendente de circuito deve apresentá-las para o Departamento de Serviço, usando um Pedido de Reembolso para Superintendente de Circuito (S-301). Se o superintendente de circuito e sua esposa precisarem obter documentação legal para assumir uma nova designação, Betel providenciará a ajuda necessária.

PRESENTES EM DINHEIRO

9. Não se devem dar presentes em dinheiro para os superintendentes de circuito usando os recursos da congregação, do circuito ou do congresso. Também não é apropriado que pessoas peçam dinheiro a irmãos e irmãs para dá-lo como presente ao superintendente de circuito. (2 Cor. 8:20) Por outro lado, alguém talvez se sinta motivado de coração a dar um presente em dinheiro para o superintendente de circuito. Se alguém quiser dar um presente em dinheiro ao superintendente de circuito, esse é um assunto particular que não diz respeito a outros. Se o superintendente de circuito vai aceitar ou recusar o dinheiro também é um assunto particular. Mas o superintendente de circuito não deve pedir dinheiro a outros, nem mesmo em particular.

EMPREENDIMENTOS COMERCIAIS

10. Os superintendentes de circuito não devem se envolver em empreendimentos comerciais. Não é correto que os superintendentes de circuito usem seu cargo ou seu contato com os irmãos para obter ganhos financeiros.

AJUDA PARA DESPESAS PESSOAIS

11. Todos os que estão no serviço de tempo integral especial recebem uma Ajuda para Despesas Pessoais (ADP). Os créditos da ADP são calculados com base no número de anos que a pessoa tem no serviço de tempo integral. Quando a pessoa completa cinco ou dez anos de serviço de tempo integral, o valor do crédito mensal é aumentado a partir do mês seguinte. A ADP é depositada automaticamente junto com a ajuda de manutenção do mês de dezembro. A pessoa poderá pedir que seu saldo da ADP seja mantido em Betel por até dois anos.

12. Em seu primeiro ano de serviço no circuito, o irmão que não estava no serviço de tempo integral especial vai receber na sua conta de ADP o crédito relativo a cada mês completo em que serviu como superintendente de circuito. Por exemplo, se ele começou no serviço de circuito no meio de outubro, em dezembro ele vai receber na sua conta de ADP só o crédito relativo aos meses de novembro e dezembro. Mas, se um irmão que já estava no serviço de tempo integral especial for transferido para outra modalidade de tempo integral especial, ele vai continuar recebendo os créditos na sua conta de ADP sem interrupção.

13. O objetivo da ADP é atender a necessidades pessoais, cobrir despesas médicas ocasionais e assim por diante. Para retirar a ADP, o superintendente de circuito deve enviar um Pedido de Reembolso (TO-4) para o Departamento Financeiro.

14. Se alguém precisar deixar o serviço de circuito e não for permanecer no serviço de tempo integral especial, ele pode retirar seu saldo acumulado de ADP. Para isso, ele deve enviar um formulário TO-4 antes da data de término do serviço de tempo integral especial, visto que a conta de ADP é automaticamente encerrada nessa data. Os créditos da ADP referentes ao ano em curso geralmente não são disponibilizados antes de 1.º de janeiro. Mas quem for deixar o serviço de tempo integral especial poderá pedir sua ADP referente aos meses completos em que serviu no tempo integral especial durante o ano em curso.

15. Em caso de falecimento do marido ou da esposa, o(a) viúvo(a) pode ficar com o saldo existente na ADP do(a) falecido(a).

CUIDADOS DE SAÚDE

16. Veja o apêndice F para obter informações sobre as provisões para ajudar os superintendentes de circuito nas despesas com cuidados de saúde.

IMPOSTOS

17. Como membros fiéis de uma ordem religiosa, é importante que os superintendentes de circuito cumpram os requisitos legais que se aplicam a eles, especialmente a declaração do imposto de renda. Nesse assunto, é vital que todos os superintendentes de circuito, como representantes da organização de Jeová, cuidem corretamente de suas obrigações. Assim permanecerão irrepreensíveis, dando a “César o que é de César”. — Mat. 22:21; 1 Tim. 3:2.

18. Betel não faz declarações de impostos para os superintendentes de circuito, mas o Departamento Financeiro pode fornecer alguma ajuda quando necessário. — Veja o apêndice G.

CAPÍTULO DEZ

Ministério de campo

1. Assim como os superintendentes viajantes da época dos apóstolos, os atuais superintendentes de circuito exercem a liderança na obra de pregação do Reino e de fazer discípulos. (Atos 18:5, 6) Eles são “diligentes, não preguiçosos”. São “fervorosos no espírito”. (Rom. 12:11) Embora sejam instrutores e pastores, seu trabalho principal é ‘fazer a obra de um evangelizador’. — 2 Tim. 4:5.

2. Ao escreverem às congregações antes da visita, os superintendentes de circuito devem incentivar os irmãos a participarem ao máximo no ministério de campo. (Veja 4:1.) Da mesma forma, seus discursos devem criar interesse e ânimo pelo serviço de campo. Os superintendentes de circuito e suas esposas tomam a iniciativa e amorosamente convidam outros a acompanhá-los no ministério. (Veja 23:3.) Dão bom exemplo por serem pontuais e por apoiar toda a programação de serviço de campo durante a semana inteira. Embora a semana com a congregação seja cheia de atividades, os superintendentes de circuito e suas esposas também devem participar ao máximo no ministério nos finais de semana. Eles devem se esforçar para cuidar de seus assuntos pessoais nos dias de folga, a não ser em caso de consultas médicas necessárias. Outras atividades não devem limitar o trabalho com os irmãos nos fins de semana. Muitos publicadores trabalham a semana inteira e só têm chance de trabalhar com o superintendente de circuito no fim de semana. — Veja 4:9.

3. As reuniões para o serviço de campo devem ser práticas e ter a duração de cinco a sete minutos. (Quando a reunião para o serviço de campo é realizada logo depois de outra reunião da congregação, deve ser ainda mais curta.) O superintendente de circuito deve considerar uma apresentação simples e apropriada para o território ou fornecer outras informações práticas que podem ser usadas no ministério naquele dia. Se ele se preparar com antecedência, conseguirá realizar uma reunião instrutiva e terminar dentro do tempo concedido, dando bom exemplo para a congregação. Pode ser difícil organizar grandes grupos de publicadores. Mas o superintendente de circuito pode fazer isso com a ajuda dos superintendentes de grupo e de outros anciãos, sem abrir mão de suas próprias responsabilidades. Ao escrever para o coordenador do corpo de anciãos, o superintendente de circuito deve pedir que ele se certifique de que haverá território suficiente para cada dia, incluindo sábado e domingo. (Veja 4:1.) O superintendente de circuito deve pedir o nome dos publicadores que poderiam ser ajudados ao trabalhar com ele, mas que só podem sair no campo no fim de semana.

4. O superintendente de circuito deve treinar outros nos vários aspectos do ministério, como dar testemunho de casa em casa, em território comercial, em lugares públicos e por telefone. Enquanto trabalha com os irmãos e as irmãs, é bom usar alguns minutos para elogiá-los e sugerir maneiras de melhorar seu ministério. Quando os superintendentes de circuito se esforçam em 'procurar os merecedores' no território, em qualquer local e horário em que possam ser encontrados, isso reforça para os publicadores a importância do ministério. — Mat. 10:11.

5. Embora os superintendentes de circuito devam dar exemplo em participar nos diversos aspectos do ministério, precisam ter cuidado para não ir "além das coisas que estão escritas" quanto aos métodos usados para atrair pessoas à verdade. (1 Cor. 4:6) Não é correto promover programas inovadores que camuflem a verdadeira natureza da nossa obra educacional bíblica ou ocultem o fato de que somos Testemunhas de Jeová.

6. A não ser em caso de problemas de saúde temporários e outros fatores além do controle, deve ser possível que a maioria dos superintendentes de circuito e suas esposas dediquem 17 horas por semana ao ministério de campo, que somam 68 horas nos meses em que não há congressos, assembleias, escolas ou dias de ausência programados. (Veja 4:9.) A atividade de serviço de campo deve ser relatada para o Departamento de Serviço por meio do jw.org, se possível. Esses relatórios devem chegar ao Departamento de Serviço o mais tardar no dia 20 do mês seguinte. Para relatar um estudo bíblico, ele deve ser dirigido com a mesma pessoa ou família toda semana. Betel reconhece que as circunstâncias de muitos no serviço de circuito não permitem que dirijam um estudo bíblico regular toda semana.

TESTEMUNHO PÚBLICO

7. Os anciãos receberam orientações sobre como iniciar diversas formas de testemunho público no território da congregação. Em suas visitas, os superintendentes de circuito devem dar total apoio ao testemunho público e falar dele de modo positivo e animado. Devem se interessar ativamente na programação de testemunho público que a congregação já tem. Será que a programação é prática para a região e produz bons resultados? O testemunho está sendo dado de modo digno, organizado e de acordo com as orientações dos anciãos? Há outros locais no território que os anciãos deveriam considerar como tendo potencial para o testemunho público? É claro que é preciso ter equilíbrio. O testemunho público não deve ofuscar o trabalho de casa em casa. Além disso, entendemos que o testemunho público organizado talvez tenha resultados limitados em alguns territórios muito rurais. Os superintendentes de circuito devem ajudar os anciãos a ter bom senso ao avaliar as necessidades do território.

8. O documento Orientações para o Testemunho Público Especial em Regiões Metropolitanas (S-71) está disponível para que os superintendentes de circuito o usem quando Betel programar um trabalho de testemunho público especial em regiões metropolitanas. Em muitos casos, esse trabalho inclui os territórios de várias congregações e circuitos. Irmãos específicos são designados por Betel para organizar o trabalho, onde serão usados publicadores aprovados dos circuitos da região. Os superintendentes de circuito devem conhecer bem o documento S-71 e usar os princípios contidos ali para ajudar os anciãos em dar testemunho público no território local de suas congregações.

ROUPA, APARÊNCIA E CONDUTA

9. Se o corpo de anciãos concordar que um irmão ou uma irmã está ignorando repetidos conselhos de forma insolente e intencional, e que sua roupa, aparência ou conduta estão perturbando a congregação, os anciãos podem decidir que ele ou ela não se qualifica mais para participar no ministério. Nesses casos raros, nenhum anúncio deve ser feito à congregação.

TESTEMUNHO PARA REFUGIADOS

10. Os superintendentes de circuito e os corpos de anciãos devem ficar atentos para ver se há refugiados chegando em seu território. Se isso estiver acontecendo, os superintendentes de circuito devem informar o Departamento de Serviço sobre a situação o mais breve possível, respondendo às seguintes perguntas: Existem centros ou campos de refugiados? Os refugiados vivem numa comunidade ou estão espalhados? Qual é o número aproximado de refugiados? Que idiomas eles falam? Se houver um número considerável de refugiados morando na mesma região, talvez Betel designe um superintendente de circuito para coordenar o testemunho para refugiados. O documento Orientações sobre Testemunho para Refugiados (S-197) está disponível para que um superintendente de circuito o use quando receber a designação de ser o coordenador desse tipo de testemunho.

TESTEMUNHO EM PORTOS

11. O documento Orientações sobre Testemunho em Portos (S-374) está disponível para que os superintendentes de circuito o usem quando Betel programar o testemunho em portos. Esse trabalho muitas vezes inclui os territórios de várias congregações e circuitos. Irmãos específicos são designados por Betel para organizar o trabalho, o que inclui usar os publicadores aprovados dos circuitos envolvidos.

CAPÍTULO ONZE

Comissões de Ligação com Hospitais

1. Quando uma Comissão de Ligação com Hospitais (Colih) precisa de mais irmãos para ajudar a cuidar do volume de trabalho, a Colih faz recomendações a Betel, usando as orientações gerais fornecidas a seguir. A Colih deve consultar o superintendente de circuito para ter certeza de que o irmão recomendado está qualificado para servir nessa função. É improvável que algum irmão tenha as circunstâncias ideais e todas as qualidades desejadas, mas ele deve estar razoavelmente à altura dos seguintes requisitos:

(1) Ele precisa ser um homem espiritual, ser respeitado na região e saber se expressar bem. — 1 Tim. 3:7.

(2) Ele precisa saber enfrentar situações difíceis sem se intimidar, e ter habilidade e boa disposição para falar com médicos, advogados e juízes. — Êxo. 4:10-12; Pro. 29:25.

(3) Ele deve amar as ovelhas e estar disposto a agir nos casos de emergência, não importa a hora. — Pro. 3:27; 19:17; João 13:35.

(4) Deve ser fácil de ser contatado. Se um irmão viaja muito a trabalho ou é difícil de ser contatado, não se pode contar tanto com a ajuda dele numa emergência. Irmãos que têm um trabalho flexível ou que trabalham meio período normalmente têm mais disponibilidade para visitar equipes de hospital sempre que for necessário. Esse é um requisito importante.

(5) Ele deve ser leal e manter sigilo. — Êxo. 18:21; Pro. 25:9.

(6) Ele deve trabalhar bem em equipe. O trabalho da Colih exige cooperação e união. — 1 Cor. 1:10; 12:12-26.

(7) Ele deve morar numa cidade ou perto de uma cidade em que haja hospitais de grande porte. Pode ser feita alguma exceção se houver circunstâncias especiais.

(8) Se o irmão tiver algum conhecimento de medicina, isso pode ser útil, mas não é necessário.

(9) Ele não deve ter muitas outras responsabilidades que o impeçam de cumprir seu trabalho na Colih.

2. Se um pioneiro regular não conseguir alcançar o requisito de horas por causa do serviço na Colih, deverá receber consideração especial. — Veja 4:5.

CAPÍTULO DOZE

Grupos e publicadores isolados

1. É importante dar atenção a todos os publicadores que moram em território não designado. Betel envia os nomes dos publicadores isolados à congregação mais próxima para que essa congregação mantenha contato com eles. Betel também informa ao superintendente de circuito o nome e o endereço de quem recebe a correspondência do grupo isolado, e quantos estão associados com ele. Se for prático, o superintendente de circuito deve programar uma visita anual a eles e proferir discursos enquanto estiver ali. O superintendente de circuito pode passar um dia ou dois no ministério junto com os publicadores isolados. Mesmo que a visita seja breve, pode produzir bons resultados. — Para saber sobre como ajudar grupos de língua estrangeira, veja o capítulo 15.

2. Se o grupo isolado estiver muito distante para funcionar debaixo da supervisão de uma congregação já existente, o superintendente de circuito poderá ajudar o grupo a se fortalecer para se tornar uma congregação. Para formar uma congregação, é melhor que o grupo tenha pelo menos um ancião ou servo ministerial para fornecer a necessária supervisão espiritual e exercer a liderança na pregação. Se uma congregação for formada com a ajuda de pioneiras ou outras irmãs maduras, elas podem cuidar de certas responsabilidades até que um irmão qualificado esteja disponível. Betel enviará aos grupos isolados que não têm anciãos todas as cartas e orientações necessárias que não sejam confidenciais. Se não for possível formar uma congregação, o superintendente de circuito deve animar os associados com o grupo a fazer o possível para realizar reuniões, participar no serviço de campo e enviar seus relatórios a Betel.

3. Se um pioneiro regular ou especial estiver servindo numa região isolada, não designada a nenhuma congregação, o superintendente de circuito pode fazer uma visita mais longa a ele, de até uma semana inteira. Depois de cada visita anual, o superintendente de circuito deve enviar um Relatório de Qualificações Pessoais (S-326) sobre cada pioneiro.

4. Se o superintendente de circuito recomendar que um grupo isolado receba publicações, Betel providenciará isso.

5. Depois que visitar um grupo ou publicador isolado, o superintendente de circuito deve enviar para o Departamento de Serviço um relatório descrevendo o que conseguiu realizar durante a visita e apresentando as observações e recomendações que desejar.

CAPÍTULO TREZE

Assuntos judicativos

1. Os superintendentes de circuito devem ajudar os anciãos a sempre se lembrar de que precisam julgar com justiça, sabedoria e discernimento. Se um superintendente de circuito notar que um corpo de anciãos não compreende bem quando e como deve cuidar de assuntos judicativos ou como deve relatar esses assuntos para Betel, o superintendente de circuito deve tirar o tempo que for necessário para ajudá-los. Seria bom recapitular com os anciãos pontos relevantes do livro Pastoreiem, do Adendo do Pastoreiem e de outras publicações do escravo fiel e prudente.

2. Quando os anciãos pedem a ajuda do superintendente de circuito para cuidar de um caso específico e parece não haver uma orientação clara na Bíblia nem em outras matérias publicadas, ele deve incentivar os anciãos a entrar em contato com o Departamento de Serviço. Por exemplo, quando surgem dúvidas em casos que envolvem a liberdade bíblica para casar novamente, o superintendente de circuito deve sempre orientar os anciãos a entrar em contato com o Departamento de Serviço. — Pro. 11:2b; sfl 12:71-76; 16:15.

3. Normalmente é melhor que um superintendente de circuito não sirva numa comissão judicativa. Isso evita possíveis problemas posteriores, se for necessário realizar uma audiência de apelação ou não for possível concluir o assunto durante a semana da visita. Se por algum motivo a congregação não tiver um número suficiente de anciãos qualificados para cuidar de um caso judicativo, pode-se pedir ajuda a uma congregação próxima. Provavelmente os anciãos tirarão proveito das recomendações do superintendente de circuito ao escolher anciãos qualificados de outra congregação. Mas, nos raros casos em que realmente não é possível formar uma comissão judicativa com três anciãos, o superintendente de circuito deve telefonar para o Departamento de Serviço e explicar a situação. Se for aprovado, ele mesmo pode completar a comissão judicativa de três membros. — Veja B:1; sfl 15:2-3.

4. Pode ser necessário, às vezes, providenciar que um intérprete ajude em assuntos judicativos. Se houver no circuito um ancião que domina os idiomas envolvidos, ele pode servir como intérprete. Se não houver um ancião disponível no circuito, o superintendente de circuito pode procurar um ancião habilitado em circuitos vizinhos, ou poderá entrar em contato com o Departamento de Serviço para obter ajuda. Não se deve usar uma irmã como intérprete em casos judicativos.

ABUSO SEXUAL DE MENORES

5. Quando o corpo de anciãos decide formar uma comissão judicativa para cuidar de uma acusação de abuso sexual de menores, o coordenador do corpo de anciãos deve imediatamente entrar em contato com o superintendente de circuito. O superintendente de circuito deve escolher um ancião experiente da lista de irmãos qualificados para cuidar de assuntos complexos para servir como presidente da comissão judicativa. Se a comissão decidir desassociar o acusado e ele apelar da decisão, o superintendente de circuito deve designar os anciãos que farão parte da comissão de apelação e o presidente dessa comissão. (Veja 13:6-9.) O presidente será selecionado da lista de irmãos qualificados para cuidar de assuntos complexos. — sfl 14:19.

6. Se alguém que foi desassociado por abuso sexual de menores pede readmissão, o coordenador do corpo de anciãos deve entrar em contato com o superintendente de circuito e fornecer o nome dos anciãos que serviram na comissão judicativa. O superintendente de circuito deve confirmar se o presidente da comissão judicativa continua na lista de irmãos qualificados para cuidar de assuntos complexos, podendo assim servir como presidente da comissão de readmissão. Se ele não estiver mais na lista, o superintendente de circuito deve escolher outro ancião, que esteja na lista. Se o presidente da comissão judicativa ainda for ancião na congregação onde o caso foi cuidado, mas não for designado para servir como presidente da comissão de readmissão, ele deverá fazer parte da comissão de readmissão, mesmo que a comissão fique com quatro membros. — Veja 20:4; B:1; sfl 14:20.

7. Se uma pessoa que foi desassociada por abuso sexual de menores se mudar e pedir readmissão em outra congregação, o coordenador do corpo de anciãos da nova congregação deve entrar em contato com seu superintendente de circuito. O superintendente de circuito vai designar um ancião experiente da lista de irmãos qualificados para cuidar de assuntos complexos para servir como presidente da comissão de readmissão na nova congregação. — Veja 13:6; sfl 14:21.

COMISSÕES DE APELAÇÃO

8. Se a comissão judicativa receber uma carta de apelação dentro do prazo de sete dias, contados a partir da data em que a pessoa foi informada de sua desassociação, o presidente deverá avisar imediatamente o superintendente de circuito. O superintendente de circuito vai providenciar que uma comissão de apelação seja formada. (sfl 17:1) Antes de designar uma comissão de apelação, o superintendente de circuito deve obter o nome do acusado, a etnia, o(s) pecado(s) de que está sendo acusado e alguns fatos sobre o caso. Com essas informações, o superintendente de circuito deve verificar quem são os anciãos das congregações vizinhas e decidir quais dentre eles são os mais qualificados para cuidar dessa apelação. Poderá usar como base a lista de irmãos qualificados para cuidar de assuntos complexos, mas os escolhidos não precisam fazer parte dessa lista. Devem ser homens experientes, espirituais, equilibrados e imparciais, estar em dia com a leitura e o estudo das nossas publicações, ser capazes de lidar bondosamente com outros, ter muito respeito pela Bíblia e seus princípios, e ser capazes de tomar boas decisões. Se possível, os anciãos escolhidos pelo superintendente de circuito para a audiência de apelação não devem ser da mesma congregação da comissão judicativa. Não devem ser parentes dos anciãos da comissão judicativa nem da pessoa que apelou, nem devem ter muita amizade com nenhum deles. O superintendente de circuito deve escolher o presidente da comissão de apelação. — Veja 13:5.

9. Ao escolher anciãos para servir numa comissão de apelação, o superintendente de circuito deve lembrar a eles que recapitulem, antes e durante suas deliberações, informações relevantes no livro Pastoreiem e também qualquer orientação adicional relevante fornecida por Betel.

REGISTROS JUDICATIVOS

10. Os superintendentes de circuito não estão autorizados a abrir registros confidenciais das congregações, a não ser que receberam orientação de Betel para fazer isso. — Veja B:1.

PUBLICADORES COM RESTRIÇÕES JUDICATIVAS

11. Os anciãos devem acompanhar o progresso espiritual da pessoa que está sob restrições judicativas e ficar atentos para aos poucos remover as restrições dela. Alguns anciãos confundem as coisas e incluem entre os que têm restrições publicadores que não estão qualificados para privilégios adicionais (como pioneiro, servo ministerial ou ancião). Se for necessário, o superintendente de circuito deve ajudá-los a reconhecer o objetivo das restrições judicativas e como elas são removidas. — sfl 16:19, 22; 19:11.

CAPÍTULO CATORZE

Salões do Reino e Salões de Assembleias

MANUTENÇÃO DE SALÕES DO REINO

1. Betel se preocupa com as condições de todos os Salões do Reino. É verdade que a maioria das congregações cuida com muita satisfação da aparência, da segurança e da boa condição geral de seu Salão do Reino, mas pode haver casos em que os anciãos têm o costume de deixar os serviços necessários para depois, permitindo que as coisas se deteriorem. Se o superintendente de circuito observar que a limpeza ou a manutenção do Salão do Reino está deixando a desejar, ele deve tomar a iniciativa de bondosamente perguntar aos anciãos sobre isso. Talvez algumas coisas possam ser cuidadas durante a semana de sua visita. O superintendente de circuito deve relatar os problemas maiores para o Departamento de Serviço numa carta específica sobre o assunto, que pode ser enviada junto com seu relatório sobre a congregação. Os anciãos devem ser lembrados de obedecer a todas as orientações recebidas do Departamento Local de Projeto/Construção (LDC, sigla em inglês).

2. O superintendente de circuito deve confirmar com os anciãos se eles estão revisando anualmente o apoio financeiro da congregação para cobrir os custos de funcionamento do Salão do Reino e sua resolução para apoiar a construção mundial de Salões do Reino e de Salões de Assembleias. O superintendente de circuito também deve confirmar com os anciãos se os valores estabelecidos por resolução são razoáveis e de acordo com a situação local.

3. Nos casos em que duas ou mais congregações usam o mesmo Salão do Reino, os anciãos talvez precisem de esclarecimentos sobre os deveres da Comissão de Manutenção do Salão do Reino. Talvez seja útil recapitular com eles as orientações fornecidas por Betel a respeito desses deveres.

CONSTRUÇÃO DE SALÕES DO REINO

4. Não é necessário que toda congregação tenha um Salão do Reino em seu território. Em vez disso, deve-se dar atenção ao uso eficiente dos locais que já existem. O Departamento Local de Projeto/Construção (LDC) e o Departamento de Serviço decidem como cuidar da necessidade de Salões do Reino em cada região da melhor maneira possível. (Veja 5:21-25.) Quando as congregações estão envolvidas na construção ou na reforma de Salões do Reino, o superintendente de circuito deve mostrar interesse no projeto e incentivar os irmãos a dar apoio.

5. Ao visitarem as congregações, os superintendentes de circuito devem verificar o arquivo que contém as cópias das Petições para Voluntário do Departamento Local de Projeto/Construção (DC-50) e confirmar com os anciãos se as informações nas petições estão atualizadas. Devem também prestar atenção a publicadores batizados exemplares que tenham habilidades profissionais, mas que ainda não se ofereceram para o serviço voluntário, e incentivá-los a fazer isso. Nos discursos para a congregação, os superintendentes de circuito podem dar mais incentivo para que os irmãos apoiem o programa e elogiar o apoio que já dão, ajudando todos a reconhecer que essa é uma forma de serviço sagrado.

6. Os que participam nas atividades de construção e manutenção de locais de adoração fazem sacrifícios para entrar nessa modalidade de serviço sagrado, motivados por amor a Jeová e à sua organização. Se os superintendentes de circuito tiverem um conceito equilibrado sobre esses voluntários dispostos, mostrando consideração especial, fazendo elogios e dando encorajamento a eles, isso vai incentivá-los ainda mais a continuar colocando os interesses de outros e os de Jeová à frente dos deles. (Pro. 3:27; Fil. 4:5) Quando há servos e voluntários de construção no circuito, o superintendente de circuito deve se certificar de que não sejam desconsiderados quanto a privilégios na congregação e no circuito. Se um grupo de construção estiver sempre viajando de um projeto para outro, o LDC e o Departamento de Serviço deverão trabalhar em conjunto para que o grupo possa assistir à visita do superintendente de circuito a uma congregação da região.

DEDICAÇÃO DE SALÕES DO REINO

7. Algumas congregações talvez queiram convidar o superintendente de circuito para fazer o discurso de dedicação, se ele estiver disponível na data desejada. Nesse caso, a dedicação será programada para um horário que não coincida com as atividades normais do superintendente de circuito ao visitar uma congregação naquela semana. Qualquer exceção a isso deve ser aprovada por Betel. — Para saber as orientações mais recentes aos corpos de anciãos sobre dedicação de Salões do Reino, veja o documento Orientações sobre Dedicações de Salões do Reino (S-78).

SALÕES DE ASSEMBLEIAS

8. Os Salões de Assembleias são excelentes locais para receber instrução bíblica. Mas os superintendentes de circuito não devem promover entre os irmãos a ideia de construir um Salão de Assembleias ou deixá-los muito animados com um projeto desses antes que ele receba orientação de Betel para fazer isso. Se os irmãos procurarem o superintendente de circuito para sugerir a construção de Salão de Assembleias, ele deve informá-los de que é Betel que cuida desse assunto.

9. De vez em quando, os superintendentes de circuito talvez tenham observações a fazer sobre o funcionamento ou as condições do Salão de Assembleias da região. Seria bondoso considerar esses assuntos diretamente com o superintendente do Salão de Assembleias e, se necessário, informar Betel.

Capítulo Quinze

Campo de língua estrangeira

1. Quando o superintendente de circuito prega as boas novas de modo imparcial a pessoas que falam outra língua, isso tem um efeito positivo nos publicadores em seu circuito. (Atos 10:34, 35) É bom incentivar os interessados a assistir às reuniões na congregação local, mesmo que ela não realize reuniões na língua materna deles. Ao serem recebidos com amor pela congregação, eles ficarão animados e farão mais progresso. — Rom. 15:7.

2. Se o território de uma congregação tiver uma comunidade que fala outro idioma e ainda não houver nenhuma congregação ou grupo desse idioma na região, o superintendente de circuito deve conversar com os anciãos sobre o assunto. Talvez essa comunidade não seja grande o suficiente para justificar a formação de um pré-grupo ou grupo e não haja nativos do idioma na congregação. Nesse caso, a congregação pode encaminhar as revisitas e os estudos para a congregação ou grupo mais próximo que fala essa língua. Se os publicadores dessa congregação ou grupo morarem longe dos interessados, eles podem fazer as revisitas e dirigir os estudos por telefone ou chamadas de vídeo. Toda vez que o superintendente de circuito visitar a congregação, ele deve continuar a observar o progresso do campo de língua estrangeira.

3. Se a comunidade que fala outro idioma é grande o suficiente para justificar a formação de um pré-grupo ou grupo, o superintendente de circuito deve tomar providências para organizar a pregação nessa língua. (sfl 24) Talvez seja bom recomendar a Betel a realização de um curso de idioma. (Veja 15:20-22.) Algumas comunidades de pessoas que falam outro idioma se estendem para além dos limites do território de uma congregação ou circuito. Nesse caso, os corpos de anciãos e os superintendentes de circuito envolvidos devem chegar a um acordo para que a obra de pregação seja realizada de forma amorosa e eficaz.

GRUPOS DE LÍNGUA ESTRANGEIRA

4. Quando o superintendente de circuito é informado pelo Departamento de Serviço de que foi aprovado um grupo de língua estrangeira no circuito, ele deve incentivar as congregações próximas a entrar em contato com a congregação anfitriã do grupo quando encontrarem pessoas interessadas no território que falam a língua do grupo. Dessa forma, o grupo poderá ajudar as congregações próximas a revisitar os interessados e dar mais testemunho. Os interessados poderão frequentar a congregação que preferirem.

5. Quando o superintendente de circuito visitar uma congregação que é anfitriã de um grupo, ele deverá dar atenção às necessidades espirituais do grupo. Isso pode incluir trabalhar com os publicadores do grupo no campo daquela língua. Os anciãos ou servos ministeriais que apoiam o grupo podem se beneficiar de receber ajuda prática na organização desse trabalho de pregação. O grupo deve ser incentivado a trabalhar debaixo da supervisão direta do corpo de anciãos. O superintendente de circuito também deve lembrar os anciãos sobre a necessidade de apoiar e pastorear os publicadores que trabalham no grupo.

6. O superintendente de circuito deve incluir no seu relatório sobre a congregação um breve relatório adicional sobre o progresso do grupo e quaisquer necessidades específicas que existam. Ele deve responder às seguintes perguntas: A congregação deve continuar sendo a anfitriã do grupo? O número de pessoas que falam a língua do grupo é grande o suficiente para justificar que o grupo continue? Os anciãos locais mostram por ações que estão interessados no progresso do grupo? Ele recomenda que o grupo receba uma visita de uma semana inteira? (Essa visita vai animar e unir o grupo mesmo que o superintendente de circuito não fale a língua do grupo.) Seria uma boa ideia programar a visita de um superintendente de circuito ou de um superintendente de circuito substituto que fala a língua do grupo? Betel pode aprovar que um superintendente de circuito faça uma visita só para o grupo, separado da congregação anfitriã. Pode ser um superintendente de circuito que fala a língua do grupo ou não. Essas visitas devem ser feitas no máximo uma vez por ano.

7. Depois de receber aprovação para visitar o grupo por uma semana inteira, o superintendente de circuito deve seguir a seguinte programação: na terça-feira à tarde, ele analisa os Registros de Publicador de Congregação (S-21) dos membros do grupo. Ele programa saídas de serviço de campo para o período de quarta-feira a domingo. Assiste a todas as reuniões que o grupo estiver realizando. Se o grupo já tem permissão para receber a transmissão ou a gravação de reuniões de outra congregação, ele assiste junto com o grupo. (Veja 15:10.) Faz um discurso público para o grupo. (be p. 55 quadro) Durante essa semana especial de atividades, o grupo pode realizar o estudo da Sentinela abreviado, seguido de um discurso de serviço feito pelo superintendente de circuito. Seus discursos devem ser interpretados e, se ele concordar, a oração final também pode ser interpretada. Mas, se ele preferir, um irmão fluente no idioma do grupo pode fazer a oração final. A programação de reuniões da congregação anfitriã ou de outras congregações que se reúnem no mesmo Salão do Reino não deve ser mudada por causa da visita ao grupo. Se o corpo de anciãos da congregação anfitriã tiver dúvidas sobre como apoiar melhor as atividades do grupo, o superintendente de circuito poderá se reunir com eles. Se necessário, poderá também se reunir com os pioneiros regulares, pioneiros especiais e missionários em campo que são membros do grupo para considerar situações específicas que eles enfrentam no campo daquela língua. Ele também pode obter informações de irmãos espiritualmente maduros que são nativos do idioma. No final da visita, ele deve enviar uma breve carta sobre o que foi realizado durante a visita ao grupo, incluindo as seguintes informações sobre a composição e as atividades do grupo:

(1) População estimada que fala o idioma

(2) Total de endereços confirmados de pessoas que falam o idioma

(3) Total de publicadores ativos (incluindo pioneiros e missionários em campo)

(4) Número de pioneiros regulares, pioneiros especiais e missionários em campo

(5) Número de anciãos

(6) Número de servos ministeriais

(7) Média de assistência às reuniões

(8) Número de estudos bíblicos dirigidos

8. Se um superintendente de circuito ou superintendente de circuito substituto que fala a língua do grupo visitar o grupo e achar que um irmão dali se qualifica para mais privilégios, seria bom que ele enviasse suas observações para o superintendente de circuito que visita a congregação anfitriã. Esse superintendente de circuito deve considerar o assunto com os anciãos em sua próxima visita. Assim, os anciãos vão saber do potencial do irmão do grupo e talvez queiram recomendá-lo no futuro. — Pro. 15:22.

CONGREGAÇÕES DE LÍNGUA ESTRANGEIRA

9. Talvez haja no circuito uma congregação em outra língua. Nesse caso, os discursos do superintendente de circuito devem ser interpretados e, se ele concordar, a oração final também pode ser interpretada. Mas, se ele preferir, um irmão fluente no idioma da congregação pode fazer a oração final. Ele deve indicar no seu relatório sobre a visita à congregação se seria bom programar a visita de um superintendente de circuito ou superintendente de circuito substituto que fale o idioma da congregação.

MÉTODOS ALTERNATIVOS PARA ASSISTIR ÀS REUNIÕES CONGREGACIONAIS

10. Congregações pequenas ou isoladas e congregações anfitriãs de pré-grupos ou grupos de língua estrangeira podem pedir a aprovação do superintendente de circuito para usar gravações de reuniões na língua desejada, disponíveis no JW Stream. Se o superintendente de circuito achar que o pedido é válido, ele pode aprová-lo. Se não houver no JW Stream gravações na língua desejada, as congregações pequenas ou isoladas e as congregações anfitriãs de pré-grupos ou grupos de língua estrangeira podem pedir aprovação para receber a transmissão ou a gravação de reuniões de outra congregação. Se o superintendente de circuito achar que o pedido é válido e a congregação que realiza as reuniões na língua desejada estiver em seu circuito, ele deve entrar em contato com o corpo de anciãos dessa congregação e perguntar se eles estão dispostos a enviar a transmissão ou a gravação. Se essa congregação for de outro circuito, ele deve entrar em contato com o superintendente do outro circuito, que por sua vez vai entrar em contato com a congregação que realiza as reuniões na língua desejada. Se essa congregação estiver no território de outra filial, o superintendente de circuito deve entrar em contato com o Departamento de Serviço de sua filial para obter orientação. Se o superintendente de circuito aprovar que uma congregação pequena ou isolada receba periodicamente a transmissão das reuniões de outra congregação, espera-se que a congregação pequena ou isolada se esforce para começar a realizar todas as suas reuniões assim que possível.

ASSEMBLEIAS DE CIRCUITO

11. Para obter instruções sobre a realização de assembleias de circuito em outro idioma, veja o documento Orientações para a Organização de Assembleias (S-330).

CONGRESSOS

12. Receber transmissões ou gravações: Um pré-grupo ou grupo de língua estrangeira talvez queira receber a transmissão ou gravação do programa de um congresso na sua língua. Talvez uma congregação de língua estrangeira também peça isso se seu congresso designado não for apresentado em sua língua. A congregação pode pedir aprovação ao superintendente de circuito para receber a gravação ou a transmissão do programa do congresso. O pedido pode ser feito para a congregação inteira assistir ou só para um pré-grupo ou grupo vinculado a ela. Se ele achar que o pedido é válido, deve entrar em contato com o Setor de Congressos e Assembleias, do Departamento de Serviço, e responder às seguintes perguntas:

(1) Que congregação está fazendo o pedido? Quantas pessoas são esperadas para assistir ao programa? O pedido está sendo feito para a congregação inteira assistir, ou só para um pré-grupo ou grupo vinculado a ela?

(2) Onde o programa será apresentado? É melhor que ele seja apresentado ao mesmo tempo e no mesmo local que o congresso designado. Talvez seja possível usar uma sala adicional no local do congresso. Se não, o pré-grupo, grupo ou congregação deve assistir a seu congresso designado e depois assistir a transmissão ou a gravação na sua língua em outro dia e local. Se o programa será apresentado num Salão do Reino, os corpos de anciãos das congregações que usam o local aprovaram isso? (Os dias e horários das reuniões não devem ser mudados para que o Salão do Reino seja usado para apresentar o programa do congresso. Se necessário, pode-se usar uma sala adicional no Salão do Reino ou outro local adequado sem ser o Salão do Reino.) Existe algum ancião ou servo ministerial capacitado que possa supervisionar os preparativos?

(3) O JW Stream tem a gravação do congresso na língua desejada? Se tiver, assistir a essa gravação é melhor do que receber a transmissão do congresso ao vivo.

13. Se uma congregação receber aprovação para assistir à gravação ou à transmissão do programa do congresso, ela deve realizar o estudo da Sentinela abreviado, como é feito na visita do superintendente de circuito, em vez de assistir a uma gravação de um estudo de uma semana anterior. O mesmo se aplica a um grupo que costuma realizar seu próprio estudo da Sentinela. Se o grupo ainda não realiza seu próprio estudo da Sentinela, os anciãos locais podem decidir o que fazer.

14. Se Betel aprovar que o congresso seja apresentado em outra data e em outro local diferente do congresso designado e se publicadores de mais de uma congregação vão assistir a ele, o superintendente de circuito deve designar uma congregação para ser anfitriã do congresso. Além disso, ele deve designar um ancião ou servo ministerial capacitado para supervisionar o evento. Ele deve organizar os irmãos para cuidar da limpeza, do estacionamento, etc.

15. Caixas de donativos devem ser colocadas no local. Dois irmãos devem recolher os donativos e registrar o valor. Esses donativos devem ser depositados na conta bancária da congregação anfitriã. Esses recursos podem ser usados para cobrir as despesas diretamente relacionadas ao evento. O valor que sobrar deve ser enviado para a filial. Se forem usadas gravações para assistir ao congresso, as orações devem ser feitas localmente.

16. Interpretação simultânea: Se não for possível apresentar partes do programa na língua desejada e se não for possível receber a transmissão ou gravação de um congresso nessa língua, as circunstâncias talvez justifiquem a interpretação simultânea num congresso. Só se deve fazer interpretação simultânea em congressos depois que o circuito já tiver realizado assembleias com interpretação simultânea ou inteiramente nessa língua. O superintendente de circuito deve considerar cuidadosamente com os irmãos locais responsáveis se essa interpretação é necessária ou prática.

17. Em outros casos, outro congresso já pode ter sido programado para a língua desejada. Se os publicadores de uma congregação ou grupo quiserem assistir a esse congresso, não há objeção em eles fazerem isso. A boa comunicação entre os superintendentes de circuito envolvidos vai ajudar a resolver questões sobre a programação da visita à congregação ou grupo.

18. Quando o superintendente de circuito achar apropriado fazer um pedido de interpretação simultânea, ele deverá enviar um relatório explicando os motivos do pedido para o Setor de Congressos e Assembleias, do Departamento de Serviço. Esse pedido deve ser feito até 1.° de setembro do ano anterior ao congresso. No relatório, ele deverá responder às seguintes perguntas: Quantos publicadores e pessoas interessadas dependem da interpretação simultânea do programa? Quanto do programa pode ser interpretado? Quantos anciãos e servos ministeriais se qualificam para interpretar o programa? Entre os outros publicadores, quantos se qualificam para interpretar o programa? Além disso, o superintendente de circuito deve recomendar um ancião para cuidar da escolha dos intérpretes e para coordenar todo o processo. (As instruções do documento Orientações para a Organização de Assembleias [S-330] sobre interpretação simultânea em assembleias de circuito se aplicam também à interpretação simultânea em congressos.) Se esse pedido for aprovado, Betel tomará as providências necessárias para que haja interpretação simultânea.

19. Sessões em outra língua: Se for aprovado realizar sessões em outra língua, oradores qualificados apresentarão partes selecionadas diretamente nessa língua. Essas partes podem incluir o discurso temático, os discursos de lançamento, o discurso de batismo, o discurso público, e assim por diante. Na medida do possível, as outras partes do programa podem ser apresentadas usando gravações ou interpretação simultânea. As sessões são realizadas numa sala ou área separada ao mesmo tempo em que um congresso é realizado inteiramente na língua principal. Se o superintendente de circuito de uma língua específica achar que há um número suficiente de oradores e intérpretes qualificados, ele deve recomendar para o Setor de Congressos e Assembleias, do Departamento de Serviço, a realização de sessões nessa língua. Esse pedido deve ser feito até 1.° de junho do ano anterior ao congresso. Nesse relatório, ele deve responder às seguintes perguntas: Quantos publicadores e pessoas interessadas tirariam proveito do programa? Quantos anciãos e servos ministeriais se qualificam para fazer partes e/ou interpretar o programa? Quantas partes os irmãos designados realmente teriam condições de apresentar? Entre os outros publicadores, quantos se qualificam para interpretar o programa? Com base nas avaliações recebidas do campo, Betel designará os oradores e os intérpretes para todas as sessões em outras línguas. Betel designará também um irmão para coordenar tudo o que for necessário para a realização das sessões.

20. Congressos realizados inteiramente em outra língua: Depois de se realizarem assembleias de circuito inteiras em outra língua e sessões de congresso nessa língua, o crescimento do campo talvez justifique pensar em realizar um congresso inteiro nessa língua. O superintendente de circuito deve enviar um relatório para o Setor de Congressos e Assembleias, do Departamento de Serviço, para explicar as razões do pedido. Esse pedido precisa ser feito até 1.° de junho do ano anterior ao congresso. No relatório, ele deve responder às seguintes perguntas: Quantas pessoas são esperadas para assistir ao congresso? Quantos anciãos e servos ministeriais se qualificam para fazer discursos no programa? Se o pedido for aprovado, Betel tomará as providências necessárias.

CURSOS DE IDIOMA

21. Ao recomendar um curso de idioma, o superintendente de circuito deve responder às seguintes perguntas: Qual é a população estimada da comunidade que fala o idioma? O território já foi organizado? Quantos endereços cadastrados já foram registrados em territórios? O território precisa ser mais bem coberto? Há alguma congregação ou grupo na região realizando reuniões no idioma? O corpo de anciãos dessa congregação está disposto a servir como anfitrião do curso de idioma e tem condições para isso? Há irmãos na região que assistiram ao seminário sobre ensino de idiomas realizado por Betel? Se houver, qual deles você recomenda para exercer a liderança como instrutor da turma? Ele está disposto e disponível? Se a congregação ou grupo do idioma desejado não pertencer ao seu circuito, já entrou em contato com o respectivo superintendente de circuito para obter seus comentários sobre a organização do curso? Se a congregação ou grupo do idioma pertencer ao seu circuito, já analisou essa recomendação com outros superintendentes de circuito na região? Que circuito você recomenda que seja convidado para o curso, se Betel aprovar que ele seja realizado? O superintendente desse circuito deseja coordenar o curso e está disponível para isso? Se o superintendente de circuito que recomenda o curso achar que mais de um circuito deve ser convidado, deverá entrar em contato com os superintendentes de circuito envolvidos e fazer uma recomendação conjunta. — Veja o documento Instruções para Organizar Cursos de Idioma (S-367).

22. Se um ancião ou servo ministerial souber falar o idioma e tiver potencial para servir como instrutor de idioma, o superintendente de circuito poderá dar a ele uma Petição para Assistir ao Seminário sobre Ensino de Idiomas (S-360). Visto que os instrutores de um curso de idioma precisam cuidar de certos deveres administrativos que seriam mais bem cuidados por irmãos, irmãs não podem servir como instrutoras. Mas irmãs qualificadas podem ser assistentes desses irmãos. Se houver grande necessidade, mas não houver nenhum instrutor disponível, o superintendente de circuito deve incentivar os publicadores a fazer o melhor que puderem para aprender o idioma. — w08 15/08 pp. 21-25; g 03/07 pp. 10-12; w06 15/03 pp. 17-20; g00 08/01 pp. 12-13.

CAPÍTULO DEZESSEIS

Pioneiros

1. Os superintendentes de circuito devem ajudar os pioneiros regulares a permanecer no serviço e incentivar outros a pensar na possibilidade de entrar para o serviço de pioneiro. Ao incentivar o serviço de pioneiro regular, não devem pressionar ou coagir as pessoas, nem deixá-las envergonhadas. A Petição para o Serviço de Pioneiro Regular (S-205) não deve ser distribuída indiscriminadamente como forma de incentivar o serviço de pioneiro. Os pioneiros devem ter disposição e querer servir mais a Jeová. — Isa. 6:8.

AJUDA ESPIRITUAL E PRÁTICA

2. Ao examinar os Registros de Publicador de Congregação (S-21) na terça-feira, o superintendente de circuito deve verificar as atividades dos pioneiros. Depois de examinar os registros, ele pode pedir a um membro da comissão de serviço da congregação que comente a respeito de tendências, pontos para elogiar e aspectos em que se pode dar ajuda ou conselho. Se possível, deve trabalhar no ministério com todos os pioneiros durante a semana, mas principalmente com os que precisam de mais ajuda. O superintendente de circuito e o superintendente do serviço poderão incentivar e dar sugestões práticas aos que tiverem algum problema. Se o pioneiro achar difícil fazer uma programação que o ajude a cumprir o requisito de horas, o superintendente de circuito pode conversar com ele sobe o assunto e dar sugestões práticas para ele saber usar bem o tempo. Outros pioneiros talvez precisem de ajuda para pregar e ensinar melhor e assim terem mais alegria no ministério.

3. Os que estiverem alistados como pioneiros auxiliares durante a visita do superintendente de circuito são convidados a assistir à reunião inteira com os pioneiros regulares, pioneiros especiais e missionários em campo na congregação. Os que servem como pioneiros auxiliares em março, em abril ou durante a visita regular do superintendente de circuito têm a opção de cumprir um requisito de 30 horas. Essa opção também está disponível quando o superintendente de circuito recebe aprovação para fazer uma visita de uma semana inteira a um grupo de língua estrangeira. Nesse caso, ele deve informar a congregação do requisito opcional de 30 horas com bastante antecedência. (Veja 4:1.) Esse requisito opcional de 30 horas é limitado a quatro vezes por ano.

4. Betel fornece o esboço S-335, que deve ser usado para realizar a reunião com os pioneiros na primeira metade do ano de serviço. Para a segunda metade do ano de serviço, o superintendente de circuito deve elaborar seu próprio esboço. Esse esboço deve atender às necessidades locais, e também incluir matéria que vai fortalecer espiritualmente os pioneiros e elogios por eles colocarem os interesses de outros e de Jeová à frente dos deles. Também deve incluir sugestões práticas para ajudá-los a continuar fazendo um bom ministério com alegria.

5. O superintendente de circuito deve usar bem a Bíblia durante toda a reunião. Também pode usar pontos interessantes do Livro da Escola do Serviço de Pioneiro, sugestões do Nosso Ministério do Reino e da Apostila da Reunião Vida e Ministério, além de informações das reuniões especiais com os pioneiros em assembleias de circuito passadas. Às vezes, um pioneiro de outro circuito talvez peça para assistir a essa reunião. (Veja 4:12.) O superintendente de circuito pode decidir se sua esposa deve ou não assistir à reunião. Se a congregação só tiver uma pioneira, ele poderá pedir à esposa, ao superintendente do serviço ou a outro ancião para estar presente. Ele não deverá se reunir sozinho com a irmã.

6. Na reunião de anciãos durante a semana da visita, osuperintendente de circuito deve considerar as atividades e as circunstâncias dos pioneiros. Seria bom que os anciãos programassem tempo para trabalhar com os pioneiros nos diversos aspectos do ministério.

7. Talvez fique evidente que certo pioneiro não tem condições de continuar no serviço, apesar de já ter recebido muita ajuda do superintendente de circuito e dos anciãos. Talvez esteja muito atrasado nas horas do ano de serviço corrente, não tenha cumprido o requisito no(s) ano(s) de serviço anterior(es), e sua situação provavelmente não mudará em breve. Nesses casos, o superintendente de circuito deve se reunir com a comissão de serviço da congregação para perguntar se eles acham que o pioneiro ainda se qualifica. Por outro lado, se o motivo de o pioneiro não cumprir o requisito de horas é porque trabalha muito em projetos da organização, ele poderá receber consideração especial. — sfl 9.

PIONEIROS ESPECIAIS E MISSIONÁRIOS EM CAMPO

8. Os superintendentes de circuito devem mostrar profundo interesse nos pioneiros especiais e nos pioneiros especiais temporários que estiverem servindo na congregação visitada. Devem sair com eles no serviço de campo, conhecê-los mais pessoalmente, procurar encorajá-los, dar sugestões para ajudá-los a cumprir melhor sua designação, e tentar compreender suas necessidades. Todo ano de serviço, na sua primeira visita à congregação, o superintendente de circuito deve ter uma conversa reservada com o coordenador do corpo de anciãos para obter seus comentários sobre as atividades de cada pioneiro especial e pioneiro especial temporário e se esses pioneiros estão enfrentando algum problema de saúde, financeiro, de moradia, etc.

9. Se houver alguma necessidade especial, o superintendente de circuito deve programar uma visita de pastoreio ao pioneiro especial ou pioneiro especial temporário. Depois de terminar a visita à congregação, o superintendente de circuito deve fornecer uma explicação clara e concisa da situação do pioneiro no Relatório de Qualificações Pessoais (S-326) que é enviado para o Departamento de Serviço. — Veja 5:17-18.

10. Se o superintendente de circuito acha que seria bom para o pioneiro especial ele ser designado a uma congregação diferente por causa de uma mudança nas necessidades das congregações, ou que ele merece receber consideração especial, o superintendente de circuito deve apresentar sua recomendação para o Departamento de Serviço. Nos casos em que o pioneiro especial está muito limitado por causa da idade ou de problemas de saúde, Betel vai decidir se ele (ou ela) deve ter o requisito de horas reduzido.

11. Os missionários em campo são supervisionados diretamente por Betel e recebem visitas de pastoreio anuais de membros da Comissão de Filial ou de outros anciãos que servem em Betel. Mesmo assim, o superintendente de circuito deve reservar algum tempo para os missionários em campo durante a visita à congregação. Deve trabalhar com eles no ministério. Os missionários ficarão muito gratos pelos elogios e encorajamento do superintendente de circuito. Durante a visita, o superintendente de circuito deve procurar observar as circunstâncias pessoais dos missionários e como eles estão se saindo no ministério. Assim, ele estará em condições de fazer um relatório claro e exato quando tiver que enviar um formulário S-326 para Betel. (Veja 5:17.) Nos casos em que o missionário em campo está muito limitado por causa da idade ou de problemas de saúde, Betel vai decidir se ele (ou ela) deve ter o requisito de horas reduzido.

ESCOLA DO SERVIÇO DE PIONEIRO

12. Para saber detalhes sobre a Escola do Serviço de Pioneiro, veja o documento Orientações para o Instrutor da Escola do Serviço de Pioneiro (S-255).

PIONEIROS REGULARES ENFERMOS

13. Os anciãos devem consultar o superintendente de circuito antes de aprovar que um pioneiro entre na lista de pioneiros regulares enfermos. — sfl 9:19-20.

Capítulo Dezessete

Designação e remoção de anciãos e servos ministeriais

1. Como representantes designados do Corpo Governante e de acordo com o precedente bíblico em Atos 14:23, os superintendentes de circuito são responsáveis pela designação e remoção de anciãos e servos ministeriais, com base nas recomendações dos anciãos locais. (sfl 8) O superintendente de circuito não deve fazer designações ou remoções durante sua visita regular a uma congregação sem antes considerar o assunto com os anciãos locais. Ao avaliar a designação ou a remoção de um ancião ou servo ministerial, o superintendente de circuito deve se sentir à vontade para consultar o Departamento de Serviço ou um superintendente de circuito experiente sempre que achar que isso vai ajudá-lo a tomar a decisão.

2. Designar e remover anciãos e servos ministeriais é uma pesada responsabilidade. É confiada a homens que são bondosos, imparciais e justos. (Êxo. 18:21) Ao considerar recomendações, quer para designação quer para remoção, os superintendentes de circuito não devem impor seu ponto de vista e sua opinião pessoal ou estabelecer regras próprias. (1 Cor. 4:6) Se os anciãos não concordarem com o superintendente de circuito, ele deve avaliar os fatos cuidadosamente, tomando uma decisão baseada nas qualificações bíblicas. (Pro. 11:2; 18:13) Os superintendentes de circuito devem se esforçar em imitar a Jeová e a seu Filho, cuidando dos assuntos com amor e paciência. (Deut. 10:17; 16:18, 19; Isa. 42:1-4) Dessa maneira, os superintendentes de circuito mostram profundo respeito e submissão a Jeová e ao Cabeça da congregação cristã, Jesus Cristo. — Efé. 1:22, 23.

DESIGNAÇÕES DURANTE A VISITA REGULAR À CONGREGAÇÃO

3. Quando o corpo de anciãos de uma congregação decide recomendar que um ou mais irmãos sejam designados na próxima visita do superintendente de circuito, a comissão de serviço da congregação deve preencher e enviar um formulário Recomendações para Designação de Anciãos e Servos Ministeriais (S-62) pelo menos um mês antes da visita. Se os anciãos usarem a versão on-line do formulário, as informações serão automaticamente enviadas para o superintendente de circuito e para o Departamento de Serviço. Se os anciãos usarem a versão em PDF ou em papel, o superintendente de circuito deve encaminhar imediatamente o formulário ao Departamento de Serviço. Essas recomendações não devem ser consideradas pelo superintendente de circuito até que ele receba de Betel a permissão para prosseguir. Mesmo recebendo essa permissão, isso não significa que Betel aprovou a recomendação. Significa apenas que o superintendente de circuito pode considerar a recomendação na próxima visita. Betel não verifica a idade da pessoa, situação marital, designações ou remoções anteriores e assim por diante. Essa responsabilidade recai sobre o corpo de anciãos e o superintendente de circuito. Se até o começo da semana da visita à congregação o superintendente de circuito ainda não tiver recebido a permissão de Betel para considerar uma recomendação, ele pode telefonar para o Departamento de Serviço a fim de verificar o assunto.

4. Antes do início da visita (com não mais de um ou dois dias de antecedência), talvez quando outros registros da congregação forem entregues ao superintendente de circuito, os anciãos fornecerão pormenores que o ajudarão a ter uma visão completa das qualificações do(s) irmão(s) que está(ão) sendo recomendado(s) para designação. Essas informações incluiriam cartas de recomendação (ou talvez cartas de apresentação) de uma congregação anterior. Durante a semana, o superintendente de circuito deve se esforçar para observar os irmãos recomendados pelos anciãos. Por exemplo, eles são qualificados para ensinar da tribuna ou em particular? São zelosos no ministério? Se forem casados, sua esposa e os filhos que moram em casa são exemplares? (sfl 8:3-4) Se o superintendente de circuito achar que os anciãos passaram por alto um irmão qualificado, ele pode perguntar aos anciãos por que o irmão não foi recomendado e sugerir que os anciãos avaliem a possibilidade de recomendá-lo na próxima visita.

5. Durante a reunião com os anciãos na semana da visita, o superintendente de circuito deve considerar as qualificações bíblicas de cada irmão recomendado. No início dessa consideração, os requisitos devem ser lidos diretamente da Bíblia em voz alta. O corpo de anciãos pode tirar proveito da experiência e das observações do superintendente de circuito. Ele pode fazer perguntas para tirar as dúvidas que talvez tenha sobre os que estão sendo considerados. Deve também dar tempo para que outros se expressem. Se durante a consideração surgirem fortes diferenças de opinião, ele deve ajudar os anciãos fornecendo calmamente orientações bíblicas e lembretes bondosos do que já foi publicado pela organização. O objetivo dessa consideração é fazer uma avaliação equilibrada para ver se a pessoa está razoavelmente à altura das qualificações bíblicas. — 1 Tim. 3:1-10; Tito 1:5-9; 1 Ped. 5:2, 3.

6. O apêndice D contém uma lista de verificação que tem o objetivo de ajudar os superintendentes de circuito a considerar as qualificações dos irmãos recomendados. A lista de verificação não deve ser lida palavra por palavra aos anciãos, visto que ela descreve várias situações diferentes, e nem todas se aplicarão. Além disso, não se devem dar cópias da lista de verificação aos anciãos. Se o superintendente de circuito concluir que o irmão não está razoavelmente à altura dos requisitos bíblicos, deve informar os anciãos disso e explicar como eles podem ajudar o irmão a se qualificar no futuro.

7. Quando o superintendente de circuito decide designar um irmão, ele e outro ancião devem se reunir com o irmão para informá-lo de sua designação. Se o irmão estiver sendo (1) designado pela primeira vez como servo ministerial ou (2) redesignado como ancião ou servo ministerial por algum motivo que não seja a mudança de uma congregação para outra, o superintendente de circuito deve fazer as seguintes perguntas: "Há alguma coisa no seu passado, mesmo antes de seu batismo, ou na sua vida pessoal ou familiar que desqualificaria ou impediria você de aceitar esta designação? Há alguma outra razão para você não aceitar esta designação ou para não anunciá-la à congregação? Você já se envolveu alguma vez em abuso sexual de menores?" Se o irmão responder "não" a essas perguntas, o superintendente de circuito deve fornecer aos anciãos uma carta de designação assinada que inclui o nome do irmão na lista dos que foram designados durante a visita. (Veja 17:36; apêndice E.) O superintendente de circuito deve informar o Departamento de Serviço sobre a designação por meio do formulário Notificação de Designação ou Remoção (S-2). A designação será anunciada à congregação na próxima reunião do meio de semana.

8. Se o irmão aprovado para a designação não estiver presente no final da visita e for necessário fazer a ele as três perguntas mencionadas no parágrafo 7, o superintendente de circuito não deve incluir o nome dele numa eventual carta de designação deixada com os anciãos no fim da visita. Em vez disso, quando o irmão retornar, o coordenador do corpo de anciãos designará dois anciãos para fazer as três perguntas a ele. Depois disso, o coordenador do corpo de anciãos informará o superintendente de circuito sobre as respostas do irmão. Se ele responder "não" às perguntas, o superintendente de circuito deve fornecer aos anciãos uma carta de designação assinada. A designação do irmão será anunciada à congregação na primeira reunião do meio de semana depois do recebimento da carta de designação.

9. Se o irmão aprovado para a designação não estiver presente no final da visita, mas não for necessário fazer a ele as três perguntas mencionadas no parágrafo 7, o superintendente de circuito deve incluir o nome do irmão na carta de designação deixada com os anciãos no fim da visita. Quando o irmão retornar, dois anciãos se reunirão com ele para informá-lo de sua designação antes que seja anunciada à congregação.

AO CONSIDERAR A DESIGNAÇÃO DE IRMÃOS JOVENS

10. O mais importante para qualquer designação de um irmão são suas qualificações espirituais e não somente sua idade. Seria raro designar como ancião um irmão que tenha vinte e poucos anos. Os superintendentes de circuito devem ser razoáveis e equilibrados no seu modo de pensar. Irmãos designados como servos ministeriais quando jovens podem ter adquirido considerável experiência ao cuidar de diversas responsabilidades. Esses irmãos talvez já tenham cuidado das seguintes designações: atuar como servo de grupo, cumprir designações na reunião do meio de semana, dar discursos públicos na sua própria congregação (e em outras, se forem convidados), acompanhar os anciãos em visitas de pastoreio e cuidar de certas tarefas na organização de assembleias. Desse modo, são "examinados quanto à aptidão" e mostram que 'estão se esforçando' para ter mais responsabilidades. (1 Tim. 3:1) Se tiverem adquirido uma boa reputação na congregação e tiverem o respeito e o apreço dos irmãos por seu serviço diligente e fiel, talvez já sejam encarados como homens mais velhos em sentido espiritual.

11. Quando um irmão no fim da adolescência está sendo analisado para ser designado como servo ministerial, o superintendente de circuito deve levar em conta as designações que ele já tem na congregação, o que o torna notável como jovem, seus alvos espirituais, seu zelo pelo ministério e assim por diante. — w89 01/07 p. 29; sfl 8:5.

OS QUE TÊM ANTECEDENTES DE PECADO GRAVE

12. Se um irmão recomendado foi repreendido nos últimos três anos ou readmitido nos últimos cinco anos, o superintendente de circuito deve analisar com atenção o que diz o livro Pastoreiem, capítulo 8, parágrafo 7.

13. Os superintendentes de circuito precisam tomar cuidado para não redesignar cedo demais os irmãos que foram removidos do cargo de ancião ou servo ministerial por terem cometido um pecado grave. Uma redesignação apressada pode fazer a pessoa pensar que seu pecado não foi tão sério assim e pode deixar abalados os que se lembram de sua conduta errada. (1 Tim. 5:22) Antes de ser redesignados, os irmãos removidos por causa de um pecado devem voltar a ter uma boa reputação perante a congregação. Isso envolve criar um histórico convincente de lealdade a Jeová para compensar os efeitos do pecado cometido. Dependendo da gravidade do pecado, isso pode levar cinco, dez ou mais anos. Em casos de grande escândalo, um irmão talvez nunca consiga limpar sua reputação a ponto de se qualificar para servir como ancião ou servo ministerial. — Tito 1:6, 7.

14. Um irmão que entrou num casamento adúltero não se qualifica para servir como ancião ou servo ministerial enquanto o cônjuge inocente não falecer, não se casar novamente ou não cometer imoralidade sexual (porneía). Mesmo assim, pode ser que ele nunca se qualifique. (sfl 12:11) Ele também não se qualificaria para ser pioneiro auxiliar ou regular, ajudar a cuidar das publicações ou contas, servir como indicador ou receber designações similares. Assim, se os anciãos estiverem pensando em recomendar um irmão que se divor-ciou no passado, as circunstâncias do divórcio devem ser analisadas. Há quanto tempo isso ocorreu? Foi antes ou depois de seu batismo? O motivo do divórcio teve base bíblica? Se teve, quem cometeu o adultério? Ele teve alguma responsabilidade no fim do casamento? Quem iniciou o processo de divórcio? A esposa concordou em dar o divórcio? (w00 15/12 pp. 28-29) O irmão se casou de novo? Se ele já se casou de novo, quando foi? Ele mostra amor e lealdade em seu novo casamento? A congregação tem respeito por ele?

DESIGNAÇÕES ENTRE AS VISITAS REGULARES À CONGREGAÇÃO

15. Quando um irmão designado se muda para uma congregação com uma carta de recomendação favorável e a próxima visita do superintendente de circuito não está próxima, o corpo de anciãos pode recomendar sua redesignação imediata. Nesses casos, a comissão de serviço da congregação enviará ao superintendente de circuito o formulário Recomendações para Designação de Anciãos e Servos Ministeriais (S-62) junto com uma cópia da carta de recomendação da comissão de serviço da congregação anterior. Se a recomendação for aprovada, o superintendente de circuito deve escrever uma carta de designação, enviá-la ao novo corpo de anciãos e informar o Departamento de Serviço sobre a designação usando o formulário Notificação de Designação ou Remoção (S-2). (Veja 17:36; apêndice E.) Se a carta de apresentação da congregação anterior levantar dúvidas ou mencionar fatores que o desqualificariam, o superintendente de circuito pode incentivar os anciãos a esperar até sua próxima visita para fazer a recomendação, para que tenham a oportunidade de observar o irmão por mais tempo.

DESIGNAÇÕES EM CONGREGAÇÕES SEM ANCIÃOS

16. Quando o superintendente de circuito está visitando uma congregação (ou um grupo isolado que não é vinculado a nenhuma congregação) que não tem anciãos designados, ele deve ter bom senso ao determinar se um irmão se qualifica ou não para ser designado, usando como base o que observa no irmão e a reputação dele. Se for possível, é bom verificar isso com o superintendente de circuito anterior ou com os anciãos de outras congregações que conhecem o irmão. Antes de fazer a designação, o superintendente de circuito deve entrar em contato com o Departamento de Serviço para verificar se há alguma razão para não continuar com a designação. Ele deve fornecer as informações solicitadas no formulário Recomendações para Designação de Anciãos e Servos Ministeriais (S-62) por enviar o próprio formulário ou por outro meio. Se, na conclusão da visita, for necessário fazer ao irmão as perguntas alistadas no parágrafo 7, o superintendente de circuito poderá fazê-las sem que outro ancião esteja presente. — Veja B:1.

QUANDO SERVOS MINISTERIAIS ATUAM COMO SUBSTITUTOS NA COMISSÃO DE SERVIÇO DA CONGREGAÇÃO

17. Em congregações onde um ou mais servos ministeriais atuam como substitutos na comissão de serviço, o superintendente de circuito deve considerar com os anciãos as qualificações bíblicas dos irmãos recomendados para designação ou remoção. Os servos ministeriais não devem participar nessa consideração nem tomar conhecimento das recomendações.

DESIGNAÇÃO DO COORDENADOR DO CORPO DE ANCIÃOS

18. O superintendente de circuito é o responsável por fazer a designação do coordenador do corpo de anciãos, com base na recomendação do corpo de anciãos. Quando isso for necessário, essa designação será feita durante uma visita regular à congregação. O superintendente de circuito deve recapitular com o corpo de anciãos as qualificações mencionadas no livro Pastoreiem. Isso deve ser feito no começo da semana da visita, de preferência na terça-feira à noite, depois da reunião da congregação. Devem-se repassar esses pontos novamente com os anciãos mais tarde na semana ao considerar com eles as recomendações que tiverem feito. O nome do irmão designado como o novo coordenador do corpo de anciãos deve ser alistado na carta de designação com "(CCA)" após o nome. (Veja 17:36; apêndice E.) O superintendente de circuito deve informar o Departamento de Serviço sobre essa designação por meio do formulário Notificação de Designação ou Remoção (S-2). Mas isso não será necessário se o irmão designado já estiver servindo provisoriamente como coordenador do corpo de anciãos e o Departamento de Serviço já tiver sido notificado. — Veja 17:19.

19. Se o coordenador do corpo de anciãos for substituído provisoriamente entre uma visita e outra, a comissão de serviço da congregação deve imediatamente informar o superintendente de circuito, explicando os motivos da mudança. A comissão de serviço também deve enviar o formulário Coordenador do Corpo de Anciãos/Secretário — Mudança de Endereço (S-29) ao Departamento de Serviço. Se o novo coordenador do corpo de anciãos for designado durante uma visita regular, só será necessário enviar o formulário S-29 se os dados do irmão designado ainda não tiverem sido enviados por meio desse formulário.

20. O único cargo no corpo de anciãos que precisa ser designado pelo superintendente de circuito é o de coordenador do corpo de anciãos. O fato de ele ser designado pelo superintendente de circuito não o eleva acima dos outros anciãos do corpo. (1 Ped. 5:5) Todos os anciãos têm a mesma autoridade.

21. Os superintendentes de circuito não devem se apressar em pedir que um ancião se mude para outra congregação para servir como coordenador do corpo de anciãos. É verdade que talvez uma congregação precise de ajuda e todos os anciãos do corpo concordem que seria bom que um ancião capacitado de uma congregação próxima fosse transferido para lá, mas isso seria uma exceção. Em geral, é melhor trabalhar com os anciãos que já fazem parte do corpo, dando a eles incentivo e ajuda prática para que eles cuidem de suas responsabilidades.

DESIGNAÇÕES OU REMOÇÕES RECOMENDADAS POR BETEL

22. Às vezes, Betel designa um irmão que já serve como ancião ou servo ministerial (por exemplo, um pioneiro especial ou um formado da Escola para Evangelizadores do Reino) para servir numa congregação específica. Nesses casos, Betel recomendará ao superintendente de circuito que redesigne o irmão na nova congregação. Em outras situações, Betel recomenda a remoção de um irmão. Em casos assim, não há provisão para apelar da remoção. Quando receber recomendações desse tipo, o superintendente de circuito deve imediatamente mandar uma carta de designação ou remoção para a congregação do irmão e informar o Departamento de Serviço usando o formulário Notificação de Designação ou Remoção (S-2). (Veja 17:36; apêndice E.) Ele não deve esperar até sua próxima visita à congregação do irmão.

REMOÇÕES DURANTE A VISITA REGULAR À CONGREGAÇÃO

23. Geralmente, é melhor que as recomendações para remoção por causa de uma falta de critério de natureza não judicativa sejam enviadas durante a visita do superintendente de circuito e não entre as visitas. No início da visita, o superintendente de circuito deve receber todas as informações que possam ajudá-lo a ter uma visão completa do assunto, incluindo qualquer conclusão a que o corpo de anciãos talvez já tenha chegado. (sfl 8:31-33). Durante a reunião com os anciãos mais tarde na semana, o superintendente de circuito vai considerar as qualificações bíblicas do irmão. Se o superintendente de circuito concordar com a recomendação, ele e outro ancião devem informar o irmão sobre sua remoção antes do fim da visita. Naturalmente, se o ancião que está sendo removido assistir à reunião em que suas qualificações são reavaliadas, ele será informado da decisão naquela ocasião.

24. Se o irmão concordar com a decisão de removê-lo, o superintendente de circuito deve escrever uma carta de remoção, deixá-la com o corpo de anciãos e informar o Departamento de Serviço usando o formulário Notificação de Designação ou Remoção (S-2). (Veja 17:36; apêndice E.) O anúncio da remoção será feito na próxima reunião do meio de semana. Se o irmão discordar da decisão, ele deverá ser informado de seu direito de apelar. — Veja 17:35.

25. Se as qualificações de um ancião ou servo ministerial forem questionadas porque ele dedica poucas horas ao ministério, deve-se levar em conta a situação da pessoa. Por exemplo, embora o tempo gasto em projetos da organização não seja relatado como serviço de campo, também é serviço sagrado. Assim, um irmão não deve ser "castigado" se dedica grande parte do seu tempo a essas atividades e trabalha no serviço de campo menos tempo do que outros. Mas, se o irmão não estiver envolvido em projetos da organização, considere as seguintes perguntas: Ele está fazendo tudo que pode razoavelmente fazer, em vista da sua idade, saúde, obrigações familiares e outras responsabilidades na congregação ou na organização? Procura oportunidades para exercer a liderança no ministério e incentiva outros a participarem nele ao máximo? Tem boa atitude para com o serviço, reconhecendo sua importância e urgência? Poderia ser dado mais tempo a ele para melhorar, se ele quiser fazer isso? Talvez algumas sugestões práticas possam ajudá-lo a programar melhor o tempo. Se dá para ver que ele gosta e se empenha ao máximo pelo serviço, mas sua situação limita a participação dele, então provavelmente não será necessário removê-lo do cargo. Por outro lado, talvez seja necessário removê-lo do cargo se ficar claro que ele mostra uma atitude negativa para com o ministério e que não correspondeu depois de tentarem ajudá-lo amorosamente várias vezes, durante um longo período.

REMOÇÕES ENTRE AS VISITAS REGULARES À CONGREGAÇÃO

26. Se surgirem sérias dúvidas quanto às qualificações de um irmão e a próxima visita do superintendente de circuito não estiver próxima, o corpo de anciãos deve seguir o procedimento mencionado no livro Pastoreiem. Se, depois de terem reavaliado as qualificações de um irmão, os anciãos decidirem recomendar sua remoção, a comissão de serviço da congregação poderá enviar imediatamente sua recomendação ao superintendente de circuito. A carta deles deve fornecer informações completas e indicar se o irmão concorda ou não com a recomendação. Se o superintendente de circuito concordar com a recomendação e concluir que deve entrar em vigor imediatamente, deverá enviar uma carta de remoção ao corpo de anciãos. (Veja 17:36; apêndice E.) Ao receber a carta, o coordenador do corpo designará dois anciãos para informar o irmão sobre a decisão do superintendente de circuito. Se o irmão aceitar a decisão, o anúncio será feito na próxima reunião do meio de semana. O superintendente de circuito deve informar o Departamento de Serviço usando o formulário Notificação de Designação ou Remoção (S-2). Se o irmão não aceitar a decisão, será informado de seu direito de apelar, o anúncio à congregação ficará pendente, e o coordenador do corpo de anciãos informará o superintendente de circuito. — Veja 17:35.

27. Se a carta que recomenda a remoção de um irmão indicar que ele discorda da recomendação dos anciãos, ou se a razão para a reco-mendação for uma falta de critério que não é de conhecimento geral, o superintendente de circuito pode decidir esperar até sua próxima visita para considerar o assunto. Em casos assim, ele deve informar o corpo de anciãos sobre isso. Nesse meio tempo, o irmão continuará a servir como ancião ou servo ministerial, e o corpo de anciãos determinará quais responsabilidades na congregação ele terá nesse período, de acordo com as circunstâncias.

28. Os superintendentes de circuito não devem rapidamente remover do cargo um ancião ou servo ministerial, a menos que haja base sólida para isso. Um só erro de critério não desqualifica automaticamente um irmão que já possui um histórico de serviço fiel. Ao reavaliarem suas qualificações, deverão levar em conta os seguintes fatores: Ele foi aconselhado anteriormente? Perdeu o respeito dos outros? O corpo de anciãos tem certa medida de responsabilidade por deixar de aconselhá-lo? Ele tem problemas de saúde, responsabilidades familiares e assim por diante? Está determinado a corrigir os assuntos? O que ele mesmo acha sobre suas qualificações para servir?

29. A espiritualidade de alguns irmãos com Jeová é provada na questão de parentes desassociados. Por exemplo, alguns compareceram a festas de casamento onde desassociados estavam presentes. Isso é contrário à orientação de 1 Coríntios 5:11 sobre ‘parar de ter convivência’ com esse tipo de pessoa. Se o anfitrião da festa pretende desconsiderar essa clara orientação e convidar uma pessoa desassociada à recepção, ele tem a obrigação de informar a todos os convidados que um desassociado estará presente, para que decidam se irão ou não.

30. Normalmente, anciãos e servos ministeriais não são removidos do cargo por causa de idade avançada ou saúde debilitada, a menos que estejam biblicamente desqualificados e tenham perdido o respeito da congregação. Mesmo que a velhice tenha afetado a capacidade mental de um irmão, talvez não seja necessário recomendar sua remoção, a não ser que suas ações se tornem tão impróprias que os publicadores tenham perdido o respeito por ele. Mas, se ele desejar firmemente renunciar, seu pedido deve ser respeitado. — 1 Ped. 5:2; sfl 8:36.

SERVOS DE TEMPO INTEGRAL ESPECIAL QUE PASSAM POR PROBLEMAS

31. Talvez os anciãos locais queiram recomendar a remoção de um ancião ou servo ministerial que está servindo numa modalidade de tempo integral especial. Depois de conversar sobre o assunto com os anciãos locais, o superintendente de circuito deverá entrar em contato com o Departamento de Serviço antes de tomar uma decisão. — Pro. 15:22; sfl 12:43.

TRANSFERÊNCIAS PARA OUTRA CONGREGAÇÃO

32. No início de cada visita, os anciãos devem informar o superintendente de circuito sobre todos os anciãos ou servos ministeriais que se mudaram da congregação desde a última visita. Se o site jw.org ainda alistar o irmão como servindo na congregação ou se o superintendente de circuito não conseguir acessar o site, o superintendente de circuito deve informar o Departamento de Serviço por meio do formulário Notificação de Designação ou Remoção (S-2). Nesses casos, não se deve escrever uma carta de remoção.

33. Se um irmão designado planeja se mudar da congregação, o superintendente de circuito deve esperar até que ele realmente se mude para depois relacionar seu nome sob “Remoções” no formulário Notificação de Designação ou Remoção. Se o irmão apenas informou os anciãos de sua intenção de se mudar no futuro, o superintendente de circuito não deve alistá-lo como se já tivesse feito a mudança.

RENÚNCIAS, REMOÇÕES POR RAZÕES JUDICATIVAS E FALECIMENTOS

34. A comissão de serviço da congregação deve informar imediatamente o superintendente de circuito sobre: (1) a remoção de um ancião ou de um servo ministerial devido a renúncia, repreensão judicativa, desassociação ou dissociação; ou (2) o falecimento de um ancião ou de um servo ministerial. O superintendente de circuito deve então informar o Departamento de Serviço, usando o formulário Notificação de Designação ou Remoção (S-2). Para remoções resultantes de repreensão judicativa ou de renúncia, o superintendente de circuito também deve enviar uma carta de remoção para o corpo de anciãos. (Veja 17:36; apêndice E.) Não se deve escrever uma carta de remoção em casos de desassociação, dissociação ou falecimento.

APELAÇÕES DE REMOÇÃO

35. Se um ancião ou um servo ministerial discordar de sua remoção e desejar apelar, ele deverá enviar imediatamente uma breve carta ao Departamento de Serviço, com cópia para o corpo de anciãos e para o superintendente de circuito, explicando por que discorda da remoção. O anúncio da remoção ficará pendente, e a carta de remoção deverá ser destruída (se tiver sido escrita). Depois disso, o Departamento de Serviço escolherá um superintendente de circuito experiente para exercer a liderança em ouvir novamente o caso inteiro com o superintendente de circuito, o corpo de anciãos e o irmão que apelou da decisão. Apesar de o irmão que apelou da decisão não estar presente durante toda a consideração, deve-se permitir que ele explique sua opinião e responda a perguntas. Os superintendentes de circuito devem escutar o irmão atentamente e tratá-lo de forma bondosa e justa. Os superintendentes de circuito podem consultar o Departamento de Serviço. Depois que os superintendentes de circuito chegarem a uma decisão conjunta, não há o direito de outra apelação. Se for decidido que o irmão será removido, ele deve ser informado dessa decisão. O superintendente de circuito que visita a congregação do irmão que apelou deve escrever uma carta de remoção, enviá-la ao corpo de anciãos e informar o Departamento de Serviço usando o formulário Notificação de Designação ou Remoção (S-2). (Veja 17:36; apêndice E.) Depois que o corpo de anciãos receber a carta de remoção, o anúncio da remoção será feito na próxima reunião do meio de semana.

CARTAS DE DESIGNAÇÃO E REMOÇÃO

36. Fornecemos uma carta-modelo de designação e remoção no apêndice E. Devem-se usar as palavras exatas indicadas no modelo. A carta deve incluir o timbre do circuito, deve ser endereçada ao corpo de anciãos e deve incluir os nomes dos irmãos na congregação que estão sendo designados ou removidos. A data da carta será a data oficial das designações e/ou das remoções indicadas nela. A carta original assinada será deixada com os anciãos (ou enviada a eles) para que coloquem no arquivo confidencial da congregação. É permitido usar uma assinatura eletrônica. Uma cópia da carta deve ficar no arquivo do circuito. (Veja B:1.) Nenhuma outra informação com respeito às designações e remoções deve ser mantida no arquivo do circuito. Certas informações, como uma breve explicação do motivo de uma remoção, devem ser mantidas pelos anciãos no arquivo da congregação.

VISITAS DOS SUPERINTENDENTES DE CIRCUITO SUBSTITUTOS

37. Quando a congregação é informada que será visitada por um superintendente de circuito substituto, o superintendente de circuito deve informar aos anciãos que o substituto não está autorizado a fazer designações ou remoções. (Veja 21:14.) No final da visita, o substituto deverá encaminhar sua(s) recomendação(ões) junto com a(s) do corpo de anciãos para o superintendente de circuito considerar. (O substituto não precisa entrar em contato com o superintendente de circuito antes do fim da visita para saber se ele aprova uma recomendação.) Se o superintendente de circuito aprovar uma recomendação e for necessário fazer as três perguntas alistadas no parágrafo 7 ao irmão que está sendo designado, o superintendente de circuito deve orientar o coordenador do corpo de anciãos a designar dois anciãos para se reunir com o irmão e fazer as perguntas a ele. O coordenador do corpo de anciãos deverá informar ao superintendente de circuito quais foram as respostas do irmão. Se o irmão responder "não" ou se não for necessário fazer as perguntas, o superintendente de circuito deverá enviar aos anciãos uma carta de designação assinada. (Veja 17:36; apêndice E.) Assim que receberem a carta de designação, os anciãos informarão o irmão sobre sua designação, antes de anunciá-la à congregação na próxima reunião do meio de semana. Recomendações de remoção recebidas de um substituto deverão ser cuidadas da mesma forma que as recomendações de remoção recebidas entre uma visita e outra.

AUSÊNCIA DO CIRCUITO

38. Se o superintendente de circuito se ausentar do seu circuito por três meses ou menos (talvez para cuidar de uma emergência na família ou servir como instrutor numa escola bíblica), pode ser que ele consiga continuar cuidando das recomendações. Se ele não puder fazer isso, deve orientar as congregações em seu circuito a enviar as recomendações a serem consideradas numa visita regular diretamente para o Departamento de Serviço, usando a versão on-line do formulário Recomendações para Designação de Anciãos e Servos Ministeriais (S-62), se possível. As recomendações para designação ou remoção entre visitas devem ser enviadas diretamente para o Departamento de Serviço durante o período em que o superintendente de circuito estiver ausente. As recomendações de designação ou remoção serão cuidadas da seguinte maneira:

(1) Se a ausência durar menos de um mês: O superintendente de circuito pode aguardar até seu retorno à designação para considerar as recomendações.

(2) Se a ausência durar de um a três meses: Betel designará outro superintendente de circuito (talvez o superintendente de um circuito vizinho ou um que recentemente serviu nesse circuito) para considerar as recomendações recebidas de substitutos. O superintendente de circuito ausente orientará seus substitutos a encaminhar as recomendações ao outro superintendente de circuito. As cartas de designação ou remoção serão assinadas pelo outro superintendente de circuito e terão o timbre do circuito dele.

39. Se o superintendente de circuito for ficar ausente do seu circuito por mais de três meses, Betel designará outro superintendente de circuito para visitar as congregações no circuito.

40. É preferível que o superintendente de circuito entre em contato com o Departamento de Serviço, as congregações envolvidas e os superintendentes de circuito substitutos antes de se ausentar de sua designação. Mas, se isso não for possível, talvez por causa de uma emergência, Betel informará as congregações envolvidas e os substitutos.

LIVRO PASTOREIEM

41. Os anciãos são incentivados a usar a versão eletrônica do livro Pastoreiem, se possível. A vantagem disso é que a versão eletrônica pode ser atualizada com mais frequência que a versão impressa. Os anciãos que precisarem do livro impresso podem informar isso para o superintendente de serviço. Ele vai providenciar que os pedidos sejam enviados como de costume, o mais rápido possível. Na maioria dos casos, os superintendentes de circuito não precisam manter um estoque do livro Pastoreiem.

CAPÍTULO DEZOITO

Discursos de serviço

1. O objetivo dos discursos de serviço dos superintendentes de circuito é encorajar e motivar os irmãos a dar prioridade a fazer a vontade de Deus. Como o próprio nome indica, os discursos de serviço devem ajudar os irmãos nas congregações a ver a necessidade de gastar tempo no serviço de campo e em outras atividades relacionadas ao Reino, e a meditar nas coisas maravilhosas que Jeová realiza hoje. (Fil. 4:8; Tito 3:8) Os superintendentes de circuito devem ensinar com habilidade. O objetivo é ajudar todos os irmãos a cooperar com a organização e a ver que é um privilégio participar no serviço que Jeová nos deu para fazer antes do fim deste sistema.

2. Os superintendentes de circuito devem ficar atentos aos pontos bíblicos apresentados no decorrer do ano nas publicações, assembleias e congressos da organização para usá-los nos seus discursos de serviço. Com esses pontos, eles podem elaborar esboços flexíveis sobre assuntos motivadores. A partir desses esboços básicos, os superintendentes de circuito podem escolher e preparar discursos que atendam às necessidades das congregações visitadas a cada semana. Mesmo quando forem preparar um esboço fornecido por Betel (S-341), é bom que os superintendentes de circuito incluam pontos que atendam às necessidades específicas da congregação. Eles podem perceber essas necessidades ao verificar os registros e por consultar os anciãos. O discurso de serviço não deve ser usado para dar conselhos a anciãos ou servos ministeriais. Se houver um problema que afete todo o corpo de anciãos ou todo o corpo de irmãos designados, isso deve ser tratado em particular na reunião com os anciãos, e não diante da congregação inteira.

3. O discurso deve se basear principalmente na Palavra de Deus. Não se deve exagerar no uso de humor nem contar histórias só para divertir a assistência. O poder da Palavra de Deus, combinado com o espírito santo, é o que mexe com a assistência mais profundamente, visto que motiva, reanima, fortalece e encoraja os irmãos. Assim, os textos principais devem ser lidos, explicados e aplicados à assistência. Ao proferirem discursos de serviço, os próprios superintendentes de circuito devem ler os textos bíblicos e não pedir que alguém na assistência faça isso, visto que são eles que sabem os pontos que querem destacar. Os superintendentes de circuito devem dar vida aos relatos bíblicos. — Heb. 4:12.

4. Usar recursos visuais simples e de bom gosto pode dar bons resultados. (be pp. 247-250) Se o Salão do Reino já tiver equipamento de vídeo instalado, podem-se exibir desenhos, fotos ou gráficos. Mas os superintendentes de circuito não devem exibir nenhum vídeo em monitores ou telões, a menos que recebam instrução da organização para fazer isso. (Como exceção, nas reuniões de língua de sinais, os oradores podem usar vídeos como ferramenta de ensino para atender às necessidades especiais dos surdos, desde que isso seja feito com bom senso.) Nem devem entrar em contato com Betel pedindo desenhos, fotos ou gráficos para usar em seus discursos.

5. A participação da assistência nos discursos de serviço, por meio de comentários ou de outras formas, deve ser limitada. Pode-se pedir de vez em quando a participação dos presentes para destacar um ponto principal, mas na maior parte os discursos de serviço devem ser realmente discursos, não considerações com a assistência. Outras reuniões congregacionais fornecem muitas oportunidades para a assistência participar.

6. É bom incluir experiências encorajadoras nos discursos de serviço, mas é preciso ter cuidado. De vez em quando superintendentes de circuito relatam experiências inexatas ou fictícias. Por isso, se quiserem usar uma experiência, os superintendentes de circuito devem se certificar de que ela seja verídica. Se houver alguma dúvida sobre uma experiência, ela não deverá ser usada.

7. Em geral, o esboço para o discurso de serviço de 30 minutos para terça-feira à noite será fornecido por Betel. Esse discurso deve incluir elogios e abordar com clareza uma ou duas necessidades específicas da congregação como um todo. Também pode incentivar o serviço de pioneiro regular e outras modalidades de serviço de tempo integral. O superintendente de circuito deve descrever a programação de atividades da semana, incluindo a programação de serviço de campo, e animar os irmãos para apoiar a visita. Todos devem ser incentivados a apoiar ao máximo o serviço de pregação e as reuniões congregacionais durante a semana.

8. O superintendente de circuito deve preparar seu próprio discurso de serviço de 30 minutos a ser feito depois do estudo da Sentinela. Esse discurso deve ser amoroso e encorajador, destacando a necessidade de perseverança. Deve motivar os irmãos a continuar fazendo seu máximo, dando de si mesmos no serviço leal a Jeová. Se for necessário dar algum conselho, deve fazer isso com tato e amor, especialmente porque talvez haja muitos novos na assistência. — be pp. 265-267.

9. Os superintendentes de circuito podem começar a série de visitas usando o esboço do discurso de serviço que é fornecido para o segundo semestre do ano de serviço em qualquer semana de fevereiro, ou no máximo até a primeira semana de março. Podem fazer isso também com o esboço do discurso público (S-319) e o esboço da reunião com os anciãos e os servos ministeriais (S-337).

CAPÍTULO DEZENOVE

Pastoreio

1. Os superintendentes de circuito também têm a responsabilidade de pastorear e proteger as ovelhas de Jeová. Há muitas oportunidades para fazer o pastoreio pessoalmente e ajudar os anciãos locais a cuidar dessa importante responsabilidade. — Isa. 32:1, 2; Atos 20:28; 1 Ped. 5:2, 3; sfl 25.

2. O superintendente de circuito deve se programar para fazer duas ou três visitas de pastoreio na semana da visita. Seria bom que um ancião ou um servo ministerial qualificado o acompanhasse nessas visitas. (Veja 4:10.) Pode ser muito bom o superintendente de circuito visitar alguém inativo, irregular ou doente. Além disso, podem-se ter bons resultados quando ele tem conversas positivas e encorajadoras com irmãos e irmãs antes e depois das reuniões, ao trabalhar com eles no campo, ao tomar refeições nas suas casas e no intervalo do lanche nas assembleias. Alguns superintendentes de circuito perceberam que dar um telefonema à noite para os irmãos pode ser muito bom para eles.

3. Mas deve-se ter equilíbrio. Em vez de gastarem muitas horas ouvindo alguém contar seus problemas pessoais, o superintendente de circuito talvez ache melhor deixar que os anciãos locais, que conhecem a pessoa e sua situação, cuidem do assunto. Depois de escutar a pessoa por um tempo, o superintendente de circuito pode dar algum encorajamento bíblico e encaminhá-la aos anciãos locais, que podem continuar dando a assistência necessária.

4. Os superintendentes de circuito não devem relatar o tempo gasto em visitas de pastoreio a pessoas batizadas. Mas isso não diminui a importância dessas visitas, pois elas podem realmente ajudar os irmãos visitados.

PASTOREIO A IRMÃS

5. Em 1 Pedro 2:17 somos incentivados a 'ter amor pela inteira fraternidade'. Os superintendentes de circuito merecem elogios pelo interesse sincero que demonstram a todos na congregação. Mas é preciso ter cuidado para que não demonstrem interesse demais em irmãs solteiras, achando que elas precisam de sua atenção especial. Não é apropriado que um superintendente de circuito regularmente telefone ou envie e-mails ou mensagens de texto a qualquer irmã que não seja sua esposa. Fazer isso tem causado problemas, levando a irmã a desenvolver um apego indevido ao irmão. Além disso, esse tipo de relacionamento pode prejudicar o próprio casamento do irmão.

6. O que pode ser feito quando um superintendente de circuito observa que uma irmã solteira precisa de ajuda espiritual? Se ela for jovem e ainda estiver morando com os pais cristãos, eles são responsáveis por dar a ela a necessária orientação espiritual. Se ela for maior de idade e não estiver mais morando com os pais, os anciãos da congregação dela deveriam exercer a liderança em dar a ela a orientação necessária. Se achar bom, o superintendente de circuito pode dar sugestões aos pais ou aos anciãos sobre como podem ajudar a irmã em sentido espiritual. Dependendo das circunstâncias, a esposa do superintendente de circuito talvez possa ajudar irmãs solteiras, conforme o conselho registrado em Tito 2:3-5. Naturalmente, ele não a incentivaria a ajudar uma irmã que estivesse passando por problemas complexos que exigiriam muito tempo e esgotariam a energia de sua esposa. — Veja 23:4.

IRMÃOS QUE NÃO PERTENCEM À CONGREGAÇÃO OU AO CIRCUITO VISITADO

7. Durante a semana da visita a uma congregação, é importante que o superintendente de circuito dedique sua atenção às necessidades dessa congregação. Deve-se ter equilíbrio quando irmãos que não pertencem a essa congregação pedem seu tempo e sua ajuda. É bondoso ajudar de forma limitada, talvez indicando a eles informações nas publicações ou os orientando a procurar os anciãos, mas ele não deve permitir que isso interfira na sua programação. Se surgir uma necessidade urgente e parecer necessário mudar a programação normal na congregação visitada para ajudar alguém, o superintendente de circuito deve telefonar ao Departamento de Serviço para obter permissão. Naturalmente, se ocorrer uma emergência desse tipo fora do horário de atendimento do Departamento de Serviço, o superintendente de circuito deve ter bom senso.

8. Às vezes, pessoas de fora do circuito pedem ajuda para lidar com problemas sérios. Talvez sejam irmãos que o superintendente de circuito visitou numa designação anterior. O superintendente de circuito deve lembrá-los bondosamente de que não serve mais naquele circuito. Poderá indicar quais de nossas publicações podem ajudá-los. Mas em muitos casos seria melhor simplesmente incentivá-los a procurar o corpo de anciãos ou o superintendente de circuito local. Não seria sábio que o superintendente de circuito se envolvesse com problemas de fora de seu circuito durante seus dias de ausência, talvez por ouvir as queixas de alguém e tirar conclusões. Ele não tem como saber todos os fatos. Nesses casos, deve-se encaminhar o assunto ao respectivo superintendente de circuito.

PROGRAMA DE PASTOREIO AOS SUPERINTENDENTES DE CIRCUITO

9. Todo superintendente de circuito e a esposa (se for casado) recebem no mínimo uma visita de pastoreio a cada dois anos de um representante da filial. O representante da filial pode ser um irmão de Betel ou um superintendente de circuito experiente. Essas visitas deverão ser feitas numa semana de visita regular do superintendente de circuito a uma congregação, e não na semana de uma assembleia de circuito. Betel vai enviar ao superintendente de circuito o nome do representante da filial designado para fazer a visita de pastoreio e outras informações sobre os preparativos para essa visita. As responsabilidades do representante da filial terminam ao concluir sua visita de pastoreio.

CAPÍTULO VINTE

Lista de irmãos qualificados para cuidar de assuntos complexos

1. Em raríssimas situações, o Departamento de Serviço vê que é necessário designar uma comissão especial de anciãos experientes para cuidar de um caso complexo que envolva uma ou mais congregações. Se um superintendente de circuito acredita que é necessário haver uma comissão especial, ele deve entrar em contato com o Departamento de Serviço para obter orientação. Por isso, todo ano, o superintendente de circuito deve se reunir com irmãos de responsabilidade no circuito para fazer uma lista de anciãos qualificados para cuidar de assuntos complexos, que será enviada para o Departamento de Serviço. (Geralmente é possível fazer isso na mesma reunião em que se avaliam oradores e intérpretes para congressos.) Os irmãos que ajudam a fazer essa lista devem conhecer as qualificações descritas a seguir.

2. Os que forem incluídos na lista de irmãos qualificados para cuidar de assuntos complexos devem ter madureza, entendimento, empatia, equilíbrio, discernimento, experiência, anos na verdade e bom conhecimento da Bíblia. Eles devem ser conhecidos como homens brandos e bondosos, que são exemplares em mostrar “o fruto do espírito”. (Gál. 5:22, 23) Devem ser capazes de escutar atentamente e agir de forma imparcial.

3. Todo ano, devem ser reavaliadas as qualificações e a situação de cada irmão da lista de irmãos qualificados para cuidar de assuntos complexos. Eles devem continuar satisfazendo as elevadas normas bíblicas. A situação de alguns talvez não permita mais que eles sirvam nessa função. Pode ser que eles tenham perdido certa medida de respeito por causa de problemas pessoais ou familiares. Ou pode ser que as responsabilidades familiares tenham aumentado ou a saúde tenha piorado, impedindo que atuem nessa função. Se alguém estiver nessa situação, deve ser removido da lista. Quando a lista revisada for enviada, deve-se anexar a ela uma explicação de por que esse irmão foi removido.

4. Quando se revisa a lista de irmãos qualificados para cuidar de assuntos complexos, deve ser alistado primeiro o irmão mais qualificado no circuito, depois o segundo mais qualificado e assim por diante. Deve-se fornecer o telefone e a congregação atual de cada irmão alistado, junto com uma breve descrição de suas qualificações e por que ele está relacionado na ordem em que aparece. Se alguns anciãos forem mais qualificados para atuar em certos casos, como em assuntos relacionados com as qualificações de anciãos ou servos ministeriais, assuntos financeiros, questões legais, problemas familiares, apostasia, abuso de menores, etc., essas informações também devem ser fornecidas junto com uma breve explicação. (Veja 13:5-7; B:1.) Se um irmão estiver bem qualificado, mas tiver pouco tempo disponível para esses assuntos, deve-se alistar seu nome em ordem de qualificação e mencionar também sua disponibilidade limitada.

5. Se o superintendente de circuito achar que não há irmãos no circuito que se qualificam para cuidar de assuntos complexos, ele deve enviar uma carta para o Departamento de Serviço mencionando honestamente por que chegou a essa conclusão.

6. A carta para o Departamento de Serviço com a lista revisada deve ser assinada pelo superintendente de circuito e pelos irmãos que consideraram o assunto com ele. Eles só devem assiná-la depois que a preencherem completamente. Todos os que ajudaram a preparar a lista devem verificá-la. Uma cópia dessa carta deve ser mantida no arquivo do circuito. — Veja B:1.

7. Os superintendentes de circuito devem manter o Departamento de Serviço a par de quaisquer mudanças que precisem ser feitas na lista no decorrer do ano, incluindo mudanças de telefone. Se um irmão se mudar do circuito, não for mais ancião, falecer ou por algum outro motivo não estiver mais disponível ou qualificado para ser incluído na lista, o superintendente de circuito deve informar isso ao Departamento de Serviço sem demora.

Capítulo Vinte e Um

Superintendentes de circuito substitutos

IDENTIFICAR E RECOMENDAR PROSPECTIVOS SUBSTITUTOS

1. Para um irmão ser recomendado para servir como superintendente de circuito substituto, ele deve primeiro ter cursado uma das seguintes escolas bíblicas: Escola de Treinamento Ministerial, Escola Bíblica para Irmãos Solteiros, Escola Bíblica para Casais Cristãos, Escola para Evangelizadores do Reino (EER) ou Escola Bíblica de Gileade da Torre de Vigia. De preferência, os recomendados devem ser anciãos pioneiros; ter entre 30 e 40 e poucos anos; e ter potencial para se habilitar dentro de dois ou três anos para o serviço de circuito. Mas anciãos pioneiros bem qualificados com menos de 30 anos também podem ser recomendados. Ao recomendar irmãos relativamente mais jovens, faça comentários específicos sobre sua maturidade e capacidade de aplicar corretamente os princípios bíblicos e as orientações da organização. Irmãos solteiros e casados que não têm filhos dependentes podem ser recomendados. Visto que precisamos de irmãos mais jovens para assumir maiores responsabilidades na organização, o superintendente de circuito deve recomendar todos os irmãos qualificados que preencherem esses requisitos, mesmo que o circuito já tenha vários substitutos.

2. Os recomendados para servir como superintendentes de circuito substitutos devem amar os irmãos. Seu amor pelo ministério deve motivá-los a serem evangelizadores zelosos. Eles devem ser estudantes aplicados da Palavra de Deus e das publicações cristãs. Os superintendentes de circuito precisam ter equilíbrio e bom senso. Por isso, os irmãos recomendados devem ser mais do que apenas bons oradores; devem mostrar equilíbrio, bom senso e razoabilidade na vida pessoal e como membros da congregação, inclusive no relacionamento com os outros anciãos do corpo. Devem ser experientes, maduros em sentido espiritual, estar atualizados com as instruções organizacionais e ter boa recomendação dos irmãos da localidade. (Atos 16:1, 2; Fil. 2:19-22) Devem ser notáveis em mostrar o fruto do espírito. Devem saber se relacionar bem com todo tipo de pessoas. Devem saber discernir o verdadeiro motivo dos problemas e aplicar “a sabedoria de cima” para resolvê-los pacificamente. (Tia. 3:17) Devem saber dar conselho apropriado quando necessário, e não se calar por medo de homens. Devem tratar os outros com dignidade. Não devem ser guiados apenas por regras, mas devem ter mente aberta para aceitar sugestões e estar dispostos a mudar seu ponto de vista, se preciso. Eles devem fazer parte da lista de irmãos qualificados para cuidar de assuntos complexos e estar recomendados como oradores de congresso. (Veja 5:20; 20:1-7.) Antes de recomendar um irmão, o superintendente de circuito deve fazer perguntas discretas a anciãos experientes para saber o que pensam sobre ele, mas não deve revelar a eles que o irmão está sendo cogitado para servir como superintendente de circuito substituto. Os irmãos recomendados para servir como superintendentes de circuito substitutos não podem ter visto pornografia nos últimos dois anos.

3. Se um ancião que é pioneiro não estiver conseguindo cumprir o requisito anual de horas por causa de designações da organização, isso não o impede automaticamente de ser recomendado para servir como superintendente de circuito substituto. Mas o superintendente de circuito deve fornecer uma explicação sobre isso ao recomendá-lo.

4. Se o irmão for casado, a esposa também deve ser pioneira regular. Deve ser exemplar na conduta e nos relacionamentos com outros. Ela deve realizar um bom ministério e entender seu papel como esposa, não falando pelo marido ou dominando as conversas. — 1 Ped. 3:3, 4.

5. Se um irmão tem potencial para servir como superintendente de circuito substituto, mas ainda não se qualifica, o superintendente de circuito deve identificar em que aspectos ele precisa melhorar e deve ajudá-lo dando sugestões práticas. Será que precisa melhorar a oratória? Ele sempre cumpre o requisito anual de horas de pioneiro? Ele precisa melhorar em algum aspecto do ministério? Ele precisa entender melhor os procedimentos da organização e como aplicá-los? Ele está dando a orientação necessária para a esposa continuar progredindo em sentido espiritual? Em cada visita à congregação dele, o superintendente de circuito deve analisar o progresso feito desde a última visita e determinar o que precisa ser feito para ajudar o irmão a melhorar no que ainda for necessário.

6. Os superintendentes de circuito devem ficar atentos para treinar e recomendar anciãos pioneiros qualificados que falam outro idioma e que tenham potencial para servir como superintendentes de circuito substitutos.

7. Para recomendar um irmão para servir como superintendente de circuito substituto, o superintendente de circuito deve enviar um Relatório de Qualificações Pessoais (S-326) sobre ele e outro sobre a esposa. Ao responder à última pergunta, o superintendente de circuito deve confirmar se o irmão está na lista dos irmãos qualificados para cuidar de assuntos complexos e se está recomendado como orador de congresso. Se o irmão ou sua esposa já tiverem passado por uma comissão judicativa, o superintendente de circuito deve mencionar se alguém se sentiria incomodado se ele fosse designado como superintendente de circuito substituto. Se eles não estiverem cumprindo o requisito anual de horas de pioneiro, o superintendente de circuito deve explicar o motivo. O superintendente de circuito deve mencionar claramente se o corpo de anciãos concorda com a recomendação. As recomendações de superintendentes de circuito substitutos devem ser atualizadas anualmente.

8. Quando um superintendente se muda para outro circuito, deve deixar no arquivo do circuito suas observações sobre os irmãos no circuito que têm potencial. (Veja B:1.) Deve indicar o que foi feito para treinar esses irmãos e o que recomenda como próximo passo no treinamento deles.

9. Se Betel concordar que um irmão tem potencial para servir como superintendente de circuito substituto, deve-se pedir que ele preencha um Questionário para Prospectivo Superintendente de Circuito Substituto (S-324). Depois que a aprovação preliminar for dada, o Departamento de Serviço providenciará que o irmão receba de um treinador aprovado duas semanas de treinamento e avaliação, conforme descrito no documento Orientações para o Treinamento de Prospectivos Superintendentes de Circuito Substitutos (S-382). O treinamento e a avaliação serão feitos no circuito do treinador. Depois, a Comissão de Filial decidirá se o irmão que recebeu treinamento será designado como superintendente de circuito substituto.

SEMANA ANUAL DE TRABALHO COM SUBSTITUTOS

10. Todo ano, os superintendentes de circuito devem programar que cada superintendente de circuito substituto no seu circuito o acompanhe quando visitar uma congregação que não seja a do substituto. O substituto deve participar em cuidar de algumas das atividades da semana. Por exemplo, ele pode dirigir uma ou duas reuniões para o serviço de campo, fazer o discurso de serviço de terça-feira e apresentar parte dos esboços considerados com os pioneiros e com os anciãos e servos ministeriais. A esposa do substituto poderá participar nas atividades espirituais da congregação naquela semana. Não é necessário atualizar anualmente o Relatório de Qualificações Pessoais (S-326), visto que o irmão já é um superintendente de circuito substituto designado.

USO DE SUBSTITUTOS

11. Se algum superintendente de circuito substituto não tiver acesso ao jw.org, o superintendente do circuito dele deve ajudá-lo a se manter em dia com as orientações e outras instruções de Betel. Isso significa fornecer a esses substitutos cópias das cartas enviadas para os superintendentes de circuito sobre o serviço de circuito e cópias dos esboços atuais recebidos de Betel: do discurso público, da reunião com os anciãos e servos ministeriais, da reunião com os pioneiros no primeiro semestre do ano de serviço, e dos discursos de serviço. Todos os superintendentes de circuito substitutos devem conhecer o arquivo do circuito e saber onde esse arquivo está, para o caso de o superintendente de circuito se ausentar da designação por causa de doença ou alguma emergência. O superintendente de circuito deve cuidar de que os superintendentes de circuito substitutos não tenham acesso à seção do arquivo do circuito que contém informações sobre irmãos no circuito com potencial para maiores privilégios. — Veja B:1.

12. Se um substituto designado tiver potencial para o serviço de circuito efetivo, o superintendente de circuito deve instruí-lo sobre como organizar assembleias. Receber designações na organização de assembleias vai ajudar o substituto a obter experiência prática nos vários departamentos. Seria bom designá-lo para cuidar de partes principais no programa da assembleia de circuito para poder observar suas habilidades como orador e instrutor. — Veja o documento Orientações para a Organização de Assembleias (S-330).

13. Quando um superintendente de circuito precisa usar um substituto, deve primeiro entrar em contato com o irmão que ele tem em mente e confirmar se ele está disponível. E, antes dos preparativos finais, ele deve pedir aprovação do Departamento de Serviço. Os pedidos para usar um superintendente de circuito substituto devem ser feitos no formulário Itinerário do Superintendente de Circuito (S-300). Se surgir a necessidade de um substituto depois de se ter enviado o itinerário, é preferível que esse pedido seja feito por escrito, se possível. (Veja 5:10; 8:1, 3.) O superintendente de circuito deve explicar por que recomenda que se use um substituto. Ele também deve fornecer o nome da(s) congregação(ões) envolvida(s), em que semana(s) precisa de um substituto, e o nome do(s) substituto(s) que gostaria de usar. Quando é necessário usar um substituto para uma semana inteira, é preferível usar um que esteja disponível para fazer a visita completa, de terça-feira a domingo.

14. Os superintendentes de circuito substitutos não estão autorizados a fazer designações ou remoções de anciãos e servos ministeriais. (Veja 17:37.) Também não devem enviar Relatórios de Qualificações Pessoais (S-326) ao visitar as congregações.

REMOÇÕES

15. Se um irmão não estiver à altura do elevado padrão que se espera de um superintendente de circuito substituto designado, o superintendente de circuito deve primeiro falar com ele em particular e aconselhá-lo no que for necessário. Ele deve deixar claro que tem interesse pessoal no irmão e que seu objetivo é ajudá-lo a servir melhor como superintendente de circuito substituto. Deve dar a ele a oportunidade de melhorar durante algum tempo e elogiá-lo pelo progresso que fizer. O Departamento de Serviço deve ser informado do conselho dado e da reação do irmão. Se, depois de repetidos esforços para ajudar o irmão, o superintendente de circuito estiver convencido de que ele não se qualifica mais, o superintendente de circuito deve informar o Departamento de Serviço, fornecendo todos os detalhes e sua recomendação. Ele deve dizer se o irmão concorda ou não com a recomendação. Se o irmão não concordar e desejar escrever uma carta à parte, o superintendente de circuito a incluirá na correspondência enviada ao Departamento de Serviço.

16. Se um substituto designado achar necessário deixar o serviço de pioneiro, isso não o desqualifica automaticamente de continuar a servir como superintendente de circuito substituto. Mas o Departamento de Serviço deve ser informado. Se um superintendente de circuito substituto ficar noivo, deve informar imediatamente o Departamento de Serviço e dizer se deseja ou não continuar na designação de substituto. Se um substituto aprovado for removido do cargo de ancião, falecer ou por algum outro motivo não puder mais servir, o superintendente de circuito deve informar imediatamente o Departamento de Serviço, indicando de forma clara que o irmão servia como superintendente de circuito substituto. Um irmão deixa de ser superintendente de circuito substituto quando completa 80 anos de idade.

MUDANÇA DE CIRCUITO

17. Quando um irmão que serve como substituto se muda para outro circuito, antes de poder ser novamente usado nessa função, ele precisa ter uma carta favorável de seu superintendente de circuito anterior. A carta deve recomendar que ele continue servindo como superintendente de circuito substituto e que seja redesignado como ancião na nova congregação. Assim, quando um substituto se mudar do circuito, o superintendente de circuito anterior deverá informar o Departamento de Serviço sobre o novo endereço e a nova congregação do substituto. Deve mencionar claramente se recomenda o irmão para continuar servindo como substituto. Se a recomendação for favorável, ele deve explicar brevemente por quê. Se não for favorável, ele deve se reunir em particular com o irmão e explicar o por quê. Na correspondência enviada ao Departamento de Serviço, o superintendente do circuito anterior deverá explicar (1) suas razões para não recomendá-lo, (2) os conselhos que deu a ele e quando deu esses conselhos e (3) se o irmão concorda com a recomendação de deixar de servir como substituto. Se ele não concorda e deseja escrever uma carta à parte, o superintendente de circuito a enviará junto com sua correspondência ao Departamento de Serviço.

18. Se um superintendente de circuito substituto mudar de circuito e tiver uma recomendação favorável para que continue a servir como substituto, o Departamento de Serviço informará o novo superintendente de circuito sobre a chegada desse irmão ao circuito. Essa notificação explicará que, depois de ser designado ancião na nova congregação, ele poderá voltar a servir como superintendente de circuito substituto. Depois de ele ser designado ancião, estando assim aprovado para servir como substituto, não será necessária nenhuma correspondência adicional para confirmar sua designação. Mas, se um irmão que era substituto se mudar para o circuito e não for redesignado como ancião na nova congregação, o novo superintendente de circuito deve informar o Departamento de Serviço. Ele deve deixar claro que o irmão era superintendente de circuito substituto e explicar por que ele não foi redesignado como ancião.

MUDANÇA DOS LIMITES DO CIRCUITO

19. Se um superintendente de circuito substituto for deslocado para outro circuito por causa de um ajuste nos limites do circuito, o Departamento de Serviço transferirá a designação do irmão para o novo circuito e notificará os superintendentes de circuito a respeito.

RECOMENDAÇÃO DE NOVOS SUPERINTENDENTES DE CIRCUITO EFETIVOS

20. Recomendações de irmãos para o serviço de circuito são feitas por meio do Relatório de Qualificações Pessoais (S-326). Os mesmos requisitos para recomendar superintendentes de circuito substitutos devem ser usados ao recomendar novos superintendentes de circuito efetivos. (Veja 21:1-7.) O superintendente de circuito deve incluir cópias dos Registros de Publicador de Congregação (S-21) que mostrem as atividades do marido e da esposa nos últimos dois anos de serviço. Se um substituto tiver potencial para servir como superintendente de circuito efetivo, mas não tiver cursado a Escola de Treinamento Ministerial, a Escola Bíblica para Irmãos Solteiros, a Escola Bíblica para Casais Cristãos, a Escola para Evangelizadores do Reino (EER) ou a Escola Bíblica de Gileade da Torre de Vigia, ele deve ser incentivado a preencher uma petição para cursar a EER. As recomendações para que um irmão sirva como superintendente de circuito efetivo devem ser atualizadas anualmente. Mesmo que o superintendente de circuito seja novo na designação, deve ficar à vontade para enviar recomendações.

21. Antes de recomendar um irmão, os superintendentes de circuito devem considerar o seguinte: Ele tem o desejo sincero de servir, ou está à procura de destaque? É trabalhador zeloso e produtivo no campo, ou tem pouco entusiasmo pelo serviço de pioneiro? Participa em todos os aspectos do ministério? Conhece bem os procedimentos da organização? Tem bom senso para julgar? É um bom instrutor? É conhecido como um homem que é humilde, tem discernimento e está disposto a escutar os outros? Apoia os padrões de Jeová em vez de insistir em suas próprias opiniões? Essas qualidades são importantes principalmente por causa da responsabilidade que o superintendente de circuito tem, de designar e remover anciãos e servos ministeriais. (Atos 14:23) Ele tem feito boas partes em assembleias de circuito e em congressos? Qual é a classificação dele como orador de congresso? Coloca os interesses de outros e os de Jeová à frente dos dele? Está disposto a suportar dificuldades ou desconforto? Está disposto a ficar hospedado nas casas dos irmãos, se necessário? A esposa concorda de coração com a decisão de entrarem nessa modalidade de serviço, ou só concorda para agradar o marido?

22. Os recomendados devem ter boa saúde e estar em condições de servir em regiões com diferentes climas, em qualquer parte do país, sem se queixar. Se tiverem responsabilidades familiares ou problemas de saúde ainda não resolvidos, é melhor aguardar até que isso seja resolvido antes de recomendá-los para mais privilégios.

23. Os superintendentes de circuito devem informar o Departamento de Serviço a respeito de irmãos espiritualmente qualificados que têm potencial para o serviço de circuito efetivo e sabem falar bem outro idioma. Os irmãos que são recomendados para servir como superintendentes de circuito devem ter a experiência, a humildade, a compaixão e o discernimento necessários para lidar com uma grande variedade de pessoas, costumes e situações.

24. Os superintendentes de circuito precisam tomar cuidado com a maneira de incentivar os irmãos a alcançar o privilégio. O simples fato de um irmão ser superintendente de circuito substituto não significa necessariamente que será usado no serviço de circuito efetivo. Assim, os superintendentes de circuito nunca devem dizer a um irmão que o recomendaram para o serviço de circuito efetivo. Isso poderia criar expectativas indevidas no irmão e levá-lo a fazer mudanças radicais, como vender sua casa ou seu negócio. Se esse irmão não for usado, isso provavelmente vai causar desapontamentos e problemas. Assim, os superintendentes de circuito devem incentivar os substitutos a se contentar com os privilégios que têm e, ao mesmo tempo, a se manter à disposição, em condições de aceitar mais privilégios se surgir a oportunidade de ele servir como superintendente de circuito efetivo.

25. Se a Comissão de Filial concordar com a recomendação de um irmão que tem potencial para servir como superintendente de circuito efetivo, o Departamento de Serviço providenciará que ele receba de um treinador aprovado mais treinamento e avaliação, conforme descrito no documento Orientações para o Treinamento de Prospectivos Superintendentes de Circuito (S-384).

CAPÍTULO VINTE E DOIS

Dias de ausência

1. O Corpo Governante providenciou que os superintendentes de circuito e suas esposas recebam dias de ausência todo ano de serviço, para terem tempo disponível não só para descanso e descontração, mas também para cuidarem de assuntos pessoais e familiares. Assim, é bom planejar bem o uso dos dias de ausência.

COTA BÁSICA DE DIAS DE AUSÊNCIA

2. No começo de cada ano de serviço (1.° de setembro), são creditados automaticamente para cada pessoa 12 dias de ausência, que podem ser usados em qualquer período depois disso. Se um irmão que ainda não está no serviço de tempo integral especial for designado para o serviço de circuito depois de 1.° de setembro, ele receberá dias de ausência conforme o número de meses inteiros que ainda faltam até o fim do ano de serviço corrente. Por exemplo, quem começa o serviço de circuito em 1.° de março recebe 6 dias de ausência ao entrar para o serviço, 1 dia para cada mês completo, de março a agosto. A pessoa que é transferida de outra modalidade de serviço de tempo integral especial para o serviço de circuito não perde os dias de ausência que já acumulou.

DIAS DE AUSÊNCIA ADICIONAIS

3. Além da cota básica de dias de ausência, a pessoa também tem o direito de receber dias de ausência adicionais em cada ano de serviço. Ela pode atingir o máximo de 30 dias de ausência como crédito total anual. Há três tipos de crédito de dias de ausência adicionais, que são explicados nos parágrafos a seguir. Todos os dias de ausência adicionais para os que estão no serviço de tempo integral especial são creditados em 1.° de setembro. Se a pessoa começar o serviço de tempo integral especial depois de 1.° de setembro, ela receberá os dias de ausência adicionais proporcionais ao número de meses inteiros que ainda faltam até o fim do ano de serviço corrente.

4. O primeiro tipo é o crédito por tempo de serviço. Ele se baseia no número de anos em que a pessoa está no serviço de tempo integral. Todo ano ela recebe um dia de ausência adicional para cada dois anos que já completou no serviço de tempo integral. Considere dois exemplos. Um irmão que já completou dois anos de serviço de tempo integral recebe, em 1.° de setembro, a cota básica de 12 dias de ausência mais 1 dia adicional por seu tempo de serviço, totalizando 13 dias de ausência. Uma irmã que completou 15 anos de serviço de tempo integral recebe a cota básica de 12 dias de ausência mais 7 dias adicionais por seu tempo de serviço, totalizando 19 dias de ausência. Se a pessoa tiver um ou mais períodos de interrupção em seu serviço de tempo integral, o tempo de serviço considerado será o total combinado dos anos em que serviu em designações de tempo integral.

5. O segundo tipo é o crédito por idade. Alguns superintendentes de circuito ou suas esposas não estão no serviço de tempo integral há muitos anos e, por isso, não recebem muitos dias de ausência adicionais por tempo de serviço. Conforme mostra a tabela a seguir, os que têm 45 anos ou mais têm direito ao crédito por idade. Por exemplo, os que fizerem 45 anos de idade antes de completar 12 anos de serviço de tempo integral receberão 6 dias de ausência adicionais naquele ano, como se já tivessem completado 12 anos de tempo integral. Os que fizerem 65 anos de idade antes de completar 36 anos de serviço de tempo integral receberão o número máximo de 18 dias de ausência adicionais todo ano. Assim como o crédito por tempo de serviço, o crédito por idade aumenta progressivamente a cada dois anos, até que a pessoa atinja o máximo de 30 dias de ausência por ano. Em 1.° de setembro, a pessoa receberá o crédito que for maior, por tempo de serviço ou por idade.

Idade em 1.° de setembro	Dias de ausência adicionais
45-46	6
47-48	7
49-50	8
51-52	9
53-54	10
55-56	11
57-58	12
59-60	13
61-62	14
63-64	15
65-70	18

6. O terceiro tipo é o crédito por serviço no estrangeiro. Alguns superintendentes de circuito talvez se qualifiquem para receber em 1.° de setembro o crédito por serviço no estrangeiro, de 7 dias de ausência adicionais. Esse crédito de 7 dias adicionais é acrescentado à cota básica de dias de ausência e aos dias de ausência adicionais por tempo de serviço ou por idade, conforme descrito nos parágrafos anteriores. Mas, assim como os outros, os que se beneficiarem desse crédito por serviço no estrangeiro não receberão mais que 30 dias de ausência por ano de serviço.

COMO USAR OS DIAS DE AUSÊNCIA

7. Os superintendentes de circuito devem informar ao Departamento de Serviço com antecedência as datas em que usarão seus dias de ausência, utilizando o formulário Aviso de Ausência ou Doença (S-305). (Veja 17:38-40.) O superintendente de circuito deve informar o Departamento de Serviço sobre como ele poderá ser contatado caso surja uma situação urgente.

8. Os dias de ausência que não forem usados durante o ano de serviço podem ser acumulados de um ano para outro. Mas a regra geral é que não se podem adiantar dias de ausência que só seriam creditados no ano de serviço seguinte. Já houve raras ocasiões em que se abriu uma exceção por motivos justos. Os que estão no serviço de tempo integral especial são incentivados a planejar cuidadosamente o uso dos dias de ausência dentro do limite dos dias de ausência já creditados. Em vez de usar todos os dias de ausência ou a maior parte deles logo nos primeiros meses do ano de serviço, é sábio guardar alguns dias para imprevistos que podem surgir mais tarde.

9. Os dias de ausência não podem ser transferidos para outra pessoa, com exceção dos casais, que podem dividir os dias de ausência entre si.

10. Quando um superintendente de circuito tira uma semana de ausência, Betel debita 5 dias do período de ausência acumulado. Os superintendentes de circuito não devem programar dias de ausência durante uma semana de visita regular a uma congregação, a menos que sejam escolhidos como congressistas para assistir a um congresso internacional ou especial. (Veja 4:19; 5:11; 7:5.) Qualquer exceção a isso deve ser aprovada pelo Departamento de Serviço.

11. É melhor que o superintendente de circuito e sua esposa tirem ausência juntos. Isso dá um bom exemplo para os irmãos. Não convém que o superintendente de circuito tire ausência enquanto a esposa fica servindo como pioneira. Mas, se for necessário que a esposa tire ausência para cuidar de assuntos familiares necessários e não houver necessidade de o marido acompanhá-la, o superintendente de circuito deve explicar a situação para o Departamento de Serviço e pedir uma exceção.

12. Não é necessário que o superintendente de circuito e sua esposa usem seus dias de ausência para se mudar para uma nova designação. Betel determina quanto tempo é necessário para fazer a mudança, conforme as circunstâncias.

CAPÍTULO VINTE E TRÊS

Esposas de superintendentes de circuito

1. As esposas de superintendentes de circuito têm um privilégio de serviço notável e podem ser de muita ajuda ao servirem com o marido. Mas o serviço de circuito envolve desafios específicos e circunstâncias incomuns. O superintendente de circuito precisa ajudar a esposa a manter a alegria e o equilíbrio em sua designação. Ele deve reservar tempo toda semana para a adoração em família. Todo superintendente de circuito deve ler e estudar regularmente a Bíblia com a esposa para ajudá-la a continuar sempre forte em sentido espiritual.

2. Quando as esposas de superintendentes de circuito mostram calma, brandura e amor, são sorridentes e não se queixam, elas ganham o apoio e a confiança de outros. Elas devem dar bom exemplo para outros seguirem. O superintendente de circuito deve ajudar a esposa a ser zelosa no serviço de campo, a dar comentários significativos nas reuniões congregacionais e a mostrar respeito pela chefia por servir de acordo com a direção dele.

3. A esposa do superintendente de circuito deve acompanhá-lo e participar ao máximo nas atividades programadas ao visitar as congregações, a menos que as circunstâncias a impeçam de fazer isso. É preferível que ela trabalhe com irmãs e com publicadores mais jovens. Embora não necessariamente seja impróprio que ela acompanhe um irmão no serviço de campo, isso raramente é necessário em vista do número de irmãs disponíveis. Todo superintendente de circuito deve reservar tempo regularmente para acompanhar a esposa nos vários aspectos do ministério.

4. Há ocasiões em que uma irmã talvez procure a esposa do superintendente de circuito para considerar um problema pessoal. Nesses casos, a esposa do superintendente de circuito precisa ter cuidado para não se envolver em assuntos que devem ser cuidados por seu marido ou pelos anciãos locais. — Veja 19:6.

5. O superintendente de circuito deve ter bastante cuidado para não divulgar assuntos confidenciais à esposa. Isso pode acontecer sem querer se ele considerar assuntos confidenciais (pessoalmente ou por telefone) quando ela estiver por perto. O superintendente não deve pedir que a esposa digite relatórios ou cartas que contenham informações confidenciais ou outros assuntos congregacionais. Se ela ficar sabendo de algo confidencial, isso a colocará sob pressão para manter sigilo. Não é bom colocar esse peso sobre ela. — Veja 5:28.

6. Se Betel orientar o superintendente de circuito a apresentar um vídeo à congregação, ele será o responsável pela apresentação.

Se precisar de alguém para ajudá-lo a montar ou operar o equipamento, deve escolher um irmão habilidoso e confiável.

7. A esposa do superintendente de circuito não deve se ausentar da designação, a menos que seu marido tenha obtido permissão do Departamento de Serviço. (Veja 8:1.) A presença dela contribui significativamente para as visitas. Assim como se dá com o superintendente de circuito, recomenda-se que a esposa se concentre em ajudar os membros da congregação que está sendo visitada na semana. — Veja 19:7-8.

APÊNDICE A

Veículos

1. Se o coordenador do corpo de anciãos ou algum outro ancião pedir ao superintendente de circuito que ele apresente suas despesas da semana, incluindo despesas de transporte não cobertas por Betel (como transporte público, viagens de barco, etc.), ele poderá fazer isso. Deverá também fornecer os comprovantes das despesas. Não é necessário que os anciãos apresentem uma resolução à congregação. Essas despesas são consideradas despesas operacionais recorrentes. Todas as demais despesas com veículos, pessoais ou da Associação, devem ser apresentadas ao Setor de Ministros em Campo, do Departamento de Serviço. Os superintendentes de circuito devem sempre seguir as instruções mais recentes da Comissão de Filial sobre o assunto.

APÊNDICE B

Arquivo do circuito

1. O superintendente de circuito deve manter um arquivo bem organizado com informações sobre as atividades do circuito. Os seguintes itens devem ser mantidos no arquivo do circuito:

(1) Cópias dos últimos cinco Relatórios sobre a Visita do Superintendente de Circuito à Congregação (S-303)

(2) Cópias de todas as cartas de designação e de remoção de anciãos e servos ministeriais dos últimos três anos. (As cartas referentes a congregações sem anciãos devem ser mantidas permanentemente. Se ocorrer uma remoção numa congregação sem anciãos, também se deve manter no arquivo uma breve explicação do motivo da remoção.)

(3) Registros sobre assuntos judicativos de congregações sem anciãos

(4) Lista de irmãos qualificados para cuidar de partes em assembleias

(5) Cópia das avaliações recentes de oradores e intérpretes para congressos

(6) Cópia mais recente da carta enviada ao Departamento de Serviço com a lista de anciãos qualificados para cuidar de assuntos complexos

(7) Recomendações de instrutores para a Escola do Serviço de Pioneiro

(8) Lista mais recente da equipe de organização da assembleia e lista de outros irmãos qualificados para designações de trabalho em congressos

(9) Lista de telefones dos superintendentes de outros circuitos que visitam congregações que usam o mesmo Salão do Reino de congregações do circuito

(10) Lista dos superintendentes de circuito substitutos, com informações de contato

(11) Correspondência sobre formados na Escola de Evangelizadores do Reino no circuito

(12) Lista de irmãos com potencial para maiores privilégios, com comentários sobre como eles podem receber ajuda adicional. O superintendente de circuito deve se certificar de que os superintendentes de circuito substitutos não tenham acesso a essa seção do arquivo do circuito.

(13) Registro da sequência em que as congregações foram visitadas nos 12 meses precedentes

(14) Informações sobre problemas pendentes, incluindo o que mais se pode fazer para ‘corrigir as coisas que precisam ser endireitadas’. — Tito 1:5.

(16) Cópia do último Relatório da Assembleia de Circuito (S-318)

(17) Acordos de Liberação da Inspeção do Local (CO-14), se aplicável

2. Uma vez por ano, os superintendentes de circuito devem eliminar do arquivo itens desnecessários. Geralmente a correspondência de rotina pode ser eliminada depois de cinco anos, a menos que haja alguma outra instrução específica sobre isso.

APÊNDICE C

Roteiro para verificação das contas da congregação

- ☐ Verifique as duas últimas auditorias das contas. As contas da congregação estão sendo verificadas regularmente de acordo com as instruções mais recentes? Foram usados irmãos diferentes para fazer auditorias consecutivas? Se algum problema foi indicado nos relatórios de auditoria, confirme com o coordenador do corpo de anciãos se os problemas já foram considerados com o secretário e o servo de contas, e se esses problemas já foram corrigidos.
- ☐ O último extrato bancário foi devidamente comparado de acordo com o que diz o documento Instruções para as Contas da Congregação (S-27)?
- ☐ A congregação tem uma resolução aprovada para fazer donativos mensais para apoiar a construção mundial de Salões do Reino e de Salões de Assembleias? A congregação tem resoluções aprovadas para fazer donativos para o Programa Mundial de Auxílio? A congregação tem resoluções aprovadas para fazer donativos para o Programa de Ajuda para Superintendentes de Circuito?
- ☐ Os donativos para a obra mundial, tanto das caixas de donativos como da resolução da congregação, estão sendo enviados a Betel todo mês?
- ☐ Calcule o saldo médio da congregação, dos últimos três meses. (Veja o Relatório Mensal de Contas da Congregação [S-30].) O saldo médio está de acordo com a recomendação de Betel, de manter apenas o valor necessário para as despesas operacionais da congregação e do Salão do Reino? Se o saldo parecer maior do que o necessário, incentive os anciãos a avaliar a possibilidade de contribuir com esses fundos excedentes para a organização.
- ☐ Ao visitar uma congregação de contato que tem a escritura de propriedade do Salão do Reino e o compartilha com outra(s) congregação(ões), verifique as contas da Comissão de Manutenção do Salão do Reino usando como base os pontos acima que se aplicam.

Cuidados de saúde

1. Nosso amoroso Pai celestial, Jeová, dá muito valor a seus servos leais. Ele conhece cada um deles nos mínimos detalhes. (Mat. 10:30) Ele vê as dificuldades que vocês enfrentam, não importa a sua idade, e sabe quais são as suas necessidades físicas, emocionais e espirituais. Usando o espírito santo e a organização, ele sempre dá poder aos que estão fracos. (2 Cor. 12:7-10) Quando lemos na Bíblia sobre os vários problemas que os servos de Jeová passaram, podemos ver como Jeová os encheu de poder. Se Jeová os fortaleceu, vai fortalecer você também.

2. Cada um de nós é o principal responsável por cuidar da própria saúde. Mesmo assim, nossos irmãos no mundo inteiro, com seus donativos, cobrem a maior parte dos custos para cuidar da nossa saúde, e todos nós somos profundamente gratos pela generosidade deles. Como podemos mostrar nossa gratidão pela ajuda que recebemos? Algumas maneiras são: ter uma boa alimentação, fazer exercícios físicos, não ser competitivos demais em atividades esportivas, descansar o suficiente e cuidar da higiene bucal. Também é bom termos mente aberta quanto a tratamentos de qualidade com os quais talvez não estejamos acostumados.

3. Supervisionado pela Comissão de Filial, o Departamento de Cuidados de Saúde (HCD, sigla em inglês) se esforça muito para encontrar assistência médica de qualidade para vocês e, ao mesmo tempo, procura reduzir os custos envolvidos. Por exemplo, os servos de tempo integral especial usam o sistema público de saúde para obter tratamento de qualidade sempre que possível. Às vezes conseguimos negociar descontos com alguns prestadores de serviços de saúde. Quando necessário, o Global Health Care Office (Escritório Mundial de Cuidados de Saúde) é consultado para indicar opções de serviços de saúde em outra cidade ou país. Em alguns casos, consegue-se encontrar assistência médica de qualidade fora do território da filial, e uma comissão do Corpo Governante aprova a prestação desse serviço. Mas, se você preferir um prestador de serviços de saúde ou um tratamento mais caro, talvez você mesmo precise pagar a diferença. De modo geral, espera-se que qualquer procedimento, medicamento ou exame tenha sido prescrito ou solicitado por um profissional autorizado da área de saúde. Além disso, deve-se obter a permissão da filial com antecedência para que ela cubra os custos envolvidos. Entre em contato com o HCD se tiver alguma dúvida sobre como ter acesso a cuidados de saúde aprovados.

4. Alguns superintendentes de circuito que servem no estrangeiro pedem para realizar consultas médicas quando visitam seu país de origem. Quando o custo não é problema, esses pedidos geralmente são aprovados. Mas existem muitas vantagens em usar prestadores de serviços de saúde disponíveis no país de sua designação. A principal delas é poder receber mais rapidamente os cuidados necessários. Outra vantagem é não precisar usar o período de ausência para realizar consultas médicas, visto que é importante usar esse tempo para descansar e visitar familiares e amigos. Levando em conta esses fatores, talvez você conclua que é melhor considerar o assunto com a sua filial e pedir uma lista de prestadores de serviços de saúde de qualidade que fiquem próximos de sua designação. Sabemos que, em algumas situações, é realmente necessário pedir para realizar um tratamento em outro país. Mas pedimos que você analise as orientações deste apêndice antes de fazer um pedido desse tipo. Lembre-se também de que esses pedidos são analisados e aprovados caso a caso. Se você concluir que é necessário pedir tratamento de saúde fora do território da sua filial, faça isso bem antes de programar uma viagem.

5. Se surgir uma emergência médica durante uma viagem a outro país, faça o que for necessário para cuidar dessa emergência e entre em contato assim que possível com o HCD da filial que supervisiona a obra naquele país, para que eles possam ajudá-lo. Também seria bom informar assim que possível a filial que cuida do território onde você serve, para que eles possam ajudá-lo a cuidar de qualquer assunto pendente relacionado à emergência. Se quiser obter as informações de contato da filial que cuida do território que você vai visitar, poderá pedi-las na sua filial.

APÊNDICE G

Impostos

1. Todo ano, a Receita Federal do Brasil publica quais são os critérios que obrigam os contribuintes a prestar a Declaração de Ajuste Anual, definindo assim se será necessário ou não prestar informações fiscais sobre ganhos e situação patrimonial. Se necessário, você poderá entrar em contato com o Departamento Financeiro da filial para pedir o informe de rendimentos anuais. Depois que você faz o pedido do informe, o Departamento Financeiro vai enviá-lo todo ano, até que você peça que esse envio não seja mais feito.

2. Os superintendentes de circuito são classificados pela Receita Federal do Brasil e pelo Instituto Nacional do Seguro Social (INSS) como membros de ordem religiosa, dessa forma se enquadrando como contribuintes individuais para fins previdenciários. A ajuda de manutenção repassada aos superintendentes de circuito não é um valor remuneratório (salário) nem valor recebido por serviço prestado. A ajuda de manutenção tem como objetivo apenas cobrir as necessidades básicas dos ministros ordenados. Assim, os valores da ajuda de manutenção são classificados pela Receita Federal do Brasil como "isentos ou não tributáveis".

3. Se as autoridades fiscais questionarem você sobre ganhos financeiros ou sobre a relação entre você e a Associação das Testemunhas Cristãs de Jeová (ATCJ), é recomendável que você responda de forma clara e exata, respondendo somente ao que as autoridades perguntarem. (Mat. 10:16) Nessa situação, você poderá explicar que o vínculo entre o superintendente de circuito e a ATCJ é de natureza religiosa e ordenada, com base num voto de obediência e pobreza.

ROMPIMENTO UNILATERAL DE NOIVADO

1. Normalmente, não é necessário que os anciãos investiguem um rompimento unilateral de noivado, a menos que aquele que rompeu o noivado tenha um privilégio especial, a pessoa prejudicada se queixe, ou vários membros da congregação fiquem perturbados, fazendo com que percam o respeito por quem rompeu o noivado. Os anciãos precisam ter bom senso ao decidir se a pessoa seria desqualificada. Havia motivos válidos para o rompimento, ou a pessoa não reconhece a seriedade do noivado? (Quanto a exemplos de motivos válidos para o rompimento de um noivado, veja A Sentinela de 1.° de novembro de 1975, páginas 671 a 672, e A Sentinela de 15 de março de 1969, páginas 190 a 191.) A congregação perdeu o respeito pela pessoa, de modo que ela não é mais encarada uma pessoa exemplar?

Prologue

Dear Committee Member:

This publication is designed to provide unified theocratic direction to Branch and Country committee members worldwide. This manual also serves as a helpful reference for Governing Body members, helpers to Governing Body committees, and headquarters representatives. Each brother who is provided with a copy of this manual should read it thoroughly from time to time so as to stay up-to-date with theocratic policies and procedures. Elders at Bethel should be foremost in recognizing theocratic instructions, studying them, and applying them diligently.—Gen. 6:22; Ex. 7:6; 39:32; Josh. 1:8; 14:5; Prov. 1:5; John 14:31; 1 Cor. 4:17; Jas. 1:22.

Branch and Country committee members should especially be well acquainted with organizational instructions so that they can help others at Bethel and in the field to accomplish their ministry fully. (2 Tim. 4:5) If because of legal restrictions or some other exceptional circumstance it appears to the committee that a particular organizational policy or procedure cannot be implemented locally, the committee should explain matters clearly in writing to the Governing Body or to the appropriate Governing Body committee and await further direction.

Each Branch and Country committee member is to be provided with a personal copy of this manual. If it will be helpful to him, a committee member may also obtain a personal copy of Branch Organization in another language if available. If a brother who serves as a secretary to your committee or to a committee member needs the manual for his work, he too may receive it. This approval applies to printed or electronic versions of Branch Organization in any language, including access in the Bethel edition of Watchtower Library. Care should be taken to ensure that the material is made available only to these authorized brothers, since the content of this manual is confidential and is not to be shared with those outside of Bethel.

The portions of this manual that apply to a Bethel department should be made available to the department overseer. In turn, any Branch Organization instructions that apply to those working in the department should be made available to the members of the department.

When revisions to this manual are received, the updated pages should be placed in the manual and the old pages promptly destroyed. At times, a letter from the Governing Body or one of its committees will set forth updated direction that will supersede the direction herein until revised Branch Organization pages are made available. All should be alert to follow the latest instructions.

In addition to being acquainted with this manual, committee members should keep up-to-date with the Scriptural principles and theocratic direction provided in Dwelling Together in Unity, the Watchtower and Awake! magazines, the Life and Ministry Meeting Workbook, Organized to Do Jehovah's Will, "Shepherd the Flock of God"—1 Peter 5:2, Circuit Overseer Guidelines, Correspondence Guidelines, and other policy materials. This includes letters that are sent to all branch offices and letters sent to individual branch offices in response to local needs.

Please be assured that we appreciate your hard work in looking after Kingdom interests in your part of the world field. (1 Pet. 5:2, 3) It is our prayer that Jehovah will grant you "the wisdom from above" to care properly for your many responsibilities, all to the praise of our Great Shepherd.—Jas. 3:17, 18; Ps. 23:1.

Your brothers,

Governing Body
of Jehovah's Witnesses

GOVERNING BODY AND GOVERNING BODY COMMITTEES

1. Governing Body: The Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses is made up of brothers who are anointed servants of Jehovah God. They have the responsibility for giving direction and impetus to the Kingdom work. (Matt. 24:14, 45-47; Rev. 12:17) Like its first-century counterpart, the Governing Body today looks to Jehovah, the Universal Sovereign, and to Jesus Christ, the Head of the congregation, for direction in all matters. (1 Cor. 11:3; Eph. 5:23) The Governing Body is organized to take the lead as Jehovah directs it by holy spirit. The members of the Governing Body do not regard themselves as the leaders of Jehovah's people. Rather, like all anointed Christians on earth, they "keep following the Lamb [Jesus Christ] no matter where he goes."—Rev. 14:4.

2. The Bible says: "Let all things take place decently and by arrangement." (1 Cor. 14:40) The Governing Body obeys this direction by putting in place various helpful procedures and guidelines that ensure the smooth and orderly operation of the branch offices and the congregations. Responsible Christian men do their part by setting an example of obedience as they put such arrangements into effect. All Christians, especially overseers, should look to Jehovah for guidance and should pray regularly for his direction and blessing. All should show themselves "reasonable, ready to obey" those placed in oversight. (Jas. 3:17) Thus, each group, congregation, circuit, and branch is blessed with a united, orderly body of believers who reflect well on the happy God.—1 Cor. 14:33; 1 Tim. 1:11.

3. While the Governing Body delegates certain details or responsibilities to committees made up of its own members, to committees made up of other dedicated servants of God, or to instruments such as corporations and legal agencies, the Governing Body always takes the lead in promoting the smooth functioning of the organization and the unity of all of God's people.—Acts 6:1-6; 1 Tim. 1:3; Titus 1:5; Heb. 13:17; w01 1/15 pp. 28-31.

4. The Governing Body gives final approval for new publications as well as new audio and video programs.

5. The Governing Body cares for the appointment and deletion of Branch and Country committee members and designates the brother who will serve as the coordinator of the committee. It also appoints circuit overseers and country representatives. In most cases, such appointments are made based on recommendations received from the Branch Committee. The Governing Body also appoints helpers to Governing Body committees as well as headquarters representatives qualified to make branch visits.

6. The Governing Body may arrange for qualified men to care for theocratic assignments in any locality at any time. It is not bound by recommendations received from other elders. Such recommendations serve merely as a guide and may even be rejected for reasons known to the Governing Body. The Governing Body has the prerogative to use its discretion and look into any matters it deems necessary to examine with regard to the Kingdom work.

7. To oversee various aspects of the Kingdom work, six administrative Governing Body committees have been established. [See Chart 1.1.] Their responsibilities are as follows.

8. Coordinators' Committee: This committee oversees auditing, branch correspondence and communication standards, historical archive records and exhibits, legal matters and litigation, records management, and the development of news content for the jw.org Newsroom. This committee also supervises communication with government officials, the media, and academic institutions in order to convey an accurate picture of our beliefs and practices. It responds to disasters, outbreaks of persecution, and other emergencies affecting Jehovah's Witnesses anywhere in the world. In general, all computer-related issues are also cared for by this committee. However, the Writing Committee oversees matters having to do with the development and maintenance of computer programs and tools used to process and translate publications and to publish them in electronic format, including MEPS, the Watchtower Translation System (WTS), Watchtower Library, and jw.org.

9. Personnel Committee: This committee oversees the arrangements for the physical and spiritual welfare of Bethel family members earth wide. (Eph. 4:3; Phil. 2:1-5; Jas. 5:14-16) It oversees the selecting and inviting of new members of Bethel families, temporary volunteers, part-time and full-time commuters, remote servants and volunteers, construction servants and volunteers, full-time and part-time construction commuters, and Assembly Hall and Bible school facility servants and handles questions regarding their service. It also appoints expatriate Bethel family members, including Bethelites in foreign service.

10. Publishing Committee: This committee supervises the printing and shipping of Bible literature worldwide. It has oversight of printeries and properties owned and operated by the various corporations used by Jehovah's Witnesses. Funding for branches is approved and arranged for under the direction of the Publishing Committee. It has oversight of issues involving accounting, allowances, budgeting, global health-care arrangements for special full-time servants, humanitarian aid requests, insurance, purchasing, taxes, and other financial matters for branch facilities throughout the world, such as the purchase or sale of real estate, equipment, and vehicles. All Branch Requests (AB-3), Nonliterature Branch Requests (AB-3a), and other budget approvals are processed and approved under the direction of this committee. It oversees arrangements for the construction, renovation, and maintenance of all the organization's facilities, including branches, remote translation offices, missionary homes, schools, Kingdom Halls, and Assembly Halls.

11. Expenditures of up to USD 2,000,000 will be approved by the Publishing Committee. The Governing Body, however, is responsible for approving major real estate transactions and significant construction projects involving the expenditure of more than USD 2,000,000. In most cases, Branch Committees will present the details of such projects to the Publishing Committee, and thereafter, the matter will be presented to the Governing Body.

12. Service Committee: This committee supervises all areas of the evangelizing work comprising the activity of publishers, pioneers, and missionaries, as well as congregation organization and the shepherding activities of elders and circuit overseers. It appoints field missionaries and assigns them to areas of need. The Service Committee also provides guidance to branch offices as to the responsibilities of the Service Department. Hospital Information Services at world headquarters as well as the activity of Hospital Information Desks, Hospital Liaison Committees, and Patient Visitation Groups is supervised by the Service Committee. Instructions on field service reporting are given by the Service Committee. It also assigns geographic locations to a particular branch office and outlines the program for periodic branch visits by headquarters representatives and branch shepherding visits by Governing Body members.

13. Service-related questions that cannot be handled by a Branch Committee and that might affect a publisher's standing in the congregation or an appointed individual's qualifications are referred to the Service Committee. Such matters include difficult cases having to do with the formation of judicial, appeal, and special committees.

14. While the Teaching Committee oversees the preparation of the curriculum for theocratic schools, the Service Committee provides direction to the branches on the operation and scheduling of the schools that are conducted within their branch territories. The Service Committee determines who may be invited to attend the Watchtower Bible School of Gilead and the School for Branch Committee Members and Their Wives.

15. Teaching Committee: This committee supervises the production of spiritual food that is delivered orally for the benefit of the worldwide brotherhood and supervises the format that is to be followed at congregation meetings. For example, it is directly involved in preparing the Life and Ministry Meeting Workbook, talk outlines, convention dramas, dramatic Bible readings, and convention chairman's introductions, as well as video publications posted on jw.org or broadcast through other means. These materials are used for dispensing instruction at Bethel spiritual programs, congregation meetings, circuit assemblies, and regional conventions. The Teaching Committee also oversees the organization of international, special, and regional conventions around the world as directed by the Governing Body. In addition, this committee supervises the Scriptural curriculum for seven theocratic schools, namely:

- Watchtower Bible School of Gilead
- School for Branch Committee Members and Their Wives
- School for Circuit Overseers and Their Wives
- School for Kingdom Evangelizers
- School for Congregation Elders
- Bethel Entrants' School
- Pioneer Service School

16. The Theocratic Schools Department works under the supervision of the Teaching Committee and assists in instructing students of the Watchtower Bible School of Gilead and the School for Branch Committee Members and Their Wives.

17. Besides reviewing and approving all new recommendations of Morning Worship chairmen and instructors of the School for Kingdom Evangelizers, the Teaching Committee also handles inquiries from branches regarding the above matters, including queries about alternate source material for the Congregation Bible Study in languages into which the main study publication has not yet been translated. The Teaching Committee reviews and approves programs for the dedication of new Assembly Halls and branch facilities, providing helpful guidelines for these events. Guiding principles are also given to the branches on how to conduct morning worship and the Bethel family Watchtower Study. In addition, outlines for Monday night lectures presented to the worldwide Bethel family each service year are reviewed and approved by this committee.

18. The Teaching Committee oversees Audio/Video Services, the Theocratic Schools Department, the WHQ Broadcasting Department, and the WHQ Travel Department. More specific information about each department is located in Chapter 7.

19. Writing Committee: This committee supervises the production of spiritual food in written and electronic form for our brothers and for the public in general. It also develops and maintains the organization's websites and oversees the translation work done throughout the earth. This includes the translation of audio and video programs from English into additional languages.

20. The publications that the Writing Committee supervises include Bibles, the Watchtower and Awake! magazines, all bound books, booklets, brochures, tracts, invitations, final copy for the Life and Ministry Meeting Workbook, and any revisions of these. It also supervises the production of public witnessing posters and unique branch materials, such as dedication and tour brochures and public relations materials. This committee also approves talk outlines and scripts for dramas. Additionally, the Writing Committee responds to questions about the meaning of certain scriptures and points presented in the publications, including general questions from the branches about doctrines or morals that do not deal with specific cases in which the standing of those in the congregations might be affected.

RESPONSIBILITY OF BRANCH COMMITTEE MEMBERS

1. The Governing Body appoints well-qualified elders to serve as members of a Branch Committee. Each Branch Committee oversees the preaching work in the field and the work in the branch office, the remote translation offices, and any other remote facilities within its assigned territory. As the representatives of the Governing Body in their assigned territory, Branch Committee members must faithfully implement and follow the direction coming from God's Word and "the faithful and discreet slave."—Matt. 24:45-47.

2. Each Branch Committee member must feel a deep sense of responsibility to Jehovah. Thus, he must work diligently to fortify and maintain his good relationship with God. He must be a diligent student of the Bible and be governed by its laws and principles in his personal and public life. (Josh. 1:8; Ps. 1:2) He must be zealous for the ministry. (2 Tim. 4:2) He must be a fine example in following Bethel rules, never feeling that he is above them. (Heb. 13:17) His deep love and respect for Jehovah fuels his desire to be faithful in little and in much. (Luke 16:10; 1 John 5:3) He recognizes that his appointment by holy spirit is a privilege and that it will be taken away if he neglects his spirituality. (1 Tim. 4:14-16) His humble mental attitude moves him to seek out and listen to the opinions of others, to take the lead in showing honor, and to be a peacemaker. (1 Ki. 22:19-23; Matt. 5:9; Rom. 12:10; Phil. 2:5-8; Jas. 3:17, 18) Like Christ Jesus, he finds joy in unselfishly serving the interests of his brothers. (Mark 6:31-34; John 13:14, 15; Phil. 2:4) Such dedicated spiritual men are truly gifts from Jehovah to shepherd his precious sheep.—Eph. 4:8, 11, 12; 1 Pet. 5:2, 3.

3. Each Branch Committee member should be able to give as well as to follow direction. He must keep up-to-date with the policies and direction from the Governing Body and help others in oversight at the branch office to do likewise. [See Chart 2.1.] While he will set a fine example in being willing to work along with his brothers at any task, he will not try to do all the work himself. He will delegate work in a responsible way, helping other spiritual men to be trained and to gain experience so that they too can shoulder weighty responsibilities.

4. Branch Committees also have the responsibility to keep the organization clean. (1 Cor. 5:11-13) They must be courageous in seeing to it that all unrepentant ones are removed from the congregation. Such courageous action builds up respect for the branch office and the Branch Committee. Our brothers should always feel welcome to come to the branch office with any concerns or problems that they may have and be confident that they will receive a hearing ear.—Prov. 21:13.

5. Dealing With People: Each member of the Branch Committee should always treat his fellow servants with love, kindness, respect, and dignity. (Eph. 4:32; 1 Pet. 4:17) He must manifest a warm and friendly disposition, being careful never to be harsh or unkind. (Eph. 4:31; Col. 3:8) If, on account of imperfection, he errs in word or deed, he will be quick to admit his fault and apologize. (Matt. 5:23-25) Following in the steps of Christ Jesus, he provides an example in honoring others and pursuing peace.—Rom. 14:19; 1 Pet. 2:21.

6. Branch Committee members do not view themselves as superior to their brothers and thus do not desire to be served or feel entitled to special treatment. (Matt. 20:25-28; 23:6-12; 2 Cor. 1:24) As they seek to imitate Christ Jesus, their lowliness of mind makes them refreshing and upbuilding to those working under their oversight. —Matt. 11:28-30; Phil. 2:3.

7. Members of the Branch Committee should be willing to handle problems, taking time to hear both sides and being cautious never to leave even the impression of partiality or favoritism. (Deut. 13:14; Jas. 2:9) They must keep confidential those matters told them in confidence and not talk to their wives or others about individuals' problems or confidential matters of the organization.—Prov. 25:9.

8. Counsel should not be given hastily. (Prov. 18:13) If unsure of the counsel of God's Word, it is best to consult with others and do research before answering. (Prov. 15:22, 28) If a Branch Committee member has a tendency to speak hastily and later to change his mind as to the course he first advised, the brothers will soon lose confidence in his soundness of judgment. If we read directly from the Scriptures when offering counsel, we make clear that God's Word is the authority for making decisions and that we are not simply giving a personal viewpoint.—2 Tim. 3:16, 17.

9. If a Branch Committee member is a foreigner in the country where he serves, he should recognize that the local people have a measure of pride in their land, their culture, and their way of doing things. Whether a foreigner in the country or not, a Branch Committee member should never take the position that the people he serves are beneath him, speaking to them as inferiors. Instead, as their humble fellow servant, he must work hard to develop appreciation for the local people and their culture, being willing to adapt himself so as to win their love and respect.—1 Cor. 9:20-23.

10. Nothing contributes more to the happiness of our brothers than the conviction that they are loved and appreciated. (1 Cor. 8:1; 13:4-8) Continue to reflect Jehovah's great love for his sheep. To that end, committee members should make regular personal visits to each department, speaking briefly with each worker, sharing words of appreciation and encouragement.

11. Makeup of a Branch Committee: In small branches, it may be sufficient to have three members form the Branch Committee. However, in large branches with printing operations, extensive territories, or a variety of languages, five or more members may be needed. It is desirable that one or more members of the Branch Committee be citizens of the country where the branch is located. Nevertheless, in all cases, spiritual qualifications should be viewed as of greatest importance.

12. The appointment as a member of the Branch Committee or to a position of oversight in the branch organization is not for any specified period of time. Having in mind the advancement of the Kingdom work, the Branch Committee may at any time recommend to the Governing Body a new appointment, a removal, or the reassignment of individuals.

13. Oversight Responsibilities: The Branch Committee prayerfully determines the distribution of oversight responsibilities for the individual members of the committee. These assignments should take into consideration each brother's age, strengths, experience, and personal circumstances. (Rom. 12:3-8; Rev. 1:20) A Branch Committee member would usually serve as the day-to-day overseer or assistant overseer of a key department. The members of the committee may also serve as Branch Committee contacts for additional Bethel departments. A committee member should serve as the overseer of the Service Department. (See 6:36) Usually another Branch Committee member would serve as the Translation Department overseer. A committee member would usually serve as the Bethel overseer in a larger branch office, since his role involves the general oversight of all Bethel Home operations. In printing branches, the printery overseer is usually a member of the Branch Committee. The Branch Committee should consider these matters carefully so that there is a balanced distribution of oversight responsibilities. Adjustments should be made as needed in order to promote good order, the peace of the Bethel family, and the advancement of the Kingdom work.—1 Cor. 14:33, 40.

14. When adjustments in oversight are made, the brothers and sisters working in each Bethel department should be clearly informed as to the brother serving as the department overseer, the assistant overseer(s) and, if applicable, the Branch Committee member designated as the contact for the department. Each Branch Committee member should take an active interest in those working in the departments that he is overseeing. He should endeavor to meet weekly with the department overseers under his oversight.

15. Because of age or infirmity, some members may become unable to accept all assignments in connection with the Branch Committee. If so, the committee may wish to recommend an additional member to help with the workload. Nevertheless, the older and experienced members may be retained on the committee to share their wisdom and insight. (Prov. 16:31) In line with the above, it is not necessary for every member to take the chairmanship in rotation. Brothers 80 years of age or older are not to serve as coordinators of Branch or Country committees or as overseers of departments, nor are they to serve as contacts for departments. However, dignified assignments should be found for these older brothers. (1 Tim. 5:1, 17) For example, they may serve as assistant overseers if their circumstances permit. Older brothers should be keenly interested in passing on their wisdom and experience to those with whom they work. (2 Tim. 2:2) In larger departments, two brothers could serve as assistant overseers if needed. A department overseer or Branch Committee coordinator who is not yet 80 years of age might modestly decide that it would be best to have a younger brother take on that role. (Mic. 6:8) If so, it would be good for the Branch Committee to take the request into consideration to ensure a smooth transition.—See 6:36.

16. Branch Committee Coordinator: Each Branch Committee has a coordinator appointed by the Governing Body. He is responsible for coordinating the work of the committee and for any departments that the Branch Committee places under his oversight. He is responsible for sending reports and correspondence to the Governing Body and also for keeping the Branch Committee informed of all communications received from the Governing Body. Branch Committee coordinators and those overseeing various departments will find it helpful to keep a calendar of activities. [See Chart 2.2.] This will assist them in making sure that important matters will be handled on schedule and not be overlooked. The Branch Committee coordinator is responsible for seeing that the minutes of each Branch Committee meeting are kept, showing the date of the meeting, those present, the points considered, and the decisions reached. To provide further training to a brother with potential to serve on the Branch Committee, a larger branch may seek approval from the Governing Body to use him to take the weekly minutes of the committee meetings.

17. Branch Committee Chairman: There is a chairman at each Branch Committee meeting. The chairmanship rotates annually on January 1. The rotation is usually handled alphabetically. The chairman arranges for the agenda to be prepared and distributed to each member of the Branch Committee. The members should receive the agenda well in advance of the meeting so that they have sufficient time to prepare thoroughly and to give meaningful input. The chairman should notify all members as to the time of the meeting. He will also indicate on the agenda who is assigned to open and close the meeting with prayer. He ensures that there is good order and, along with the Branch Committee coordinator, sees that committee decisions are carried out in a timely manner.

18. Branch Committee Meetings: The Branch Committee decides when to hold its regular meetings. The committee should not postpone giving attention to its responsibilities or delay in providing direction needed to expedite the work. In nearly all cases, the Branch Committee will meet weekly, but special meetings may be held when needed. In small branches, meetings can be held less frequently according to what may be practical and also depending on the location of the members of the Branch Committee. For obvious reasons, it is good if all members of the Branch Committee can live close enough to the branch to be generally available for such meetings. Minutes should be kept of all Branch Committee meetings. If a member is indisposed or absent, the committee can still function if a majority is present.—See 2:38.

19. The Branch Committee may invite other individuals to come to its meetings for consultation or to present information that will help the committee in reaching decisions.

20. During Branch Committee meetings, each member should express himself freely when he has something meaningful to add. (Prov. 10:19) It is not expected that all brothers will have the same opinion on all matters. Nevertheless, the Governing Body expects that in most cases the Branch Committee will come to unanimous decisions. In any significant case in which a decision is not unanimous, the Branch Committee should write one letter to the appropriate Governing Body committee, stating the varying views. Pertinent details should be provided, including an explanation as to why some members are for a matter and why some members are against it. Providing the names of those who are for and those who are against a certain decision is helpful. If individual members wish to submit additional comments, these should be sent along with the letter from the Branch Committee. If this direction is followed, there would be no need for a Branch Committee member to send his personal observations or objections about a branch matter in a personal e-mail to someone at headquarters. (Rom. 14:19) If needed, the Governing Body committee will seek direction from the entire Governing Body. If, in rare cases, the urgency of a situation does not allow sufficient time for the Branch Committee to send a letter to the Governing Body explaining the details and differing points of view, the majority decision of the Branch Committee should stand until further direction is received.

21. If the Branch Committee determines that a particular decision is of major importance, it should not decide the matter but should send it to the appropriate Governing Body committee with its observations and recommendations. (Ps. 19:13; Prov. 11:2) This procedure is to be followed even when the committee is unanimous as to how the matter should be handled. When the Branch Committee writes about a weighty matter, the coordinator should make it clear in the letter that the Branch Committee members who were present have read the letter and that they are in agreement with its content. The names of any Branch Committee members who were absent should be indicated as well.—See 2:39; 3:3; 6:41.

22. Unity on Branch Committees: From time to time, Branch Committee members may experience personal differences with one another. This often occurs when a brother imposes his personal opinion or preference on others. Of course, responsible brothers may occasionally have a difference of opinion. Despite such differences in thinking, they must continue to work together in love and with mutual respect.—Col. 3:13, 14.

23. Branch Committee coordinators should especially be conscious not to impose their opinion or preference on others in decisions that should be made by the entire Branch Committee. If a member of the Branch Committee lives outside of Bethel, he should be part of the decision-making process to the extent possible and not simply be informed after the fact about decisions that were made.

24. If the peace and unity of the committee are threatened, each member must examine himself carefully to determine what adjustments he must personally make in order to display "the wisdom from above." (Jas. 3:17, 18) While it is easy to see the faults of others, it takes a mature Christian man to look carefully into the mirror of God's Word and see his own faults clearly and then work to change. (Jas. 1:23-25) While one or more members of the committee may feel that they are not part of the problem, all must be part of the solution. Therefore, each one should supplicate Jehovah for His divine help to resolve the problem, never allowing place for the Devil.—Eph. 4:26, 27.

25. Continue to work together unitedly as a committee in peace and unity, cooperating closely as a body of mature brothers. (Ps. 133:1; Phil. 2:1-4) "Take the lead" in honoring one another. (Rom. 12:10) Much is expected of those who have been put in charge of much. (Luke 12:48b) The Bethel family notices the way you deal with one another and imitates your example, whether positive or negative.

26. Recommendations to the Governing Body: If the Branch Committee wishes to recommend the appointment or deletion of a circuit overseer or a country representative, the Recommendation(s) to the Governing Body—Circuit Overseer (S-391) form or the Recommendation(s) to the Governing Body—Country Representative (A-114) form should be completed and sent to the Governing Body. While the Branch Committee should give careful and prayerful consideration to the qualifications of each brother being recommended (and, if married, the brother's wife), extensive additional comments in a separate letter are not needed unless there is something significant to report about the brother (or his wife) that the Governing Body should know when considering the recommendation. The wives of such brothers should not be listed on the recommendation form.—See 2:49; 6:132.

27. All members of the Branch Committee who are in agreement should have their names listed at the bottom of the recommendation form. If a member of the Branch Committee was not present when the recommendations were considered, then the word "absent" should be shown next to that brother's name at the bottom of the recommendation form. A copy of the form will be returned to the branch office if the appointments and/or deletions are approved by the Governing Body.—See 2:30.

28. Appointments and Deletions of Branch and Country Committee Members: Branch Committees should plan ahead to meet the future need for committee members. Since it is preferred that brothers being considered for appointment to the Branch or Country committee attend Gilead School before the recommendation is made, their Gilead recommendations should be submitted to the Service Committee well in advance. (See 6:184, 186.) In the case of Bethel brothers with such potential who are not able to read, write, and speak English fluently, such brothers and their wives, if married, could be invited to attend a future class of the School for Kingdom Evangelizers so that their potential can be further evaluated and their spirituality deepened. If a well-qualified circuit overseer has the potential to serve on the Branch Committee and is being seriously considered for this role, he should be invited to serve at Bethel temporarily to evaluate further his qualifications and determine whether he and his wife can adapt to Bethel life. After the evaluation period, if the Branch Committee continues to believe that he has the qualifications to serve on the committee, he may then be recommended for Gilead. If a branch visit is planned in the coming months, it is usually best to discuss recommendations about prospective committee members with the headquarters representative before submitting the Recommendation(s) to the Governing Body —Branch or Country Committee Member (A-113) form. In addition to the recommendation form, the Branch Committee should supply the Governing Body with a covering letter explaining the reasons for the recommendation and, if available, the headquarters representative's comments. Once the Governing Body confirms the appointment or deletion of a Branch or Country committee member, the HuB Persons record will be updated at world headquarters. The record in HuB should reflect the history of any previous appointments. This applies even if a previous Branch or Country committee he served on was dissolved. When a country office has its own instance of HuB, the data regarding the Country Committee should be maintained in that office's instance of HuB. If serious questions arise about the qualifications of a Branch or Country committee member, the review should be handled by the Branch Committee and not the brother's body of elders. If needed, the Branch Committee may discreetly obtain information from other elders. After their review, the Branch Committee should forward their recommendation to the Governing Body for a final decision.

29. A newly appointed Branch or Country committee member who is fluent in English and, if married, whose wife is also fluent in English will be scheduled by the Service Committee to attend a future class of the School for Branch Committee Members and Their Wives.

30. Appointments and Deletions of Circuit Overseers: See 6:130, 132, 141-144; 9:95-96 with regard to the qualifications and training of prospective circuit overseers. In cases of death, judicial action, pregnancy, or resignation for health reasons, the Branch Committee is authorized to process the deletion. Thereafter, the Governing Body should be informed of the deletion on the next recommendation form that is submitted. For all other reasons, the Branch Committee should submit to the Governing Body the usual form with a covering letter explaining the recommendation to delete a circuit overseer. The Branch Committee must await approval from the Governing Body before informing him about his appointment or deletion.—See 2:26-27; 9:6-9, 108.

31. Know the Organization: Branch Committee members, whether in a large or a small branch, should seek to become acquainted with all the operations carried on at the branch. They should research how the work can be done in the most effective and beneficial way and do all they reasonably can to help it to be done in that way. A Branch Committee should know if the brothers are accomplishing the best work they can and, if they are not, the committee may be able to show them how to do better. The members of the Bethel family should love their work and want to see it improve and increase.

32. Branch Committee members should also be interested in all facets of the Kingdom work in the field and should seek to expand the preaching work and carry it out in the most effective way.

33. Communication During Difficult Times: If a country should become isolated by war or other adverse conditions and it is impossible, at least for a time, to have any communication with the Governing Body, the Branch Committee will carry on in looking after Jehovah's sheep. Especially in a time of trouble, it is important for the sheep to have spiritual food and guidance. Encouragement should be given them to have regular meetings and continue worshipping Jehovah. If conditions allow, publications will be provided. If new publications are not available, direction can be given to review past publications and to study the Bible itself, not forsaking assembling together, even though it may be in small groups.—Heb. 10:24, 25.

34. If conditions develop to the point that any members of the Branch Committee are taken away, those who remain should consider the qualifications of other elders who have proved themselves and have years of experience in the work and, if there is a possibility of communication, make the recommendation of these to serve as replacement Branch Committee members. If communication with the Governing Body is not possible, the replacement elders can be asked to serve temporarily, and they can be made familiar with the functions of the branch organization and share in the shepherding of the flock. Every effort should be made to have committee meetings from time to time, depending on the conditions. If any individual member of the Branch Committee should find himself under surveillance and it is not advisable for him to try to meet with other members of the committee, he may be able to send word to them concerning his situation. In that event, another elder may be asked to step in temporarily to share in the activities of the committee. If conditions develop to the point that it is impossible to hold meetings because the committee has been scattered, then each individual should continue to do what he can to shepherd the flock, having in mind what Jesus said as recorded at John 10:11-15 and remembering to seek the guidance of Jehovah through prayer.

35. Every effort should be made to communicate with the Governing Body if conditions will allow and if it will not jeopardize the interests of the work. The Branch Committee in each land will know what the circumstances are and will seek the guidance of Jehovah in making a decision as to what is the best course of action at the moment. The Governing Body desires to receive the reports and news concerning Christians scattered throughout the world, but because difficult conditions may develop, these provisions are set forth in connection with the functioning of the Branch Committee.

36. It will be practical if communications sent to the Governing Body are in English. Circumstances in some lands may prevent this. If one who knows English is taken away, the Governing Body will be pleased to receive communications in any language.

37. Country Committees: The Governing Body may determine that a Country Committee should be established in certain lands to work under the oversight of a Branch Committee. A Country Committee is composed of mature Christian elders appointed by the Governing Body. Usually the recommendations for Country Committee members are made by the Branch Committee. The brothers on the Country Committee are responsible for the administration of the office, Bethel Home, remote translation offices, and literature depots in the country where they serve, as well as for handling correspondence, finances, and reports. Even if there is no office in a particular country because of legal restrictions, the Governing Body may appoint a Country Committee to assist a Branch Committee to care for the Kingdom work in that land.

38. The Governing Body designates one brother to serve as the Country Committee coordinator. That brother is responsible for coordinating the daily routine of work. A chairman will serve in a rotational arrangement for a period of a year, following the same pattern as that for a Branch Committee. Generally, a Country Committee will meet each week, or perhaps every second week, depending on matters needing attention.—See 2:16-18.

39. While a Country Committee should be guided by the same Scriptural procedures and policies established for Branch Committees, it must remember that it does not have the same authority as a Branch Committee. Therefore, the Country Committee members should be modest and work cooperatively with the overseeing Branch Committee for the advancement of the Kingdom work in the country where they serve. (Prov. 11:2; 15:22) Any major problems or questions that the Country Committee cannot resolve in line with Branch Organization or other policy materials should be referred to the Branch Committee. The Country Committee will contact the Branch Committee if there is a disagreement about how a matter should be handled, even as a Branch Committee inquires of various Governing Body committees when the brothers on the Branch Committee have differing viewpoints on how something should be done. (See 2:20-21.) The overseeing Branch Committee should feel free to provide the Governing Body and its committees with supplemental comments or observations it wishes to make with regard to recommendations being made by a Country Committee.

40. A Country Committee is authorized to answer questions that local elders and circuit overseers may submit in writing to the office regarding judicial and other congregation or circuit matters. However, if there is any uncertainty as to how a complicated or delicate matter should be handled, the Country Committee should communicate with the overseeing Branch Committee.

41. Country Committees may arrange for locations and times for circuit assemblies and regional conventions. The Country Committee may care for the selection of convention and assembly speakers as is done by Branch Committees.—See Chapter 7.

42. With regard to appointing or deleting special pioneers, the Country Committee is to make its recommendations to the overseeing Branch Committee and await its approval. Whether the Country Committee will tabulate the field service reports or send them directly to the Branch Committee for handling will be determined by the overseeing Branch Committee. Literature distribution to the congregations should be handled as directed by the Branch Committee.

43. The overseeing Branch Committee will forward to the Governing Body any recommendations submitted by the Country Committee for the appointment or deletion of circuit overseers.

44. The general oversight of missionaries and missionary homes is under the direction of the Country Committee. However, such problems as illness and leave of absence and any difficulties that require attention by a Governing Body committee should be reported to the Branch Committee with the recommendations of the Country Committee. The Branch Committee, in turn, will write to the appropriate Governing Body committee, providing full details.

45. The handling of legal matters and the registration of legal entities will be under the direction of the Branch Committee. However, the Country Committee will be consulted as needed.

46. All correspondence from the Country Committee intended for other branch or country offices is to be sent to the overseeing Branch Committee for forwarding. When necessary, the Country Committee may write a letter to the Governing Body or to one of its committees. However, the letter should first be sent to the Branch Committee so that, if necessary, the Branch Committee may add its comments before forwarding the letter to world headquarters.

47. In a rare situation in which communication with the Branch Committee is not possible, it may be necessary for the Country Committee to send information directly to world headquarters or to other branch offices. In cases where communication with the Branch Committee or with headquarters is not possible, the Country Committee will give the needed supervision to the Kingdom work until conditions return to normal and contact with the Branch Committee or headquarters can resume. If there are any relief measures to be taken in behalf of the brothers, the Country Committee will give the needed oversight, bearing in mind the direction that is provided herein related to such aid.—See 3:58.

48. Country Representatives: In countries where there are a significant number of publishers but where there is no Branch Committee or Country Committee, three qualified elders are appointed by the Governing Body to serve as country representatives. As a group, the country representatives serve as advisers, helping the Branch Committee to stay in close touch with the local situation in the lands that the branch office oversees. The brothers serving as country representatives are not considered a Country Committee and do not function in any supervisory capacity. Country representatives do not qualify to attend the School for Branch Committee Members and Their Wives. Nevertheless, the Branch Committee should view them as a helpful resource and periodically inquire of them, perhaps sending a list of questions for them to consider. (Prov. 15:22) The country representatives should be discerning men who can provide meaningful input on the Kingdom work and local needs in the country where they live. (Prov. 27:23; Acts 6:3) Their input will be especially helpful when they notice conditions or trends that endanger the brothers or that threaten the Kingdom work in the country. Those recommended could include special pioneers or circuit overseers. Elders who formerly served on a Branch Committee or a Country Committee in that land may be particularly qualified. It is preferred that at least one of the country representatives be native to the country. In a country with a remote translation office, one of the three country representatives might include the language overseer, the maintenance overseer, or the home overseer.

49. Recommendations and deletions of country representatives are submitted to the Governing Body using the Recommendation(s) to the Governing Body—Country Representative (A-114) form. (See 2:26.) One of the three brothers should be recommended to serve as the chairman of the group. Once the Governing Body confirms the appointment or deletion of a country representative, the HuB Persons record will be updated at world headquarters. The branch office should provide newly appointed country representatives with a letter that explains their appointment and the basic operation of the group as well as the names and contact information of the other two country representatives.

50. The country representatives may meet at a convenient time and place whenever there is a need or as directed by the Branch Committee. The group is not given permanent office space or computer equipment. Their periodic meetings should be arranged at any convenient location that is available, such as a Kingdom Hall, Assembly Hall, or the home of one of the brothers as long as confidentiality can be maintained. Such meetings should not interfere with normally scheduled meetings or assemblies. Upon request, the branch office may reimburse reasonable travel expenses for country representatives to participate in their periodic meetings. The group should open and close their meetings with prayer. A typed report, usually no more than one to two pages in length and addressed to the Branch Committee, should be sufficient to convey their key observations. The chairman of the group should keep a confidential file of these reports for two years. Reports older than two years should be destroyed, since the branch office will have its copies on file.

COORDINATORS' COMMITTEE

AUDITING

1. The Branch Committee is responsible for the audit of the branch financial activities. The audit of the financial activities is to be performed once per year. The Branch Committee should appoint one local auditor. A world headquarters auditor will perform the annual audit at least once every five years. Within 30 days after the auditor submits the branch audit, the Branch Committee should send the Coordinators' Committee a numbered letter explaining how each finding will be addressed.

2. Scheduling the Audit: Branches with a local auditor can begin performing the audit as early as February 1, testing financial activity within that service year. It is not necessary to wait until all financial activity for the branch is completed for that service year. The auditor may submit the questionnaires and his report as early as June 1, but no later than November 30. When a branch receives an audit by a world headquarters auditor, he may begin performing the audit as early as June 1 but should submit the questionnaires and his report no later than November 30. The world headquarters auditor and the Branch Committee should determine the dates for the audit. Additionally, since an audit by a world headquarters auditor is usually performed in a condensed time frame, it is imperative that the audit be given priority. Representatives from the branch Accounting, Local Design/Construction, and Purchasing departments should be assigned and available to answer questions that may arise during the audit.

3. Branch Audit Report (A-21): The Branch Audit Report consists of questionnaires that will be used on a rotational basis. Each year, one of the audit questionnaires will focus on internal controls for all financial areas of branch activity. The other questionnaires will provide an in-depth audit of specific areas of the financial activity of a branch. The audit includes references to organizational guidelines, such as Branch Organization (bo), Branch Accounting Department Guidelines (badg), Local Design/Construction Department Guidelines (DC-3), and Purchasing Guidelines (PD-1). Since one purpose of the branch audit is to provide an independent review, the Coordinators' Committee does not provide copies of the audit questionnaires to Branch Committees before or during the audit. However, after the auditor submits the Branch Audit Report and his comments directly to the Coordinators' Committee, he will provide a copy to the Branch Committee.

4. Use of HuB: Some of the questions state that specific reports or searches must be run within HuB. If the auditor is not familiar with these programs, someone who is familiar with them should be made available to assist him. For auditors that are familiar with using HuB, create a user for the auditor and assign him to the financial auditing feature group.

5. Branch Committee's Comments on Report: Within 30 days after the auditor submits the branch audit, the Branch Committee should send the Coordinators' Committee a numbered letter explaining how each finding will be addressed. Below are questions that should guide your explanations.

- What steps do you plan to use to correct the finding, and when will the steps be completed?

- Are you unsure of how to correct the finding and therefore are in need of assistance regarding how to do so?
- Was the finding a misunderstanding? If so, what is the correct situation, and what led to the misunderstanding?
- Do you need more time to identify how to correct the finding? If so, when can we expect to receive an update?
- Do you feel that you cannot correct this finding and that an exception should be granted? If so, why do you feel this way?

For each finding, answers should be provided to the set of questions that best fit the situation at the branch. There is no need to restate the questions(s) that are being answered. These clear explanations for each finding will enable the Coordinators' Committee and the appropriate world headquarters department(s) to see what steps are being taken to address the finding and if any additional help or direction should be provided.

6. Local Auditors: The Branch Committee should appoint one qualified elder from outside of the branch Accounting or Purchasing departments to serve as the branch auditor. Generally, it should not be a member of the Local Design/Construction Department (LDC). However, if an exception is approved, someone from a different department should be assigned to work with the local auditor on any aspects of the audit that pertain to LDC. A member of the Branch Committee would not normally be appointed to serve as the branch auditor. The auditor should not be the Branch Committee coordinator or the Branch Committee contact that oversees the Accounting or Purchasing departments. However, if it is believed that an exception is required, please write to the Coordinators' Committee. The local auditor will generally be a part-time responsibility. He does not need to have extensive accounting experience. He should be trustworthy and conscientious, have good judgment, and be able to interact well with people.

7. If the local auditor or any assistant auditor is different from the previous year and already in some form of special full-time service, a memorandum should be sent to the Auditing/Records Management Department with the name of the brother, his Member ID number, and his Bethel domain user name. This should be done as soon as possible. Thereafter, the Auditing/Records Management Department will send him additional information.

8. If the local auditor or any assistant auditor is different from last year and is not a Bethelite or in some form of special full-time service, he should complete an Application for Volunteer Program (A-19) before being invited to assist the organization. (See Personnel Guidelines, plg.) If it is decided that he qualifies, he may be invited to serve as a Bethel consultant (BOC). Upon his acceptance, he should be assigned to the Branch Committee Office. A Bethel login and an e-mail account should be created for him, and he should be given year-round access to these. He should be contacted by the local Computer Department and helped to set up his Bethel e-mail account. After this is completed, his name, Member ID number, and Bethel domain user name should be sent to the Auditing/Records Management Department. Thereafter, the Auditing/Records Management Department will send him additional information. Because of the nature of his work, he may be given temporary access to the Bethel network for the duration of the branch audit. Anyone who is granted access to the Bethel network should sign the Watchtower Information Resources Confidentiality Affirmation.—See 4:50; Computer Department Guidelines (A-105).

9. Assistant Auditors: A ministerial servant may be trained as an assistant auditor. However, please keep in mind that the brother should be mature and trustworthy, able to keep things confidential, and have a good reputation within the branch. Additionally, he would not be used to lead meetings with department overseers or the Branch Committee and would not be used to investigate serious issues, such as fraud, should they be discovered as a result of the branch audit. Likewise, sisters could be used in a secretarial or support role but would not meet with department overseers or Branch Committee members.

10. World Headquarters Auditors: If no qualified brothers are available in the country, a memorandum should be sent to the Auditing/Records Management Department to request that a world headquarters auditor be assigned to perform the branch audit. Additionally, it is the goal that each branch receives an audit by a world headquarters auditor at least once every five years, even if the branch has a local auditor. This will enable world headquarters auditors to learn and understand the unique circumstances of each branch, to work with the local auditor where applicable, and to provide feedback to the Coordinators' Committee. If the Branch Committee feels that an auditor from another branch is required, the Coordinators' Committee would need to give approval for such a request. The Coordinators' Committee may also initiate a branch audit and assign the auditors according to the need. When an auditor is assigned by the Coordinators' Committee and there is no local auditor, other brothers may be assigned to assist him, but the headquarters auditor will serve as the lead auditor.

11. If you feel that a brother in your branch has the qualifications and the ability to serve as a world headquarters auditor and is available to audit another branch, please write to the Coordinators' Committee explaining the qualifications of the brother. If there are brothers in your branch who are currently used as world headquarters auditors, you do not need to write about them unless they are no longer able to serve in this capacity.

12. If a local auditor needs further training, the Coordinators' Committee will assign a world headquarters auditor to provide remote assistance for the next audit. This assistance would likely be of a technical nature and would not involve aspects of the audit that would require a world headquarters auditor to visit in person. Often the world headquarters auditor who previously worked with the local auditor would be assigned to provide this assistance. It is not expected that many hours of remote assistance would be needed. If extensive help is required, the Auditing/Records Management Department should be informed so that more on-site training can be provided.

13. External Audits: In addition to the annual branch audit, local circumstances may at times require other audits. An external audit is done whenever local legislation requires it or it seems otherwise prudent. This is usually done by a government-registered auditor. His report, together with the audited financial statements, may be submitted to the government agency stipulated in the legislation. Wherever possible, a qualified brother should perform this type of audit. There is generally no need to provide information related to entities that are not subject to the audit. Notify the Coordinators' and Publishing committees if an external audit will be conducted on a branch for the first time.

14. At times, authorities will require an audit of a specific aspect of branch activity. Although it is necessary to comply with legal requests, there is no need to volunteer information that is neither requested nor required by law. Identify which documents are part of the official accounting system, hence subject to audit, and which documents are strictly of an internal nature and are therefore not required for the audit. Notify the Coordinators' and Publishing committees as soon as you become aware that this type of audit will be performed on a specific aspect of your branch activity.

15. Auditing/Records Management Department: Under the oversight of the Coordinators' Committee, the Auditing/Records Management Department at world headquarters assists with coordinating and reviewing the audits of all branches, supports world headquarters auditors and local auditors, and works along with the appropriate world headquarters department(s) as it pertains to audit findings.

COMPUTERS

16. The WHQ Computer Department oversees the work of all branch Computer Departments worldwide under the supervision of the Coordinators' Committee. This includes setting standards, providing global shared services, specifying new equipment, designing and maintaining computer networks, and supporting commercial enterprise software and software developed by headquarters.

17. The WHQ Computer Department has technicians working under its direction in various branches in order to provide timely assistance to branches around the world. These technicians closely follow the standards and policies that apply to all areas under the supervision of the WHQ Computer Department, such as networking, servers, and software.

18. For detailed information on organizing local computer operations, the Branch Committee and the branch Computer Department should consult Computer Department Guidelines (A-105).

19. Branch Computer Department Responsibilities: The Branch Committee should appoint a capable, trustworthy brother and perhaps an assistant to oversee the Computer Department. The principal responsibility of the Computer Department is to supply branch departments with computers, servers, software, telephones, radio communication, data communication, telecommunication, and related technologies. In addition, this department provides helpful support to keep equipment in good working order. Most important, it ensures that all the electronic data belonging to the branch is available only to those authorized to use it and is protected against tampering or accidental loss.

20. Standards and Guidelines: In order to maintain reasonable uniformity among branches, headquarters provides standards and technical guidelines. The branch Computer Department should endeavor to keep up-to-date with such information as provided in correspondence to the branches, Computer Department Guidelines (A-105), and the Technical Support Library (TSL) located on the Global Bethel Intranet. There is usually no need for branch personnel to experiment with or pioneer the use of the latest technologies available. Rather, they should concentrate on using what has been approved.

21. If the branch Computer Department feels that it needs assistance in evaluating whether to replace equipment, in using new software, or in similar matters, the branch office may submit a request for help and direction to the WHQ Computer Department.

22. Data Backups and Disaster Recovery: Ensuring good data backups and having a disaster recovery plan are extremely important and should be viewed as one of the priorities of the Computer Department. Backup procedures should be performed, monitored, and verified at the frequency and in the manner directed in Computer Department Guidelines (A-105). Unless an exception has been granted by the WHQ

Computer Department, backup data should be kept in or moved weekly to a secure location that is not in the same building as the primary server being backed up. This increases the possibility that, in the event of a localized accident or a disaster affecting the main servers, branch data could be restored and reinstalled on new equipment.

23. The Computer Department is responsible for having basic recovery procedures in place in case critical equipment, such as a server, fails. The procedure will vary according to the amount of computer equipment used throughout the branch territory and the availability of local vendor support. It may include having a limited supply of spare equipment readily available. The readiness to respond to potential issues should be thoroughly validated at least once a year.

24. Approvals: Any purchase of new computer hardware or software that goes beyond normal supplies, such as printer cartridges and small items (memory sticks and so forth) needs approval from headquarters. This includes replacements for equipment that is taken out of service because of failure or because of the need for upgrading. Approval is obtained by submitting a Nonliterature Branch Request (AB-3a). For a list of recommended equipment, consult the TSL.

25. Security: Much of the information that is stored electronically is of a confidential nature. The Branch Committee should have an up-to-date list of all brothers who have access to such data. A meeting at which the importance of confidentiality is emphasized should be attended by each brother who is given such rights. A branch member may lose his Bethel service privilege if confidential data is accessed or copied without authorization. All users accessing branch data should first sign the Watchtower Information Resources Confidentiality Affirmation (in the TSL). If changes are needed for legal reasons, this document may be adjusted by the Branch Committee.

26. The Computer Department is responsible for regular server and network administration tasks, such as software installation, switch configuration, data backup, user and group maintenance, file permissions, and monitoring. The Computer Department Guidelines (A-105) detail the department's work. For additional information relating to the security and management of confidential data, see Information Security & Acceptable Use of Computers (in the TSL) and the Records Management Guidelines (A-160) (on MDS).

27. Infrastructure: The Computer Department would generally specify, install, and maintain the cabling and infrastructure for the branch network. When planning network improvements, WHQ Computer Department should be contacted. It will work along with the local Computer Department and the supervising Regional Design/Construction Department (RDC) to prepare designs and budgets for the improvements at the branch facility or remote translation office (RTO). The Branch Committee may decide that another department, such as Maintenance, will install the new infrastructure according to the WHQ Computer Department's approved design and budget.

28. An air-conditioned and secure room should be designated where network equipment and servers containing the branch data can be installed. The telephone system would usually also be installed in this room, along with all the communications equipment needed to connect the branch to the outside telephone system and to the Internet. Access to this room should be limited to those who have been authorized by the Computer Department overseer and the Branch Committee. Anyone authorized should be well-trained and familiarized with the operation of the room prior to being allowed to have access.

29. Training and Support: The Computer Department must be service-oriented. Its goal is not only to provide computer equipment and software but also to help branch members make good use of the equipment and software that have been approved and provided for translation, publishing, and administration.

30. The complexity of the technology in use today makes it very important that thorough training is provided for those working in the Computer Department. This includes training to understand the office productivity software and server products currently being used. It is also necessary to train those assigned as backups for this work. When a computer system is installed, training is often provided. Ongoing training is required to get the most benefit from the computer equipment and to reduce the frustration that results from members not knowing how to use the equipment or software.

31. Depending on the size of the branch, the Computer Department might choose to establish a help desk that brothers can contact to receive help with using computer equipment and software. The brothers or sisters assigned to the help desk should be well-trained so that they can resolve the majority of problems without involving other technicians. In addition, those working on the help desk should be patient and kind with those needing assistance, showing a willing spirit. In most cases, it is good for those who support the hardware and software to deal directly with the brothers using the hardware and software. This promotes good understanding and cooperation and usually leads to better support. The help desk is not to provide assistance for or to repair personally owned computers.

32. HuB: The WHQ Computer Department is responsible for the development and support of the HuB software, the standard administrative software used by all branch offices worldwide. Branch offices should use existing HuB features or request enhancements to meet additional requirements. The HuB program is kept up-to-date with organizational procedures as these are adjusted from time to time. The branch should not develop other administrative software locally without written approval from the WHQ Computer Department.—See 3:38-40.

33. HuB is a large program with thousands of features. Since it is used by both large and small branch offices, not all features are appropriate for each branch office. Simplification in branch operations also means simplifying our use of computers wherever possible. The Branch Committee in each branch is responsible for deciding which features of HuB should be used. Balance is required to ensure that the features of the software being used contribute to productivity and accuracy without placing a burden of unnecessary work on those using it. If a Branch Committee is unsure about using a particular feature of the program, it should consult the WHQ Computer Department.

34. Selected brothers in various branches serve on the Applications Regional Support Team. Brothers who are assigned to this team follow direction from the WHQ Computer Department when providing support to the branches. Branches should use the online TSL support forum to request HuB support. The WHQ Computer Department may then assign a Regional Support Team member to assist. If a branch office needs assistance to implement a new feature in HuB, the requesting branch office should send a memorandum to the WHQ Computer Department, outlining the need.

35. The Branch Committee should organize HuB support. The branch Computer Department maintains the HuB server and database, makes regular backups, applies necessary updates, and administers user security. The Branch Committee is responsible for determining which users are granted various HuB permissions. However, it is not necessary for HuB administrators to be members of the Branch Committee, as this is a technical role.

36. User training is best done by the most experienced HuB users in the branch. In many branches, this will be experienced users within a department. In branches that do not have experienced users within a department, a department overseer may ask the branch Computer Department for such training. Those assigned to support HuB should be alert to new features by keeping up with HuB announcements, release notes, and the HuB documentation. They should make sure that new features are made available to software users after discussing these features with the Branch Committee and the respective department overseers.

37. The WHQ Computer Department provides the branch offices with resources to assist in training and support. In addition, the HuB support site on the Global Bethel Intranet contains helpful information, training material, and program updates. Branch offices can use the online support forum for technical assistance or to report bugs in the program.

38. Programming: Computer software can be a valuable tool in getting our work done. However, simplification in our operations includes simplifying our software requirements where possible. Standard software packages are developed and maintained under the direction of headquarters, and as far as possible, branches should work with the standard software tools provided, such as HuB, apps.jw.org, MEPS, and the Watchtower Translation System (WTS). This software should be kept up-to-date as directed by headquarters. —See 3:32.

39. It is generally not necessary for a branch to develop custom software. Thus, most branches do not require a separate programming group in the Computer Department. Before software projects are started, they must be approved by the Branch Committee and the WHQ Computer Department, even if the project is to be done by remote volunteers or a resource outside of Bethel. When the Branch Committee recommends a local programming project, it should write to the WHQ Computer Department for approval. The WHQ Computer Department will consult with other headquarters departments and seek approval from the appropriate Governing Body committee as needed.

40. Where a local need is not addressed by a standard software package, such as HuB, apps.jw.org, Builder Assistant, Watchtower CAD, MEPS, or WTS, it is best in most cases to request an enhancement to the existing software. In this way, other branches with the same needs may benefit. Enhancement requests for existing software should be submitted in writing to the headquarters department or Governing Body committee that cares for the software package.—See 8:1.

41. At times, because of some specific local situation, a department at the branch office might not be able to care for its assigned work exactly as desired using the HuB program. In such cases, the Branch Committee should usually adjust the way the department does its work. If it is believed necessary, the Branch Committee may send an enhancement request to the WHQ Computer Department. If it is not possible for a department to use the standard software because of local legal requirements or other unique circumstances, the Branch Committee should write to the WHQ Computer Department for direction.

42. Although branches were previously able to make customizations to the Admin program, this is not possible with the HuB program. If there is a local requirement not addressed by existing HuB features, the Branch Committee should write to the WHQ Computer Department for direction. Branches should not submit enhancement requests and then do local software development to address what they requested while waiting for the enhancement to be programmed. HuB reports may be customized or translated to meet local requirements without seeking additional permission.

43. HuB enhancement requests should always be entered on the appropriate document template, approved by a Branch Committee member, and then sent to the WHQ Computer Department. If the benefit of an enhancement request justifies the amount of work required, it will be approved by the WHQ Computer Department after consulting with the appropriate headquarters department or Governing Body committee. Enhancement requests that would involve significant work or would change an organizational procedure will have to be carefully analyzed.

44. Commercial Software: The Computer Department is responsible for making sure that commercial software is not used without proper licensing. Personally owned software should not be used on branch computers. If software is needed, it should be properly purchased and licensed by the branch. This means that records have to be kept to show clearly all available licenses at the branch and who is using them. Discrepancies must be resolved either by removing the program or by obtaining a proper license. Software should not be obtained without approval from the WHQ Computer Department and should not be installed on any branch equipment without prior approval from the Computer Department.

45. Use of the Internet: All security policies from the WHQ Computer Department should be carefully followed. These provide essential protection from cyberattacks, malicious software, and viruses from the Internet. Internet access should be monitored and filtered. Since access to the Internet is automatically granted to most users, reminders should be periodically given about using this access during work hours for work-related matters only.

CORRESPONDENCE AND COMMUNICATION

46. This section provides direction for handling correspondence and communication between branch offices and with world headquarters. For guidelines on the handling of correspondence with congregations and individuals in the field, see Chapter 6.

47. A Branch Committee should feel free to ask the Governing Body or one of its committees any question related to the Kingdom work in the territory under the oversight of the branch office. It is best that such questions be expressed clearly and carefully in writing rather than by telephone. The Branch Committee should ensure that it has an arrangement for handling correspondence efficiently.

48. Branch Committee Coordinator: The Branch Committee coordinator should be especially attentive to matters sent to and from the Governing Body and its committees. Good communication between the coordinator and other Branch Committee members is essential so that all are involved and are aware of direction being provided. Numbered letters sent to the Governing Body or its committees should be signed by the coordinator on behalf of the Branch Committee. (See 2: 20-21.) Correspondence should not be delayed unnecessarily. The urgency of some matters may require that another committee member sign the letter if the Branch Committee coordinator is not available. See Chapter 2 for more information regarding correspondence sent to the Governing Body and its committees.

49. Branch offices are authorized to write to other branch offices and to headquarters. However, branch offices should not write to offices under the oversight of another Branch Committee, such as country offices, translation offices, literature depots, and so forth. In such cases, the correspondence should be sent to the branch office that has oversight. Country offices are authorized to write to the branch office that oversees their work.

50. Desk Symbols: If many people in the branch or country office prepare correspondence to be sent to other branch offices or to headquarters, it may be practical for the branch office to use desk symbols. The use of desk symbols serves to help the branch office identify the author and/or his secretary. When a reply is received that refers to the correspondence by desk symbols and date, the reply can be promptly routed to the appropriate desk. The Branch Committee may determine the desk symbol system that works best locally. No more than three letters should be combined to form each desk symbol, such as ABA, SCA, HID. The Branch or Country committee should see that a confidential listing of the branch office's desk symbols is kept up-to-date. The desk symbol list is to be provided only to those who need to consult the listing for their Bethel work. It is not to be distributed to anyone outside of Bethel.

51. Correspondence Standards: All correspondence should be dated and include the desk symbols as well as a subject or a regarding ("Re:") line. If it is necessary to send the correspondence by more than one means, this should be indicated at the top, for example, "Via Hard Copy and HuB." (See 3:57.) If the correspondence is truly urgent or time-sensitive, this should be clearly indicated under the date. If the subject involves another country or geographic location, this should be indicated at the beginning of the subject line. For example, if the Central America branch office writes about a matter in Guatemala, the subject line should commence with "Guatemala—" followed by the subject.

52. Notes: When only a very brief reply to correspondence is needed, it is appropriate to reply using a brief note at the top of the received correspondence. This note could convey an approval, a confirmation, or other minor detail. If the note is truly urgent or time-sensitive, this should be clearly indicated above the date. The note should also show the intended recipient, those being copied, the number of attachments (if any), and the sender, as well as the desk symbols and date.

53. Numbered Letters: All correspondence between a Branch Committee and the Governing Body or one of the Governing Body committees should be sent by means of numbered letters. [See Chart 3.1.] Branch Committees should address a numbered letter to one Governing Body committee only. The letter number, letter date, and desk symbols serve as a helpful reference to specific correspondence. For numbered letters sent to the Governing Body and its committees, each branch office uses a number series that starts at 101 and continues sequentially until 9999. The letter number series is not reset or restarted each year. It is reset to 101 after letter number 9999 has been used. Unique letter numbers will be used on letters sent to Branch Committees but will not necessarily be sequential. When the Governing Body or one of the Governing Body committees sends the same letter (a circular letter) to various branch offices, the same letter number will be used. Additionally, to identify easily circular letters from headquarters, the letter number will begin with a "C-" prefix, such as "No. C-1234P."

54. Memorandums: Correspondence between branch offices is sent by means of memorandums, not numbered letters. Memorandums are also used for correspondence between branch offices and headquarters departments. [See Chart 3.1.] The word "MEMORANDUM" needs to be shown above the name of the sending branch. In addition, for the recipient, the department should be specified under the name of the branch, for example, "Attention: Shipping Office." A memorandum does not need to be signed by the Branch Committee coordinator.

55. E-Mail: In addition to the use of numbered letters and memorandums, departments at headquarters and at the branch offices may be approved by oversight to use e-mail to communicate directly with departments or individuals in other lands about technical and routine matters. However, e-mail does not replace numbered letters or memorandums. Recommendations, direction, and decisions are to be communicated through numbered letters or memorandums, as explained above. In most cases, authorized e-mail communications between departments or individuals serve the purpose of expediting the clear communication of technical and routine details having to do with previously approved projects. If such e-mail communication is approved between a department at headquarters and at the branch offices or between branch offices, oversight should ensure that such e-mail communications are limited to their authorized technical purpose. E-mail should not be used by anyone to bypass official communication. A department overseer should be sure that his oversight on the Branch Committee is kept aware of the nature of work-related e-mail communications that he or others in the department send to anyone outside the branch office or to those at other branch offices or at headquarters.—See 6:45.

56. Telephone Calls: The telephone may be used to communicate with headquarters or with another branch office if necessary. This is especially true when a sudden emergency or other urgent matter arises. Usually, urgent matters handled over the telephone should be followed up with official communication in a numbered letter or a memorandum. For technical and routine matters, the guidelines outlined above with regard to the use of e-mail also apply to telephone calls. Department overseers should authorize any international phone calls before they are made.

57. Hard-Copy Mail: It is preferred that hard-copy correspondence be scanned and then sent electronically via HuB. If a matter must be sent by hard copy and HuB, please indicate this at the top of the correspondence as described in 3:51. Whenever possible, correspondence and attachments should be sent electronically using HuB, as this expedites the handling and assists in the tracking and routing of items once they have been received. If HuB is temporarily unavailable and emergency communication is needed, e-mail may be used.

DISASTER RELIEF AND EMERGENCIES

58. From time to time, emergency situations arise throughout the world. Sometimes there are violent storms, damaging floods, or strong earthquakes. At other times, brothers may be forced to flee from their homes because of warfare or mob violence. When such problems occur, the Branch Committee should write to the Coordinators' Committee as soon as possible (usually within two days) to explain what is happening and how our brothers are being affected. This initial contact may include any recommendations to provide assistance. On occasion, it may not be possible for the branch office to communicate with the Coordinators' Committee. Or a need may suddenly arise to do something for brothers affected by a disaster. In such circumstances, the branch office is permitted to spend up to USD 5,000 immediately to provide temporary relief and assistance to brothers involved in a major disaster. When funds are spent, an explanation should be included in the letter sent to the Coordinators' Committee. The letter should state what the local brothers are able to do and what materials or facilities are available to take care of the immediate needs of the brothers affected. Further instructions are found in the Disaster Relief Guidelines (S-180).—See 2:47.

59. If the Coordinators' Committee approves relief funds over USD 5,000, a separate Cash Management Center Request (A-99) form should be submitted to the Treasurer's Office for these funds, since funds designated for relief purposes should be used first. The approval letter from the Coordinators' Committee should be referenced in the comments field of the A-99. An A-99 form should be submitted even if the branch has the funds on hand to care for this expense.

HISTORICAL ARCHIVE RECORDS AND EXHIBITS

60. The Branch Committee is responsible for identifying historical archive records. These encompass a wide range of formats that include correspondence, documents, printed publications, newspaper articles, photographs, audio or video recordings, and digital files. Normally, the oldest historical records and documentation are kept for future reference. These generally include historical records that document the establishment and development of the following two categories for your branch territory:

Preaching and Teaching Work

- Records related to the opening of the preaching work in the branch territory
- Significant preaching initiatives through the years
- Major conventions held in the branch territory
- Opening of the preaching work into new language fields
- Copies of literature released in target languages of the country
- Bibles produced over the years in target languages of the country
- Annual service reports
- Key legal rulings or precedents that served to establish freedom of worship or the freedom to preach
- Experiences, correspondence, or artifacts related to the work of brothers and sisters who were instrumental in the development of the work

Significant Theocratic Facilities

Records related to the construction or purchase of:

- Branch offices
- Remote office facilities
- Assembly Halls
- Landmark Kingdom Hall projects, such as the first in your branch territory, the first in a region, or special construction types
- Missionary homes and other noteworthy housing for special full-time servants

61. Catalog of Artifacts: The Branch Committee should maintain a catalog of historical archive records and artifacts. Under the direction of the Coordinators' Committee, the Museum Department at world headquarters establishes standards and computer tools for the branches to maintain their catalog. These standards and tools contribute to a global catalog of historical and organizational artifacts. The Museum Department also coordinates the sharing of artifacts and catalog data between branches and with world headquarters for the purpose of reference and research. (See 8:2-3.) Further information regarding cataloging standards will be provided.

62. Personnel: Many branches will be able to care for their historical archive records with part-time personnel.

This may also include part-time commuters and remote volunteers. In larger branches, during special projects or because of other unique circumstances, there may be a need for an overseer and a few others to coordinate the work of the part-time personnel who are assisting with archiving records and artifacts. The personnel assigned to care for historical records and artifacts would typically work under the direction of the Bethel Office.

63. Historical Exhibits and Bible Displays: The Branch Committee may choose to display appropriate artifact samples and historical records rather than to keep them stored in an inaccessible file area. This should be done in a manner that does not damage the artifacts or records. Thus, the Bethel family and visitors will be educated and encouraged by seeing their theocratic history. (Ps. 48:13) In addition, branches may share their historical artifacts with other branches as directed by the Museum Department.

64. Requests for new historical exhibits or Bible displays should be sent to the Coordinators' Committee. The Museum Department will then work with the Worldwide Design/Construction Department (WDC) to confirm the budget for the proposed exhibit. The Museum Department will then work with the branch in preparing a final proposal within the allotted budget for submittal to the Coordinators' Committee. After the Coordinators' Committee approves the exhibit, WDC will coordinate the installation.

65. Museum Department: In addition to maintaining the global catalog and assisting in developing proposals for branch exhibits, the Museum Department implements the direction of the Coordinators' Committee on the rotation of special exhibits or historical artifacts of special interest between branches. This department also coordinates the sharing of various artifacts so that high-quality exhibits are constructed at many branches worldwide. In addition, the Museum Department cares for the Watch Tower Society's Bible collection as well as the three Warwick museums: The Bible and the Divine Name, A People for Jehovah's Name, and Faith in Action.

LEGAL MATTERS AND LITIGATION

66. Official opposition to the advancement of Kingdom interests, particularly the preaching of the good news, is to be expected. As foretold, there are those who 'frame trouble in the name of the law' and who resort to the courts in an effort to silence the spread of the Bible's lifesaving message. (Ps. 94:20; Matt. 10:16-19) While the theocratic organization does not need legal status to form congregations or engage in the field ministry, being legally recognized affords a degree of protection, which is why efforts are made to 'defend and legally establish the good news.'—Phil. 1:7.

67. The Branch Committee should promptly inform the Coordinators' Committee of serious legal challenges, providing dates and times of occurrences, names of individuals involved, and a thorough but concise explanation. This includes outlining what the charges against the brothers may be and sending a copy of the laws involved, translated into English. The Branch Committee should not assume that the Coordinators' Committee is up-to-date on the situation in a given country just because there was correspondence with world headquarters about the situation in the past. All correspondence relating to child abuse should be sent directly to WHQ Legal without copying any other office at headquarters or at the branch.—See form S-66, paragraph 36.

68. It is advisable to have a Legal Department in larger branch offices, particularly where there is significant ongoing legal opposition to theocratic activities. If possible, it is good to have a licensed attorney serving with the department. It is the responsibility of the entire Branch Committee to be aware of legal challenges to our worship.—Esther 3:5-15.

69. When legal controversies arise, the branch Legal Department may consult, if necessary, with a lawyer who is not serving at Bethel. The lawyer's opinion and recommendation should be included in the letter sent to the Coordinators' Committee. If it seems necessary to hire a lawyer, the lawyer should explain the legal remedies available, the likelihood of a favorable result, how long it will take, and an estimate of his costs. In explaining matters to the Coordinators' Committee, the Branch Committee should outline the lawyer's opinion on whether a favorable outcome will be achieved, his reasoning, and the recommendation of the Branch Committee.

70. To minimize the use of non-Witness attorneys, it is beneficial to maintain a list of brothers and sisters in the field who are lawyers. Legal matters can periodically be referred to spiritually qualified attorneys who are willing and feel privileged to help. They are generally pleased to assist without charge.

71. Action against Jehovah's Witnesses is often preceded by negative propaganda in the media and derogatory statements by government officials. The Branch Committee should promptly inform the Coordinators' Committee if events indicate that the authorities are considering the imposition of restrictions or an outright ban on true worship. With comments from the branch office and the help of the WHQ Legal Department, the Coordinators' Committee will prepare an approach to the appropriate officials. Written materials explaining our activities and refuting falsehoods may be prepared. The objective is to inform responsible officials of the true position of Jehovah's Witnesses. To ensure that the best approach is made, the branch office should always communicate with the Coordinators' Committee before setting up such meetings. Any meetings that are approved to be held with officials should be cared for by a member of the Branch Committee and, if available, someone from the branch Legal Department.

72. Most governments have committed themselves to respecting human rights, including freedom of worship. (Rev. 12:16) National and international organizations monitor governmental compliance with these commitments. It may be helpful to inform such agencies about the arrests of publishers, lawsuits, or proposed legislation against true worship. The Branch Committee should communicate with the Coordinators' Committee before doing so, explaining which organization is to be approached. A draft of what the branch office wishes to submit should be sent to the Coordinators' Committee. The Coordinators' Committee will then decide whether the approach should be made.

73. The branch office should always ask for any court action to be delayed or adjourned to allow ample time for a complete report to be sent to the Coordinators' Committee and to allow time to receive instructions from headquarters. If possible, a two-month delay or extension should be requested.

74. In the event of an adverse ruling or decision, the Branch Committee should immediately inform the Coordinators' Committee and specify the time limit for making an appeal. The Coordinators' Committee will want to know the opinion of the branch Legal Department about the advisability of appealing, the reasons for or against making an appeal, as well as the costs. The letter to the Coordinators' Committee should also state any possible negative effects on the legal status of the Kingdom work if the matter is not appealed or if the appeal is lost.

75. If the Branch Committee does not have time to write to the Coordinators' Committee to receive instructions because of a deadline that cannot be extended, a legal update should be provided as soon as possible. If necessary, the Branch Committee coordinator or another member of the Branch Committee may telephone headquarters about the matter.

76. If the Branch Committee believes that an action taken against true worship should be publicized, the branch office should write to the Coordinators' Committee with a recommendation of what could be prepared, making sure that all of the facts are fully substantiated.

77. Legal Status: Obtaining legal status or registration facilitates the entry of missionaries, the organization of assemblies, the importation of literature, the entitlement to tax exemptions, and other benefits. The Branch Committee should give careful attention to obtaining and maintaining legal registration. Of course, the organization will never compromise principles of pure worship merely to obtain legal status. Attention should be given to the type of legal status being sought. Some religions have a very favorable status, whereas others are merely tolerated. It is necessary to examine carefully the law in each country to determine which form of legal status would be most beneficial for theocratic purposes.

78. Legal Entities and the Worldwide Order: Branch Committee members should have a clear understanding of the relationship among the Governing Body, the Branch Committee, the legal entities used by branch offices, and the Worldwide Order of Special Full-Time Servants of Jehovah's Witnesses ("Worldwide Order").

79. The Governing Body has delegated a measure of oversight of the spiritual and material welfare of "the flock of God" to Branch Committees throughout the world. These Branch Committees also oversee administrative and legal activities of the organization in their designated territories. Of course, all Branch Committees serve under the spiritual direction of the Governing Body.—See w01 1/15 pp. 28-31.

80. Branch Committees are encouraged to register and use a recognized legal entity to carry on the legal affairs of the branch office. Depending on the local laws and circumstances, a branch office may need to use more than one legal entity to further the work in its territory. Any recommended adjustments in the use of legal entities are to be presented to the Coordinators' Committee. This would include recommendations for the appointment or deletion of directors or officers of legal entities. If recommending an officer or director who is not a member of a Branch or Country committee, the Branch Committee should provide the following information with the recommendation: The brother's present assignment, date of birth, date of baptism, full-time service start date, special full-time service start date, and a short description of his spiritual qualifications and theocratic responsibilities. Some countries do not allow the registration of religions or the formation of a legal entity of a religious nature. In such countries, it may be necessary to use a legal entity that is of a general nonprofit nature or, in a rare instance, a for-profit nature. In either case, the Branch Committee must not lose sight of the primary objective to spread the good news of God's Kingdom under Christ Jesus. Our principal activities as an organization are religious even though some aspects may be viewed as educational or charitable in nature.

81. Members of the Worldwide Order serve at all branch offices. The Worldwide Order provides ministers for the legal entity or entities used by the branch offices to carry out the spiritual activities of Jehovah's Witnesses. (Matt. 24:14; 28:19, 20; Acts 1:8; Rom. 12:1) For this reason, it is important that Branch Committees understand what the Worldwide Order is and the relationship between it and the legal entities branch offices may use.

82. The Worldwide Order is an unincorporated association made up of all those in special full-time service throughout the world. Members of the Worldwide Order are baptized ministers in special full-time service who perform whatever assignment they receive from the Worldwide Order. Each member of the Worldwide Order signs a Vow of Obedience and Poverty ("Vow"), which is a voluntary commitment made by each member.

83. Members of the Worldwide Order are not compensated and do not receive in-kind benefits for any services they perform. The support a member receives is based on the member's commitment to the Order and is not related to any service performed or the nature of any assignment. Members of the Worldwide Order receive food, shelter, and other basic necessities. Regardless of the nature of their privilege of service, all receive modest, yet appropriate, support. In view of the foregoing, the activities of any legal entity used by the Branch Committee are not to be viewed or regulated as a "commercial" enterprise or as involving an employer/employee relationship between any legal entity and members of the Worldwide Order.

84. At times, authorities attempt to categorize the endeavors of those in special full-time service as 'secular work.' As Christians, we do have a "work" commissioned to us. (John 4:34; 5:17; Acts 13:2; 1 Cor. 15:58; 16:10; 2 Tim. 4:5) However, members of the Worldwide Order are motivated, not by financial gain, but by the desire to accomplish the will of Jehovah and Jesus Christ in helping all "to attain to repentance." (2 Pet. 3:9) Even so, in keeping with Jesus' admonition, Branch Committee members and those who serve under their oversight need to exercise caution when asked to describe the nature of our activities. (Matt. 10:16) While we do engage in "work," even as Jesus and his first-century disciples did, we are certainly not secularly employed or motivated.

85. If a Branch Committee feels that it should describe itself, its legal entities, or the Worldwide Order differently than set forth above, it must first provide details of the proposed adjustment to the Governing Body in order to receive direction.—See 6:51; 9:1.

86. The Branch Committee should consider whether to register Jehovah's Witnesses as a local entity. However, registration as a local branch of the Pennsylvania corporation may be preferable. Regimes in developing countries are less likely to expropriate property belonging to an American corporation. In other countries, having legal ties to an American legal entity is not desirable. If the Branch Committee recommends pursuing legal registration in a particular country, the details should be sent to the Coordinators' Committee. The WHQ Legal Department will provide assistance in preparing a charter and bylaws needed for registration.

87. There may be other laws in the country regulating those who transact business on behalf of local or foreign corporations. To ensure that the branch office is operating legally, a lawyer should be consulted so that the legal requirements are known. Each member of the Branch Committee should be familiar with the laws of the country as they pertain to corporations or business matters.

88. Power of Attorney: This is a legal document authorizing an individual to act as a legal agent or representative of another person or legal entity (such as the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania). The Power of Attorney names an individual to handle 'necessary business matters.' (Acts 6:3)

The Branch Committee may write to the Coordinators' Committee if a Power of Attorney is needed to conduct corporation business, to register the corporation, or to obtain legal recognition as a branch of a foreign corporation.

89. In some countries, the law requires anyone holding a Power of Attorney to register it with the government. If that is the case, it should be done, thus avoiding the severe complications for not complying with such laws. Each member of a Branch Committee should be aware of the legal requirements regarding Powers of Attorney, including time periods for renewal or expiration.

90. Lawsuits for Libel, Damages, or Injunctive Relief: Before initiating any such legal actions, the Branch Committee must receive approval from the Coordinators' Committee. The recommendation from the Branch Committee should include a description of available legal remedies, the cost for such legal action (including estimated attorney's fees), an estimate of the likely time from the initiation of the action to the conclusion, and the likelihood of success and the recovery of an award. In libel actions, the Branch Committee should consider whether the suit will further advertise the false accusations. If it is believed that failure to initiate a lawsuit will lead to other difficulties, these concerns should be explained.

91. Printed Matter Against Jehovah's Witnesses: As a general policy, the organization does not publish responses or retaliate legally if another organization or individual circulates printed matter that contains falsehoods about Jehovah's Witnesses. It is usually best to concentrate on the positive activity of Kingdom preaching. If the Branch Committee thinks that the wise course is to take steps to counteract negative reports that may adversely affect our activities, the committee should set forth recommendations to the Coordinators' Committee.—See 6:23.

92. Refusal of Blood Transfusions: If our brothers' refusal of blood transfusions is being disregarded or overridden by health-care providers, legal action may be warranted. If the Branch Committee recommends such, a complete overview of the matter should be presented to the Coordinators' Committee. The recommendation should clearly state what is hoped to be accomplished by taking legal action. We are not inclined to get involved if a favorable result will not help the brotherhood in general.

93. Child-Custody and Visitation Disputes: At times, publishers are involved in child-custody or visitation disputes in which our beliefs are attacked. Unfavorable child-custody decisions in which our beliefs and activities are misrepresented can adversely affect our reputation in the community, even our legal status. With prior approval of and subsequent review by the Coordinators' Committee, some branch offices have prepared and made available information to assist publishers whose beliefs are attacked in such disputes.

94. Personal Decisions: The Legal Department at the branch office is set up to assist the Branch Committee in "the defending and legally establishing of the good news." It is inappropriate for the Legal Department to take time from these "more important things" to assist individuals with their personal legal matters. (Phil. 1:7, 10) The Legal Department should limit its work to legal matters affecting the advancement of Kingdom interests rather than personal requests for legal advice or services.

95. Protecting the Organization's Copyrights: The organization has a long-standing policy of copyrighting its publications. Copyright is a tool that can be used to protect dedicated materials from being misused, such as by apostates or false religious organizations as well as by those who attempt to commercialize our artwork, photographs, or text. We do permit some uses of our copyrighted material, such as use or reproduction by Jehovah's Witnesses for the personal use of family members, use of the organization's artwork by the congregation at a Kingdom Hall, and use by authors and others for educational purposes with specific permission granted on a case-by-case basis. However, approval is not given for the general or widespread distribution of our publications, including artwork, photographs, and text, for posting on the Internet or any other electronic network or for reproduction or distribution in exchange for money. If the branch office learns that the organization's copyrighted material is being misused, the Branch Committee should write to the Coordinators' Committee, providing full details, including the action that the committee recommends be taken against the violator.

96. Tax Matters: Although many countries provide tax exemptions for religious entities, some countries do not. Tax exemptions are generally created by law and are usually not a legal right. Where required to do so by Caesar, legal entities used by branch offices should pay the taxes legally required of them, even if other religious entities do not follow the law. Conversely, legal entities used by branch offices should not pay taxes where there is an accepted legal basis for not doing so. Every Branch Committee should take full advantage of any legal exemption from taxation. Branch Committees should keep in mind that how they handle tax and legal matters (including the tax or legal status of those in the Worldwide Order) could have implications for other branch offices, the worldwide organization, and the Worldwide Order. In addition, individuals engaged full-time in religious activities may be entitled to tax exemptions. Such exemptions relieve the branch offices of some financial obligations and indirectly constitute legal recognition of our activities. The Branch Committee should keep the Coordinators' Committee informed when exemptions currently enjoyed by the organization or members of the Worldwide Order may be in danger of being lost.

97. To respond effectively in times of emergency or war, Branch Committee members should be familiar with all decrees affecting our work and the operation of the branch office. The Branch Committee should watch carefully so that the work will be protected and the brothers will be given necessary direction. The Branch Committee should be alert as to what is going on in the country and keep the Coordinators' Committee duly informed.

98. Keep Proclaiming the Good News: In some places, opposers make every effort to stop the Kingdom work. Nevertheless, true Christians continue preaching, even if this means doing so in a quiet manner. If literature is not available, the brothers can talk about the truth using only the Bible. Dedicated servants of Jehovah should be thoroughly acquainted with the Word of God so that they can continue to preach no matter what circumstances might arise.

99. Data Protection: The organization of Jehovah's Witnesses respects individuals' rights of privacy, based on principles set forth in the Bible. The organization recognizes the necessity for open and frank communication and the collection of personal and sensitive personal data in order to administer to the needs of Jehovah's Witnesses and accomplish its religious and charitable activity. The organization also recognizes the corresponding necessity to maintain confidentiality and ensure that information is adequately protected. (Prov. 15:22; 25:9) Confidentiality is highly valued.—Prov. 20:19.

100. Various countries have enacted data protection laws to ensure individuals' rights of privacy. The organization of Jehovah's Witnesses has a long-standing history of respecting privacy rights and maintaining confidentiality, even before the enactment of such data protection laws. The organization will continue to protect information disclosed to it in harmony with its long-standing practice, now recorded in this policy.

101. Scope of Application: This policy applies to the entire organization of Jehovah's Witnesses, as represented by branch offices located throughout the world.—See 6:23.

102. Data Protection Policy: The organization of Jehovah's Witnesses handles all personal data in accordance with the following principles:

a. Personal data will be processed in a fair and lawful manner.

b. Personal data will be collected, processed, and used only to the extent necessary to fulfill Jehovah's Witnesses' religious and charitable purposes.

c. Personal data will be accurate and kept up-to-date. Any error will be corrected as soon as possible after the organization becomes aware of it.

d. Personal data will be kept only for as long as is necessary for the legitimate purpose(s) of the organization.

e. Due consideration will be given to respecting the rights of data subjects.

f. Appropriate technical and organizational measures will be taken to prevent unauthorized or unlawful disclosure of personal data. All computer-held personal data is held on password-protected computers to which only authorized users hold passwords. Offices are locked after office hours and only authorized staff may gain entry.

g. Personal data will not be transferred between branches unless necessary to accomplish the religious or charitable purposes of the organization of Jehovah's Witnesses, to which all of Jehovah's Witnesses have consented by virtue of their free and willing decision to become Jehovah's Witnesses and identify themselves as such.

103. Rights of the Data Subject:

a. A data subject's right to the protection of personal and sensitive personal data and to the correction or deletion of personal and sensitive personal data is to be granted according to the practice of Jehovah's Witnesses as set forth in this policy.

b. Whoever makes a request according to this section must provide sufficient evidence of his identity.

c. If a data subject requests access to, correction of, or deletion of personal data or sensitive personal data about himself, the organization will fairly consider granting the request by balancing the interests of the individual in gaining access or correcting or deleting data against the legitimate religious interests of the organization, including whether granting the request would endanger the organization's right to religious freedom and practice.

d. The organization has an interest in permanently maintaining data regarding an individual's status as one of Jehovah's Witnesses. Deleting such information would unduly infringe on the organization's religious beliefs and practices.

104. Right of Appeal: If a person believes that his rights have been infringed, he can appeal to the Branch Committee by means of a written personal letter. The letter must be sent within two weeks of the action that forms the basis of the appeal.

NEWS AND PUBLIC INFORMATION

105. Office of Public Information (OPI): This office at world headquarters works under the direction of the Coordinators' Committee to represent Jehovah's Witnesses to the media, academia, and other nongovernment organizations. To this end, OPI publicizes accurate information about Jehovah's Witnesses and to correct misconceptions and prejudices about our organization and work. OPI provides training to the Public Information Desks (PIDs) and coordinates their participation in global media strategies and information campaigns. This office is also responsible for informing the brotherhood of significant events related to our worldwide activities in the form of news items published in the Newsroom section of jw.org.

106. OPI prepares and distributes information that highlights developments or initiatives of Jehovah's Witnesses that are of special interest to specific representatives of the media, academia, and other public-facing organizations with international influence. A few examples include significant building projects, disaster relief work, translation initiatives, the use of advanced technologies in our Bible educational work, or special witnessing campaigns on subjects such as education, health, and social issues. This office maintains a list of internationally recognized journalists, academics, and other non-Witness experts and, where appropriate, takes the initiative to provide updates on Jehovah's Witnesses relevant to the work of these professionals.

107. OPI also provides assistance to the Coordinators' Committee in addressing situations or topics covered by the media that may significantly impact our activities. If a branch office needs help with media-related issues, the Branch Committee may submit the details of the situation to the Coordinators' Committee for direction. If there is a major development or a fast-breaking news item in the branch territory (particularly in the case of a disaster or other emergency), the branch should communicate confirmed and relevant details directly to OPI through the PID via the Public Communications Resource intranet site (http://www.bethel.jw.org/WHQ/OPI/PID) or by e-mail (opi@jw.org) as soon as possible for a potential news item for the Newsroom section of jw.org. The Branch Committee should also submit a more comprehensive report to the Coordinators' Committee.—See 6:23.

108. Public Information Desk (PID): It is beneficial for the branch office to establish good relations with the public news media wherever possible. To this end, the PID should regularly provide representatives of credible media outlets, journalists, and academics in the branch territory with accurate and newsworthy information about our activities and beliefs. (Col. 4:5, 6) This may include preparing media-specific material on topics and events of local interest involving Jehovah's Witnesses. The PID may also direct these professionals to the resources and other official information available on the Newsroom page of jw.org.

109. When the branch receives requests for information from the media, discernment should be used in deciding whether inquiries should be answered and, if so, to what extent. Each situation is unique and should be evaluated based on the subject matter as well as the reputation of the outlet and the reporter. Any requests from media or academic professionals involving the republishing of material that is not from the Newsroom should be referred to the Coordinators' Committee for consideration. Additional support information, procedural guides, and communication tools are available to the PID through the Public Communications Resource intranet site administered by OPI.

110. The PID should be alert to positive news stories related to Jehovah's Witnesses in the branch territory and, after obtaining approval from the Branch Committee, provide this information and related source materials to OPI. OPI will then determine if the recommended story qualifies to be developed into a news item. If so, OPI will develop the material with the assistance of the branch and forward the item to the Coordinators' Committee for consideration. News releases and news alerts currently appearing in the Newsroom can serve as a guide to the PID for ideas on positive news stories. Once a branch-related news item is posted to the Newsroom, the PID should immediately inform appropriate media and/or academic contacts within the branch territory. Please keep OPI informed of any resulting news coverage.

111. Public Information Desk Overseer: Each Branch Committee should appoint a brother at the branch to oversee the activities of the PID. The Branch Committee should also consult Country Committees under its supervision to appoint a media contact for each country in the branch territory. (Please review our letter dated HCA:NB June 4, 2015, No. C-38278C.) Those assigned to the PID, particularly the PID overseer, should have a working knowledge of both English and the language used by local media, so as to assist those who translate materials appearing in the Newsroom and to facilitate communication with OPI. The brother overseeing such media-related functions should be humble, capable, and tactful. He should be able to articulate our beliefs clearly in a personable yet professional manner, particularly when dealing with non-Witnesses. The brother should be prepared to care for news interviews and other inquiries from media outlets, serving as the official spokesman for Jehovah's Witnesses in the branch territory. He will also serve as the permanent branch media contact for news releases prepared by OPI. Please keep OPI informed of the current staffing of the PID and the media contacts working in countries under the oversight of the Branch Committee.

112. Appointing Additional Organizational Spokesmen: Along with the use of the PID overseer as a spokesman for Jehovah's Witnesses in your branch territory, there may be times when other individuals are selected to assist with media inquiries on specialized topics because of their background in that field. For example, a member of the Legal Department at the branch may be used to handle media inquiries related to ongoing court cases or major legal issues involving Jehovah's Witnesses. Such appointments should be determined on a case-by-case basis after evaluating the specific nature of the media request. However, in all cases, the PID would coordinate the arrangements made between the media professional and the assigned spokesman as well as assist the spokesman in preparing for any interviews.

113. The Teaching Committee provides an annual convention media guide to branch offices for use in connection with regional, national, special, and international conventions. A representative from the Media Services Department may be assigned as a convention spokesman by the local Convention Committee in harmony with direction from the branch office. Following the instructions in the media guide, it is appropriate for this brother to invite the local media to report on the convention each year. Ordinarily, no newspaper, radio, or television advertising is used for conventions unless it is free.

114. Correcting Misinformation: As a general rule, we avoid controversy when it comes to minor misconceptions that appear in the media. However, if some in the media spread false information of a serious nature about Jehovah's organization, what can be done? The Branch Committee generally knows the situation in the country and will often be able to judge whether it would be wiser to contact the media and attempt to correct the misinformation or to ignore the matter. There is "a time to be silent and a time to speak." (Eccl. 3:7) Please write to the Coordinators' Committee if further direction is needed. —See w98 12/1, pp. 17-18, pars. 15-18.

115. Handling Media-Related Emergencies: In a media-related emergency, such as criminal activity involving Jehovah's Witnesses or a slanderous campaign that could have repercussions on our preaching work, the Branch Committee has the responsibility to handle the matter quickly. The committee should communicate with the Coordinators' Committee for direction, particularly if it is anticipated that problems will quickly spread to other countries because of media reports. If slanderous or lying reports appear in the media, it may be appropriate for the PID, in consultation with the branch Legal Department, to review these reports and submit a recommendation to the Branch Committee. The Branch Committee may write to the Coordinators' Committee to provide details on the matter or to request additional direction on pursuing the matter legally. —See 6:23.

RECORDS MANAGEMENT

116. Under the direction of the Coordinators' Committee, the Branch Committee is responsible for the implementation and routine audit of records management throughout the branch. This includes the identification, maintenance, safeguard, and destruction of records in the normal course of activity. Each individual, office, and department within the branch is expected to comply with the records management policy.

117. Auditing/Records Management Department: Under the oversight of the Coordinators' Committee, the Auditing/Records Management Department at world headquarters provides guidance and training to branches for the safe and coordinated management of all branch records.—For information on historical archives, see 3:60-65.

118. Records Management Guidelines (A-160): For detailed information regarding records management, see Records Management Guidelines on MDS. Please review and become familiar with the principles contained in these guidelines. However, do not begin implementing these guidelines until you are contacted by the Coordinators' Committee.

PERSONNEL COMMITTEE

BETHEL FAMILY

1. The Branch Committee, acting representatively for the Governing Body, is to be keenly interested in the spiritual welfare of the Bethel family. An effort should be made to maintain a wholesome atmosphere among all in the family. Members of the family should feel that the Branch Committee is ready to help and, of course, committee members should be approachable at all times. Suggestions should be welcomed and used if advisable.

2. It is proper to commend the brothers and sisters and express appreciation for their work, assuring them that they are needed. This will contribute to their contentment and happiness. In turn, a happy family will be a productive family.—1 Cor. 12:25, 26.

3. Avoiding Partiality: All members of the Branch Committee must give careful and prayerful consideration to avoiding partiality in dealing with those at Bethel and those in the field. (Rom. 2:11; Jas. 3:17, 18) When there is reason to provide something extra for someone in the spirit of 1 Timothy 5:17, 18, the matter should be handled openly and in a manner that all will appreciate and understand. This will eliminate any appearance of secrecy or favoritism. Thus, whether receiving extra help or doing any work in connection with it, individuals who may be involved in such matters will understand the situation, giving no cause for gossip or hurt feelings.

4. Overcoming Problems: Individuals often encounter personal problems and may want to talk to someone to ask questions and receive Scriptural counsel and guidance. Branch Committee members need to be good listeners and show kindness and patience.

5. Some have problems because they try to impose their conscience on others and insist that everyone see things their way. (Rom. 14:1-4) Or a person may look for something to criticize and then build up a list of complaints, perhaps eliciting support from others. (Rom. 12:17, 18) Older brothers may use 1 Timothy 5:17 to suggest that as an exception, they should have special privileges. How much better it is to take to heart Luke 22:25, 26, for we all are brothers! If a sister, especially the wife of an overseer, feels that she deserves special privileges or insists on saying how things should operate, there will be problems. (1 Tim. 2:11, 12) Some kind, understanding counsel will usually correct such trends before they become deeply rooted.—Gal. 6:1.

6. The Branch Committee should calmly and Scripturally help the brothers to keep balanced and find joy in working together. Most personal problems can be handled locally at Bethel, but major questions and problems may be referred to the Personnel Committee. Fine direction is provided in Dwelling Together in Unity, in the section entitled "Resolving Problems."

7. Application Process: An application form, Application to Become a Member of the Worldwide Order (A-8), should be submitted to the Branch Committee and kept on file. This application is first reviewed by the Branch Committee, which determines (1) if the individual qualifies for Bethel service and (2) if there is a need for him at Bethel. If there is a need, the Branch Committee will send a recommendation to the Personnel Committee for final approval, providing such essential information as the applicant's full name, gender, age, years baptized, marital status, whether anointed or other sheep, years in full-time service, current assignment, the Bethel assignment he is recommended for, and the reason why he is needed at Bethel.—See 6:12.

8. When recommendations of new ones for Bethel service are made, the age requirements, from 19 to 35 years, should be kept in mind. Those under 19 years of age should not be recommended. Each one invited to Bethel should be a productive worker. Special circumstances may at times require recommending a mature brother with a special skill to serve at Bethel, even though he may be a little over 35 years of age. But this should be the exception. If such a recommendation is made, the Branch Committee should explain why the brother is needed and what efforts have been made to find someone else who meets the basic requirements for Bethel service. Although the older brother may be an excellent worker and would fill a need, his wife may find it difficult to adjust to Bethel or may have health problems that make her a below-average Bethel worker. In such a case, one department may benefit while another would not.

9. Without consulting with the Personnel Committee, the Branch Committee is authorized to approve:

- A new Bethel family member (BBR), provided that the person is within the standard age requirement and will be replacing someone who has departed or will soon depart Bethel service. However, if the addition of the new Bethel family member will increase the overall size of the Bethel family, or if the person is over the usual age requirement, the Branch Committee will send a recommendation to the Personnel Committee for final approval.
- A temporary Bethel family member (BBT) for up to one year who is a replacement for a regular Bethel family member or a temporary Bethel family member and is within the standard age requirement. If it is desired to retain the services of a temporary Bethel family member after the initial one-year period, the Branch Committee should submit its recommendation to the Personnel Committee in the usual manner near the completion of the person's temporary assignment. Temporary Bethel family members should be provided with a specific end date for their temporary service.—See 4:27.

10. There is no need to consult with the Service Committee before recommending for regular Bethel service (BBR, BBT, or BBF) those who are graduates of the Bible schools or who are temporary special pioneers, special pioneers, or substitute circuit overseers. However, if the Branch Committee wishes to transfer to Bethel a field instructor, a field missionary, and/or a circuit overseer for a period of more than three months, the committee should send a numbered letter to the Service Committee explaining the need and a proposal for caring for the need in the field if the transfer is approved by the Service and Personnel committees. Along with the numbered letter, the usual recommendation form that is used when making recommendations for Bethel service should be attached, which will be forwarded to the Personnel Committee for further handling if approved.—See 6:38.

11. All who work at Bethel should have meaningful work to do. If there is not enough work for a person to do at Bethel, it would be better for him to be assigned to the field. The Branch Committee should always make sure that Bethel is neither overstaffed nor understaffed. A formal review of all Bethel personnel should be performed on a yearly basis to determine who may be better suited for an assignment in a different Bethel department or in the field. Newer members of the Bethel family gradually gain proficiency and, in time, can easily shoulder a greater workload. Experience has shown that when many young people are assigned to work together, some are inclined to waste time, especially without an overseer present to see that the work gets done.

12. New Members: When new members arrive at Bethel, a member or a representative of the Branch Committee should speak to them about the importance of working whole-souled and putting Kingdom interests first. Also, the arrangement for providing spiritual assistance needs to be explained to them. Encouragement should be given them to discuss personal problems with any of the experienced elders at Bethel. Every help should be offered to aid new members in adjusting to life at Bethel.

13. The new member is shown to his room and given the opportunity to read the Dwelling manual and any other material provided. Any forms that are required by the branch office will be filled out. A program of orientation is arranged so that he will become familiar with the layout of the buildings and see the work being done in various departments, such as the kitchen, dining room, laundry, and housekeeping. Working for a day and a half with a housekeeper has proved to be very helpful for new ones. It is better that a member of the Branch Committee or a brother or brothers appointed by such committee introduce the orientation program for any of these departments, although a sister may be assigned to demonstrate certain procedures.

14. For new members of the family, the first year is a year of training. Elders working closely with the new brothers should endeavor to help them appreciate their privilege of sacred service at Bethel. It is hoped that well-qualified ones will continue to serve at Bethel for as long as they may be needed. However, if an individual does not seem well-suited for Bethel service, he should be given appropriate counsel as soon as this is observed. It would be unkind and unscriptural simply to tell a person at the end of the year that he has not proved satisfactory. Counsel and help should be given throughout the year. Of course, anyone may be dismissed or directed to leave at any time for improper conduct or for any other circumstance that may interfere with his Bethel service. In any case, matters should be explained to him in a kind manner and in a way that may help him to progress whether he stays at Bethel or not. We want to help new Bethel family members make a success of their service at Bethel with the goal of making spiritual advancement.

15. First Five Years at Bethel: A person who comes to Bethel should be in good health. He should have his personal affairs arranged so that he is able to devote himself to his Bethel service within the framework of the established arrangement for support of members of the Worldwide Order, such as personal time away, health care, and so forth. He should be physically, mentally, and circumstantially able to adjust to Bethel and to give consistent attention to his work assignment. In the case of a married couple, the above would apply to each mate individually. Each should enjoy good health and be able to shoulder his or her own responsibility as a member of the Bethel family.

16. If a member of the Bethel family misses an unusually high number of workdays, perhaps 15 to 20 days in a year's time, the Branch Committee needs to be aware of this. Was it the result of an unusually prolonged illness, an accident, or an operation? Is it expected that he will miss a similar number of workdays each year because he has generally poor health? Was it necessary to care for an unusual family emergency that is not likely to be repeated? Such matters were considered when a new one was being trained during his first year, and they should continue to be given careful consideration during the first five years of his Bethel service, particularly during his three year tested-as-to-fitness period. There is no need for individuals to lose any of their personal time away because they missed a certain amount of work. The real issue is whether Bethel is the place for them. The goal is to keep the organization strong and, at the same time, to give consideration to the needs of individuals. The Personnel Committee may be consulted in unusual cases.

17. Even though a person who is still relatively young may have been at Bethel for more than five years, he should be able to do his work without missing a great number of workdays. If he consistently misses work because of poor health or other personal problems, the Branch Committee will consider what can best be done to help him. In some cases, it may be that he should leave Bethel if there is no reason to believe that there will be improvement. Of course, if a person has spent a good portion of his life at Bethel and works diligently to the extent that his health permits, we certainly want to look after him and not in any way make him feel that he is a burden to Bethel. When members of the Bethel family have spent many years in special full-time service, perhaps 25 or more, and some disabilities arise, the branch will make some provision for them and arrange for them to serve according to their physical ability.

18. Seniority: Years of seniority are determined by adding up the time a person has been in full-time and special full-time service assignments. Seniority includes time spent in all avenues of full-time service. It does not include time spent as a congregation publisher or an auxiliary pioneer. A person's seniority is used to determine such things as the number of additional days of personal time away that are credited to him each year on September 1 and the amount credited to his Personal Expense Account. Seniority is also helpful to the branch office in handling such matters as the assignment of Bethel rooms in a fair and impartial way. (See 4:20.) At times, two or more Bethel family members may have similar seniority. To help resolve matters involving seniority-based assignments or other privileges, seniority is determined in the following order: (1) full-time service, (2) special full-time service, (3) date of baptism, (4) age.

19. If a person has had a break or breaks in his full-time service, his seniority is the combined total of days he has spent in full-time service assignments. Thus, if an individual has to leave full-time service to care for aging parents or some other responsibility and is thereafter able to resume full-time service, his seniority is based on the entire period or periods he was previously in full-time service. Those leaving special full-time service assignments (special pioneer, member of the Bethel family, circuit overseer, missionary, construction servant, or any other special full-time service assignment) to enter the regular pioneer service will not experience an interruption in their full-time service record if they are appointed as regular pioneers within three months of leaving their previous assignment. Brothers and sisters in full-time service who are sentenced to prison because of their Christian neutrality will similarly have their full-time service record recorded as uninterrupted if they resume serving in the full-time ministry within three months of their release from prison.—See 6:94.

20. Rooming: Only regular Bethel family members (BBR), temporary Bethel family members (BBT), and expatriate Bethel family members (BBF) are provided permanent housing accommodations in buildings owned or rented by the branch. Rooms are assigned according to the individual seniority, based on time spent in full-time service, of the senior roommate. (See 4:18-19.) When the one who obtained the room leaves Bethel, it is put up for bid. As a general policy, two people are assigned to each room. The Branch Committee should take into consideration the number of rooms available and the number of people to be housed, the size of the rooms, the age, health, and years of service of the occupants, and other factors. In some isolated instances involving elderly ones or other extenuating circumstances, adherence to the policy of two people to a room may result in distress and hardship for one or both roommates. If a problem arises that the Branch Committee is not able to resolve, it may be necessary to write to the Personnel Committee to explain the problem and make recommendations. Single Branch Committee members may be accommodated in a modest room without a roommate, provided there are sufficient rooms available. If a Bethel family member loses his or her marriage mate in death and the surviving mate has 40 or more years of full-time service and is living in a large double room, he or she should move to a smaller double room after a reasonable amount of time has elapsed. For widows or widowers advanced in age, the Branch Committee may make an exception for them to remain in their current room. In either case, a roommate will not be assigned. If the surviving mate has less than 40 years seniority, he or she may remain in his or her current room alone for one year and then be given the option of being assigned to a one-person room of up to 350 square feet (33 sq m) that is not a double room or choosing a roommate and remaining in the current room.

21. Transfers Within Bethel: When any worker is transferred from one assignment to another, he should be told why. Thus, he will not wonder if the change is because of a failure on his part or if there is something that he should try to improve.

22. Transfers to Other Countries: A branch may assign Bethel members to offices under its supervision in other countries without consulting the Personnel Committee. Additionally, a branch may move personnel within its branch territory, such as to or from a remote translation office, without seeking approval from the Personnel Committee. This is the case whether the remote office is within or outside of the country where the branch is located. All other requests to transfer branch personnel, such as transfers between two branch offices, should continue to be forwarded to the Personnel Committee for consideration and approval.

23. The cost of obtaining or renewing a passport is ordinarily the responsibility of the individual. However, if a special full-time servant is transferred to another country at the direction of the organization and he needs a passport to care for his assignment abroad (whether in the field or at Bethel), the branch office may pay for the passport (either a new one or a renewal) if the special full-time servant requests such financial assistance. Any unusual cases should be submitted for consideration to the appropriate Governing Body committee along with the pertinent details and your recommendation.

24. Training: Bethel family members who travel to another country at their own expense during their personal time away may at times request to receive some practical training during their visit to the foreign Bethel. In other instances, the branch may recommend that a member of its Bethel family temporarily be sent to another Bethel to receive some necessary training. In either case, a written recommendation should be submitted to the Personnel Committee using the Bethel Department Training Request form (A-97). Training will be provided only to fill a definite need that exists at Bethel. Approval will not be given to training requests submitted for individuals who simply wish to extend their stay in a foreign country.

25. Time Away for Mates During Branch Work Assignments: See 9:88.

26. Departures: If a member of the family desires to leave Bethel service, he should submit a written notice to the Branch Committee at least 30 working days in advance, if at all possible. In this way, arrangements can be made for someone to replace him in the work assignment. A person leaving special full-time service cannot use more than 24 working days of accumulated personal time away to extend his departure from special full-time service, even if he may have accumulated more unused days. (See 9:75.) If an individual has been directed to leave Bethel for nonjudicial reasons but disagrees with the direction, he may appeal to the Branch Committee. If upon hearing the appeal, the Branch Committee decides that he should leave Bethel but the person strongly disagrees with the decision, the Branch Committee should advise him that he may ask the Personnel Committee in writing to review the matter if he wishes to do so. If this is the case, his letter of appeal should be sent along with the comments of the Branch Committee.

27. When a person leaves Bethel service, it would be good to review carefully the appropriate staffing guidelines to determine if a replacement is needed. If a replacement is needed, the Branch Committee is authorized to invite someone without consulting with the Personnel Committee.—See 4:9.

28. Elders at Bethel: All elders should be available to members of the family who have problems. Elders should be observant of any difficulties or discouragement on the part of a Bethel family member and be ready to offer personal counsel and help. The Branch Committee should explain clearly to all elders what their responsibilities are and what is expected of them. Serious problems should be reported to the Branch Committee. Elders should see the value of giving encouragement to fellow workers and commendation for things well done. They should help all in the family to maintain a good attitude toward their service privileges, reassuring each one that his services are needed and appreciated.—Matt. 11:28-30.

29. In some larger branches, it may be advantageous to have small elder groups made up of elders at Bethel to share in the responsibility of assisting the Branch Committee in taking care of the Bethel family. (Titus 2:6, 7) The elder groups may help in making recommendations or in dealing with problems that individuals have. They do not decide on the everyday operation of the branch or on changes that are to be made. They assist principally in giving commendation and in caring for personal problems. Of course, the Branch Committee is free to seek information or suggestions from such elder groups.

30. Once a year, branches should arrange to have an elders' meeting with all appointed elders serving with the following enrollments: regular, expatriate, and temporary Bethel family members, full-time and part-time commuters, remote servants, construction servants, expatriate construction servants, full-time and part-time construction commuters, and Assembly Hall and Bible school facility servants. Those who are serving in the field should watch the meeting the same way they receive other spiritual programs. This would preferably be streamed live. If this is not practical, a recording can be made available for 30 days on JW Stream. Responsible elders may be asked for their suggestions on subjects to be discussed. Thereafter, the Branch Committee can assign committee members or selected elders to develop outlines and present these in brief talks to the assembled elders. This regular communication with the elders is helpful in keeping them well-informed. It provides an opportunity to encourage them and assists them to fulfill their responsibilities as elders. The Personnel Committee will prepare and forward to all branches one outline that may be used by the Branch Committee for the elders' meeting.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEES

31. Anyone coming to know of serious misconduct on the part of a member of the Bethel family should advise the offender of his obligation to bring this to the attention of a member of the Branch Committee or another elder. The one having knowledge of the offense should also make a report to the Branch Committee so that the organization will be kept clean. (Lev. 5:1) This should be done whether the offender reports the matter or not. The judicial procedures outlined in this section apply equally to full-time and part-time commuters.—See 5:10.

32. Investigation Procedure: If the elders of the congregation that a Bethel family member attends become aware of an accusation against the Bethelite, they should immediately contact the branch office for direction. Except for regular pioneers, this direction applies equally to all full-time service enrollments listed in Chart 9.2, Full-Time Servants Enrollments. If the accusation involves the Bethelite's conduct with someone in his congregation or if the offense was committed in his congregation environment, the Branch Committee may determine that it will be most practical to have the local elders investigate and handle the case to the extent necessary. Otherwise, the matter will be handled at Bethel. In either case, two elders will investigate the allegation. If the accused is under consideration for a theocratic assignment, it should be held in abeyance pending resolution of the case. If upon investigation the elders determine that the charges have no substance or that no further action is needed, they should inform the Branch Committee in writing of their findings. If the elders determine that a disfellowshipping offense has been committed, the Branch Committee will appoint a judicial committee.

33. Judicial Committees Involving Bethelites in the Congregation: If it has been established that a Bethel family member has committed a disfellowshipping offense involving his congregation, the congregation body of elders should inquire of the branch office immediately as to how to proceed. The branch office will determine whether the local body of elders should convene a judicial committee or whether the case should be handled by a judicial committee at Bethel. If the local elders are directed to appoint the judicial committee, the case will be handled in an expeditious manner, just as a judicial case would be handled for any publisher in the local congregation. The judicial committee should immediately advise the branch office of the final decision.

34. Judicial Committees at Bethel: These are appointed to handle offenses that are the basis for disfellowshipping, just as they would be handled in the congregation. The judicial committee and its chairman are appointed by the Branch Committee. Qualified elders who are in a good position to render a balanced and just decision should be appointed. Though the judicial committee is usually made up of three elders, it could include four or five because of the gravity of the offense and other factors. Branch Committee members should not serve on judicial committees if other qualified brothers are available to do so. Thus, if needed, some Branch Committee members would be available to serve on an appeal committee. Although the judicial committee may want to consult with members of the Branch Committee before reaching a conclusion, the judicial committee alone should make the decision. The report to the Branch Committee will be made out using the form Judicial Committee Summary at Bethel (A-7).

35. Appeal Committees: If the judicial committee (either at Bethel or in the congregation) decides that the Bethel family member should be disfellowshipped, he may make an appeal in writing to the Branch Committee. The Branch Committee will select an appeal committee of qualified elders at Bethel, one of whom will be appointed to serve as chairman. The appeal should be heard in an expeditious manner even if the basis for the appeal does not appear to be sound. In the case of disfellowshipping, the wrongdoer should be given the usual seven days to make this appeal, even though he would normally leave Bethel on the day the original judicial committee advises him of the decision to disfellowship. No announcement of the disfellowshipping should be made until seven days have elapsed since the appeal was handled.—ks10 8:1-20.

36. When the disfellowshipping is upheld, there is no further arrangement for appeal. However, if an individual persists in believing a serious error in judgment has occurred, the appeal committee should inform him that he may submit his allegations in writing to the appeal committee within seven days for transmittal to the Branch Committee. The appeal committee should not mention this provision unless the individual indicates that he believes a serious error in judgment has occurred. If he indicates a desire to submit a letter of appeal to the Branch Committee, the announcement of disfellowshipping should be delayed. The appeal committee should submit the wrongdoer's letter, the report from the judicial committee, and a report from the appeal committee to the Branch Committee. No announcement should be made until a reply is received from the Branch Committee.—ks10 8:14-15.

37. If someone is judicially reproved and therefore must leave Bethel, a letter should be sent to the body of elders of the congregation that he will attend so that the elders may be able to assist him to regain his spirituality. A copy of the judicial committee's report (either from Bethel or from the congregation) should be sent to the Service Department, which will write the letter to the body of elders. In the case of disfellowshipping, the form Notification of Disfellowshipping or Disassociation (S-77) should also be included in the report to the Service Department. If the person is reinstated, the S-77 form should be signed and returned to the Service Department. An announcement should be made to the Bethel family in the case of a disfellowshipping. (ks10 7:31) In the case of someone who is judicially reproved, the Branch Committee should use good judgment in determining whether an announcement should be made or not.—ks10 7:21.

38. Judicial Matters Involving Those With a Design/Construction Enrollment: Similar to the arrangements for handling a judicial matter involving a member of the Bethel family, the Branch Committee should be informed whenever a construction servant, Assembly Hall servant, or Bible school facility servant serving under its supervision becomes involved in serious misconduct. The Branch Committee will be responsible for determining if local elders, elders in the servant's home congregation, or other elders selected by the Branch Committee or circuit overseer should be assigned to handle the matter. The Service Department will serve as the correspondence conduit between the branch office and the elders assigned to handle the matter.

EXPATRIATE BETHEL FAMILY MEMBERS

39. A person may decide on his own to move from his homeland to another country. Although he was not assigned by the organization to serve in a foreign country, he may eventually be approved to serve as a regular member of the Bethel family (BBR) in that country and may continue serving indefinitely as such.

40. The designation "expatriate Bethel family members" (BBF) includes:

- Individuals who have moved on their own to the country and who after being invited to Bethel are recommended to the Personnel Committee as expatriate Bethel family members
- Bethelites in foreign service

Foreigners serving at Bethel who are not recommended for expatriate Bethel family member status will continue to serve as regular members of the Bethel family (BBR).

41. If a foreign brother is especially valued for his experience and maturity and has served at Bethel for a period of time, the Branch Committee may recommend to the Personnel Committee that he serve as an expatriate Bethel family member.

42. Some Bethel family members are sent by the Personnel Committee to a Bethel in another country to fill a particular need or to provide training for a period of no less than three years. In correspondence, these expatriate Bethel family members will continue to be referred to as "Bethelites in foreign service."

43. An expatriate Bethel family member would not lose his status if he is approved for continued Bethel service following his marriage to either a local sister or a sister from another country. He would remain an expatriate Bethel family member and his wife would be appointed as an expatriate Bethel family member regardless of her country of birth.

44. The personal time away arrangement for expatriate Bethel family members is the same as that outlined in the Dwelling manual, paragraphs 30-37.

BETHELITES IN FOREIGN SERVICE

45. Bethelites in foreign service are expatriate Bethel family members sent by the Personnel Committee to fill a need for skilled workers or to train local brothers to become skilled and to equip them to take on more responsibility. The goal is for a branch to become self-sufficient as far as workers are concerned.

46. Bethelites in foreign service are expected to remain in their assignment for at least three years. If there is still a need for their help and they are willing to remain in the assignment after three years, they may continue in foreign service. The Worldwide Order will cover the cost of transportation to the foreign assignment as well as the cost of shipping necessary personal belongings. See Branch Instructions for Shipping Personal Belongings and Personnel Guidelines (plg).

47. If a Bethelite in foreign service wishes to return to his home branch after completing at least three years in foreign service, he should write to the Personnel Committee, expressing his desire. The Branch Committee should receive a copy of the letter and provide the Personnel Committee with its recommendation. He may request to return to Bethel service in his home branch if he previously served at Bethel. If, as an exception, the Personnel Committee sent a well-qualified brother from the field to serve as a Bethelite in foreign service and the brother wishes to return to his home branch, he may ask to return to the field. The Branch Committee should forward all such written requests along with its observations to the Personnel Committee. The Worldwide Order will pay for the return trip. In all cases, the Personnel Committee should be advised when a Bethelite in foreign service discontinues his foreign service assignment. —See Guidelines for Bethelites in Foreign Service (A-69).

TEMPORARY VOLUNTEERS

48. At times, a need may arise for additional help at Bethel for a short period of time. When such needs exist, Branch Committees have the authority to invite brothers and sisters who have an approved Application for Volunteer Program (A-19) on file to volunteer at Bethel for periods of six months or less. However, when temporary volunteers are needed for more than six months, the Branch Committee should obtain approval from the Personnel Committee. If there is a need for the volunteer to serve at Bethel on a full-time basis, the recommendation for him to serve as a regular member of the Bethel family should be handled in the usual way. When a temporary assignment exceeds a full calendar month, the volunteer may automatically receive a monthly reimbursement that is equivalent to the monthly allowance that is given to Bethel family members in that country (unless the temporary volunteer specifically mentions that no reimbursement will be needed).

COMMUTERS

49. Part-time commuters (BBV) and a limited number of full-time commuters (BBL) may be invited to supplement the need for additional workers. They are not members of the Bethel family and are not housed at a Bethel-owned property. Full-time commuters are members of the Worldwide Order of Special Full-Time Servants of Jehovah's Witnesses and therefore receive the usual provisions given to those in special full-time service. They may attend the Morning Worship program and the Bethel family Watchtower Study, as well as be assigned to participate in these spiritual programs as commenters. Whenever a recommendation is made to the Personnel Committee for someone to serve as a full-time commuter, the branch should include a recommendation for an appropriate allowance to cover housing, transportation, and personal expenses. Part-time commuters are not members of the Worldwide Order. Regular pioneers who are part-time commuters may count up to 70 hours a month and have a reduced requirement of 780 hours per year. The 780 hours would be the total of all hours worked at Bethel and those spent in the field ministry. Branch Committees are authorized to approve a new part-time commuter without consulting with the Personnel Committee if the applicant will be replacing a part-time commuter who has left or will soon leave this form of service. Part-time commuter quotas have been established for each branch. Recommendations to increase such quotas should be sent to the Personnel Committee for approval. Part-time commuters may attend the Morning Worship program on the days that they work at Bethel. They may also attend the Bethel family Watchtower Study even if they do not work on that day.—See 7:109-110.

REMOTE VOLUNTEERS AND SERVANTS

50. Qualified brothers and sisters who desire to serve as remote volunteers should submit, through his or her congregation, an Application for Volunteer Program (A-19). Branch Committees are authorized to approve a new remote volunteer without consulting with the Personnel Committee if the applicant will be replacing a remote volunteer who has left or will soon leave this form of service. Remote volunteer quotas have been established for each branch. Recommendations to increase such quotas should be sent to the Personnel Committee for approval. Remote volunteers would initially be invited to serve for one year. Remote volunteers who are granted access to the Bethel computer network should be asked to sign the Watchtower Information Resources Confidentiality Affirmation. (See 3:8.) Approved remote volunteers who are serving as regular pioneers may receive hour credits each month for the time they spend as remote volunteers, similar to the arrangement for regular pioneers who serve as part-time commuters. They may be granted up to 70 hours a month and have a reduced requirement of 780 hours per year.

51. Similar to remote volunteers (BRV), remote servants (BRS) are those selected from among individuals who possess needed skills of a specialized nature but whose personal circumstances do not allow them to serve physically at Bethel. They provide a valuable full-time contribution to the work of a Bethel department from their private homes. However, unlike remote volunteers, remote servants are members of the Worldwide Order. Therefore, they receive benefits similar to what are provided to other members of the Worldwide Order, such as personal time away and health care. These special full-time servants may receive access to the Bethel spiritual programs. Recommendations for remote servants should be limited to very skilled individuals whom a Branch Committee considers to be especially valuable to the work. Applicants should be between 19 and 55 years of age, in good health, and considered spiritually mature. Anyone who is recommended as such should have already been tested first as a remote volunteer or as a temporary volunteer. A remote servant should submit, through his or her congregation, an Application to Become a Member of the Worldwide Order (A-8). Using the Remote Servant (BRS) recommendation form (A-95), a recommendation including a recommended allowance should be sent to the Personnel Committee for its consideration. Remote servants should be reviewed annually by the Branch Committee to determine whether they continue to qualify and whether their services continue to be needed. It is not necessary to submit a new recommendation to the Personnel Committee every year unless there are specific concerns that merit consideration. Remote servants may supplement their monthly allowance by engaging in some limited secular work as long as it does not interfere with their meeting the weekly 40-hour requirement for their Bethel work and fulfilling their congregation responsibilities. They are not required to use personal time away in order to perform some limited secular work.

BETHEL CONSULTANTS

52. Brothers or sisters who assist the branch from their private residences when a particular need or a project arises are enrolled as Bethel consultants (BOC). Typically, these volunteers provide limited assistance with purchasing, real estate, translation work, special conventions, tax or legal matters. Generally, they do not receive access to the Bethel network or any of its data, such as correspondence, file directories, or HuB data. These outside volunteers should complete an Application for Volunteer Program (A-19) before being invited to assist the organization. Approved Bethel consultants who serve as regular pioneers may receive hour credits monthly for the time they spend on branch work, similar to the arrangement for pioneers approved to work with Kingdom Hall and Assembly Hall construction projects.

USE OF SPECIAL PIONEERS FOR BETHEL WORK

53. It is preferred that special pioneers focus their time and energy on their assignment in the field rather than on Bethel work. With this in mind, before submitting a recommendation to the Personnel Committee to use a special pioneer for Bethel work, the Branch Committee should determine if a Bethel family member could fill the need. Alternatively, it may be possible to recommend that a regular pioneer or an exemplary publisher be enrolled to serve as a part-time commuter (BBV) or remote volunteer (BRV). (See 4:49-50.) Because of the temporary nature of a temporary special pioneer assignment (FTS), there is no provision for such ones to be used for Bethel work. If such an individual is needed for Bethel work, he should discontinue his temporary special pioneer service so that he may accept the part-time or full-time Bethel assignment. In this way, another qualified pioneer could be used in the field as a temporary special pioneer.

54. Requests to use skilled special pioneers to handle Bethel work part-time will be considered on a case-by-case basis. Only when there is an exceptional need that cannot be filled by a Bethel family member, a part-time commuter, or a remote volunteer will approval be given to use a special pioneer to do Bethel work on a part-time basis. If the Personnel Committee approves such a request, the special pioneer should spend no more than half of his monthly hour quota doing Bethel work. Additionally, the Branch Committee should remember that priority should be given to training a replacement to do the Bethel work as soon as possible. In this way, the special pioneer can eventually refocus his full time and energy on his assignment in the field.

55. On the other hand, if a highly skilled special pioneer is needed to do Bethel work on a full-time basis, consideration should be given to recommending to the Personnel Committee that he serve as a remote servant (BRS) or, if he lives near the main Bethel facility or a remote Bethel facility, as a full-time commuter (BBL). Moreover, there is no objection if an individual chooses to discontinue serving as a special pioneer in order to make himself available for Bethel work. If a need for his services exists, the Branch Committee should make an appropriate recommendation to the Personnel Committee in the usual manner.

56. If approval is given to use a skilled special pioneer to assist part-time with Bethel work, he should retain his primary enrollment. However, he should likewise be enrolled concurrently in HuB either as a part-time commuter or as a remote volunteer, which will serve as his secondary enrollment.

57. Occasionally, the Service and Personnel committees also receive recommendations that certain infirm special pioneers or special pioneers who have a reduced hour requirement serve simultaneously as part-time commuters or as remote volunteers. In cases where the field activity of a special pioneer is severely limited because of age or health, perhaps he is still able to do some Bethel work, such as translation. In situations like these, he should spend no more than half of his monthly hour quota doing Bethel work. This may allow the individual to enjoy productive work and a sense of accomplishment.

BETHEL HOME ORGANIZATION

58. The Bethel Home encompasses most matters pertaining to the daily needs of the Bethel family. This includes reasonable provisions for such things as cleaning, laundry, meals, medical care, security, safety, and the general welfare of the family. (Luke 10:7; 1 Tim. 6:8) While the entire Branch Committee should be familiar with the work done in the Bethel Home, one committee member or someone assigned by the Branch Committee should oversee this work.—dw par. 29.

59. Although many helpful services may be provided to the Bethel family, care should be exercised to make wise use of dedicated resources. All Bethel family members should be conservation-minded regarding utilities and equipment. (dw pars. 75-78) The Branch Committee should provide reminders to the family as needed.

60. All assignments in the Bethel Home are important and necessary. Performing domestic tasks, even those considered menial by some, is sacred service to Jehovah. (dw par. 23) Depending on the workload, an individual may be able to care for work in more than one department. Good planning and proper organization are essential for smooth and efficient operation. (1 Cor. 14:40) Additionally, it may be necessary to assign members of the family to care for various duties during nonworking hours.—dw par. 27.

61. Housekeeping and Cleaning: "A good model for all Christian homes is Bethel." (w89 6/1 p. 16 par. 7) Not only does the cleanliness of Bethel contribute to the good reputation of Jehovah and his name people but it is also essential to maintaining good health. (Deut. 23:13, 14) Therefore, Bethel life requires that a high standard of physical cleanliness be maintained. (dw par. 59) To keep up this high standard, every area at Bethel should be cleaned according to a set schedule or as needed.

62. Bethel family members have the primary responsibility to care for their own room. Occupants should not expect the housekeeper to put things away for them. They should try to lighten the housekeeper's workload as much as possible.—dw pars. 57-60.

63. A Branch Committee member or another responsible brother assigned by the Branch Committee should oversee the housekeeping and cleaning operations, ensuring that good-quality training is provided and that the approved standards are being consistently maintained. When giving housekeeping assignments, responsible brothers should take into consideration such things as room sizes and types and the age of the housekeepers, as well as other circumstances.

64. Cleaning principles, examples of housekeeping routines and cleaning schedules, and departmental guidelines can be found in the Housekeeping Information manual. Actual cleaning procedures, available equipment, and chemicals will vary according to local circumstances. Consistent routines ensure that no areas are overlooked and that a high standard of cleanliness is always maintained. (Lev. 11:44, 45) Housekeepers should be flexible and take the initiative in caring for their individual assignments.

65. It may be advantageous to assign brothers to do some of the more physically demanding cleaning tasks.—1 Pet. 3:7.

66. In the spring of the year, Bethel family members spend a Saturday morning cleaning their entire room and any personal storage areas assigned to them. This is an assigned work period for everyone in the Bethel family. The objective of spring cleaning is to care for areas that are not scheduled to be cleaned by the housekeeper, as well as to give the family an opportunity to dispose of all unwanted personal items. Bethel family members may be given a list of tasks that they should accomplish. If the Branch Committee feels that it is necessary, in addition to Saturday the preceding Friday afternoon may also be used to do spring cleaning. Brothers 60 years of age and older and sisters 40 years of age and older may use all day Friday. Those who are assigned to care for duties during spring cleaning or those who are away for any reason may do their spring cleaning at a later time.

67. Larger branches may decide to use a specific workday each year for annual office cleaning. In such cases, Bethel family members may be allowed to spend up to one workday each year to clean their offices and work areas thoroughly. As in the case of spring cleaning, this cleaning period is not considered time away from work. Rather, it is part of the Bethel work assignment.

68. Laundry: The Bethel family is expected to wear neat, clean clothes that befit Christian ministers. The laundry assists the family in maintaining a good appearance so as to serve as a model to all those visiting Bethel and to enhance the organization's reputation in the local community. In addition, the laundry cares for all Bethel linens, which contributes to the good health of the family.—dw par. 63.

69. The Branch Committee will determine the size of the laundry staff, taking into account the size of the Bethel family, the number of sisters working in the department, the age of the workers, the type of laundry equipment that is being used, the type of clothing and linens used locally, and so forth. Good training is essential to ensure that the personal garments of the Bethel family and Bethel linens are cleaned properly.

70. All members of the family should be instructed on how to organize personal items before sending them to be laundered. On designated days of the week, members of the family bring or send their items to the laundry. Clean laundry should be returned to occupant rooms or made available for pickup as soon as possible.

71. All Bethel linens should be regularly inspected and repaired. At times, it is more cost-effective to replace an item than to repair it.

72. Arrangements should be made for basic garment repairs, such as for rips and tears, on personal items. Depending on the condition of the item and the needed repairs, the overseer will determine whether the repair will be made and will communicate with the owner of the garment as needed. Where possible, a limited service for altering clothing for the family may be provided.

73. Meals: Mealtimes should be pleasant and enjoyable occasions for all. Meals that are nutritious and tasty contribute to the overall happiness and well-being of the Bethel family.—Eccl. 2:24.

74. The Branch Committee should make sure that wholesome food is served. Fresh food in season is usually less expensive and more nutritious. Extravagance and the purchase of specialty items should be avoided. (Luke 10: 41, 42) Additionally, by planning ahead and buying certain items in bulk, the branch may realize a cost savings.

75. Sufficient amounts of food should be served at each meal. No Bethel family member should leave the table hungry because of a lack of food. (Mark 8: 3, 8) Food that is left on the table after a meal may be taken away by members of the family for their personal use.—dw par. 73.

76. Meals should always be served on time. The time for meals may be determined locally.

77. The cook or a designated brother working with the kitchen should create the menus and submit them for approval to the Branch Committee member assigned to oversee the kitchen. If the committee member feels that a change is needed, he should first consult with the cook or the designated brother working with the kitchen.

78. Everyone assigned to handle food must be given thorough training in food safety, and these principles should be strictly followed. Specific guidelines can be found in the Food Safety Training manual.

79. The kitchen is not available for private use unless approved by the Branch Committee.

80. The size of the kitchen and dining-room staff will vary according to the size of the Bethel family and the types of meals served. Cooks and dining-room workers will generally start work early to prepare the breakfast meal. Their work schedule for the rest of the day is adjusted accordingly.

81. Weekend meals and mealtimes vary according to the local circumstances and the size of the branch and will be determined by the Branch Committee. Serious consideration should be given to the needs of both the older and the younger members of the family. If no one from food service is working on a weekend, food may be provided in advance or individuals may be assigned to prepare meals.

82. During the evening and weekend meals, members of the family may be assigned to kitchen or dining-room duties. If local circumstances allow, brothers and sisters 50 years of age and older may be excluded from receiving these assignments.

83. A reasonable supply of nonperishable staple foods should be maintained for emergencies. Such supplies should be used and replenished on a regular basis to ensure that these foods do not deteriorate.

84. Health: When individuals are invited to Bethel, it is with the understanding that they are in good health. Sufficient rest, sleep, proper hygiene, moderation in entertainment, moderation in eating and drinking habits, and balanced exercise are essential to maintaining good health.—dw pars. 63-67.

85. If in-house health-care services are established, arrangements should be made for a capable, sympathetic, experienced brother to oversee these services. It may be that a doctor, a nurse, or another qualified medical professional is available to assist with such care.—See 9:40-49.

86. At the beginning of each workday and, if practical, at the beginning of each afternoon work period, housekeepers will check each room. Any who are in sick should be reported to the health-care overseer or department. Arrangements should be made to care for the needs of those who are ill. This would include making sure that sufficient healthful food is available for their use.—See 5:38 for information regarding health care provided outside of the branch.

87. Security: Constant attention should be given to the protection of the Bethel family. Additionally, the branch property, which includes money, vehicles, and equipment, needs to be kept secure.—dw par. 98.

88. Each Bethel family member should feel a personal responsibility for security as well as for any keys and identification entrusted to him.—dw pars. 96-102.

89. A review of the effectiveness of branch security measures should be made periodically. To reduce the risk of criminal activity, practical measures should be implemented. Some examples are noted as follows:

- Accessible doors and windows should be appropriately secured.
- All entrance and exit door locks should receive regular inspection and maintenance.
- Security lighting should be installed at appropriate locations.
- Proper choice and placement of shrubbery can enhance security.
- Valuables should not be displayed in public view.

90. Each night, periodic security checks of the branch property should be performed. In addition to ensuring that the property is secure, inspections should be made of each building, to check for gas leaks, windows left open, water running, drains clogged, unnecessary lights left on, and so forth.

91. It is usually advisable to install antitheft devices on branch vehicles. Such devices may include bars attached to the steering wheel, chain locks for the engine hood, and cut-off switches that interrupt the starter circuit.

92. Safety and Accident Prevention: Imitating Jehovah, the Branch Committee places a high value on human life. (Ps. 36:9) The most valuable assets to Bethel are people. Therefore, the safety of the Bethel family is never compromised for the sake of speed, cost, or convenience.—dw par. 69.

93. The safety of the Bethel family continues to be a concern of the Personnel Committee. The Branch Committee should review carefully what is being done in a practical way to educate the brothers and sisters at the branch about the importance of accident prevention. Accident-prevention instructions can include matters involving the safe operation of motor vehicles, proper work habits, the use of machinery and tools, and so forth. All these areas should be examined to see if common-sense precautions are being taken to prevent accidents. Members of the family can be trained to evaluate the potential hazards of a work site or assignment prior to starting work.

94. Each department overseer should consider safety procedures and fire prevention to be an important part of his responsibility. Brief, regular safety talks should be integrated into the work schedule of appropriate departments. These discussions should be positive; they emphasize the Branch Committee's concern for the welfare of the family and the improved efficiency that results from following safety procedures consistently.

95. Overseers of departments that care for work that is potentially dangerous should ensure that all safety hazards have been explained to those working on such assignments and that safety procedures are being carefully followed. Bethel family members selected to serve in such assignments should be mature and safety-conscious.

96. All legal requirements regarding chemicals should be met. Training should be given to ensure the proper handling and storage of all chemicals. For example, mixing such chemicals as bleach and ammonia can be toxic.

97. A definite procedure should be established in advance that would be implemented in the event of an accident or emergency. Such an action plan would require someone to be available to perform the following essential functions:

- Administer first aid.
- Notify overseers.
- Provide emergency transportation to a nearby hospital or doctor.
- Call the fire or police department.

98. Each branch should have a program for training the drivers of branch vehicles. Only those who are qualified and well-trained should be used to drive. The following points should be applied:

- Vehicles must be properly maintained.
- Trucks should not be overloaded.
- Seat belts should be used by drivers and passengers.
- Drivers who are overly tired or otherwise impaired should not operate vehicles.
- All drivers should drive at a reasonable speed, according to local regulations and road conditions.

99. When losses, damage, or accidents occur involving branch property or individuals, responsible brothers will need to investigate the incident. Those having oversight should take steps to make needed changes and give appropriate counsel so as to prevent similar accidents in the future. (Ex. 21:29) Additionally, an incident wherein there was no loss, damage, or accident (a near miss) should also be investigated. A full report of the accident or near miss should be made to the Branch Committee.—See 5:10; dw par. 68.

100. Accidents involving serious injury or major property damage should be reported to the Publishing Committee immediately. If a major injury to a Bethel family member results, the Personnel Committee should also be notified of the incident.

101. Visitors to the Branch: The branch offices of Jehovah's Witnesses are recognized by our brothers and sisters as centers of theocratic activity. Motivated by strong faith, Jehovah's people make special arrangements to visit Bethel to be encouraged and to see what is being accomplished. We do not want to make these visitors feel that they are imposing on us and on the work being done at Bethel. Good arrangements should be in place to welcome visitors in a warm way and to have well-prepared tour guides, who will enthusiastically show them the Bethel facilities.—Rom. 12:13.

102. During regular working hours, someone should be assigned as a receptionist to greet visitors in a warm manner. The receptionist will also respond to phone calls and handle incoming inquiries, such as Kingdom Hall locations or items of local interest. However, it is the responsibility of the visitors to arrange for their own transportation and accommodations.

103. Depending on local circumstances, Bethel family members may host visitors for a meal. Additionally, they may make arrangements to have their parents, relatives, or friends in the truth stay as overnight guests for one or two nights in a guest room. Their stay may be extended for a night or two beyond that if circumstances allow. Whether coming for a meal or staying overnight, guests should be advised ahead of time to dress modestly, in line with Bethel standards.—dw pars. 103-112.

104. Special attention should be given to caring for the needs of visiting missionaries, expatriate Bethel family members, and other special full-time servants. They should feel comfortable and welcome. At times, this includes providing transportation, food items, and so forth.

ASSEMBLY HALL AND BIBLE SCHOOL FACILITY SERVANTS

105. Where the size of an Assembly Hall or a Bible school facility warrants it, one or more Assembly Hall or Bible school facility servants may be assigned to oversee the normal operations, building maintenance, grounds maintenance, and cleaning of the facility. These are special full-time servants who work under the direction of the Local Design/Construction Department (LDC). These are qualified individuals who have already proved their skills and organizational abilities in some form of full-time service as Bethelites, temporary volunteers, construction volunteers, construction servants, or special pioneers. They are members of the Worldwide Order who generally live on site and work a schedule similar to that of the Bethel workweek. The general age limit for those who are enrolled as Assembly Hall or Bible school facility servants is 70 years. Where warranted, a branch may request approval from the Personnel Committee for an exception.

106. The LDC or others designated by the Branch Committee may give well-qualified single brothers or married couples an Application to Become a Member of the Worldwide Order (A-8). The Branch Committee will review the application and determine if the applicant qualifies to be recommended either as an Assembly Hall servant (BAS) or as a Bible school facility servant (BSS). When there is a need for additional servants, the Branch Committee will submit the appropriate recommendation form (A-72 or A-91) to the Worldwide Design/Construction Department which, in turn, will make a recommendation to the Personnel Committee for approval. Since the majority of the work should be done by local volunteers and groups from nearby congregations, the number of Assembly Hall and Bible school facility servants can be kept to a minimum.

107. If Assembly Hall or Bible school facility servants have health problems, appropriate care is provided. (See 9: 40-49.) Additionally, although these servants work under the direction of the Local Design/Construction Department, it is the responsibility of the Branch Committee, under the direction of the Personnel Committee, to oversee the spiritual welfare of these individuals serving in their branch territory.

CONSTRUCTION SERVANTS

108. At times, brothers and sisters are assigned to assist with building and maintaining facilities used in connection with our Kingdom work. Those who qualify and who serve for more than three months may receive the privilege of becoming members of the Worldwide Order. These brothers and sisters are assigned to work on building projects and to assist with disaster relief. The Personnel Committee oversees the personal and spiritual needs of construction servants worldwide. Construction servants may have various schedules, according to the need. They attend local congregations and share in the preaching work.

CONSTRUCTION VOLUNTEERS

109. In addition to construction servants (BCS), qualified brothers and sisters may be assigned by the Branch Committee as construction volunteers (BCV) to assist with building and maintaining facilities and to assist with disaster relief. Assignment duration may vary from two weeks to three months with a possible extension of up to three additional months for a maximum length of six months. If it is felt that a longer extension is needed, the Branch Committee will provide a recommendation to the Worldwide Design/Construction Department which, in turn, will forward it to the Personnel Committee for approval.

- When assignments exceed a full calendar month, the volunteer receives the same monthly allowance that Bethel family members in that country receive. If needed, the branch makes practical living and food-service arrangements for the duration of the volunteer's assignment.
- Construction volunteers are not full-time servants unless they are already regular pioneers. Regular pioneers may be credited up to 70 hours per month while serving as construction volunteers. Construction volunteers receive one day of personal time away for each full calendar month of their assignment.

CONSTRUCTION COMMUTERS

110. Those who serve full-time on theocratic construction projects and who provide their own accommodations are enrolled as full-time construction commuters (BCL). These are special full-time servants who arrange for their own accommodations and regularly assist five days a week (or 40 hours per week) on a construction project, whether at a branch office or at Kingdom Halls, Assembly Halls, remote translation offices, Bible school facilities, or other theocratic construction projects. BCLs include those who work on the construction site or those who support construction activities (such as by working on project development, in the construction office, in the kitchen, or by doing cleaning or purchasing) and whose assignments will end at the completion of the construction project in their area. Approval by the Personnel Committee is required for these servants, for which the branch will submit a Full-Time Construction Commuter (BCL) recommendation form (A-73).

111. Those who serve part-time on a construction project one or more days each week on a continual basis, who commute to the project from their own accommodations, and who may need access to the Bethel computer network are referred to as part-time construction commuters (BCC). Included are those on the construction site and those supporting the construction activities (e.g., project development, construction office, kitchen, cleaning, purchasing, and so forth) whose assignments will end at the completion of the project. Such ones should complete an Application for Volunteer Program (A-19). If a part-time construction commuter is needed for more than six months, the Branch Committee should send a recommendation form (A-90) to the Worldwide Design/Construction Department, which will in turn forward its recommendation to the Personnel Committee. Volunteers who work part-time on Kingdom Hall projects and who do not need access to the Bethel computer network should not receive this enrollment. Rather, they should be designated as Local Design/Construction volunteers.

DWELLING TOGETHER IN UNITY

112. The Dwelling manual is considered a part of Branch Organization. However, if there has been a change to what is printed in Dwelling regarding a procedure or a policy, the newly approved instruction should be followed. Regular and temporary Bethel family members may receive a paper or electronic copy of the Dwelling manual. Full-time and part-time commuters may receive a copy of the Dwelling manual during the time they are commuting to Bethel. Temporary volunteers—more than three months (BBW)—may also receive a copy of the Dwelling manual during the time they are working at Bethel. Additionally, all construction servants, all construction commuters, or construction volunteers who assist with the work at Bethel for a period longer than three months may receive a copy of the Dwelling manual for their use while they serve at Bethel. The manual should be returned to the Bethel Office when a person discontinues his Bethel service. If he received an electronic copy of the manual, he should be directed to destroy the file.

MICROSOFT OFFICE 365

113. In order to have access to Office 365 or other software used by the branch office, Bethel consultants, remote volunteers, or others caring for assignments from the branch office should be added to the congregation domain. The overseeing department should contact the individual's congregation, requesting that he or she be added to the congregation domain. At that time, the following should be conveyed to the congregation: (1) No jw.org roles should be added solely because the individual has been added to the domain. (2) If the individual moves to a new congregation or no longer qualifies, he or she should be removed from the congregation domain.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE

TREASURER'S OFFICE

1. The Governing Body is determined to act as a wise steward of dedicated resources and to give priority to the activities that contribute the most to the spiritual welfare of God's people and to the advancement of the global preaching work. (1 Chron. 29:14-16; Matt. 24:45-47; Luke 16:10-12; Phil. 1:10) Budgeting helps the organization to prioritize spending and to avoid spending more than the brothers are currently able to support. (Prov. 21:5; Luke 14:28; 2 Cor. 8:11, 12) The Treasurer's Office supports the Governing Body and the branches in preparing the annual budgets, and it processes all Monthly Financial Packages (MFP) and Annual Budget Packages (ABP).

2. Under the direction of the Publishing Committee, the Treasurer's Office at world headquarters oversees a number of global financial programs, including the Global Assistance Arrangement (GAA), Global Investment Fund (GIF), and the Cash Management Centers (CMC). This office also develops and assesses internal controls to ensure compliance and to avoid fraud or error. The Global Risk Management Desk (GRMD) in the Treasurer's Office assists with the implementation of GAA policies established by the Publishing Committee, administers insurance-related issues for world headquarters and the branches, and cares for programs designed to promote life safety and to protect the organization's assets from financial loss. The Treasurer's Office is responsible for the administration of donation and charitable giving programs.

3. The Treasurer's Office supports branch Accounting Departments by developing the accounting guidelines in Branch Accounting Department Guidelines and by providing the recommended procedures and training materials on the Treasurer's Office Library. The Treasurer's Office also assists branch Accounting Departments by answering technical nonpolicy questions on the Treasurer's Office Global Help Desk.

ACCOUNTING DEPARTMENT

4. Oversight: The Branch Committee receives specific direction on financial matters and is responsible for using dedicated resources wisely and within the approved budget. The committee should ensure that all accounting is accurate, that the financial activity of the branch is properly reflected in the accounting records, and that it is compliant with organizational and legal requirements. The Branch Committee should also be aware of the outcome of internal and external audits.

5. The Branch Committee should carefully select the Accounting Department overseer. (1 Cor. 4:2) He must be a spiritual man—trustworthy, tested, well-organized, and attentive to detail. He should preferably be someone other than the Branch Committee coordinator. (2 Cor. 8:18-22) The overseer should be a Bethelite or a full-time commuter so that he is available to provide direction. He must be able to keep matters confidential. The Branch Committee contact for the Accounting Department should work closely with the Accounting Department overseer to make sure that the personnel needs of the department are met within the approved staffing guidelines provided by the Publishing Committee.

6. The work of the Accounting Department may be broadly divided into five categories: (1) Oversight, which includes compliance with organizational guidelines and directives as well as external laws and regulations, budgeting, financial analysis, risk management, general office support, and real estate; (2) General Accounting, which includes general ledger, fixed assets, and reporting; (3) Accounting Services, which includes accounts receivable, accounts payable, and allowances; (4) Cash Management; and (5) Related Field Entities Support, which includes supporting congregation entities and others in the field. How the Accounting Department is organized depends on the amount of assigned work and the number and ability of the personnel within the department. Each category may include several roles. A role does not usually require a full-time person, and often a full-time person performs many roles in the Accounting Department. However, these roles must be assigned in such a way so that sufficient separation of duties is maintained. For example, in many branches, the brother who handles the Branch Risk Management Desk (BRMD) is someone other than the department overseer. For further details on these responsibilities, see Branch Accounting Department Guidelines.

7. Compliance: The Branch Committee is responsible for complying with organizational policies, guidelines, and specific direction regarding financial matters as well as respective external laws and regulations. Similar to the way the Treasurer's Office at headquarters works under the direction of the Publishing Committee and with other departments to establish financial compliance guidelines and internal controls, the Accounting Department under the direction of the Branch Committee should work along with other departments, such as Legal, Local Design/Construction (LDC), and Purchasing to ensure financial compliance in the branch. Often the Branch Committee contact for the Accounting Department can assist with good communication between the departments on these matters. The brother asked to care for compliance in the Accounting Department should have a reasonable understanding of the laws relating to financial aspects of the work in countries under the branch territory, including corporate and tax laws. In many branches, the Accounting Department overseer handles this responsibility. The authorities expect an organization's financial records to mirror its activities. Inconsistencies often lead to problems. The Accounting Department overseer, or someone working closely with him, should be familiar with these matters. At times, the branch may use experienced professionals, preferably brothers, as consultants to help ensure that the branch complies with the local statutory or legal requirements for financial records and for reporting to the government. (See 5:11, 28; Matt. 22:17-22; Rom. 13:1-7) All those who work in the financial area should be made aware that failure to comply with legal requirements could lead to serious consequences including financial penalties and the loss of tax-exempt status.

8. There are many types of taxes levied by governments, such as taxes on personal or corporate income; sales, use, and excise taxes on purchases or sales, including Value Added Tax (VAT); social security taxes; estate taxes; property taxes; and duty on imported goods. Tax issues may also arise in connection with donations, gifts, and real estate. Since governments provide tax relief for a variety of reasons, the branch should endeavor to take advantage of exemptions or immunity when it legally qualifies for such. Most countries extend favorable tax treatment to those engaged in religious endeavors full-time. This relieves the branch of some financial burdens and affords its endeavors tacit legal recognition. The branch should not pursue exemptions to which it is not entitled or exemptions that might otherwise jeopardize its standing with the authorities. Structuring financial transactions with clarity and simplicity helps to create a legally defensible tax position. It is also important that the branch clearly complies with government regulations. The branch should ensure that the structure of the legal status of the local organization is one that will most likely result in exemption for a religious organization. While it is important to follow the principle mentioned at Matthew 22:21, the point is not to be overly cautious in this area. The branch should think in terms of how it can carry out necessary functions in a way that does not automatically involve setting things up to pay taxes. When taxes are due, the amount paid should be as low as is legally permissible, and the procedures should be as simple as possible. When there is a reasonable legal basis for not paying tax, the branch should pursue that approach.

9. The branch should keep the Publishing Committee informed of significant developments, especially if there is a potential for losing tax exemption. Unresolved questions relating to tax matters should be promptly addressed to the Publishing Committee for comment. The Global Tax Group (GTG), made up of members from the Treasurer's Office and the WHQ Legal Department, assists the Publishing Committee with tax matters.

10. The internal controls described in Branch Accounting Department Guidelines and the recommended procedures in the Treasurer's Office Library are designed to ensure compliance and avoid fraud and error in handling financial matters. The Accounting Department will assist the Branch Committee with implementing internal controls and regularly assessing them. The Branch Committee should make sure that all events of noncompliance—theft, fraud, or misstatement in the financial records—are investigated, handled, documented, and communicated to the Publishing Committee. A report to the Publishing Committee should include (1) what the investigation revealed, (2) who is suspected of being or known to have been involved in the matter, (3) to what extent the secular authorities were involved, and (4) what steps the Branch Committee has taken to prevent such noncompliance from occurring in the future. If a member of the Bethel family was involved, the Personnel Committee should be copied on the report; if a special full-time servant in the field was involved, the Service Committee should be copied on the report. (See 4:31-38, 99; ks10 5:20) The Branch Committee should also ensure that all necessary internal and external audits are performed regularly and are well-supported by the affected departments. The branch audit should be completed at least annually or as directed by the Coordinators' Committee.

11. The Publishing Committee should be informed any time a new external audit is required. The branch Legal Department should be consulted in advance of any government audit to help ensure that all legal requirements for the audit are being met by the government representative. If the branch is obliged to disclose the financial records, these should be transparent and easy to follow.—See 5:7, 28.

12. Budgeting: The branch plays an important role in carefully budgeting and in making wise purchasing decisions. The Annual Budget Package (ABP) is used to report anticipated spending on operations and projects for the upcoming service year. The ABP should be completed each year in July and submitted to the Treasurer's Office for approval by the Governing Body. For some areas of spending, the branch will receive guidance from the headquarters department that has oversight of that area of work. The Publishing Committee will inform all branches annually of what spending will be managed by world headquarters and of what spending will be managed by the branch.

13. The branch provides funding for all Kingdom Hall and Assembly Hall construction in its territory, based on an annual budget developed and approved through the Worldwide Design/Construction Department (WDC). All congregations have the opportunity to support the construction of these theocratic facilities through resolutions for monthly donations.

14. The Governing Body appreciates that money is needed for branch operations and to expand the work through field missionary, special pioneer, temporary special pioneer, circuit, and regional activity. However, at the same time, it desires that all funds be used carefully. It is appreciated when the Branch Committee keeps unnecessary expenses to a minimum. The funds being used are contributed by the brothers from all parts of the world. They have made sacrifices to help with the Kingdom work, so these funds should be used to the greatest advantage. Branch Committees should review the actual expenses each month compared to the budget projection. The committee members should decide what they need to do to stay within the approved budget, particularly in areas of the work that are not under the direction of a headquarters department. For example: Can shipping costs be lowered? Can incidental trips be combined to save time and transportation costs? Are purchases necessary and worth the price paid? The Treasurer's Office will communicate any adjustments to a branch's approved budget when new initiatives are introduced by headquarters departments during the year. They may also contact a branch if spending is exceeding budget forecasts so that steps may be taken to stay within the approved budget. Similarly, the Branch Committee should contact the Treasurer's Office as soon as possible if the branch will spend significantly more than its approved budget. The purpose of this communication is, not to get approval for additional spending, but to make sure that the Treasurer's Office is able to project properly the financial standing of the organization. Construction budgets for branch, Kingdom Hall, and other projects are administered under the supervision of the WDC.

15. Financial Analysis: The Branch Committee should carefully consider costs when making decisions. This is especially true when a decision will result in an ongoing expense rather than a one-time purchase. Occasionally, tracking the cost of major products, jobs, and services is used to establish a manufacturing cost for shipping invoices and an hourly rate for personal services, to set a budget, to reduce waste, or to simplify operations. There is no need, however, to undertake detailed cost accounting every time an item is needed. Any financial analysis that is done should take all factors into consideration to ensure that a good decision is made. The Publishing Committee should be asked for assistance in analyzing costs for a major decision or an independent review of a cost analysis. The Treasurer's Office provides analysis of certain standard expenses, such as personnel and support rates, on the Treasurer's Office Library.

16. Risk Management: The Global Risk Management Desk (GRMD) provides day-to-day assistance to the Branch Risk Management Desk (BRMD) within the Accounting Department. The BRMD is concerned with matters related to safety and loss prevention and safe operation of vehicles as well as handling incidents and insurance matters at any facility or location where theocratic activities occur, including branch facilities, Kingdom Halls, Assembly Halls, remote translation offices, approved construction projects, and rented facilities. The Branch Committee should encourage all departments and entities within the branch territory to collaborate with the BRMD on these matters before a loss occurs. This enables the branch to utilize risk management techniques and to comply with initiatives and insurance arrangements already in place. Each year, the BRMD and the Branch Committee safety contact should meet with department safety contacts to review trends in accidents and near misses. The Branch Committee contact for the Accounting Department and the Accounting Department overseer may also attend these meetings. Based on these trends, the BRMD may recommend safety training for certain departments.

17. After an incident involving accidental loss, branch departments should actively communicate with the BRMD, which is the main channel of communication with the GRMD. Any serious bodily injury, major property damage, or other accident with the potential of bringing liability to the organization should be reported immediately to the BRMD, which will notify the GRMD immediately.

18. The BRMD should be informed when new activities are being considered that may change the likelihood and severity of damages that may occur at a branch, such as proposed major construction, large purchases of land or equipment, the rental of large equipment for construction or other activities, the use of drones, or enlarging the scope of operations. It should also be informed before entering into shipping contracts for high-value items, major projects, or marine cargo shipments. The BRMD communicates with the GRMD on these matters.

19. Each year, the Branch Committee should work closely with the BRMD to develop a recommendation for the suggested GAA donation. This recommendation is approved by the GRMD before notifying the congregations. Annually, the GRMD will provide instructions regarding what information should be provided to the congregations. The GRMD should be contacted for clarification if it is unclear whether a payment to care for an injury or a property or an automobile loss should be viewed as a GAA expense.

20. If a natural disaster causes property loss, the BRMD should assist those taking the lead in handling the disaster relief by investigating the availability of a governmental disaster fund to help with repair costs, providing assistance with any approved branch relief arrangements, and assisting the LDC with construction methods that can be used to prevent similar damage in the future or relocation if recurrence is likely and unavoidable.

21. The branch should contact the Treasurer's Office before purchasing any insurance policies, except for mandatory auto liability insurance. The organization's international liability insurance is usually sufficient to satisfy insurance requirements for our various activities. The GRMD will consider a request in accord with guidelines from the Publishing Committee and will provide direction as needed. If the BRMD and the Branch Committee believe that any part of an existing insurance structure may need to be modified because of legal restrictions, local customs, or any other reason, the Treasurer's Office should be notified in writing well in advance of the date on which the proposed insurance will become effective. The correspondence should explain the type of insurance to be purchased or renewed, any special circumstances that the branch believes should be considered relative to the need for the insurance, and its cost in U.S. dollars.—See Branch Accounting Department Guidelines.

22. Life safety and loss prevention are core values for all in the organization. The goal is to maintain an accident-free environment with minimum loss to all premises—including branches, Assembly Halls, Kingdom Halls, remote translation offices—and throughout all operations, such as construction and renovation projects, maintenance, printing, driving, and so forth. This can be accomplished if each one realizes that his attitude toward life, safety, and loss-control reflects his spirituality. As the "Grand Creator," Jehovah God considers life to be sacred. (Eccl. 12:1; Ps. 36:9) As his servants, we reflect our spirituality when we adopt that same view. (Eph. 5:1) Therefore, in all our activities, we do not take unnecessary risks or disregard established safety standards. (Deut. 22:8; Eccl. 10:9) We sincerely love our brothers; thus, we endeavor to apply Scriptural principles so as to protect ourselves and others from physical harm. (Prov. 3:21, 22; Phil. 2:4) Each of us has a moral and spiritual responsibility to work safely; to take all reasonable measures to prevent accidents, injury, and losses; and to use dedicated funds wisely.—See 5:173 and Global Life Safety and Loss Prevention Guidelines (A-120).

23. The Publishing Committee realizes the importance that Jehovah puts on the sanctity of life. The Branch Committee should assign one of its members to ensure that each department receives and puts into practice the safety guidelines made available by the organization. He will also coordinate safety issues between departments. Ensuring that dedicated funds are used wisely requires taking prudent measures to prevent loss. To assist in standardizing the global approach, the Global Life Safety and Loss Prevention Guidelines (A-120) and its associated second and third level documents were developed to bring together all the excellent initiatives that world headquarters and various branches have been working on over the years. These documents allow for policies, guidelines, procedures, and training materials already created to be shared. These guidelines are intended to improve safety methods in order to prevent even minor injuries as well as to prevent major losses, such as those resulting from fires and falls.

24. Real Estate: The Worldwide Design/Construction Department (WDC), under the oversight of the Publishing Committee, coordinates the purchase and sale of all real estate. In the Accounting Department, the Branch Real Estate Desk (BRED) handles the day-to-day real estate related work, such as routine leasing arrangements, record keeping, evaluating donations, and working closely with the Local Design/Construction Department (LDC). The BRED maintains accurate records for all properties and ensures all organizational data related to land, buildings, auditoriums, and property improvements are entered into the Property Management (PM) module of HuB. Additionally, the BRED is responsible for ensuring that all necessary documentation and legal or procedural requirements are in place in order to maintain ownership of or to sell any property. Before a person deeds real estate or proposes to make a donation of property to the branch, the BRED will ensure that local laws are considered. It will work with the branch Legal Department as necessary to determine if there are any tax issues, liability issues because of environmental concerns, titling problems, and so forth. The BRED should work closely with the branch's local legal resources and the LDC to resolve any issues related to our right and ability to sell.—See 5:162.

25. General Ledger: A standard set of accounts has been established to allow branches to report financial activity consistently to the Treasurer's Office. These accounts should be used as the local set of accounts in each branch unless legally required to use a government-issued set of accounts. The accounts include approved funds, such as the Relief Fund. New funds on the general ledger should be set up only with the advance approval of the Publishing Committee.

26. Since our literature is distributed at no cost, no value should be carried on the general ledger for work-in-progress and finished literature. This helps others to understand clearly that we are not a commercial operation. Any exceptions to this policy should be approved by the Publishing Committee.

27. Reporting: The Accounting Department completes a Monthly Financial Package (MFP) for each reporting legal or theocratic entity. After the reports have been approved by the Branch Committee, they should be sent to the Treasurer's Office by the 20th of the following month. The Treasurer's Office then prepares financial reports. These are considered by the Publishing Committee and are helpful in planning the best use of funds available to Jehovah's Witnesses for the worldwide Kingdom work.

28. External reporting is sometimes required by law. If it becomes a legal requirement to submit financial statements outside of the organization because of a change in governmental requirements or the creation of a new legal corporation, draft financial statements and accompanying reports should be sent to the Publishing Committee for review and approval prior to their submission to the government, unless previously approved by the Publishing Committee. Financial statements should be submitted again to the Publishing Committee for review only if there is a significant change in the reporting requirement, such as when additional information is required. Branch corporations should use August 31 as their financial year-end unless local regulations direct otherwise.—See 5:7, 11.

29. Accounts Receivable (Donations): On appropriate occasions, the Branch Committee may help the local brothers to understand their privilege to "honor Jehovah with [their] valuable things." (Prov. 3:9) In some countries, the income of the brothers may be low, limiting what they can do. However, they should not want to leave the financial responsibility entirely up to brothers in other countries. With proper education, patience, and time, those with limited means can be helped to see how they too can have a share in expanding the Kingdom work by their contributions. (Luke 21:1-4) At no time should funds be solicited, making the brothers feel that they are being pressured. However, they can be informed as to how the organization operates and their privilege in this connection. The Branch Committee is responsible for monitoring the financial activity in the branch territory, including donations. Requests for new donation methods should be sent to the Publishing Committee for approval.

30. Accounts Payable: All branch expenses should have sufficient supporting documentation and approvals. The Accounting Department is responsible to distribute the allowances to members of the Worldwide Order of Special Full-Time Servants of Jehovah's Witnesses and other temporary volunteers in their territory. The Branch Committee coordinates allowance policies and approval as described in Chapter 9.

31. Many of our faithful brothers suffer medical problems beyond their financial means. If needs arise as a result of a natural disaster, the matter will be handled as part of a relief project under the direction of the Coordinators' Committee. However, at times, the Branch Committee may get pleas for assistance in connection with the necessities of life because of other circumstances. Although the first responsibility for such matters rests with the family of the individual, at times assistance may also be available through the government, social agencies or, lastly, the congregation. When the individuals have exhausted these possibilities, it is left to the discretion of the Branch Committee to handle such matters. If the committee feels that it is appropriate to assist deserving ones financially to help them obtain critical medications or to help with the cost of an operation, it may grant up to USD 3,000. Any request for humanitarian aid above this amount should be referred to the Publishing Committee with an explanation and recommendation. Branch Committees will need to handle such matters with discretion and confidentiality so that the provision is not abused. Generally, this arrangement should be the exception rather than the rule. This information is not for publication to the congregations. However, the Branch Committee may act upon a congregation-initiated request for help. This is in harmony with the generosity and kindness shown by the first-century congregation.—Rom. 12:13.

32. Cash Management: So that "there may be an equalizing," the Publishing Committee has arranged for all surplus funds held by branches to be consolidated to the Cash Management Centers (CMC). All branches that do not have sufficient funds to pay for their expenses in any month can receive assistance from this arrangement. (2 Cor. 8:13-15) A monthly ending cash limit is approved by the Publishing Committee and is provided with the annual budget approval for each geographic location. The Branch Committee is responsible for ensuring compliance with the monthly ending cash limit. Requests for funds from the CMCs to pay for expenditures previously approved by the Publishing Committee should first be approved by the Branch Committee and then sent directly to the Treasurer's Office. Any branch with surplus funds should notify the Treasurer's Office so that these funds may be sent to the CMC.

33. Jehovah's Witnesses in many lands entrust their contributions for advancing the Kingdom work to various corporations of the organization. Other arrangements will be made if conditions in a country change or the legal agencies are no longer available for use.

34. The Branch Committee approves the setup and balance of all imprest fund arrangements used by remote locations and departments. For each imprest fund, the Branch Committee will approve an operations cash account with a maximum balance at the branch.

35. The Accounting Department is responsible for recommending to the Branch Committee an appropriate commercial bank or banks to work with and for maintaining a good relationship with them. The Treasurer's Office is responsible for approving all new bank relationships that a branch may wish to pursue.

36. There is no need for a branch to have an investment program, since surplus funds are sent to the CMCs. Normally, a branch will not hold securities. Donated securities, such as stocks or bonds, should be liquidated before the end of the month in which they are received. If funds are being held for a special purpose, it may be possible to obtain a safe yield on these funds. Any exceptions or questions regarding this should be directed to the Treasurer's Office.

GLOBAL HEALTH CARE OFFICE

37. The Global Health Care Office (GHCO) is a world headquarters department that works under the direction of the Publishing Committee. It assists the Personnel and Service committees as well as the branches in matters related to health care for special full-time servants. A Branch Committee contact for the GHCO and a backup should be assigned in each branch. The GHCO's responsibilities include:

- Investigating high-quality, low-cost options when a special full-time servant needs health care that exceeds the branch spending limit or requires travel to another branch territory. See Health Care Guidelines (A-110), chapter 4, for more information on when and how to submit a health-care request to the GHCO.
- Researching and making recommendations regarding health-care policy.

- Developing guidelines for branches, based on approved policy.
- Working with Branch Committee contacts for the GHCO and the Health Care Desk (HCD) to ensure that local health-care arrangements are in harmony with guidelines. This may include periodic training for some HCD personnel.

38. The Health Care Desk (HCD) functions under the oversight of the Branch Committee and in accord with guidelines provided by headquarters. The HCD receives and handles health-care requests from all special full-time servants within the branch territory, regardless of enrollment, and evaluates options for care. This might involve negotiating with health-care providers or making use of free or subsidized health-care programs and services. The HCD works closely with the Bethel Office, the Service Department (Field Ministers Desk), and the Local Design/Construction Department, as well as any established in-house health-care service. In small and medium-sized branches, the work of the HCD can be cared for by two brothers working part-time, the second brother serving as a backup. In larger branches, it may be necessary to form a small office to care for this work. In branches overseeing fewer than 30,000 publishers, it may be practical for the same brother(s) to care for the work of both the HCD and the Hospital Information Desk (HID). However, the Branch Committee should monitor the workload to ensure that the HID's effectiveness is not negatively impacted. It is preferred that the global health case manager(s) be assigned to the HCD. See Health Care Guidelines (A-110), chapter 1, for more information regarding the role of the global health case manager.—See 9:40-45 for further information regarding the provision of health care for members of the Worldwide Order.

GLOBAL PURCHASING DEPARTMENT

39. In view of the growing needs of the organization as well as the challenging economic times, it is necessary to take a global look at purchasing what is needed for the work. The Global Purchasing Department is a headquarters department that works under the direction of the Publishing Committee and provides direction and practical assistance to branch Purchasing Departments. Direction on purchasing matters is based on research and consultations with branches and with brothers who have business experience throughout the world. The Global Purchasing Department's goals are (1) to make quality products and equipment available at reduced costs; (2) to simplify work for the branches by prequalifying suppliers and products, based on approved specifications and maintenance support capabilities; (3) to coordinate procurement efforts related to construction of theocratic facilities; and (4) to assist branch Purchasing Departments with their ongoing local purchasing needs. To care for this work, the following five main initiatives are in place. Further direction on the operation of branch Purchasing Departments is provided in Purchasing Guidelines (PD-1) and on the Purchasing Guidelines Training website. Please follow these guidelines closely.

40. International Purchasing Arrangements: These are agreements established with large multinational companies. The objective is to provide preferential pricing and terms even to remote branches. Most branches can order locally under business agreements that include either local or regional maintenance support. While some supplier arrangements are global in scope, many are regional. International supplier arrangements, along with local supplier arrangements developed by the branch Purchasing Department assist the Local Design/Construction Department in supporting the construction and operation of all theocratic facilities in its branch territory.

41. The Publishing Committee is interested in seeing that these arrangements are used to the fullest extent possible, thus providing the greatest benefits and savings for the organization. The Branch Committee should encourage departments within the branch as well as those in its territory to consider the arrangements posted on the Supplier Arrangements section of jw.org prior to pursuing other options. All those involved with purchasing or specifying goods, equipment, or construction materials for the branch and the field should be given access to the website. These brothers should check jw.org periodically, since new arrangements are added and refinements are made to existing arrangements on a regular basis.

42. Emerging Market Opportunities: When purchasing equipment, construction supplies, or commodities, considerable savings can be obtained by benefiting from emerging opportunities and global market trends. Rather than multiple branches trying to purchase from these countries individually, an organizational approach improves the purchasing opportunity while simplifying the work for the branches. The Global Purchasing Department oversees the work of remote global purchasing offices operating in some lands. Branches in whose territory a remote global purchasing office operates are responsible for providing needed food, lodging, and other practical support.

43. Global Purchasing Paper Desk: This central desk cares for business transactions associated with the purchase of press paper. It comes under the supervision of the Global Purchasing Department and works closely with the International Printing Department and the Treasurer's Office. This desk is currently based at the Britain branch. All Nonliterature Branch Requests (AB-3a) for press paper should be submitted to the Britain branch for handling. In addition to requesting paper, all global paper supplier invoices should be directed to the Global Purchasing Paper Desk for validation and payment. Each printing branch should continue to forecast its paper needs for the year and include those costs in its respective operating budget.

44. Primary Purchasing Branches (PPB): Each branch is assigned by the Publishing Committee to a PPB. The PPB should be considered the first option for filling Nonliterature Branch Requests (AB-3a) in the region. After consultation with the PPB, it may be determined that some requests need to be filled by other branches. The Global Purchasing Department works closely with each PPB to improve service to branches of Nonliterature Branch Requests (AB-3a), reduce shipping costs, and identify and implement international supplier arrangements within their region. Branches are encouraged to contact their PPB with any questions related to these matters. The PPBs also support Purchasing Departments by training purchasing members to assist branches in their region.—See also the Local Design/Construction Department Guidelines (DC-3).

45. Global Purchasing Department Regional Support: Regional support teams, made up of qualified branch Purchasing Department members throughout the region, work under the direction of the Global Purchasing Department. The branches where these members serve receive a staffing allocation that allows for this additional work, and these members are listed as Global Purchasing Department Regional Support in HuB. The Branch Committee and the Purchasing Department overseer where these members serve provide shepherding and care for them. These teams look for ways to assist branches in their region with purchasing matters. This includes training on matters related to requisitions, purchasing, receiving, inventory, business skills, and using HuB. Purchasing Guidelines (PD-1) and the Purchasing Guidelines Training site are the tools used for training. These teams also assist branches in the region with business support, such as complex contract negotiation, account management of international supplier arrangements, large capital purchases, procurement strategies, and implementation of logistics opportunities. Each regional support team works closely with other regional headquarters departments, such as the Regional Design/Construction and Regional Broadcasting departments. The branch may communicate to the Global Purchasing Department or their regional support team any ideas, suggestions, or challenges that it faces regarding purchasing matters.

INTERNATIONAL PRINTING DEPARTMENT

46. The International Printing Department (IPD) operates under the direction of the Publishing Committee. It may be asked to care for the details relating to the production and shipment of magazines and literature items in the following areas: Printery Office, Graphics, Pressroom, Bindery, Shipping, and in the purchase of some literature items. It also cares for the technical details of the global purchasing arrangements for paper, printing plates, cartons, and ink. The Publishing Committee may also ask the department to follow through on implementing various decisions having to do with regional printing and literature production, such as the purchase and installation of equipment.—See 5:113.

LITERATURE TO BRANCHES

47. Rendering Good Service: Printing and shipping branches should feel a sense of responsibility to maintain adequate inventories without overstocking and to provide good service. Supplying branches are responsible for working with their requesting branches to keep items in stock. Although some noncritical items may go out of stock for a short period of time, Bibles and other field publications should be kept in stock in order to fill congregation requests as they come in. The supplying branch is expected to process requests quickly and to provide consistent delivery times even if it seems that a requesting branch may have an adequate supply on hand.—See 5:53.

48. A major focus of the branch should be the prompt processing of branch and congregation requests. If it is necessary to bring in extra help during rush periods, do so. If good service cannot be maintained, this should be communicated to the Branch Committee. Providing good service must be balanced with keeping delivery costs reasonable.

49. Regional Printing: Under this arrangement, printing branches are responsible for producing literature for a specific region rather than in a certain language. This spreads the workload involved in producing literature more evenly among the printing branches. Because of varying circumstances, a few branches will continue to produce their own literature locally and will not be involved in the regional printing arrangement. Regional printing does not always include periodicals.

50. Under regional printing, it is practical to print items in some languages in more than one region. For example, there may be a large enough production run of an English publication that the same publication can be printed in Asia, Europe, and North America. The following factors should be taken into consideration: size and cost of the production run, shipping costs, and service to the congregations.

51. Each month, world headquarters receives inventories of literature on hand from each warehouse branch. This information is used to monitor stock levels at the branches. Additionally, all printing branches regularly submit a monthly production report to headquarters. These reports help in the assessment of the workload being carried by the various printing regions.

52. Warehouse Arrangement: The warehouse arrangement has resulted in a reduction of stored literature in numerous branches and in the number of people needed to process literature and magazine requests. This is because congregation literature and magazine requests are being filled at a central warehouse branch rather than at numerous local branches. Generally, larger warehouse branches have the equipment necessary to fill congregation and Branch Requests (AB-3) more efficiently. This arrangement also allows for congregations to request a wider range of publications, since warehouse branches are able to stock a greater variety of publications.

53. Warehouse Branch Responsibility: The warehouse branch should be concerned with giving good service to the branches that are its clients. It should work with each client branch to establish a well-defined schedule that outlines the following: when congregations should have their requests submitted to the local branch office, when a request should be submitted to the warehouse branch, when a request will be packed and shipped, and approximately when congregations will receive their shipments. This schedule should be closely followed and monitored to ensure that congregations are receiving their requests on time.—See 5:47.

54. The warehouse branch may need to prepare and ship literature and magazines according to specific requirements provided by the client branch. This may include making adjustments to benefit the client branches, such as changing the frequency of shipments, adjusting the way congregation requests are packaged, and changing the way packages are stacked onto pallets to assist in delivery. It is better for this additional work to be done at the larger warehouse branches than at the smaller client branches. If possible, the shipments received by the client branch should already be prepared for delivery to the congregations. Thus, the method for shipping literature, magazines, and the Life and Ministry Meeting Workbook must be established with the aid of the client branch.

55. Client Branch Responsibility: The client branch is responsible for dealing directly with the local congregations regarding literature and magazines. Each month, as literature and magazine requests are submitted by the congregations, the client branch should verify the requests, apply literature request limits, and manage delivery-address issues before forwarding the requests to the warehouse branch. This is normally done using features in the HuB program. In most cases, the client branch is responsible for receiving the prepackaged literature and magazine shipments from the warehouse branch and then arranging delivery to the congregations.

56. Good Communication: When a change in an established arrangement or a new procedure is needed to provide literature and magazines to the congregations, both the warehouse branch and the client branch should take the initiative to communicate with each other. One branch should not assume that the other branch is caring for a matter. The client branch should regularly provide comments to the warehouse branch regarding the condition of the shipments when they arrive and any difficulties with importing, including additional costs. The client branch should also relay any problems and discrepancies that the congregations experience in obtaining literature.

57. Regular attention should be given to Branch Requests (AB-3) for items that are pending because they are out of stock. The printing branch and the requesting branch should feel free to communicate with each other regarding the status of items that are delayed.

It is also good to take the initiative to notify branches of items that are going to be delayed for an unusually long period of time.

58. The client branch should communicate in advance with the warehouse branch regarding any future needs, including arrangements related to conventions and assemblies. This would include, for example, when a group or a congregation is being formed in a new language, since the warehouse branch may not have items in stock in the new language.

59. Literature Inventory Control: The function of inventory control is to monitor stock levels of all publications in order to maintain adequate inventory on hand to fill branch and congregation requests quickly. At the same time, balance is needed to avoid accumulating an overstock that cannot be used in the near future. Generally, literature is considered to be overstocked if the inventory exceeds a one-year supply. Depending on local circumstances, the responsibility for inventory control may be a part of the Shipping Department or, in a printing branch, the Printery Office.

60. On at least a monthly basis, stock levels should be reviewed to ensure that there is a sufficient supply of publications that will be used in the field ministry and at congregation meetings. Each time literature is requested, the following should be considered: present stock at the branch and in the congregations, rate of movement, storage facilities, publications that will be used in the field ministry or at upcoming congregation meetings, and whether a request has already been submitted to replenish stock. If there is any uncertainty regarding the movement of an item, it would be best to submit a conservative request, keeping in mind the option of electronic downloads.

61. If the branch has no organized group or congregation activity in a language for which literature is requested occasionally, only a few basic items for that language—such as a primary Bible study publication or some brochures and tracts—may need to be stocked. If no immediate need is evident, a publication should not be stocked in the branch just because it has become available in a new language.

62. Preventing Overstock: Request quantities should not be based on enthusiasm or the expectation that every person who speaks a language will accept a copy of a publication in that language. If a branch is uncertain about the movement or use of an item, only a small quantity of that item should be requested, even though doing so may result in having to request a supply of that item again within a few months. It is better for the supplying branch to make another shipment or to do another printing than for a branch to be overstocked with an item for several years.

63. Significant overstock has occurred with publications used for the Congregation Bible Study. Initially, the movement will be high, and then after the first few studies, demand will diminish greatly. This has especially been seen in the case of publications that are not designed for use in the field ministry after being considered at the Congregation Bible Study. It is important to review correspondence from the Governing Body committees to discern the intended use of these publications. Taking note of whether a publication will be used in the field ministry can help a branch to determine how much stock should be maintained. Also, take into consideration the encouragement for publishers to download literature electronically.

64. Special-Request Items: Extra caution should be used when requesting costly items or dated publications. Because it is desired that the branches use up the stock of Examining the Scriptures Daily during the year it is released, this item should be requested prudently.

65. Branches should not stock expensive publications that have to be purchased. The brothers can obtain such items on their own rather than having the branch provide this service. However, a branch may still purchase and provide foreign-language Bibles if (1) there is sufficient demand, (2) the New World Translation is not available in a certain language, and (3) the Bibles are not readily available from local vendors. To keep costs to a minimum, the purchased Bibles kept in stock should not be a deluxe edition; nor should such Bibles be offered in the field ministry. They are available only as a special-request item for baptized and unbaptized publishers and progressive Bible students who do not have a Bible. Individuals qualified to receive such a Bible should not feel obligated to make a contribution equal to the cost of the Bible if their circumstances do not permit such. Each one may make a contribution in harmony with his ability to do so.—2 Cor. 9:7.

66. Production-Ready List: The Production-Ready List is primarily used to inform branches of new publications to be printed. Two months before files for printing new publications are ready, the translation branch informs the International Printing Department and copies the printing branches. Additionally, if a file maintenance branch or a printing branch becomes aware of an item that has not yet appeared on a Production-Ready List, it should also inform the International Printing Department to ensure that nothing has been overlooked.

67. Branches that maintain their own inventory should closely review the Production-Ready List and submit Branch Requests (AB-3) for needed items no later than the due date. Client branches should also keep up-to-date on what is being printed. If specific congregations or groups in a client branch's territory would benefit from an item that will be produced, the client branch can notify the warehouse branch of this need.

68. Production Approval Process: When new items are listed on the Production-Ready List or when a reprint is needed, the print quantities are calculated by the printing branch. A printing requisition does not have to be submitted to the Publishing Committee, since approval to produce the item has already been given and the printing branch has the necessary figures to calculate the print quantity.

69. Minimum Print Quantities: For a publication with little demand, the minimum print quantity should be considered before a printing job is issued. Meeting this minimum print quantity may require that a two-year supply be requested. Branches should not hesitate to print the minimum quantity for publications that are essential to the work in the field or to the spiritual progress of the brothers. Note the minimum printing quantities on Chart 5.1.

70. It is recommended that one or two members of the Branch Committee be involved in the review process when items are being submitted on Branch Requests (AB-3) or when quantities are being determined for items that may be printed locally.

71. Branch Shipment Information: The importing branch should be thoroughly acquainted with all important matters regarding ocean-freight companies, import licenses, and deliveries. Anything that the exporting branch should know must always be put on the Branch Requests (AB-3). This includes the date needed, if applicable. If literature is needed for a special campaign or a Bible will be released at a convention or other event, the request should also include the start date of the campaign, the date of the first convention, or the date of the other event. It should not be assumed that the supplying branch understands the requesting branch's requirements. Additionally, since customs regulations and import laws change frequently, importing branches should help exporting branches by informing them immediately when new regulations or controls are implemented.

72. Exporting branches should be thoroughly familiar with export laws for shipments made. The exporting branch should ensure that all shipping instructions are clear on receipt of the Branch Requests (AB-3). If the shipping method on the approved request needs to be changed to an expedited service, the requesting branch will either give or obtain any additional approvals needed, depending on the additional cost involved. Before preparing a shipment for a branch to which it has not previously shipped items, the exporting branch should request direction from the importing branch. Routine matters can be communicated between branches via e-mail.

73. Nonliterature Items to Branches: Requesting branches depend on timely delivery of nonliterature items. Providing helpful service requires close cooperation between the Purchasing and Shipping departments of the supplying branch. Supplying branches should make it a priority to meet the required date for Nonliterature Branch Requests (AB-3a). If the required date cannot be met, the requesting branch should be given advanced written notice and offered options for delivery. The Purchasing Department should negotiate freight contracts to improve service and reduce costs where practical. The Shipping Department in branches that make regular export shipments should use the Export Module in HuB when processing shipments for Nonliterature Branch Requests. Using this feature provides the status of shipments to client branches, improves the quality of cost accounting, and provides important information to world headquarters departments. The Nonliterature Branch Request Workload form in HuB assists supplying branches to monitor the status of the Nonliterature Branch Requests (AB-3a) that they fulfill.

74. Insurance and Claims: The Treasurer's Office maintains a Cargo Policy to cover losses and to provide proof of insurance coverage where required during international and domestic transportation.

LITERATURE TO CONGREGATIONS

75. Importance of Literature and Magazine Distribution: The Governing Body desires to have the Watchtower magazine available in as many languages as possible because it is the organization's principal magazine. The Awake! magazine is an excellent help in stimulating interest in the truth and in spreading the good news. Along with these magazines, the primary publications used to start and conduct Bible studies in each country should be readily available for use in the territory. Publishers and pioneers should have these publications available to use whenever interest is found, with a view to starting a Bible study.

76. Monthly Literature Announcements and Release Letters: The warehouse branch should inform the client branches about new publications that have become available. Each branch office should keep the congregations up-to-date regarding literature and magazines that are available for them to request. Many branches send information about publications in a monthly "Announcement to All Congregations," which may be posted on the information board.

77. Literature Releases: The Publishing Committee provides direction to all branches regarding literature releases. With the exception of Bibles, distribution of hard copy convention releases has been discontinued. In most cases, publishers are able to download releases electronically.

78. Following a publication's release, congregations may request printed copies for publishers who need one and a few additional copies for congregation stock. Branches served by the warehouse arrangement should determine reasonable request limits with the help of their warehouse branch. Printing quantities will be based on actual requests.

79. Congregation Literature Inventory: Each month, congregations should do a physical count of their literature on hand and post the quantities on their Monthly Movement of Literature form (S-28). Each year on March 1 and September 1, congregations should submit their inventory quantities to the branch office, if possible, via jw.org. Branches that cannot receive inventories via the website should request an inventory from their congregations via hard copy once a year on September 1. The branch office can use the inventory to help determine whether congregations are over-requesting.

80. Analyzing the amount of literature in the congregations can assist the branch office in making wise decisions in regard to providing the literature needed to support the preaching activity, while at the same time reducing overstock (an excess supply for more than one year) in the congregations. If it is determined that congregations are over-requesting, it would be good for the branch office to review the request limits that they are applying to the amount of literature that congregations can request. If the branch becomes aware of certain literature items that are overstocked in specific congregations, they may provide reminders to share literature with neighboring congregations. In some cases the branch may write to those congregations and request that the literature be returned to the local branch.

81. Literature and Magazine Request Guidelines (S-56): Each branch is responsible for providing direction to congregations regarding the proper handling of literature and magazine requests. The S-56 contains detailed instructions regarding how congregations should request literature. The English version is posted on the MDS site. Warehouse and client branches should work together to determine whether adjustments to these guidelines are needed to fit local circumstances.

82. Literature-Coordinating Arrangement: The purpose of this arrangement is to maintain a common supply of stock items at a Kingdom Hall in an effort to reduce inventory. One congregation should be designated as the language-coordinating congregation for each language and will be responsible for requesting and distributing stock items for all congregations of that language. However, all congregations are responsible for submitting their own requests for foreign-language items and special-request items for their publishers.

83. Along with the service overseer, the literature servant of the language-coordinating congregation is responsible for ensuring that there is a sufficient supply of literature and magazines for use in the field ministry. He is also responsible for ensuring that the common literature supply area is not overstocked. In order to determine how much literature to request, he should be alert to any upcoming special activity such as a probable increase in the number of auxiliary pioneers during the circuit overseer's visit. He fills out a Literature Request Form (S-14) and gives it to the service overseer for approval. The request is then submitted to the branch office, using jw.org.

84. Processing Literature Requests From Congregations: The congregations should be provided with a schedule of when they need to submit their literature requests to the branch office for processing. In many branches all congregation requests are received through the jw.org website. If congregations are submitting hard copy Literature Request Forms (S-14), the branch should enter these within a few days of their arrival. The branch office should have a procedure in place to verify the reasonableness of quantities requested. Each branch can determine what quantity checks should be performed, based on the need in the local territory. To avoid overstock, the branch office should apply request limits on certain items requested by the congregations.

85. A well-defined schedule for shipping should be provided to the congregations indicating when their requests will be processed and shipped to different regions. The branch should monitor this schedule and make adjustments to ensure that the schedule is followed.

86. Processing Congregation Requests for Periodicals: Adjustments to magazine requests should be processed promptly so that they become effective with the next available issue. Therefore, effort should be made to enter requests from the congregations within a day or two after the requests are received at the branch.

87. It would be good for the branch to evaluate the quantity of overstocked magazines reported by congregations on their Monthly Movement of Literature (S-28) form. If it appears that many magazines requested are left over, reminders should be provided in order to help congregations submit more conservative requests. These reminders would be given with a view to assisting congregations to request magazines wisely.

88. Processing Requests From Congregation Members and Non-Witnesses: When a congregation member sends a request for literature to the branch, he should be directed to obtain the item through his local congregation. The congregations can occasionally be reminded of this direction. When a non-Witness, who is not yet associating with a congregation or having a Bible study, requests single copies of basic literature items from the branch, these items may be supplied. This may be done by mailing the requested items to his address or by asking the local congregation to provide them. If two or more copies of a publication are requested or if a publication is requested in multiple languages, the requester should be directed to contact the local Kingdom Hall.

89. When a person writes to the branch requesting publications for someone other than himself, he should be informed that the branch does not honor third-party requests. Generally, to follow up on requests from non-Witnesses, the branch sends a Please Arrange for a Qualified Publisher to Call on This Person (S-70) form to the local congregation, indicating what was requested.

90. If someone asks about the cost of our publications or expresses a desire to purchase our literature, it should be explained that our literature is made available at no charge and that the worldwide Bible educational work of Jehovah's Witnesses is supported entirely by voluntary donations. Donations that accompany a literature request should be acknowledged. If it appears that the money received is a payment for literature, the literature can be sent. However, the funds should be acknowledged as a donation. Each branch may determine the minimum amount of a donation for which an acknowledgment would be sent. While some branches have found it advisable to send out acknowledgments for donations in the amount of USD 5 or more, other branches may wish to acknowledge smaller amounts.

91. Processing Requests Received at the Tour Lobby: The local Branch Committee should determine which literature items are made available in the tour lobby and how much literature is appropriate for a visitor to obtain. It is sufficient to offer some basic literature items for the public and field service items for Bethel family members. If a person requests items that are not stocked, he should be encouraged to submit his request through the local congregation. Literature that is designed specifically for publishers should be obtained, not at the tour lobby, but through the local congregation only. This includes items such as badge cards and durable power of attorney (DPA) forms as well as other medical documents.

92. Processing Requests From Vendors: It would not be appropriate to supply our literature to vendors who intend to sell it. The branch may advise the vendor to direct individuals who have an interest in our literature to contact a local Kingdom Hall to fill their needs.

93. Shipping Costs: Shipping literature and magazines to the congregations is a large expense. Therefore, literature and magazines should be shipped in the most economical way practical. The shipping method and the associated costs should be reviewed periodically, perhaps every couple of years, to determine whether better service could be provided and shipping costs reduced. If it is felt that major adjustments are needed, the recommendations may be submitted to the Publishing Committee.

94. Although the need for expedited shipments should be kept to a minimum by good planning and monitoring of regular requests, there are occasions when it is necessary to use an expedited service to meet the congregations' needs. For example, such service may be necessary for foreign-language field items and for replacement shipments of the Life and Ministry Meeting Workbook and magazines. Congregations requesting this expedited service should be charged for the shipping cost. However, if it is the branch office that determines the need for this service, the branch will absorb the cost. For example, no charge would be billed to congregations for shipments of the Life and Ministry Meeting Workbook when expedited service is the only viable method to ensure that it is received in time for use by the local congregations.

PURCHASING

95. Most branches have a separate Purchasing Department. It is the responsibility of this department to (1) obtain goods or services from suppliers, (2) care for business relationships, including those with service providers such as energy and logistics companies, (3) negotiate contracts, (4) operate receiving docks, (4) look after nonliterature inventories, (5) distribute commonly used supplies, and (6) sell items no longer used by the branch. Very small branches, however, may simply have brothers or sisters care for various parts of this work in addition to other assignments.

96. Accomplishing the Kingdom work requires the use of a significant amount of funds. It is the desire of the Governing Body to provide what is needed. We trust that those involved in approving requests and doing the purchasing will exercise care in how these funds are spent. Even in branches where large sums of money are involved, it is important to pay attention to small purchases and not to be wasteful. Those purchasing for the branch should obtain goods and services at the best overall value, while providing prompt and helpful service to requesting departments.

97. Purchases involving the daily operation of a branch as well as requisitions for items up to USD 3,000 are approved by the Branch Committee or the Country Committee unless given other authorization. This limit applies to the requisition total, not individual items. Requisitions should not be divided with the purpose of remaining under the spending limit. At the discretion of the Branch Committee, trustworthy brothers may be appointed as requisition signers. These brothers should have a delegated approval limit within the branch's approval level. Ultimately, the Branch Committee is accountable for all approved requisitions. Although the replacement of some small machinery or equipment can be approved by the local committee or appointed requisition signers, requests for any purchase involving the acquiring of property, enlargement of branch buildings, obtaining additional machinery and equipment, computers, vehicles, or any other major purchases for the home or printery should be submitted to the Publishing Committee for approval. The same is true when replacing existing equipment or disposing of property, machinery, and so forth. The reason for the request should be given, as well as an explanation of all the associated costs, including shipping costs, duties, taxes, and a realistic anticipated return from any trade-in or sale of old equipment. If the prices are estimates, an explanation of how the prices were determined should be supplied, including copies of any documentation that supports the estimate, such as Internet Web pages or catalog pages. Requests that are related or are part of a system should be submitted together so that the Publishing Committee can easily ascertain the overall cost of the items being requested. Additional guidelines have been provided regarding information needed for specific requests, such as Vehicle Guidelines (PD-30). Donated items or equipment are not exempt from the approval process. In the case of donated vehicles, it is generally preferred that the donor sells the vehicle and donates the proceeds to the branch. Nonliterature Branch Requests (AB-3a) related to construction projects should be reviewed with the Regional Design/Construction Department prior to submission.

98. Obtaining materials and services on time and at a good value is essential to the work of all departments and construction groups. Because of this, the Branch Committee contact for the Purchasing Department should be someone who can dedicate the time needed to become well-acquainted with the work. He should also stay updated on the contents of Purchasing Guidelines (PD-1) and the Purchasing Guidelines Training website. While he does not need to be a procurement expert, he should be able to apply the concepts in those guidelines to the needs in the branch and the field. He should also strive to broaden his understanding of the procurement needs of departments. This greatly helps the Branch Committee to make decisions on how to care for these needs in harmony with direction from headquarters. The Branch Committee contact should also meet regularly with the Purchasing Department overseer and his assistant. Among other things, this will allow him to stay up-to-date on the status of the work and to give attention to personnel matters.

99. Among other things, those overseeing the Purchasing Department should ensure that the department (1) provides “helpful services” to other departments (1 Cor. 12:28), (2) obtains approved goods and services on time and at the best overall value, (3) maintains a positive and spiritual work environment, (4) is flexible and scalable to support the work, and (5) strives to perform the work with the fewest members reasonably possible.

100. Some departments, by the nature of their work, require more materials and services than others. It would be good for the Purchasing Department overseer to meet separately with the oversight of each of these departments periodically. The goal should be to discuss matters that require attention and to learn details of upcoming work that will need support. These brief meetings can encourage and strengthen a spirit of collaboration and unity.

101. Fundamental Business Practices: Boaz, Jeremiah, and Ezra were careful in the way they handled money and recorded transactions. For example, rather than trying to bypass the nearer relative and buy the land secretly, honorable Boaz fairly presented the facts publicly. (Ruth 4:1-12) Jeremiah negotiated a fair and reasonable price, documented these terms in accordance with local requirements, and ensured that transactional records were available for future reference. (Jer. 32:9-12) Ezra ensured that the millions of dollars' worth of treasures entrusted to his care were safeguarded with proper controls. (Ezra 8:25-34) Likewise today, those handling dedicated funds should imitate these faithful examples by conducting business in a way that always brings glory to Jehovah's name.—1 Cor. 10:31; Eph. 5:10.

102. While local market conditions may vary, the purchasing process should follow a standard approach. This includes (1) providing research assistance to the requesting department, (2) reviewing the requisition, (3) issuing a Purchase Order, and (4) receiving the goods. The details of these functions are explained in Purchasing Guidelines (PD-1) and on the Purchasing Guidelines Training website.

103. It is preferred that cash or credit cards not be used for significant branch purchases unless there is no alternative. Many developing countries are transitioning from cash to electronic means of payment. Therefore, investigate if alternative payment terms and methods would be acceptable to suppliers in your area. Various payment options are considered in order of preference in Purchasing Guidelines (PD-1). See Branch Accounting Department Guidelines (badg) for instructions on proper cash control.

104. Bible Principles in Business Dealings: Business dealings should always be conducted in harmony with Bible principles. Precautions should be taken to reduce the possibility of problems developing. This is true even when engaging in business dealings with brothers. Many of our brothers are eager to assist the work by offering to sell or donate goods or services to Bethel. Their assistance is greatly appreciated. Business dealings, however, should never leave the organization or the brothers involved open to accusations by the authorities, other brothers, or opposers. Goods or services that are offered to the branch should be clearly defined in writing. Also, before contracting with a brother or his company, a thorough business review process should be followed as one would do with any supplier to ensure that the branch is getting the best value.

105. When a business arrangement with a brother is contemplated, consideration should be given to how it may appear to others. We honor Jehovah and uphold our brothers' reputation by not creating a real or perceived conflict of interest in business dealings. As an example, a brother acting as an adviser or a temporary volunteer at the branch while directing business to himself or to one of his companies could be perceived as being involved in a conflict of interest, since he has information or influence generally not available to others. Normally a brother can act as a consultant, volunteering his services to assist for a period of time (temporary worker), or he can be a supplier or a contractor used by the branch. However, he should act in only one of these three roles. Like the apostle Paul, we seek to avoid "having any man find fault with us . . . , for we 'care for everything honestly, not only in the sight of Jehovah but also in the sight of men.'" —2 Cor. 8:20-21.

106. Those involved in specifying materials or selecting suppliers should avoid accepting personal favors, loans, or gifts of more than a nominal value from anyone who is providing goods and services to the organization. (Ex. 23:8) Those caring for business matters follow Jesus' example of not using his powers to his own benefit. (Luke 4:3, 4) Even if not illegal, activities that are out of harmony with the principles of trust, integrity, and good judgment must be avoided. (Matt. 7:12) The earthly part of Jehovah's organization has a fine reputation in the community, and that reputation must be maintained.

107. Determining What to Purchase and From Where: To use dedicated funds to the greatest advantage requires advance planning and, at times, consultation with others. (Prov. 15:22; 21:5) Branches should be conservative and request only the items that are needed. Is the item needed to accomplish the work, or are there practical alternatives? Can the item be shared between departments? Is it practical to rent the item or to buy a used item? Would it be more cost-effective to hire an outside firm to do the work? What are the specifications for the item that is needed? Is there verification that the equipment is of the right size and appropriate for the intended application? Would local publishers view this expenditure as excessive? (1 Cor. 10:23) How will replacement parts or a warranty be obtained? The Primary Purchasing Branch, Regional Design/Construction Department, or the Global Purchasing Department Regional Support team can assist in answering these questions.

108. It is usually practical to obtain equipment and supplies that are produced locally if the overall cost and quality is reasonable. To obtain the best value, consideration should be given not only to the price but also to the quality of a product, the service, and the availability of spare parts. Long-standing relationships with reliable suppliers are often valuable. Some suppliers, however, initially offer good pricing and service to get branch business, with the goal of gradually raising prices or reducing service levels. Therefore, it is wise to check with other suppliers periodically to ensure that the pricing, quality, and service rendered is still competitive.

109. There are advantages to having local suppliers deliver items to the branch where possible rather than sending brothers out to shop. As delivery service is being offered in more lands, suppliers should be asked whether such service could be provided. If the supplier does not deliver, perhaps arrangements can be made with a local delivery company where appropriate.

110. Trade shows can provide opportunities to obtain information and technical assistance as well as to establish contacts with suppliers. However, with increased information available on the Internet, the time and cost involved in attending a trade show needs to be weighed carefully. Where there is a need to attend a trade show, the number of attendees should be kept to a minimum and approval to attend should be given by the Branch Committee or the supervising committee at world headquarters.

111. Requesting an item from another country through Nonliterature Branch Requests (AB-3a) may be advantageous because of high prices, poor quality, or lack of local availability. The Primary Purchasing Branch should be utilized as much as possible to fill such requests.

112. Nonliterature Branch Requests (AB-3a) should include the following information on the request: why the item is needed, all costs (that is, purchase price, shipping costs, duties, taxes, and a realistic anticipated return from any trade-in or sales of old equipment), manufacturer, make, model, part number, a basic item description, shipping method, date needed, and, if applicable, electrical details (that is, voltage, frequency, and phase). When ordering replacement parts, the manufacturer, model, and serial number of the equipment should be included. Product information sheets, parts diagrams, drawings, and website references are helpful when available. Providing complete, detailed information makes it possible to order the item from the supplier quickly. Failure to include needed information on Nonliterature Branch Requests (AB-3a) may delay approvals. When determining the "Required by" date for delivery to your branch, it would be good to consider the following steps that may be needed depending on the value or complexity of the request: (1) review and approval at your branch (often one to three days), (2) technical review by a world headquarters department (up to two weeks), (3) headquarters approval, (4) manufacturing (for items not in inventory at the filling branch), (5) shipping time in transit, (6) customs clearance, and (7) any other possible steps. If after considering these steps you determine that the items to be requested cannot be delivered in time for your needs, please contact the filling branch prior to submission of the request. They may be able to recommend other options to meet your needs. Nonliterature Branch Requests (AB-3a) prepared by your own branch should be created or reviewed by your Purchasing Department before they are sent to world headquarters. Your Purchasing Department should assist in determining where to buy the items (for example, from a Primary Purchasing Branch, via an international purchasing arrangement, and so on) and validate that the necessary details are included. In some cases, your Purchasing Department may identify materials that may be obtained from local inventory or through local suppliers instead of requesting them from other branches. Each Nonliterature Branch Requests (AB-3a) should state whether the request is within an existing budget or not.

113. International supplier arrangements have been established for paper, printing plates, ink, kitchen and laundry equipment, seating, and other items. Many of these arrangements allow branches to purchase items and obtain services through local or regional authorized dealers while receiving discounted pricing based on the organization's global volume. Information regarding such arrangements is outlined on jw.org. These arrangements should be used to their fullest, thus providing the greatest savings for the organization. Therefore, all those involved in specifying and purchasing items should consider the arrangements on jw.org prior to recommending other options. Each branch is in the best position to determine which of these purchasing arrangements is most appropriate. If it appears that another manufacturer or product will provide greater value, the reasons for the preference should be explained on the Nonliterature Branch Requests (AB-3a).—See 5:46.

114. In some countries, many items are readily available for purchase via the Internet. In some cases, Internet-based suppliers may be more reliable and have less expensive products when compared with a local supplier. However, caution is needed. While websites may advertise low prices, it is essential to determine the reliability of the supplier prior to making a purchase. Is the Internet-based supplier a legitimate business? Does the supplier's website have a phone number to call if there is a problem? What is their return policy? Will the warranty be voided if the item is imported? It is also important to consider all the shipping costs and duties associated with importing an item. If the Internet-based supplier is located in another country and questions arise about the company or the product, the branch overseeing that country should be contacted. Depending on the volume and savings that can be experienced, that branch may be asked, in advance of any purchase, whether it is cheaper for that branch to purchase the items or to act as the freight forwarder for the items purchased.

115. Significant savings in money and time can be achieved by coordinating the suppliers used in the construction and maintenance of Kingdom Halls, Assembly Halls, and field missionary homes. Some suppliers operate nationally or regionally and are willing to provide better purchasing terms when approached by the branch. Further details on this matter can be found in Local Design/Construction Department Guidelines (DC-3) and Purchasing Guidelines (PD-1).

116. Purchasing for Bethel Family Members: In some countries, it may be difficult for Bethel family members to purchase some items on their own. For example, the branch may be located a long distance from stores or shopping areas. Or perhaps family members are not able to obtain banking cards and thus cannot make online purchases. In view of these circumstances, a branch may decide that the Purchasing Department should assist with some personal purchases. These would be limited to suppliers that the branch is already using for branch operations. On the other hand, assistance with personal requests should be limited in lands where it is easy for the family to do their own buying. This is often more advantageous for the Bethelite. For example, a private purchase may result in a better warranty. If the branch assists with personal purchases, care should be taken to avoid conflicts with accounting or tax laws. Additionally, requests from departments should have higher priority than personal requests.

117. Some branches provide a commissary (Bethel Shop) as a service to members of the Bethel family. Historically, the Bethel Office (Bethel Home) has taken the lead in organizing the commissary, overseeing the personnel, and choosing the items to stock. However, the Branch Committee should consider whether it would be more efficient to merge the inventory handling of the operation under the oversight of the Purchasing Department. Regardless of which department oversees the commissary, the Purchasing Department should care for the buying of items and the maintaining of bulk inventories used to replenish the commissary. Where possible, an effort should be made to have a consistent list of items and to adjust that list only when the needs of the family change. Preference should be given to obtaining items from suppliers who are able to deliver to the branch instead of sending brothers out to shop in markets.

118. Advanced Purchasing Issues: Some business transactions conducted by the branch are complex and must be carefully documented in writing. For example, there may be a need to document various aspects of the business transaction clearly, in addition to price—such aspects as payment terms, delivery, return policy, installation, and warranty support. In other cases, it may be necessary to hire outside laborers or contractors to work on branch property, to purchase an expensive piece of equipment, or to engage the services of a firm. In these situations, it is good to have a detailed, written contract containing a statement of work and to have all parties sign it. When outside laborers work on branch property, care must be taken to limit the risk to the organization should they get injured, injure others, or cause damage to branch property. In some countries, courts can award large damages to injured parties. If insurance is common in your country, does the outside worker or contractor have adequate coverage and are all certificates on file at the branch? Have the outside workers agreed not to hold the branch responsible? It is often good to involve the branch's Legal Department and the Branch Risk Management Desk to assist with these matters. For major contracts, the Global Risk Management Desk in the Treasurer's Office can assist as indicated in the Branch Accounting Department Guidelines (badg). Instructions in Guidelines for Procuring Contracted Services (PD-2) and Safety and Outside Contractors (A-125) may also be of assistance.

119. Some complicated purchases or contracts require complex negotiations. These may include negotiating with suppliers where there are no other local options, high-cost or high-risk transactions, and purchases of items considered strategic or highly sensitive to the branch. This could include contracts for design or construction services. In such instances, it is often good to benefit from the advice of others at the branch who have practical experience in the matter as well as those who have good business skills. (Prov. 11:14) Contact the Global Purchasing Department Regional Support team for assistance in how to care for negotiations that are more complex.

120. Keeping on hand a small inventory of supplies that are used by one or more departments can save time and money. The Purchasing Department should be responsible for the inventory, as this helps reduce duplicate stocks and staffing. Very small branches, however, may simply assign a brother or a sister to care for the entire branch inventory in addition to other assignments. (Neh. 13:13) Items are considered for inventorying if they are frequently used, if the usual acquisition time is unacceptable (such as for critical spare parts), or if purchasing larger amounts at one time is cost-effective. Typically, no more than a four-month supply should be maintained. A simple reorder-point system factoring in usage, lead time, and price will ensure that the correct quantities are stored. As the rate of usage determines the amount of stock, it is essential that inventories, including stocks of critical spare parts, are maintained and reviewed on a regular basis. Further assistance with managing inventories can be obtained from the Global Purchasing Department Regional Support team.

121. The branch facilities should be examined periodically to identify any equipment or items that are not needed. Items that are in excess of what is required may be disposed of in several ways. These items may be used by other departments or branches, returned to the supplier, sold, or scrapped. Branch Committee approval is needed to dispose of an item prior to pursuing these options. In the case of the disposal of large equipment and vehicles, Publishing Committee approval is required before initiating the sale.

122. Department Members: Those caring for purchasing, receiving, and inventorying materials are handling donated funds. They must be trustworthy and diligent in caring for their assignment. The overseer must appreciate the need to serve the interests of the organization as a whole, including the many departments within the branch that rely on the Purchasing Department for goods and services. (Jas. 3:17, 18) He must be a good communicator, conscious of training others, able to delegate where necessary, not opinionated or a procrastinator. An understanding of business matters and computer skills is helpful. He will avoid sharp practices, maintaining respect for Bible principles and legal requirements.—Titus 3:1, 2.

123. Getting Help: Good communication is essential in making sound purchasing decisions. Therefore, assistance may be requested from the Primary Purchasing Branch or the Global Purchasing Department Regional Support team. Routine purchasing matters, such as clarifying specifications, questions about specific suppliers, requests for pricing, and reporting claims, may be cared for by e-mail. The department e-mail address used should be an address monitored by more than one person in the Purchasing Department as well as appropriate Branch Committee members rather than a personal e-mail address. Written correspondence should continue to be used when requests are made for extensive research or when direction is needed. Further instructions on the day-to-day operation of the Purchasing Department can be found in the Purchasing Guidelines (PD-1) and on the Purchasing Guidelines Training website. Ensure that all in the Purchasing Department are familiar with and use these resources. In addition, other departments that work closely with the Purchasing Department should receive a copy of Purchasing Guidelines (PD-1).

WORLDWIDE DESIGN/CONSTRUCTION DEPARTMENT

124. Bible prophecy indicates that the work of the earthly part of Jehovah's organization will accelerate as we near the end of this system of things. (Isa. 60:22; Hab. 2:3) We see this taking place. As the number of Kingdom proclaimers increases, more facilities are needed. The acquisition, renovation, or new construction of Kingdom Halls, Assembly Halls, school facilities, and remote translation offices supports the growth in the field.

125. Since this work requires great effort as well as dedicated funds, advance planning is essential. Therefore, each branch is requested to have a master plan for Kingdom Halls, Assembly Halls, and field residences for special full-time servants. Annual budgets are also required for ongoing maintenance and small projects at the branch. From these master plans, a recommended budget is prepared annually, outlining the funds needed for the next three years. When a larger construction project is identified, clear definitions of scope, accurate cost estimates, studies of life-cycle costs, and realistic schedules are needed. The Regional Design/Construction Department (RDC) assists with this. It is expected that once approved, projects will be monitored and completed within the proposed scope, budget, and schedule. Each project should be planned with the goal of zero injuries, in both a spiritual and a physical sense. In view of the dynamic nature of the work of the organization at this time, we have to plan, design, and construct in a way that allows for flexibility as we follow Jehovah's fast-moving celestial chariot. (Ezek. 1:20, 28) Proper attention to maintenance must also be given in order to preserve the substantial investment made.

126. Jehovah is the great Designer, Architect, and Builder, as well as the Maintainer of his creative works. (Heb. 11:10; ftn.) We look to him for direction on how to accomplish this significant work.

127. The Worldwide Design/Construction Department (WDC) is a headquarters department that works under the direction of the Publishing Committee. It oversees the construction, renovation, maintenance, and real estate activities of all facilities worldwide. This includes the acquisition and sale of property as well as the planning, designing, engineering, constructing, renovating, and maintaining of buildings on those sites.

128. There is a Regional Design/Construction Department (RDC) in Africa, the Americas, the Asia/Pacific region, and Europe. Each of these world headquarters departments operates as an extension of the WDC to oversee the work of construction, maintenance, and real estate in a specified region. Their primary role is to support and provide direction to branches with regard to planning, construction, and maintenance of Kingdom Halls, Assembly Halls, and branch related facilities, as well as the purchase, sale, and rental of property, and to provide training in these areas. They also assist with the preparation of planning options reports, concept design proposals, design programs, and they oversee the preparation of construction documents and detailed cost estimates. They coordinate renovation schedules as well as maintenance training visits and support.

129. The Local Design/Construction Department (LDC) functions under the direct oversight of the Branch Committee but in accord with the guidelines provided by headquarters. The Local Design/Construction Department Guidelines (DC-3) provide direction on the operation of the LDC. This department coordinates the planning, property acquisition and sale, design, construction, maintenance, and operation of Kingdom Halls, Assembly Halls, field residences for special full-time servants, and other small projects, as well as provides assistance with disaster relief efforts in a branch or a territory. The LDC takes the lead and works in close cooperation with the Service Department to develop any master plans for Kingdom Halls, Assembly Halls, and residences for special full-time servants. (1 Pet. 3:8) The master plans identify the needs in the field for new construction and major renovations and help establish the priorities. The LDC also makes sure that the approved plan for the year is executed. The LDC works closely with the RDC and the Branch Committee to coordinate all projects under its care.

130. The Branch Committee assesses the needs and directs disaster relief work by means of the Disaster Relief Desk. In most cases, the LDC will coordinate any needed reconstruction activities. The Disaster Relief Guidelines (S-180) provide direction.

131. Oversight of the LDC: The responsibilities assigned to the LDC require extensive work and cost, a large number of people, and cooperation with other Bethel departments. Therefore, it would be advantageous for the LDC overseer to be a Branch Committee member, provided that he has the capability and sufficient time to handle this assignment. In view of the importance of this assignment, consult with the RDC before making changes in the oversight of this department.

132. Role of the Branch Committee: The Branch Committee is responsible for the operation and maintenance of all theocratic facilities within the branch's assigned territory. The committee approves the master plans for the LDC program, which include the yearly recommendations for spending on Kingdom Halls, Assembly Halls, and field residences for special full-time servants. The committee also approves the master plan for local projects handled by the facility contact/desk and Maintenance Department and the yearly recommendation for funding requests. The Branch Committee should carefully monitor the number of personnel at the branch facility and any remote translation offices to ensure that it is in harmony with staffing guidelines provided by the Governing Body committees. The committee assures that adequate safety and training programs are in place and that all adhere to these programs.

133. The Branch Committee should try to anticipate necessary changes to the facilities some years in advance to allow adequate time for finding suitable solutions. If approval is given to investigate the Branch Committee's request further, the WDC will be directed to serve as the representative of the Publishing Committee to review the branch's needs, develop options to meet those needs, and implement the approved solutions. At times the WDC will initiate these discussions at the direction of the Publishing Committee.

134. To assist with planning, the WDC assigns a representative to work with two Branch Committee members and a representative from the RDC. These brothers form a Planning Work Group that investigates solutions to the facility needs within a branch territory. As projects develop, the WDC will delegate as much work as possible to the RDC, local construction oversight, the local branch, and in the case of large branch expansion projects, Construction Committees. This will help speed up the work.

135. During the investigation and development of a project, the two Branch Committee members designated as contacts for communicating with the WDC are responsible for providing updates and seeking the direction of the entire Branch Committee as needed. The WDC will schedule meetings with the entire Branch Committee on significant matters or at significant milestones in the different phases of a project. At these meetings, it is imperative that Branch Committee members ask any questions or make clear any reservations they have regarding a project so that these can be addressed during the planning phases. As representatives of all the occupants of the proposed facilities, the Branch Committee will have good suggestions that should be factored into the planning. The Branch Committee should always feel free to contact the WDC when questions arise.

136. The Branch Committee needs to give its full support to ensure that projects proceed as approved. Branch Committee members will not be expected to serve on Construction Project Committees or Construction Committees. Nevertheless, the Branch Committee will continue to be consulted at key junctures. Construction Project Committees will work under the oversight of the WDC. Construction Committees will work under the oversight of the RDC.

137. Project Development: This consists of seven phases: (1) Investigation, (2) Planning, (3) Concept Design, (4) Design Development, (5) Construction Documents, (6) Implementation, and (7) Closeout. How these phases are implemented depends on the type and size of the project. Once an option has been selected, a concept design proposal will be prepared for each major project. It includes a summary of the project cost, scope, and schedule and sets out the parameters of the project.

138. Project Approvals and Cost Tracking: Proper approval, budgeting, and cost tracking for construction help to assure that dedicated funds are used to the best advantage. The Project Tracking module of HuB is used to approve building and property related projects and to track their costs. Approval for most projects is requested by submitting a Project Approval Request (DC-41). Larger projects are approved at headquarters during the concept design phase, and thereafter DC-41 forms are submitted for funding approval in accord with the approved concept design. The branch may also choose to use this module for local maintenance projects. When the total cost of a project is higher than the branch approval level, the project should be reviewed by the RDC before the project request is submitted to headquarters via HuB for approval. Additional details with regard to obtaining project approvals are shown in the document Branch Facility Work Types (DC-40).

139. Each year the RDC will work with individual branches to develop a construction budget that should include all materials and fixed assets to be purchased for the project, whether it will be capitalized or expensed in the accounting records. The monthly financial activity related to an approved project along with a brief progress report will be submitted to headquarters through HuB. In some cases, such as some Kingdom Hall projects, where project expenses are tracked with a separate software outside of HuB, each month the branch will enter a summary of the financial activity for each project in HuB. A Project Report (DC-43) is also required monthly for all projects with a budget greater than USD 1 million. At the close of a project, the branch will update HuB to indicate that the project is complete. A Final Project Report (DC-44) should be submitted in HuB for all projects approved by headquarters. In some cases, the WDC may ask the branch or the RDC to explain why the project was or was not completed as planned. For all projects, including locally approved projects, a final report that includes lessons learned should be reviewed by the departments involved so that improvements can be incorporated into future projects.

140. Once the scope, schedule, and budget of the project have been documented and approved, they should not be changed. Without reducing the quality of the approved design, every effort should be made to complete the project below or within the original budget through careful project management, procurement planning, contract administration, standardization, and the use of global and regional purchasing arrangements. The brothers assigned to implement a project will be required to adhere closely to the approved scope and to the approved schedule so that there are no unnecessary delays, which add to the cost and will inconvenience the branch. If adjustments must be made because of developments outside our control, a Project Change Order Request (DC-42) should be submitted for approval. If the project was originally approved at headquarters, the request should be reviewed by the RDC prior to being submitted to the WDC.

141. Overruns: If the scope of a project does not change but the project will be over budget, the overruns should be acknowledged in writing by the oversight that originally approved the budget. If the overrun takes the project above the branch's approval limit, a memorandum should be reviewed by the RDC and submitted to the WDC for acknowledgement. The document will address (1) the reasons for the overrun, (2) what has been done to reduce the overruns as much as possible, and (3) what lessons have been learned to avoid this in the future.

142. The LDC cooperates with the Service Department to maintain master plans outlining where Kingdom Halls, Assembly Halls, and field residences for special full-time servants are needed. Based on this plan, the Branch Committee consults with the RDC each year to prioritize the work and to develop and submit a spending plan for the next service year to the Publishing Committee. The spending plan details the current needs in the branch territory in the following areas: (1) the number of properties expected to be purchased; (2) the number of planned new Kingdom Hall projects; (3) the number of planned Kingdom Hall major renovation projects; (4) the number of planned assembly venue projects; (5) the number of planned special full-time servant field residence projects (including circuit overseer apartments); (6) the number of maintenance facility inspections to carry out; (7) the number of construction servants, Construction Groups, and Assembly Hall servants needed to support the program effectively; and (8) the total amount in USD projected to be spent on the above activities during the service year.—See 5:155; 6:154.

143. Based on the approved annual spending plan, the Branch Committee may approve individual projects (either LDC or branch projects) with a budget of less than the maximum amount that will be assigned to the branch each year. Projects that exceed the spending limit should be submitted to the WDC for consideration. All congregations will have the opportunity to support the global construction program by means of a monthly donation by resolution from their congregation funds for this purpose. Contribution boxes should also be set up for specific local projects.

144. Facilities Maintenance: The premature deterioration of facilities and equipment is costly to the organization. The Branch Committee has the responsibility to emphasize the importance of maintenance at each facility in its branch territory and to make sure that a maintenance program is being followed. Scheduled maintenance along with timely repairs preserves the significant investment in buildings and equipment. By practicing good preventive maintenance, materials and equipment can achieve or even exceed their life expectancy. Materials and equipment should not be replaced prematurely. The Branch Committee should be conscious of the overall condition of each facility in its branch territory. The Branch Committee should ensure that sufficiently trained and qualified people are assigned to handle maintenance. The RDC will assist branches with implementing these principles.

145. Just as the LDC is the single point of contact that the Branch Committee uses to care for facilities in the field, the branch should designate a Branch Committee member to be the facility contact, a single point of contact for issues related to operating branch facilities. The contact would oversee the work of the Facility Desk as outlined in chapter 4 of the Facility Maintenance Guidelines (DC-91). Generally, the Branch Committee member who is selected should be one of the two members of the Planning Work Group who works along with the WDC in planning facility needs.

146. The branch Maintenance Department focuses primarily on maintaining the branch facility by following the yearly schedule developed for preventive-maintenance tasks for the facility. Facility-condition inspections identify areas in need of attention and are part of the yearly tasks that should be carried out by the Maintenance Department. Apart from routine maintenance, inspections, and repairs, the maintenance staff should have minimal involvement in projects, such as replacement of finishes, reconfiguration of interior work spaces, and upgrades of building systems and equipment. In an effort to maintain as small a maintenance staff as possible, when these small-scale projects become necessary, it may be best to outsource this work to companies, commuters, or temporary volunteers. Depending on the nature of the upgrade to the building systems or the replacement of equipment, design input and personnel support from the RDC may be required. Requests for large or costly equipment replacements and system upgrades should be reviewed by the facility contact and the RDC to determine whether this work fits into the overall life-cycle plan of the building.

147. The RDC will maintain close contact with each branch to provide the needed support. Each year the RDC will work with the branches to work out a recommended facilities budget for maintenance related work. All (nonproject) machinery or equipment fixed assets and routine (nonproject) building repair and maintenance expenses should be included in the facilities budget request. Implementing a routine preventive-maintenance program involves less time and stress than caring for unexpected breakdowns. The WDC's maintenance training program provides a yearly comprehensive schedule for preventive maintenance specific to the needs of the facilities. This information can be used to develop an in-house training program. Each branch should endeavor to perform its own maintenance of buildings and equipment. However, if assistance is needed with ordering parts, doing technical repairs, or arranging for specialized training, please contact the RDC. Additional direction related to maintenance is provided in the Facility Maintenance Guidelines (DC-91).

148. Training and cross-training are essential and need to be included as part of the work of the Maintenance Department. It is the responsibility of the branch to render support to all facilities in its branch territory. The branch Maintenance Department is responsible for the maintenance of facilities at the branch location.

149. The LDC is responsible for the maintenance of facilities in the field, including Assembly Halls, remote translation offices, dedicated school facilities (that are not at the branch), field residences, and literature depots. To the extent possible, local volunteers should provide the maintenance support for these facilities. If additional skilled support is needed, the LDC should contact the branch Maintenance Department. If further assistance is needed, please contact the RDC. The Branch Committee can best determine how to organize the work in the branch territory.—See 6:156.

150. Remote Translation Offices (RTOs): Whenever practical, the facility used for translation work should be located where the target language is actively used. The Branch Committee may initiate a request to establish a remote translation office, perhaps even relocating a translation team from the main branch facility. This also makes more space available at the branch. Although RTOs are considered branch facilities, they typically should not be set up or operated like a branch.

151. There are many ways facilities can be used as RTOs and residences. There is much flexibility regarding the use of commuters and the manner in which support services are provided. This flexibility helps to keep the facility needs as simple as possible. Additional direction with regard to remote translation offices is found in the Remote Translation Office Facility Guidelines (DC-15). Good cooperation and prompt follow-through by all involved will help ensure that approved RTOs are set up and put into operation as quickly as possible.

152. Kingdom Halls and Assembly Halls: Kingdom Halls and Assembly Halls are centers of true worship in the local community. The Branch Committee should be attentive to the condition of existing meeting places and to the need for new ones. By practical planning, attention should be given to using existing Kingdom Halls to their maximum seating capacity by reasonably increasing the number of publishers per congregation as well as the number of congregations per Kingdom Hall. Although our meeting places should be simple, they should have a level of personal comfort conducive to theocratic education. There should be adequate sanitation, including clean water to wash hands. There should be provisions for clean drinking water in harmony with local practices, good sound equipment (when used), adequate shelter from normal weather conditions, and good ventilation and lighting. Video equipment should be provided where possible in line with established policy. The meeting places must be relatively easy to clean and maintain so that they are acceptable as places of worship. Further details related to organizing the Kingdom Hall construction program are outlined in the Kingdom Hall Design/Construction Guidelines (DC-14).
